Picture Section,
Rotogravure: Part 1

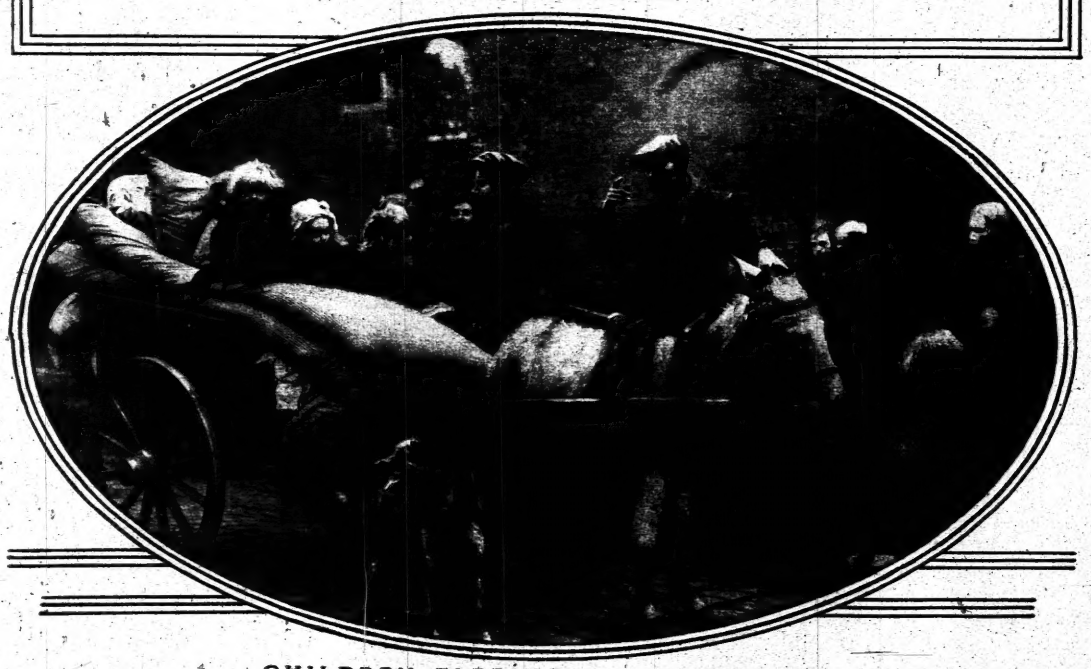
The New York Times

(Copyright, 1914, by The New York Times Co.)

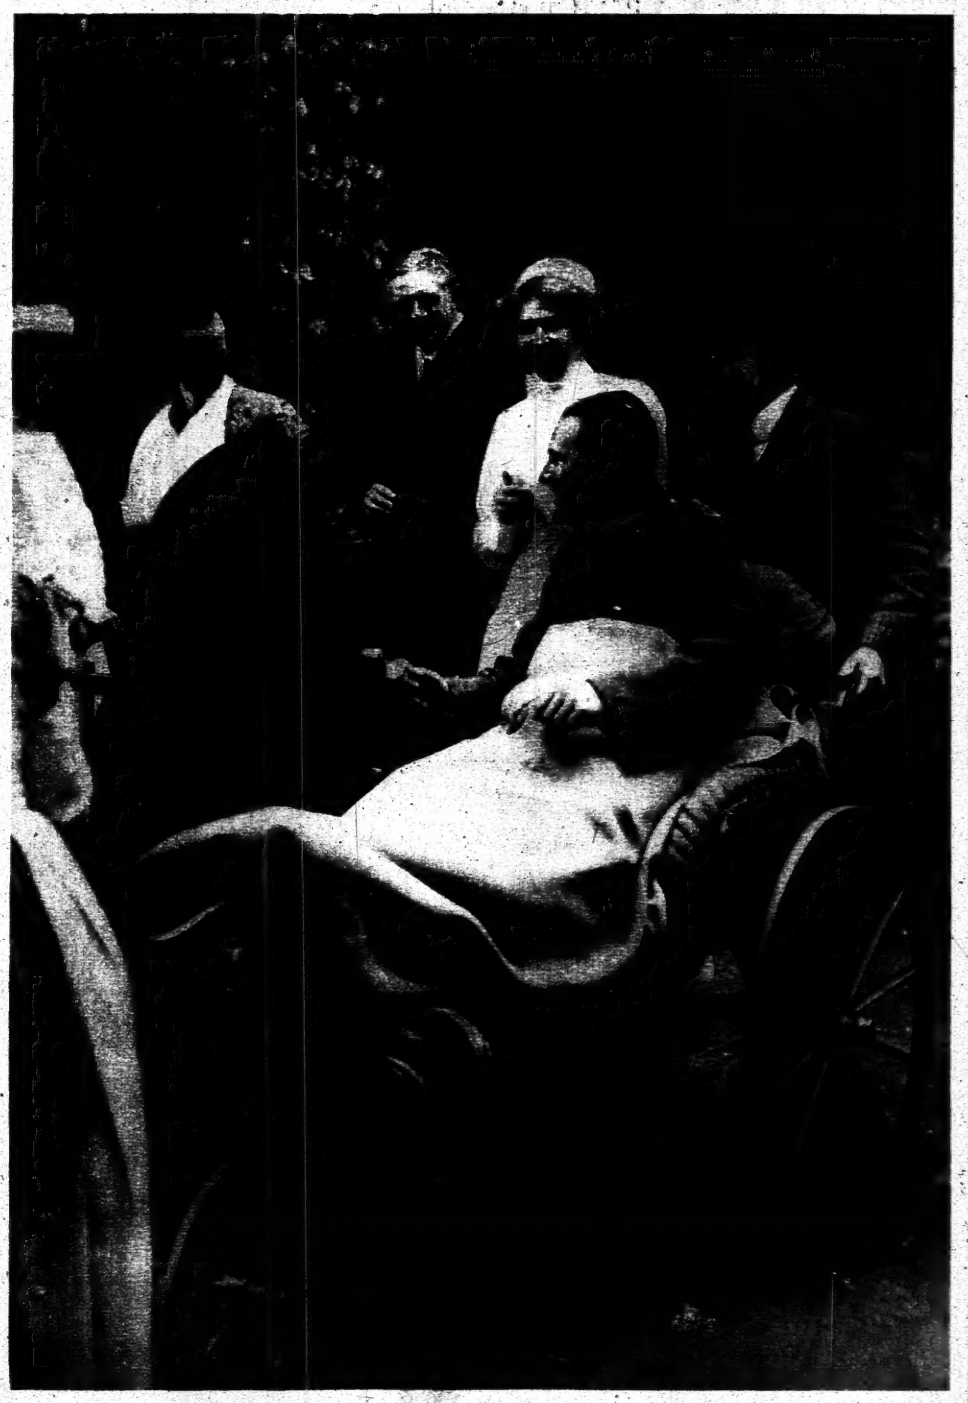
Sunday,
November 1, 1914

GERMAN OCCUPATION OF MALINES
The Dense Crowd in the Central Background Consists in Part of Belgian Prisoners of War
(Photo (C) by International News Service.)

BELGIAN SOLDIERS CHEERING THE ARRIVAL OF BRITISH REINFORCEMENTS
(Photos (C) by American Press Assn.)



CHILDREN FLEEING FROM ANTWERP
(Photos (C) by Underwood & Underwood.)



EMPRESS EUGENIE, Who Has Converted Her House at Farnborough, England, Into a Military Hospital, Making Her Daily Round Among the Convalescents

MERRY GROUP OF FRENCH MARINES AT GHENT DISPLAYING GERMAN HELMETS AS TROPHIES.

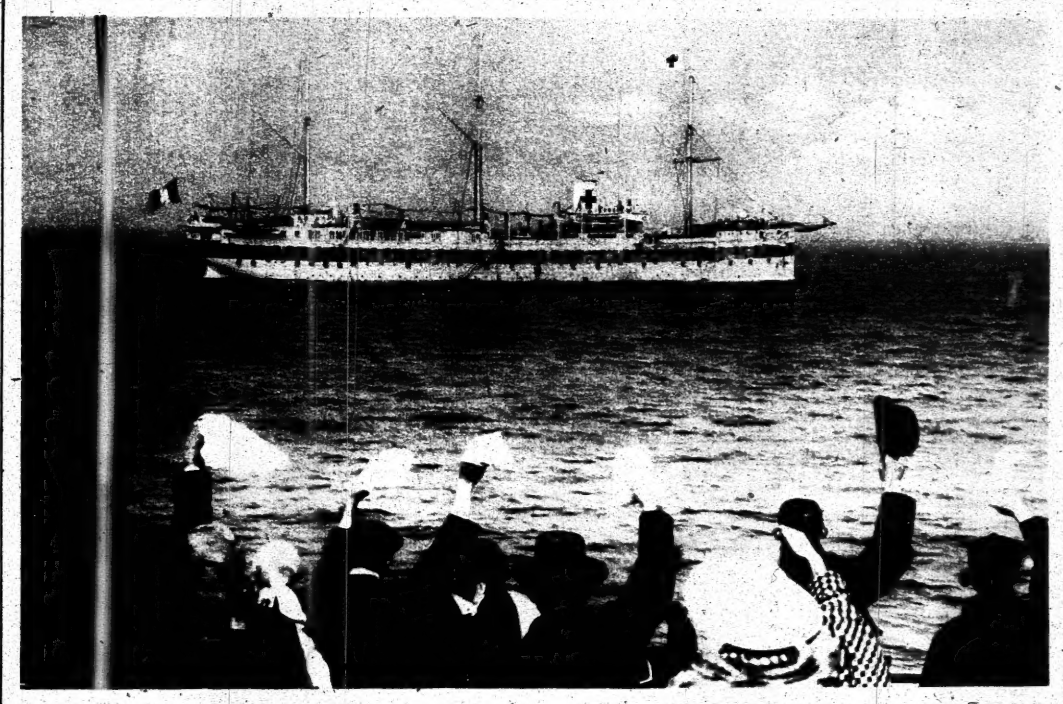
(Photo (C) by International News Service.)

FRENCH SOLDIER SHOT ACCORDING TO THE INSCRIPTION AS A "SPY—TRAITOR TO HIS COUNTRY."

He Was Alleged to Have Signaled to the Germans, for a Hundred Francs, the Position of the French Guns Near Rheims.

PATHETIC LITTLE GROUP OF REFUGEES FROM ANTWERP REACH ROSENDAAL, HOLLAND.

(Photo (C) by Underwood & Underwood.)



BELGIAN REFUGEES BOUND FOR ENGLAND CHEERING A FRENCH RED CROSS SHIP ON ITS WAY TO OSTEND FOR A CARGO OF WOUNDED.

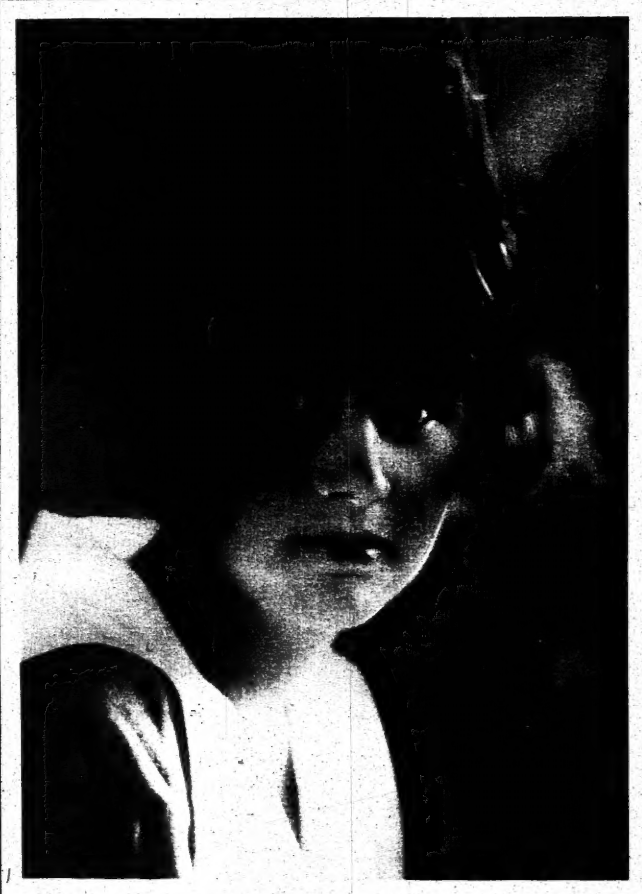
(Photo (C) by American Press Assn.)

FLEET OF BELGIAN FISHING SMACKS REACH LOWESTOFT, ENGLAND, BRINGING 1,400 REFUGEES.

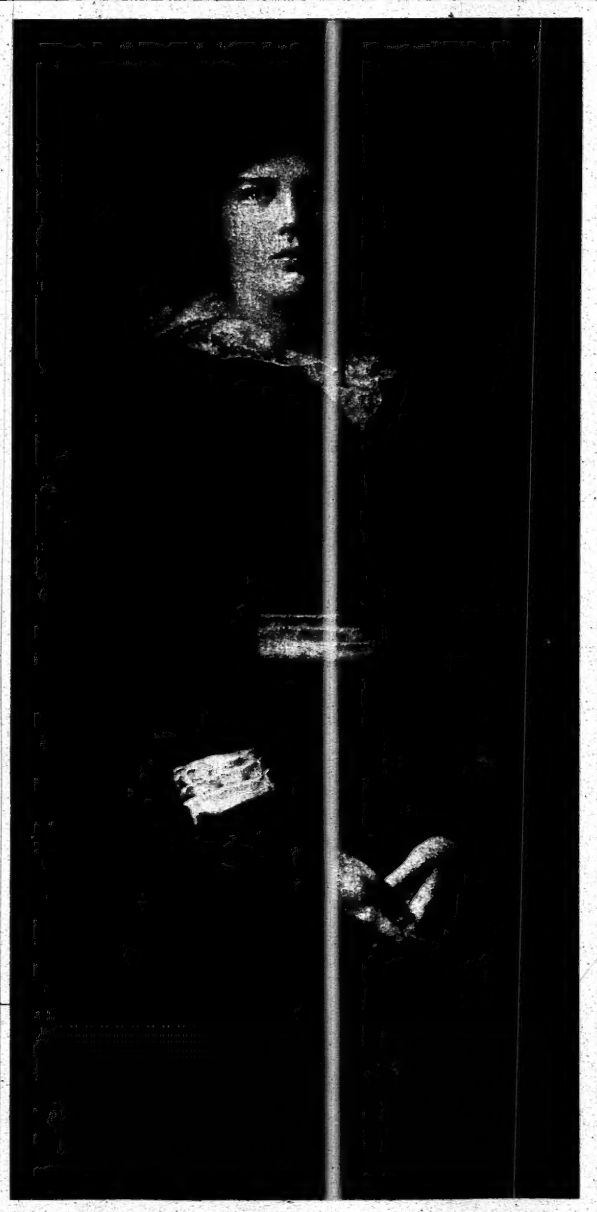
(Photo by Baumann Studio.)

MISS DOROTHY HAIGHT,
Debutante Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Haight.

MISS ANNE WOODIN,
Debutante Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Woodin.
(Photo by Baumann Studio.)



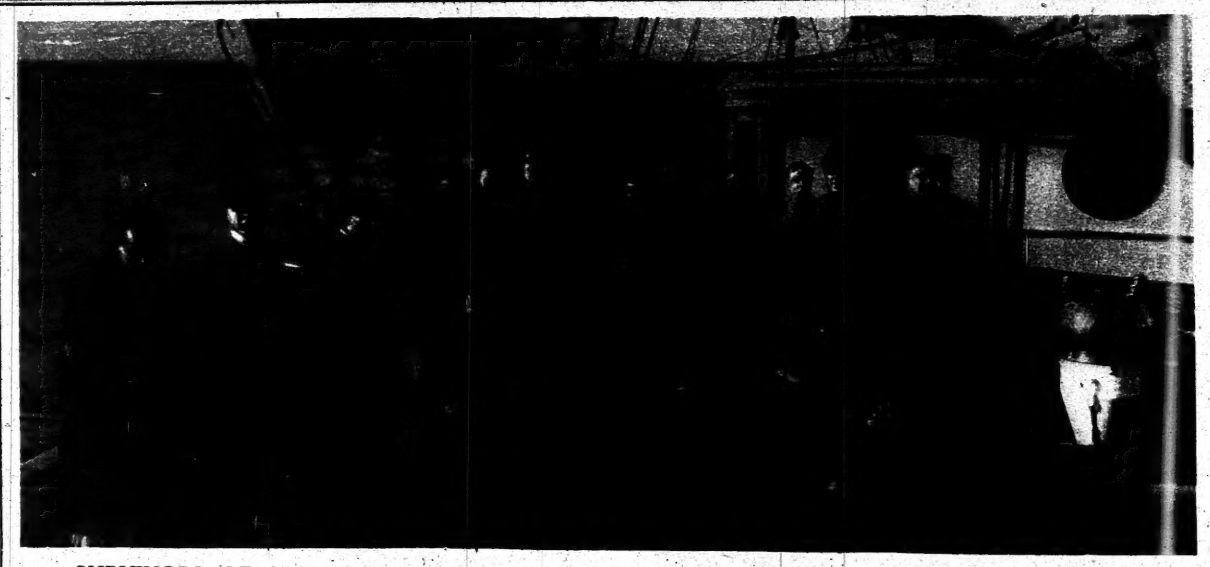
MISS CORDELIA DREXEL BIDDLE,
Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, a Bud of the New Season.
(Photo by Jones-Yarduma Studio.)



MISS EUGENIE BISSELL,
Whose Engagement to Laurence Millet Has Been Announced.
(Photo (C) by Campbell Studios.)

MISS MARIE THAYER,
Debutante Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Thayer
(Photo by Baumann Studio.)

MRS. ROY CHAPMAN ANDREWS, FORMERLY MISS YVETTE BORUP.
Daughter of Major Henry D. Borup, U. S. A., and Her Matron of Honor, Mrs. Miles Standish Slocum.
(Photo by Marceau.)



SURVIVORS OF STEFANSSON'S CANADIAN-ARCTIC EXPEDITION, WHO WERE RESCUED FROM WRANGEL ISLAND a Year After the Karluk Sank. With Capt. Bartlett, They Are Shown On the U. S. Revenue Cutter Bear. (Photos (C) by Lomen Bros.)

VILHJALMUR STEFANSSON, HEAD OF THE CANADIAN-ARCTIC EXPEDITION, WHOSE FATE IS UNKNOWN.
This Photograph Was Made the Day Before the Expedition Set Out from Nome, Alaska.

MUKPIE, YOUNGEST PERSON ON THE KARLUK, and One of the Survivors of Wrangel Island.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

AN EVENING SLIPPER
by
CAMMEYER

The Cammeyer Branch
Shoe Store De Luxe

Fifth Avenue 381
Between 35th & 36th Sts.

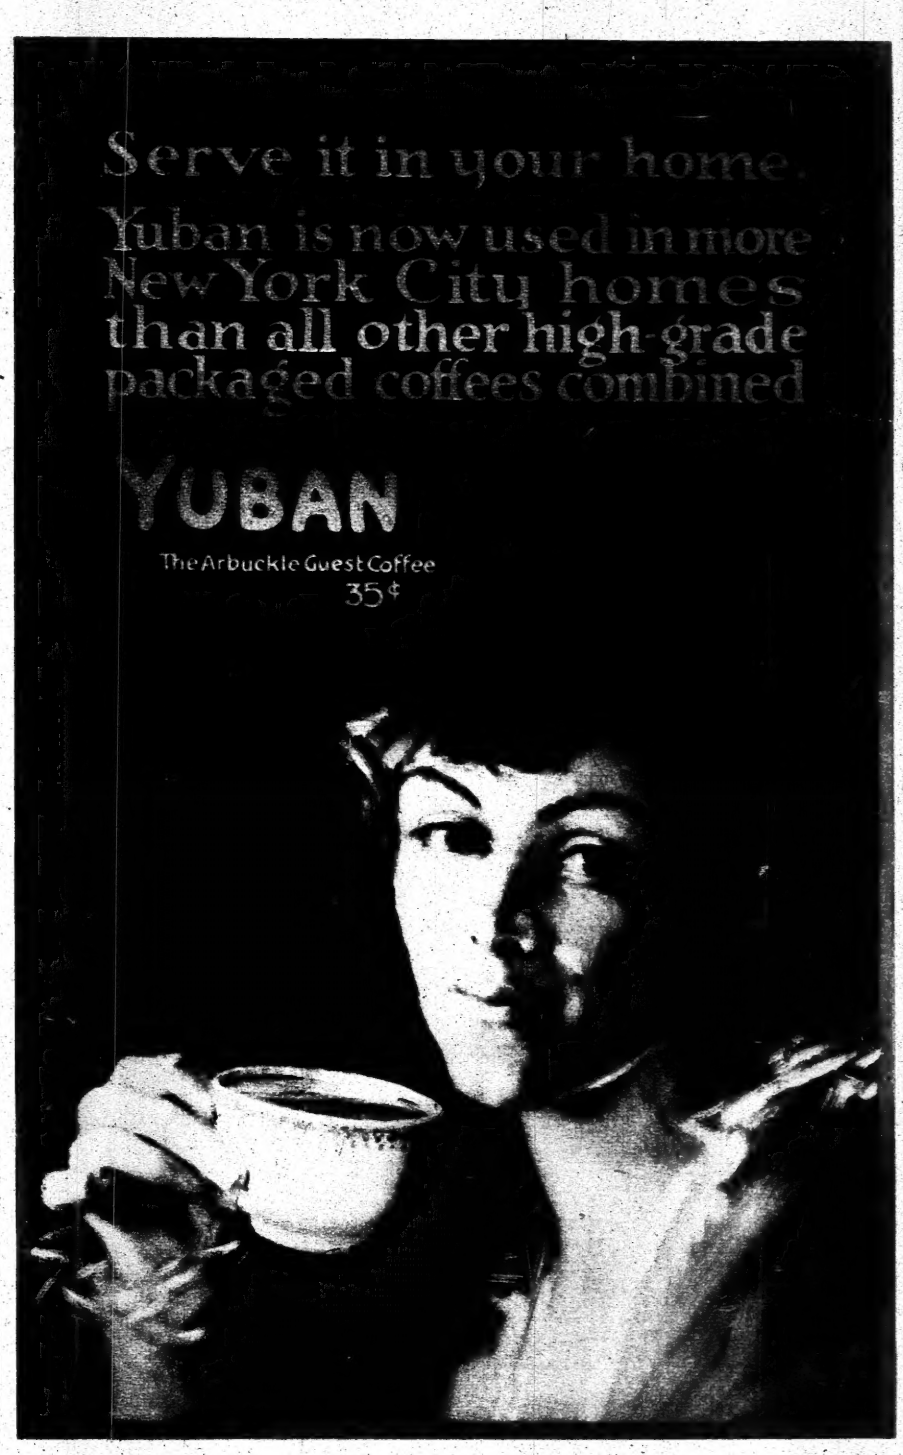
CAMMEYER NEW YORK

MAIL SERVICE

Also at 6th Ave & 20th St.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS. ADVERTISEMENTS. ADVERTISEMENTS.



ADVERTISEMENTS.

Franklin Simon & Co.

PARIS 4 Rue Martel — Fifth Ave., 37th and 38th Sts., New York — LONDON 29 Jewin Crescent

Women's Smart Footwear

For Fall and Winter

3

No. 3. New Model Gaiter Boot of patent leather, with top of imported dark gray cloth. Light welted soles and Spanish heels.

Special, 6.50

3A. Same style with top of imported fawn buckskin, hand sewed and Spanish heel.

Special, 7.50

5

No. 5. Smart Patent Leather Laced Shoe with fawn cloth tops. Trimmed with patent leather lace stays and black laces. Light welted soles and Spanish heels.

Special, 6.50

7

No. 7. New Model Laced Shoe of black Russia leather, with fawn or gray cloth tops. Trimmed with tan or black leather lace stay, tan or black laces. Light welted soles and leather concave heels.

Special, 5.50

9

No. 9. A New Model Afternoon Slipper of patent leather, with fawn or pearl gray suede back, hand turned soles and Louis XV. heels.

Special, 6.50

11

No. 11. Afternoon Slipper of imported patent leather with white or champagne kid inlay on vamp. Hand turned soles and Louis XV. heels.

Special, 7.00

11A. Same style in all white kid, with black patent leather inlay on vamp.

Special, 7.00

13

No. 13. New Model Strap Slipper with strap over instep which buttons on either side. Of white or black satin, bronze, patent or dull kid. Light soles and Louis XV. heels.

Special, 5.00

Mail and Telephone Orders Promptly Filled. Phone 6900 Greeley.

MAXIMUM EFFICIENCY

Advertisements in The New York Times Rotogravure Section produce the maximum results because they are seen and read by every reader of The Sunday Times. There is no lost circulation. Write or telephone Bryant 1000

Instant Response

The Sohmer Piano Player is responsive to the slightest whim of the performer. One reason for this is its freedom from useless buttons, levers and all mechanical restrictions. New Sohmer Upright Player Pianos, $775. Slightly used instruments, $550. Send for illustrated Booklet.

Sohmer

Fifth Avenue, at 32d Street

Write or call for Free Victrola Catalog

DANCE AT HOME!

VICTROLAS

$1 Down, $1 a Week

For the lower priced instruments. Higher priced outfits at equally moderate terms.

Prices from $15 to $200.

Very liberal allowance made for any make Talking machine in exchange for a new model Victrola.

831 B'way Bet. 12 and 13 Sts. — Davega's — 405 B'way Below Canal St.

The New York Times

Sunday
November 1, 1914

REMARKABLE
PHOTOGRAPH OF THE WALL OF AN ANTWERP HOUSE
In the Act of Falling After Having Been Struck by a Shell

FORT WAVRE ST. CATHERINE, ONE OF THE STRONGEST IN THE RING AROUND ANTWERP, CRUMPLED BY THE GERMAN 42-CENTIMETER SIEGE GUNS

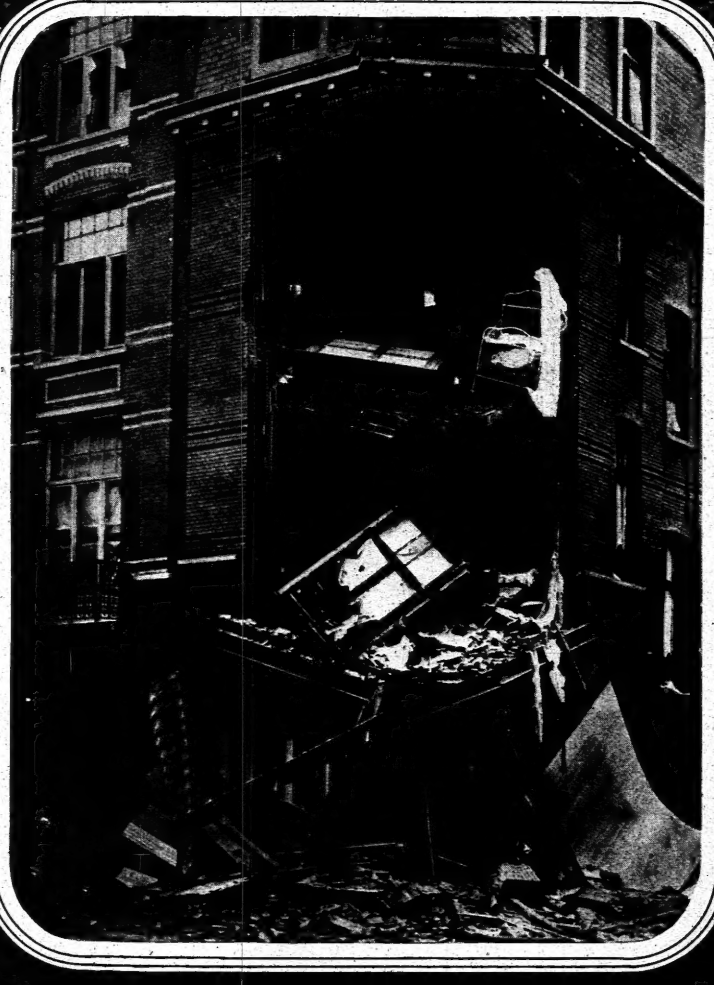
ADVANCE PARTY OF GERMANS ON SCOUT DUTY IN WESTERN BELGIUM
In the Left Foreground Is a Soldier Wearing the Famous German Iron Cross

(Photo (C) by International News Service.)

GERMANS LEAVING ANTWERP FOR THE CAPTURE OF OSTEND

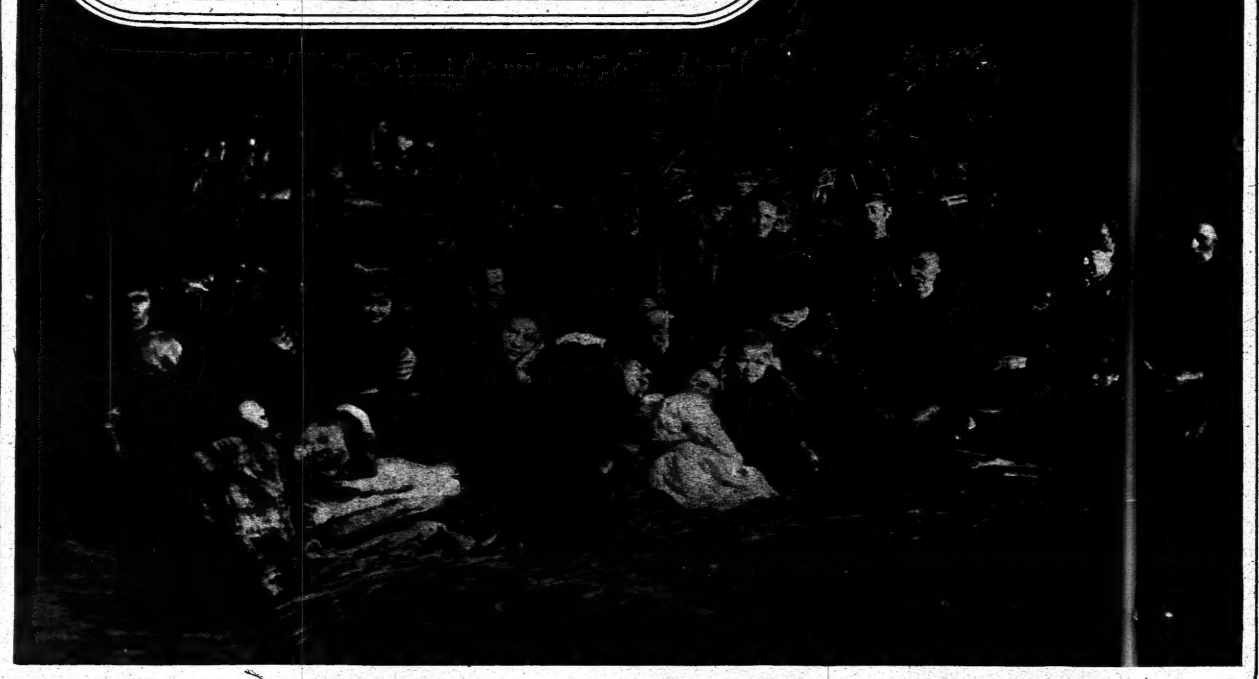
HATLESS AND SLIGHTLY WOUNDED GERMAN PRISONERS OF WAR REACH PORTSMOUTH, ENGLAND
(Photo by Paul Thompson.)

BELGIAN ARMY IN RETREAT FROM ANTWERP
A Trainload of Infantry and the Belgian Cavalry Accidentally Meeting at the Maldegem Crossing Near Bruges



CHILD'S CRIB HANGING FROM THE THIRD FLOOR OF A DWELLING at the Corner of the Trois Rois and La Rue Turst, Antwerp, Which Had Been Struck by a Shell during the Bombardment ←

WOUNDED SOLDIERS ON THE JETTY AT OSTEND AWAITING TRANSPORTATION TO ENGLAND
(Photos (C) by Underwood & Underwood.)



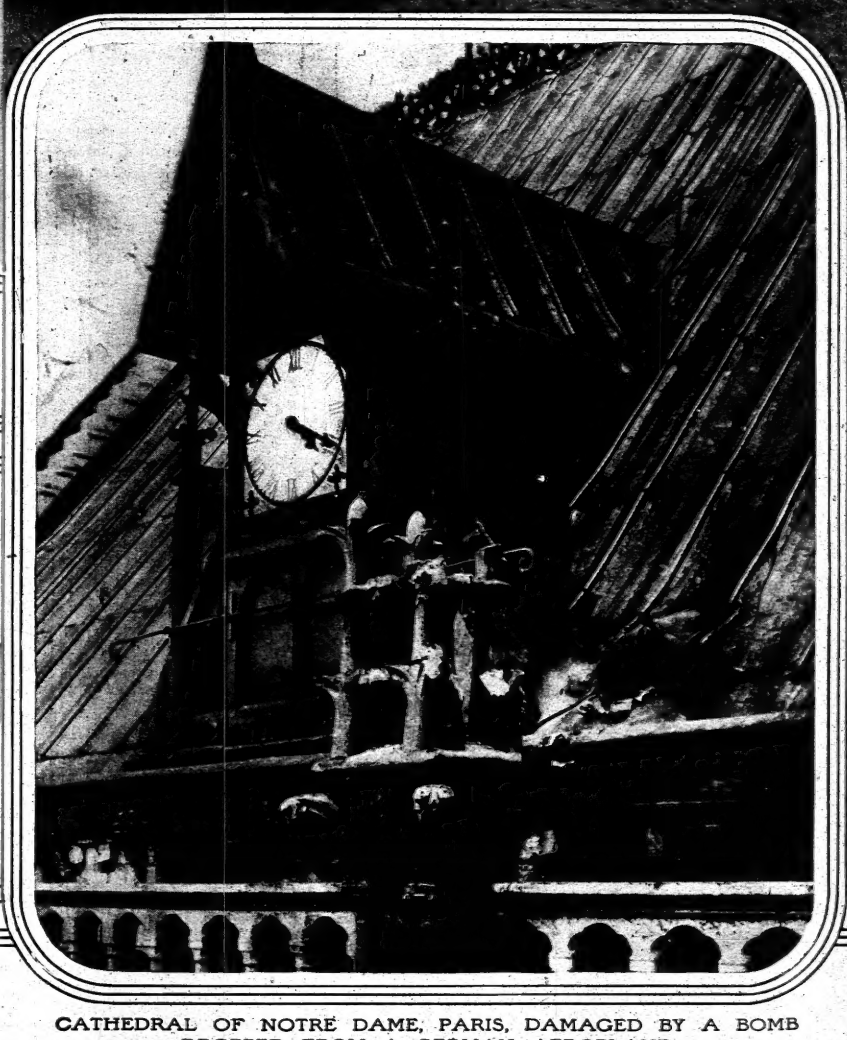
ANTWERP REFUGEES CAMPING IN THE WOODS ON THEIR FLIGHT TO HOLLAND
(Photo (C) by American Press Assn.)

BELGIAN SOLDIERS ON THE RETREAT FROM GHENT LADLING OUT SOUP IN A VILLAGE STREET

COMPANY OF BRITISH SOLDIERS RETREATING FROM GHENT WITH BELGIAN REFUGEES AT THEIR HEELS.
(Photo (C) by Underwood & Underwood.)

AGED BELGIAN REFUGEE SEATED IN DESPAIR ON THE QUAY-SIDE AT OSTEND.

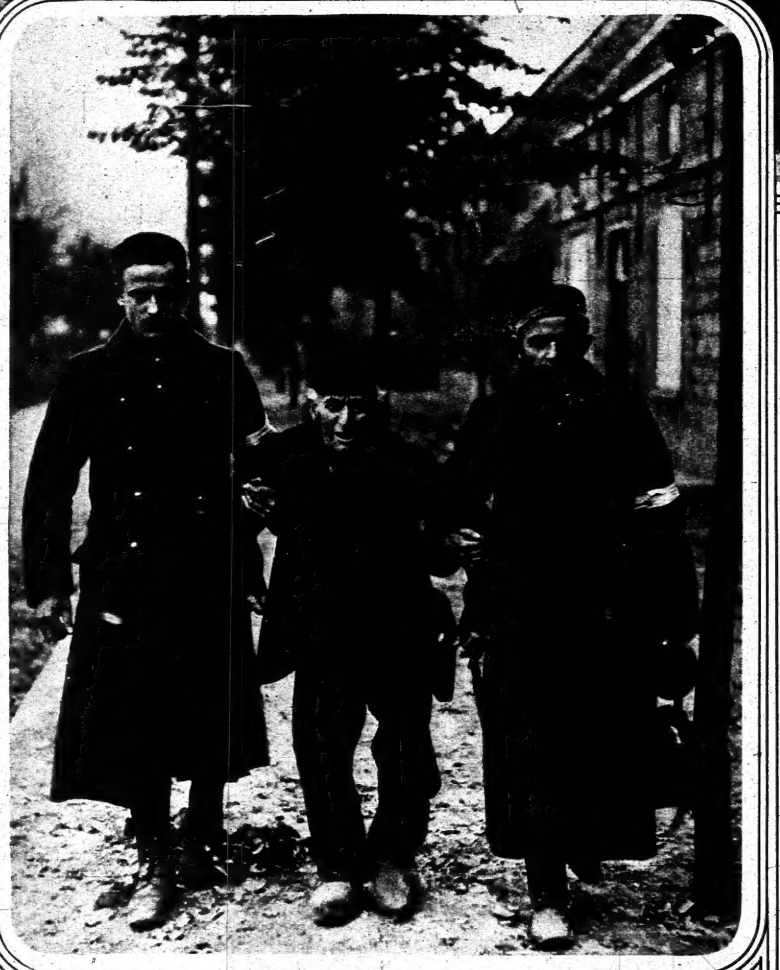
LADY DOROTHIE FEILDING,
On the Left, Daughter of Lord Denbigh, Who Has Been Warmly Praised for Her Heroic Work in France and Belgium as a Red Cross Nurse.



CATHEDRAL OF NOTRE DAME, PARIS, DAMAGED BY A BOMB DROPPED FROM A GERMAN AEROPLANE.
(Photo from Brown Bros.)

CAPTURED GERMAN FLAGS PARADED BEFORE THE INVALIDES, PARIS.
(Photos (C) by International News Service.)

BELGIAN FAMILIES IN FLIGHT FROM ANTWERP TO THE DUTCH FRONTIER.

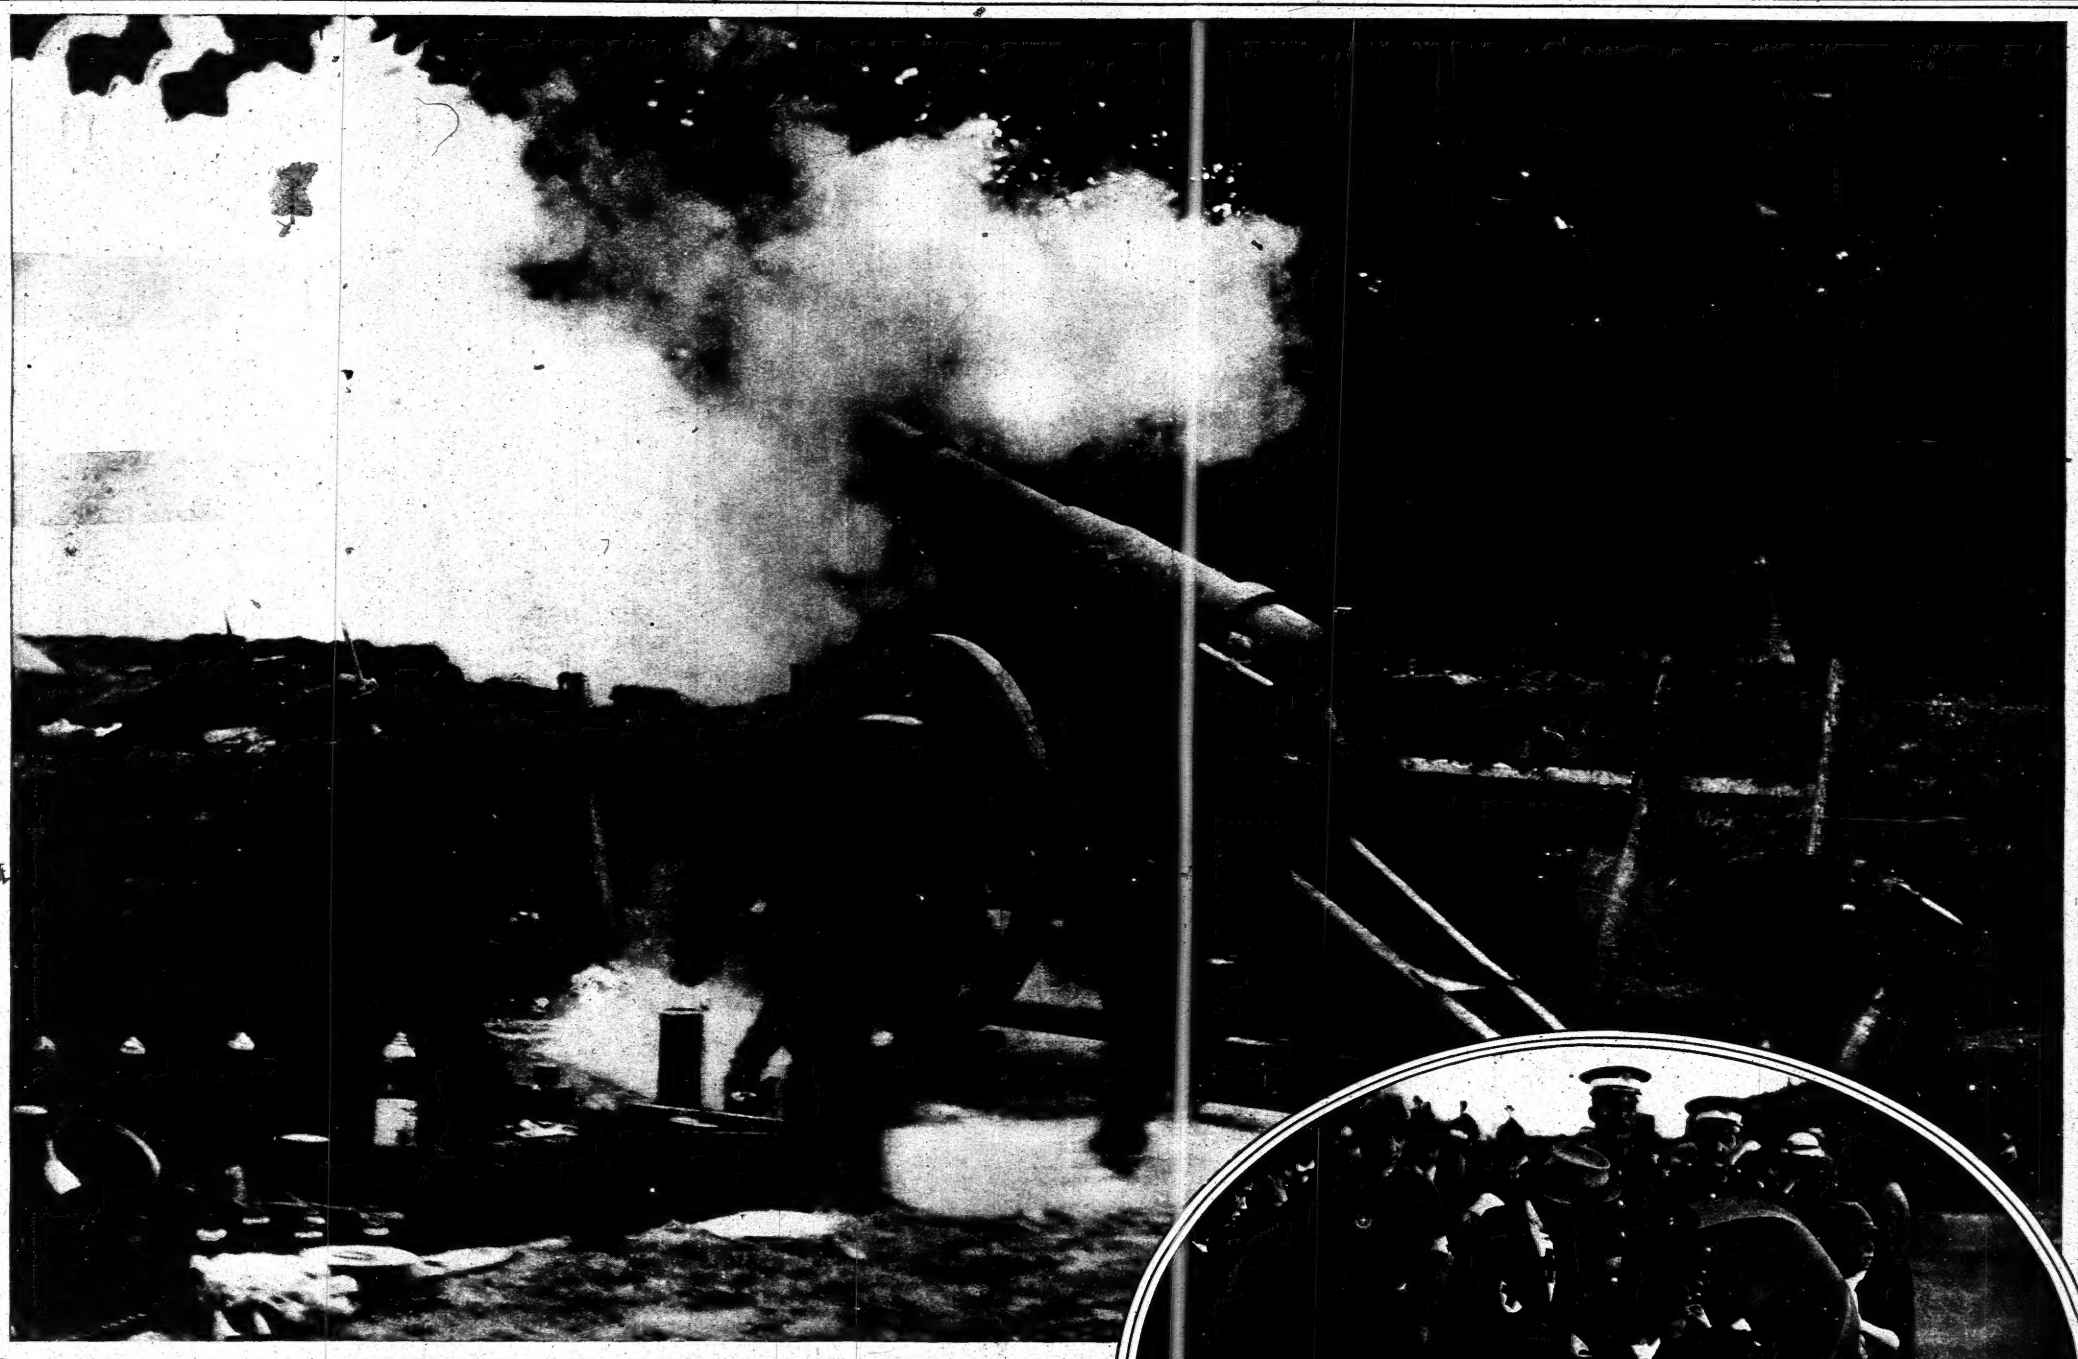


FEEBLE OLD MAN ESCORTED OUT OF ANTWERP BY HIS TWO SONS IN THE BELGIAN ARMY.
(Photo by Underwood & Underwood)

Refugee Babies from Antwerp in the Arms of Dutch Soldiers Across the Holland Border.

British Marine at Antwerp Making Friends with Refugee Children.

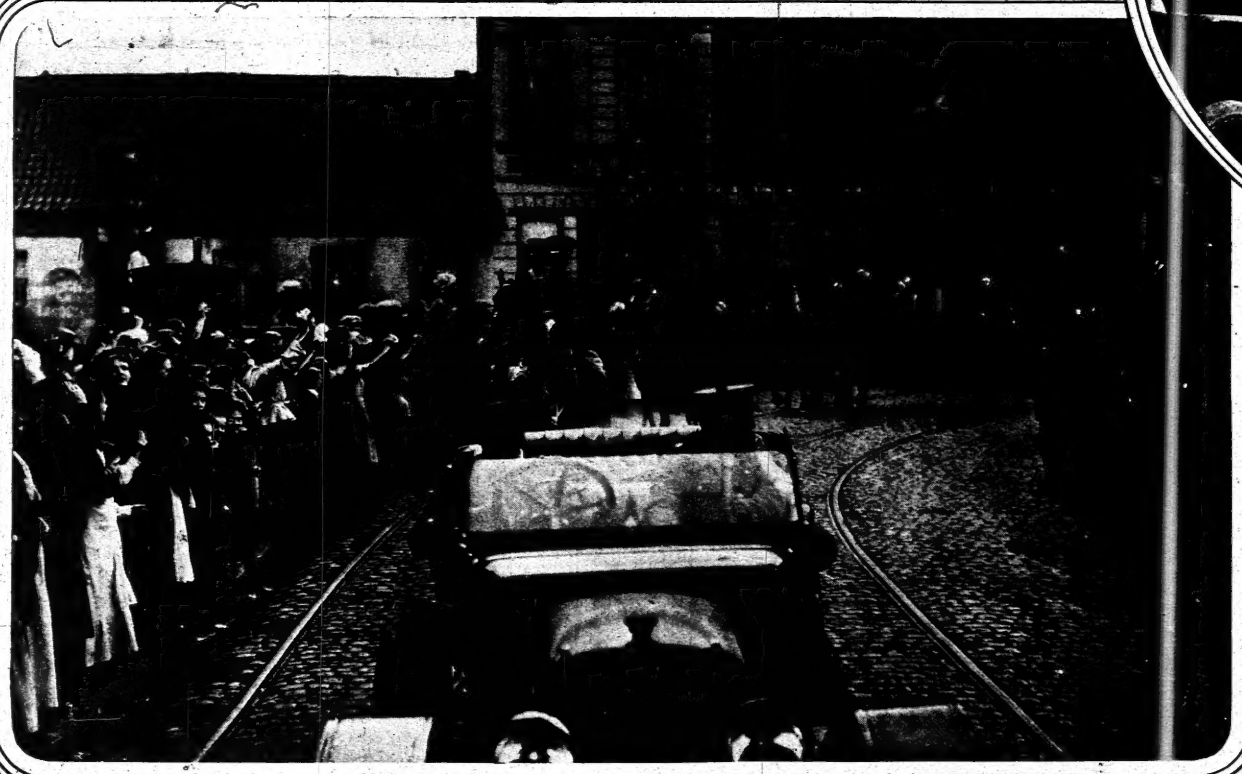
NUNS AND THEIR CHARGES FROM ANTWERP ON THEIR WAY TO OSTEND.
(Photos (C) by International News Service.)



CONCEALED BATTERY, MANNED BY BRITISH MARINES, IN ACTION BEFORE ANTWERP.

(Photo (C) by Underwood & Underwood.)

WOUNDED BELGIAN OFFICER, In Charge of an English Red Cross Nurse, Reaches Folkstone, England.

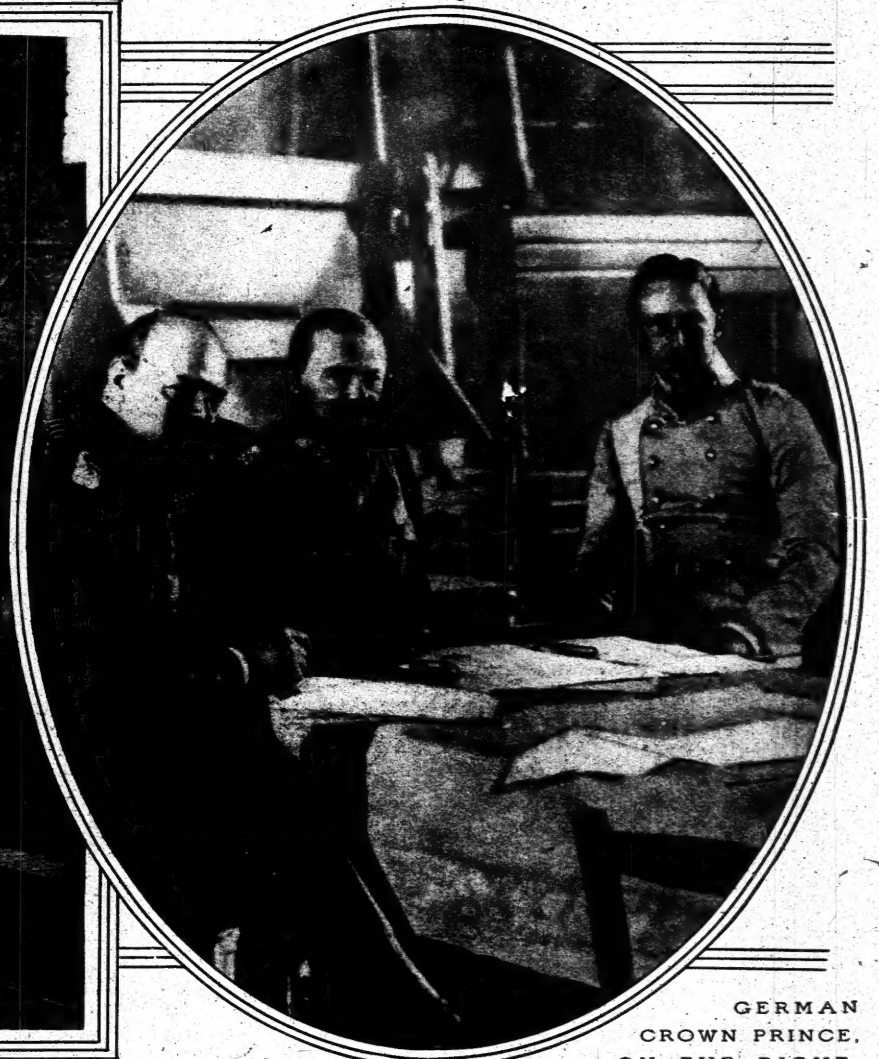


CROWDS CHEERING BRITISH TROOPS IN BELGIUM.
(Photo from Underwood & Underwood)

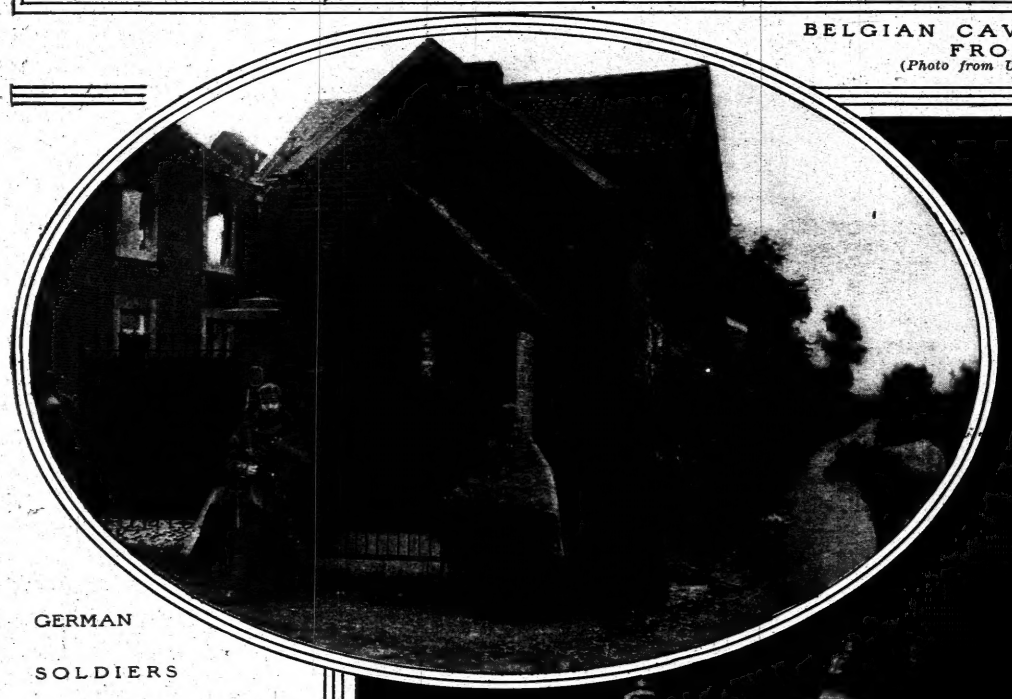
"DINKS," MASCOT OF THE BRITISH ROYAL ENGINEERS, Embarrassed by the Cigar Stumps and Other Unacceptable Gifts Showered on Him.
(Photo (C) by American Press Assn.)

TOWN OF LIERRE, NEAR ANTWERP, IN FLAMES FROM THE CROSSFIRE OF THE DEFENDERS AND BESIEGERS.

BELGIAN CAVALRY IN RETREAT FROM GHENT.
(Photo from Underwood & Underwood.)

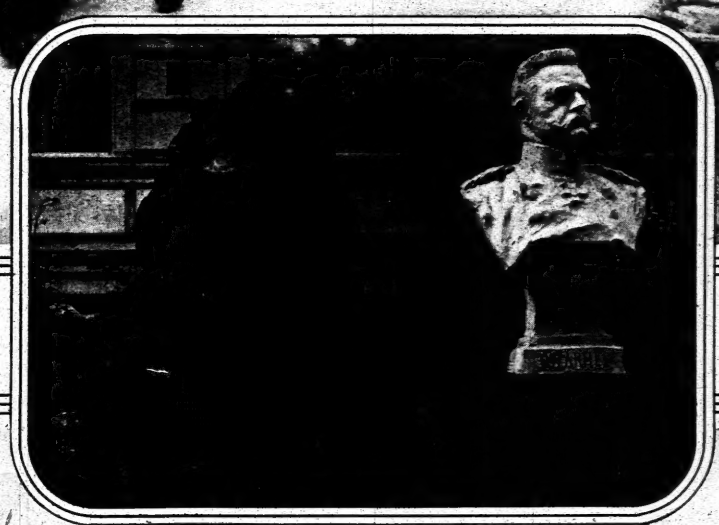


GERMAN CROWN PRINCE, ON THE RIGHT, in Consultation with Members of His Staff, at the Front.



GERMAN SOLDIERS BEFORE A BELGIAN SHRINE

(Photos from Paul Thompson.)



FUNERAL OF A GERMAN OFFICER ON THE FRENCH FRONTIER.

STATUE BY PROF. EBERLEIN OF GEN. VON HINDENBURG, RECENTLY UNVEILED IN BERLIN.
Gen. von Hindenburg Is Described as "The Victorious Leader of the Army of the East." ⟶

BRITISH REINFORCEMENTS DISEMBARKING ON THE CONTINENT
The Name of the Port Was Deleted by the Censor
(Photo (C) by American Press Assn.)

SCENE FROM G. BERNARD SHAW'S "PYGMALION," WITH, FROM LEFT TO RIGHT, DALLAS CAIRNS AS COL. PICKERING, MRS. PATRICK CAMPBELL AS ELIZA DOOLITTLE, AND PHILIP MERIVALE AS HENRY HIGGINS, at the Park Theatre. (Photos by White.)

HELEN FALCONER
as Violet, with Montgomery and Stone, in "Chin-Chin," at the Globe Theatre.

RUTH SHEPLEY,
in "It Pays to Advertise," at the George M. Cohan Theatre.
(Photo from Ira L. Hill.)

MARY BOLAND,
As the Dutch Girl in "My Lady's Dress," at the Playhouse.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

RIVIERA BEST AIDS TO BEAUTY

Crème Riviera
Riviera-Skin Food
Riviera Complexion Vinegar
Riviera Poudres du Teint
Riviera Toniques Pour la Chevelure

Catalog of Perfume, Colognes, Poudres, et Spécialités de Beauté, on request.

PARFUMERIE RIVIERA
450 FIFTH AVE. NEW YORK
PARIS BOSTON CHICAGO BUFFALO

A UNIQUE CHRISTMAS DECORATION

surely blooming in a few weeks, growing with absolutely no care in dishes of pebbles and water. These wonderfully odd plants produce clusters of fragrant silvery white flowers and make a beautiful house-decoration from the time the plants start until they are in full bloom. Send 25 cents and we will mail you five of these wonderful bulbs with directions.

H. W. Gordinier & Sons Co., Troy, N. Y.

WHILE YOU SLEEP

B. & P. Wrinkle Eradicators or Frowners smooth out the wrinkles and crow's feet that mar your beauty.

They are absolutely harmless—simple and easy to use—a toilet necessity. Made in two styles. Frowners for between the eyes. Eradicators for lines in the face. Either kind sold in 25c., 50c., and $1.00 boxes, including a booklet, "Dressing Table Hints," at your drug or department store. If your dealer cannot supply you, send direct, postpaid, on receipt of price.

B. & P. CO. (Two Women)
1796 East 66th St., Cleveland, Ohio

ADVERTISEMENTS.

This Smooth Strong Silk

is easy to use on any machine. It goes farther and lasts longer than cheap silk. In fact

Brainerd & Armstrong's
Spool and Embroidery Silk

will make any needle turn out more and better work. Try it, "Best in the World." "Lessons in Embroidery," illustrated with colored plates, and new art needlework Catalogue both mailed for 6c. stamps.

THE BRAINERD & ARMSTRONG CO.,
215 Fourth Ave., New York.

INTERNAL BATH
Gives Prompt Relief to Constipation Without Drugs

The Eager Intestine Cleanser (a syringe operated by weight of the body) gives immediate relief without medicine, washing your intestines clean. You want the best. WE HAVE IT. Investigate before buying any other. We challenge comparison.

Send to Dept. T for FREE Booklet.

EAGER COLON CLEANSER CO.,
737 Washington Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Tel. Prospect 6109.

WONDERS OF THE ORIENT
HERRMANN'S SEED STORE,
140 E. 34th St.,
New York City.
Write for Catalogue.

Eugene
Builder of HATS
AT MOOD'S
30 West 39th Street
Special Exhibit of MODELS at $8-$10

ADVERTISEMENTS.

SUTOL
THE PERFECT ROUGE

A dry rouge which imparts the natural bloom to the cheek. It can not be detected and will not injure the most delicate skin. Not affected by perspiration, and remains "Until Removed by Soap and Water."

25 CENTS PER BOX
(Including Puff and Mirror)

Your favorite store sells SUTOL ROUGE and the complete line of Oriental Preparations, INCLUDING LOTUS NAIL ENAMEL, or by mail postpaid.

THE ORIENTAL COMPANY
53 Ferry St.,
New York

KEEP DRY DRESS SHIELDS

ABSORBENT
MOISTURE-PROOF
A NEW DRESS SHIELD
With New Merits
To appreciate them you must try a pair.

EVERY PAIR GUARANTEED
For sale by leading Department Stores. Send 25c. for Sample Pair to
J. J. BEYERLE MFG. CO.,
99-101 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y.

DEADENED MUSCLES

frequently cause flat foot and falling arches. Flex Shoes are pliable, allowing the muscles activity, and restoring their natural functions. Flex Shoes Cure.

Dr. Levy will thoroughly examine your feet and advise the best method of curing your foot troubles, without charge. Call or write for booklet.

DRS. CHAS. S. & ALFRED C. LEVY
CHIROPODISTS,
Strand Theatre Bldg., B'way at 47th.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Seth Thomas Clock

8-DAY MODERN ALARM.

Requires winding but once a week; does not need any attention at night. Saves 626 windings a year. Alarms automatic every morning. Rings until you stop it. Guaranteed accurate timepiece.

Mahogany or Oak Cases
Price $3.85
DELIVERED PREPAID.

Don't miss this opportunity. An exceptionally fine Clock at a very low price.

W. H. Enhaus & Son
31 John Street, N. Y. C.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE.

PARKER'S
METHOD OF HAIR TREATMENT

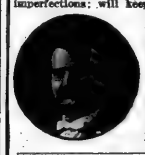
Quickly cleanses the scalp of dandruff and other imperfections; will keep it in a clean and cool condition; promotes the growth of healthy, abundantly rich hair, and makes it dressy and fluffy. Valuable for dry, harsh, stiff, and brittle hair.



Personal consultation given individual cases. Send today for free booklet, "Parker's Healthy Hair—How to Get and Keep It."

JANE COWL SAYS
Dear Mr. Parker—Let me thank you for the most beneficial treatments my hair has ever had. All good wishes to you.

HERBEX makes the HAIR HEALTHY, keeps the scalp clean, cool, making the hair soft and fluffy. 50c. bottle. Ask for Book, "Healthy Hair."

Frank Parker, Hair and Scalp SPECIALIST.
51 WEST 37TH ST., N.Y.

MRS. WILSON'S
Formerly with Mrs. Osborne Co.
MENDING SHOP
Original Designs in Frocks and Blouses. Smart Mourning. Trousseaux. Special Department for Remodeling. Superior and careful dry cleaning of fine gowns.
FOUR-FORTY-FOUR PARK AVE.
Near 57th St., New York.
Telephone Plaza 6511.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

A Chest of Chinese Tea

$1.00

Charming imported novelty—chest hand-painted — excellent grade tea. With key chest makes a convenient jewel case, when empty.

Solid Mahogany
Candlestick $1.00
Height 7¼". Diameter 4¼".

A splendid candlestick because of its simplicity of design.
Candle fits in brass cup inside of top.

When ordering articles by mail add 10c. for postage.

300 Articles at $1.00 Displayed in Our Shop.

The One Dollar Shop (Inc.)
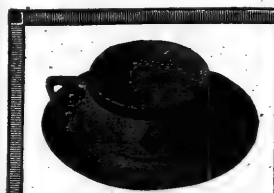
8 East 37th St., New York.



DISTINCTIVE
CHINA and CRYSTAL

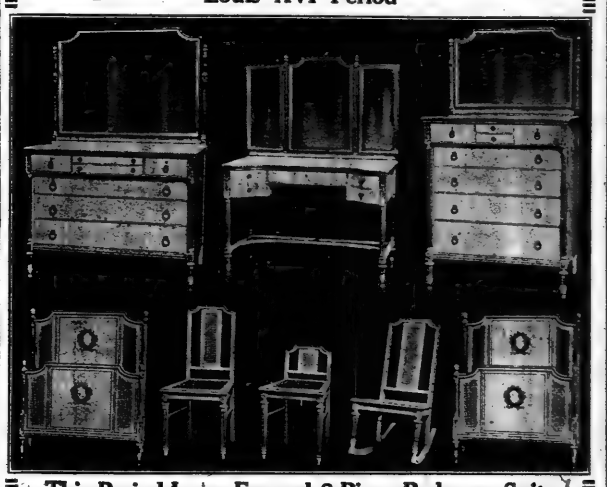
For Wedding and Christmas Gifts. Our Imported China and Crystal in various decorations of coin gold, gold encrustations and monograms, purchased on our CLUB PLAN, will enable you to obtain absolutely hand decorated China or Crystal very economically.

Write for Catalog, designs, and estimates.

ART CHINA IMPORT CO.
Dept. P, 47 West 36th St., N. Y.
(Bet. 5th and 6th Aves.)

ADVERTISEMENTS.

"Quality Furniture"
Antique Ivory Enamel Bedroom Suite of Louis XVI Period



This Period Ivory Enamel 8-Piece Bedroom Suite

Consisting of DRESSER, CHIFFONIER, DRESSING TABLE, TWIN BEDS, with cane panels, CHAIR, ROCKER and DRESSING TABLE CHAIR. All dust proof construction. Bed can be had in full size. Can be purchased separately if desired. $425.00 Value $525.00

Joseph L. Herschmann
625-627 Sixth Avenue, N. Y.
Bet. 36th & 37th Sts. (Established 1862.) Phone 444 Greeley.

Pathephone
Hear it Played!
Better tone—bigger volume.

This is the wonderful instrument familiar to all music-lovers in Europe—product of the famous Pathe Freres' ingenuity. Sounds reproduced true to nature—ball-shaped sapphire used instead of a needle.

$15 Instrument $175 Instrument $50 Instrument

WRITE FOR CATALOGS.
Continual Demonstrations at PATHÉ FRÈRES PHONOGRAPH CO.
29-33 West 38th Street.

MATERNITY APPAREL

Dresses Made After Our Patented
KNICK-ERBOCKER FORM SYSTEM
To conform quickly to desired size
"Just Pull the Tape"
Eliminates old methods. No clumsy elastic. No hidden plaits. Preserves normal appearance.

Latest Popular Styles and Materials, $2.50 to $30.00
Ready to Wear and Made to Measure.
No. 129—Maternity Dress of Satin Stripe Mercerized Crepon. Trimming of Satin and Shadow Lace. $4.95

Send for loose-leaf Catalogue "T. M." of Dresses, Skirts, Coats, Capes, Corsets, and Negligees.

129

The American Women's Wear Co.
119-125 West 25th St., New York City.

Maternity Garments

Style is the essential factor always in view when we design garments with expanding lines for maternity.

In addition, we provide models designed especially to preserve good outlines through the entire period.

Suits, Coats, Dresses, Waists, Corsets, Skirts, Negligees, Underwear.

Send for our season book edition T, with 500 models for mother & baby.

CLEARANCE SALE now in progress.

5144 (Illustrated) Maternity Dress of fine French Serge in navy or black, combined with black satin, silk braid. 23.50

Lane Bryant, 25 W. 38th St., N. Y.

JACK'S PEDIC ARCH SHOE FOR WOMEN

Why Wear Homely Shoes

To Correct Your Foot Ills?

Jack's Improved Pedic Arch Shoe—perfect in Fashion—corrects and prevents Falling Arches and Flat Foot. The skeletons of these shoes are designed on scientific orthopoedic lines, providing ease and comfort. The exteriors embody Jack's newest original and exclusive creations.

Price Nine Dollars.
New Designs in Short Vamp Shoes.
OUR ONLY STORE:
Shoe Jack's Shop
495 6TH AV., BET. 29TH AND 30TH STS.

Modes des Chapeaux
Walter
400 Fifth Avenue
To introduce this New Millinery Shop
A Special SALE 200 Attractive Copies of FRENCH HATS
$7.50 & $10.00
Actual values to $20.

This Hat $10

Extremely smart and chic creations, with newest trimmings. Reproductions of the latest and most desirable Paris models.

PEARLS
SPECIAL NOVEMBER SALE

To encourage early Christmas shopping we are offering for this month graduated ropes of our scientifically made pearls, which regularly sell at $10, $15 & $25, including a dainty sterling silver barrel clasp, at, SPECIAL, $8.00—$12.00 & $15.00

New Illustrated Pearl Booklet sent on request.

ADDRESS MAIL ORDERS
5A WEST 37 ST., NEW YORK.

Frederick
Jeweler and Pearl Maker
SHOP AT 521 FIFTH AVE.
N. E. Cor. 43d St.
New York.

I, personally, make every sitting and see every print.

PIERCE MacDONALD
Photographer-of-Men.
576 FIFTH AV. COR. 47TH ST.

MAJOR'S CEMENT

10c and 15c EST. 1876.

Major's Cement is the strongest on Earth for mending broken articles and tipping billiard cues. Major's Rubber and Leather Cement same price. For sale by druggists and others.

MAJOR MANUFACTURING CO.,
461 Pearl St., N. Y. City. A. Major, Prest.
We Pack Hamilton Coupons.

Three Notable Specials at Hathaway's this week

SOLID MAHOGANY TABLE
Used as a Library Table or to place back of a Davenport. Closed, 22x43 inches. Open, 22x66 inches. Special at $39.50

In every department of our business you will find the standard of values correspondingly high—furniture exquisite in design and perfect in construction, at prices which are unequalled elsewhere. The Hathaway Brochure, illustrating and describing a number of handsome pieces, will be sent on request.

BLOCK FRONT DESK
In solid mahogany, 42 inches wide and 41 high. Automatic lid support. Drawer pulls of solid cast brass. Special at $90.00

SOLID MAHOGANY DESK
Its lines are remarkable for their simple strength and dignity. 40½ inches high and 39 wide. Regularly $52.00. Special at $39.50

W. A. Hathaway Company
62 West 45th Street, New York

Vacuum Cleaners
At Reduced Prices

We buy in large lots from factories for spot cash, and sell to the consumers at greatly reduced prices. Note the following prices on Electric Cleaners and the number of Profit Sharing Certificates with each purchase:

Magic and two $5.00 Certificates	$34.50
Eureka (Model B) and two $5.00 Certificates	29.50
Frantz Premier " one " "	23.75
Rapid " two " "	21.00

Big Ben, Ohio, Cadillac, Apex and twenty other popular makes at big reductions. The Profit-Sharing Certificates greatly reduce the cost of your cleaner. We give them with all cleaners.

HAND-POWER CLEANERS

Combination Carpet Sweepers and Vacuum Cleaners	Duntley $5.75, Domestic $8.75

Other Hand-Power Cleaners from $4.50 Up.

Don't buy any cleaner until you get our prices. You not only save money if you purchase from us, but you can also have the benefit of our advice in making a selection, which is important, as price does not always determine the value.

We sell more vacuum cleaners than any other dealer in the country, and for that reason our stock is always new and up-to-date. This is important.

We must sell some makes of cleaners on easy terms. Send for complete price list and state whether you have electricity or not. Mail orders and letters of enquiry from out-of-town will receive special attention. We pay express charges.

EUREKA SALES CO.
VACUUM CLEANER EXPERTS

Brooklyn Store:	WHOLESALE AND RETAIL	Downtown Branch:
RETAIL ONLY	131 West 42d St.,	RETAIL ONLY
529 Fulton St.	Between B'way and 6th Av.	Booth 53 Hudson
Phone 3937 Main.	ADDRESS MAIL TO DEPT. E,	Term'l—Concourse,
	Phone 6310-6311 Bryant.	30 Church St.

Entire Building MOOD 30 West 39th St.
Near 5th Avenue — Phone 1742 Greeley

MOOD Announce New "Ready-to-Wear" Department

For years known as the source of the most artistic ideas, and as a house which has, through the originality of its designs, greatly influenced American styles, MOOD make the above announcement, which will be indeed welcomed by those who have wished for "MOOD Individuality" at nominal prices.

Dainty Dancing Frocks, Suits of superb "line" and of the most advanced modeling, Gowns for bridge and luncheon, all enhanced by MOOD touches and MOOD fit, are offered as low as

$35.00

The reputation of the establishment is an assurance of the value of these offerings. A satisfactory selection is best made certain by an early call.

In the Order Department may be viewed a superb collection of the newest creations originated by Mme. Mood, herself.

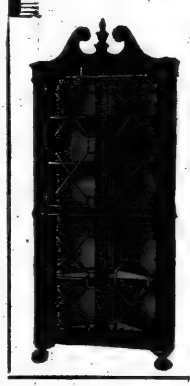
Hats for Street and Dress Wear also on exhibition.

The MOOD Custom-made Corsets and Corset Specialties, including the famous Bust and Hip Reducers, are known to a clientele which is country-wide. Booklet sent free.

Period Furniture

GRAND RAPIDS FURNITURE—(Direct from Factory)

"Something Different"



Chippendale Corner Closet
Solid Mahogany. Fits any corner.
Special at $45
REGULARLY $90.

DISCONTINUED PATTERNS at 50% of Regular Prices.

Sheraton, Tudor, Adam, Heppelwhite, Colonial, etc. Dining Room Suites, 10 pieces, $100 up; Regularly $200 up.

Queen Anne, Louis XIV., Louis XVI., Sheraton, etc. Bedroom Suites, Mahogany and Walnut, $75 up; Regularly $150 up.

ODD PERIOD PIECES, $4 up
Chairs, Tables, Desks, etc.,

Estab. 1852. MANGES BROS. Manufacturers.
115-117 WEST 23D ST. and 108-110 WEST 24TH ST., N. Y.

Rebuilder of Gowns

If your old suits are slightly worn and out of season, let me alter them for you. At a reasonable expense I can really do wonders with gowns you may consider worthless.

Also ARTISTIC GOWNS for all occasions made from your own material to suit your individuality.

HOMER
11½ W. 37th St., N. Y. Tel. 5265 Greeley.

Lady of Quality CORSET SHOP

LA REINE AND ELSO Front and Back Lace Corsets at Special Prices.

CORSET HOSPITAL.
CLEANING, REPAIRING AND ALTERING AT MODERATE PRICES.

233 Fifth Ave., N. E. Cor. 27th St. Second Floor.
500 Fifth Ave., N. W. Cor. 42d St., Opp. Library, 2d Floor

Your Children's

future foot health (perhaps bodily health and success) depend on the shoe you buy them now.

Don't trust the growing feet in any but perfectly shaped shoes—Blyn-Plan Nature Shoes. They cost no more than ordinary shoes.

Blyn-Plan Nature Shoe

Patent Colt and Gun Metal For Children

Sizes
5 to 8	1.75
8½ to 11	2.00
11½ to 2	2.50

Button and Blucher Styles

Tan Russia Calf

Sizes
5 to 11	2.00
11½ to 2	2.50

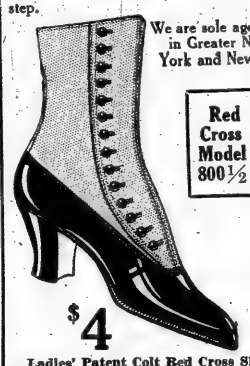
10c. extra by mail anywhere in the United States.

Red Cross Shoe For Women

The Shoe of Style and Comfort

No other comfort shoe has Red Cross style. No other fashion shoe gives you Red Cross comfort.

The flexible sole gives you proper sole protection, combined with freedom of movement and buoyancy of step.



We are sole agents in Greater New York and Newark.

Red Cross Model 800½

$4

Ladies' Patent Colt Red Cross Shoes with cravenette cloth tops; narrow, plain toe, flexible welted soles and the new spool heels. A trim new Fall style that combines extreme fashion with absolute comfort.

Blyn Shoes in Newark
New Store in Newark's Shopping Centre,
689 Broad Street
Opposite Military Park.

I. Blyn & Sons GUARANTEE SHOE CO.
Mail Order Dept. 2240 3d Av.

West Side Stores:	East Side Stores:
222-224 W. 125th St.	3d Av. & 122d St.
6th Av. & 27th St.	3d Av., near 86th St.
8th Av., near 39th St.	3d Av., nr. 150th St.
	162 Bowery nr. Broome

Brooklyn Stores { B'way, bet. Park & Ellery Sts. / 485 Fulton St., opp. A. & S. / Broadway, near Greene Ave.

Factory: 511-519 East 72d St.

Leonard's

NOW ON SALE Tailored Suits, Coats, Wraps, Street and Evening Gowns, Dinner Dresses, etc., in original and distinctive Fall Models. All garments made on the premises.

A Special Department — extra large Sizes for Stout Figures.

2107—Attractive satin dress with splendid lines. Girdle has colored beadwork in front, big collar of white batiste and long set-in sleeves. Price $22.50

Catalog T and order blanks sent out of town on request.

Mme. Leonard's Self-Adjustable Maternity

apparel, scientifically and hygienically designed, gives maximum style and comfort. If interested write for Catalog TM.

24 West 39th St., Near 5th Ave., New York. Phone Greeley 4534.

CAN YOU WEAR A 16, 36 or 38 Size?

We are wholesalers and have no further use for the samples from which we sold this Fall's stock to large retail stores. We will sell our samples at ridiculously low prices and save you a tidy little sum on your Fall suit or coat.

$9.75 to $25

SAMPLE CLOAK & SUIT CO.
1204 BROADWAY Near 29th St Over Shanley's.

GLASSBERG'S

Stylish SHORT VAMP SHOES

$3.50 up

3 STORES IN THE HEART OF NEW YORK

511 6th Ave., near 31st St.
225 West 42d St., near Times Sq.
58 3d Ave., near 10th St.

Send for Illustrated Catalogue T. Mail Orders Carefully Filled.

Peck & Peck

ESPECIALLY REDUCED

Exquisite heavy weight black silk stockings. Made to sell for $2.00.

at $1.35
$7.50 the ½ doz.

We will give our customers the benefit of an unusual occurrence which allows us to offer a limited quantity for this week only.

PECK & PECK
EXCLUSIVE HOSIERY
448 Fifth Avenue at 39th Street
588 Fifth Avenue at 48th Street
NEW YORK CITY

VAN RAALTE Veils

"At All Good Shops"
Made in America

NO little touch means more to a woman's appearance than a fine veil. Be sure yours are all Van Raalte Veils. Of finest silk, dainty yet durable, they are a delight to the woman of fine taste. Ask for them at your favorite shop.

VAN RAALTE MARK

For Your Protection— this little white ticket is on every yard. Look for it.

A STITCH AT THIS TIME MEANS ECONOMY!

Now is the time to think of your fall and winter wardrobe. Especially so since war has practically suspended dealings with foreign houses and there are many women left without gowns and frocks.

TRADE MARK

Before making hasty purchases, consider first the economy of having a few of your last year's suits and gowns remodeled.

Years of experience has taught me how to make old frocks look like new. I remodel gowns, suits and dresses, using your own materials if desired.

A department for all kinds of darning and rewearing. Remodeling evening gowns a specialty.

THE MENDING SHOP
the original mending shop of New York
MISS H. REDDING COUGHLIN
29 West 31st Street, New York
Telephone 189 Madison Square

In the Shopping District

CORSET HOSPITAL

Equipped for cleaning, repairing and alterations on all makes of corsets. Prices moderate and work promptly attended to. Stock Corsets and Brassieres fitted. Exceptional designs in Negligees at very moderate prices.

MY SPECIALTY
Copying your favorite Imported or Domestic Corset at moderate prices.

ALONSO
500 5th Ave., N. W. Cor. 42d Street. 6th Floor.

Poinciana Cerate

The Pride of Palm Beach' assures a good complexion —satisfaction guaranteed or money back. 25c, 50c, $1, $2.50 At Your Dealer or by Mail Send stamps for sample to

C. B. MERRIAM
Lake Placid, N. Y.

ARTISTIC DENTISTRY

In all its perfected details. Modern and most approved scientific methods used. Porcelain work a specialty. Consultation cordially invited.

DRS. M. & H. SCHLESSINGER,
1208 Times Bldg., 42d St. & B'way.
Phone Bryant 672.

EST. 1892 FURNITURE OF DISTINCTION EST. 1892

Our 23d Annual November Sale

Our 23 years of success in the furniture field is due to the fact that we have constantly carried the markets' best and latest products—both in design and quality. You are cordially invited to inspect our elaborate showing.

This four-piece selected figured mahogany Bed Room Suite —Early Georgian period. Regular price $450. Special November sale price..... $340

49-51 W. 23d St. Geiger & Braverman Furniture Company Bet. 5th & 6th Aves.

How to make your skin fine in texture

As a baby, your skin was fine and smooth. Nature intended you to keep it so.

If the delicate pores have become enlarged and coarsened, it is because of cleansing methods unsuited to your skin. As a result, the pores have lost their power to contract and expand as they should.

You can restore them to their normal healthy condition and rebuild a smooth-textured skin by persistent use of the Woodbury treatment below.

Begin this treatment tonight

Just before retiring, dip your washcloth in very warm water and hold it to your face. Now take the cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap, dip it in the bowl of water and rub the cake itself over your skin. Leave the slight coating of soap on for a few minutes until the skin feels drawn and dry. Then dampen the skin and rub the soap in gently with an upward and outward motion. Rinse the face thoroughly, first in tepid water, then in cold. Whenever possible, rub the face with a piece of ice. Always dry carefully.

Use this treatment persistently for ten days and your skin will show a marked improvement—a promise of that greater smoothness and finer texture that the steady use of Woodbury's always brings.

Woodbury's Facial Soap costs 25c a cake. No one hesitates at the price after their first cake.

Do this today—now!

Tear out the illustration of the cake below and put it in your purse as a reminder, to get Woodbury's. Tear out the cake now. Take it to your druggist or toilet counter today. Begin tonight to get the benefits of this Facial Soap.

Woodbury's Facial Soap

For Sale by Dealers Everywhere. The Andrew Jergens Co., Spring Grove Avenue, Cincinnati, O.

A Garden Full of Tulips for $1.00

75 Tulip Bulbs, all first size, taken from 25 named varieties, for $1.00.

PLANT THIS FALL.

These Tulips have been selected from 75 of the most beautiful varieties, embracing all the colors that are to be found in this splendid class of Spring blooming bulbs.

Plant near your home—in your garden or back yard. The beautiful blossoms in a multitude of brilliant colors and shades will make April a Spring month worth while.

75 Tulip Bulbs, Finest Mixed, $1.00.

Cut out this advertisement and enclose with dollar bill, stamps or money order or present at our store and secure this splendid collection of Tulip Bulbs, for only $1.00, prepaid to your home anywhere in the United States, with our 1914 Fall Catalogue.

Stumpp & Walter Co.
30-32 Barclay Street New York.

The "Exceptional" School
Mr. G. Hepburn Wilson, M. B.

The American Authority on Modern Dancing.
FIFTH AV., NEW YORK
Nr. W. Cor. 45th St., Thorley Bldg.
Unquestionably superior Because of its intense Expert nature, 18,000 private pupils last season means not only a World's record, but it marks a distinct difference from the ordinary school.

Dancing ability is more important than New Dances. Mr. Wilson teaches all the New Modern Dances, but the principal consideration of each lesson is to develop and improve your general dancing ability. This is what you want. This is why you should come to Mr. Wilson.

(C) 1914

Call, write or 'phone (Bryant 6321) for interesting literature on "FALL AND WINTER STYLES of Modern Dancing," by Mr. G. Hepburn Wilson, M. B.

Highest Prices Paid

For ladies', gentlemen's & children's discarded clothing.

Fine Evening and Street Costumes.
Diamonds, Jewelry, Furs, &c. Call or address
M. Naftal, 60 West 45th St. Tel. 670 Bryant.

You Prove It

We say to you with all the emphasis at our command that the choicest flour in all the world is

Heckers' FLOUR

Supremely good
For bread—biscuit—cake—pastry—all household uses.
The proof is in the baking.
You prove it—it is worth while.

At All Good Grocers.

HECKERS' CREAM OATMEAL — REALLY THE CREAM OF THE OATS

Scoop Plate Muffin Stand, Special at $5.50.

Solid Mahogany Muffin Stands.
Retailed at Manufacturer's Prices.

These artistic and useful novelties delight all who see them. We have many varieties in plain and all varieties of inlays.

We would suggest your seeing these pieces for yourself and also many other charming novelties that we have on exhibition in our show rooms.

Our Booklet "T" will be sent free on request.

Louis Hessler,
"Quality Furniture Novelties"
630-632 Columbus Ave., Between 90th & 91st Sts. New York.
Telephone Riverside 312.

Have Beautiful, Lustrous, Fluffy Hair.

If your hair has lost any of its original loveliness, it need cause you no worry, for now it is possible to obtain any effect in hairdressing by having one of our transformations.

They are made of Superior, Soft and Wavy French Hair—are light, cool and comfortable—can be combed and brushed—are skillfully made on a fine net to allow the hair to fall naturally the same as it grows.

We have the largest and best establishment of its kind in the city, and offer you the very best services in Massaging, Manicuring, Hair Dressing, Hair Dyeing, and Scalp Treatment.

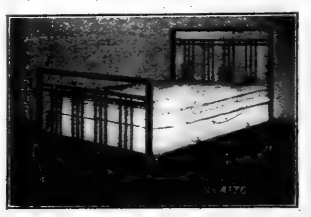
Cluzell Bros
Hair Merchants — Ladies' Hairdressers
12-14 West 37th Street, New York
Telephone, Greeley—4191-4192.

The Whitcomb Welded Corner

This bed is of the Biltmore type, 1,250 of this design being made in our factory for the palatial Biltmore Hotel.

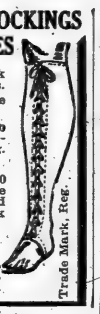
The welded corner, a new feature in brass beds, originated in The Whitcomb Factory.

This is one of many new designs.



Brass Beds from $16 up
Enamel Cribs, $5.75 up
Bedding—Mattresses remade
The Whitcomb Metallic Bedstead Co.
34th & Madison Avenue
Factory, Shelton, Conn.
Philadelphia Boston
1710 Chestnut St. 78 & 80 Washington St.

CORLISS LACED STOCKINGS FOR LIMB TROUBLES



VARICOSE VEINS, Weak Ankles or any Limb troubles.
SANITARY, as they may be washed or boiled.
COMFORTABLE, made to measure. No elastic; adjustable; laces like a legging.
COOL, light, porous.
ECONOMICAL. Cost $1.50 each, or two for the same limb, $2.50, postpaid. Send for self-measurement blank No. 4.

Consultation FREE.

N. Y. Corliss Limb Spec. Co., Inc., 140 West 42d St., New York. Phone Bryant 2131

Trade Mark. Reg.

REDUCE YOUR FLESH

Wear my famous medicated rubber garments a few hours a day and your superfluous flesh will positively disappear.

Dr. Jeanne Walter's Famous Medicated Rubber Garments for Men & Women.

ETON JACKET.
Specially for reducing the bust and upper part of the body above the waist line.

SPECIAL BUST REDUCER, $5.00.
Will reduce your flesh on any part of the body. Write today for further particulars.

Dr. JEANNE WALTER,
Dept. T. S., 45 West 34th St., New York
Inventor and Patentee.

THE SHEFFIELD SILVER SHOP

SHEFFIELD PLATE IN EXCLUSIVE PERIOD DESIGNS FOR BIRTHDAY, WEDDING AND CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

GUERNSEY JUG, $3.50.

ROBERT FITCH,
295 Fifth Avenue,
Bet. 30th & 31st Sts.,
NEW YORK.

Ladies; improve your looks. Facial Massage, Scalp Treatment, Shampooing, Marcel Waving, Hairdressing, 25c. each. Manicuring 15c. Bleaching, Dyeing, Hair Restoring, Recoloring of old switches and hair pieces. Reliable hair work, combings made up. Satisfaction guaranteed. Operators sent to residences. Your patronage solicited. Most sanitary place in city.

MME. HUDSON'S PARLORS, 626 Sixth Ave., Between 36th and 37th Sts.

Fall Gaiter Boot
Patent and dull vamps. $7
Fawn and gray buck tops
I. MILLER
15 West 42nd Street
1554 Broadway

MYSTIC CREAM

Takes the Burn out of Sunburn in Summer. Marvelous for chapped hands in Winter. Keeps the skin soft and smooth the year around. At all Drug and Department Stores, 25c. Samples mailed on request.

OGDEN PHARMACY,
Middletown, N. Y.

IN THIS ISSUE: GERMAN REPLIES TO JAMES M. BECK'S WAR ARGUMENT. SEE SECTION 7

"All the News That's Fit to Print."

The New York Times.

THE WEATHER
Fair, warmer Sunday; Monday, increasing cloudiness; moderate south to southwest winds.
For full weather report see Page 15.

VOL. LXIV...NO. 20,735. NEW YORK, SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1914.—90 PAGES, In Eight Parts, Including Picture and Rotogravure Section and Review of Books. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

4,000 CHEER GLYNN AT FINAL RALLY

Great Throng Packs Durland's Riding Academy for Windup of the Campaign.

BLACK FLAYS WHITMAN

County Chairman Says District Attorney Overlooked Jimmy Marsh's Perjury.

STETSON PRAISES GERARD

And Ridicules Guthrie's Attack on Ambassador—Glynn Reviews His Work.

Four thousand persons packed Durland's Riding Academy at 5 West Sixty-sixth Street last night for the final meeting of the Glynn and Gerard campaign. Noted speakers aroused the enthusiasm of the audience, particularly County Chairman William Harmon Black, who made a severe attack upon District Attorney Whitman. Other speakers were Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jacob H. Schiff, and Francis Lynde Stetson, who represented the Independent Democrats and who held up for laughter William D. Guthrie's criticisms of Ambassador Gerard. Gov. Glynn delivered an eloquent address, which was cheered heartily by the great throng.

Gov. Glynn was tired when he came in from Staten Island yesterday afternoon, so tired that he canceled engagements to speak at two east side meetings and to appear in the parade with Mayor Mitchel, but last night he made a final effort and threw all of his strength into his address. Every time his name was mentioned by preceding speakers it was greeted with applause by the audience, and when the Governor himself appeared late in the evening those in the crowd yelled themselves hoarse, notwithstanding the efforts of the Chairman to quiet them. Gov. Glynn tried to wave the throng into silence, but it was many minutes before he was allowed to speak. The crowd began to assemble early and by 8:30 o'clock, save for a few seats in the extreme rear of the arena, the great room was filled. A band of 200 Fordham students organized into the Young Men's Glynn League marched in with a fife and drum corps and paraded around the hall while the crowd almost drowned the fifes and drums with cheering. Another line of paraders accompanied the Governor to the hall and there was more music and more noise.

Black Attacks Whitman.

County Chairman Black opened the meeting and promised not to make a speech before introducing the Chairman, but he had certain things to say about District Attorney Whitman, and said them in plain language.

"Let me tell you something that happened in the District Attorney's office," he said. "Last year a man in one of Mr. Whitman's famous graft hunts went before the Grand Jury and swore that he had made a lot of money in stock transactions that he had loaned to some grafter Mr. Whitman was after. Mr. Whitman investigated this case and found the man had not speculated in stocks and had lied to the Grand Jury. When confronted with this, the man said, 'I lied to protect a friend,' and he went to the Grand Jury and admitted that he had been a perjurer. But Mr. Whitman whitewashed him. And the man is a man whose picture and posters I have recently seen all over the east side. He is Jimmy Marsh, the Republican candidate for Congress on the east side.

Chairman Black took up Mr. Whitman's business administration of his office and gave figures to prove that the District Attorney was a very extravagant public manager. Then he added:

"It may be, of course, that Mr. Whitman has some good excuse, but it also may be the real truth that Mr. Whitman has had to employ a lot of Assistant District Attorneys to go all over the State to stir up things to make capital for Mr. Whitman in his race for the Republican nomination for Governor. That is the real explanation."

Chairman Black also took Mr. Whitman to task in connection with the religious issue in the campaign.

Denounces Appeal to Bigotry.

"The religious issue has been injected into the campaign," he said, "and not until Mr. Whitman was reproved by the newspapers and the public did he say anything about it—and then only seventy-two hours before election. It was telegraphed to New York so late that it cannot get back into the counties where Mr. Whitman has been using the issue. And Mr. Whitman says, 'I didn't inject this religious issue into the campaign and I deplore it.' Mr. Whitman, that is not satisfactory. You do not go far enough. You should come out like a true American and say, 'I despise this thing; I despise the men who are bringing it forward, and I do not want anything from them.' But Mr. Whitman's little pink-tea disclaimer in the morning's papers satisfies no one. It is an unkind thing to say, and I speak only for myself, but I say now that Mr. Whitman has shown himself a bigot in this campaign. The word 'bigot' will be written across his forehead for all time to come, because he is the first man who ever builded his campaign for the Governorship of the State of New

Continued on Page 14.

FIRE BADLY DAMAGES FISH COUNTRY HOME

First Floor of "Rocklaws" Wrecked—Mrs. Fish Directs Salvage of Valuables

Rocklaws, the country home of Hamilton Fish, one of the show places of Westchester County, on the high bluffs overlooking the Hudson River at Garrison, opposite West Point, was partly destroyed by fire last night.

When the blaze was discovered it was working its way up through the floor of the front hall from the cellar. Mr. and Mrs. Fish were at home and were preparing for dinner.

Mr. Fish sent a call to the volunteer Fire Department at Cold Spring, five miles away, while Mrs. Fish marshaled the servants and chauffeurs and set them to carrying out her valuable paintings, a grandfather's clock, an antique dining room set, and rare linen and silver.

There were no water mains, and the Cold Spring hose cart, which was brought over, towed by an automobile, was useless, and the fire had to be fought with hand extinguishers brought in automobiles by a hundred or more Westchester residents who had seen the flames, and a bucket brigade that remained at work for more than three hours.

The entire first floor was destroyed. Mr. and Mrs. Fish slept last night at the home of Mrs. Fish's parents on an estate near by. They took with them the linen and some of the more valuable paintings and pieces of antique furniture that had been removed before the walls of the dining room and living room were chopped away by the volunteer firemen.

The last of the fire fighters left the Fish estate at 11 o'clock last night.

TRUSTS TO 'WHITE PAPERS.'

British Embassy Says on This Evidence America Can Decide.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—R. I. Kelly, writing in The Saturday Review from Wellington Road, Dublin, states he has called the attention of the British Embassy in Washington "to the necessity of an organization similar to that in the German Embassy at Washington for supplying truthful accounts of affairs and answering falsehoods and misstatements so prevalent at present from the German side, as they are carrying on in America a vigorous campaign of calumny and we are doing nothing.

"The reply I got was as follows," he says:

"'As to a British press organization from the embassy to represent our cause to American public opinion it does not seem necessary, as America is quite capable of deciding the question for herself and of gauging at their real value any German misrepresentations. THE NEW YORK TIMES has reprinted the British and German "White Books" on the crisis side by side, and the sale has already reached over 80,000. Nothing better than this could be found to show the justice of our cause.'"

LEAPS TO DEATH IN SUBWAY

Woman Killed by Train Before Crowd at 14th Street.

Several hundred men and women passengers in the Fourteenth Street Subway station saw a young woman leap from the uptown platform in front of a north-bound express train just as it was pulling into the station shortly before 8 o'clock last night. Frank Otten, the motorman, threw on the brakes full force, but the wheels of both the first and second cars passed over her. The woman was killed almost instantly.

Scores of passengers were thrown from their seats and shaken up by the jolt when the brakes were thrown on, and there was a general scramble to get out. The platform became congested and the guards had all they could do to prevent a panic.

Traffic on the uptown tracks was at a standstill for twenty minutes while the body was being removed. A. L. Merrick, Superintendent of the Interborough Company, ordered the power turned off five minutes after the accident, and a gang of trainmen soon had the first and second cars unbuckled from the rest of the train.

Dr. Stevens was summoned in an ambulance from the New York Hospital, but found little to do. The body was taken to the East Twenty-second Street Police Station. There was no mark of identification. The woman was well dressed, about 27 years old, five feet four and one-half inches tall, and weighed 150 pounds. She had dark brown hair and blue eyes, with features of a decided Italian type.

The woman wore a black skirt and jacket, with black plush trimmings, black stockings, tan shoes, white cotton gloves, and a plush hat. Although she carried no pocketbook or money, she had a cheap gold watch and some jewelry, consisting of imitation diamond earrings and an imitation diamond ring on the second finger of the left hand. There was a monogram on the watch bearing the initials "M. F. C."

EDISON'S NEW NAVAL DEVICE

His Submarine Storage Batteries Meet Preliminary Tests.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Tests of storage batteries designed by Thomas A. Edison for use in submarine craft to eliminate danger of suffocation by gases generated by batteries now used, will be concluded within a month at the New York Navy Yard. Navy Department officials here announced tonight that the preliminary tests had been entirely satisfactory.

If the final tests are equally so, new submarines will be equipped with the Edison battery, and whenever an old craft is repaired, and its batteries removed, the new one will be substituted.

NEW YORK TO ATLANTA AND RETURN, $29.25
Via SOUTHERN RAILWAY. Tickets on sale Nov. 7th to 11th. Route of "Good Roads Special." Nov. 7th, and "W. C. T. U. White Ribbon Special," Nov. 10th. N. Y. Office, 264 Fifth Av.—Advt.

PREPARES TO MEET CRISIS IN MEXICO

Washington Sending Officers Back to Vera Cruz and Border, Military Journal Says.

MEXICO CITY A VOLCANO

Fear Expressed That Outbreak There May Make Intervention Necessary Any Time.

EXPLAINED AS ROUTINE

War Department Denies That Vera Cruz Assignments Are Significant—Chiefs to Rule Mexico.

That officers of the army and navy now on leave in the United States are being quietly ordered to Vera Cruz or the Mexican border is asserted by The Army and Navy Journal. Mexican conditions, the Journal states, have reached such an acute stage that intervention of some sort by the United States may be forced.

"Reliable advices," says The Journal, "indicate that virtual anarchy prevails in Mexico City. There is such a disturbance in the Mexican capital that well-informed authorities on Mexican affairs would not be surprised to hear that wholesale outrages had already been committed in the city. So far a strict censorship has kept all of the details of the disturbances in the Mexican capital from publication in this country, but without making any special effort to secure an account of what is happening there the State Department has a full realization of the dangers threatening.

"It is learned that, as a precautionary measure, officers of the army and navy on leave in the United States are being hurried back to Vera Cruz and the Mexican border. This is being done as quietly as possible, so as not to alarm the country or create an impression in Mexico that this Government has any intention of intervening.

"Of course, Secretary of State Bryan has not given up hope of settling the Mexican situation without the use of the army or navy. The Administration will go the limit in its efforts to avoid a clash in Mexico, but it is feared that some outrage may be committed in Mexico City which will arouse the country.

"No hope of the immediate relief of the troops at Vera Cruz is now entertained at the War Department, and while officers on duty there refuse to discuss the matter, enough is known of the situation to draw the conclusion that more troops would be sent to the border and Vera Cruz if it were not thought that such a move would further complicate the situation.

"It has been decided to keep four battleships, the Kansas, Minnesota, Rhode Island, and Texas, at Vera Cruz until the troops are withdrawn and peace prevails in Mexico. Now that there is no immediate prospect of the withdrawal of the troops from Vera Cruz the programme for the rest of the Atlantic Fleet has been arranged and will be carried out without the ships that are left at Vera Cruz.

"From Nov. 4 to Nov. 15 the fleet and divisional manoeuvres will take place. After the manoeuvres, divisional target practice of the fleet will be held. In the manoeuvres the following ships will participate: New York, Arkansas, Delaware, North Dakota, Utah, South Carolina, Michigan, New Hampshire, Nebraska, New Jersey, Georgia, and Vermont. During this period the Wyoming, Connecticut, Florida, Louisiana, and Virginia will be at the yards overhauling.

"The hospital ship Solace has been ordered from Vera Cruz to Norfolk. She will bring all of the patients from Vera Cruz, and will stop at San Domingo, Haiti, and Guantanamo to take aboard the patients at these ports to bring them to the United States. After she arrives in the United States she will go to the yards for an overhauling."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Gen. Wotherspoon, Chief of the General Staff and Acting Secretary of War, today received a dispatch from Gen. Funston regarding conditions at Vera Cruz that was very reassuring to officials of the Government, according to announcement made. The dispatch said that everything was quiet in Vera Cruz, that there was no sign of danger, and that it was not necessary to strengthen or extend the American lines.

This dispatch was in response to an inquiry from the War Department sent on account of news dispatches indicating danger of trouble. Due to the expiration of enlistments and the usual incidents of the service, there are now 1,000 fewer soldiers and marines in Vera Cruz than formerly—an aggregate force of about 6,000, instead of 7,000.

It is true that officers are being sent from time to time to Vera Cruz from this country to fill vacancies caused by illness or otherwise, but this is asserted in official quarters not to imply that there is any increase of forces or that there is any fear over the situation, the officers being sent there in the usual course of routine.

CARRANZA MUST GO FIRST.

Villa's Reply to Chiefs' Decree Legislating Him Out of Power.

Special to The New York Times.

EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 31.—In reply to the action of the Aguascallentes convention in voting to retire both Gen. Carranza and Gen. Villa from power in Mexico, Villa has announced through

Continued on Page 15.

ITALIAN CABINET HAS ALL RESIGNED

Follow the Lead of the Finance Minister, Rubini — War Policy the Cause.

LONDON, Sunday, Nov. 1.—The Italian Cabinet has resigned, according to a dispatch from Rome to Reuter's Telegram Company.

Earlier dispatches announced the resignation of Signor Rubini, the Finance Minister, because he was unable to agree with other members of the Cabinet over the measures to be taken to meet the military expenditures.

ROME, Oct. 31.—Signor Rubini, Minister of Finance, resigned from the Cabinet today.

The Italian Cabinet has suffered from the same division of opinion that exists in the country at large. Italy's neutrality has been approved by the whole Cabinet, but there existed among the Ministers two opinions, as in the country, the one favoring military preparations at any cost, and the other supporting the idea that the risk of Italy becoming involved through these measures was disproportionate to any advantage she might gain.

A definite decision regarding the Ministerial crisis awaits the return of King Victor Emmanuel, but the general opinion is that Premier Salandra's task will not be limited to the appointment of new Ministers of Finance and Foreign Affairs, the latter office having been made vacant by the death of the Marquis di San Guiliano. It is argued that a Ministry thus reformed would still lack homogeneity, the absence of which caused first the resignation, on Oct. 9, of Gen. Grandi as Minister of War, and then the resignation of Signor Rubini.

SEIZE AVLONA ISLAND.

Italian Admiral Plants a Battery Commanding the Harbor.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—A Stefani Agency dispatch from Rome says:

"A semi-official note has been issued stating that the Island of Saseno was occupied yesterday by Admiral Patris of the Italian Navy, who disembarked one battery and a company of infantry. The ownerhip of this island, which commands the entrance to the harbor of Avlona, has long been a matter of dispute between Greece and Albania."

ATTACK TSING-TAU BY SEA AND LAND

Japanese and British Warships Join in Assault on German Stronghold.

TOKIO, Oct. 31.—The Navy Department announces that the Japanese squadron, assisted by English warships and masked by a mist, approached and vigorously and effectively bombarded the forts at Tsing-tau on Oct. 29. Some of the defence works were destroyed, and on the next day the bombardment was repeated. Only the Kaiser Northeast fort replied to the bombardment.

The funnel of a gunboat was shattered by the Japanese shells.

PEKING, Oct. 31.—A wireless message received in German circles here from Tsing-tau says the naval bombardment of the German position in Kiao-Chau began today, but makes no mention of a land attack. On the other hand a Japanese report asserts that both a naval and a land attack are now being pushed against the German position.

For several weeks the Germans have been maintaining a heavy artillery fire in their attempts to delay the work of intrenching and gun mounting by their foes, but this fire eventually proved unavailing. The British forces occupy a position on the front of the attacking line.

German officers in Peking say that Tsing-tau can be captured quickly if the Japanese will storm it in force, but Japanese officials here are of the opinion that the forts must be silenced first.

BRITISH OFFICIALS GO ON A SECRET MISSION

Lloyd George, Lord Haldane, and Lord Reading Sent to the Continent.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The British Government has sent three of its highest officials to the Continent on a most mysterious and important mission. The delegation consists of David Lloyd George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer; Lord Haldane, the Lord Chancellor, and Lord Reading, the Lord Chief Justice.

The destination of this mission is being kept a profound secret, as well as its object. Its importance is evident from its membership, and apparently the business to be transacted concerns both financial and legal matters. Lord Haldane and the Chief Justice, who as Sir Rufus Isaacs before his elevation to the bench was the keenest legal light at the English Bar, rank as about the foremost authorities upon the law in the United Kingdom. The most plausible report has it that the three have gone to Holland and possibly will extend their journey to the Scandinavian countries to deal with the matter of the shipment of goods from neutral countries into Germany.

If the statements of the English papers are correct Holland and the three Scandinavian nations are conducting a flourishing trade with Germany through the transhipment of supplies from the United States and even from England. The newspapers of all those countries assert that their importations are for their own needs alone, while English papers insist that they are receiving consignments of petroleum, grain, and foodstuffs generally which far exceed their normal requirements.

$21.60 JACKSONVILLE AND RETURN Via SOUTHERN RAILWAY. Lv. N.Y. 12:20 P. M. Mondays and Fridays, Oct. 26 to Feb. 26. N. Y. Office: 264 Fifth Ave.—Advt.

GERMANS SINK A BRITISH CRUISER; GAIN GROUND IN BELGIAN BATTLE; TURKS DEFY ENGLAND, 'ANNEX' EGYPT

TORPEDO SINKS THE HERMES

Light Cruiser Receives Her Deathblow in the Straits of Dover.

MOST OF HER MEN SAVED

Two Killed, Nine Injured, and About Forty Missing, the Casualty List.

SIXTH SUBMARINE VICTIM

Latest British Naval Loss Occurs in Narrow Stretch of Water Off Calais, France.

LONDON, Oct. 31, 11:10 P. M.—The enterprise of German submarines, which have been lurking along the French coast in the Straits of Dover, seeking to get a shot at British ships engaged in bombarding the German positions in Belgium, was rewarded today when one of them attacked and sank the light cruiser Hermes as she was returning from Dunkirk.

Two men killed, nine injured and about forty missing represent the casualties resulting from the sinking of the Hermes. The exact number of missing is not known.

The Hermes was a comparatively old vessel, and from a naval viewpoint was of no great value, but the fact that she was attacked so near home indicates that the German submarines must have a base somewhere on that part of the Belgian coast which is occupied by German troops, from which they can menace ships of the Allies passing between England and France. Only a few days ago one of them sank the French steamer Amiral Ganteaume, which was carrying refugees from Calais.

How many submarines the Germans have in these waters is not known, but several of them have been seen recently. When ships are guarded by torpedo-boat destroyers, as are those engaged in bombarding the German positions, they are comparatively safe, but the opportunity of the submarines comes when one is caught alone, as was the Hermes.

The Secretary to the Admiralty tonight gave out this official report of the sinking of the cruiser

The old cruiser Hermes, Capt. C. R. Lambe, was sunk today by a torpedo fired by a German submarine in the Straits of Dover as she was returning from Dunkirk. Nearly all the officers and crew were saved, but the exact loss cannot be ascertained until the men are mustered. The loss of the vessel is of small military significance.

The Hermes, which was a light cruiser of 5,600 tons displacement and a sistership of the Highflyer, the ship that sank the converted German cruiser Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, was built sixteen years ago, and was manned by a crew of 450 officers and men. Her loss brings the total British warship loss, due to successful submarine attacks on the part of the Germans, to six vessels of which three were armored cruisers.

The total loss in tonnage to the British fleet from submarines alone is now 46,290 tons. Add to this the light cruiser Amphion, which was sent to the bottom by a German mine, and the British naval loss totals 49,730 tons. The money cost of the six ships that were torpedoed by submarines totals about $15,950,000. They were manned by 2,912 officers and men, and of these, more than 2,000 were lost when the ships went down.

The first of the British ships sunk by a submarine was the scout cruiser Pathfinder, which was torpedoed on Sept. 7 in the North Sea. She was a cruiser of the same general type as the American scout cruisers Birmingham, Chester, and Salem, and carried 268 officers and men.

Deadly Work of the U9.

Fifteen days later, on Sept. 22, came the wonderful attack that resulted in the loss of the armored cruisers Aboukir, Cressy, and Hogue, vessels of 12,000 tons displacement each, and each manned by 700 officers and men, and each of them a $3,750,000 vessel. A single submarine, the U9, accomplished the destruction of those ships, and the commander of the German submarine, Lieut. Weddigen, as a result of his feat, became the popular naval hero of all Germany.

A few days ago The Times printed an account of Weddigen's emotions when he was sending those ships with their crews of more than 2,000 men to the bottom of the North Sea. Weddigen said he was almost ready to let the Cressy stay afloat in order that she

Continued on Page 2.

Summary of War News.

The British Admiralty announces that the light cruiser Hermes has been sunk by a German submarine in the Straits of Dover. Nearly all the officers and crew have been saved.

The Allies were forced to yield ground in Belgium yesterday before fierce attacks by the Germans, who captured two towns to the south of Ypres. The French report says some ground was regained later.

Berlin reports that French counter attacks have been repulsed with severe losses.

The Russians report that the plan of the Austro-German Army to break through the centre of the Russian forces has failed after five days of severe fighting. The Germans are said to have suffered immense losses, and the Russian Army is now advancing in several districts on the East Prussian front.

The German report states that the battle in the eastern theatre of war has not yet been decided, and that the Russians are slowly following the German forces, which are being "regrouped" to the west of Warsaw.

The Austrians announce that the advance of the Russian forces along the Rivers San and Stryi have been repulsed with severe losses to the enemy. The total number of prisoners interned in Austria up to Oct. 28 is said to number 649 officers and 73,179 men.

The allied powers have asked Turkey for an explanation of the bombardment of Russian seaports by the Porte's ships, which is looked upon as giving the Porte another chance to keep out of the conflict. However, it is announced in London that as the Porte has broken off relations with the British Embassy it is necessary to take steps for the protection of British territory and Egypt.

A news dispatch states that the Russian fleet has attacked the Turkish warships in the Black Sea.

BRITAIN ADMITS TURKISH BREAK

Foreign Office Statement Deplores It and Alleges Systematic Intrigue.

GERMAN AGENT IN SYRIA

Inflammatory Document Probably Circulated in India Also —End of Turkey Predicted.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Foreign Office tonight issued a long statement dealing with the situation in Turkey and the protests made by the British Ambassador against what he alleged were breaches of neutrality by Turkey, especially in connection with the former German cruisers Goeben and Breslau.

The statement quotes the note addressed by the Sublime Porte to the powers, in which the Ottoman Government declared its neutrality, and the note communicated by the British Ambassador to the Porte, in which he complained of a number of breaches of neutrality.

As Turkey shut off communication with the British Embassy yesterday (Friday,) the British Government, considering this a prelude to further acts of aggression, declares its intention to take action to protect British interests and British territory, and also Egypt, from attacks that have been made or threatened.

A report from Berlin that reached London tonight said that Turkey had formally proclaimed the annexation of Egypt.

The British statement says:

"At the beginning of the war the British Government gave definite assurances that if Turkey remained neutral her independence and integrity would be respected during the war and in times of peace. In this France and Russia concurred. The British Government since then has endeavored with the greatest patience and forbearance to preserve friendly relations, in spite of increasing breaches of neutrality on the part of the Turkish Government at Constantinople in the case of German vessels in the Straits.

"On Thursday, Oct. 29, the British Government learned with the utmost regret that Turkish ships of war had, without any declaration of war, without warning, and without provocation of any sort, made wanton attacks upon open and undefended towns in the Black Sea of a friendly country, thus committing an unprecedented violation of the most ordinary rules of international law, comity, and usage.

Turkish Attitude Surprising.

"Ever since the German warships Goeben and Breslau took refuge in Constantinople the attitude of the Turkish Government toward Great Britain has caused surprise and some uneasiness. The promises made by the Turkish Government to send away the German officers and crews of the Goeben and Breslau never have been fulfilled.

"It was well known that the Turkish Minister of War was decidedly pro-German in his sympathies, but it was confidently hoped that the saner counsels of his colleagues, who had had experience of the friendship which Great Britain has always shown toward the Turkish Government, would have prevailed and prevented that Government from entering upon the very risky policy of taking part in the conflict on the side of Germany.

"Since the war German officers in large numbers have invaded Constantinople, have usurped the authority of the Government, and have been able to coerce the Sultan's Ministers into taking up the policy of aggression.

"Great Britain, as well as France and Russia, has watched these proceedings patiently, protesting against many acts which have been constantly

Continued on Page 2.

SEVASTOPOL SHELLED BY TURKISH CRUISER

Russian Fleet Attacks Turkish Fleet Near That Port—Result Not Known.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 31.—A Turkish cruiser has bombarded Sevastopol, in the Crimea, according to a dispatch from Constantinople to The Frankfurter Zeitung.

The following official telegram from Constantinople is published by the Frankfurter Zeitung:

"A small part of the Turkish fleet in the Black Sea on Thursday sank the Russian mine-layer Prut, a vessel of 5,000 tons, which had aboard 700 mines; damaged a Russian troopboat, and seized a collier.

"A torpedo fired from the torpedo-boat Hairet-i-Millet sank the Russian gunboat Kubanets. The Mauvenet-i-Millet torpedoed a Russian coastguard ship, which was severely damaged.

"Three Russian officers were saved by us and imprisoned.

"The Turkish fleet suffered no loss, and the battle was successfully continued."

A dispatch from Berlin announces that telegrams from Turkey say that the Turkish fleet, in the battle with the Russian Black Sea fleet, previously reported, sank not two, but four torpedo boats and one gunboat.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—An official message has been received at Rome from Constantinople, according to a dispatch to the Central News Agency, announcing that the Russian fleet has attacked the Turkish fleet near Sevastopol.

Details of the battle are lacking.

The Petrograd correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company sends the following dispatch:

"The Russian gunboat Kubanets put up a fight gainst two Turkish torpedo-boats which entered Odessa harbor and attacked merchant ships. The Kubanets finally drove the Turkish boats off.

"The torpedo-boats entered the harbor and fired all their guns. Shells struck the Kubanets, tearing away her wooden superstructure, while steamers in the harbor and warehouses on shore were damaged. The Turks strove to torpedo the Kubanets, but failed.

"The passengers and crew of the steamer Yalta, which was sunk, were saved, and most of the crew of the Kasbeck, which was also sunk, got away on rafts."

Surprise Attack on Odessa.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 31, (Dispatch to The London Times.)—An Odessa correspondent furnishes additional details of the Turkish attack on that town.

The steamer Portugal afforded an excellent target for the enemy's torpedo boat, which was well informed respecting the anchorages of the vessels in port. Suddenly the torpedo boat fired four times into the port side of the Portugal, making four holes above the water-line. The shelling of the vessels was effected with unusual rapidity.

Without having extinguished a single searchlight, the hostile torpedo boat seemingly passed without being molested the head of the new mole into Kabotazhny Harbor, where lay the Russian gunboat Kubanetz. The torpedo boat opened fire simultaneously from both sides on the gunboat and on other shipping. The wooden superstructure of the gunboat and the bridge were carried away and a hole made above the water line. Two torpedoes were discharged at the hull of the steamer Vitias. A shell was fired at the steamer Vampos and pierced the hull near the engine room. It exploded and fragments passed through the partition and ripped off the sheathing of a cylinder.

Harbor Launch No. 2, thinking that some accident had occurred to the torpedo boat, of whose identity it apparently was ignorant, approached whereupon a hand grenade was hurled by the Turks, killing some Russian seamen. Two shells fell on the warehouse, damaging the roof and causing other damage. Nevertheless the fire from the Kubanetz compelled the torpedo boat to withdraw after fruitlessly discharging a final torpedo. The torpedo boat did not fire while departing, and it is therefore surmised that she was badly injured.

On board the Portugal a stewardess and a baker were killed by the shells.

ALLIES' LINES ASSAILED

Germans Take Town Near Nieuport But Are Driven Back.

SUCCESS NEAR SOISSONS

Berlin Says Allies Were Driven Over the Aisne and 1,000 Were Taken Prisoners.

FIGHTING ROUND VERDUN

Kaiser's Troops Have Been Reinforced for Fresh Campaign to Gain French Ports.

BERLIN, Oct. 31, (via Amsterdam and London.)—A report received today from German Army Headquarters says:

Our army in Belgium yesterday occupied Ramscappelle (two and one-half miles southeast of Nieuport) and Preiscbeon, and our attacks on Ypres are progressing. Zandvoorde, Château Hollebeke, and Wambeke have been stormed.

Further south we also have gained ground to the east of Soissons. The enemy has been attacked, and during the day chased from several strongly fortified positions to the north of Vailly, (east of Soissons,) which was stormed during the afternoon, the enemy retreating across the River Aisne and suffering severe losses. We captured 1,000 prisoners and two machine guns.

In the Argonne and to the west of Verdun and to the north of Toul several French attacks were repulsed with heavy losses for the enemy.

Paris Records Wide German Attack.

PARIS, Oct. 31, 11 P. M.—An official communication issued tonight by the War Office said:

According to the latest advices there is no incident of any importance to report.

In the centre we have made progress in the region to the north of Souain.

Everywhere else we are maintaining our positions.

The afternoon bulletin was as follows:

The day of yesterday was marked by an attempt at a general offensive movement on the part of the Germans along the entire front from Nieuport to Arras, and by violent attacks delivered at other points of the line of battle. From Nieuport to the canal of La Bassée there were alternate movements of advance and retirement.

To the south of Nieuport the Germans, who had taken possession of Ramscappelle, were driven out of this town by a counter-attack.

To the south of Ypres we lost some points of support, Hollebeke (Hollenieke?) and Zandvoorde, but we progressed to the east of Ypres in the direction of Paschendaele.

Between La Bassée and Arras all the attacks made by the Germans were repulsed with heavy losses for them.

In the region of Chaulnes we advanced beyond Lihons and we took possession of Le Quesnoy in the Santerre district.

In the region of the Aisne also we have made progress on the heights of the right bank downstream from Soissons, but we were compelled to withdraw in the vicinity of Vailly.

We have advanced in the region of Souain, and there has been a violent engagement in the Argonne.

In the Woevre district we have again won ground in the forest of Le Pretre.

Belgians Report Gains and Losses.

HAVRE, Oct. 31, (via London.)—An official dispatch from the Belgian Army Headquarters to the Belgian Minister of War says:

Fierce attacks were attempted yesterday morning by the enemy in the neighborhood of Ramscappelle and Pervyse. The second of these attacks was repulsed with great loss. The first forced our troops to cede some ground which later was partially retaken.

In the afternoon the inundation extended from between the Yser and the railway at Nieupert to Dixmude and reached the neighborhood of Pervyse.

Before the front between Dixmude and Huyghen there was no important fighting. The allied troops were able to cross the Yser and to gain ground. Toward the east the enemy lost Bixschoote and are only maintaining their position at Paschendaele with difficulty.

On the Lys there has been no material change in the situation.

GERMANS REINFORCED RESUME THE ATTACK

Fighting Is Renewed Near Coast and England Can Hear the Boom of Big Naval Guns.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 31, (via London.)—The battle on the Yser continues fiercely, according to a dispatch to the Telegraaf from a correspondent at Sluis. During the night and forenoon the guns were thundering continuously, the correspondent adds. Yesterday there were severe bayonet attacks. No decisive result has yet been reached. The flooded fields and inundations are proving the best allies of the Belgians and are greatly hampering the Germans.

British aviators on Thursday dropped three bombs in the midst of the German war materials at Lichtervelde, (southwest of Bruges,) inflicting great damage and killing three German soldiers.

The Germans received reinforcements yesterday, and the coast line between Ostend and Knocke is being more strongly fortified each day. Guns have been placed in position at Blankenberghe and Heyst, and entrenchments made in the dunes. The Germans have burned the pier of Blankenberghe.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The German attempts to reach the French Channel ports were resumed with energy yesterday. The Germans undertook general offensive tactics from the coast at Nieuport to Arras, and while they made progress at some points, they were repulsed at others, and in some cases were compelled to give ground. Near the coast their advance was checked by an extension of the flooded area.

Today the battle is raging with fury, and on the English coast the boom of the big naval guns, which are bombarding the invaders' flank, has been distinctly heard.

The Allies have brought up land and sea forces in an endeavor to check this second effort of the Germans to establish themselves on the French coast.

The German official report, issued early today, announced that the German troops had occupied Ramscappelle, which is on the railway and canal between Nieuport and Dixmude, but the French official bulletin of the afternoon says they were driven out by a counter-attack.

On the whole, therefore, it would appear that the situation on this important battle front remains much as it was when the Germans ceased their heavy artillery fire for rest a few days ago.

The Germans made a particularly violent attack at Vailly, east of Soissons, and, according to the German report, drove the Allies across the river.

Reports that Lille has been reoccupied by the French and that Ostend has been evacuated by the Germans lacks confirmation and are regarded as premature. Fighting of the most desperate character has been going on around Lille and the villages in that vicinity have been taken and retaken time after time.

Thinks Germans Are Retreating.

LONDON, Sunday, Nov. 1, 2:27 A. M.—The Reuter correspondent at Flushing says:

"Heavy firing can be heard in Sluis from the direction of Thourout.

"Everything indicates that the Germans are retreating from Dixmude."

GERMANY'S WORST WEEK.

British Writer Considers Coast Campaign a Serious Error.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Col. F. M. Maude, writing in The Sunday Times, says:

"The last week has been by far the most disastrous for German arms since the war began. This time there can be no explaining away their losses or palliation of their misfortunes. Even if the news can still be kept from the people as a whole, no vestige of illusion remains for the higher staff.

"From the commencement of this raid upon the sea coast I have maintained it implied a dispersal of an effort which could only be justified on the grounds of political expediency and was bound to shake the confidence of every educated soldier in the efficiency and judgment of the highest German command."

Col. Maude, continuing, estimates that Germany's losses now amount in killed, wounded, and prisoners on both fronts to 1,800,000, and that, counting sickness and exhaustion, at least 3,000,000 must be absent from the colors. Allowing 1,000,000 men for railway, police duties, &c., he says Germany now can have barely 4,000,000 of all ages trained to arms from which to maintain armies on both frontiers.

Col. Maude ridicules the idea that Prussia is holding 250,000 men for the invasion of England, and concludes:

"The Germans are fighting for their existence and they know it, and, true to their traditions, they are straining every nerve to send the last trained man, horse, and gun forward to avert the coming disaster. It's a long way to Berlin still, but the brunt of the enemy's attack has been broken."

BURY 25,000 GERMANS.

These Are the Reported Losses in Ypres Fighting Alone.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

A TOWN IN BELGIUM, Oct. 31, (Dispatch to The London Daily Mail.)—During the battles of the last ten days in the region of Ypres the Germans have suffered enormous losses. In a little over a week the territorial soldiers of the Ninth and Tenth Army Corps have buried 25,000 German dead.

Their losses have been more or less on the same scale in the Dixmude district.

The continuity of the fights in this part has allowed no opportunity of burying the dead, and the bodies of German soldiers lie thick on the roads from Dixmude. In certain places they are packed so densely that the piles are yards high.

Dixmude is now nothing but ruins. There are no habitable houses left, and only one inhabitant remains. This is a woman of 78 years, who, having no relatives left, is resolved not to leave the four calcined walls which once inclosed her home. Some British and French soldiers at the risk of their lives carried some food to the old woman.

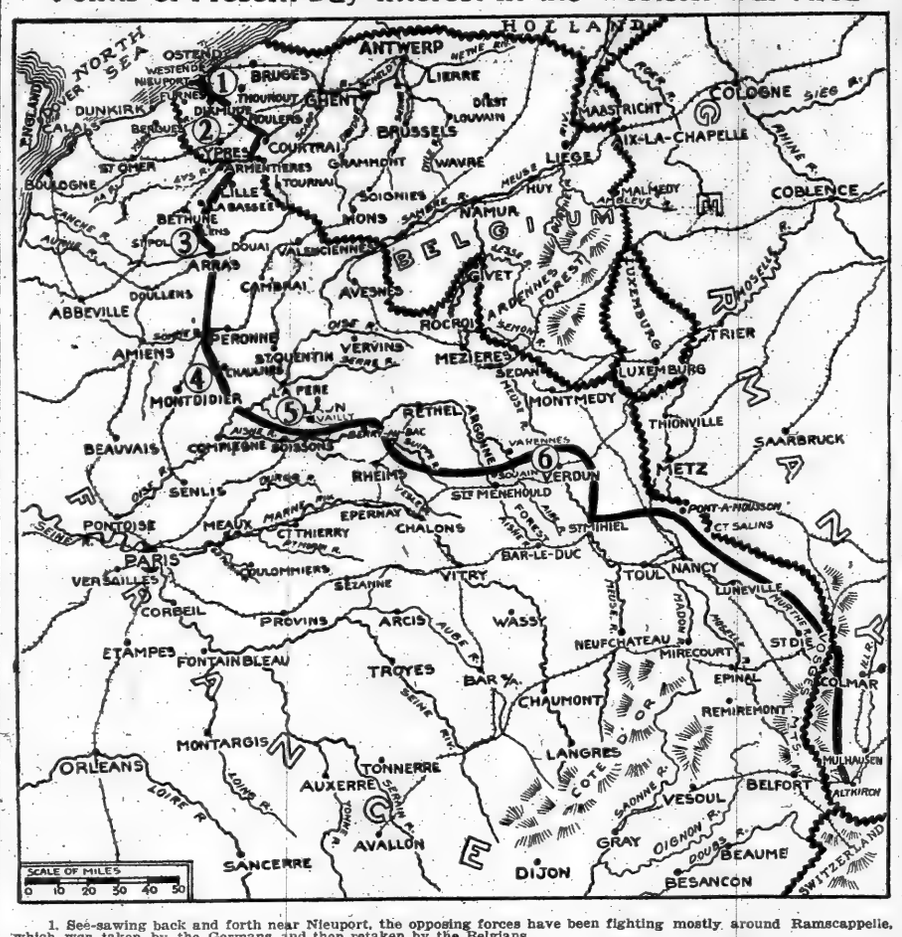
GERMAN LOSS NOW 420,000.

Lists for Last Week Add 62,000 to the Casualties.

BERLIN, Oct. 31, (via London, Nov. 1.)—German casualty lists for the last week amount to 62,000, it was announced tonight. The total to date is about 420,000.

Reports from stations for convalescents show that thousands of wounded already have returned to the front and others are being used as instructors for new formations.

Points of Present-Day Interest in the Western War Area



1. See-sawing back and forth near Nieuport, the opposing forces have been fighting mostly around Ramscappelle, which was taken by the Germans and then retaken by the Belgians.
2. German advices say the Kaiser's troops have stormed three places near Ypres. Paris admits the loss of two, but says a gain has been made to the east of that town.
3. Apparently the Germans made a general assault on the French positions between La Bassée and Arras, but the French war office report states that all attacks were repulsed.
4. Allied troops have gained some ground near Chaulnes, according to Paris.
5. Both sides record severe fighting in the Soissons district. At Vailly to the east, Berlin says, the Germans have driven the Allies across the Aisne. Paris admits a withdrawal at this point.
6. The region to the west and northwest of Verdon is again the scene of much military activity. The Allies have gained ground north of Sonain, according to Paris. The German headquarters report says that French attacks west of Verdun and in the Argonne were repulsed with heavy losses to the assailants.

FRENCH MAYOR HELD HOSTAGE SEVEN WEEKS

Returned Official Tells His Experiences in a Fortress of Germany.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—After seven weeks' imprisonment as a hostage in Germany, Paul Dieudonne, Mayor of Elnville, a Lorraine town, gives an account of his experiences to a Nancy newspaper.

Dieudonne was taken from Elnville with two other prominent inhabitants by the retreating Germans in early September because the French had set an example of hostage taking at Wic and Morhange. He says the captors gave them just time to get a change of clothes and some money. At Château Salins they stayed twelve days with a number of other hostages, mostly peasants, old men, women, and children, the majority being without sufficient clothing or money. To Dieudonne was given a letter by a German officer, Lieut. Col. Passavent, whose family left France at the Edict of Nantes.

This stated that he with his friends had behaved well toward the German wounded at Elnville. This proved of the utmost value, procuring for them many courtesies on the wearisome journey by road to Ulm on the Danube, where there was a large camp of French hostages, refugees, and military prisoners.

Through this they were lodged in the fortress instead of the open camp, which was terribly cold owing to the mountains. The fort was warmed by steam heat, and had other conveniences. They were also allowed to buy extra food as long as their money lasted.

After spending a month at Ulm the letter won them their release, but they were told it was impossible to cross the Swiss frontier without paying 5,000 francs, ($1,000,) which they did not have. However, Dieudonne was allowed to telegraph to a German colleague, an old friend, Zundel, at Strassburg, who sent the amount, and they were then released and took a train to the frontier, where the Swiss indignantly repudiated the idea that the payment of money was necessary. They said they bore no good will to Germany, adding:

"We will receive them without flinching if they try to treat us like the Belgians. We have guns and rifles ready to speak in our trenches."

When asked how the Germans treat their prisoners, Dieudonne replied that he had seen two camps, Ulm and Mutzigen, where the prisoners suffered from the cold because of lack of clothing, but they were not badly treated.

"They work six hours daily," he said, "repairing the roads and railways under the command of their own non-commissioned officers, over whom are German officers who do not appear unsympathetic. They have coffee mornings, with soup at midday and evening and meat three times weekly. Their quarters appear to be healthful, thanks to a flooring placed a few inches from the ground. I also saw some stoves.

"I think it possible to send money to them, and even small bundles of clothing. I think the Prussians are more severe than the Würtemburgers, who are in charge of these camps. They do not seem to love the Prussians much.

Mützigen Camp was first commanded by an old Prussian General, who hoisted the Prussian flag. His place was taken by a Würtemberger, who asked: 'What's that flag there? Take it away, quick. I only know the Würtemburg flag.'

"The change was promptly effected and greatly incensed the Prussian officers who were present. A row followed, nearly causing bloodshed. Finally the matter was compromised by leaving Mützigen flagless."

PLANS RETURN TO PARIS.

French Government, It Is Said, Will Be Back in City by Nov. 20.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—Unofficial announcement was made today that the Government will return to Paris from Bordeaux on Nov. 20, and that Parliament will meet on Dec. 15 to pass emergency laws.

Little by little Paris appears to be returning to more normal conditions. The shops in the Avenue de l'Opéra, which had their doors locked and the windows whitewashed, have now been reopened.

CRUISER HERMES SUNK BY SUBMARINE

Continued from Page 1.

might save the struggling officers and bluejackets of the Aboukir and Hogue, but he steeled himself and remembered that "war is war" and gave the command that sent a torpedo against the vitals of the Cressy.

On Oct. 15 the fifth British vessel met her doom as the result of a submarine attack. This time the ship was the second-class light cruiser Hawke, an old ship, built in 1891, and then on patrol duty in the North Sea. Of the 544 men who manned the Hawke, 327 were lost when she went down. Reports from Berlin afterward credited the sinking of the Hawke to Weddigen's vessel.

After the Hawke comes the Hermes, one of a class of three little light cruisers, the others being the Highflyer and the Hyacinth.

Once Noted for Speed.

The Hermes was a trim-appearing craft with a sharp, knifelike bow, and was built to attain a maximum speed of twenty knots an hour, a speed which at the time of her construction (1898) made her one of the fastest cruising ships in the world. She was 350 feet long, and in appearance resembled the German cruiser Emden, which has sunk more than twenty British merchantmen and which two days ago slipped into the Harbor of Penang in disguise and torpedoed the Russian light cruiser Jemtchug and the French destroyer Mousquet. Like the Emden, the Hermes had three funnels and two military masts.

The Hermes mounted eleven six-inch wirebound guns, eight twelve-pounders, six three-pounders, and two Maxim quick-firing guns. She was also fitted with two eighteen-inch submerged torpedo tubes.

It has been asserted by the Germans that the cruiser Amphion, which was lost on Aug. 7 in the North Sea was also a submarine victim, but the evidence is against that contention and it is generally accepted that she was sunk by contact with a mine.

In addition to the ships that have been sent to the bottom by submarines, the British have lost the torpedo boat destroyer Speedy, which, like the Amphion, was sunk by a mine. This ship was lost on Sept. 3. On Sept. 7 the light cruiser Warrior went ashore in the Bosphorus and was a total loss. On Sept. 20 the cruiser Pegasus, which was undergoing repairs in the harbor of Zanzibar, was suddenly attacked by the German cruiser Königsberg and disabled. The Hermes is, therefore, the tenth British warship lost during the present war.

The place where the Hermes was torpedoed, the Straits of Dover, is the narrowest point in the English Channel, opposite Calais, France, and between that port and Dover, England. This exploit of the Germans occurred nearer the British coast than any that preceded it, all the others having occurred in waters further to the north and more distant from the English coast.

THINKS MINES ARE FLOATING.

And in Violation of International Law, Says Naval Writer.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The discovery of a German mine field of unknown extent twenty miles north of Tory Island, which was made known by the news of the floundering of the steamer Manchester Commerce, moved the Admiralty on Tuesday to warn all shipping not to pass within sixty miles of Tory Island. Referring to this, the naval correspondent of The London Times on Thursday said:

"The remarkable activity of the enemy's mine layers receives fresh illustration by the discovery that a field of unknown extent has been laid to the northwest of Ireland. The vessel or vessels which laid this mine field must presumably have passed around the north of Scotland, and doubtless the intention was to interfere with the free movements of our warships if they used the north channel, or perhaps to pick up some of the transports bringing Canadian troops across.

"The depth of water in which these mines had been laid would apparently indicate that they were not anchored and the use of unanchored mines is forbidden by international law unless they become harmless within an hour after being dropped. The enemy, however, have not shown themselves at all inclined to respect international law. What may be hoped is that the field will be found not so large that it cannot be dealt with thoroughly and speedily.

"The loss of the merchant ship by which the presence of the mines was discovered is to be regretted, but it is better that they should have been found in this way rather than by the destruction of a more valuable vessel."

Although steamship companies naturally are not allowed to publish any information on the subject, it is understood that the commanders of vessels which sailed from Liverpool today received orders to steer a course well clear of the dangerous area on the north coast of Ireland.

The discovery that the Germans have laid mines outside the North Sea has led to strong agitation for British employment of the same engines of destruction in order to restrict German mine-laying activities outside the limits of the North Sea. Such a procedure, it is argued, would also serve the purpose of absolutely precluding the delivery of contraband of war to Germany through Holland.

This latter argument, it should be mentioned, does not receive much support. The closing of the North Sea to neutral commerce is fully recognized as an extreme measure which, even its advocates declare, could only be justified under the stress of direst necessity. The abuse of neutral flags for purposes of mine laying outside the limits of the North Sea is regarded as the only method whereby the process could have been accomplished by Germany.

Lord Fisher's advent upon the Admiralty Board is thought to be coincident, if not connected, with the agitation which is being carried on in some English newspapers to have the exits from the North Sea ringed in by mines.

The London Observer today says editorially:

"New and stealthy agencies of modern war, the strewn mine and the submarine, are in the hands of able and daring enemies, who are gaining war experience, like ourselves. We are far superior in all the agencies of naval power without exception, but for the first time there are weapons and devices to which the law of predominance does not directly apply. You cannot fight like with like by pitting mines against mines or submarines against submarines. You have to contrive other means, which in the end must not be less sure than the old unmitigated method of direct attack by like against like.

"Lord Fisher cannot charm away these conditions, and he cannot make omelets without breaking eggs, but of all sailors he is the man to realize that the naval security of the British Empire is the supreme law of the State, and that in reply to the methods adopted by the enemy no half measures will serve our turn. Now that Germany's mine-layers probably are abusing neutral flags at sea, as their army systematically abuses the Red Cross on land, and have begun to strew their devilish engines even across the track of Atlantic traffic toward our western ports, we are inclined to believe that the North Sea, as far as possible, ought to be made an iron prison for the enemy. On that point it would be improper at this moment to dogmatize."

REGARDED AS GERMAN TOOL.

Allies Giving One More Chance to Turkey to Keep Out of the War.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Turkey is getting one more chance from the Allies to keep out of the war. She is being asked by them, acting jointly, for an explanation of the actions of her warships, while demands are being made for the dismissal of German officers and men and the dismantlement of the cruisers Goeben and Breslau, the transfer of which to the Turkish flag is held to be illegal.

Above all, it is being impressed upon Turkey, with all the diplomatic force possible, that if she indulges in war now she fights all three Allies.

It is also being made known to her that if she and Germany make a losing fight it means the complete elimination of Turkey in Europe.

The decision is now up to Turkey, and the Porte's answer is awaited with the keenest interest, for if Turkey is engaged there is little chance that the war will not spread.

Greece is known to be ready to enter it, and it will take only the slightest pressure on the part of the Allies in Athens to cause Greek forces to start operations against Turkey.

Whether the Allies will consider this advisable depends to a very material extent upon the course Italy follows. Many competent observers here feel that the situation gives Italy ample justification for participation.

Should Greece enter the field it would be difficult to prevent the war from spreading throughout the Balkans.

British officialdom evidently still entertains some hope that Turkey may not proceed to actual war against Russia. This is based upon the possibility that the hostile acts of the Turkish warships were engineered by German officers and the belligerent section of the Turkish Navy. British officials lay great emphasis on the fact that Turkey is merely Germany's tool.

Should Turkey insist on war it means, of course, the immediate severence of diplomatic relations, and in such a contingency the United States will probably be asked to look after the affairs of England and France in Constantinople. Russia has already placed her affairs in charge of Italy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Friday, Oct. 30, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The evening papers report that the Germans have practically seized command at Constantinople, and that the big guns directed at the Sultan's Palace in order to compel acquiescence in Germany's plan of action.

The bombardment of undefended commercial ports in the Black Sea has not caused alarm even in business circles intimately connected with the welfare of the various ports.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Oct. 31, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The Russian Ambassador at Constantinople has departed with his entire personnel. Before going he wrote to the Grand Vizier regretting that he was unable to call and take leave.

The Russo-Turkish rupture is naturally an event of the greatest importance for Greece, and the attention of the Greek Government will now be centred on Bulgaria's attitude.

Diplomatic circles here consider it highly probable that Bulgaria will join in the struggle on the side of Turkey.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 31.—The semi-official Russian news agency says that because of the attack by the German-Turkish warships on the Russian coast of the Black Sea, the Russian Government the same day ordered its Ambassador at Constantinople to announce to the Sublime Porte the rupture of diplomatic relations with Turkey, and his departure with all the members of his Embassy and of the Consulates.

The protection of the interests of Russian subjects has been confided to the Italian Government.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Russian authorities have suspended all steamship traffic to and from Odessa, according to a dispatch from Odessa to the Reuter Telegram Company.

The suggestion is made from various sources that the German commanders of the cruisers Goeben and Breslau may have forced the situation without the authority of the Turkish Government.

"MUST BE MAD," SAYS ENVOY.

Russian Ambassador Thinks Turkey Was Coerced by Germany.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Oct. 31, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The Russian Ambassador, M. Krupensky, in an interview on the Turkish bombardment of Theodosia, exclaimed: "They must be mad at Constantinople! So much the worse for them. It is all over with Turkey."

"Germany," he added, "must have forced the Turkish Government's hand. From Germany's standpoint it is a success, for she risks nothing except the skin of the Ottomans, but she errs in imagining that we care."

The Tribuna examines the effect of Turkey's entry into the war. This it considers small, owing to her inability to command the sea, nor can she harm Russia in the Caucasus or England in Egypt, while the latter can instigate the Arabs against her. The only real danger, says the Tribuna, is Balkan complications.

The Giornale d'Italia considers Sofia the key of the question in the Balkans, while by sea Greece may join the Anglo-French fleet. "Italy," concludes the Giornale d'Italia, "should keep calm, remembering that the extension of the war will create a new situation, with repercussions affecting her."

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

ROME, Oct. 31.—Turkey's participation in the European conflict continues to be the absorbing topic in political circles, as any change in the territorial conditions of the Ottoman Empire on the coast of the Mediterranean would directly affect Italian interests.

Undoubtedly Turkey's action has strengthened the party which, since the beginning of the war, has urged Italy's participation in the conflict in favor of the Allies, considering the war a unique opportunity to obtain possession of the Italian provinces still under Austrian rule.

Now this party says that the entry of Turkey into the war renders the participation of Italy more valuable than before, as a counterbalance to the Ottoman action. Later, if her assistance had not been given, Italy would be kept out of the division of the spoils.

Another party, perhaps more numerous, thinks it unpatriotic to exert pressure in any direction on the Government, which alone possesses the knowledge necessary to judge the best attitude to take in order to safeguard the interests of the country.

So far as can be foreseen, Italy will continue for the present her neutral policy.

GERMAN HEADS TURKISH FLEET

Admiral Soerchon's Flag on Goeben —German Army Commander Also.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, Oct. 31, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The Giornale d'Italia says that the cruiser Goeben, recently bought by Turkey, has become the flagship of the German Admiral Sörchon, the new Commander in Chief of the Turkish Fleet.

Turkey's available land forces are estimated to total 700,000 men. The first six of Turkey's thirteen army corps are divided into two armies, under the command of Gemal Pasha, the Minister of Marine, and Gen. Liman von Sanders.

No doubt whatever is entertained in Italy that the outbreak of hostilities between Turkey and Russia denotes the former's definite entry into the European struggle.

The conviction in Rome is that an immediate effect will in all probability manifest itself among the Balkan States. Bulgaria, it is conjectured, will try to maintain a more or less independent attitude. Nevertheless, in view of the fierce hatred between Bulgaria and Greece, diplomats believe that Bulgaria may speedily be driven to range herself with Turkey. This view gains support in the recent outspoken declaration of the Bulgarian Premier.

Should the march of events constrain Rumania to lay aside her neutrality it remains to be seen whether her army would advance north of the Danube against Austria or south against Bulgaria and Turkey.

What, then, will Italy do? The prevailing opinion is that any general upheaval in the Balkan Peninsula, especially after the Austro-German intrigues with Turkey against Italy's aspirations on the other shore of the Adriatic, must lead the Italian Government to reconsider its position, and that at no distant date.

"RESETTLEMENT OF WORLD."

What War Means, in View of London Nation—Our Great Influence.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—While some tendency is still manifested here to cling to the hope that the Turkish acts of war in the Black Sea may have been on the initiative of the German naval commanders, supported by Enver Bey's influence, and may be disavowed by the Sublime Porte, Great Britain officially is taking no chances, and is rapidly completing measures, begun long ago, to offset Turkey's participation in the war.

Petrograd has already issued an assurance that Russia is well prepared to resist Turkish aggression through the Caucasus, which is one of the two chief methods of land attack upon the Allies open to Turkey, the other being an attempt to invade Egypt. The view in regard to the latter contingency taken here is optimistic. The Suez Canal is well garrisoned by British troops, particularly at the Arabian end, where a raid is most to be feared, and Red Sea communications are, of course, commanded by the navy.

An Egyptian native uprising is regarded as one of the possibilities to be faced, but The Spectator and several other journals declare that such a revolt is not likely to be serious, in view of the preparations taken. The Spectator also considers the development of the struggle into a holy war between the Crescent and the Cross unlikely in the extreme.

In the Black Sea, naval authorities agree that the presence of the cruiser Goeben gives the Turkish fleet a slight preponderance over the Russian fleet, but the passage of the Dardanelles by the Allies' fleet, difficult as the operation might seem, is not considered beyond the bounds of possibility.

"In any case," says The Nation, "the issue in the war is now nothing less than a complete resettlement of the Old World. A decisive allied victory would now end with the Russians in Constantinople, the annexation of the Armenian provinces to the Caucasus, the final cutting loose of Egypt from Turkish suzerainty; perhaps in Arab and Syrian independence, and, doubtless, also, in some marking out of French and British economic spheres of influence in Syria and Mesopotamia, while Greece also stands to gain.

"Turkey in short may become a modest Anatolian kingdom.

"The other alternative would, of course, be the extension of an Austro-German hegemony over the entire Near East from Vienna to Bagdad.

"The local struggle in the East is of importance primarily because it will, in some degree, force the Russians and ourselves to dissipate our forces at least to maintain the defensive, but the real decision of this and all the extra-European issues of the war will be on the European battlefields."

Here an interesting point is raised by The Nation in regard to America's part in the settlement. It says the United States is certain to play an extremely important, perhaps a commanding, part in the reorganization of international relations that must follow the conclusion of the fighting.

"Indeed, if, as is not unlikely, a joint interposition of neutral powers, headed by the United States, when the first favorable opportunity presents itself, * * * that country will be able to exercise great moral pressure on the actual terms of settlement. America can do much to restore peace to distracted, unguided Europe."

The Nation proceeds to say that it is a great thing for the world that a man of President Wilson's strong pacific principles and personal decision and initiative should be in occupation of the White House at this time, and that it is extremely satisfactory to know that both his immediate predecessors, Messrs. Roosevelt and Taft, are equally alive to the magnitude of the service the United States may render in the reparation of the broken world.

The Nation then discusses Col. Roosevelt's recent article in THE NEW YORK TIMES. "If we rightly understand his proposal," it says, "which at present has only reached us in a brief summary, it marks a definite advance even upon the larger and more considered scheme set forth by Mr. Taft in his book, 'The United States and Peace.' Mr. Roosevelt's plan supplements Mr. Taft's in reference to the enforcement of arbitral awards. Mr. Taft appears willing to rely upon international public opinion as sufficient sanction. It remains to be proved that this is so. Mr. Roosevelt confronts this difficulty, and would solve it by binding the powers to apply their united forces to coerce an international criminal."

While admitting the practical problems in the way, The Nation concludes that here lies "the only path of security for the future of civilization."

A WARNING TO BULGARIA.

Article in the Novoe Vremya Says She Cannot Stay Neutral.

ROME, Oct. 31.—A great impression has been produced in Rome by an article appearing in the Petrograd newspaper Novoe Vremya. It is considered in Italian political circles to be an ultimatum to the Balkan States, and also a warning to neutral countries.

"The Balkans," the newspaper says, "cannot forget their past slavery and that they became free chiefly through Russian intervention. Now the moment has come not for words but for deeds. Whoever is not with us is against us.

"Bulgaria, freed by Russia, cannot remain a spectator in the war. Her least attempt at accord with an enemy of Russia will be considered treason. Bulgaria must choose between Turkey and Russia.

"At the end of the war only the participators in the gigantic conflict will be invited to the banquet. Whoever thinks he will snatch a mouthful without having made the necessary sacrifices will be much mistaken."

SAYS KAISER OFFERED PEACE TO RUSSIA

Petrograd Hears Grand Duke Predicted Revolution if It Was Accepted.

LONDON, Sunday, Nov. 1.—The Petrograd correspondent of The Observer sends the following:

"According to a report being circulated in army circles, Russia recently has been approached regarding the concluding of peace with Germany.

"It is said that the German Emperor wrote a personal letter to the Dowager Empress, urging her to persuade the Russian Emperor to make peace.

"The Dowager Empress forwarded the letter without comment to Emperor Nicholas, who sent it to Grand Duke Nicholas, Commander in Chief of the Russian Army. The Grand Duke returned the letter with this comment:

"'If you comply, our armies will mutiny, and there will be a revolution in all the Russias.'

"No confirmation of the report is obtainable."

Reiterated statements have come from Paris and London that similar attempts were made by Germany to conclude a separate peace with France, the cession of part of Alsace-Lorraine by Germany being a consideration.

CAPTURE GERMAN CRUISERS?

LONDON, Oct. 31.—A dispatch to The Post from Sydney, New South Wales, says it is reported that the German cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau have been captured, as a result of the failure of their coal supply. There is no official confirmation of the report to be had here.

This Sign

indicates our stores, the only ones in which you can secure the comfortable and economical

"EVER-LOCT" EYEGLASSES

These new glasses are the kind which never wabble and seldom break, because there are no holes nor screws in the lenses.

Try them. Get a pair to-day

E. B. Meyrowitz

OPTICIAN

237 FIFTH AVE. (27TH ST.)
615 FIFTH AVE. (50TH ST.)
255 LIVINGSTON ST. (Bklyn.)
London NEW YORK Paris

AS THE EUROPEAN WAR

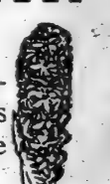
STILL CONTINUES

We have received the FINAL output from the Holland Bulb Growers to be disposed of, to avoid entire ruin to the shippers.



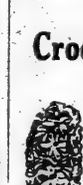
Bulbs For Less Than It Costs to Grow Them in Holland

Tulips, All Kinds, at 15 Cents Per Dozen
75 Cents PER HUNDRED

Narcissus, All Kinds, at 15 Cents Per Dozen
75 Cents PER HUNDRED

Hyacinths, All Kinds at 30 Cents Per Dozen
$2.00 PER HUNDRED

Crocus and Scillas at 10 Cents Per Dozen
30 Cents PER HUNDRED

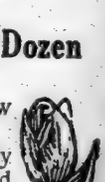


Other varieties of bulbs at very low prices.

Plant them in your garden now and they will produce beautiful flowers in April and May.

No orders sent C. O. D.

Add twenty cents per hundred if wanted by mail.



The MacNiff Horticultural Co.,
Importers of Bulbs and Nursery Stock
56 Vesey Street, New York City, N. Y.

ADVERTISEMENT. ADVERTISEMENT.

BONA FIDE SALE!!!

IMPORTED CIGARS OF A BRAND WE INTEND TO DISCONTINUE. ALL CLEAN, FRESH GOODS.

PURITANOS	50 in Box,	$9.50 per	100
PERFECCIONADOS	25 " "	12.00 "	"
PERFECTOS	25 " "	15.00 "	"
PETIT CORONAS	25 " "	17.50 "	"
INVINCIBLES	25 " "	18.50 "	"

All other sizes at proportionate reductions. Cigars bought now may be kept in our humidors for Christmas deliveries.

THE SPEYER CO., INC.,
1A East 46th Street 4141 Murray Hill.

HOTEL GOTHAM

THE HOTEL OF REFINED ELEGANCE & EXCLUSIVE CLIENTELE

Specially attractive rates for season rentals

WETHERBEE & WOOD
5th AVE. at 55th ST. NEW YORK

CANDY

PENNY A POUND PROFIT

TRADE MARK.

Special for Monday, Nov. 2nd

CHOCOLATE-COVERED ASSORTED ICE CREAMS—A select assembly of Chocolate-Covered Sweets, having centres of delicious sugar cream in many rich flavors. POUND BOX. 10c

WE ALSO OFFER:

COCOANUT BRITTLE—This sweet has for its basis the finest and most delicious Golden Molasses Candy, chockful of choicest Ceylon Grated Cocoanut and made to a delightful crispiness. POUND BOX. 15c

MILK CHOCOLATE ASSORTED—If you are a lover of Chocolates this assortment of Milk Chocolate-covered dainties will exceed your fondest expectations. The centres are presented in excellent variety of rich Fruit, Nut, Marshmallow, and other tasty flavors. The jackets are made from our famous Premium Milk Chocolate, unexcelled in richness, purity and delicious-ness. POUND BOX. 39c

84 Barclay Street
Closes 6:30 pm; Sat., 10 pm
29 Cortlandt Street
Closes 11 pm Daily.
Park Row & Nassau St.
Closes 11 pm Daily.
400 Broome Street
Closes 7 pm; Sat., 10 pm
25 East 23d Street
Closes 10 pm Daily.
472 Fulton St., B'klyn
Closes 11:30 pm Daily.

Loft 12 Stores

206 Broadway
Closes 7 pm; Sat., 10 pm
147 Nassau Street
Closes 6:30 pm; Sat., 9 pm
266 West 125th Street
Closes 11:30 pm Daily.
23 West 34th Street
Closes 7 pm; Sat., 10 pm
149th St. & Third Av.
Closes 12 pm Daily.
157 Market St., Newark
Closes 12 pm Daily.

The specified weight includes the container in each case

RUSSIANS CHECK FURIOUS ATTACKS

Germans Have Suffered Great Losses on East Prussian Line, Petrograd Reports.

CONTINUE POLAND RETREAT

Berlin Says Russians Are Slowly Following and Troops Are Being "Regrouped."

VIENNA CLAIMS SUCCESS

With the Capture of Several Russian Positions and a Victory on the Border of Bukowina.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 31.—The following official communication was issued from general headquarters tonight:

"On the east Prussian front the plan for breaking through the centre of our fortified position around Bakalargewo projected by the enemy has failed. During five days of unsuccessful attacks, the Germans suffered immense losses. In many places the great accumulations of German dead in front of our trenches caused a moderation of our fire.

"Our troops have progressed in several districts on the East Prussian front.

"Beyond the Vistula we occupy strongly the towns of Gostynin, Lenczyca, Lodz, and Ostrowiec.

"In Galicia the fighting continues without any essential change in the situation."

BERLIN, Oct. 31, (via Amsterdam and London.)—An official report given out by German Army Headquarters says:

"The battle in the northeastern war theatre till now has not been decided. To the west of Warsaw the Russians are slowly following our troops, which are now being regrouped."

AMSTERDAM, (via London,) Oct. 31.—An official dispatch from Vienna dated today noon says:

"Near the Galician-Bukowinian frontier, north of Kuty, a mixed Russian column was defeated yesterday.

"In Middle Galicia our troops have occupied Russian positions northeast of Turka, near Stry, Sambor, east of Przemysl and on the lower San. Several Russian attacks around Lisko have been repulsed. At Lisko, Stry, Sambor and other points hundreds of Russians have been captured.

"The operation in Russian Poland yesterday passed without fighting."

The following Austrian official statement was given out in Vienna on Friday noon:

"There was no fighting yesterday in Russian Poland.

"On the lower San (Galicia) strong hostile forces which crossed the river south of Lisko were repulsed, after severe fighting. Near Stry and Sambor our artillery has blown up a Russian ammunition depot. All hostile attacks on the heights west of Stry and Sambor have been repulsed. In the district northeast of Turka our attacking troops occupied several important positions on heights which the enemy was forced to evacuate precipitately. Our Landsturm captured numerous prisoners in these engagements.

"The total number of prisoners interned in Austria-Hungary on Oct. 28 was 649 officers and 73,179 men, not including the prisoners taken in the battles last week."

BERLIN, Oct. 31, (by Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—The only German news from the Polish front is the authoritative confirmation of the prevailing impression in Berlin that the German onslaught on the Warsaw fortress was in full swing when the retirement of the German forces was ordered.

It is pointed out that the German attack would scarcely have been directed against this fortified position after strong Russian forces had arrived at points to the south and to the west of Warsaw. These naturally must be the first object of attack.

The following was contained in the information given out for the press in official quarters today:

"The opening of naval hostilities by Turkey promises to divert the attention of the Russian forces which have been campaigning in Poland, where they were able to concentrate superior forces against the armies of Germany and Austria.

"Special dispatches to newspapers from the Servian front report that an entire Servian regiment under Col. Ivanoff walked into a trap at Vishegrad. They had been informed previously that the Servians still occupied this place. This was not so, and the regiment was quickly surrounded and surrendered without resistance.

"The General Staff of the Austro-Hungarian Army reports significantly that there was no fighting Oct. 20 in Russian Poland. This shows that the Austro-German forces have been successful in freeing themselves from the enemy, a manoeuvre which permitted them to make new dispositions of their troops without disturbance."

GERMANS FALL BACK IN ORDER

British Government's Observer Describes Retreat in Poland.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Prof. Bernard Pares, the British Government correspondent with the Russian Army, telegraphs under date of Oct. 30 the following account of the battle around Warsaw, which is issued by the Official Press Bureau:

"I have spent some days at Warsaw and have examined the scenes of the recent fighting as far out as beyond Skierniewice. The Russian river line of defense ran along the Niemen, Bahr, Narew, Middle Vistula, and the Ilan.

"The Germans had not previously tested seriously the strength of the centre of this line, and the Russian reports issued had so far only spoken of a northern and southern front. Warsaw lay beyond the defensive river line. A rapid seizure of the city before Winter set in would have greatly strengthened the Prussian northern front and would have endangered Russian occupation of Galicia. It would also have created a moral effect on the Poles and they might have supported any proposals to negotiate.

"The Germans advanced principally from the southwest, a region largely left in their hands. The Germany army corps reached a line southeast of Bloine, and at Pruzkow they were little more than six miles from Warsaw.

"The cannonade shook houses in the city, German aeroplanes dropped bombs near the railroad bridges, the quarters of the General Staff and elsewhere, killing over 100 persons but not achieving their object. The people were much exasperated, and some of them went out to the scene of the fighting.

"The brunt of the defense fell on two Russian corps, especially on one which included the Siberian troops. These had to oppose three German corps.

"Splendid work was done at Pruskow and also by the Siberian regiment at Rakitnaw. Here the Germans delayed the Russian advance and placed machine guns on the roof of a church. The inhabitants say that the Siberians long refrained from returning the fire from the church. The regiment lost its Colonel, many other officers, and 275 men, but held good until reinforced. Several Russian corps arrived, and the Russians then drove the Germans back in successive rearguard engagements, which lasted, in all, eighteen days. The country up to several miles west and south of Lowicz and Skierniewice has now been recovered.

"The Germans in these operations seized provisions and some valuables and committed minor indignities, but the country has in no way an aspect of devastation. The population is strongly for Russia, and offers every service to the Russian soldiers.

"In Warsaw great enthusiasm prevails, with a very striking difference from the attitude before the war and the Grand Duke's appeal.

"The Germans in retiring made clear work of the bridges, railways, and stores. There is every sign of a deliberate and well-executed retreat. Fewer prisoners were taken than in the case of the Austrians, the wounded being for the most part carried away.

"The Russian artillery worked with great precision and effect, and the Russian infantry, after artillery preparation, delivered attacks throughout. There is no sign of any likelihood of further German aggression on this side before Winter, but there is always a possibility of an early conflict southward, where the Russians need to secure and complete their conquest of Galicia, and the enemy has to guard his base of joint action between Germany and Austria."

NO RUSSIAN WINTER QUARTERS

Czar's Forces Propose to Carry On Campaign Despite Weather.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Standard's correspondent at Petrograd wiring on Friday, says:

"There is good authority for stating that the Russian Army will not go into Winter quarters, but will pursue the campaign without a break no matter what the weather.

"Poland and East Prussia may be cold in Winter, but their climate is mild compared with some parts of Russia, and the Russian Army after its experiences in the Winter campaign against Japan has no fear of being unduly hampered by the weather in the present operations."

GERMAN VILLAINS POPULAR.

Up-to-Date War Stories the Rage Among British Youngsters.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—German villains are now much in demand among youthful Britons, as a result of which the Deadwood Dick type of American literature which has been popular here for a long time, especially among messenger boys, has received a mortal blow. According to a well-known newsdealer in the Strand, it is now necessary to substitute German villains for the Indian, Portuguese and half-breed varieties, while the stories must entirely savor of war. The heroes are of the allied forces, the principal rôles being taken by British sailors and soldiers.

Many of these stories appear weekly, with the plots based on the latest engagements If one may judge by the heavy sales, the Germans are extremely popular villains.

BRUSSELS BUILDINGS MINED.

Maeterlinck Expresses Fear for the Town Hall and Cathedral.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—Maurice Maeterlinck, the Belgian author, reviewing the phases of the war in Belgium in the Figaro, expresses fear for the fate of the Grand Place, (Market Place,) the Hotel de Ville, (the Town Hall,) and the Cathedral of Brussels.

He says he knows from a sure source that they have been mined, and that only a spark is needed to reduce them to débris.

THE WAR SITUATION.

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES
(An Associate Editor of The Army and Navy Journal.)

Yesterday's official dispatches from France gave the positions occupied by their troops in greater detail than for some time past. When taken in conjunction with the reports from Berlin, the operations of the last few days may be outlined with some confidence.

The rapid thirty-mile advance of the French and English to Roulers at the beginning of last week made the Germans feel that their lines at Lille were to some extent threatened by the salient position of the Allies.

In order to dislodge the latter, the Germans took the indirect method of attacking on the flanks of the salient. While pushing the attacks that carried their forces across the Yser, they also brought such pressure to bear upon the French position from Menin to Roulers that they were able to drive back this part of the line five miles to a position through Hollebeke, just south of Ypres. It is noteworthy that the dispatches from Paris have continually claimed successes in this region, while their line has been driven back.

Between Lille and Soissons the week's fighting has left the opposing forces without appreciable change.

The German report that they have driven the British back across the Aisne at Vailly, ten miles east of Soissons, shows a local success that does not yet affect the general situation.

In the district southeast of Verdun the French have been making strenuous efforts to dislodge the Germans from their occupation of the Cotes de Meuse. Both sides have claimed success in this district almost every day, but the net changes of the week are very slight.

The French advance from Toul has been held fast on the line from Ailly, on the Meuse, two miles south of St. Mihiel, to Pagny, on the Moselle, twelve miles south of Metz. To the north of St. Mihiel the Germans have made a small gain by pushing the French back from the position at Hatton Chatel, where they threaten the German line of communications.

Along the French border east of Nancy and in Upper Alsace the French have made important gains. East of Nancy they have again reached the German border, while in Upper Alsace they have advanced ten miles into German territory.

This whole battle line from Switzerland to the North Sea is now engaged in a deadlock that seems unlikely to have a decisive outcome until one side or the other has made a decided gain in the strength of its forces. This can be done by Germany only by sacrificing her campaign against Russia, a most dangerous proceeding in view of the efficiency of the Russian troops, as shown in the recent operations in Poland. By such a hazardous move Germany could add to her armies in France sufficient strength to overcome for a time the advantage that is now held by the Allies. If such is her policy, the exact move that she will adopt cannot be definitely predicted.

Two points stand out as the most likely locations of powerful attacks, if Germany should adopt a strong aggressive policy in the west. The position at St. Mihiel and the bridge across the Meuse River would not have been maintained at such costs and such risks unless the German General Staff had figured on making an important use of this route for an advance at some early date.

The other probable point of vigorous fighting is to the westward, where the Germans would make an important gain in the strength of their position if they could drive the Allies south of Amiens. This would give the Germans a short and direct line through Amiens to the coast, which could be held by a smaller force than is now required to maintain their extended line in the north. They would then be enabled to divert the surplus troops to other operations, such as a turning movement through St. Mihiel or through Belfort against the south flank of the Allies.

The Allies are evidently waiting until every preparation is made before changing their plan of operations. They would have no great difficulty in putting in the field far greater numbers than they now have at the front. Their delay seems to be due to efforts to make special provision for feeding and clothing their men and supplying them with heavy guns and ammunition to cope with the German artillery.

It is probable that the ordnance shops of France and Great Britain are straining every resource to turn out quickly big guns similar to those that have done such effective work for the Germans.

Local successes have little influence on the outcome because the opposing troops merely drop back and construct a new line of intrenchments a few miles to the rear. Important successes can be gained only by starting with a local success and then following it up by vigorous attacks in force that will keep pushing the enemy back until their troops become disorganized. Up to this point the operations are always much more costly for the assailants; it is in the succeeding operations against disorganized troops that the losses of the defenders pile up rapidly. In fact, a battle without a vigorous pursuit can have little real effect on the outcome of a war. Such fighting results only in a war of exhaustion which is necessarily long drawn out, as was shown by the civil war in this country.

The Russians continue their policy of hammering at the north flank of the Austro-German forces that are confronting them on the line from Lodz to Turka. The fighting near Lyck, on the East Prussian border, is at a standstill, and has little influence on the outcome of the great battle in Poland and Galicia.

Petrograd reports say that the German flank has now been driven back to Lodz, eighty miles southwest of Warsaw. This move has in turn exposed their centre, which has been forced to fall back to Radom, thirty miles from the Vistula. In Galicia both sides claim successes in the fighting along the San River, but the net result seems to be without influence upon the outcome of the fighting. From Przemysl the line of battle extends almost due south through Novomiasto, Starimiasto to Turka, on the northern slope of the Carpathians.

Russia is evidently attempting only defensive operations in Galicia, while she is trying to make sure of success against the Germans southwest of Warsaw. This is the line of action that promises the greatest advantages if she is successful.

Are You a Printing Salesman?

We want an experienced man who in addition to present sales can sell a larger volume with our backing.
Our concern is in New York City, established for many years, and is one of the largest in the United States, with complete facilities. We want a man who can make himself worth $5,000 per year and more. If you are that man, write us confidentially giving all the information that you would like to know were you in our position.
Address, G 21 Times Annex

BELIEVES THE BOER REBELS ARE BEATEN

Cape Town Observer Says Only De Wet Remains to be Dealt With.

HERTZOG'S PEACE ERRAND

Believed to be Working to Induce Free Staters to Lay Down Their Arms.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CAPE TOWN, Oct. 31. (Dispatch to the London Morning Post.)—Notwithstanding the extreme reticence of the Government news from the northern provinces, the majority opinion here is that the crisis has been passed, and this time definitely. This does not mean that the danger is ended. That cannot be said till De Wet's commando has been broken up.

The Government's vigorous action and the extensive support which it is receiving from the Dutch will make the waverers realize what rebellion means. The disloyals are much in the minority. Superiority in leadership and supplies, particularly of arms and ammunition, is on the side of the Government.

Further, if De Wet, Beyers, and other leaders, whose names are known here, though they are not mentioned in official statements, cannot raise the people against the Government, nobody can. The forces of Maritz and Beyers are broken and in flight. Only De Wet remains in the field, and Dutchmen here believe that Hertzog is sincerely attempting to persuade the Free Staters of De Wet's commando to lay down their arms. Hertzog is a fanatic, but, it is asserted, an honest fanatic, and where his inordinate personal vanity is not touched has great native shrewdness.

Advices from the southern and eastern parts of the province are favorable. One correspondent says that there are two parties only in these districts—those anxious actively to support the Government and those only desirous of protection that they may till their farms in peace. The danger zone is the northern part of the Orange Free State, where De Wet is in the field. He has actually forced Englishmen to join his commando.

As regards the Transvaal, my information suggests that the Government has the situation well in hand. Too little attention has been given here to the evidence of the Government's confidence in the speedy restoration of order.

AEROPLANES TO CARRY LIFE LINE TO WRECK

Novel Plan Suggested to Save 30 Persons Still on Stranded Hospital Ship.

WHITBY, England, (via London,) Oct. 31.—At a late hour tonight it was estimated that between thirty and forty exhausted survivors were still clinging to the wreckage of the British hospital ship Rohilla, which crashed on the rocks near here early yesterday morning.

At times the wreck was entirely submerged by the heavy seas that throughout the day prevented lifeboats reaching the vessel. All efforts to establish connection with the shore by means of rockets failed.

Several persons who jumped or were swept overboard from the wreckage tried to swim ashore. Most of them were drowned, but a few succeeded in reaching safety, being aided by men who waded out and hauled them to land. Several survivors put off from the wreck on improvised rafts, but with one exception all were washed off and drowned. One raft which drifted past the piers to Sand's End was overtaken by a lifeboat, but only one of those aboard the raft was saved.

It is said that an aeroplane is coming from Hull to try to get a life line to the vessel.

CHINESE TROOPS ANGRY.

At Odds with Japanese, Berlin Hears—Offer Aid in Shantung.

LONDON, Sunday, Nov. 1.—The following German official statement has been received from Berlin by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company:

"The tension between the Chinese and Japanese troops is extremely great. Japan has advised the President of China that Japanese warships will suppress the revolutionary movement in Shantung Province."

FRENCH HOSPITALS TOO FEW.

Experienced Surgeons and Nurses Also Needed to Cope with Needs.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The hospital accommodations in Northern France are insufficient to cope with the number of wounded being received, according to a medical correspondent of The Times. Writing from Boulogne, the correspondent says:

"The hospitals are full, but the stream of wounded continues and will continue. The plain facts are that the hospital accommodations in Northern France are insufficient.

"There is a serious lack of efficient and experienced surgeons and nurses. A great majority of the wounds treated are caused by shrapnel. They become infected quickly and demand surgical treatment of the most thorough character. With these cases time is a big factor. It is dangerous in most cases to subject the patient to a long trip to England."

TWO TOP FLOOR APARTMENTS FOR RENT

Seven and Eight Rooms and Bath. One has windows in every room. Rents $35 and $38. Also second floor apartment, seven rooms and bath, splendid light, $45. Steam heat, hot water—always. Owners' supervision. Call and see.
286 W. 113th St., near Subway.

SALES IN EARLY NOVEMBER
at the
Anderson Galleries
Madison Avenue at Fortieth St., New York.

BOOKS on Napoleon and the French Revolution collected by the late Albert Stickney of New York, and Scarce Books and Fine Sets from the Library of Mrs. C. Wilson of New York, and other consignors. To be sold Wednesday and Thursday Afternoons, November 4 and 5.

ART—Two Collections of European and Oriental Art Objects consigned by Andrew Jackson of New Rochelle, N. Y., William L. Richard of Shanghai, China, and the Estate of Dr. F. F. Sellew of New York and others. Embracing Miniatures, European and Oriental Porcelains, Bronzes, Cloisonne Enamels, Carvings, Crystals, Jades and Carved Teakwood and Modern Furniture. The Richard consignment, forming Part II. of this sale, was formerly the property of His Excellency Soy Tseng, ex-Viceroy of Wuchang, a famous connoisseur in Oriental Art. These Collections are now on Public Exhibition and will be sold without restrictions on the afternoons of November 6 and 7.

BOOKS from the Library of Mrs. J. F. Lovejoy of Pittsburgh, Pa., and other sources. One of the most important book sales of the season. Five Books once owned by Keats, drawings by Thackeray, original manuscripts by famous authors, great rarities in English literature, scarce items of Americana. To be sold Thursday and Friday Afternoons, November 12 and 13.

STEVENSONIA—Books, hundreds of Autograph Letters and Original Manuscripts, the remarkable oil portrait by Sargent, the beautiful original plaster group presented by Rodin, the famous medallion by Saint-Gaudens, and many other Objects of Art and South Sea Curios—all from the library of the late at Vailima, Samoa, and forming the largest and most important Stevenson Collection that has ever come on the market, will be placed on Public Exhibition Monday, November 16, previous to unrestricted public sale in four sessions beginning November 23d. The Collection is consigned by Mrs. Salisbury Field, (formerly Mrs. Isobel Strong), who inherited it from her mother, Mrs. Stevenson.
Robert Louis Stevenson

Other important announcements later. Exhibitions mornings and afternoons. Sales are held at 2:30 and 8:15 o'clock. Catalogues mailed free on application.
The Anderson Galleries
Anderson Auction Company
Metropolitan Art Association
MR. FRED'K A. CHAPMAN, Auctioneer.

TO THOSE DESIRING TO MAKE EARLY PURCHASES, BONWIT TELLER & CO. EXTEND THE COURTESY OF HOLDING HOLIDAY GIFT SELECTIONS UNTIL DELIVERY IS DESIGNATED.

Many gift suggestions are offered in leather goods, trinkets, favors, bibelots, bijouterie, floweers, coiffure ornaments, neck fixings, gloves, hosiery, veilings, handkerchiefs, blouses, lingerie, boudoir apparel, furs and outer apparel for women, misses and girls. Things of the unusual type characteristic of the individuality sponsored by this shop.

BONWIT TELLER & CO.

The Specialty Shop of Originations
FIFTH AVENUE AT 38TH STREET

Have Arranged for Monday and Tuesday an Unusual Sale Which Will Feature Extraordinary Special Values Throughout the Shop.

Women's and Misses' Tailleur Suits

Women's Suits—Second Floor.

Women's Fur Trimmed Velveteen and Chiffon Velvet Suits
35.00
Regularly up to 69.50
About 100 suits taken from the regular stock, trimmed with skunk-raccoon or beaver. Also a collection of gaberdine and broadcloth suits.

Women's Fur Trimmed and Plain Tailleur Suits
25.00 & 39.50
Some of the season's favored models developed in broadcloth and gaberdine.

Women's Fur Trimmed Silk Chiffon Velvet Suits
69.50
Reproductions and adaptations of the best models created by the Paris couturiers.

Misses' Suits—Third Floor.

Misses' College and Dressy Tailleur Suits
22.50
Regularly 35.00
Typically youthful styles for misses of 14 to 18 in the favored fabrics and colorings.

Misses' Fur Trimmed Tailleur Cloth Suits
27.50
Newest short coat models with flare skirts. In the new colorings.

Misses' Fur Trimmed Velveteen and Cloth Tailleur Suits
39.50
Short coat, postilion and jaquette effects. Some fur-banded skirts.

Women's Fur Coats, Muffs, Scarfs, Sets

French Seal Coats
Full flare model of selected coney pelts..... 55.00
Trimmed Caracul Coats
Choice pelts—skunk, fitch, Kolinsky collars.... 65.00
Caracul Coats
Selected flat curl skins; flare model..... 55.00
Hudson Seal Coats
Flare model; 40 inches long; dyed muskrat..... 75.00

Hudson Seal Novelty Fur Coats
Reproductions of Paris Models
125.00
Redingote, Flare, Cossack, shirred back, trimmed and plain models, 42 to 48 inches long, of selected Hudson seal (dyed muskrat).

Baby Caracul Coats
Effective New Model
95.00
Made from prime quality flat curl whole skins; 42 inches long; loose shirred back model; lined with brocaded silk.

Kit Fox Animal Scarf,	19.50	Natural Skunk Animal Scarf,	12.50	Baum Marten Fox Scarf,	22.50
Kit Fox Muff to match,	22.50	Natural Skunk 4-skin Muff,	32.50	Barrel Muff to match,	35.00

Solid Skin Scarfs, 85.00 to 135.00, of red, taupe, white, baum marten and blue fox. Also imported novelty sets.

Taken from the Regular Stock, About One Hundred & Fifty Women's Utility, Limousine and Dressy Coats
25.00
Coats of corduroy, black-and-white herringbone cloth, zibeline, crepe cloth, novelty boucle, tweed and peau de laine. In a number of very smart models.

Women's Hand Made Imported Blouses of Georgette & Radium Crepe
5.50
Regularly 10.00
In white and flesh, pink, white and maize and all white. Fan plaited flare collar.

Women's and Misses' Trimmed Hats
FIRST FLOOR, TAILLEUR HAT DEPT.
8.50
Regularly 12.00
About 50 hats taken from the regular stock; large and small models.

Women's & Misses' Sports Hats of Corduroy, Special at 2.95
In sand, rose, green, putty, coral, cerise.

Women's Frocks and Gowns

Afternoon Frocks
29.50
A large assortment of models. Velvet bodice dresses with chiffon veiled charmeuse skirt—fur trimmed. Charmeuse, tailleur serge and serge and satin compose frocks, crepe, silk and taffeta.

Fur Trimmed Frocks
Velvet and Charmeuse
39.50
Unusual styles that reveal the very latest tendency of the mode.

The New "Pagoda" Evening Gowns
39.50
Developed in velvet, chiffon and net with jet bead trimming.

Sale of Women's Gloves

White Glace Mousquetaire Gloves
16 button length, light and medium weight. Large and small arm size..... 1.85

One Clasp "Bontel" Gloves
In white, pearl gray and black, with heavy embroidered backs..... 1.35

ANNOUNCEMENT
Now in regular stock, a complete assortment of the most popular corset introduced by this shop.
The "Deauville" Corset
Cotton Tricot 3.75. Silk Tricot 9.75

Crepe de Chine & Chiffon Undergarments

ODD GARMENTS—DISCONTINUED STYLES

Crepe de Chine Combinations	2.75	4.95	6.95
Regularly	3.95	6.95	10.75
Crepe de Chine Nightgowns	3.95	4.95	7.95
Regularly	5.95	7.95	12.75
Crepe de Chine Knickers			3.95
Regularly			5.00

50 Odd Negligees Regularly 12.75 7.95
Lace coat models with chiffon slips. Also heavy crepe de chine coat models with Callot ruffle collar.

NOTICE
Henceforth negligee and boudoir apparel selected in the department will not be exchanged or credited.

James McCreery & Co.

34th Street — COMMENCING MONDAY, NOVEMBER THE 2ND — 5th Avenue

Closing Out

The $100,000 Oriental Rug Stock of a Leading Importer

OFFERED AT WHOLESALE PRICES

The Collection consists of the most desired weaves and colorings in a complete range of sizes.

Average Savings of 50%

The attention of Managers of Hotels, Clubs and Offices requiring Rugs is directed to this Important Sale.

The following are representative of the remarkable values offered. It is impossible to give details.

Persian Mgt. Rugs (Room Sizes)
Usual prices 137.00 to 145.00.....Sale Price 79.00

Persian Sultanabad Rugs (Room Sizes)
Usual prices 175.00 to 195.00.....Sale Price 105.00

Persian Gorevan Rugs (Room Sizes)
Usual prices 185.00 to 225.00.....Sale Price 127.00

Fine Royal Kirmanshah and Sarouk Rugs (Room Sizes)
Usual prices 285.00 to 585.00.....Sale Price 175.00 to 269.00

About 3000 Small Size Rugs at Unprecedentedly Low Prices

Usual price 10.00.....Small Daghestan Mats.....Sale Price 4.90
Usual price 15.00.....Beluchistan Rugs.....Sale Price 10.50
Usual prices 25.00 to 47.50....Moussoul and Kurdistan Rugs...Sale Price 14.50 to 27.50
Usual price 47.50.....Small Sarouk Rugs.....Sale Price 29.75
Usual prices 50.00 to 65.00...Persian Hall Strips & Runners.....Sale Price 27.50

In Addition:

Two Remarkable Domestic Rug Offerings

9x12 ft. French Weave Wilton Rugs..... regularly 60.00, 44.00

9x12 ft. Royal Wilton Rugs..... regularly 39.50, 29.75

Unusual Reductions

ELECTRIC LAMPS

Electric Portable Traveling Lamp,—indispensable to travelers; can be fastened to mirror by suction cup or clamped by spring to head of bed or back of chair; may be used for desk or piano; light can be thrown at any angle; eyes protected by adjustable shade; heavily nickel plated. Very compact when not in use. Introductory price 2.00

Solid Mahogany Boudoir Lamps,—with 10-inch silk shade; any color. value 5.00, 3.50

Hand-carved Gold Wood Boudoir Lamps,—with 10-inch flat Empire silk shade trimmed with silk braid and 4-inch silk fringe. value 12.00, 7.50

Hand-carved Gold Wood Table Lamps,—with French silk shade, any color; 2 lights. value 25.00 15.00

Solid Mahogany or Gold Wood Floor Lamps,—fluted column; 2 lights; 22-inch silk shade, silk lined; 4-inch silk fringe; any color. value 30.00, 16.50

DINNERWARE

At Considerably Reduced Prices

American Porcelain,—dainty border patterns with gold edge; 101 pieces. value 18.00, 12.00

English or American Porcelain,—Persian or Blue Grecian border; open stock pattern; 101 pieces. value 32.50, 25.00

Limoges China,—green laurel leaf border with coin gold edge and solid coin gold handles, or conventional Persian border; open stock pattern; 101 pieces. value 75.00, 50.00

Limoges China,—gold encrusted border with lace edge; solid coin gold handles; 101 pieces. value 150.00 95.00

BLANKET DEPARTMENT

Second Floor

White California Wool Blankets,—Superior Quality; Pink or Blue Borders; bound with wide Silk binding. Full size. pair 8.00 and 9.00 values 9.50 and 11.00

Fancy Wool Blankets,—Plaid tops; plain reverse; for Outdoor or "Auto" use. value 10.00, each 7.50

Comfortables with Novelty Silk Mull top; plain Mull back and border:—
Cotton Filled .....each 4.00
Wool Filled .....each 5.75
values 5.00 and 7.50

PORTIERES

Ready to Hang

Double-faced Silk Plush,—various combinations of colors....Special, pair 35.00
Mercerized Velour,—handsome borders; Oriental designs....Special, pair 30.00
Sunfast Armure in a full assortment of colors.....Special, pair 11.25
Satin Derby,—corded edges; colors to suit any requirement...Special, pair 11.75

LACE CURTAINS

Scrim Curtains .....pair 1.25, 1.75 and 2.25
regularly 1.75, 2.75 and 3.25

Imported Lace Curtains,—various styles.....pair 4.50, 9.00 and 11.25
regularly 6.75, 12.50 and 15.00

French Lace Panels.....each 6.75, 8.25 and 13.50
regularly 10.25, 12.50 and 20.00

Scotch Novelty Nets, very durable and decorative; double width..... regularly 75c, 1.45 and 1.50, yard 55c, 95c and 1.15

Extraordinary Reductions

DRAPERY FABRICS

French Damask in attractive variety.....regularly 6.50 and 7.50, yard 3.75
Imported Broche,—remarkable values....regularly 8.50 and 10.50, yard 4.75
Imported Damask,—variety of self patterns.....yard 1.95
regularly 2.75 and 3.50

In connection with the above, special prices are offered for the hanging of draperies or the re-upholstering of Furniture. Designs and estimates submitted.

Extraordinary Offerings

CHOICE FURS

A large variety of smart new models of Coats, Muffs and Scarfs in Rich Furs and combinations.

Very Special Prices

Caracul Coats,—40 in. long..... 65.00
Caracul Coats,—fine quality pelts; collar of Ermine, Skunk or Russian Fitch..... 85.00
Hudson Seal Coats,—three-quarter length..... 85.00
Persian Lamb Coats,—40 in. long; made from lustrous skins 125.00
Black Ponyskin Coats..... 29.50
Blended Hudson Bay Sable Muffs..... 85.00
Blended Hudson Bay Sable Scarfs..... 45.00
Black Fox Muffs..... 18.50
Black Fox Scarfs..... 15.00
Natural Skunk Muffs..... 29.50
Natural Skunk Scarfs..... 18.50

An extensive assortment of fine Fur Trimming at low prices.

WOMEN'S FUR TRIMMED SUITS

Attractive new Short Coat Models in Broadcloth, Gabardine, Velveteen or Ripple Cheviot; eight distinctive styles; trimmed with Skunk Opossum, French Seal or Marten. All the new Fall colorings represented.

$25.00 regularly 38.50

WOMEN'S DRESSES

About 145 Afternoon and Street Dresses from regular stock offered at a special price for immediate disposal.

Dresses appropriate for Afternoon, Theatre or Restaurant wear, in Crepe Meteor, Satin Charmeuse, Velvet or Combinations of Satin and Velvet; in a wide range of colorings.

25.00 regularly 35.00 to 45.00

Special Values

WOMEN'S COATS AND WRAPS

Coats and Wraps of Chiffon Broadcloth, Drap de Broadtail or Corduroy for dress and semi-dress wear. value 37.50 29.50

Evening Wraps of Chiffon Broadcloth with collar of Iceland Fox; light colorings. value 35.00, 25.00

Motor and Travelling Coats in all the new Mixed Fabrics. value 19.50 to 29.50, 12.50, 16.50 and 19.50

WOMEN'S NEGLIGEES

Negligees of Crepe de Chine,—large collar of lace; rosebud trimming. value 19.50, 14.50

150 Crepe de Chine Slip-ons,—dainty models and colorings. values 8.50 and 12.50, 6.50 and 9.50

300 Blanket Robes.....2.95, 3.75 and 5.75
value 3.75 to 7.50

175 Kimonos of French Flannel,—prettily trimmed. values 9.75 and 16.50, 7.50 and 12.50

Annual Silk Sale

One of the Most Important Events of the Year

Over 100,000 Yards "McCreery Silks"

At the Lowest Prices of the Year

The Season's Most Fashionable Weaves and Colors

Values are obtainable now which cannot be duplicated at any other time and the present low prices invite the thoughtful attention of those planning gifts for the approaching Holiday Season.

In addition to the substantial price concessions made in this sale, an Exhibition will be held of the very latest Weaves and Colors, many of which will be seen at the various Style Events which will be held in New York during the month of November, demonstrating the American Modiste to be the equal of the best in the world in producing wonderful effects in Dress.

The success of this and future sales would not be possible if our past and present merchandising were not of the highest character.

American Model Gowns made of "McCreery Silks" Will Be Shown in the Silk Department during This Sale.

The following are some of the Weaves and Values offered in complete assortments of Evening, Reception and Street Shades,—also White, Cream or Black.

Double Width Crepe Meteor.....98c yard.....value 1.50
Crepe de Chine.....88c yard.....value 1.25
Silk and Wool Dress Poplin.....1.25 yard.....value 2.00

Novelty Pompadour, Printed Taffetas and Satin in exquisite designs and wide choice of colors (reproductions of Paris styles):—Single Width.....value 1.25, yd. 85c
Double Width.....value 2.25, yd. 1.35

Parisian Model designs in High Class Novelty Metal Brocades, Gold and Silver Gauzes, Fancy Velvets and Beaded Marquisette.....value 10.00 to 20.00, yd. 4.95

Black Dress Silks of standard qualities in a wide range of latest weaves.....yd. 85c to 1.50
value 1.25 to 2.50

VELVET DEPARTMENT

An Additional Special Offering of a Delayed Shipment of

12,000 YARDS CHIFFON DRESS VELVET

Superior Quality Double Width

In a magnificent assortment of colors, including the later fashionable Winter shades and Black.

2.85 yard—value 5.50

Wool Dress Goods

Satin Finish Broadcloth,—in the season's most fashionable shades; sponged and shrunk. value 2.75, yd. 1.85

Imported All Wool Henriettas,—large variety of colors; also White or Black. yd. 88c value 1.25

Satin Finish Venetian Cloth,—fine quality. Navy Blue or Black. value 2.50, yd. 1.65

Imported Fine French Black Serge..... value 1.35, yd. 95c

Superior Quality Black Satin Finish Broadcloth, sponged and shrunk. yd. 1.75 value 2.75

Linings and Flannels

36-inch Lining Sateen,—in Black and White stripes. value 50c, yd. 29c

36-inch Black or White Soft Finish Sateen. value 29c, yd. 19c

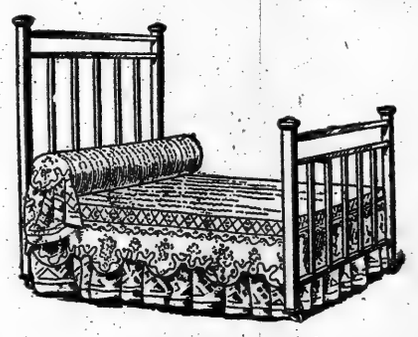
White Soft Finish Warm Flannel for Infants' Wear. value 85c to 1.25, yd. 58c to 95c

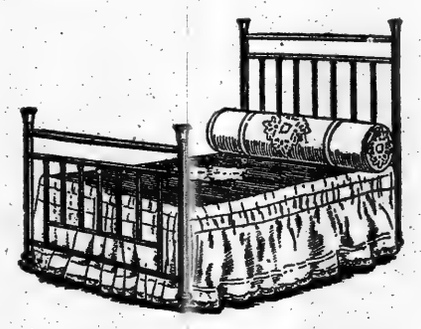
Imported Non-shrinkable Flannel,—in neat stripes or plain colors, suitable for shirtwaists or dresses. Special, yd. 65c

Bedding Week

Brass Beds, Mattresses and Springs Considerably Reduced.

The following are but a few of the many unusual values offered in this sale, which includes all the new Fall models.





Brass Bed, as illustrated,—all square posts and square filler rods; panel head and foot; finished with the best English lacquer, in all sizes. regularly 40.00, 22.50

Pure Layer Felt Mattresses,—guaranteed not to get hard or lumpy. regularly 20.00, 14.50

"McCreery Luxury" Mattresses,—choice of ticking. regularly 45.00, 35.00

Brass Bed, as illustrated,—2-inch Colonial posts; dull finish; all sizes. regularly 28.00 17.50

"McCreery Special" Drawings Hair Mattresses,—made in one or two parts; choice of ticking. regularly 35.00, 25.00

Box Springs,—made especially for James McCreery & Co.; ticking to match any mattress. regularly 16.00, 14.00

DINING ROOM FURNITURE

Ten-piece Suites,—Sheraton model; handsomely inlaid. Buffet, China Closet, Serving and Extension Tables, four Side Chairs and two Armchairs. regularly 900.00, 500.00

Ten-piece Suites,—Sheraton model; with crotched mahogany fronts; handsomely inlaid with satinwood. regularly 450.00, 365.00

Ten-piece Suites,—Adam model; with crotched mahogany fronts; finished in English Brown Mahogany. regularly 422.00, 350.00

Ten-piece Suites,—Sheraton model; handsomely inlaid with satinwood; finished in dull Mahogany. regularly 825.00, 250.00

Ten-piece Suites,—Colonial model; finished in dull Mahogany.....regularly 825.00, 250.00

Ten-piece Suites,—Sheraton model; finished in dull Mahogany.....regularly 800.00, 195.00

LACES FOR FALL AND WINTER

Exceptionally Large Assortments in the various stocks of Fine Laces demanded by present day Fashions are being offered at this time at Unusual Price Concessions.

Real Point Applique Laces.....value 3.75 to 18.00, yd. 2.95 to 12.50
Novelty Metal Laces.....value 2.50 to 9.50, yd. 1.50 to 5.95
Black Chantilly Laces.....value 2.00 to 7.50, yd. 1.25 to 4.95
Novelty Net Laces.....value 1.75 to 6.75, yd. 1.10 to 4.50
Shadow Laces .....value 1.00 to 3.00, yd. 65c to 1.95
Real Irish Crochet Laces.....value 1.00 to 3.00, yd. 45c to 1.50
Real Valenciennes Laces.....value 50c to 3.00, yd. 38c to 1.95
Linen Cluny Laces.....value 25c to 1.75, yd. 15c to 95c
Real Filet Laces.....value 50c to 5.00, yd. 35c to 2.95
Net Edges .....value 15c to 75c, yd. 7c to 45c
Fancy Cotton Laces.....value 11c to 2.50, yd. 6c to 1.25

DRESS TRIMMINGS

Radium, Black or Colored Spangled Bands.....yd. 75c to 9.75
Beaded Trimmings, in Crystal, Steel, Jet or Colors.....yd. 35c to 5.50
Bead Fringe, in Crystal, Jet, Steel or Gold.....yd. 1.50
A large assortment of Tassels, in Crystal, Jet, Spangles or Silk.each 25c to 2.50
Pearl or Jet Chain effects.....yd. 50c to 85c
Flower Trimming, in Pink, Blue, Yellow or Rococo.....yd. 48c to 1.75
Beaded Ornaments,—Butterflies, Motifs or Flowers.....each 1.50 to 2.50
Corsage Flowers, identical to those used on model gowns.....each 75c to 7.50
Metal Edging or Bands, in Gold, Silver, Steel or Antique effects.....
yd. 15c to 75c

BRAIDS & BUTTONS

Binding Braids, in all widths and weaves, for Tailor Made Gowns.....
yd. 10c to 40c
Wide Braids for Girdles or Belts.....yd. 75c to 3.25
Jet Buttons in all the latest designs, including the Olive, Square and Ball effects. dozen 10c to 2.25

Satin, Moire, Velvet, Crocheted or Fancy Buttons, such as are used on model gowns, at Moderate Prices.

SWEARS BELGIANS WERE MASSACRED

Dr. Clement Philippe Describes Acts of Germans in Captured Villages.

200 KILLED IN AERSCHOT

Says Girls Were Burned Alive for Defending Themselves Against Soldiers.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—An account of the treatment by the Germans of the inhabitants of three Belgian towns is given, under oath, by Dr. Clément Philippe, the chief physician attached to the committee of the Belgian refugees in London. His statement covers the doings of the German troops in Aerschot, Wespelaer, and Vilvorde.

The Germans attacked the first place on the morning of Aug. 19. The surrender took place at 8 A. M.

"At 9 A. M.," says Dr. Philippe, "six citizens—M. Bruyninckx, with his two sons; M. Chapeauville; M. Michiels, Chief of Police, and Iseborghs, railway clerk—all accused of having fired upon German troops, were shot, although the whole town knew they were entirely innocent; every citizen having, before the entry of the German troops, obeyed the order of the Burgomaster to bring to the Town Hall whatever arms he possessed.

"In the afternoon the church was bombarded by artillery for two hours and a volley was fired into the houses by the German infantry. Every inhabitant failing into the hands of the German troops was made prisoner and escorted out of the town. Next day a large number were shot, among them the Burgomaster, M. Thielemans, with his brother and his son. The others were placed in lines and numbered 1, 2 and 3. Those numbered 3 were shot.

"All the houses in the Grande Place were burned, and the wives of the principal citizens of the town were put in the centre of the market place to witness this terrifying spectacle, and were kept there from 10 A. M. till 4 P. M. All the men, women, and children remaining were ordered to assemble at the church. After several days of anguish and suffering from hunger and thirst they were forced to leave the town. Hundreds were ordered to take the road to Louvain. I saw the German soldiers place upon a cart a paralytic woman named Mme. Hinye, accompanied by her niece Nelly. The girl endeavored to aid and protect her aunt, and was therefore shot. When Louvain was reached the troops fired a volley into the whole mass of fugitives, and few escaped. After this the Germans undertook their work of pillage and incendiarism. The town of Aerschot was destroyed and burned to the ground, and has been abandoned by the survivors. Over 200 unarmed citizens were killed.

"At Vilvorde the citizens were imprisoned in the Church d'Elewyt. Then occurred the execution of citizens. On the Clerbout farm the farmer and three of his servants were shot, and on the Ribeaucourt farm four farm laborers were shot. Five persons who had hidden in the garden were discovered and put to death without mercy. Twenty-eight men, among whom were the priest and the sexton, were arrested and imprisoned in the coal cellar of the church for five days.

"On Aug. 20 the German troops arrived at Wespelaer and began by setting fire to a large factory. The inhabitants who were endeavoring to escape were killed without mercy—either clubbed or bayoneted to death. I recall a few of their names: Penninck, baker, 30 years old; Alphonse Van de Venne, farmer, and his daughter, Marie, governess, 19 years old; Dierik, 70 years old, with his daughter, 30 years old; Joseph Mertens, 72 years old, with his daughter, 22 years old.

"More than sixty houses and the largest buildings of the town were set on fire.

"The remainder of the inhabitants were driven out by the Germans like cattle along the road in the direction of Thildonck. The Burgomaster, de Wolf, and the priest, Van Segvelt, were ordered to march at the head of the column. The priest was compelled to carry a German flag, and they were driven toward Malines, insulted and maltreated by the troops.

"The village priest of Bueken, de Clerq, although ill, was taken from his bed and bound to a gun carriage. The martyr asked to be put to death. A young man of 17, who had been wounded, was buried alive. The moment the inhabitants of the town had been driven out a general pillage began as usual.

"The wife and son of a farmer named Dardenne at Chaumont Gistour were shot, and his daughters, on account of having defended themselves against the soldiers, were bound, straw was placed under them, and they were burned alive."

WOUNDED GERMAN HERE.

First Man to Arrive Says Losses Have Not Been Exaggerated.

Lee Schönthal, drill instructor of a military school in Washington, D. C., returned yesterday from Germany on the Holland-America Nieuw Amsterdam after serving with the German Army for two months. At Maubeuge he received a wound in the left ankle which incapacitated him for further service. He came down the gangway to the pier on crutches and was the first wounded man to arrive here who had fought on the side of Germany.

"I was in my native city of Cologne," he said, "when the war started, and being a corporal in the reserve, was drafted to the Fifty-third Regiment of infantry and sent to Aachen. The military organization of Germany was wonderful. In four hours after the declaration of war 300,000 men were sent out of Cologne toward the Belgian frontier in trains drawn by electric motors.

"After we passed Verviers and were marching toward Liége our company of 312 were put on outpost duty, and had a lucky escape from being annihilated. We had just got clear when fully fifty shrapnel shells struck the barn where we were stationed and blew it to atoms. Owing to timely warning no one was injured.

"We did not see the battle round Liége, but went on into France, always employed in outpost duty. There was no exaggeration in the reports of the awful slaughter in Belgium and France. The dead lay in heaps on every side.

"In France we had to fight our way through from village to village, where the French troops mounted machine guns at the corners of the streets, and as our soldiers went through they were just mowed down until the artillery came up. The French soldiers fought stubbornly from house to house. Of our company of 312 men 190 were killed outright before I left the regiment after being wounded in my left ankle at Maubeuge.

"The pain was intense, and I lay helpless in a small ditch for several hours while the shells passed over me. A German regiment charged a French battery, and on their return I was picked up and carried inside the lines, where I was sent to the rear, and from there to a hospital."

Broadway Saks & Company at 34th Street

Very special tomorrow, reproductions of the latest

Fancy Tailored Suits for Women

at substantially less than their worth

Models which are the newest to be designed, copied implicitly and with all the spirit of the originals

$30 Suits	$35 Suits	$45 Suits	$55 Suits
special at	special at	special at	special at
$18.50	$23.50	$28.50	$33.00
Long and medium coat models, as well as the newest short coat styles, with flare or pleated yoke or double ripple skirt. Tailored in broadcloth, gabardine, cheviot and wool faille.	Short and medium coat suits, with circular flare or double ripple skirt. Made of broadcloth, gabardine, wool faille, and diagonals; the coat trimmed with velvet, broadtail or fur.	The new jaunty short coat suits, and medium and military models, with various style skirts. Made of velveteen, corduroy, gabardine, broadcloth, wool faille and diagonals, fur-trimmed.	Beautiful and exclusive models (including many reduced from regular stock owing to incomplete assortments). Shown in the finest of fabrics, with fur and other modish trimmings.

Remarkable values in Women's Coats scheduled for special sale tomorrow

Scores of styles,—all the new modes in materials and trimmings—variety, in fact, at its best and most exclusive—replete with coats for every occasion and priced at figures which are their own best advertisement.

$16.50 Coats	at $10.00	$29.50 Coats	at $17.50
$17.50 Coats	at $10.00	$32.50 Coats	at $19.50
$18.50 Coats	at $12.50	$35.00 Coats	at $19.50
$20.00 Coats	at $12.50	$39.50 Coats	at $25.00
$25.00 Coats	at $15.00	$37.50 Coats	at $25.00
$26.50 Coats	at $15.00	$42.50 Coats	at $25.00
$28.50 Coats	at $17.50	$55.00 Coats	at $35.00

Women's Flannelette Pajamas at $1.00

Values $1.50 to $2.50

White and striped effects, in a good range of sizes and styles. Special values, of which the best will go first.

"The Salamander"—the newest idea in underwear—dainty conceits in nainsook, crepe de chine and chiffon. $1.00 to $9.95

Children's Wear

at special prices for Monday

Flannelette Pajamettes. 4 to 8 years.	Special at	$1.00
Flannelette Nightgowns. 4 to 14 years.	Special at	50c
Night Drawers of flannelette and Canton flannel. 2 to 10 years.		50c
Flannelette Petticoats. 4 to 14 years.	Special at	50c
Children's Sweaters, white and colored. 2 to 5 years.	Special at	$1.00

Crepe de Chine Negligees—$6.75

Value $8.50—Monday

Two Empire models, accordeon pleated, with elastic at belt. One style has collar and cuffs of white satin, the other has hand-embroidered design on waist, and pleatings of ribbon at neck and sleeves. Many colors.

$5 Accordeon Pleated Albatross Negligees $3.95

A dainty little garment, in an Empire model, with embroidered waist and frills of self material. Elastic at belt. Third Floor

Boys' $8 Mackinaw Sport Coats at $4.95

Monday only

Patch pocket Norfolk models, with shawl collar, in which the quality of the fabric and the manner of the tailoring effects a combination of serviceability and style. Shown in handsome plaids. Ages 7 to 18 years.

$6.50 Norfolk Suits at $4.95

Norfolk models, in a variety of designs and colors, the fabrics being especially selected for their wearing ability. 7 to 18 years.

Special tomorrow—100 Women's

Afternoon, Theatre & Dinner Gowns ordinarily $45 to $55

at $35

Decollete gowns for dinner wear, and high collar and V-neck gowns especially designed to fill the three-fold demands of afternoon, theatre and dinner use.

Dresses of chiffon velvet, charmeuse satin, and taffeta, in the newest surplice and Chinese waist effects, with four yard tunic of silk net dyed to match, and satin or velvet folds over the tunic. High neck models, others with high collar at back and V front, and decollete gowns with long net sleeves exclusively for dinner wear. Some charmeuse dresses with lace flounces and long sleeves also included in this beautiful selection. Fourth Floor

Special sale tomorrow of

The New Parisian Side Button Boots at $5.85

Made with buckskin tops and sold regularly at $8.00

An extremely attractive and flattering model, distinctive and diminutive, with small heel foxing and leather Louis heels. The vamps of black Russia or patent calf, the uppers of genuine buckskin, in light or dark gray, and light or dark faun, and buttoning to the side in effective fashion. A beautiful shoe and a value as unusual as the style. 2nd floor

Specials in Silk Petticoats for stout figures

$3, $4, $4.50 & $5

Because a dearth of selection in extra sizes is the customary thing in many shops, we have made liberality of selection the feature of our extra size assortments. We have also marked these garments at very special prices for tomorrow. The materials include messaline, silk Jersey and wool Jersey, and there is a splendid range of smart new styles. 3rd floor

Special—300 Flowered Messaline Petticoats in the leading shades $2.00

$3 and $4 Umbrellas at $1.95

for Men and Women—Monday

Umbrellas of real taffeta silk and of union taffeta, which latter is a serviceable combination of silk and linen. Black for men, and black and colors for women.

Natural and mission woods, buckhorns, capehorns, Malaccas, ash, carved ebony, snakewoods, rosewoods and many others, all of them with heavy sterling silver mounts. Main floor

500 Special Coats for Misses at most attractive prices tomorrow

$18.50 Coats	$25.00 Coats	$30.00 Coats
at $10	at $15	at $18.50

A range of choice in which diversity is allied with distinction

There are models in differing lengths, including the new full length, broad-belted styles, with flare or ripple back; tailored in the most fashionable fabrics and exhibiting the smartest of cuff and collar innovations, in velvet, plush or self materials. Sizes 14 to 18 years. Second floor

English mixtures, in brown and gray imported zibelines, eponge cheviots, kerseys, broadcloths and wool velours, some models lined as to body and sleeves, and others lined throughout

Misses' $30 to $35 Suits—special at $20

The new short and medium length coat models, with circular flare or pleated skirt. Made of imported broadcloth, gabardine, cheviot and men's wear serge, braid trimmed, or in dressier effects, with trimmings of self color velvet or broadtail. Sizes 14 to 18 years.

Navy, seal, Russian green and black.

Reductions in Sweater Coats

tomorrow

Sizes for little women and girls only

Angora Sweater Coats, in attractive color stripes. Reduced from $9.95 to $3.95

Angora Sweater Sets, of coat, cap and scarf, in effective color schemes. Reduced from $16.95 to $7.95

Tomorrow—Children's

Sweater Coats

Were up to $3.00

at $1.55

All made of pure worsted, but in broken assortments, which accounts for the reductions. 2 to 6 years.

Monday special

$5 to $10

Corsets

$2.45

A variety of the well known brand of corsets, in the season's newest models, for all types of figures.

Special tomorrow

Wavy Switches at $4.75

28 to 32 inches

Extra heavy, fine, wavy switches, mounted on short stems, and shown in fine textures and shades, gray excepted. 3rd floor

Special opportunities tomorrow

Inexpensive Fur Coats for Women & Misses

The latest models, and exclusively the work of our own furriers

Hamster Fur Coats—Spec'l	$34.50	French Seal Coats—Special	$45
A new 38-inch length model, with a stylish collar of French seal (dyed coney).		A flare skirt model, 40 inches long, with self collar and brocaded satin lining.
Caracul Coats Special at	$67.50	Seal Muskrat Coats—Special	$95
A 45-inch model, with straight line full skirt, lined with satin in any color.		A full, 45-inch model, with kimono sleeves and lined with brocaded or plain satin.

Matched Wolf Sets

Barrel muff and single animal double fur neckpiece

Black Wolf Sets.....special at $34.50
Taupe Wolf Sets.....special at $42.50
Blue Wolf Sets.....special at $42.50

Very special tomorrow

Blouses at $5.95

Virtually an exhibit of the very latest conceits

Blouses of washable satin, silk shadow lace, Oriental lace (with girdle), hand-embroidered crepe de Chine and chiffon. Designed in models that are ineffably pretty, showing modish effects in cuff and collar treatment, including the high military collar at its highest. An assortment, in brief, which will appeal instanter to discriminating choice. 3rd floor

The Smartest Blouses that $5.00 can buy

Blouses, of heavy crepe de Chine, in plain tailored styles, prettily tucked effects, and attractive novelty designs, with soutache braiding.

Blouses, of silk shadow lace with high stock collar of black velvet—other styles with underbodice of white satin, hemstitched on to shadow lace.

Extra good values in Women's Gloves

Kassan Capeskin Gloves, washable, in tan shades. One clasp. Value $1.50	$1.15
Arabian Mocha Gloves, prix seam, one clasp, and spear point, in gray only. Value $1.50	$1.15
White Glace Biarritz Gloves, eight button length, and full pique sewn. Value $1.50	$1.00
White Glace Lambskin Gloves, 2 clasps, and embroidered two tone backs. Value $1.35	89c
Perrin's Gloves—a new importation just to hand. Excellent value at	$1.50

Women's Silk & Wool Combination Suits much underpriced

An ideal Winter weight silk and wool garment, in both low neck and Dutch neck style, knee or anklet length.

Regular sizes Value $2.50 $1.75
Extra sizes Value $2.75 $1.95

And a limited number of combination garments, in a medium weight of silk and wool. Value $2, at... $1.35

Special sale tomorrow of the new

Sans Gene & Farrar Combs

A selection which is all variety, featuring the new demi-blonde shade, in scores of choice and delicate designs from the filigree of Parisian fancy.

Sans Gene & Farrar Combs Values $8.50 to $10.50 $5.00

In demi-blonde, the new "clear," and amber shades, studded with moonbeam and rhinestone combinations, in charming patterns.

Sans Gene Demi-Blonde Combs edged with rhinestones. Value $2.00. Special at	95c	Demi-Blonde Casque Combs, edge studded with rhinestones. Value $2.00. Special at	95c
Rhinestone Studded Casque Combs, closely paved with rhinestones. Value $7.50. Special at	$5.00	Imported Jet Spanish Combs, in block and cameo models. Values $6.50 & $7.50	$2.95

Living models will tomorrow display these jeweled ornaments in their hair

42d St., West

Renard

Monday and Tuesday:
IMPORTANT SALE of

Trimmed Millinery

Important to smart dressers.

Important to the woman that can distinguish quality and style.

And most important to the woman who does not want to pay the fictitious prices asked at some shops for trimmed hats that are no better, and in many cases more inferior to what we propose to sell you during this sale.

Many of these Hats are adaptations of our imported models. Others are designed by our own high class designers.

There are only ABOUT 300 HATS in this sale, comprising all the newest and best of the season.

We have also placed among them many of our original Imported models.

Your Choice Tomorrow at $10.

The prices ranged up till now from $15.00 to $28.50

Renard

West 42d St. NUMBERS 41 and 49

KING OF BELGIANS APPEALS TO US

Aid of Americans Will Be a Precious Memory to His People, He Says.

WINTER WILL BE TERRIBLE

Hopes Famine, with Accompanying Disease and Violence, Can Be Avoided.

NEED $2,500,000 A MONTH

Head of American Commission Calls on Countrymen to Assume This Responsibility.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Albert, King of the Belgians, has asked the American people through the American Commission for Relief in Belgium, to help feed his starving people during the coming Winter.

The King's message, written under fire in the battle in Belgium, follows:

I am informed that American officials and citizens in Belgium and England are working to save my people from the horrors of the famine which now threaten them. It is a great comfort to me in this hour of sorrow and misfortune to feel that your great-hearted, disinterested people is directing its efforts to relieving the distress of the unoffending civilian population of my country.

Despite all that can be done, the suffering in the coming Winter will be terrible, but the burden we must bear will be lightened if my people can be spared the pangs of hunger, with its frightful consequences of disease and violence.

I confidently hope that the appeal of the American Commission will meet with a generous response. The wholehearted friendship of America shown my people at this time always will be a precious memory. ALBERT.

The American commission for relief in Belgium is an official body recognized by the various Governments for the transmission of foodstuffs into Belgium. It is the only channel through which food can be introduced into Belgium, and by its association with a committee in Belgium, has the only efficient agency for the distribution of food within that country. H. C. Hoover, Chairman of the commission, which has headquarters in London, makes the following appeal to all American newspapers:

7,000,000 to Feed.

"We have received reports from members of this commission who were sent into Belgium. They have the assistance of the National Committee of Relief and its branches throughout Belgium, together with the help of the American Ministers and Consuls and local officials. Their reports show that there are still some 7,000,000 people in Belgium. In many centres the people are receiving an allowance of a little more than three ounces of flour per capita daily.

"This is not a question of charity or relief to the chronic poor; it is a question of feeding an entire population. The situation affects the wealthy and well-to-do as well as the poor. It touches every home in Belgium. Our experts calculate that in order to avoid actual starvation Belgium must have every month a minimum of 60,000 tons of wheat, 15,000 tons of corn, 5,000 tons of peas or beans, and a limited amount of bacon or lard.

"This will allow rations of ten ounces per capita daily, which is about half the usual soldier's ration. All this will cost $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 monthly. There is no money in Belgium. The whole credit machinery has ceased. Eighty per cent. of the people are unemployed.

Need $2,500,000 a Month.

"A plan may be devised whereby such Belgians as possess property may give obligations to pay when the war ends, but even if we could realize on these obligations we must still have at least $2,500,000 monthly in food or money with which to buy it. That these figures are no exaggeration is proved by the fact that Belgian imports in normal times average 230,000 tons of cereals monthly; this, together with its own production, which, with accumulations, is now exhausted.

"During the past week we have received and expended in emergency food $600,000, and yet this is only four days' supply. The problem is immediate. The Belgians are helping themselves, but they can do little. The British and French are under such strain that they also can do little. Besides, these nations, together with the Dutch, have a million refugees on their hands. Americans must feed Belgium this Winter. There never was such a call on American charity, and there never was a famine emergency so great.

"This committee and its distributing agency, the Belgian Committee, is composed entirely of volunteers, and every dollar represents actual food, without any organization expenses. It is our earnest hope that all funds raised for Belgian relief in the United States will be translated into actual food and shipped through the commission.

"Will you, therefore, in the interests of humanity, open a subscription among your readers, ear-marked, 'For the Sole Purpose of Purchasing and Transporting Food'? Every dollar so raised will be used to purchase food in the United States. Information as to what centres and what relief agencies in the United States will undertake the purchase and dispatch will be cabled later."

Canadian Wheat for New Zealand.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—A dispatch from Melbourne to Reuter's Telegram Company says that the Government of New Zealand has arranged to obtain 1,000,000 bushels of wheat from Canada before a shortage occurs there. The Government proposes to sell wheat slightly below cost. Otherwise famine prices prevail in New Zealand.

A. J. M. Tuck Joins British Reserves

Alexander John Marshall Tuck of New York, son of Judge Somerville Pinckney Tuck of the International Court at Cairo, has joined the Young Men's Christian Association reserves with the British Army. He is with the Royal Fusiliers at Epsom.

Kurzman

Importer

Fifth Avenue & 35th St.

INTRODUCES

A NEW STYLE

for the coming season

our own

DESIGN & CREATION

changing the present mode

Originating

A NEW DÉCOLLETÉ

A NEW BODICE

A NEW SKIRT

GOWNS will be shown

the first time

at the

FASHION FÊTE

RITZ CARLTON HOTEL

NOVEMBER 4th, 5th, 6th.

THE STORE WILL BE CLOSED ALL DAY TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 3d (ELECTION DAY)

B. Altman & Co.

Commencing to-morrow (Monday), November 2nd, an event of more than ordinary interest in B. Altman & Co.'s enlarged Store will be

An Exhibition of Choice Imported Silks and Laces which will be held in the new Exhibition Salon, in the Madison Avenue section of the Fourth Floor.

The public is cordially invited to attend.

UNEXCELLED VALUES IN TO-MORROW'S SPECIAL SALES

15,000 Yards of Choice Black Dress Satins

(36 to 40 inches wide)

will be placed on sale at the special prices of

$1.10, 1.40, 1.60 & 1.80 per yard

these being considerably lower than the regular selling prices.

Mail and Telephone Orders will receive immediate attention.

An Extraordinary Offering in the Women's Shoe Department (Second Floor) will consist of 600 Pairs of Metal Brocade Slippers

in extremely handsome effects, combining various colors with gold or silver at $4.75 per pair.

The regular selling prices of these Slippers, in several styles of which the fabrics were imported exclusively by B. Altman & Co. and will not be duplicated, would range from $8.00 to $10.00 per pair.

Included in this Sale will be several styles of Evening Slippers (range of sizes incomplete), which will be marked at very decided price concessions.

An Especially Important Offering in the Department for Women's Ready-to-wear Suits and Gowns (Third Floor) will comprise

Women's Chiffon Velvet Suits

(Fur-trimmed)

of superior quality and in the fashionable models

at $55.00

A special attraction in the Fur Department, on the Third Floor, will be a Sale of Natural Blue Fox

the fashionable fur of the season, made up in smart Neckpieces and Muffs, as well as a quantity of unmade skins for personal selection, at the unusual price of $175.00 per set.

This will present a really remarkable opportunity for purchasing fine skins at fully 33 1-3 less than the prices usually asked.

Also Dyed Fox Neckpieces and Muffs

(Natural Blue Fox color)

at the special price of $85.00 per set.

An Exceptional Sale of Imported Decorative Lace Pieces

(Hand-made)

marked in many instances at less than half the original prices, will consist of the following:

Chair Backs	at	$4.50, 5.00 to 9.50
Arm Pieces	at	1.50, 2.00 & 2.50
Pillow Slips	at	5.00, 6.50, to 18.00

Covers (square or circular) at . . $3.50, 4.75, 6.50 and upward

Also Imported Filet Lace Curtains Panels and Bedspreads

specially priced.

Filet Lace Curtains per pair . . $22.00, 27.50 to 55.00

Filet Lace Panels each . . $19.00, 22.00 to 35.00

Filet Lace Bedspreads each . . $17.50, 20.00 & 48.00

A Special Offering of Imported Dress Materials

(All-wool, 50 and 54 inches wide)

will comprise an entirely new shipment of the smart plaid and stripe effects so much in demand at this time for the fashionable tunic skirt. These fabrics will be offered at the exceptional price of . per yard $1.35 will comprise entirely new models suitable for the present season and early Winter wear, all marked at unusually attractive prices.

A Highly Interesting Sale of Women's House Gowns & Negligees

Tea Gowns of crepe de Chine, with coat of chiffon . . . . . at $22.50

House Dresses of crepe de Chine, with accordion-plaited skirt . . . at $14.50

Negligees of crepe de Chine, trimmed with lace and fur . . . . at $12.75

Kimonos of crepe de Chine, introducing hand embroidery . . . . at $10.50

House Dresses of albatross, with collar and cuffs of embroidered crepe . at $7.75

Kimonos of French flannel, trimmed with satin ribbon . . . . . at $6.90

Blanket Robes, bound with satin ribbon, at $3.85

A Sale of Silk Petticoats

will offer special inducements at these prices:

Silk Messaline Petticoats, in black or colors; finished with deep plaiting . . at $2.90

Silk Jersey-top Petticoats, with French plaiting of foulard; in black, navy blue and Russian green . . . . at $5.00

Women's Coats and Wraps

(Imported and American-made) featuring smart styles and materials appropriate for all occasions, and many trimmed with fur, are now being shown at material reductions from former prices.

An Important Sale of Men's Furnishings will provide a noteworthy opportunity for securing necessary garments of eminently desirable qualities at much lower prices than ordinary.

Men's Negligee Shirts of fancy striped silk at . . . . . $2.95 & 3.50

Men's Negligee Shirts of imported fancy madras (plain, with stiff cuffs); made in B. Altman & Co.'s own workrooms, at $2.50

Men's Four-in-hand Scarfs (open end), in attractive patterns and colors . at 55c.

Men's Pajamas, of silk mixtures in a variety of patterns and colors . per suit $2.85

Men's Pajamas, of cotton crepe or mercerized materials . . . . . per suit $1.35

Men's Outing Flannel Pajamas, per suit 95c.

Men's medium-weight Balbriggan Shirts, with long or short sleeves; and ankle-length Drawers to match, per garment 48c.

Men's Medium-weight Union Suits of white ribbed cotton; in ankle-length, with long or short sleeves . . . per suit 95c.

Men's Union Suits of gray cotton-and-wool mixture; ankle-length, with long sleeves, per suit $1.65

Also Men's Hats and Shoes

at equal price advantages.

Men's Soft Hats, in smart, up-to-date styles as well as the more conservative shapes; in green, brown and slate; also in pearl, with black band . . . at $2.50 & 3.45

Men's Derby Hats, featuring the newest blocks for Autumn and Winter . at $3.45

Men's Laced Shoes, in patent leather or tan or black calf (value $7.00) . per pair $4.75

FREE SHIPPING OF MERCHANDISE

All Charged or Paid Purchases (including heavy and bulky shipments) will be forwarded Free of Charge by mail, express or freight to any point in the United States. The methods of shipment are optional with B. Altman & Co. and no discounts are allowed.

All Charged or Paid Purchases not exceeding Twenty (20) Pounds in weight will be forwarded Free by mail to all Territories, Possessions or Foreign Countries where Parcel Post Rates apply.

Telephone 7000 Murray Hill

The American Rug Department

which has been very considerably enlarged, is liberally stocked with new assortments of American-made Rugs in all the best makes and a complete range of sizes.

The prices are as low as it is possible to quote for Rugs of reliable qualities.

Inspection and comparison are invited.
(Fifth Floor, Thirty-fourth Street side)

Thirty-fourth Street — Fifth Avenue-Madison Avenue, New York — Thirty-fifth Street

Mail and Telephone Orders
Receive Prompt and Careful Attention
Telephone Murray Hill 9000
All Mailable Packages Forwarded Free of Charge

Murray Hill 9000

Lord & Taylor

Fifth Avenue, 38th Street, 39th Street

Music Daily—Luncheon and Afternoon Tea, 10 A. M. to 5 P. M., Tenth Floor

Founded 1826

Cut Flower Balcony
Choice cut flowers, loose or arranged, at moderate prices. Special City Delivery Service.
Street Floor

Annual November Sales Commencing Tomorrow

Offer Exceptional Opportunities for Unusually Profitable Shopping in the Season's Newest Merchandise, Whether for Personal Wear, Home Adornment or Gift Purposes

A Splendid Offering of About 75 Dresses for Women

In a large assortment of styles and materials—a manufacturer's sample line, which means that in most instances there is only one model of a kind. A few Evening Dresses are in the collection.

Offered Tomorrow, Monday, at

$28.50

Usually up to $55.00—Sizes broken.

Also the Following Excellent Values:

Afternoon Dress — $19.50
Of charmeuse, with soft waist, full tunic skirt, in the season's smartest colors. Special at

Afternoon Dress — $25.00
Combination velvet and charmeuse, new coat effect; black only.....Special at

Dancing Dress — $29.50
Combination lace and charmeuse, pretty ruffle effect.....Special at

Clever Evening & Dancing Dresses — $39.50
Combination of net and lace.....Special at

Third Floor

Lord & Taylor "Selected Furs"

Women's Fur Coats

At Special Prices

Black Pony Coats	$29.50
Seal-Dyed Muskrat Coats	$90.00
Black Caracul Coats	$77.50
Seal-Dyed Coney Coats	$67.50
Persian Lamb Coats	$125.00

Matched Fur Sets

Extraordinary Values

	Scarfs.	Muffs.
Skunk	$19.50	$30.00
Black Lynx	$25.00	$35.00
Silvered Kitt Fox	$19.50	$35.00
Black Fox	$20.00	$25.00
Natural Raccoon	$15.00	$20.00

Fur Novelty Sets

In Cross Fox, Fisher, Caracul, Mole, Blue Fox, Ermine, White Fox, and all the fashionable Furs at Special Prices.

Complete Assortment of Fur Trimmings in stock or cut to order.

Third Floor

Silk Petticoats

Now Greatly in Demand

Attractive models for street and evening wear are being shown in various materials in colors and black.

A Special Lot of Silk Petticoats
At Extraordinarily Low Prices
Black and colored messaline, and black and white stripe, also crepe-de-chine, lace trimmed
$1.95 & $2.95—Usually to $6.00

—Also—

Silk Jersey Top Petticoats
With messaline or Jersey flounce in black, navy, Russian green and tete-de-negre
$3.95 & $4.95—Usually to $7.50

Wool Jersey Top Petticoats, $2.95 & $3.95
With flounce of messaline (black only).

Extra Size Petticoats
Messaline or silk Jersey, in black and colors, pleated flounce..... $5.45 & $7.95

Extra Size Wool Jersey Top Petticoats
With flounce of messaline..... $4.50

High Class Novelty Petticoats, $11.75 to $58.00
French and American made; white and dainty colors, embroidered and effectively trimmed, very desirable for trousseaux and evening wear

Second Floor

Women's Winter Suits and Coats

The Best Values of the Season

Fancy Tailored Suits
The smartest winter materials and colorings are shown in reproductions of exclusive foreign models. Richly lined and warmly interlined.
$22.50, $25.00, $29.50, $35.00, $39.50

Fur-Trimmed Suits
Distinctive models in the season's most fashionable materials and colorings. All handsomely lined and warmly interlined.
$35.00, $39.50, $45.00, $50.00 to $150.00

Comfortable Street & Touring Coats
In all the smart winter materials and a splendid selection of models
Unusual Values at $15.00 & $19.50

Coats for Street, Travel or Dressy Wear
A splendid variety of the newest winter materials and colorings. Many models are fur-trimmed, and all are elegantly lined and comfortably interlined.
$25.00, $29.50, $35.00, $39.50, $50.00

Very Special

Soft Seal-Plush Coats — $35.00
For afternoon or dressy occasions; handsomely lined with brocaded satin and warmly interlined.....

Velour Coats — $39.50
For street or dressy wear; fur-trimmed, beautifully lined and interlined.....

Fancy Velour Coats — $19.50
For afternoon or evening wear, in all the smart colors, lined with white brocade and warmly interlined. Usually $35.00

Fur Collared Silk Chiffon Plush Coats — $55.00
For afternoon or evening wear, handsomely lined and warmly interlined. Usually $75.00

Evening Wraps, $75.00 to $250.00
Reproductions of foreign models, in a large selection of materials, attractively lined and warmly interlined; trimmed with the season's smartest furs.
Third Floor

Important Sale of Women's Footwear

Walking & Dress Boots — $3.95
Comprising this season's smartest and most fashionable kinds. Usually $5.00 and $6.00

"Strictly Hand-Made" Street & Dress Footwear — $5.85
Including
The New "Myrod" Boot
Usually $7.00 to $10.00

The "Cordwainer" — $5.00
A special smart boot for young women graduating from the Misses' class. Military heel, lace and button; in all leathers. Special price

Girls' School & Dress Boots

6 to 11	11½ to 2	2½ to 5½
$2.00	$2.50	$3.00

Usually $2.75 to $4.00
Second Floor

Particular Attention Is Called to Several Late Importations of French Blouses

Comprising the Newest Materials, Such as Fancy Crepes, Moire, Poplin, Chiffon & Fancy Plaid Chiffon Taffeta
$10.75 to $25.00

A New Model of Batiste
Attractively hand embroidered and lace trimmed, long sleeves and high neck,
$10.75

High Class Novelty Imported Blouses
At Greatly Reduced Prices
Third Floor

Extraordinary Sale of 50,000 Yards Fashionable Dress Silks

Greatly Under Prevailing Prices

Beginning Tomorrow, Monday

Washable White India Silks — 48c
27 inches wide. Usually 58c per yard

Plain White Washable Silks — 65c
36 inches wide. Special, per yard

Plain Satin — 68c
Seventy-five shades (light and dark); also white, ivory and black. Usually 85c per yard

Fancy Silks — 75c
Numerous kinds, both light and dark grounds. Formerly $1.50 & $1.75 per yard

Black Satin Messaline — 85c
35 inches wide, an unusual quality. Special, per yard

Black Imperial Satin — 95c
35 inches wide. Usually $1.25 per yard

Imported Fancy Silks — 95c
Formerly $1.50 to $2.50 per yard

Flowered Chiffons — $1.25
40 inches wide. Usually $2.00 to $2.50 per yard

Plain Crepe-de-Chine — $1.28
40 inches wide; evening and street shades. Special, per yard

Plain Black Crepes & Satins — $1.68
40 inches wide. Special per yard

Black Imperial Satin — $1.75
"Yarn dyed"; 40 inches wide. Usually $2.50 per yard

Black Imperial Satin — $1.95
54 inches wide. Usually $2.50 per yard

Black Chiffon Dress Velvet — $3.95
39-40 inches wide. Usually $5.00 per yard

About 3,000 Remnants of Numerous Kinds of Silks
At greatly reduced prices

Street Floor

Extraordinary Values Offered in Midwinter Millinery

Fur & Fur Trimmed Hats
$10.00 to $20.00

Smart new styles embellished with fur; also velvet hats trimmed with Paradise, ostrich, ribbon, wings and flowers. Prices according to materials.

Very Special
500 Fur Trimmed Hats
$3.95, $5.00 & $5.95
A large selection in black and colors, embodying fine workmanship and materials.

Untrimmed Velvet Hats
$1.95, $3.50 & $5.00
Usually $3.00 to $8.00
Large, medium and small shapes, in black and an assortment of colors.

A Trimming Service free of charge if hats and materials are purchased in this section.

Smart Goura Mounts	$3.95 to $10.95
Numidi (black and colors)	$3.95 to $9.95
Paradise (black and natural)	$5.00 to $14.95

Effective Bouquets & Single Flowers put up in attractive boxes—50c, 85c, 98c & $1.25

Fourth Floor

Special Values for Monday in Muslin Underwear

Night Gowns

Nainsook	98c, $1.25, $1.95 & $2.95
Cotton Crepe	98c & $1.25
Crepe-de-Chine	$3.95 & $5.95
Albatross, embroidered	$4.45
Outing Flannel	75c, 98c, $1.25 & $1.50

Under Bodices

With sleeves; net, Crepe-de-Chine and taffeta	$1.95
Net and Crepe-de-Chine, copy of imported model	$1.95
Crepe-de-Chine, lace trimmed	$1.95

Exceptional Values Offered in House Gowns, Negligees and Dressing Sacques

Crepe-de-Chine, straight model, elaborately hand embroidered	$12.75
Two-piece Chiffon Princess Slip, shadow lace coat, attractively trimmed	$18.75
Crepe-de-Chine, semi-fitted, large chiffon collar, hand embroidered	$10.75
Crepe-de-Chine Slip-on, swansdown trimmed	$6.95
Albatross, accordion pleated skirt, embroidered bodice, hemstitched organdy collar and cuffs	$3.95
Albatross, pleated skirt, organdy collar and cuffs, hand embroidered scallop	$3.95
Albatross, accordion pleated skirt, bodice hand embroidered and Val. lace trimmed; body lined	$6.95
Albatross, accordion pleated skirt; body lined; hand embroidered and lace trimmed	$7.95
Eiderdown Robe, sailor collar, satin bound	$4.45
Imported Japanese Quilted Robes, excellent quality silk, V neck, stitched, satin trimmed	$6.95
Blanket Robes, in Persian and flowered effects, kimono model or with collar, satin ribbon trimmed	$3.95
Figured Blanket, square neck, stitched satin trimmed; with girdle	$2.95

A Number of High Class Imported Models
(Only one of a style)
At Half Regular Prices

Kimonos

Plain Satin, straight model, foulard collar and cuffs	$3.95
Flowered or Bordered Satin, kimono model	$5.95

Dressing Sacques

Crepe-de-Chine, hemstitched and chiffon trimmed	$4.50
Imported French Flannel, kimono model	$2.95
Imported Albatross, Camille model, or with collar, embroidered or lace trimmed

$1.95, $3.45 & $4.95

Second Floor

FINDS RUSSIAN JEWS AFLAME AS PATRIOTS

Ardent as Most Orthodox of Greek Church in "Holy War," ex-Minister Sherrill Declares.

SEES NEW ERA IN CZARLAND

Access of Democracy in Which the Jews, Greatest Sufferers from Absolutism, Will Profit Most.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The patriotism of Russian Jews in rallying to the Russian flag in the present war has been made the subject of study by Charles H. Sherrill, ex-American Minister to the Argentine. Mr. Sherrill's interest in the subject was aroused by the desperate efforts made by a young Russian Jew of his acquaintance, who was in England when the war broke out, to get back to Russia to join the Hussar regiment, in which he was a junior officer. Mr. Sherrill said tonight:

"When the war broke out a young Russian Jew, the youngest of three brothers, found himself in London, cut off from all chance of returning home by the shortest route, which was, of course, through Germany. The only way to join the Russian Hussar Regiment, of which he was a junior officer, was the long, round-about route via Bergen. He set off at once, but by the time he got to Petrograd his regiment was already at the front, and he was told he must content himself with serving in its reserve battalion near the capital. He was greatly distressed by this order, and at first it seemed impossible to get it changed, even though his eldest brother has served with distinction in the Russian Diplomatic Service.

"Thanks, however, to his family's friendship with a certain important Russian General, plus the patriotic persistence of the young Jewish officer, he was presently allowed to go to the front, and just before I left London there came a jubilant telegram stating that he was at last with his own corps again. Although he was not permitted to say so in his telegram, it subsequently proved that he had caught up with his regiment in time to participate in the taking of Lemburg, something to remember all the rest of his life.

"I became so much interested in the red-blooded patriotism of this gallant young Jew that I was moved to make further inquiries into what stand other young Russian Jews were taking in regard to the present war, as well as what their older co-religionists and compatriots were doing. The result of this inquiry was to me very surprising. I use the word surprising advisedly, for at first blush a foreigner would wonder what possible interest a Jew could take in a war so emphatically and unanimously approved by the Greek Church, a church which, rightly or wrongly, the Jews have blamed for their failure to enjoy ampler political rights in Russia. And, remember, this war is for Russian peasant and noble alike, a holy war.

Brothers in Patriotism.

"However that may be, the surprising fact remains that even the most orthodox member of the Russian Church is no more enthusiastic about this war than are his Jewish compatriots. At last these two religious antipodes have found something in common to both—a bond of sympathy—and there is kindled in both of them the same fire of patriotism, lighted though it be by brands from different altars. War is working out among them the same phenomenon as came about during our Spanish war, when once and for all time there was healed the breach between our North and South—a blaze of patriotism melting stiff prejudice of long standing and welding together edges long separated.

"One has to know and to talk with but few Russians to realize what a change has already come over Russian public opinion as a result of this war—a change which makes for a new and greater cohesion in their body politic, a change which evidences itself in many ways, not only in this appreciation of Jewish loyalty to nationality, but also in the even more unexpected support lent to the Government by such irreconcilables as certain of the terrorists and by sundry revolutionary leaders who hitherto lived in exile and carried on from foreign parts their active campaign against this very Government they are now supporting.

"And what will be the political effect of this great change? Its effects are beginning to be seen. Already in Russia this war has provided an inspiring testimony to the patriotism of all classes and types of the nation—something so new in that country as to set a new high-water mark for the tide surging on to general participation in Government. The next Duma to be elected will, thanks to this change, inevitably be more representative of all the people, and therefore cannot help taking definite steps for further recognition of the rights of the masses, who thus give evidence of their loyalty.

"Already, as the result of this war, there exists a new and a broader Russian public opinion and a Russia which is taking Governmental action approved by the governed. And when a great forward movement like this one comes, as come it must in the history of every country, who shall benefit the most by it, if it benefit that class of its citizens which will then have suffered the most from restrictions of their rights of citizenship?

"And in Russia which class is that if it be not the Jews? And they have borne the most and they will gain the most. Opportunity has knocked at their door in the guise of an appeal to patriotism, and they have flung open that door with a splendid gesture of devotion to country. And the door thus bravely opened in the stress of war time will never be shut to them in peace, certainly not by the grandson of the great Czar who freed the serfs. The Russian Jews themselves are working out their own political salvation as Russians among Russians.

Effect Upon United States.

"The new era for the Jew in Russia, the era of the unselfish spirit of patriotism—a spirit that finds an echo in every land—will surely have a wide repercussion abroad. Nothing could be more effective than it in clearing away the unfortunate impression hitherto given foreigners by Russia's treatment of her Jewish population, a class of citizens peculiarly rich in cousins under every one of the powerful flags of the world. Especially will this be true in the United States, a country, by the way, whose legitimate national aspirations at no point conflict with those of Russia. The Monroe Doctrine and the expansion of our merchant marine find no menace in the folds of the Russian flag.

"If our people avail themselves of this chance to reach Russian markets American capital will, of course, seek the opportunities of investment there which our entrance into these markets will disclose to our merchants, and thus will Russia gain as much from us as we from her. If these successive steps be taken, as seems possible because of the advantage to all concerned, then will both Russia and the United States owe a great debt to the splendid patriotism of the Russian Jews in this great crisis of the nation—a patriotism which will indirectly have effected a better understanding between two great nations having so many reasons for a warm friendship."

RELIES ON OUR SYMPATHY.

Lord Bryce Says It Gives Confidence to Great Britain.

ABERDEEN, Oct. 31.—At the unveiling of a monument here today to the late King Edward, Lord Bryce, the former Ambassador to the United States, said that the present crisis was the most solemn one since the days of Napoleon. The thing that inspired confidence, he said, was the conviction that Great Britain's cause of righteous, and that she had the material aid of the self-governing dominions and the moral support of many neutrals, "especially the kindred people of America."

Viscount Bryce declared that the charge that King Edward had sought to isolate Germany was baseless.

AMERICANS GIVE $20,000.

Two $10,000 Subscriptions to the Prince of Wales Relief Fund.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Among the latest subscriptions to the Prince of Wales Relief Fund are two donations of $10,000 each, one from Walter H. Langshaw of New Bedford, Mass., and the other from Miss Harriet Fletcher of Boston.

This fund has reached a total of $17,825,000, of which $4,350,000 has been distributed for the relief of those in distress.

GERMANS CLAIM VERDUN GAIN.

Say They Have Taken Main French Position to the South.

BERLIN, Oct. 31, (By Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—Information, given out for the press in official quarters today, is as follows:

Military experts of the Berlin newspapers consider that yesterday's developments around Verdun were of the greatest importance, and say there is promise of their resumption with renewed strength.

In the fighting south of Verdun the French are straining every effort to crush and drive out the army, which the end of September penetrated as far as St. Mihiel, and which for a month past has been fighting hard to hold the ground gained.

The Germans have now captured the main position, and their forces are operating from the direction of Toul. The French attack from Pont-a-Mousson also was without results.

Attention can now again be directed to the original object of this campaign.

TELLS OF HUNGER IN THE TRENCHES

Diary of a German Soldier Found Dead After Days of Longing for Food.

"DEVILISH FRENCH GUNS"

Kept Supply Trains from Reaching the Men in the Front Lines, This Soldier Wrote.

PARIS, France, Oct. 16, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Here is the story of a German private who was found dead in a trench—not from wounds, but, it is said, from starvation. His story, in the form of a daily journal kept apparently up to the last day, was found on him. It begins with the advance of the Crown Prince's army upon the Marne after the battle of Charleroi and the fall of Longwy. It covers the battle of the Marne and the greater part of the campaign on the Aisne. It reads:

"Yesterday was a day of rejoicing. Our first army has pushed back the French, defeated a division of English cavalry, and is before the gates of Paris. In Russia our troops have taken 150,000 prisoners. The joy would have been greater if we had had something to eat. Our division leaves for Marson St. Amand and Bossuet, where we are to bivouac before crossing the Marne tomorrow. We hope to get rations there.

"We finally stopped long enough to take a bite. It didn't take long because what they gave us was just enough to put a sharper edge on our appetites. Then we went toward the Marne, pushing back detachments of the French. They let us come to the very edge of the stream; our advance guard was even partly across the bridge, when their artillery opened fire; it seemed to us that it opened the gates of hell at the same time. We could not advance and we had no orders to retire. We could only stand and watch the carnage around the bridge, where our losses were terrible. We succeeded in saving the flag and our commander and then were ordered to retire. It was not exactly a defeat the officers say—only a retirement. The battle resumed a little later and lasted nearly all night. We went forward again but were obliged to dig ourselves in to escape the terrible artillery fire. Our own guns seemed to be weak.

"This morning (Sept. 7) the French flying machines are circling above us incessantly, obliging us to keep to our trenches. Our artillery seems unable to dislodge the French guns, and we fear an infantry attack from the left. It is an artillery day, and our troops occupying the canal bridge have suffered terribly. Out of sixty men, twenty-five only remained when the combat was suspended without decisive results. We got out of the trenches toward 9 o'clock, and were lucky enough to dig up some raw potatoes, which comforted us a little.

"A great battle was announced for today, (Sept. 9.) We have been in the trenches four days now, and the rest after long marches would be agreeable if there were no dead bodies of men and horses and if the flies didn't pester us terribly.

"The great battle did not come off, but today (Sept. 10) we could see, half a mile off, the French artillery, strongly intrenched. They say strong forces of the enemy are in front of us but that we need fear nothing. A heavy battle is going on on our right wing. It seems that the French Army is in a bad position; to get out it must retire on Paris or break through our lines.

"At 2 o'clock today (Sept. 11) we were ordered to leave the trenches. We thought it would be to attack the enemy, but it seems we are to go back. Two French army corps have pierced our lines. Away we went, without taking time to eat, through destroyed villages where there is nothing to pick up. We had nothing to eat until 10 o'clock, just a morsel, and then went on until 8 o'clock in the morning.

"Today (Sept. 12) we had a little bread with coffee. We are suffering terribly from privation and exhaustion. They tell us we are executing a turning movement, not a retreat. To us it looks like flight. Finally we arrived at Souain, where we hoped to eat, but instead of rations they gave us shovels with which to dig trenches in the pouring rain. While we were at it French shrapnel drove us back with the trenches uncompleted. The entire force was obliged to retire.

"Today (Sept. 14) we have dug ourselves in again and remain, stuck man against man, all day in our trenches. We have eaten nothing all day; we suffer atrociously from hunger and thirst; the rain comes down in torrents, but we can't leave the trenches because of the shower of shrapnel from the enemy's guns. Finally this afternoon we had our first repast for several days, consisting of rice with a little meat and bread and a morsel of bacon. It was like a drop of water on a hot iron.

"The French have occupied the trenches we left at Souain three miles back. Behind us is Sommepy, in ruins, occupied by our troops. Today the French artillery gave us a little respite, but toward half past six it reopened the hellish fire, which continued very late in the night at the rate of a shot every ten minutes, just sufficient to leave us no repose. It is a dog's life we are leading and we shall soon be sick—every man.

"Today (Sept. 23) we were ordered into the first line of trenches, having before us a battalion of the 161st which has suffered great losses. Toward 11 the artillery opened a violent fire and the shells simply rained upon our lines. We were obliged to keep closely to our trenches, unable to leave them for anything. We are nearly famished.

"Today (Sept. 30) the devilish French guns have swept off half of our company; their fire is so constant that we haven't time to fire ourselves. We are still confined to the trenches, and it is two days since we were served meager rations of rice and coffee made with rain water. The cold north winds have followed the rain and added to our suffering. Many of the men are so cramped with rheumatism that we are obliged to lift them out of the trenches.

"Today (Oct. 4) we have eaten again and the rations were more generous; but it seems impossible for us to satiafy our hunger.

"This morning, (Oct. 8,) happily it does not rain, but the tempest blows from the north and makes us feel our hunger all the more. They say there are plenty of provisions in the rear; the question is to get them to us in face of the French artillery, which sweeps the ground constantly and makes life impossible except under cover of the trenches. Hunger is terrible. I suffer horribly from the cold also. I am no longer able to keep up. I don't think I can last much longer."

TO DECORATE GRAVES.

France Will Observe All Saints' Day with Special Ceremony.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—As tomorrow is All Saints' Day, Parisians are making preparation to celebrate it with special ceremony.

All worthy French people regard it as a point of honor to visit the graves of relatives and adorn them with flowers. In the country districts, and especially in Brittany, it is supposed to be the one day in the year when the dead are allowed to return to look at those left behind.

This year numerous patriotic or public bodies are arranging processions to put flowers on the tombs of dead soldiers. Gen. Gallieni himself will visit the graves of the soldiers of the Paris Army.

TOOK VILLAGE WITH LANCES.

Detachment of French Dragoons Performed a Notable Feat.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—This semi-official announcement was made this afternoon:

"In one of our attacks, delivered the day before yesterday, a village, strongly held by the enemy's infantry supported by artillery, was taken by a detachment of French unmounted cavalry, belonging to two Dragoon regiments. The men charged with their lances in their hands.

The enemy left in the village more than 200 dead and abandoned 200 of their wounded."

URGES EMBARGO ON HORSES

European War Demand Declared to Threaten Our Army Supply.

The horse supply in the United States Army is rapidly becoming serious, according to The Army and Navy Journal. The only solution, The Journal holds, appears to be to check the wholesale exportation of horses from the United States to England and France, which two nations are seeking to buy every available animal in the United States for service with their armies.

"The General Staff of the Army," says The Journal, "has already recognized the dangers of a serious shortage of mounts for the army and has under consideration a recommendation for the placing of an embargo on the exportation at least of mares and breeding stock. The agents of the English and French Governments are scouring the country and purchasing about every horse in sight. There would not be so much complaint from the army if the agents purchased geldings and suitable mounts, but they are buying every animal that has any appearance of soundness, at fancy prices.

"The Boer war created a shortage in horses from which the country has only recently recovered. But the purchases of the Boer war amounted to nothing as compared with those of the European war. Unless there is an embargo placed on the exportation of mares there will not be left in this country at the close of the European war any breeding stock with which to raise horses in the future. In the event of any trouble with Mexico even now it would be difficult to secure mounts for the United States Army that it would be necessary to send into the southern republic. It is positively dangerous for this country to permit the unrestricted exportation of horses."

New York
Brooklyn
Philadelphia

OPPENHEIM COLLINS & Co

Cleveland
Buffalo
Newark

34th Street—New York

Have Especially Prepared and Arranged for Monday, November 2d,

A Most Important and Extraordinary Sale of Women's and Misses' Tailored Suits

About 250 Suits Taken from the Regular Stock, of Broadcloth, Gabardine and other fashionable materials, in black and colors, tailored and semi-dress models, including fur trimmed Suits; superior tailoring and linings. Regular Values to 39.75 — 25.00

Also Women's and Misses' High Cost Suits

A representative collection of the newest models, featuring various coat lengths and most desirable trimmings, including Fur, of Suede Cloth, Gabardine, Broadcloth, Broadtail Cloth, Plush, Velvet, Corduroy and other fashionable materials.

Actual 45.00 to 75.00 Values

29.75 35.00 48.00

Women's Fashionable Coats and Wraps

A collection of exclusive models for Afternoon, Street and Evening wear, of Silk Velour, Chiffon Velvet, Broadtail Cloth, Charmeuse, Corded Faille and Broadcloth.

35.00 45.00 59.75 75.00

Motor and Sport Coats—Special

Practical Outergarments featuring belted and yoke back effects; fabrics include Rough Mixtures and Pebble Cheviots.

Regular 22.50 and 25.00 Values 15.00

Women's Street Coats—Special

Newest styles, of Broadcloth, Zibeline, Fancy Cords, Plush, Corduroy, Cheviots and Mixtures, superior lined.

Regular 30.00 Values 22.50

Fashionable Fur Coats and Sets—Unusual Values

Blue Fox Sets

The season's most fashionable fur, dyed Blue Fox; several models of animal head Scarfs and large fancy Muffs.

Actual 125.00 Values 65.00

Trimmed Hudson Seal Coats

French model, full ripple yoke back, 42 inches long; collars of Kolinsky, Skunk, Chinchilla Squirrel, Ermine and Fitch.

Actual 195.00 Values 115.00

Exceptional Values Offered in Misses' Department—Third Floor.

Misses' and Small Women's Suits and Coats

Sizes 14, 16 and 18 Years, or 32, 34 and 36 Bust Measure

Misses' Suits

Misses' Suits of Broadcloth, Gabardine and Tailor Serge, in the newest colors and trimmings.

Regular 25.00 Values 18.00

Misses' Suits of Corduroy and other fashionable materials, including models of cloth, trimmed with fur.

Regular 35.00 Values 25.00

Misses' Fur Trimmed Velvet and Cloth Suits, short coat models, in Black, Brown, Green and Blue.

Regular 39.75 Values 29.75

Misses' Coats

Misses' Rough Mixture Coats, also Zibeline, in plain colors, several belted and sport models.

Regular 23.75 Values 15.00

Misses' Fur Trimmed Coats of Pebble Cheviot, collar of Skunk Opossum; Satin lined throughout.

Regular 27.50 Values 19.75

Coats of Corduroy, Broadcloth, Seal Plush and other fashionable materials, Silk lined throughout.

Regular 35.00 Values 25.00

Misses' Dressy Suits, 35.00 to 55.00 Misses' Dressy Coats, 29.75 to 50.00

An Extraordinary Offering of Unusual Values in

Women's Fur Trimmed Velvet Hats

About 185 Hats, each a distinctive and original model, featuring latest approved shapes and colorings, trimmed with Mole, Skunk, Silver Squirrel, Seal, Fitch, and Ermine Fur. Regular 20.00 Values — 10.00

Women's Exclusive Footwear

Latest approved styles of Lace and Button Boots, in desirable Leathers and Fabrics. We direct special attention to Lace Boots with Fawn and Gray Buckskin tops, Patent and Gun Metal Calfskin vamps and heel foxing, Spanish Louis heels.

Special 4.00 — 5.00 6.00 7.00 8.00 — New Model, 7.50

Special for Monday—Fawn Cloth Top Button Boots with Patent Coltskin vamps and heel foxing, light welted sole, Spanish Louis leather heels. Regular 5.50 Value — 4.00

Gidding
FIFTH AVENUE
NEW YORK
"The Paris Shop of America"

will begin tomorrow

Supplementary Displays of very late Paris modes, also introducing the new ideas of their own American designers—

including

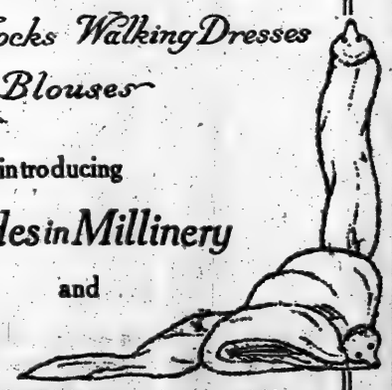
Tailleur Suits Costumes Tailleur
Evening Gowns
Afternoon Gowns
Dancing Frocks Walking Dresses
Blouses

Also introducing

New Modes in Millinery

and

Furs



J. M. Gidding & Co.
584-586 and 588 Fifth Avenue 46th and 47th Sts.

Simon INC.

We Design and Create Original

Model Gowns

You are invited to INSPECT OUR COLLECTION

Gowns Hats Wraps Furs

535 Fifth Ave. (Bet. 44th & 45th Sts.)

E. KUMKE
MANUFACTURING FURRIER

RICH FURS

Distinctiveness in Style

Thoroughness in Workmanship

Moderation in Price

19 West 38th St., Between 5th and 6th Ave.

PRISONER IN TEARS AT ESPIONAGE TRIAL

Lody Admits a Commission to Furnish English Information to Germany.

AN EX-NAVAL LIEUTENANT

Says He Had Orders to Send News of the Fleet, but Not to Do Any Spying.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—Karl Hans Lody, alias Charles A. Inglis, charged with espionage and on trial for his life before a court-martial under the Presidency of Lord Cheylesmore, entered the witness box in the Middlesex Guildhall this afternoon as soon as the prosecution had closed its case.

Lody this afternoon gave an outline of his mission to England. He said that formerly he was a senior Lieutenant in the German Navy, but that later he was transferred to the reserve. He obtained an appointment as tourist agent for the Hamburg-American Line. Incidentally, he said, he was well known in New York society. When in Berlin last July, Lody said, he received instructions from a superior naval officer whose name he was pledged not to reveal. His instructions were to select a route to New York. He was not to start for America, but was to remain in England until the first naval encounter was fought between Germany and England, and give information regarding the actual losses to the British fleet. He was then to proceed to New York.

Lody said also that he had been instructed to keep track of the movements of the British fleet, but that he had been warned not to do any spying.

Replying to counsel, he admitted that such instructions caused him uneasiness, but he was assured that he was sufficiently American in appearance to disarm suspicion.

Lody remarked in the course of his recital that he had married two years ago an American woman of German descent. This matrimonial venture, however, was a failure, and the marriage was dissolved, his father-in-law paying him $10,000 "to compensate me for my financial losses."

The prisoner explained that he told the man who gave him his instructions in Berlin that he could not travel without the necessary documents. This official had replied that he must travel as an American; and, Lody added, "in consequence of that I received an American passport."

Lody, who went once or twice while testifying, said that it was his intention when he married to become an American citizen. He claimed membership in several New York societies, such as the Japan, Peace, and Philippine Societies. Last Summer he served on Emperor William's yacht, the Meteor.

Owing to the character of the evidence given this afternoon, the public was excluded from the courtroom. The trial was adjourned until tomorrow.

There was a sensational incident in the course of Lody's examination. A man who throughout the trial had occupied a seat on one of the War Office benches, and who was supposed to be connected with this branch of the Government, was suddenly pounced upon by detectives and removed from the building under a military escort.

LODY WELL KNOWN HERE.

Once Engaged in Hamburg-American Tourist Business.

Karl Hanz Lody, who is undergoing trial by court-martial in London on a charge of espionage, is known in New York as an employe of the Hamburg-American steamship line. Persons who traveled around the world with him on Hamburg-American liners told a TIMES reporter yesterday of his career.

The information given by these persons also confirmed the dispatch from Omaha that Lody was the same man who married a daughter of Gottlieb Storz, a wealthy brewer of that city.

"Lody is a German," said one of the men who was a member of a party which made a world tour in the Hamburg-American steamship Cleveland in 1910. "He was employed as a guide by a prominent tourist agency in this city. He was versatile, quick-witted, and had many pleasing ways. He was especially attractive to the young women on the liner. His strong German tendencies were noticeable in his habit of pointing out things of special interest to Germans."

One of those who knew him said that Lody had been an officer on one of the Hamburg-American steamers before coming to the tourist agency. He made two tours around the world for this agency, and in that time he learned every detail of the business which the touring agency had worked up in ten years of hard work. He appropriated all this knowledge, and the next year he was back in the employ of the Hamburg-American Line.

It was pointed out as significant that the Hamburg-American Line after taking Lody back had sent the steamship Cleveland around the world on its own tours. And Lody, it was said, became the booking agent and guide for future around-the-world trips of the Cleveland under the steamship company's management.

"He spied on us for a year," said an officer of the tourist agency yesterday. "He made no pretense of never having been with the Hamburg-American Line. He brought letters telling of his connection with that company. We were very glad to get rid of him."

None of the tourists who were guided by Lody could recall that he had ever pointed out any details concerning England's armaments. He was most observing, they said, and used his keen eyes to advantage. They knew him only as Mr. Lody, the tourists said, and not as Charles A. Inglis, the name he gave when arrested in London.

SAY GERMANS WON IN AFRICA.

Report of Belgian Defeat Reaches Berlin—Other Information.

BERLIN, Oct. 31, (By Wireless Telegraphy to Sayville, L. I.)—The following was contained in the information given out for the press today in official quarters:

German military authorities deny as fables almost all the statements regarding the German 16-inch howitzers which are being circulated in Germany and abroad. The tests of these guns began six years ago, and German artillerymen have been trained in the use of them for several years. The secret of these guns was preserved with remarkable success.

The Italian newspaper, Stampa, reports that German troops in East Africa have inflicted complete defeat on troops from the Belgian Congo at a point near Kissenji.

A special correspondent of the Frankfort Gazette in East Prussia reports that there is now a total of 40,000 civilians of East Prussia who are missing as a result of the Russian atrocities in that district.

In consequence of the ill-treatment of German civilians in England the General in command of the German Army Corps stationed at Altona has declared that if Great Britain does not liberate these Germans all Englishmen in Germany fit for military service will be arrested.

The Mattino, published in Rome, declares that the revolt in the Union of South Africa is increasing and that the insurgents are well armed, well equipped, and well led. The Daily News of London warns against underrating this revolt.

The Italians are much incensed at the seizure and detention at Gibraltar of four Italian steamers from the United States. The Idea Nazionale declares that these seizures are illegal and that the cargoes on board the vessels are destined for Italian firms. Two thousand seven hundred Italian passengers are being detained at Gibraltar.

The British official statements concerning the weakness of the economic and financial situations in Germany and Austria are wild chimeras of their authors, and the allegation that Swiss contractors are being paid with the German war loan is a misstatement that long ago was refuted. The Austrian crown has never been more than 25 per cent. under par, and it is today only 4½ per cent. under par.

The morning papers of Berlin give much space to Turkey's "effective start" in the campaign, but they refrain from commenting on the probable effect of her action on the outcome of the war or on the possibilities of developments in the Balkans.

The Ottoman Government declares that when the Russian Navy laid mines in the waters of the Bosporus the Turkish Navy opened fire.

The temperature at Archangel now registers five degrees. As a result of this cold the White Sea soon will be frozen.

The correspondent at Dunkirk of The Tribuna of Rome reports that the French soldiers have completely broken down. France's colonial troops, especially those from Africa, are benumbed by the cold.

Several official English statements have endeavored to explain the success of the German war loan by saying that the subscription of one-quarter of the deposits in all savings banks was compulsory. This is proved to be a stupid lie by the fact that the deposits in all German savings bank amount to 20,000,000,000 marks ($5,000,000,000,) while the savings banks subscribed only 884,000,000 marks to the loan.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—A dispatch from Amsterdam to Reuter's Telegram Company says that, according to the German papers, Major Ernst Basserman, a National Liberal member of the Reichstag, has been appointed Military Adjutant to the Governor of Antwerp. Hitherto Major Basserman has been commander of an ammunition column in the eastern war area.

COMPLAIN OF SWISS.

Germany and France Say They Don't Observe Neutrality.

BERNE, via Paris, Oct. 31.—Although the Swiss Government is endeavoring to maintain strict neutrality in the European conflict, it has received protests from both Germany and France. The German complaint is that coal is being shipped into France from Switzerland, while France charges that cattle, especially calves, are being exported to Germany.

Switzerland still maintains nominally 200,000 men under arms, but about one-fourth of these are allowed to leave their posts at a time, to visit their homes and work at their callings. The Swiss people are divided in their sympathies, and notices are posted in the hotels and elsewhere suggesting that there should be no public expression of opinion regarding the war.

TELL HOW THE KAISER ACTS AT THE FRONT

Mayor of Weimar and German Painter Impressed by His Great Confidence.

Two personal views of the German Kaiser at his war headquarters are given in passages from German newspapers quoted in The London Times of Oct. 19 just received here. One, from a letter written by the Burgomaster of Weimar, who is a Reserve Officer, read:

"The Emperor was with us yesterday. What he said had such a cheerful ring, and made us so happy, that I should like the impression to reach Weimar too. He ended with the words: 'Well, boys, before the leaves fall from the trees here, we shall all be back in the dear Fatherland.' The words are a symptom of the absolute confidence of the Emperor in the victory of German arms. This afternoon the Imperial Chancellor was also in our village to visit his son, who is serving with the Breslau Body Cuirassiers. I saw the Chancellor standing for a long time in the road. He was extremely cheerful, and the hints he gave about the future shaping of Europe were based upon the assumption, as a matter of course, that Germany's victory would be complete."

The other was from a letter written by the well-known Colonial painter, Vollbehr, who is one of the official painters of battles with the German Army in the field. He wrote:

"At the desire of the Emperor I was required to show him all the forty pictures that I have painted. The Emperor was in a very confident mood, and his pride in his brave army and his German people flashed from his eyes at every word. I won much praise, and it was evident that my pictures, most of which I painted under fire, gave the Emperor pleasure. I had the opportunity of seeing the Emperor in conversation with his Generals, among them Gens. von Heeringen, von Haehnisch, and von Liethen. They stood in the beautiful park before the beautiful Prefecture of —— and gazed away into the far distance."

FIRST SUPPLIES ARRIVE.

American Secretary at The Hague Sends Them On to Belgium.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Secretary of the American Legation at The Hague today received at Rotterdam the provisions sent by the American Relief Committee, according to a Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam. The supplies were at once transshipped for Antwerp and Brussels, where they will be distributed.

Peasants in the northern portion of the Duchy of Brabant complain that Belgian refugees are plundering their fields.

STORE OPEN TUESDAY (ELECTION DAY.)

47-49 West 42d St.

Renard

COMMENCING TOMORROW: WILL HOLD A MOST

Stupendous Suit Sale

A general REDUCTION of our entire stock, augmented by special purchases made expressly for this sale. It's an unequalled opportunity to select high-class garments at the price of the commonplace. The styles are exquisite—the fabrics and colors are sufficiently extensive to assure most pleasing selection.

Following Partial List is Suggestive of What the Values Really Are:

SUITS of Broadcloths and Gabardines; short models; Peau de Cygne lined, warmly interlined; value $39.75. Sale special 25.00

SUITS trimmed with real fur; six styles; complete range of colors and sizes; new model skirts; copies of models selling at $75.00 and up. Sale special..... 29.75

Chiffon Velvet, Velveteen, Corduroy Suits

A diversity of up-to-date fur trimmed models: Specially priced at 24.75 29.75 39.75

Value $35.00 Value $42.50 Value $55.00

COATS of fine quality Broadcloths, Chinchillas, Corduroys and novelty materials, half lined with guaranteed satin, and interlined. Values $24.75. Sale special..... 14.75

CORDUROY COATS

WITH RACCOON COLLAR, lined with Peau de Cygne and interlined; in navy, brown, Oxford, black and white; made to sell for $45.00. Sale special..... 29.75

FUR REDUCTIONS

Persian Lamb Coats

The new 1915 models, Leipsig dyed, lustrous skins, beautifully lined with various colored brocade silk. Specially priced $90. $120. $135.

Manufactured to sell from $150.00 to $300.00

HUDSON SEAL COATS

Genuine muskrat—Chapal dyed (full skins)—the most approved models—various linings of brocaded satin; some with contrasting fur collars of Skunk, Fitch, Civet Cat, etc., at $70. $80. $90.

Values from $110.00 to $125.00

FRENCH SEAL COATS

Full solid, lustrous pelts, fine quality silk linings; newest models; some with contrasting fur collars of Skunk, Fitch, Civet Cat, etc., at $40. $50. $60.

Values from $65.00 to $100.00

Each garment and piece is of the choicest grade—selected for its beauty and intrinsic value, and is the product of makers whose knowledge of styles and fashions is immediately recognizable.

47-49 W. 42d St. Renard

Stern Brothers

42nd and 43rd Streets, West of Fifth Avenue.

Maillard Luncheon and Tea Room on the Fifth Floor

Are showing in all of their departments the most desirable class of seasonable merchandise which is constantly being replenished by weekly shipments from their Paris, Berlin, and London staffs of resident buyers who, owing to the disturbed conditions abroad, have been able to consummate unusually advantageous purchases, which are being offered at most attractive prices.

Women's Distinctive Apparel for Autumn and Winter

Tailored Suits

Are assembled in distinguished assortments, emphasizing the newest style notes and ranging from the plain strictly tailored models to the most elaborate effects, incorporating combinations of materials and trimmings in an artistic blending of colorings, and offering a wide selection at most attractive prices.

Very Special for Monday:

Women's Suits

of needlecloth, wool velour or broadcloth, with skirt and short coat trimmed with fur

at $32.50

Regular Value $47.50

Smart Furs

Our presentation of Imported and Domestic Furs consists of Coats and Wraps in the most fashionable lengths and for every occasion; Muffs and Neckpieces, both large and small, made from the most reliable furs in designs that are pre-eminently smart and correct for the ensuing season.

Very Special for Monday:

Natural Skunk Set, at $59.50

with fancy stock scarf and large muff.

Superior Caracul Coats,

40 inches long, with self or contrasting fur collars, at $55.00

Coats and Wraps

For Street, Motor and Evening wear, will be found in a most diversified variety of styles and fabrics, portraying the most authoritative departures in the new modes. The materials predominating today are broadcloth, tweeds, mixtures, zibelines, wide wale cheviot, English corduroy, chiffon velvet and novelty silks.

Very Special for Monday:

Women's Coats

of wide wale English corduroy, trimmed with large collar of skunk raccoon,

at $37.50

Regular Value $55.00

Incomparable Values in Dress Silks and Velvets

FOR Monday and Tuesday, will present a rare opportunity to secure the most wanted weaves and colorings of the season, greatly underpriced for these qualities and widths:

$2.50 and 2.75 Satin Charmeuse and genuine All Silk Canton Crepe, 40 ins. wide, yd. $1.25

In white, ivory, cream and black, and a complete assortment of this season's popular evening, afternoon and street shades,

$15.00 to 27.50 High Grade Metal Brocades, 27 to 44 inches wide, - - yard $7.50

All this season's designs and colorings, on satin and chiffon grounds, light and dark shades, with silver, steel and gold effects.

$6.50 Imported Black Chiffon Velvet, 41 inches wide, soft finish, - - yard $3.85

Women's and Misses' Petticoats

FASHIONED to accord with the present modes, are shown for street and evening wear in chiffon, crepe de chine, pussy willow, crepe taffeta, messaline and silk Jersey, at favorable prices.

Tomorrow we will dispose of an advantageous purchase of

1800 Silk Petticoats at $1.95

Made of silk Jersey or messaline; Regular Value $3.00

An Unusual Dress Goods Sale

Monday, at Exceptionally Low Prices

Imported Velour de Laine and Gabardine,

50 and 54 inches wide; in plain and self-colored stripes and cross bar weaves, in black and fashionable colors.

Former prices from $2.45 to 3.50 a yard, at $1.85

Imported Wool Faille and Crepe Cheviots,

50 and 54 inches wide; medium weight, suitable for suits and dresses; in black and a full range of the new Fall colors.

Former price $2.00 a yard, at $1.38

Advance Holiday Offering of Jewelry

MONDAY, very appropriate for gifts, at prices that should command instant attention:

Gun Metal and Gold Plated Vanity Cases, $2.95, 3.50, 5.00

Plain thin models, many with watches; Value $3.75 to 9.75

Indra Pearl Necklaces, - - - - at $15.00

Graduated pearls; replica in weight and color of the real; Value $35.00

Artistic Lamps and Shades

To-morrow, at 40% Less Than Regular Prices

INCLUDED are Imported Library, Boudoir and Table Lamps, with French bronze mountings and hand-painted colored china columns, complete with shades. Prices are

Now $4.85, 9.75, 14.75 to 50.00

Were $10.50, $16.00, $28.50 to $85.00

Imported Lamp Shades, - at $2.00, 5.00, 7.50 to 25.00

Formerly $4.95 to 45.00

An Important Sale of Household and Decorative Linens.

Will be held, Tomorrow, on the Second Floor, presenting every Thanksgiving requirement, at most liberal reductions.

Heavy Double Damask Table Cloths,

In the season's newest designs; circular and square, including wide satin stripes.

2 by 2 yds., . . at $2.50, 2.95
Regularly $3.75 and 4.50

2 by 2½ yds., . . at $3.25, 3.95
Regularly $4.50 and 5.50

2 by 3 yds., . . at $3.75, 4.75
Regularly $5.25 and 6.75

2¼ by 2¼ yds., . at $3.75, 4.50
Regularly $5.00 and 6.00

Napkins to match, dz. $2.75, 3.75, 4.95
Regularly $4.25 to 7.75

Linen Satin Damask Table Cloths,

2 by 2 yards, Regular price $2.75, at $1.75
2 by 2½ yards, " " 3.25, " 2.25
2 by 3 yards, " " 3.95, " 2.75

Napkins to match, dz. $1.85, 2.35, 2.75
Regularly $2.75, 3.25 and 3.95

Linen Damask Napkins, at $2.75 doz.
Dinner size; ready hemmed,
Regularly $4.00 dozen

Irish Linen Hand Emb'd Scarfs, at 95c
Hemstitched and scalloped,
Regularly $1.50 each

Real Madeira Afternoon Tea Napkins, . doz. $4.75, 5.25, 6.50
Regularly $7.00 to 9.00

Real Madeira Luncheon Sets,
18 pieces, . . at $3.95, 4.95, 6.75
Regularly $6.00 to 10.00

Handmade Cluny Lace Trimmed Linen Centerpieces, Each $1.95, 2.75, 3.50
Regularly $2.75 and 4.75

Cluny Lace Trimmed Dresser and Buffet Scarfs, Each $3.25, 4.25, 5.50
Regularly $4.50 to 7.50

The Upholstery Department

Has prepared for tomorrow, a most important offering of

Reversible Velour Portieres, at $22.50

With Oriental borders; Value $30.00

Also these remarkable reductions in desirable

Imported Lace Curtains

Handmade Cluny Curtains, at $8.75, 10.50 and 12.50
Values $12.25 to 18.50 Pair

Real Filet and Cluny Lace Panels and Stores, at $9.75, 11.50 to 19.50
Values $14.50 to 26.50 Each

Real Filet Lace Curtains, at $15.00, 18.50 to 32.50
Values $19.50 to 50.00 Pair

Also a limited quantity of high-grade Filet Curtains, Stores and Bed Sets
At Corresponding Reductions.

Oriental Rugs Specially Priced

FOR Tomorrow, will feature an advantageous purchase of the best weaves and designs in the most popular sizes, greatly below their real values:

Beloochistans, Bokharas and Hamadans, sizes about 2ft. 6 by 4ft., Formerly $9.50 to 15.00, at $5.75 to 9.75

Kurdistans, Fereghans and Moussouls, sizes about 3ft. 6 by 6ft. 6, Formerly $24.50 to 35.00, $14.85 to 19.75

Irans and Serebends, sizes 4ft. 6 by 6ft. 6, at $28.50 to 49.50
Formerly $45.00 to 90.00

Mahals, Serebends and Ghorovans, sizes 8ft. 6 to 10ft. 6 wide and 12 to 15ft. long, at $75.00 to 268.00
Formerly $125.00 to 400.00

Kirmanshahs and Sarouks, sizes 9 to 10ft. 6 wide by 10 to 14ft. long, at $175.00 to 378.00
Formerly $300.00 to 525.00

FOREIGN EXCHANGE SOLUTION REACHED

Provides for 60 or 90 Day Extension of Credit by British to This Country.

WHILE OUR EXPORTS MOUNT

Expected Largely to Obviate Gold Shipments — Sir George Paish Cables Plan to London.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The foreign exchange conference was continued at the Treasury Department today, with the result that a definite plan of action was agreed upon, and the details submitted by Sir George Paish to the British Government. The session was attended by Sir George and his colleague, Basil Blackett; by Gov. Hamlin and Paul M. Warburg, representing the Federal Reserve Board, and by Anthony N. Wiggin and Benjamin Strong, Jr., the New York bankers appointed by the bankers' conference ten days ago to represent the foreign exchange banks in the preparation of a plan to restore normal exchange conditions between the United States and Europe.

It is understood that one result of the deliberations is that there will not be an immediate demand by Great Britain for payment of current and accruing obligations of American business firms, and that it is the disposition of British creditors to provide for acceptances for sixty or ninety days, in which interval the balance of trade may turn in favor of the United States, and our commodities furnish a basis of payment that will largely obviate the shipment of gold abroad. It is estimated that with the present increasing volume of exports it will be only a matter of a few weeks until the pressing necessity to consider the export of gold is removed.

In addition to what is shown by the reports of export business in the last fortnight, it is urged that there will soon set in a demand with a rising market for American cotton for English spinners. Sir George Paish is frank to admit that this is likely to follow promptly the opening of the Cotton Exchanges in this country and abroad. In his opinion the English mills will be eager to buy at the present depressed price, and will buy in very large quantities in order to anticipate a rise of prices. This quickening of the market would, in turn, induce American consumers to buy before the price advanced further.

The view of the British financial expert does not eliminate, however, all expectation of payments in gold to meet the present and maturing debt of about $200,000,000 to English creditors. It is believed that a third, possibly a half, of this debt will have to be paid in gold. Much will depend on the view taken by the British Treasury of the plan for restoring the machinery of foreign exchange as to the export of American gold.

The American members of the conference are inclined to believe, after a careful study of present trade conditions, that as the days go by the necessity for using gold to pay debts abroad will diminish with a greatly increasing ratio, and that by Jan. 15, 1915, when the greater part of the maturing obligations will need to be paid, the amount to be met with gold will be so inconsiderable that the business of this country will hardly feel the burden.

RACE HORSE BATTLE VICTIM.

Lord Loris, Which Won Fortune in Purses, Killed at the Front.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—It is announced that James Hennessy's chestnut horse Lord Loris, which had captured many prize turf events and brought its owner a fortune in purses, was killed while serving at the front as an officer's mount.

The horse had been ridden by the jockey Alec Carter, who was recently killed in action while serving as a Captain of the French dragoons. The army, in requisitioning the horse, paid his owner 4,000 francs. ($800.)

Lord Loris's most recent turf achievement was the winning of the Grand Steeplechase de Paris, valued at $30,000, at the Auteuil course on June 21.

INQUIRIES FOR PRISONERS.

International Agency in Switzerland Has Received 165,000 Letters.

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 31. (via Paris.)—The International Agency for Prisoners of War is in receipt every day of about 10,000 letters making inquiry concerning prisoners, and of about 800 letters supplying information concerning soldiers in the hands of the enemy.

Since the opening of the war this office has received over 165,000 requests for information, especially about French prisoners in Germany and German prisoners in France.

QUEEN MARY THANKS AMERICAN RED CROSS

Appreciates Sending of Relief Ship—Nurse Appeals for More Supplies.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Through her private secretary, E. W. Wallington, Queen Mary of England has communicated to Mrs. Lewis Harcourt, one of the Honorary Secretaries of the American Women's War Relief Fund in London, her appreciation of the sending of the American Red Cross relief ship, with American surgeons and trained nurses and quantities of hospital supplies. The letter was forwarded to Miss Mabel T. Boardman, Chairman of the National Relief Board of the American Red Cross, by Mrs. Harcourt, and is as follows:

Buckingham Palace,
Sept. 30, 1914.

My Dear Mrs. Harcourt:

The Queen commands me to write and ask you to be so good as to convey to Miss Hay and the other ladies, nurses, and doctors, connected with the American ship Red Cross, an expression of her Majesty's sincere appreciation of the kindly and generous assistance they are rendering to our wounded soldiers and sailors.

The Queen is interested to hear that the dispatch of this ship has been mainly the work of women, and her Majesty feels sure that this friendly action on the part of the American ladies will receive the deep gratitude of the people of this country.

Believe me, yours very sincerely,
E. W. WALLINGTON.

In a letter to Miss Boardman Mrs. Harcourt said:

"We feel it a very great privilege that one of the units sent by you should be allowed to work at our American Women's Hospital."

"We have 42,000 wounded in this little corner of Brittany alone," writes a personal friend of Miss Boardman, from Dinard. The letter is a pathetic appeal for more hospital supplies, and pictures the distressing conditions in some of the improvised hospitals.

"Even if we had money," she says, "it would be impossible to buy the things we most need over here. Wools are very scarce and anti-tetanus serum is very difficult to get. Cotton is disappearing.

"We have now within the radius of five miles over 5,000 wounded. In Dinard we have turned all of the large hotels and casinos into hospitals—ten in all, with about 3,000 beds. At St. Lunair, a suburb, there are four hospitals with 680 beds. At St. Malo and Parame are five other hospitals, with between 1,200 and 1,500 beds. Our only means of procuring supplies for our little neighborhood have long been exhausted. We have to try to get them from London by boat and from Paris by rail, and these are very uncertain. All the able-bodied women are nurses, no matter how ignorant.

"One morning last week, before 6 o'clock, 380 wounded men were brought in here without warning. We all went to work at once, but there were so few doctors that some of the men did not get their wounds dressed until the following day, and they had been traveling for four days. Some died. To give you an idea of the chaos existing: One of the nurses, a little society girl of 25, rushed up to me and asked if I would give her a 'piqure de morphine,' as she had to give it to a man, and had never seen it done. When I asked her for the doctor's order she replied, 'Oh, I haven't any order, but he has not slept for five nights and says he must have it.' She seemed to think it very unkind when I refused to give the morphine.

OLYMPIC STILL HELD UP.

Liner May Proceed to Belfast to Land Her Passengers.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The White Star Line steamer Olympic is still lying at Lough Swilly and has not yet landed any of her passengers. No communication is permitted between the ship and the shore.

It is expected that the Olympic, which sailed from New York on Oct. 21, will proceed to Belfast within a day or two. She is said to have put into Lough Swilly because of a warning received against mines in the North Channel.

The following cable message concerning the Olympic was received at the White Star offices here last night from Liverpool:

"Olympic all well with passengers aboard. Lough Swilly authorities refuse permission to leave. When safe passage is assured, steamer proceeds to Belfast to land passengers, probably tomorrow or Monday."

REFUGEE SHIP TORPEDOED.

Amiral Ganteaume Said to Have Been Sunk by Submarine.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—It is officially announced that the refugee ship Amiral Ganteaume, says a Bordeaux dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company, was torpedoed by a German submarine, and did not strike a mine, as was at first thought.

TO FINE GERMAN SHIP.

Cuba Expected to Punish Bavaria for Using Wireless.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Oct. 31.—A fine of $1,000 will probably be assessed on the German liner Bavaria for using her wireless after being especially forbidden by a Presidential decree in an effort to preserve Cuba's neutrality. The port regulations required the wireless room to be sealed while ships are in port.

The Government learned that the Bavaria was sending and receiving messages and sent out police in the bay who ascertained the truth. The Bavaria has been here since the outbreak of the war. She is heavily stocked with coal and provisions and was expected to supply a German cruiser.

28 BRITISH OFFICERS IN NEW DEATH LIST

32 Wounded and 8 Missing—Lord Lansdowne's Son Among Those Killed.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Official Press Bureau issued tonight the names of twenty officers killed, eight who died o fwounds, thirty-two wounded and eight missing, received from headquarters under date of Oct. 26.

Among the killed was Capt. Sir Francis Ernest Waller, Royal Fusiliers, while among those who died of wounds were Lieut. Col. D. E. Ward, Middlesex Regiment, and Lieut. Col. W. L. Loring, Royal Warwickshires.

Among the wounded are Major the Hon. Clement B. O. Freeman-Mitford, Tenth Hussars, heir of Lord Redesdale, and Lieut. Sir Richard Vincent Sutton.

Lord Nairne, the second son of the Marquis of Lansdowne, Conservative leader in the House of Lords, has been killed in action. He was a Major in the First Dragoons and served in the South African war.

Lord Nairne was born in 1874. In 1909 he married Lady Violet Mary Elliott, daughter of the fourth Earl of Minto, who was a former Governor General of Canada. Since 1910 Lord Nairne had been an Equerry-in-Waiting to King George.

Capt. Sir Francis Ernest Waller was 34 years old. He succeeded his father to the title of Baronet, and served in the Boer War, remaining in South Africa from 1899 until 1902. The title will go to his brother, the Hon. Wathen Arthur Waller, as Capt. Waller was unmarried.

The Hon. Clement Bertram Ogilvy Freeman-Mitford is the eldest son of the Lord Redesdale. He served in South Africa and was severely wounded there, and received the Queen's medal with four clasps.

Sir Richard Vincent Sutton is the sixth Baronet, the title having been created in 1772. He is the only son of the fifth Baronet and Constance, a daughter of Sir Vincent Corbet, and is 23 years old. He was educated at Eton and succeeded his father in 1891. The family estate consists of 13,000 acres, exclusive of the London estate, which comprises some of the richest portions of the West End. It is said that he divides the whole of the fashionable and club district with the Duke of Westminster, and he is considered to be one of the richest men in England. His father, Sir Richard Sutton, was the owner of the racing yacht Genesta, with which he raced the Puritan for the America Cup in 1885.

NEW BASE FOR SUBMARINES.

Germans Shipped Them by Rail to Ostend, Says J. M. Allison.

J. M. Allison, a war correspondent who returned on the Lusitania yesterday said that he was in Ostend when the Germans marched in and placed the city under martial law.

Mr. Allison said that a German officer had told him that one of the first things the Germans had done after the capture of Ostend was to take four submarines apart at Cuxhaven and send them on a train to Ostend, to be used against the English fleet.

SAYS GERMANY FEARS AN ATROCITIES INQUIRY

British Report That Her Ambassadors Are Instructed to Prevent It.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—A correspondent of The Standard in Berlin says that the German Government has instructed its representatives abroad to exert all their influence to discourage the movement for the holding of an international gathering of neutrals in Switzerland to inquire into the charges of inhumanity and violation of the laws of war alleged against Germany by other belligerents.

It is said that special instructions on this subject have been sent Count von Bernstorff, and that Germany is particularly desirous of preventing the United States from inquiring too minutely into her conduct of the war.

SUBMARINES AT ANTWERP.

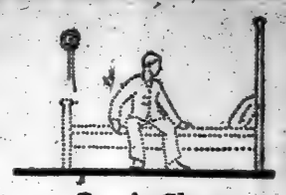
Six Which Arrived by Rail Are Being Tested in Dock.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—A dispatch from Rotterdam to The Evening News says:

"Esschen (north of Antwerp) has been occupied by German soldiers and marines, who are preparing Winter quarters there.

"The Germans are strengthening and mining the roads around Brussels, Grammont, Antwerp, Lokeren, and Ghent.

"Six submarines, which arrived at Antwerp by rail, are now being fitted and tried in dock."



Can't Sleep

Kept awake by "jumpy" nerves and poor digestion, worrying over the day's perplexing problems, this man doesn't know what it is to sleep a long, refreshing sleep. There is nothing in the world that would do him more good than the greatest body builder the world has ever known. Used for general debility, convalescence, and for mothers while nursing. Makes flesh and blood. At all druggists, 25c. a bottle.

Johann Hoff's
MALT EXTRACT

The New York Times Mid-Week Pictorial War Extra contains, besides 16 magnificent war pictures by Rotogravure process, the double-page reproduction of "The Dream" by Edouard Detaille, the most poetic and popular work of the great master, which has attracted thousands of art lovers to the Luxembourg in Paris. By mail, 10 cents; $1.25 for three months; $2.50 for six months; $5.00 a year postpaid. The New York Times, Times Square, New York.—Advt.

CHARITIES. CHARITIES. CHARITIES. CHARITIES.

Belgian Relief Fund Belgian Relief Fund

Millions of Belgians Face Starvation

An Appeal to You--and Yours

A plain duty confronts the American people today. It is vastly more than a charitable duty—it is a duty of humanity.

Thousands of our fellow-beings, mostly women and children, are facing actual starvation and death.

They have no food, no shelter from the severe Winter which is approaching, and in most cases very scanty clothing.

Practically all of Belgium is today a vast desert of ruins. There is no food, there is no work, there is no money. But there are hundreds of thousands of refugees wandering aimlessly about, and sleeping in the fields or woods or in shattered buildings—for their homes have been destroyed.

Here is a plain question for the American people to answer:—Shall we allow these poor Belgian people to starve—to freeze?

We sometimes say, "Oh, they'll get along somehow"; but they will NOT get along unless we help them. The plain fact is that thousands of them will die.

The American people have been blessed with peace and comparative plenty. We are far removed from this most terrible of wars, and our children are not crying for food.

Shall we turn our backs on this appalling destitution in Belgium?

Shall we turn a deaf ear to the cries of these poor women and children for food and shelter from the cold?

Americans have never disregarded the cry of sufferers. It is a duty we owe to help these poor people.

They are looking and appealing to us—no one else can help them.

Sufficient food supplies no longer can be bought in London. Ambassador Page has returned to the Belgian Relief Committee $50,000 cabled him for foodstuffs to be forwarded for distribution in Belgium. His cable stated:—"Need in Belgium cannot be exaggerated. Owing to shortage of food here and in Holland, it is imperative that a supply be started from the United States immediately."

The London American Relief Commitee yesterday cabled $150,000 to the Belgian Relief Committee in New York, with which it is co-operating, to be turned into food, commenting:—"Situation is daily becoming more critical and it is most essential to arrange for shipping supplies from New York at once." The Belgian Relief Committee added $150,000. A steamer is being chartered.

The immediate demands and previous remittances to Antwerp, Holland and The Hague practically deplete the Belgian Relief Fund here, to which about $260,000 has been contributed to date.

One steamer-load of provisions is but a beginning. Numbers of steamers full of provisions and clothing should go forward at once. The Committee appeals to all to help.

Send $1,000 if you can. If not, send $100, or $10, or $5, or $1, or even 10 cents. Your contribution will help to rescue from starvation or death some fellow human being—some poor mother or child.

Don't delay—send in your contribution at once—today. It will be acknowledged promptly, and you will know the satisfaction which comes from having joined in this great work of charity and humanity.

BELGIAN RELIEF FUND

"He gives twice who gives quickly."

Yesterday's Contributions, $9,610.65. To Date, $264,936.72

Smallest Contribution, ONE CENT. Largest Contribution, $10,000.

FOR CONVENIENCE PLEASE USE THIS COUPON
J. P. Morgan & Co., 23 Wall St., New York.

GENTLEMEN: Herewith I inclose my contribution $_____ for the Belgian sufferers. Your acknowledgment is requested.

.....

.....

Make checks payable to J. P. Morgan & Co., for "Belgian Relief Fund."

.....

BELGIAN RELIEF COMMITTEE
10 Bridge St., New York

REV. J. F. STILLEMANS, President
ROBERT W. DE FOREST, Chairman of Executive Committee
EMANUEL HAVENITH, Belgian Minister to the U. S.
PIERRE MALI, Consul General

Lyman Abbott, Otto T. Bannard, Armand Batta, James M. Beck, Cornelius N. Bliss, Robert S. Brewster, Henry W. De Forest, Cleveland H. Dodge, Lionel Hagenaers, Thomas H. Hubbard, Rev. O. A. Nye, W. Barclay Parsons, Bernard Rasp, John Van Rickstal, Francis Lynde Stetson, Thomas Thacher, Frank A. Vanderlip, Alfred T. White

L

This Store Will Be Open All Day Tuesday, Election Day

Best & Co.

Will Hold a Number of Important Sales Tomorrow, Monday

Emphasizing our very large assortments, in all Departments, of desirable popular priced merchandise.

A Sale of Suits Trimmed with Hudson Seal

for Women and Misses—2nd Floor

35.00 45.00

Entirely new, distinctive models of fine broadcloth with Hudson seal collars; warmly interlined.

Women's Crepe de Chine Blouses

5.75

A Very Unusual Value

Very smart, new semi-tailored models of superior white crepe de chine.

A Sale of 25 Fur Trimmed Hats

for Women and Misses—2nd Floor

14.50

Original, exclusive models from our own workrooms; no duplicates.

A Sale of Women's Neckwear

Actual Values 95c to 1.35

65c

Soft rolling collars of sheer hemstitched linen, hand-embroidered and trimmed with lace.

A Sale of Women's Sweaters

The Actual Value is 8.75

6.50

Coat sweaters of artificial silk with Vshaped neck, in rose, copenhagen or white.

Very Important Sales Monday for Girls and Misses

Again demonstrating our superior values at Popular Prices.

A Sale of Fur Trimmed Suits

Sizes 14 to 17 years—4th Floor

25.00

Of fine broadcloth, wool velour or cheviot, in very smart, new dressy models.

A Sale of Fur Trimmed Dresses for Misses, 14 to 17 years—4th Floor

22.50

Of excellent quality velveteen combined with satin, in an entirely new, smart model.

Misses' Special Winter Coats

Sizes 14 to 17 years

12.75

Of Scotch mixtures, zibelines or cheviots.

A Sale of Girls' Guimpes

85c

The Regular Price of which is 1.25

High neck, long sleeves and tucked yoke with embroidery insertion. 4 to 12 years.

Imported Austrian Velour Hats

for Girls and Misses—4th Floor

5.75 to 12.00

Presenting a choice selection of Austrian Velours in black and colors.

Children's Night Drawers

95c

The Former Prices were up to 1.45

Of outing flannel, striped blue and white or pink and white, with or without feet. 1 to 12 yrs.

LILIPUTIAN BAZAAR
Trade Mark—Copyrighted

A Sale of Children's Sweaters

Much Below the Regular Prices

2.75 3.50 4.50

Sizes 1 to 3 years—3rd Floor

Of fine Angora cashmere or imported Shetland wool; in colors or white. Prices according to style and size.

TOYS

Best's Toy Shop
Features Popular Prices

Many customers have begun to select for Christmas, and our "ALL-THE-YEAR TOY SHOP" can help you, for we have received 95% of our orders placed abroad, and are showing larger stocks of domestic toys than ever.

A Big Stock of Juvenile Christmas Books

FIFTH AVENUE . . . . . At 35th Street

PUTS COPPER AND OIL ON CONTRABAND LIST

England Transfers These and Other Important Commodities to the Absolute Class.

UNITED STATES MAY OBJECT

Radical Changes in Catalogue of Articles That May Be Seized—Ask Kroonland's Release.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Radical additions to the classifications of articles to be treated as absolute contraband are contained in England's revised list which was made public today. The most important changes are the addition of unwrought copper and mineral oils to the absolute contraband list, which means that American copper and illuminating oil destined to Germany and Austria is subject to seizure and confiscation by British cruisers.

Although there is no official admission on the subject, it is believed here that the American Government will object, and perhaps protest, against the addition of copper, mineral oil, and some other articles to the list of absolute contraband. It was admitted by Mr. Lansing, Acting Secretary of State, today that there were some differences between the new British list and the American notion of what should be regarded as absolute contraband, but this was as far as he was willing to go.

A demand for the release of the American steamship Kroonland and her cargo of copper and rubber from further detention by the British naval authorities at Gibraltatr was made upon the British Government today by the United States. The Kroonland has 1,100 passengers on board. This demand was made on the basis of the State Department's understanding of the facts. The State Department understands that the 1,450 tons of copper and its consignments of rubber, for Italy and Greece, are not destined for the use of any enemy; that they are intended for neutral consignees in Greece and Italy, and on the basis of this information supplied by the firms in New York which made the shipments the United States asks that the Kroonland be released at once.

The Acting Secretary of State announcement on the matter today said:

With reference to the American steamer Kroonland, which sailed Oct. 15 from New York for Naples and Piraeus with consignments of copper and rubber, shipped to order by American citizens, which vessel has been detained at Gibraltar, the State Department has today addressed a communication to the American Ambassador at London instructing him to bring the case to the attention of the British Government, with the statement that the United States considers that, unless notification on the part of the British authorities has disclosed facts in relation to the detention of the vessel and cargo other than those known to this Government, both ships and cargo should be released at once.

With reference to shipments of copper on board the Italian steamers San Giovanni and Regina D'Italia, detained at Gibraltar, which cargoes do not appear to be destined for delivery in belligerent territory, the Department of State instructed the American Ambassador at London today to call this matter to the attention of the British Government and express the hope that the cargoes may be released at once.

The fact that the State Department made these representations after it was aware that unwrought copper was being treated by Great Britain as absolute instead of a conditional contraband was interpreted as indicating that the Government did not favor the inclusion of copper in the list of absolute contraband.

Under the Declaration of London the revised list cannot be made applicable to the Kroonland or to the Platuria, which has been detained at Stornoway, Scotland, with a cargo of oil because these vessels were not notified officially of the fact that oil and copper were now considered absolute contraband. The Declaration of London lays down the rule that a vessel cannot be deemed aware of a declaration of contraband when the declaration is made after she leaves port.

The revised British list of contraband was delivered by the British Foreign Office to Ambassador Page, who cabled it to the State Department. Here is the revised list:

Absolute Contraband.

Arms of all kinds, including arms for sporting purposes and their distinctive component parts.
Projectiles, charges, and cartridges of all kinds and their distinctive component parts.
Powder and explosives specially prepared for use in war.
Sulphuric acid.
Gun mountings, limber boxes, limbers, military wagons, field forges and their distinctive component parts.
Range finders and their distinctive component parts.
Clothing and equipment of a distinctively military character.
Saddle, draught, and pack animals suitable for use in war.
All kinds of harness of a distinctively military character.
Articles of camp equipment and their distinctive component parts.
Armor plates.
Haematite iron ore and haematite pig iron.
Iron pyrites.
Nickel or and nickel.
Ferrochrome and chrome ore.
Copper, unwrought.
Lead—pig, sheet, or pipe.
Aluminium.
Ferrosilica.
Barbed wire and implements for fixing and cutting same.
Warships, including boats and their distinctive component parts of such a nature that they can only be used on a vessel of war.
Aeroplanes, airships, balloons, and air craft of all kinds and their component parts, together with accessories and articles recognizable as intended for use in connection with balloons and air craft.
Motor vehicles of all kinds and their component parts.
Motor tires, rubber.
Mineral oils and motor spirits except lubricating oils.
Implements and apparatus designed exclusively for the manufacture of munitions of war for the manufacture or repair of arms or war materials for use on land and sea.

Conditional Contraband.

Foodstuffs.
Forage and feeding stuffs for animals.
Clothing, fabrics for clothing, and boots and shoes suitable for use in war.
Gold and silver in coin or bullion, paper money.
Vehicles of all kinds, other than motor vehicles, suitable for use in war, and their component parts.
Vehicles, craft, and boats of all kinds; floating docks, parts of docks; and their component parts.
Railway materials, both fixed and rolling stock, and materials for telegraphs, wireless telegraphs, and telephones.
Fuel other than mineral oil lubricants.
Powder and explosives, not specially prepared for use in war.
Sulphur.
Glycerine.
Horseshoes.
Harness and saddlery.
Hides of all kinds, dry or wet; pigskins, raw or dressed; leather, undressed or dressed, suitable for saddlery, harness, or military boots.
Field glasses, telescopes, chronometers, and all kinds of nautical instruments.

New Articles on List.

The new articles in the revised list are sulphuric acid, range finders and their distinctive component parts, iron pyrites, nickel ore and nickel, ferrochrome and chrome ore, unwrought copper lead in pigs, sheets or pipes, aluminum, ferrosilica, barbed wire and implements for fixing and cutting the same, motor vehicles of all kinds and their component parts, rubber and motor tires, mineral oils and motor spirits.

Only two of these groups of articles were treated as absolute contraband by the Declaration of London. They were barbed wire and implements for fixing and cutting the same, and balloons and flying machines and the distinctive component parts, together with accessories and articles recognizable as intended for use in connection with balloons and flying machines. Under the Declaration of London, rubber was treated as conditional contraband only, but the new British declaration proposes to make rubber as well as motor tires absolute contraband.

Before this revision of the list the British Government was treating as conditional contraband ferrochrome, unwrought copper, lead in pigs, sheets, or pipes, and rubber. It also treated motor vehicles as conditional contraband. Mineral oil was treated as conditional contraband under the designation of fuel. These have been shifted now to the absolute contraband list. This transfer is both significant and important. It means that these articles, as well as all the other articles on the new list of absolute contraband, are subject to capture and confiscation. Absolute contraband includes these articles which are peculiarly adapted to war, such as arms and ammunition and military and naval equipment. The American view of the way absolute contraband should be treated by a belligerent was announced in the informative statement issued Aug. 15 by the State Department over the signature of Cone Johnson, its Solicitor, as follows:

> When absolute contraband is destined to one of the countries at war, whether to the Government or to an individual of that country, it is subject to seizure and confiscation by any of the opposing belligerents when beyond the territory of the neutral Government from which it is shipped. The nationality of the vessel in which contraband of war is shipped is immaterial; it is subject to capture and destruction whether shipped in a neutral or enemy vessel.

The same position is set forth in Article 30 of the Declaration of London in this language:

> Absolutely contraband is liable to capture if it is shown to be destined to territory belonging to or occupied by the enemy, or to the armed forces of the enemy. It is immaterial whether the carriage of the goods is direct or entails transshipment or a subsequent transport by land. Article 39 of the Declaration of London says that contraband goods are liable to condemnation. Article 42 declares that goods which belong to the owner of the contraband and are on board the same vessel are liable to condemnation.

Goods Open to Seizure.

Article 44 provides that a vessel which has been stopped because she is carrying contraband and which is not liable to condemnation on account of proportion of contraband on board, may be allowed to continue her voyage if the master is willing to hand over the contraband to the belligerent warship. Article 37 declares that a vessel carrying goods liable to capture as absolute or conditional contraband may be captured on the high seas or in the territorial waters of the belligerents throughout the whole of her voyage, even if she touch a port of call before reaching the hostile destination. Still another applicable article, No. 40, provides that a vessel carrying contraband may be condemned if the contraband reckoned either by value, weight, volume, or freight forms more than half the cargo.

These articles are all quoted because they indicate the extreme significance of England's action in placing copper, oil, motor vehicles, lead, nickel ore, and other articles on the list of absolute contraband, making them subject to capture and confiscation the moment it can be established by evidence that they are destined to Germany or Austria.

Grain on Conditional List.

There are also some new items in the new British conditional contraband lists. They are sulphur, glycerine, hides of all kinds, dry or wet; pigskins, raw or dressed; leather, undressed or dressed and leather suitable for saddlery, harness, or military boots. There is also a broadening of the conditional contraband clause covering forage. The original British contraband list made forage and grain suitable for feeding animals conditional contraband. The revised list makes forage and feeding stuffs for animals conditional contraband, with grain included. This also is an extension of the Declaration of London.

The list included vehicles of all kinds, available for use in war, and their component parts. The revised list changes this to vehicles of all kinds, other than motor vehicles, suitable for use in war, and their component parts, making these conditional contraband, and shifting motor vehicles of all kinds and their component parts to the absolute list. The original list put fuel lubricants in as conditional contraband, but this has been modified to treat fuel other than mineral oil lubricants as conditional contraband, and transferring mineral oils and motor spirts, except lubricating oils, to the list of absolute contraband.

The Declaration of London listed twenty-seven articles as not being subject to restriction as contraband of war. This has been ignored and set aside by the new British contraband list, which makes rubber and nickel ore, as well as chrome ore and other metallic ores specifically mentioned, absolute contraband, and makes raw hides conditional contraband. The Declaration of London prohibited the declaring of any of these articles as contraband of war.

The articles in England's absolute list not comprised in the absolute list of the Declaration of London are sulphuric acid, range finders and their component parts; haematic iron ore and haematic pig iron, iron pyrites, nickel ore and nickel ferrochrome and chrome ore; unwrought copper; lead, pig sheet or pipe, aluminium, ferrosilica, motor vehicles, motor tires, rubber, and mineral oils and motor spirits. Aeroplanes and barbed wire were conditional contraband under the Declaration of London. In the new British list they are absolute contraband.

KROONLAND CASE IN DOUBT.

Prize Court Action Not Yet Decided Upon in London.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The case of the Red Star Line steamer Kroonland, from New York for Naples and Greece with a cargo of copper, detained by the British authorities at Gribaltar, is still under investigation. However, it has not been decided whether she is to go before a prize court.

The chief question seems to be the destination of the cargo of copper on board the vessel.

So far as is known, no question about the foreign reservists on board the Kroonland has been raised.

CANADA'S BAN ON NICKEL.

Will Watch American Refineries to Prevent Shipment to Germany.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 31.—The Canadian Government today placed an embargo on the exportation to any country at war with Great Britain of any articles which might be of use to them in prosecuting the war. A far-reaching contraband order adopted by the Dominion Cabinet also prohibits the exportation of contraband to any neutral country which may in turn re-export the materials to Great Britain's enemies.

Among the articles specifically mentioned as contraband are nickel, nickel ore, woolen goods, food, explosives, horses, fodder, leather, coal, copper, petrol, aeroplanes and barbed wire.

The United States, to which most of the Canadian nickel is shipped, is not included in the present contraband order. It is understood, however, that the Dominion Government will try to prevent Canadian nickel being sent to Britain's enemies by American refineries. If such shipments are made the order will be extended to the United States.

Canada possesses the largest and richest nickel deposits in the world, and as soon as Canadian refineries are able to handle the ore an export tax may be imposed.

HELD FOR PRIZE COURTS.

Italian Ships at Gibraltar Reported to Have War Materials.

GIBRALTAR, Oct. 31.—The Italian steamers Regina d'Italia and San Giovanni were seized by the British Navy as prizes owing to the fact that parts of their cargoes consisted of war material, it is said. The vessels will be held pending a decision of a prize court.

The Regina d'Italia and the San Giovanni were bound from American ports to Italy with cargoes of copper. Their seizure by the British caused a protest to be made to the State Department at Washington on Oct. 29 by representatives of four copper companies in New York. No official information of the seizure had been received by the State Department at that time.

SEIZED 6,000,000 CARTRIDGES.

Holland Also Got 30,000 Rifles and Other Stores from Interned Soldiers.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 31.—According to a local newspaper, a steamer of the Batavia Line has conveyed to the Dutch military depot at Delft 6,000,000 rounds of ammunition seized from the Belgian and French soldiers interned in Holland. This vessel, it is said, also carried some sea mines and shells from a Belgian monitor.

A second cargo of 30,000 rifles, 100 bicycles, and some automobiles is expected soon.

WON'T MOLEST THE CECILIE.

British and French Ambassadors Give Written Assurances.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The British Ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, gave written assurances today to the State Department that the German liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie would be unmolested by British ships while being transferred to Boston from Bar Harbor, Me., where she has been interned since her dash back to safety last August.

The French Ambassador, Jules J. Jusserand, has given similar assurances for France.

BRINDILLA LEAVES HALIFAX.

Standard Oil Tank Steamer Which Was Detained Sails for Egypt.

HALIFAX, N. S., Oct. 31.—The American tank steamer Brindilla, which was detained at Halifax after having been taken by a British cruiser off the New York Harbor and finally released by the British Government, sailed today for Alexandria, Egypt.

The Brindilla's sailing subsequent to release was delayed for three days by coaling and repairs to her damaged engines.

Arnold Constable & Co.

Offerings of Unusual Importance
Monday and Tuesday

FINE FUR COATS

Averaging 1-3 Less Than Regular Prices.

All of superior grade and in the season's smart models for Men, Women and Children.

SCARCELY TWO MODELS ALIKE. EACH GARMENT, MADE FROM FINE, DEPENDABLE SKINS, AND RICHLY LINED, IS A CHOICE SPECIMEN OF CLEVER DESIGNING

This unusual offering, advantageous and timely, merits immediate attention in this pre-eminently fashionable fur season.

Women's Fur Coats

	Formerly	NOW
BLACK PONY	$50.00	35.00
WHITE CONEY	85.00	50.00
TIGER CAT	87.00	55.00
CONEY	100.00	60.00
FRENCH SEAL	87.00	65.00
FRENCH SEAL	97.00	70.00
FRENCH SEAL	105.00	75.00
NATURAL PONY	105.00	85.00
CARACUL	150.00	100.00
FRENCH SEAL	165.00	125.00
FRENCH SEAL	175.00	125.00
FRENCH SEAL	225.00	135.00
HUDSON SEAL	225.00	170.00
HUDSON SEAL	210.00	175.00
BEAVER	325.00	225.00
CARACUL	320.00	250.00
HUDSON SEAL	395.00	300.00
CARACUL	495.00	375.00
MINK	950.00	650.00

Women's Fur-lined Coats

Of plain cloth, Tweeds and Mackinaw, lined with Squirrel or Hamster, in various styles, suitable for street or motoring.	30.00	25.00
	95.00	65.00
	100.00	70.00
	120.00	80.00
	125.00	80.00
	135.00	90.00

Men's Fur-lined Coats

Principally of plain cloth, with collars of various kinds of fur, lined with muskrat in different grades.	85.00	65.00
	115.00	80.00
	108.00	85.00
	125.00	100.00
	145.00	110.00
	150.00	115.00

Children's Fur Coats

LAMB'S WOOL	18.00	12.00
WHITE CONEY	23.50	18.00
WHITE CONEY	27.00	20.00

FINE LACE CURTAINS

Averaging ⅓ of Former Prices

172 pairs of the former value of $9,537.75 reduced to a closing value of $3,316.00.

CONSISTING OF REAL AND IMITATION LACE CURTAINS OF RARE AND EXQUISITE PATTERNS, ADAPTED TO THE MOST LUXURIOUS TYPE OF HOUSE FURNISHING.

Such an opportunity, coming but seldom, offers remarkable savings to those who take immediate advantage of this unusual event.

	Formerly Per Pair	NOW Per Pair
1 PAIR FILET LACE	$55.00	20.00
4 PAIRS FILET LACE	75.00	30.00
3 PAIRS FILET LACE	120.00	40.00
4 PAIRS FILET LACE	105.00	40.00
4 PAIRS FILET LACE	135.00	50.00
3 PAIRS CLUNY LACE	19.00	5.50
8 PAIRS CLUNY LACE	12.00	7.50
7 PAIRS CLUNY LACE	22.50	9.50
2 PAIRS CLUNY LACE	24.00	12.00
12 PAIRS CLUNY LACE	35.00	16.00
4 PAIRS CLUNY LACE	75.00	25.00
1 PAIR LACET ARABE	23.50	7.50
4 PAIRS LACET ARABE	28.00	8.50
8 PAIRS LACET ARABE	25.00	10.00
5 PAIRS BRUSSELS LACE	27.25	8.75
4 PAIRS BRUSSELS LACE	25.00	9.00
2 PAIRS BRUSSELS LACE	38.00	12.75
3 PAIRS BRUSSELS LACE	80.00	27.50
3 PAIRS ARABE LACE	35.00	10.00
5 PAIRS ARABE LACE	45.00	16.00
6 PAIRS ARABE LACE	60.00	17.00
1 PAIR ARABE LACE	270.00	45.00
1 PAIR ARABE LACE	315.00	60.00
6 PAIRS BRUGES LACE	135.00	40.00
6 PAIRS BRUGES LACE	140.00	45.00
2 PAIRS BRUGES LACE	200.00	80.00
3 PAIRS BRUGES LACE	265.00	85.00
2 PAIRS BRUGES LACE	300.00	90.00
1 PAIR RENAISSANCE LACE	17.50	4.50
2 PAIRS RENAISSANCE LACE	16.00	6.00
2 PAIRS RENAISSANCE LACE	20.00	8.00
1 PAIR RENAISSANCE LACE	70.00	16.00
1 PAIR MARIE ANTOINETTE	4.75	2.00
4 PAIRS MARIE ANTOINETTE	15.00	7.50
1 PAIR MARIE ANTOINETTE	16.00	10.00
2 PAIRS MARIE ANTOINETTE	65.00	25.00
13 PAIRS IRISH POINT LACE	14.00	6.50
2 PAIRS IRISH POINT LACE	18.00	6.75
17 PAIRS IRISH POINT LACE	16.75	8.25
12 PAIRS IRISH POINT LACE	22.00	9.75

Broadway & 19th Street

Franklin Simon & Co.

Fifth Avenue, 37th and 38th Streets

A Store of Individual Shops

Fall and Winter Apparel

For Women, Misses, Girls and Infants

The Following Special Offerings Monday

Women's Fur Trimmed Coats

Camel's Hair Belted Coats

Button-to-neck convertible rever Coat, of imported camel's hair zibeline, in navy blue, brown, black or green, detachable button belt, collar of Skunk Opossum fur, silk lined. Value $39.50 29.50

Velour Evening Wraps

New flare draped model of imported velvet velour, in turquoise, rose, sand, purple or black, silk lined throughout, large collar and cuffs of white mouffion fur. Value $59.50 29.50

Fur Collar Vicuna Coats

New "Cheruit" model of imported English vicuna, in green, brown, navy blue or black, new belted strap front and back, large double collar of natural Raccoon, silk lined throughout. Value $79.50 65.00

Plush Evening Wraps

Copy of "Callot" model of imported chiffon plush, in gold, rose, new blue or black, new yoke shirred back and cape sleeves, high double collar and cuffs of Skunk Opossum fur. Value $89.50 59.50

Women's Fur Trimmed Suits

Fur Trimmed Suits

Button-to-neck straight front model, semi-belted back, of imported broadcloth, in navy, black, brown or green, collar and cuffs of various furs, new circular flare skirt. Value $39.50 29.50

Velvet and Cloth Suits

Semi-Empire Coat of imported velveteen, in navy, black, brown or green, button-to-neck, with Skunk Opossum fur collar; circular skirt of broadcloth, with band of velveteen. Value $49.50 39.50

Fur Trimmed Velvet Suits

Of imported velveteen, in black, brown, green or navy, showing the new length coats and flare skirts, trimmed with Skunk Opossum fur. Value $59.50 45.00

Chinchilla Velour Suits

One-button Directoire Coat, with flare skirt of chinchilla velour, in brown, navy or black, collar and cuffs of silver kit coney. Value $69.50 59.50

Chiffon Velvet Afternoon Gowns

Copy of "Premet" model, of imported chiffon velvet, in black or dark brown, black satin surplice sleeves and underskirt.

39.50 Value $49.50

Chiffon Velvet Evening Gowns

Decollete model, in American beauty, gold, turquoise blue or black, trimmed with nets to match and silver bands.

55.00 Value $69.50

Sand and Putty Color Waists

New Colors and Models for Women and Misses.

Crepe de Chine Waists

Sand Color Crepe de Chine Waists.

Dressy V-neck model, high standing roll collar; hemstitched yoke, and sleeves. Value $8.50 5.75

Dressy Satin Waists

Sand Color Satin Sublime Waists

Combined with crepe de Chine, dressy model, hemstitched front and self buttons. Value $11.50 7.50

Georgette Crepe Waists

Putty Color Georgette Crepe Waists

Dressy tucked model, embroidered net lace Medici collar, black moire tie. Value $18.50 13.75

Gold Emb'd Crepe Waists

Putty Color Georgette Crepe Waists

Dressy model, of all-over gold embroidered crepe, silk lace sleeves and vestee. Value $39.50 24.50

Special for Monday

English Sport Skirts

For Women and Misses.

New circular buttoned front model, of English corduroy, in brown, green, castor, taupe or black, also mannish tweeds, with pockets and fold at bottom.

7.95 Value $10.75

Special for Monday

French House Gowns

Of Wool Albatross, Hand Emb'd Collar.

Women's Paris made house gowns, draped model, in blue, rose, lavender or pink wool albatross, with hand embroidered lingerie collar.

4.95 Value $8.50

Special for Monday

Silk & Wool Combinations

For Women and Misses.

Low neck, no sleeves, knee or ankle length.

1.45 Heretofore $2.50

Special for Monday

16-Button Gloves

For Women and Misses.

16-button white mousquetaire glace gloves.

1.95 Value $3.00

Special for Monday

Smart Gaiter Boots

For Women and Misses.

Of patent leather, with fawn, gray cloth or mat kid tops, also gun metal leather, with gray cloth tops.

5.00 Value $6.50

Special for Monday

Women's Silk Hose

Pure Thread Silk Hose.

Black, white, fawn, beige, taupe, brown, bronze and colors to match boots; lisle sole; lisle or silk garter top.

Value $1.35 .85 3 pair for $2.50

Misses' "Radmawr" Serge Dresses

An Exclusive Model, "Style Registered"

of Navy Blue or Black English Serge, 11.50

Franklin Simon & Co. offer Monday
Misses' Fur Trimmed Suits

Of broadcloth, gabardine or velvet, short, medium or long coats, trimmed with rich furs; new tunic or full flare skirts.
14 to 20 years. Value $39.50 29.50

Franklin Simon & Co. offer Monday
Misses' Fur Trimmed Coats

English mixture, in brown or gray, also navy, brown or black zibeline; large collar of natural Raccoon or Skunk Opossum fur.
14 to 20 years. Value $24.50 18.50

Franklin Simon & Co. offer Monday
Girls' Fur Trimmed Coats

Of Velour de Laine, new belted model, in brown, green or Delft blue, collar trimmed with Skunk Opossum, wide velvet belt; silk lined and interlined.
6 to 14 years. Value $29.50 18.50

Franklin Simon & Co. offer Monday
Fur Trimmed Corduroy Coats

Of corduroy, in black, brown, green or Delft blue, low belted model; collar and cuffs trimmed with Skunk Opossum fur; silk lined and interlined.
6 to 14 years. Value $34.50 24.50

AMERICAN HOSPITAL A CHEERFUL PLACE

Less Seriously Wounded of the British Soldiers Enjoy Ragtime on the Phonographs.

EVERY MAN HAS A STORY

And They Like to Talk—American Doctors and Nurses Busy at Paris Singer's House.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Through the courtesy of the Duchess of Marlborough, Chairman of the Executive Committee, and Lady Randolph Churchill, Chairman of the Hospital Committee, of the American Women's War Relief Fund Hospital, a representative of THE NEW YORK TIMES was permitted to inspect the institution.

The American Hospital is at Paignton, a small town in South Devon. Before the war it was the residence of a Paris singer, but in a month's time after war was declared it was converted into a hospital, and so well did it meet the requirements of the military authorities that it was the first private institution to receive wounded soldiers.

Dr. Howard W. Beal, head of the American Red Cross unit which was assigned to the hospital, is in charge of the Munsey Ward, and is assisted by Drs. V. N. Leonard and William T. Fitzsimons. There are upward of seventy patients in the Munsey Ward.

There was no hushed stillness about the hospital. On the contrary, nearly every ward was alive with phonographs or talking machines of some description. Around these hovered dozens of the less seriously wounded. Almost under the noisy horns of the instruments lay sleeping some of the soldiers who had got more than their share of the German shells or bullets. A ragtime melody savoring of the cornfields vied with that of an opera singer. A cloud of smoke arose from pipes, cigars and cigarettes.

Newly Arrived Wounded.

In the big Munsey ward Dr. Beal and his assistants were strenuously busy, for sixty-three wounded had suddenly been placed under their care, and of that number there were more than a dozen dangerous cases. Pointing toward one soldier, the left side of whose face was black and badly swollen, the American physician said:

"He has a good story. Ask him to show you the piece of shrapnel that hit him. He kept it for a souvenir."

The man referred to was George Harper of the Rifle Brigade. He was wounded within the week in an engagement near Bethune. When asked to show the souvenir he had brought back with him, he pulled out from a small cupboard beside his cot the head of a German shrapnel shell.

"I never knew anything after that hit me, Sir," said Harper. "It hit the ground first and then took me in the jaw. Yes, it hurts some now, for three teeth were knocked out, and part of the jawbone broken, so the doctors say. These American doctors and nurses are fine.

"It was near Bethune where the Rifle Brigade got into trouble. The artillery fire of those Germans was terrific; shells bursting everywhere. We lay in the trenches and couldn't get at 'em. Then came the shell that got me and a lot of other fellows. When I came to I looked for a pal who had been next to me. There wasn't much left of him. I leaned over and picked up this schapnel head for a souvenir. You can see where some of the red is still on it. The doctors say I've got a piece of schrapnel in my throat and a bullet has ranged down into my chest, and that I'm a lucky dog to be here. The first night I got here I couldn't sleep very well because the bed was so soft, but, believe me, it's good to have old England underneath you once again."

Of all the sixty who were asked about their experiences, not one begrudged praise to the Germans for their prowess with artillery. Nearly all were likewise unanimous in declaring as "punk" the infantry firing, but they excepted the sharpshooters who, they declared, had picked off the officers to such an appalling extent that many of them had discarded their swords and carried guns to deceive the marksmen.

The soldiers were not jealous about their pals having the "best story."

"Go over and see Seth Williams," said a chorus, as the assemblage was asked if there were any veterans among the inmates who might have a good yarn.

Seth Williams should have more interest for the American people, especially the citizens of New York, than because he bears a bad wound in his upper right arm, for he worked on the Manhattan tube to Hoboken and lives in Elizabeth when not in the British Army.

Boers Not Far Behind.

"I had only a fortnight to serve," said the soldier, "when war was declared, and I had to go to the Continent with the expeditionary force. In all I have been in the army about sixteen years, off and on. In the Boer war I was under Lord Roberts's son when he was killed. In some ways, when compared, according to men engaged, that war wasn't so far behind this one. Of course they had no such artillery as the Germans now have. I've seen a bit of service, that's why I have a distinguished service medal, six bars on the Queen's medal and the King's medal. It nearly all ended this time.

"We retreated until we got down below Paris, then we got at 'em and pushed them back to Soissons. Then came the trouble. The Jack Johnsons were on the job. You can dodge those fellows pretty well because they can be fired only about every eight minutes. The shrapnel, though, were coming all the time. I was a driver in the Royal Field Artillery. It was about three weeks ago when I was wounded. We were dodging around all right until a young officer moved us up too near one of the batteries. He ought to have known better, for we all were told that the Germans had bought up farms and measured off ranges before the war, and they had us dead to right. There were fifty-four of us and more than a hundred horses back of that battery.

"Five minutes after we had moved to the rear of the battery only four men were alive, and one horse, and the horse made me laugh as he stood there, trying to pick the leaves off a small tree. Two shells had struck in the middle of us, and when I came to I couldn't find even a boot of the man who had been nearest me. That is how the German artillery was working."

Thomas Smith of the Twelfth Lancers is in the same row with Williams. Smith was also wounded near Soissons.

"We waited for days to get at them," he said, "but they had their big guns sweeeping every road. Finally, we were placed in the trenches with rifles. Later we got our chance. As we rode toward the German Lancers they threw down their lances and begged for mercy. As we swept on by with our lances raised we were fired on from behind. Then we started back for them, and we finished every one of them."

It was a short time after that incident when in another charge, Smith says a German lancer struck him amidship with his lance.

"If it had been as sharp as our lances are," he added, "I would have been stuck clean through, but it only knocked the wind out of me, and I had strength enough left to get a couple of 'em. The Germans have lances that are much too long. They can't handle them as we do. We let the horse carry the lance into them, and then when we go sweeping by the horse pulls it out again. That's the way we work the trick."

Then came the action a few days later when Smith, as he was riding toward the enemy with head lowered over his horse's neck, had the reins shot out of his hand and his chin almost blown off by a bursting shell. That is why he eventually landed at the American Hospital.

"I was riding a horse that was new to the battlefield," said the lancer, "but he carried me back to the rear in an almost unconscious condition."

How It Feels to Charge.

"How do you feel when you charge?" the lancer was asked.

"A fellow feels wild—that's how he feels," came the reply. "You forget everything but sticking a few Germans."

Then there was corroboration for the story about an officer who was anxious to locate the enemy and peered once too often above the trench, for every cap that was put up on a bayonet was filled full of holes.

"He peered over the top of the trenches just once too often," said William Arnold, private of the Royal Artillery. "I was sent back because I was absolutely done up. It wasn't because I am 54 years old, either, or have seen service in six campaigns and in the army for twenty-eight years of my life, but because an old trouble with my back laid me out after we had been exposed to such rotten weather in the trenches. Anyway, some of these youngsters ought to have their share. I have seven sons at the front, but God knows where."

"There are stories everywhere," said one of the American nurses. "The men are good patients, and we hear from them just what they have been through. They like to talk about it."

Miss Gertrude Fletcher is matron of the hospital. She went through the Boer war, and always gets a smile from the Tommies.

Mr. Singer, who is Organizing Manager of the institution, showed the way through other wards besides the distinctly American one. Everywhere the same care for the soldiers, the same interest in their amusement.

Two of Mr. Singer's sons help in executive capacities. There are other helpers as well, one of them Miss McCook of New York, and Miss Wells of Boston, who made ready the home for the American unit, a comfortable double house not far from the hospital.

MME. ALMA GLUCK'S RECITAL

A Great Audience Enjoys the Disclosure of Her Riper Art.

The interest taken in Mme. Alma Gluck's song recital last season, when she had just returned from a period of study with Mme. Sembrich, was renewed and increased yesterday afternoon, when she appeared again in Carnegie Hall before an audience that filled that auditorium. It was a pleasure for her admirers to note how she had progressed in the finer and subtler qualities of her art. It does much credit to her intelligence and sense of the fitness of things that she should persevere in the strict schooling necessary for the mastery of the true art of song, which so few singers today attempt to reach; that, having shown at the opera that she possessed one of the most beautiful of soprano voices, a great natural endowment, she should realize how great were the resopnsibilities imposed by that endowment and how far she was from grasping all the secrets of vocal art, and should betake herself away from the easily won plaudits of enthusiastic operagoers to put herself under the severe tuition of the one perhaps best able to do her the most good.

Her singing yesterday afternoon did her the highest credit. The beautiful voice seemed never more beautiful in its native quality; and it had a certainty of poise, a smoothness and an evenness in all its ranges, a perfection of equality throughout that she has never reached before. The higher tones are more freely delivered than they were last season; they were produced more spontaneously and they had a fuller and rounder quality. There was a greater facility than she showed in the past in the few flowery passages occurring in Romeau's "Rossignols Amoureux" and in Mozart's "Zeffinetti Lusingheri," which came first on her programme; though there will be still greater flexibility and ease in such passages if Mme. Gluck continues the improvement she has made, as there likewise will be a little more brilliancy and evenness in her trill.

These airs she sang with much charm, and so she did Haydn's ingratiating "Mermaid's Song," and the long-sustained tones that make Handel's air "Come, Beloved," from "Atalanta," so exacting were wholly admirable. This performance, in fact, was an achievement of unusual distinction that she was very properly called on to repeat. Mme. Gluck has gained further insight into the German Lied. Her interpretations of the songs by Schumann and Brahms upon her programme were something more than a disclosure of beautiful tone and its modulations and carefully studied phrasing. There was a pointed intimation of the character, the mood, the higher significance of each of these, and especially the tender grace of "Der Nussbaum" and the joyous uplift of "O Liebliche Wange," were there.

It cannot be said that Mme. Gluck has as yet found how to convey the deepest feeling in her voice, or that she often imparts to it a varied emotional coloring, matters more difficult of attainment in such an organ as hers than in others of a more robust sort; but what she did in this direction was not to be overlooked, as, notably, in the beautiful Little Russian folk song arranged by her husband, Efveni Zimbalist (which she sang in the Ruthenian language), and the sombre song of Charpentier, "Les Cloches Filées."

Among the interesting new songs on a programme in general admirably selected and contrasted were three by Max Vogrich, "Vaer Daer," "De ol Wichel," "Wenn Framme Kindlein Schlafen gehen," and three by Americans—Edward Horsman's truly musical and finely felt "Bird of the Wilderness," (which she repeated,) Sydney Homers setting of negro verses, "Long Ago," and Frank Lafarge's arch and clever "To a Messenger." It is necessary to add, however, that Mme. Gluck's enunciation, especially in English, was not all that it might be in clearness and purity.

After adding a charming and familiar song of Sinding's "Sylvelin" after her second group, and a French song after her French group, Mme. Gluck added several songs in English at the close of her programme—songs that were not chosen with the fastidious taste evidenced in the printed list.

Her accompanist was Willy Spaor, who played in a delightfully sympathetic and musical style.

MR. McCORMACK'S RECITAL.

A Great Audience Hears the Irish Tenor in Carnegie Hall.

Each recurring season only confirms again the popularity of John McCormack not only with those allied to him by Irish blood, but also with the admirers of a beautiful tenor voice and a beautiful style of singing. He gave a song recital last evening in Carnegie Hall at which every seat in the hall was filled and the regulations as to standing room probably considerably strained.

Mr. McCormack gave his listeners a programme hardly "popular" in some interpretations of that term, but they accepted eagerly all that he offered, from Don Ottavio's air, "Il mio tesoro," in "Don Giovanni"—to sing which he is equipped in voice, method, and style as few tenors are at present—to "Mollie Brannigan," which he added to his group of Irish songs far down on the list, sung with the inimitable unction and spirit that are his as a birthright. Besides, there were songs by Korbay, Sinding, Rachmaninoff, Ronald, Scott, and Coleridge-Taylor.

Mr. McCormack had the assistance of Donald McBeath, a violinist of altogether unusual musicianly feeling and attainments in the way of finish and technical mastery, who made his own contribution to the strong meat of the programme in Beethoven's Romance in G, playing also transcriptions by Wilhelmj, and pieces by Reger and Kreisler. Edwin Schneider furnished the accompaniments for both singer and violinist with skill and taste.

Harmonia Music Roll

FREE!

Any Music Roll

in our catalogue (the Biggest in New York) sent on request. Just give us the names of SIX Player Piano Owners. Nothing more.

HARMONIA MUSIC ROLL CO.,
505 Fifth Ave., near 42nd St., New York.

CYANIDE SANDWICH ENDS 'PRINCE'S' LIFE

Actor, Who Said He Was Hero of "Three Weeks," Commits Suicide in Apartment.

HAD QUARRELED WITH WIFE

Coroner's Physician Finds Poison Can in Street — Mrs. Allen Claims the Body.

Paul Allen, an actor, who said he was Prince Paul de Clairmont, committed suicide yesterday in an apartment he had rented two weeks ago at 25 West Fifty-first Street. He was 28 years old.

Dr. Otto H. Schultze, Coroner's physician, found part of a sandwich in the room, covered with a white powder. According to the physician, he was told that a woman who explained that she was Mrs. Allen, had called immediately after being notified of his death, and had removed a tin can that had been on a table in the dead man's room. This she threw into an ash can at the curb before she got into her automobile.

Dr. Schultze recovered the can and found that it contained a half pound of cyanide of potassium. The autopsy revealed the presence of this poison.

Mrs. Allen, who lives in East Sixty-first Street, said last night she believed her husband had taken an overdose of a sleeping powder, which he frequently used. She said he was also affected with heart trouble.

Mrs. Allen said she was in Philadelphia when her husband left her some weeks ago following a quarrel due to her objections to his being away so much at night. He returned and they celebrated the first anniversary of their marriage on Oct. 21.

Allen came here two years ago and attracted attention by announcing himself as the hero of Eleanor Glyn's novel "Three Weeks." About a year ago it was understood by some of his friends he was engaged to marry Miss Elizabeth Golden of Boston. A month later he went to Pittsburgh and married Mrs. Allen. He had been married once before.

"My husband really was a Prince," said Mrs. Allen. "He was born in Russia. His mother was Princess Blanche Olga de Clairmont of France. My husband's full name was Prince John Paul Preston Arnot de Clairmont. His stepfather, Preston Arnot, an officer in the British navy, was the second husband of the Princess. My husband used the name of Paul Allen on the stage and had been a member of the English company of F. R. Benson."

Allen had a small private income. His wife, who says she will go to England to claim her interest in his estate, took charge of his body.

COBB BACK FROM THE WAR.

Correspondent Says He Searched in Vain for German Atrocities.

Irvin S. Cobb, who has been with the German forces as a war correspondent, returned yesterday on the Lusitania, fully convinced that the stories of atrocities were all myths.

"I went with the German Army, accompanied by a photographer and an affidavit maker, to collect evidence of these atrocities, but failed to find a single authentic case," he said. "Directly some one told me of a case I hurried away with my two followers, but we were always fooled. The only two words of German I learned by heart so that I could repeat them in my sleep were 'Nicht schiesen,' meaning, 'Don't shoot.' I was outside Antwerp in the German lines, and witnessed the shelling of the city, but did not visit it after the German occupation."

BOYS AND GIRLS PROTEST.

East Side Parade a Demonstration Against Child Labor.

Several thousand boys and girls between 10 and 15 years paraded along streets on the east side yesterday as a protest against child labor, carrying signs and banners inscribed:

"We are against child labor." "We want to go to school and not to a child labor crushing factory."

There were thirteen floats, showing children working at sewing machines and other concrete pictures of child labor. Along East Broadway the parade was augumented by depositors in failed east side banks, who fell into line.

Hickson

announces

SEMI-ANNUAL SALE OF HATS

Stunning models in black and prevailing colors, at

$10 and $15

Fifth Avenue at 52d Street.

E. CHARLES

Established 15 Years at No. 62 West 47th St., Between 5th & 6th Aves.

READY-TO-WEAR DEPT. (Miss Marguerite, Mgr.)
Beginning Tomorrow (MONDAY) Morning

VERY SPECIAL OFFERING
EXCLUSIVE COSTUMES TAILLEUR
Duplicates of the latest foreign models, in styles of every description; for Ladies and Misses. Usually sold from $38.50 to $95. SPECIAL THIS WEEK AT
$22.50, $24.50 to $45

DAINTY AFTERNOON and EVENING GOWNS
Unusual values for $32.50 up to $95. SPECIAL THIS WEEK AT
$16.50, $24.50 to $45

STRIKINGLY PRETTY HATS
Sold elsewhere from $12.50 to $18.00. SPECIAL THIS WEEK AT
$5 to $8.50

VERY CHIC DRESS HATS
Actual values $18.50 to $45. SPECIAL THIS WEEK AT $12.50, $18.50 to $22.50

MINES EARN $6,000,000 LESS

President Welborn Assails Colorado Unions in His Report.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Oct. 31.—Murder, arson, and lawlessness constituting anarchy are charged against the officers of the United Mine Workers by Jesse F. Welbor,n President of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, in his annual report to the stockholders. Outside of tables showing the company's financial condition, the entire report is devoted to a review of the strike in which the President justifies the Rockefeller and other coal interests in all their actions, and charges the union with responsibility for all bloodshed.

More than $6,000,000 decrease in gross earnings is acknowledged in the report This is about equally divided between the steel and fuel departments of the company's operations, with reduced demand for steel and the coal strike sharing responsibility.

The figures show that the gross earnings in all departments for the year ending June 30, 1914, were $17,808,025, and for the preceding year $24,315,887, making a decrease this year of $6,512,862. Of this sum $3,505,497 occurred in the steel and iron department and $3,007,364 in the coal branch of the company's operations. A deficit of $905,668 is recorded.

The tonnage production in all branches shows a great decrease, coal output dropping 1,685,675 tons, pig iron 147,584, finished iron and steel 105,592, coke and iron ore approximately 250,000 tons each.

RECEIVER FOR PAPER CO.

The Colonial in Trouble Over Payment of Bond Issue Interest.

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 31.—Theodore W. Law of Portsmouth, N. H., was appointed receiver for the Colonial Paper Company by Judge Hale, in the Federal Court today.

The appointment of a receiver was in response to the petition of the Old Colony Trust Company of Boston, which instituted foreclosure proceedings in consequence of the alleged default of interest payments on a bond issue of $1,500,000, made in March, 1910.

The Publishers' Paper Company, an $8,000,000 corporation composed of leading American newspaper publishers for whom paper was to be manufactured in an immense mill at Portsmouth, was absorbed by the Colonial Paper Company about five years ago.

The Colonial Company built water power plants at Buxton and South Berwick, in this State, which are now idle. It controlled water power along the Saco River, aggregating 300,000 horse-power, which was to have been extensively developed, as well as along the Connecticut River in New Hampshire, and was in possession of approximately 300,000 acres of land in Western Maine and New Hampshire.

The Publishers' Paper Company, by a special act of the Maine Legislature, in 1905, took over the franchises and property of the Eastern Timber Company, which was incorporated for $8,000,000 earlier that year to assume the assets and property of the White Mountain Paper Company, a $23,000,000 corporation for which receivers were appointed in July, 1908.

ECUADOR REBELS DEFEATED

Leave 100 Men on Field After Battle with Government Force.

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, Oct. 31.—Continuing their campaign against the present administration of the Republic of Ecuador, a rebel band of about 300 men attacked the town of Esmeraldas, on the seacoast, ninety-five miles northwest of Quito, today. They were repulsed by the Government garrison after six hours of fighting, and left behind them 100 men in killed and wounded.

The Government force sustained few losses, and a Government detachment is at present in pursuit of the defeated rebels.

Merchant Dies Playing Pinochle.

Charles Linke, 78 years old, a retired merchant, of 1,330 Washington Avenue, was fatally stricken with a hemorrhage last night in the apartments of Charles Kauffman in the same house. Linke and Kauffman were playing pinochle when Linke was stricken. Physicians who were summoned found Linke dead.

JOHN D. DUCKS FOR APPLES.

Mr. Rockefeller Joins in Halloween Merriment at Pastor's Home.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, Oct. 31.—John D. Rockefeller was a guest at a Halloween party given tonight by the Rev. Mr. Nelson, the pastor on his estate, to seventy-five young people of Pocantico Hills.

Not only did Mr. Rockefeller gather the young folk 'round the fireside to hear tales of the pranks of his boyhood, but he also took the lead in ducking for apples, looking into the glass over the flame of a candle, and other seasonable gayeties.

Mr. Rockefeller drove down in his automobile apparently in perfect health and excellent spirits. At his approach the house was darkened, and goblins, witches, spooks and other supernatural things jumped at him from the shadows of the porch. Mr. Rockefeller met the spirit-world visitors with a cheerful smile and went indoors to the games. Later he sat at the head of the table when the party assembled for a Halloween dinner, and stayed until 11 o'clock, which he said was much later than he was used to being out.

BERIBERI IN JERSEY JAIL.

Illness of Two Prisoners Attributed to Rice Which They Ate.

Special to The New York Times.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Oct. 31.—Beriberi, which was discovered in the Union County Jail more than a year ago, is again giving the jail authorities grave concern. Two cases of illness have been diagnosed as beriberi in the last two days.

One of the sufferers had been discharged from the jail and the other, Winfield Young, 22 years old, hobbled into court today to retract a plea of not guilty and enter one of guilty, so that judgment might be passed on him and he could be removed from the institution. Recently Young's limbs began to swell and he suffered from muscular paralysis.

In the case of Young the symptoms developed after more than two months of imprisonment. The disease is caused, according to a committee appointed by the Union County Medical Society, by the use of polished rice as an item of the jail menu.

PERRY BELMONT ON WAR.

He Returns from Europe Confident the Allies Will Win.

Perry Belmont, who returned yesterday from Europe on the Cunarder Lusitania, said he was confident the Allies would win. He had visited Austria, Germany, France, and England since the outbreak of hostilities, and in each country, he said, there was an eagerness on the part of the people to join the colors.

When asked about militarism in Germany, Mr. Belmont said:

"After being graduated from Harvard I spent a year at the University of Berlin, at a time when its Professors were men of independent thought and information. Today they are absolutely dependent upon the favor of the military autocracy, which exercises its perverting influence throughout every phase of German life, and have become the advance guard of their armies, as violent in speech as the Kaiser's soldiers are in acts."

Stewart & Co.

Correct Apparel for Women & Misses
5TH AVENUE AT 37TH STREET

Announce the New Winter Modes

Emphatically Different in Many Essential Details from Those That Have Gone Before

FOR MONDAY & TUESDAY

We have prepared many special offerings in the new styles at attractive prices.

A Showing of New Winter Suits

In all the accepted styles for midwinter wear, beautiful creations of silk velvet, chiffon broadcloth, English Gabardines, imported covert cloth and many novelty fabrics.

Fur Trimmed, Plain Tailored and Fancy Models

27.50 39.50 47.50

Introducing the "Vivandiere" Suit

The Latest Military Suit, That Is Now Worn by the Smartest Dressed Women of Paris.

Made of imported chiffon broadcloth, ¾ length belted coat, military effect; trimmings of silk velvet and handsome furs; new style skirt; all colors 34.50

Charming New Gowns and Frocks

Among which can be found attire appropriate to any particular occasion.

Reproductions of NEW imported Paris models. While there are a number of striking novelties, some differ only slightly from earlier styles we have shown.

29.50 39.50 45.00

Luxurious Wraps for Evening Wear

Velvets, velours, silk plushes, brocades, satins and novelty fabrics, combined with costly furs and filmy laces; in high colors and dainty light shades.

27.50 to 69.50

Fashionable Winter Coats

In the new loose back, belted and flare effects; among the latest fabrics are bear cloth, covert cloth, fur plushes, silk finished corduroy and the new light weight mixtures; with or without fur trimming.

12.50 to 49.50

SPECIAL REDUCTIONS MONDAY AND TUESDAY

In odd lots and broken sizes, left over from the opening sale. You may find some wonderful bargains here if you can be suited.

180 FUR TRIMMED SUITS
Broadcloths and Gabardines; short coats and flare or circular skirts; skunk opossum trimmed; there are all colors and sizes in the lot 18.50
Former Price $29.50

40 FUR TRIMMED SUITS
Odd suits; only one or two of a kind, including many of our higher priced models 24.50
Former Prices to $47.50

212 GOWNS & FROCKS
Satin, charmeuse and crepe meteor, combined with chiffon velvet and chiffon 16.50
Former Prices to $49.50

110 STREET DRESSES
Of serge with satin; in all colors; ideal dresses for afternoon wear 12.50
Former Price $17.50

48 CORDUROY COATS
Made of silk finished corduroy; silk lined and interlined; some fur trimmed; all colors, but not all sizes in every color 19.75
Former Prices to $35.00

300 FANCY MIXTURE COATS
Light weight mannish mixtures, including the stylish black and white effects; superbly tailored; satin lined throughout 15.00
Former Price $25.00

70 SEAL PLUSH COATS
Richly lined and interlined; some fur trimmed; all full length 18.50
Former Prices to $29.50

120 PERSIANNA COATS
Warm, full length coats, richly lined; an ideal coat for motoring or street wear 15.00
Former Prices to $27.50

PARK and TILFORD

The finest most delicious

COFFEES

At unequalled prices

	per lb.
FAVORITA Our famous blend. Superior in quality to coffees usually sold at 35c. lb tin	.28
MARACAIBO Special selection	.19
JAVA AND MOCHA Finest quality	.38

PARK & TILFORD'S TEAS IN PACKAGES

	1 lb. Pkg.	½ lb. Pkg.
India and Ceylon
Extra Choicest	.60	.35
Choice, green and gold label	.40	.23
China, Ceylon and India
A perfect blend, white and gold label	1.25	.65
Orange Pekoe Ceylon
Very fragrant and delicate flavor
Extra Choicest, No. 1	.80	.45
Choicest, No. 2	.60	.35
Choice, No. 3	.40	.23

We also call attention to our fine English Breakfast and Formosa Teas in Lb. and ½Lb. packages and to our large line of Fine Teas in bulk from 28c. to 1.50 per lb.

AMERICAN VEGETABLES

	Doz.	Can
Asparagus, Green, Del Monte, No. 2½ cans	2.35	.20
Asparagus Tips, Green, Del Monte, No. 1 cans	2.10	.18
Beans, String, Cut, Conewago, No. 2 cans	.90	.08
Beans, Refugee String, Conewago, No. 2 Cans	1.15	.10
Beans, Extra Stringless Conewago, No. 2 cans	1.40	.12
Beans, Refugee Stringless, small, P. & T. No. 2 cans	1.85	.16
Beans, Fancy Stringless, P. & T., No. 2 cans	2.25	.20
Corn, Sweet, New York State, No. 2 cans	1.00	.09
Corn, Sugar, Maine, Poland, No. 2 cans	1.35	.12
Peas, Early June, Champion Brand, No. 2 cans	1.15	.10
Peas, Selected Early June, P. & T., No. 2 cans	1.40	.12
Peas, Sweet, Blue Bells, No. 2 cans	1.60	.14
Peas, Ungraded Dainty Sweets, Hart, No. 2 cans	1.85	.16
Peas, Extra Sifted Early June, P. & T., No. 2 cans	2.00	.18
Peas, (petit pois) Small, P. & T., No. 2 cans	2.50	.22
Succotash, Marcellus Brand, No. 2 cans	1.15	.10
Succotash, Extra Fancy, Little Quaker, No. 2 cans	1.45	.13
Tomatoes, Extra, S. & E., No. 2 cans	.95	.08
Tomatoes, Doverdel, No. 3 cans	1.15	.10
Tomatoes, New Jersey, Superior Brand, No. 3 cans	1.35	.12
Tomatoes, Highest Grade, P. & T., No. 3 cans	1.85	.16

FINE GRANULATED SUGAR
H & E Eagle brand:—
8½ lb. cotton bags ..... .21
5 lb. cotton bags ..... .30
25 lb. cotton bags 1.45

FLOUR
Pillsbury, 24½ lb. bags ..... .83

BUTTER, No cold storage Butter sold.
Creamery Butter per lb. cut ..... .34
Finest Creamery, Special selection, cut or in 1 lb. cartons, lb ..... .40

OLIVE OIL—Finest quality

Pure Lucca, Italian, Park & Tilford	Can
Quart cans	.90
½ gallon cans	1.65
1 gallon cans	3.10
Pure French, Park & Tilford
Pint cans	.50
Quart cans	.95
½ gallon cans	1.75
1 gallon cans	3.25

CALIFORNIA FRUITS

Del Monte Brand:—	Doz.	Can
Apricots, No. 2½ cans	2.10	.18
Peaches, Yellow Cling, No. 2½ cans	2.10	.18

KEILLER'S JAMS

Raspberry:—
1 lb. stone jars	3.00	.25
Strawberry:—
1 lb. stone jars	3.00	.25

SAUCES

Worcestershire Lea & Perrins:—	Bot.
5¾ oz. bottles (small)	.21
10¼ oz. bottles (medium)	.38
Tomato Catsup "Blue Label" Medium size bottle	.19

SOAPS and SOAP POWDERS
Babbitt's Best ..... 7 cakes for .25
Kirkman's Borax ..... 7 cakes for .25
Gold Dust, 4 lb. carton ..... .18

GIN—Park & Tilford Bottling

	Case	Bot.
Dry, in square bottles	8.25	.70
Old Tom, in square bottles	8.25	.70

WHISKIES, AMERICAN

	Gal.	Bot.
Alpine Creek Rye, P. & T.	2.50	.65
Mountain Ridge Rye, P. & T.	3.00	.75
Forest Bloom Rye, P. & T.	3.50	.85
Old Cumberland Rye, P. & T.	4.50	1.00
Special Rye, P. & T.	5.00	1.25
Private Stock Rye, P. & T.	6.00	1.50

GUINNESS'S FOREIGN EXTRA STOUT

Park & Tilford Bottling:—
Bottles, per dozen	1.50
Splits, per dozen	1.00

STORES IN NEW YORK
Fifth Avenue and 26th Street
Fifth Avenue and 59th Street
Broadway and 41st Street
Broadway and 87th Street
Broadway and 101st Street
Broadway and 112th Street
Broadway and 146th Street
Columbus Ave. and 72nd St.
Lenox Ave. and 126th Street

Catalog of Fancy and Staple Groceries, Candy, Perfumery, Cigars, Champagnes, Still Wines, Liqueurs, Liqueurs, etc., sent you on request.
Out of town Mail Order Department
IN OUR NEW WAREHOUSES
529-549 West 42nd Street, New York

Paris Key West Habana
West End, N. J.

VAST THRONGS SEE HISTORICAL PAGEANT

300 Years of New York's Educational and Industrial Progress Portrayed by Floats.

MAYOR AT HEAD OF LINE

Admiral Peary Carries Flag He Bore to Pole—Horse Show at Reviewing Stand.

A crowd of hundreds of thousands packed the sidewalks all the way from Harlem to Thirty-fourth Street last night to witness the historical, commercial, educational, and industrial pageant which marked the height of the New York Commercial Tercentenary. The parade itself was strung out for miles, and while the head of it was approaching the reviewing stand in front of the Public Library at the end was just starting at 125th Street and Morningside Avenue.

The route of the procession was brilliantly illuminated with more than 65,000 electric lights, having a total of more than 500,000 candle power. Fifty-ninth Street to Fifth Avenue and Fifth Avenue to Thirty-fourth Street were festooned with strings of lights on both sides. The thirty-nine elaborate floats showing the development of this city commercially, industrially, and educationally in the last 300 years were seen to the best advantage because of the superb lighting facilities.

The parade was scheduled to start from Madison Avenue and 125th Street at 7 o'clock, but was delayed because the Governor, who was expected to ride with the Mayor, did not appear there to take his place, having been forced to keep campaign engagements. As a result, Mayor Mitchel rode over the entire route in a carriage by himself. He was applauded all along the line, however, and bowed right and left.

The route of the pageant was from 125th Street to Morningside Avenue, to 110th Street, to Broadway, to Columbus Circle, across Fifty-ninth Street, down Fifth Avenue to Thirty-fourth Street, to Broadway, and back to Columbus Circle, where the parade dispersed. The immense crowds along the line of march were kept in order by nearly 2,000 police, in charge of four Inspectors. Chief Inspector Max Schmittberger took charge of the policing himself.

Color Guards in Lead.

The parade was led by a squad of mounted police, followed by the color guards, mounted, carrying the national flags, and city flags. Then came the Seventy-first Regiment Band, the Grand Marshal, Louis Annin Ames, and Marshal William J. Lee. In turn were the Commercial Pageant Committee, the Mayor, Secretary of State, and State officials, and the members of the Mayor's Cabinet all in carriages.

These were followed by Mayor James M. Preston of Baltimore and a delegation of 100 Baltimoreans. Next in the parade were the various civic, commercial and industrial organizations of the city. The patriotic division included the Old Guard, United Spanish War Veterans, Army and Navy League, Naval Veterans, Sons of the American Revolution, and Army and Navy Union. These were followed by students from Columbia, the City College, Cornell, New York University, and the Young Men's Christian Association.

Almost in the middle of the procession was the long and interesting line of historical floats, headed by Albert De Cerra, Director of Pageants. The floats appeared in the following order:

Historical Floats.

Primeval Manhattan, 1614, Indians looking out over the harbor and seeing the first white men; Purchase of Manhattan Island, 1626, representing Peter Minuet purchasing Manhattan; Bowling on Bowling Green, 1664, representing Dutchmen at bowls; Fort Amsterdam Before Surrender, 1664, Dutch defending fort; English Summon Fort Amsterdam to Surrender, 1664, representing the English ship Guinea bearing Richard Nicolls; Hamilton's First Speech, 1774, Alexander Hamilton's first speech in the fields now City Hall Park, July 6, 1774; Reformed Dutch Church of Harlem, reproduction of First Dutch Church built; Bombardment of New York, 1776; Great Fire of New York, 1776; Betsey Ross Making the First American Flag, 1777.

Washington Entering New York, 1783, representing Gen. Washington entering New York, Nov. 25, 1783; Impressment of American Seamen, 1812; A Sea Fight, War of 1812; Francis Scott Key, writing "The Star-Spangled Banner"; Apotheosis of Star-Spangled Banner, 1814; Treaty of Ghent, 1814; Erie Canal, 1825; Completion of the First American Railroad, 1830, representing the completion of the first line from Albany to Schenectady; The Clipper ship, 1840-1855; The First Telegram Sent from Washington to Baltimore; Liberty; Progress; Industries of New York; Education; 100 Years of Peace and Progress; Education of Today; Recreation; Industrial Education; Commerce; Melting Pot.

Peary Flag in Parade.

One of the most interesting entries of the pageant was the American flag carried to the north pole. It was borne last night by Admiral Peary.

In the commercial division of the parade were represented the Letter Carriers of New York City; a float of the Hudson River Day Line, showing the 107 years' progress in steam navigation since Robert Fulton first ran the Clermont. A replica of one of the Day Line's finest steamers was carried on a float, surrounded by a score of pretty girls. The original stage coach used by the Wells Fargo Company, used in competition in transcontinental traffic, was also one of the historical exhibits.

In the Baltimore division was seen the largest United States flag ever unfurled from a flag pole, this being the same used at the Star-Spangled Banner Centennial at Baltimore last September.

The equestrian division of the parade was adjudged a great innovation as well as one of the most interesting because a regular horse show took place in front of the reviewing stand, and prizes and ribbons were awarded during a short halt.

Following the horse show came the theatrical division. Three intermissions in the parade were filled by as many theatrical companies with short acts from plays that are now seen along Broadway.

In addition to the historical floats hundreds of decorated cars were entered in the Commercial Division by business men.

Committee in Reviewing Stand.

Here are some of the members of the Tercentenary Committee and their guests, who occupied seats in the reviewing stand in front of the Public Library:

Col. Louis A. Ames,	J. D. Rockefeller, Jr.,
A. C. McKinnon,	George F. Perkins,
E. A. Norman,	Frank Munsey,
Mayor J. H. Preston,	Robert de Forest,
George McAneny,	John R. Crimmins,
W. A. Prendergast,	Arthur Williams,
Marcus M. Marks,	Col. J. L. Shepard,
Lewis H. Pounds,	A. Burton Hepburn,
Ralph Foltz,	E. H. Outerbridge,
John B. Creighton,	Robert Olyphant,
Douglas Robinson,	Herman Ridder,
M. R. Connelly,	The Rev. Dr. H. P.
C. J. McCormack,	Mendes,
J. F. McCourt,	L. C. Warner,
Hyman Pouker,	N. Taylor Phillips,
W. H. Chorosh,	E. P. V. Ritter,
Harry Finkitzk,	Louis Sherry,
Isaac Wolf,	Wm. Muschenheim,
Abram M. Levy,	Fred Sterry,
Charles J. Moore,	C. E. Gearing,
Henry Barnes,	Gerard Davis,
Arthur Woods,	J. P. Greenhut,
Robert Adamson,	R. L. Harrison,
R. A. C. Smith,	Eben E. Olcott,
Thomas W. Churchill,	Tom Smith,
Calbot Ward,	Charles F. Murphy,
W. Williams,	Al. Smith,
John T. Fetherston,	Senator Frawley,
E. V. Frothingham,	L. C. Ystard,
Dr. J. W. Brannan,	E. T. Matton,
George W. Ball,	James W. Brown,
Senator J. A. O'Gorman,	L. S. Rogers,
Judge A. E. Parker,	F. S. Bishop,
Dudley Field Malone,	James C. Woodward,
W. F. McCombs,	E. B. Boynton,
Dr. George F. Kunz,	W. B. Howland,
Gen. Nelson A. Miles,	John A. Stewart,
Chauncey M. Depew,	George L. Egbert,
August Belmont,	John Nemeth,
Rear Admiral Robert Peary,	A. E. Stilgel,
H. L. Bridgman,	N. Friedman,
Miss Wessling,	Morris Morrison,
Jacob H. Schiff,	Philip Morrison,
	Charles Roth,
	Charles Goldsmith.

The rest of the tercentenary celebration will be music festivals in various

GIVE RELIC TO THE CITY.

Revolutionary Cannon Unveiled in Battery Park.

A cannon of Revolutionary days, dug up years ago at 55 Broadway, was presented to the city yesterday by the City History Club. It was unveiled in Battery Park on the spot where the historic flag pole stood up which Van Arsdale climbed to tear down the flag left by the departing British. The ceremony, which was a feature of the Commercial Tercentenary celebration, opened with the raising of the flag by Major E. T. Paul, in the costume of the Minute Men of 1776.

The cannon was presented by Mrs. A. Barton Hepburn, President of the City History Club, and Park Commissioner Cabot Ward, in accepting it, urged the necessity for playgrounds.

Reginald Pelham Bolton delivered the historical address, during which he said:

> How can we uphold our own actions as an example for peace if we are making profit from the blood and sufferings of the combatants? How can we harmonize our contributions to the merciful Red Cross and to the cause of the refugee while shiploads of ammunition are being manufactured here and shipped, to be used to slaughter the very people we seek to aid?
>
> How must our national prayer for peace be regarded on High, alongside of the shipment of armored cars, cannons, shell, and even of poor dumb horses sent to the bloody fields of slaughter and torture? These things mean money to us. But we could, and should, forego the profit if we believe, as a nation, in what we profess: An equal interest in the welfare of every combating nation, an equal impartiality in our desire to see them cease their strife.

The cannon was unveiled by the honor members of the club, assisted by little Marjory Mairs, granddaughter of William Henry Mairs, the donor. Dr. George F. Kunz presided, and the singing was led by Joseph P. Donnelly, Director of Music of the De Witt Clinton High School.

CHILDREN PARADE IN HARLEM.

Floats on Historical Subjects Features of Pageant.

A big melting pot on one of the floats in the Halloween Festival and Pageant of Harlem yesterday afternoon typified the amalgamation of the nations in the city's life, and these nations were exemplified by the Harlem school children who took part in the celebration. There were little Irish children in green, gayly dressed Italians, little Scotch girls who wore kilts, Germans, and Hungarians.

The parade, which started from Public School 168, at 119th Street and Madison Avenue, marched through 124th Street to Lenox Avenue, down and through 120th Street, where it rested at the side of Mount Morris Park to be reviewed. The evolution of Harlem was shown from the time of the Indians in 1614. Some youngsters wore war paint and feathers and others were costumed as early Dutch settlers.

Present conditions were illustrated by floats. There was an enormous book, standing for education, guarded by youths and maidens in caps and gowns. Recreation was a mammoth baseball, and a great wheel represented the wheels of commerce. William J. Lee was director of the pageant and Miss Mary McKenna assistant.

DYNAMITED HOME, KILLING HIS FAMILY

Scott Stone, U. S. Soldier, Confesses to Crime He Committed in Illinois Last September.

LOVED ANOTHER WOMAN

And Wanted to Get Rid of Wife and Four Children, so Run Away with Her.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 31.—A written confession that he blew up his home with dynamite, killing his sleeping wife and four small children, was made to the police here today by Scott Stone, a United States Army recruit, who was arrested yesterday at Jefferson Barracks. Stone's farmhouse at Tolono, Ill., was burned on Sept. 28 last, Mrs. Stone and four children, the eldest aged 5 years, dying in the blaze.

Stone said in his confession that he committed the crime to be free to go away with a woman whom he knew only as Lucille. Sixteen days after the destruction of his home and family Stone enlisted in the United States Army at a recruiting station at Mattoon, Ill., under an assumed name. He was arrested at the request of the State Attorney of Champaign County, Ill.

According to the confession, Stone on the afternoon of Sept. 27 took his wife and four children buggy riding. They returned home at 7:30 P. M. and went to bed a half hour afterward, all sleeping in the same room. The three older children slept at the foot of the bed and the youngest child beside its mother. Stone said:

> "I slept until 10 o'clock, when I felt my wild, roving nature overcoming me. Between 11 and 12 o'clock I got out of bed and went to the barn, where I had hidden ten sticks of dynamite in the wheat bin. I had bought the dynamite in Tolono and the percussion caps in Champaign.
>
> "I put the dynamite on the table in the kitchen and ran eighteen feet of fuse from it to the back door. I then went outdoors and lit the fuse. After the explosion I began calling for help."

Stone said that townspeople arrived and helped him carry out his furniture.

A detective asked:

"Did you tell any of these people that your family was burning up in that house?"

Stone replied in the affirmative.

"I thought my family would be better off in heaven," Stone said in conclusion.

"What do you mean by that?" he was asked.

Stone replied: "With my spending money and time on the other woman

Stone's arrest was due to the story of a woman who told the State's Attorney of Champaign County that Stone wanted her to go West with him. According to the story, Stone met the woman the day after the fire. The inquest on the deaths of his family failed to develop any evidence of crime, but Stone was kept under surveillance secretly by the Champaign County authorities, who knew of his enlistment.

PRISONER STABS POLICEMAN

While Off Duty in Brooklyn, He Tried to Quell Fight.

While off duty last night Patrolman Frank Monahan, 28 years old, attached to the East Sixty-seventh Street Station, was stabbed in the stomach after quelling a fight in a Brooklyn saloon and will probably die.

He lives at 633 Vanderbilt Avenue, Brooklyn, and as he was going down Underhill Avenue he heard the sound of a general fight in Joseph Druckerman's saloon, at 64 Underhill Avenue. After reducing things to order he arrested Roscoe Cardone of 676 Bergen Street and started off with him to the Grand Avenue Station.

When they had gone a short distance Cardone suddenly drew a knife and stabbed the policeman. Monahan, however, held on to his captive even after falling to the pavement. He was taken to the Swedish Hospital.

Cardone and James Bardell, who was said to have started the fight, were taken to the Grand Street Station.

PUPILS CROWDED IN CELLAR

Taxpayers Demand That Brooklyn School 89 Be Improved.

Declaring that conditions in Public School 89, at Newkirk Avenue and East Thirty-first Street, Brooklyn, were intolerable, representatives of the Vanderveer Park Taxpayers' Association yesterday told President Churchill that steps must be taken to improve the building. They said the school was originally constructed to accommodate 900 pupils. But there are double that number in attendance now. It was pointed out that some of the pupils were quartered in damp cellar rooms.

Flatbush Boy Killed by Auto.

George Schmidt, 8 years old, son of a restaurant keeper, was run down while playing in front of his home at 29 Hawthorne Street, Flatbush, yesterday afternoon, by an automobile belonging to William B. Baker of 219 East Seventeenth Street, Flatbush. Baker hurried the boy to the Kings County Hospital, where he died from a fractured skull.

CHICAGO CATTLE ARE QUARANTINED

Government Forbids Shipments Because of Foot-and-Mouth Disease.

MEASURE OF PRECAUTION

No Disease in the Stock Yards — Shipment of Dressed Carcasses Not Affected.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The Department of Agriculture today quarantined the Union Stock Yards of Chicago to prevent shipment of cattle except for immediate slaughter because of the prevalence of foot-and-mouth disease.

This explanation of the Government's action was issued at the Department of Agriculture:

"Because of the danger that cattle infected with the foot-and-mouth disease may have passed through the Union Stock Yards in Chicago they have been quarantined by the Secretary of Agriculture. This quarantine goes into effect immediately.

"Under the provisions of this quarantine no cattle, sheep, or swine can be moved from the stock yards in interstate or foreign commerce, except for the purpose of immediate slaughter and under permits issued by Federal inspectors. In such case they must be transported in sealed cars placarded 'Quarantined.' Cars which have been designated for this purpose by the Chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry. Cars used for the transportation of stock from the yards must be thoroughly cleansed and disinfected before they can be moved again in interstate or foreign commerce. Shipments of stock into the yards from uninfected areas must be unloaded through cleaned and disinfected docks and alleyways under the supervision of the Federal officials. When reloaded the stock must be placed in cleaned and disinfected cars and the cars officially sealed.

"Up to the present time no case of foot-and-mouth disease has been found in the Union Yards, but there is some CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—The quarantine placed on the Chicago Union Stock Yards today by the Government as a precaution because of the prevalence of foot-and-mouth disease in Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana, affects only about 10 per cent. of the receipts, according to W. J. O'Connor, Assistant General Manager of the Stock Yards Company.

"The order affects only those cattle which are sent here to be fattened before slaughter," said Mr. O'Connor. "It means that we cannot ship them out to the feeding farms. Its only effect will be the time being to reduce this class of receipts. Growers who want their animals fattened before selling to the packers will simply hold them back until the ban is lifted. There has been none of the disease at the yards."

COSTLY FIRE DOWNTOWN.

Blaze Which Destroys Loft Building Gives Firemen a Hard Fight.

Fire last night destroyed the six-story loft building at 70 and 72 Wooster Street, near Broome, and threatened surrounding property to such an extent that nearly all the fire apparatus south of Fourteenth Street was brought out to check the blaze. The fire was discovered at 8:35 o'clock by Joseph Magnani and Peter Guazzo of 215 Wooster Street, who were walking by the building when they saw flames in the interior and turned in the alarm. Acting Chief Martin, who was in the house of Truck 20, at 157 Mercer Street, hurried to the fire and found the building ablaze from cellar to roof. He turned in a second, third, and fourth alarms, which brought out altogether twenty-one engines, five trucks, two water towers, and two searchlights.

The first floor and basement were occupied by the United Corrugated Case Company, and the top floor by the Wakefield Hat Company. The second, third, fourth, and fifth floors were vacant, and the fire had spread clear through them before any apparatus arrived. For more than three hours the firemen pumped water into the building at the rate of 15,000 gallons a minute. The eight-story building at 64 to 68 Wooster Street, occupied by the toy factory of Leo Schlesinger & Co., was full of inflammable materials, which would have made a dangerous blaze if the fire had reached them. The flames were kept from this building, but the firemen were unable to check them in the structure where they started. The building and its contents were completely destroyed, with a loss estimated at $100,000.

AUTO DEALER HIT BY AUTO.

Police Look for Speeders Who Injured John Henry.

Detectives from Brooklyn Police Headquarters are looking for a touring car, said to contain two or three women, which yesterday morning ran over John Henry, an automobile dealer, of 408 Tenth Street, Brooklyn. Henry, who had driven downtown in his car, was looking for a lamp he lost on Fort Hamilton Avenue when a touring car came along at terrific speed and struck him.

The occupants made no attempt to slow down, but drove away so rapidly that none of the eye-witnesses were able to get the number. Dr. Parizot took Henry to the Norwegian Hospital, where it was found that his collarbone and two of his right ribs were broken.

TEACHER BECOMES MOTHER

Child Born to Mrs. Wagner Soon After She Quits Classroom.

Thirteen and a half hours after she had left her classroom in the Curtis High School, Staten Island, Mrs. Lora Wagner, the teacher for whom the Board of Education refused a leave of absence, became a mother while in twilight sleep at the Jewish Maternity Hospital at 1,370 East Ninety-first Street.

Mrs. Wagner left the school at 3:30 on Friday afternoon. She arrived at the hospital at 12:05 A. M., and the child, a boy weighing five and a half pounds, was born at 5 o'clock yesterday morning.

Henrietta Rodman, President of the League for the Civic Service of Women, who called at the hospital, asked Dr. Nathan Ratnosa, who attended Mrs. Wagner, whether Mrs. Wagner had endangered her health by remaining at school so long.

"On the contrary," said Dr. Ratnosa, "we advise women to continue with their ordinary occupations as long as possible. What is most essential is mental serenity."

Miss Rodman said that Mrs. Wagner would ask the Board of Education to have a physician report on her physical incapacity to teach school at present and would renew her request for a leave of absence until next September.

Notable Show of Chrysanthemums.

The chief feature of the private exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York city at the Museum of Natural History was the chrysanthemums displayed by A. Lewisohn. There were five plants, each fourteen feet in diameter, bearing between 1,400 and 1,500 open chrysanthemums. The colors were white, yellow, bronze, and pink. One of very novel construction of war fans shaped. The public is invited to the display, which will be open free until Nov. 3.

To Unveil Tracy Memorial Windows.

Three memorial windows, representing the Annunciation, the Virgin and Child, and the Presentation in the Temple, will be unveiled in St. Luke's Church, at Convent Avenue and 141st Street, at the 11 o'clock service this morning. They are memorials to Ellie Maria Tracy and her mother, Catharine Fisher Wragg, and were erected by Miss Margaret M. Tracy.

$3 Round Trip to Washington

SPECIAL EXCURSION
NEXT SUNDAY via
ROYAL BLUE LINE

New Jersey Central, Reading & Baltimore & Ohio R. R.'s.

A rare opportunity to visit the national capital with its wonderful attractions.

Next SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 8th
Also Sunday, Nov. 22d.

Leave W. 23d St., 11:50 P. M.; Liberty St., 12:01 Midnight. Saturday nights. Tickets on sale week in advance at Liberty St., W. 23d St. and Jersey City Terminals; 245, 370, 1276, 1360 and 1632 Broadway; Cortlandt St., N. Y.; 4 and 71 Court St., Brooklyn.

CONFER OVER NEW HAVEN.

Rumor That Indictments Will Be Presented on Monday.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—A conference over the evidence obtained by the Federal Grand Jury proceedings in the New Haven Railway case was held in the Department of Justice today between Attorney General Gregory, James W. Osborne, Special Assistant in the New Haven case; Oliver Pagan, who is in charge of indictments in the Department of Justice, and Frank H. Swacker of the Interstate Commerce Commission. No statement of the outcome of the conference was made.

It was rumored after the conference that indictments by the Federal Grand Jury might be expected on Monday or early next week, but there was no official confirmation of this.

GALERIE DE LA MODE
Exclusive Ladies' Apparel
308 FIFTH AVENUE, Between 31st & 32d Streets

REMOVAL SALE
FINAL REDUCTIONS
To Effect Total Clearance
PARIS MODES, GOWNS, WRAPS, COSTUMES, FURS AND FUR COATS
At Prices Not Obtainable Even at the End of the Season

A Few Examples:

All Trimmed Trotteur Hats $3
Including Fur Trimmed Models
Not More Than Two Hats Will Be Sold to One Customer.

Handsome Dress Hats $10
Former Prices up to $45.

75 Day and Evening Dresses $20
COSTUMES TAILLEUR, DRESSY SUITS,
None Ever Sold Heretofore Less Than $45.
Higher priced models at correspondingly reduced prices.

No Approvals No C. O. D.'s No Exchanges

Florette
REG U S PAT OFF

453 Fifth Avenue, 39th and 40th Sts.
Millinery Importer
Exceptional Sale
Hats selected from our regular stock,
$10
Heretofore $25.00 to $35.00.

As New York Cannot Go To Paris
During the War
Paris Comes to New York
BOUÉ SOEURS
9 Rue de la Paix, Paris, have arrived with a splendid collection of their own original Winter models, in Tailor Gowns, Mantles, Afternoon & Evening Dresses
Which Are Exhibited at the HOTEL PLAZA
for a limited period, beginning Monday, Nov. 2. (Open on Election Day.) The High Society of New York is cordially invited to take advantage of the unusual opportunity to see the first original Boué Soeurs' Gowns Exhibit in the States.

Length, 5 ft. 10 in.
Price, $1800

Length, 6 ft. 5 in.
Prices $2100, 2200, 2350

Length, 6 ft.
Price, $1350

The Aeolian Company invites the attention of its patrons and the public to a superb exhibit of

The Grand Pianola

At Aeolian Hall, West 42nd Street

There are undoubtedly many owners of Upright Player-pianos who would gladly increase their investment by exchanging their present instrument for one much finer, if they knew that such a thing existed.

To such people, and to all who would be interested in equipping their homes with a magnificent Grand pianoforte representing the highest development of the "player" idea, the Aeolian Company particularly commends the Grand Pianola.

The three pianos used in building the Grand Pianola are the leading instruments in the piano field to-day. They are the only pianos made of such notable quality that the demand for them has become international requiring factories in both Europe and America.

In the Grand Pianola, the superior tonal and playing qualities of these three grand pianos are emphasized by the artistic capabilities of the Pianola. Every element of musical expression which the owner of an Upright Player-piano finds so charming in his instrument, is many times magnified in the Grand Pianola, making this instrument far transcend any Player-piano hitherto known.

The pianistic effects possible only with a genuine Pianola, and found in their highest degree in the Grand Pianola, are produced by the Metrostyle, Themodist, Graduated Accompaniment, Sustaining Pedal Device and other exclusive features of the Pianola.

One of these magnificent Grand Pianolas occupies but little more space than an Upright Piano. In purchasing, very moderate monthly payments may be arranged, if desired. Liberal allowance will also be made on other pianos and player-pianos in exchange.

We will be glad to demonstrate the Grand Pianola to every visitor irrespective of any question of purchase.

Upright Pianolas may be obtained in these six models—The Steinway Pianola, The Steck Pianola, The Wheelock Pianola, The Stuyvesant Pianola, The Stroud Pianola and the famous Weber Pianola. Prices from $550 up.

The Talking Machine Department
A full line of Columbia Grafonolas and Victor Talking Machines. All the latest Victor and the famous Columbia Records. Courteous, efficient and prompt service.

The Piano Department
An immense stock of both Grand and Upright pianos. The world's leading pianos in their respective grades. Prices from $250 up. Easy terms. Renting.

The AEOLIAN CO., Aeolian Hall
"The Largest Manufacturers of Musical Instruments in the World"
29-31-33 West Forty-second Street Between Fifth and Sixth Avenues

WHITMAN BARES NEW ROAD SCANDAL

A Highway Engineer Suspended Three Days After Testifying About Bad Work.

VAIN PROTEST TO GLYNN

Republican Candidate Ends 3,000-Mile Up-State Tour Confident of Election.

WESTCHESTER AUTO WHIRL

Gives "Place of Stay" Warning—Confers with Mgr. Lavelle's Brother on Sectarian Issue.

After making seven speeches between Binghamton and Kingston yesterday, and engaging in a whirlwind tour of Westchester County by automobile last night, District Attorney Whitman, Republican candidate for Governor, arrived here at 1:10 o'clock this morning, tired out from fifteen days of campaigning.

During the last half of the day's tour, Assistant District Attorney Lavelle, a brother of Mgr. Lavelle, accompanied Mr. Whitman. With Mr. Lavelle the candidate held long talks upon the religious issue that has been injected into the campaign, but the results of the conferences were not made public. Mr. Lavelle joined the party at Port Jervis, at Mr. Whitman's invitation.

The candidate's final word to his political advisers as his automobile stopped in front of his home at 37 Madison Avenue was "Leave me alone over Sunday. I want one day off to play with the baby."

Mr. Whitman promised that he would get into harness again tomorrow and spend the last day before election in an excursion into Rockland County, one of the few counties he did not enter during his trip to the Canadian border and back. To voters at all the meetings yesterday Mr. Whitman gave this warning:

"Do not try to vote under the 'place of stay' law. The law is unconstitutional and will no doubt be repealed at the next legislative session. In the meanwhile, the courts having passed upon it, if any one tries to vote under it we shall most assuredly arrange for him a little 'place of stay' in jail."

Another Road Scandal.

The shots of the day at Gov. Glynn had to do with alleged road scandals which have originated since the Executive took office, and the suspension from the Highways Department of John P. Kelley, an assistant engineer, three days after he had testified before a Broome County Grand Jury last July that roads he was supposed to supervise were very bad and his protests to his superiors had gone unheeded.

Mr. Kelley was introduced by friends to Mr. Whitman at Binghamton on Friday evening, and he went over with Mr. Whitman the entire situation, submitting for Mr. Whitman's inspection the full correspondence between himself and his superiors in the Highway Department.

Mr. Whitman made as his principal points that the engineer was still under suspension and that no hearing had ever been given to him although numerous attempts had been made to force a hearing.

In addition to using the documents furnished by Kelley, Mr. Whitman drove at Gov. Glynn by quoting from reports on the Kelley case submitted by Charles H. Jackson, Chief Examiner of the State Department of Efficiency and Economy, and from a statement credited to Mr. Jackson in the Binghamton newspapers last July. In this statement Kelley's suspension was characterized as "a warning" pasted on the sky that every State Highway Inspector had better keep his eyes blinded."

"About the highway scandals," said Mr. Whitman, "I want to tell you about one of many—a very recent one that is still continuing. Two years ago a contract to build a macadam road—the Harpursville road in Broome County—was let. The road was to cost close to $160,000. The road was poorly built in every conceivable particular. It aroused the entire community and today it is a ruin.

"An honest engineer of the Highway Department, John P. Kelley, was in charge. From time to time in his daily reports to his superiors he made it known that the material was deficient and the workmanship poor. He received instructions to 'let up and not be so particular.'

Engineer Kelley Suspended.

"Such a protest was aroused that the State Highway Department investigated the road, and the investigator reported that it was not being built according to contract. As a result, Engineer Kelley and two or three others were suspended. Kelley at once demanded a hearing.

"He then conclusively proved that he had reported almost daily the failure to perform the terms of the contract. He was reinstated as a result and absolved from all responsibility. Later the County Superintendent complained to the Department at Albany, and about the same time the Grand Jury of the county investigated the case. Their report substantiated Kelley in every particular. The Grand Jury reported May 18, 1914. On the 21st day of May, 1914, Mr. Kelley received from the Department of Highways the following letter:

State of New York,
Department of Highways,
Albany.

No. 80,193.

Binghamton, N. Y., May 21, 1914.

Subject—Leave of absence, Jno. P. Kelley.
Mr. John P. Kelley, 1st Assistant Engineer,
Binghamton, N. Y.

Dear Sir: You are hereby given a leave of absence, without pay, the same to begin from the close of work today. Before leaving today, please turn over any property in your possession belonging to the State.

Very truly yours,
HOWARD E. SMITH,
Division Engineer.

"Mr. Kelley at once protested to the Department of Efficiency and Economy and duly received the following letter:

State of New York,
Department of Efficiency and Economy.
Albany, May 25th, 1914.

Mr. John P. Kelley, 245 Court St., Binghamton, N. Y.

Dear Sir: Your favor of May 23d, inclosing newspaper clippings and also of former dates with other clippings, have been received.

I have been instructed by Commissioner Delaney to prepare a statement of your case and at the earliest possible moment it will be laid before the Governor, with a request for him to see that justice is accorded you.

I believe that your suspension is the direct result of your testimony in the Broome County road case, both before Mr. Delaney and before the Grand Jury. Unless the officials of the State, whose duty it is to see that law is enforced, protect the subordinates of departments who testify concerning rotten conditions, law and order in this State will cease.

I will make as vigorous representations as I can in your behalf.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) CHARLES H. JACKSON,
Chief Examiner.

Case Is Still Unheard

"Now that letter of Mr. Jackson was written before there was any election due, and you will see it rings with a natural indignation against great wrongs done. Yet Kelley is still under suspension, and his case is still unheard.

"The people, of course, were indignant as they would be at any case of what they considered outrageous treatment of an honest official. The Binghamton Republican said that the treatment of Kelley was a notice to every crook in the State of New York to go ahead.' Mr. Jackson was quoted in the Binghamton papers very much to the same effect as his letter of protest to Kelley himself.

"'This dismissal of Kelley,' reads the interview, 'has put blinders on every Inspector in the State. The man who goes out to see that the taxpayers get their money's worth goes out goggle-ized.'

"Mr. Kelley says that the Department of Efficiency and Economy in May last laid the facts in the case before the Governor. No action has been taken. Kelley and the public press have repeatedly requested action in the matter, but without avail. Gov. Glynn last Winter is reported to have said: 'I shall not rest until every charge against the management of the State highways has been sifted to the bottom.' Kelley is still under suspension and has had no hearing. Contrast, if you will, promises with performances. Where is the hope for an honest administration of the great highway department of this State if justice is denied to an honest employe who seeks to protect the interests of the State."

Mr. Whitman pledged that after Jan. 1, if he was elected, there would be a complete housecleaning at Albany, holding that the need for a radical change was the predominating and overshadowing issue of the campaign.

Edwin Duffey, former District Attorney of Cortland County, who abandoned affiliations with the Democratic Party in order to join the Whitman forces, spoke with Mr. Whitman at New Rochelle, Mt. Vernon and Yonkers. He told of incidents in Mr. Whitman's college days which he said convinced him as a classmate that "Whitman knew a crook when he saw one and loathed him with all his soul."

In the tour he concluded this morning Mr. Whitman traveled nearly 3,000 miles and visited fifty-two counties. He came back entirely confident of victory for himself and for the entire Republican ticket with him.

CHALLENGE CONGRESSMEN.

Ballot Association Will Contest Right of Loft and Carew to Vote.

The Honest Ballot Association announced yesterday that in addition to the name of State Engineer John A. Bensel, the names of Congressmen George W. Loft, of the Thirteenth District, and John F. Carew from the Seventeenth, both Tammany men and candidates for re-election, had been put on the challenge list and that all three would be arrested if they attempted to vote from their "places of stay" in Manhattan.

Mr. Bensel has registered from the Hotel Marie Antoinette, but it is alleged he really divides his time between Albany and New Jersey. Congressman Loft has registered from his candy factory, Broome and Centre Streets. His actual residence, however, according to the statement of the Honest Ballot Association, is Baldwin, L. I. Mr. Carew has registered from a "place of stay," at 319 East Fifty-seventh Street, in the district he represents in Congress. He has a residence at Rockville Centre.

The Honest Ballot Association, in the belief that attempts of this nature, made possible under the "place of stay" clause of the new election law, is a serious infraction of its spirit, intends to carry the fight against the constitutionality of this provision to the highest court.

SETTLEMENT NEEDS MONEY

Hard Times Have Made It Difficult to Fiannce Rivington St. Work.

Resident workers of the College Settlement at 95 Rivington Street, the first institution of its kind in this country, celebrated the 25th anniversary of the founding of the house, with a dinner at the Murray Hill Lyceum, on East Thirty-fourth Street last night. Of the 400 who attended, 250 have actually lived and worked in the Rivington Street District. Hard times have made it difficult to finance the settlement. President McAneny of the Board of Aldermen, one of last night's speakers, said that the budget of 1916 would make better provision for settlement work.

The early days at the College Settlement were reviewed by some of the founders. Miss Elisabeth S. Williams, head of the institution, said the house was originally opened with seven residents, representing Smith, Wellesley, and Vassar Colleges. Other speakers were Katharine B. Davis, Dr. Henry Moskowits, Howard Bradstreet, Joseph Fishkin, Gustave Horn, Mrs. Robert Moraney, Dr. Jane E. Robbins, Mrs. Charles B. Spahr, and Mrs. Lucius H. Thayer.

COLONEL SCORES APPEAL TO BIGOTRY

Infamous, Roosevelt Says, to Treat a Man on the Basis of His Worship.

LINKS BARNES AND MURPHY

Ex-President Tells Brooklyn Audience He Wishes They Were Both in the Same Party.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, after a hard day spent in campaigning, arrived at the Brooklyn Academy of Music at 10:30 o'clock last night and ran down to the footlights to the accompaniment of a hearty burst of applause. The gathering was very decorous and there were few cheers. This was largely because those responsible for the meeting had hired the hall for a lecture instead of for a political meeting, thereby getting the hall at half rate. But to follow out this plan it was necessary to hold the seats in reserve. Tickets were issued and nearly every seat was occupied early in the evening and the platform seats were filled by enthusiastic men and women.

Some of the speakers expressed pleasure at the change in political methods. How complete the change was came strongly to all those in the house when a collection was taken up to help pay the expenses of the campaign. Col. Roosevelt plunged right into his subject as soon as he had a chance to be heard. He disposed of the religious issue that has been injected into the campaign in this way:

"The cardinal principle of the Progressive Party is that each man shall be treated according to his work. It is infamous to treat any man on the basis of the way in which he worships his Creator. We treat with absolute equality all men, whether they be Catholics, Protestants, or Jews. We hold that it is the prime duty of our party to see that there is no discrimination for or against any reputable man or against any candidate because of the creed he professes. Friends, I appeal to every man to help us accomplish the ends we seek, no matter whether he is rich or poor, or how he earns his daily bread. We only ask that the men who act with our party live as decent men should.

"I wish at the outset," he said, "to meet some of the objections made frequently by men who say that they would vote with us if they thought we could win. I ask you to stand with us because, whether we win or lose, we are fighting a great fight for righteousness, and we will keep it up until victory perches upon our banner. Don't wait until after the victory to plunder the fruits of the conquered."

Then the Colonel got around to Bosses Barnes and Murphy. Of them he said:

"At the top of two places stand Barnes and Murphy and they stand so close together that you couldn't put a sheet of tissue paper between them. There is no distinction between them, and whatever their principles are they do not prevent them from standing or from acting together. I wouldn't object to them so much for being in public life if they were both in the same party.

"But they confuse the citizens by being nominally heads of different parties while the machines they control stand for precisely the same things. Barnes stands for Lincoln and the freedom of the slaves, and Murphy stands for Thomas Jefferson and the things that Jefferson stood for. I don't believe Murphy ever knew what Jefferson really did represent, but as Jefferson has been dead for nearly a hundred years it does no harm to stand for him—in Murphy's opinion."

Bainbridge Colby criticised Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and other men connected with the National Administration for their support of James W. Gerard in these words:

"Cabinet Ministers have mentioned the fact that Senatorial candidates were good Democrats, as if this constituted an unanswerable claim to the confidence and consideration of the voters. What a silly philosophy, what a caricature it makes of our politics. Isn't it high time we shook off this degrading superstition of party obedience?"

"Party loyalty was not the supreme duty," said Mr. Colby, and he attacked Senator Root, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, and William D. Guthrie, whom he termed the "castigator of judges," for the appeal for support for James W. Wadsworth, because he was a Republican.

"Why do we waste our time with the discussion of candidates and the weighing of and comparison of principles if these men are right?" he said. "Let us count the Republicans and the Democrats and let the count be certified by auditors of skill and standing. Then the result can be hailed as righteous and uplifting. Nobody will have committed the unforgivable sin of consulting his conscience or exercising his intelligence."

Frederick M. Davenport, the Progressive candidate for Governor, was heartily welcomed. He told of the time when Jotham P. Allds, a Republican, was turned out of the State Senate for bribery and how the Democrats and Republicans sought to advance Allds in the majority leadership of the Senate. He accused Barnes and the Republican machine of being responsible for the entrance of Murphy into the field of State politics. He said:

"In 1910, when the second administration of Gov. Hughes was closing in gloom, and Barnes had had his way and Murphy had had his way against the great and officially constituted leader of nine millions of people, the red herring across the trail was the alleged menace of the personality and policies of Theodore Roosevelt. Upon this fictitious issue, the Barnes element joined the Murphy element from one end of the Commonwealth to the other, and lifted Tammany into Statewide power, in spite of the fact that Hughes had personally urged upon Roosevelt the duty of continuing the fight for the freedom of the State from bi-partisan intrigue and irresponsible rule."

The other speakers were Dr. Katharine B. Davis, Commissioner of Corrections, and ex-Senator Josiah T. Newcomb. Robert H. Elder presided.

GLYNN ON BIGOTRY ISSUE.

Anti-Catholic Circulars Fitted Whitman's Speeches, He Says.

Gov. Glynn began his day yesterday with an interview in which he discussed the issues of the campaign. In speaking of Mr. Whitman's responsibility for the injection of religious prejudice into the struggle he said:

"I do not charge Mr. Whitman with having put the religious issue into the campaign, but things that occurred after his speeches in Amsterdam and elsewhere are, to say the least, cause for suspicion. Mr. Whitman's references to 'American patriots' were followed by the distribution among his hearers of copies of The Menace, anti-Catholic circulars, and sample ballots on which no Catholic was indorsed. Mr. Whitman may not have ordered the distribution of such reading matter. I do not charge that he did—but the reading matter fitted in very well with parts of his speeches."

Asked what effect he thought the injection of the religious issue would have on his campaign, the Governor said:

"It will probably cost me some votes up-State, but I have always run ahead of my ticket there, and should be able to do so again. I ran ahead of Wilson and Sulzer up-State two years ago, and persons knew then that I was a Catholic."

The Governor was entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Commerce Club, at 744 Manhattan Avenue, in Brooklyn, where he addressed 600 business men. In the afternoon he spoke to 1,500 persons in the German Club, at Stapleton, S. I. He explained his plans, and put particular emphasis on the need for creating a State employment bureau and the necessity for conserving the water power of the State.

"I am ready to stand upon each and every plank of the Democratic platform adopted at Saratoga," he said. "And I do this not merely because I am a Democrat, but because I regard that platform as one of the finest expressions of intelligent public opinion ever put forward by any political party. As the Democratic leader I shall endeavor to make our laws reflect the principles of this platform. Just as I shall compel Democratic office holders to reflect Democratic honesty and effectiveness in the discharge of their duties."

4,000 CHEER GLYNN AT FINAL RALLY

Continued from Page 1.

York by injecting a religious or race issue into it."

Francis Lynde Stetson was introduced as a "more distinguished lawyer" than William D. Guthrie, and one who would refute Mr. Guthrie's criticisms of Ambassador Gerard, and Mr. Stetson, if he did nothing else, made the audience laugh long and often at everything Mr. Guthrie said about the Democratic candidate for the Senate. Mr. Stetson made jokes of Mr. Guthrie's jeers. Comparing Mr. Gerard and Mr. Guthrie, Mr. Stetson said:

"Remember that Sir Edward Goshen reported to the British Parliament that nothing could excel the capacity, the character, the quality, and the official actions of Ambassador Gerard, and is he going to be thrown aside because of criticism by my excellent and highly esteemed friend Mr. Guthrie, who is as earnest a partisan as he is eminent a lawyer, who never says any good in any Democrat, and who hardly ever saw any fault in any Republican, who would have put Judas Iscariot and Grover Cleveland on the same platform. Will you take the utterance of the British Ambassador before the world or the petty, unworthy criticism into which my friend has permitted himself to fall? Mr. Guthrie says that Mr. Gerard as a Judge appointed to minor offices men of the political organization with which he had been associated. I suppose that Mr. Guthrie never knew a Republican Judge to appoint a Republican clerk or referee. No, that depth of depravity was reserved for my friend, Mr. Gerard.

Stetson Praises Gerard.

"And what is the next thing—that Mr. Gerard was Treasurer of Tammany Hall. I suppose Mr. Guthrie never knew a man who had received funds for a Republican organization to become a Judge and to be a pretty good Judge at that. I mean my friend Judge Miller of the Court of Appeals, who is quite as good, sound, and round a Republican organizer as you can find. My friend Guthrie—bless my soul, I love him dearly, but he must not make this kind of talk—my friend Guthrie then says that Gerard was the bagman of Tammany Hall. Perhaps he was the bagman of Tammany Hall—but I know one thing for certain: Every report that comes from the travelers in Germany shows that he has been the bagman for every American in want."

William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, was the Chairman of the meeting. He spoke as the personal representative of the National Administration and appealed for a "trustworthy Democratic majority" in the House and Senate at Washington. He pointed out that the Democratic majority in the Senate was only six, and that the majority in the House might be lost in the present election if the voters did not stand behind the President. He said that a "great Democratic policy" was in peril. Referring to Mr. Gerard, he said:

"I know that when he goes to Washington he will stand by the party and the President. He won't have to be clubbed into line either, and that is the kind of man we need there. He is a trustworthy Democrat."

Passing on to Gov. Glynn, Secretary McAdoo first appealed for votes for the Governor because of his performances and promises, and then he added:

"Gov. Glynn ought to be elected particularly to vindicate the American doctrine, as well as the principle of the Constitution, that religious and sectarian and racial issues should never be injected into a campaign. We ought to rebuke the men who have made that issue, and we ought to rebuke the cowardly men who have tried to take advantage of it. I have more respect for the man who has the courage to come out and make the issue than for the coward who won't say anything and yet attempts to reap the benefit from the issue."

There was another outburst of applause when Mr. McAdoo introduced Mr. Schiff as "a distinguished philanthropist and business man." Mr. Schiff promised to make a short speech, and kept his word, but he seized the opportunity to hold District Attorney Whitman up to ridicule and to accuse him of attempting to get secret votes by means of the religious issue. He called Mr. Glynn the best Governor since Samuel J. Tilden. He asked the voters to support Gov. Glynn also because they wanted to see retained in power the splendid rejuvenated Democracy of Woodrow Wilson. If we wish to return President Wilson to the White House two years from now, he said, the Empire State must be kept in line.

Governor Reviews His Work.

The Governor spoke longer and went more fully into the issues of the campaign than he has on any other occasion since he began his appeal for votes. He went over the legislation and Executive acts of the ten months of his administration and outlined what he intended to do if re-elected. He once more challenged Mr. Whitman to answer his questions on the campaign issues, and fired one more shot at religious prejudice. In the begining of his address he said:

"Popular government justifies itself only when the votes cast at an election are intelligent votes. The ballot which on either side is cast in ignorance of the issues before the State or in disregard of these issues is a vote which might better not be cast. Parties are valuable only through their power to give to a party administration the responsibility which attaches to permanent and organized public opinion.

"I therefore deem it proper and necessary in the closing hours of this campaign to place myself and my party squarely on record as to the nature of past public service and future performance.

"If this were a campaign in which no great public questions were to be decided there might be some excuse for a division upon party lines, but next Tuesday the citizens of New York must render their verdict upon some of the most important public issues which have been submitted for their consideration in a generation."

The Governor then took up the financial policy of his administration, saying that he had ordered a change from "slipshod and wasteful methods to a system by which the State's expenditures could be kept within the State's indirect revenues." Regarding the changes in financial policy he said:

"A budget system has been introduced by which the Legislature and the Governor may learn the specific purpose for which each dollar is to be expended. Lump sum appropriations, which through their general terms permit money to be wastefully and extravagantly spent, have been abolished. The financial law, which requires that no debt can be incurred by any State Department unless there is already in existence an appropriation with which to pay the debt, has been rigidly enforced for the first time in years. In this regard let me say that at the time I took office more than $1,500,000 was owed by the State to innocent third parties, and every cent of this obligation had been incurred by past administrations in direct violation of the financial law. The surplus in the Sinking Fund has been adjusted so that more than $3,000,000 which should be paid by the taxpayers of the future has been saved for the taxpayers of today."

State Must Aid Farmers.

Next the Governor took up the creation of a land bank and the State's changed attitude toward the farmers. In this connection he said

"In my recent tour through the northern counties I saw, through the window of my car, farm after farm upon which piles of ripened fruit had been left to waste and rot. Various abnormal conditions were responsible for this situation, but I notice that the reduction in the market price of apples in our large cities in no way corresponds to the abundant crops which are going to waste up-State. What is true in this instance in respect to one crop is true with reference in respect to every crop. There is an artificial barrier between the farmer and the consumer which works hardship, not only upon the farmer himself, but upon every citizen of our State.

"There is only one way to reduce the high cost of living, and that is to change the situation which makes the consumer pay a dollar for food for which the farmer himself receives but 35 cents."

After touching upon the State Employment Bureau and other legislation of his Administration, Gov. Glynn came to what is always the climax of his campaign arguments—the workmen's compensation law. Upon this he spent much time, going into it very fully and expanding upon its character as a humanitarian measure. In closing his address he summarized what he intended to do if elected, and began by giving his promise to conserve the State's natural resources—chiefly timber and water. He said:

Plans for Conservation.

"Under a proper system of forestry the timber in the State's Adirondack preserve could be made to yield large revenues to the State each year. Vast amounts of timber are permitted to waste and rot because the State Constitution does not permit the State authorities to utilize or remove a single tree. Instead of protecting the Adirondack preserve, the present prohibition of the State Constitution exposes it to serious damage through forest fires which are started from dry and decaying wood.

"The State's water power is another resource that should be conserved, and the only way to conserve water power is to use it. I am in favor of a well-considered use of the waters, which should be harnessed to light our cities and turn the wheels of our factories.

"The State's prison accommodations are inadequate and every hour that this situation is permitted to continue is a reflection upon the humanity and enlightenment of this State. I have already taken steps to remedy the overcrowding in the State hospitals, and if elected shall work for similar relief in the State prisons.

"I am in heartiest accord with the promise of the Democratic platform to extend the merit system wherever practicable, and to insure an impregnable civil service system in all departments.

"With a Constitutional Convention approaching it should be possible for me, co-operating with and assisting that convention, to dispense with the red tape and the needless duplications that make the operations of the various State departments tedious and unnecessarily expensive. It is my ambition to institute in each department of the State Government the particular reforms which I have instituted already in the broader field of State finance."

The Governor concluded with a stirring eulogy of America and a declaration of pride in his State and nation.

CROPSEY WILL PUSH SULLIVAN INQUIRY

District Attorney Is Determined to Get at the Bottom of Sing Sing Auto Scandal.

MANY BEFORE GRAND JURY

Prosecutor Suspects Convict-Banker Has Been Getting Money on Depositors' Securities.

Notwithstanding the removal of Warden Thomas J. McCormick as a result of the inquiry by Stephen C. Baldwin, Gov. Glynn's special investigator, District Attorney James C. Cropsey of Kings County showed yesterday that he had no intention of dropping the Brooklyn end of the Sing Sing investigation. Several of the witnesses who testified before Commissioner Baldwin were before the Kings County Grand Jury yesterday, and others will be heard by that body tomorrow. In probing the alleged business activities of David A. Sullivan, the Union Bank wrecker, since he has been in prison, Mr. Cropsey is trying to learn whether Sullivan supplied any of the money with which the Sing Sing automobile was purchased. Before Commissioner Baldwin it was made to appear that the $2,000 which Warden McCormick paid for the auto was lent to him by Michael J. Lally, proprietor of a hotel in Yonkers.

The District Attorney is endeavoring to clear up certain discrepancies in the testimony given in the Baldwin investigation as to the methods resorted to by McCormick in the purchase of the automobile. With this end in view, he will examine tomorrow Lally, McCormick, and the ex-Warden's secretary, William J. Watson, as to apparently conflicting statements made by them. Lally testified that he lent McCormick the money on a note at four months dated Aug. 1 last. Watson said that the money was paid to McCormick in his presence by Lally on Aug. 29, and that he in turn paid it to the manufacturers of the machine on the same day. Commissioner Baldwin, in his report to the Governor, said that Lally's testimony was "evasive," and the investigator expressed the belief that the hotel man never made the loan to McCormick.

Mr. Cropsey seems to be working on this theory and trying to establish that a part, if not all, the money with which the automobile was bought was furnished by Sullivan. The District Attorney is trying to trace all moneys supposed to have come into the hands of the convicted banker since he has been in prison. These funds are alleged to have been collected on securities belonging to the depositors of the wrecked bank and figure in the complaint of larceny against Sullivan forming the basis for the Grand Jury's investigation.

Several employes of the Cadillac Automobile Company in Manhattan were before the Grand Jury yesterday. One of them was A. D. Marsh, a salesman. He was questioned about the sale of the car, and is said to have told a story differing from that told by witnesses before Commissioner Baldwin. At the Sing Sing inquiry Watson said that he had gone alone to the Cadillac offices for the purchase of the car. Marsh is alleged to have said that three men came for the car, one of whom he took to be a chauffeur because of the knowledge of automobiles which he displayed. The District Attorney is said to be trying to find out whether this "chauffeur" was Sullivan.

J. H. Johnson and J. W. German, sales manager and cashier of the Cadillac offices, were also questioned yesterday before the Grand Jury concerning the sale of the automobile.

John J. Malloy, assistant superintendent of the Industrial Department of Sing Sing Prison, who was committed for contempt on Monday for refusing to answer questions in the Grand Jury investigation, testified before that body yesterday. On Friday, when he expressed a willingness to give testimony, he was paroled in the custody of his counsel, Robert H. Elder. In the Grand Jury room yesterday he is said to have told of Sullivan's outings and of the convicted banker's management of his business affairs while in prison.

When Lally, the Yonkers hotel man, appears before the Grand Jury tomorrow, he will probably be asked by Mr. Cropsey why he did not give McCormick a check for the amount of the loan, and how he came to have ready to hand $2,000 in such large bills as he is alleged to have given the deposed Warden. It was said yesterday that the District Attorney would ask to be shown the records of Lally's bank account and demand the production of the note given to Lally by McCormick.

Besides Lally, McCormick, and Watson, Deputy State Controller Michael J. Walsh, who was a witness in the Baldwin investigation, has been subpoenaed to appear before the Grand Jury tomorrow.

Mr. Baldwin said yesterday that if the Governor desired him to do so he would resume, as soon as possible, the investigation of conditions in Sing Sing.

"I have not heard from Gov. Glynn as to whether any further hearings will be held," said Mr. Baldwin. "It is entirely up to him. I am ready to act under his orders. If a general examination into Sing Sing affairs is started, however, I shall have to have time to prepare for it. I was brought into the Sullivan investigations so suddenly there was no time to make any preliminary arrangements."

Gov. Glynn said yesterday that the Sing Sing scandal was closed until after election. He said that the immediate demands had been satisfied by the removal of Warden McCormick, and that he did not propose to let any one force further investigation during the heat of a campaign. He promised that a full investigation into the affairs and management of the prison would be completed as soon as possible after Election Day.

"I will not be driven to any hasty action by public clamor," the Governor said. "I will not wreck the career of a man such as Superintendent Riley to satisfy any amount of unproven accusation. I do not pretend to pass judgment upon the extent of Riley's culpability in the McCormick case, but I do know that in many ways Riley has made one of the best prison superintendents this State has ever had, and will have to see strong evidence against him before I remove him. I admit, of course, that Superintendent Riley erred in his appointment of McCormick and placed too much confidence in the man, but remember please that Riley has made more than 200 appointments and if only one of them was a mistake he is to be congratulated."

District Attorney Cropsey of Kings County received a report yesterday from a member of his staff who is investigating the charges of favoritism to David A. Sullivan that Sullivan had been seen in Flatbush, where he lived, in August, 1913, when he was supposed to be at hard labor in Sing Sing, which was then under Warden James M. Clancy. Mr. Clancy could not be reached last night to be asked about this.

NO TROUBLE AT SING SING.

Rumors of Riot Threat Denied — Father Cashin Counsels Order.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, Oct. 31.—Rumors that prisoners had threatened to riot because of the removal of Warden Thomas J. McCormick were denied at the prison today.

At the regular Saturday evening moving picture show, the Rev. Father William E. Cashin, chaplain of the prison, made an address in which he told the prisoners that, if they wished to show gratitude to ex-Warden McCormick for his humane treatment of them and for his establishment of the weekly moving picture show, the weekly ball game, and the supper in the mess hall instead of in their cells, they could pay the best possible testimonial to him by refraining from disorder while the new management took charge of the prison.

"I made the speech to them," Father Cashin said, "because of the mutiny which occurred at the time Warden Kennedy, a popular man with the prisoners, was removed. There was no particular reason to anticipate disorder. The prisoners had been quiet so far, and none of the keepers saw any reason for apprehension."

Ex-Warden McCormick paid a visit to Sing Sing this morning, but it is not true that he made a talk to the prisoners. Subpoena servers from the office of District Attorney Cropsey visited the prison in the morning to serve processes on some of the prison officials.

RED CROSS FAIR POPULAR.

$6,000 Obtained for War Sufferers at Grand Central Palace.

Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, Treasurer of the Red Cross Bazaar, which has run for the last two weeks at the Grand Central Palace, announced last night that at least $6,000 had been obtained for the war sufferers. A double charity has been accomplished, Mrs. Nelson H. Henry, Chairman of the bazaar, said last night, because of money in sums from $5 to $25 sent by women interested in the bazaar who have not been able to be present. The Bazaar Committee has purchased with this money household supplies at its own bazaar market and sent them to different philanthropic institutions in the city. The Jewell Day Nursery, St. Agnes Day Nursery, Home for Incurables, and Widowed Mothers' Fund Association have all received barrels of staples.

Two of the most interesting features at the bazaar were the melting pot and knitting booth. Bargain counter crowds, men, women, and dealers, have looked for bargains in the salable articles from the melting pot. Miss Luisita Leland, in charge of it, said yesterday that at least $500 worth of goods had been sold, and the melting pot was still half full of gold and silver.

Last night at the bazaar Miss Lois Elwell and Miss Kathleen Howard of the Century Opera House sang. Dr. David Dudley Stowell and Percy Dodge auctioneered off the live stock that was left. The picture collection is so valuable that it is to be retained, and the Anderson Galleries have offered their services free to sell the collection in their galleries early in December for the benefit of the bazaar fund. Keppel & Co. on this understanding made yesterday another large donation of prints and etchings. Any other goods remaining at the end of the evening will be donated to the next Red Cross Bazaar in the city.

WOMAN DEAD ON BEACH.

Body Found at Coney Island with Evidence of Suicide.

The body of an unidentified woman, well dressed, of refined appearance and apparently 50 years old, was found last night on the beach at Coney Island near the Municipal Baths by Charles M. Schwartz, of 424 East Eleventh Street, Flushing. She was clad in a black fitted jacket and a black petticoat and stockings.

Policeman Samuel Lecy, of the Coney Island station, later found on the steps of the Shelter House, a hundred yards away, a brown broadcloth coat, a black broadcloth skirt, a brown plush hat, a fur boa and a handbag. There was every indication that the woman had committed suicide. Dr. von Dylen, of the Coney Island Hospital, said that apparently she had been dead only an hour half an hour when found.

The woman was gray-haired and gray-eyed, short and of medium weight, and had two gold teeth in her upper jaw and a black mole on the left cheek. Her handbag contained quinine pills and a card of the Castle Confidential Credit Company, of 205 West Forty-second Street.

L. P. Hollander & Co.

SPECIAL REDUCTION SALE OF

French Hand-Made Lingerie

Nightgowns	from $3.75
Combinations	from 3.50
Envelope Chemises	from 3.75
Chiffon Chemises	from 5.75

FIFTH AVE., at 46th St.

Kramer Guaranteed FURS

FROM TRAPPER TO WEARER

Buy the "FAMOUS KRAMER FURS" direct from America's leading manufacturer at our wholesale salesroom and save money.

KRAMER FURS KNOWN THE WORLD OVER "SINCE 1873"

Fox, Wolf, Raccoon and other Fur Sets	$18.00
Persian Lamb Coats	$125.00
Near Seal Coats	$45.00
Genuine Moire Pony Coats	$22.50
Men's Fur Lined and Automobile Coats	$20.00

Complete assortment of rich Furs.
Furs to order without extra charge.
Furs remodeled and repaired at wholesale prices.
OPEN ALL DAY ELECTION DAY.

KRAMER FUR CO.
OF NEW YORK
Nearly 12 Years at
13 EAST 16TH STREET
Bet. Broadway and 5th Ave., New York.
Take escalator to Mezzanine salesroom.

"Continuation of the Very Important Sale"
By direction of The Underwriters Salvage Company of N. Y.

At the American Art Galleries

MADISON SQUARE SOUTH, NEW YORK

TOMORROW (MONDAY) AFTERNOON AT 2:30 and 5 following afternoons (Election Day Included) at the same hour

At Positive Unprotected Public Sale
"Offering Extraordinary Opportunities to the Trade and Private Buyers"

The Very Extensive Collection of Artistic Productions and Novelties from ENGLAND, FRANCE AND GERMANY

The Importation of which has now practically ceased.

Selected and Imported for Their Retail Trade by the widely known house of

James E. Caldwell & Company, Philadelphia

And having been more or less injured by smoke and water during a fire in their establishment.

Are now to be sold for account of the Fire Insurance Companies in Interest.

The More Important Objects Including

THE GREAT COLLECTION OF CLOCKS

are included in this week's sale.

The sale will be conducted by MR. THOMAS E. KIRBY and his assistant, Mr. Otto Bernet, of

THE AMERICAN ART ASSOCIATION, Mgrs.
2, 4, and 6 E. 23d Street, Madison Sq. South, New York.

High Quality Bulbs

FOR FALL PLANTING

Plant NOW to bloom next Spring

GIANT DARWIN TULIPS

The Tulip for Everybody's Garden

Whether you delight in having flowers with 2- to 3-foot stems for cutting during May, masses of color against the background of shrubs, or here and there in the herbaceous border, grouped in beds, on the lawn or around the dwelling, no Tulips will provide such a wonderful display.

Everybody's flowers, because everybody can grow them, and many of the most beautiful varieties may now be had at a nominal price.

BARONNE DE LA TONNAYE. A long and beautiful flower; clear carmine-rose at the mid-rib, toning off to soft pink. Per dozen, $0.60. Per 100, $3.00.

DREAM. Large flowers, perfect in form, on tall, strong stems; color rosy lilac and mauve. Per dozen, $0.60. Per 100, $4.25.

EUROPE. Deep, fiery crimson, white base. Per dozen, $0.60. Per 100, $4.00.

GRAND MAITRE. A distinct dark violet, white base with bluish sheen; large flower. Per dozen, $0.60. Per 100, $4.00.

GRETCHEN (Margaret). Pale rose ground, faintly flushed white, center white. Per dozen, $0.80. Per 100, $5.00.

LANTERN. Pale silvery lilac, passing into white, inside clear lilac, with white base. Per dozen, $0.40. Per 100, $2.00.

MEDUSA. Orange-scarlet, flushed salmon, with blue base Per dozen, $0.60. Per 100, $4.50.

PRIDE OF HAARLEM. Magnificently formed flower of immense size, brilliant, deep salmon-rose, shaded scarlet, light blue base. Per dozen, $0.50. Per 100, $3.50.

THE SULTAN. Rich maroon-black with blue base; flower of fine form. Per dozen, $0.40. Per 100, $2.75.

WHITE QUEEN (La Candeur). Almost a pure white when mature. Per dozen, $0.60. Per 100, $4.00.

SPECIAL COLLECTIONS { 5 Bulbs each of 10 varieties, 50 Bulbs, $1.75; 10 Bulbs each of 10 varieties, 100 Bulbs, 3.00; 25 Bulbs each of 10 varieties, 250 Bulbs, 7.00

SUPERB PRIZE MIXTURE OF DARWINS. The revival of the craze for these splendid Tulips has brought out a great many varieties too numerous for listing, except those considered the best. In addition to the varieties listed above, our mixture contains an equal proportion of many others. Brilliant effect may be obtained by the planting of this mixture of choice named sorts.....Doz., $0.35; per 100, $2.25

SUPERB MIXTURE OF EARLY TULIPS

This mixture of early bedding Tulips has been prepared by us from 25 named sorts chosen from a list of 100 varieties. They are 25 varieties of the finest sorts obtainable. These bulbs are mixed at our store to supply a critical flower trade, and must not be confounded with cheap mixtures sold at cheap prices that contain bulbs of inferior varieties and sizes...Doz., $0.20; per 100, $1.25

MATCHLESS BEDDING HYACINTHS

Special named varieties in distinct shades of color, to flower at the same time

BULBS MEASURE 7 TO 8 INCHES IN CIRCUMFERENCE

The Hyacinth chosen to represent each of the following shades of color is a variety which, we have found from trials, will be best in the three essential requirements: Best in its color; stoutest stem; largest truss of bells; so our customers will know that we have avoided using such varieties that are of weak stem, and that do not support the blooms:

	Per Doz.	Per 100.		Per Doz.	Per 100.
Matchless Bedding Scarlet	$0.50	$3.

BRIDE SECRETLY WED LONGS FOR FREEDOM.

Alma Muller, Who Married Frank Wupperman Last March, Now Estranged.

LEFT HIM TO STUDY ART

Bridegroom to Seek Reconciliation with Young Wife Who Returned on the Red Cross.

WUPPERMANN—MULLER.—Miss Alma Rose Muller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Muller, of Monticello, N. Y., to Frank P. Wuppermann, at Trinity Church, Hoboken, N. J., on March 11, 1914.

Friends of Miss Alma Rose Muller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Muller of Miller Castle, Monticello, N. Y., and Frank P. Wuppermann, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wuppermann of Miramonte, Riverview Manor, Hastings-on-Hudson, were surprised to learn from the above announcement, published in THE TIMES yesterday morning, of the secret marriage of the two young people contracted in Hoboken in March last.

Mr. Wuppermann, who is now playing the part of Basil in "Mr. Wu" at the Maxine Elliott Theatre, is a cousin of J. W. Harriman and a grandson of "Commodore" J. W. Hancox, who conducted a large shipping trade with South America years ago.

His wife and her family are prominent socially in Monticello, where her mother is President of the Monticello Suffrage Club and State Committeeman for the Progressive Party. Their home, Muller Castle, is one of the show places in Sullivan County.

Friends, who were surprised yesterday to learn of their marriage, will be even more surprised today to learn of the estrangement of the two young people. Mrs. J. W. Wuppermann confirmed last night at her home in Hastings that the young Mrs. Wuppermann, who returned this country only last Saturday on the steamship Red Cross from Europe, seemed to be chafing at her marital bonds, and to be longing, for no reason that she could give, to be free of them.

According to the elder Mrs. Wuppermann, the two young people had known each other a year and a half or two years, and there were no objections raised against marriage except that their parents thought both to be too young. Mr. Wuppermann is now 24 years old, and his wife 20 years.

Their secret courtship began a year ago last summer, while Miss Muller was visiting her grandmother in this city and was believed to be under the strict chaperonage of an aunt. She is accomplished and attractive, speaking several languages fluently, and has appeared much at social functions. It is said that she and Mr. Wuppermann first met at a school graduation dance at Sherry's. Soon afterwards Mr. Wuppermann called at her home in Monticello and was a guest there for several weeks.

The parents of neither of the young people learned of their marriage until long after it had taken place in Trinity Church, Hoboken. Soon after their marriage Mrs. Wuppermann went to Europe alone, to study art in Paris. There she met her father, who is President of the J. W. Wuppermann Company, and to him she eventually told the facts of her marriage. Her husband, in the meantime, after appearing on the stage first in a short vaudeville sketch, joined Mr. Whiteside's company, with which he is now playing.

According to his mother, Mr. Wuppermann received between twenty and thirty letters from his wife while she was in Europe. He did not know, however, that she was returning on the Red Cross and was not at the pier to meet her when she arrived. He received a telegram that same day asking him to meet her at the Hotel Knickerbocker.

There, according to his mother, he met his wife that same evening, and was told by her that she "did not care for him any longer." She was unable, according to the elder Mrs. Wuppermann, to give any explanation for her change of heart, insisting that she knew nothing against Mr. Wuppermann, but insisting also that she no longer loved him.

"We were all opposed to the young people's marrying before," said Mrs. Wuppermann, "but now that it has been done we have no objection to the match. I am told also that her parents are no longer objecting, but that for some unaccountable reason she still holds out, insisting that she no longer loves my son. He is going up to Monticello tomorrow to talk the matter over with her and try to persuade her to change her mind and live with him. He is as fond of her as ever."

HELD AS BLACK HAND CHIEF.

Police Catch Santo Stavile in Williamsburg After a Fight.

Santo Stavile of 179 Scholes Street, Williamsburg, who is said by the police to be the leader of the Black Hand gangs who have terrorized Italian storekeepers of that district by setting off bombs, was arrested last night at Humboldt and Scholes Streets by Detectives Fiaschetti, Catone, and Lisanto of the Seventh Detective Division and locked up in the Bedford Avenue Station on the charge of extortion.

The arrest was the result of confessions which the police say they have obtained in the last week from John Iannona of 111 Moore Street, and James Scimeni of 139 Johnson Avenue, both of whom are under arrest for leaving bombs on doorsteps. Their confessions, it is said, indicated that Stavile was the head of the Black Hand of Williamsburg and author of all the threatening letters which have been written in that district. Stavile disappeared about a week ago, suspecting that the police were after him, and was not found until last night, when he put up a strong fight against the three detectives, but was soon overpowered. At the station the police obtained a specimen of his handwriting, which they say bears out the evidence of the confessions. He will be arraigned this morning in the Manhattan Avenue Court.

The detectives say that Stavile has a cousin of the same name who is now serving a ten-year sentence in Sing Sing for putting a bomb in a hallway in Manhattan.

Doctor's Wife in Odd Accident.

Mrs. Linda Hansell, after returning last night from an automobile drive with her husband, Dr. M. C. Hansell of 815 Elsmere Place, the Bronx, started to get out in front of their home. The door apparently was unlatched, and it gave way and precipitated her into the street. She was taken to Fordham Hospital with her skull fractured.

Here is a rare opportunity for any business requiring space 50x 60 feet, with abundance of light and air on three sides.

Up-to-date building; excellent elevator service; space offered is on an upper floor and takes in the entire front on 4th Av., extending back 60 feet on 27th St., and the same distance on the south side, giving unobstructed light and air through 20 large windows on north, south, and west sides.

No more accessible spot in the city. Subway and surface cars to everywhere.

Rent very reasonable.

Apply to
STEPHEN H. TYNG, JR., & CO.,
Harford Bldg., Broadway and 17th St., or on the premises, 381 4th Av., at 27th St.

Furs Remodelled and Repaired at Wholesale Prices.
KRAMER FUR CO.,
13 EAST 16TH ST., Bet. B'way and 5th Av.

Keep the cold out!
Keep the warmth in!
Cut your coal bill down.
Use "PIONEER"
WEATHER-STRIPS
Made of indestructible rustless METAL.
Estimates given.
A. S. ROEBUCK CO., 47 W. 34th St. Tel. 37 Greeley.

CAPTAIN ROBBED ON BOAT.

Throws One of Three Thugs Overboard—Beaten Till Insensible.

Capt. Keran Flannery of the tugboat Thomas Flannery was alone on his boat about 10 o'clock last night, at Pier 2, off Forty-sixth Street, Brooklyn, when three men came aboard and descended into the cabin where he was sitting. One pointed a pistol at his head and demanded money.

Flannery, instead of yielding, jumped at the group and engaged all three. The pistol, apparently, was not loaded, for, though they strove to keep him covered, nobody fired. In the struggle the party surged out of the cabin and on deck, where Flannery picked up one man and threw him overboard.

The other two pounded him with blackjacks until he sank to the deck unconscious; whereupon they took $125 from his pockets and got away. What became of the man thrown overboard is not known.

Flannery's cries had aroused special policemen on the dock, who arrived after the fight was over. They called Dr. McLachlan of the Norwegian Hospital, who treated Flannery's bruised head and took him to his home at 450 Forty-sixth Street.

NEW HAVEN LINE BLOCKED.

Blazing Electric Engine Ties Up Traffic at 125th Street.

Traffic on the New Haven Railroad south of 125th Street was stopped for half an hour yesterday afternoon, when an electric locomotive caught fire from a short circuit under the motorman's cab as it was standing in the 125th Street Station. The motor was attached to a train of eleven cars, most of which were full of passengers.

When the fire was discovered the employes of the railroad ordered all passengers out of the train, and then attacked the fire with hand extinguishers. They could make no headway, and the fire was burning actively when firemen arrived. They were compelled to turn off the current supplying the southbound trains in order to get at the fire. The locomotive was disabled.

PREPARES TO MEET CRISIS IN MEXICO

Continued from Page 1.

his representatives on the border that he will consider only one proposal for his retirement and that must be written on Carranza's resignation. That, he said, would automatically retire him from public life, as it is the only thing that is keeping him in it. Villa says he is only trying to get justice and equality for his people, and he expresses the belief that he is the only one who can keep Carranza from becoming a second dictator like Diaz.

A peculiar turn the conference has taken is the leaving of Zapata in the conference with his twenty-six delegates, while Villa and Carranza are invited to get out. The convention is said to have a strong pro-Zapata leaning.

In handcuffs and shackles Juaquin Torres and Emelio Navarro, who are said to have confessed a part in the alleged attempted assassination of Villa at Villa de Guadalupe, just north of Aguascalientes, will appear before the convention tomorrow. These men, like Murguia, who confessed and was executed, are said to have made statements implicating prominent Carranzista Generals. The statements they will make before the convention are expected to create a sensation.

EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 31.—Leaders of the rival Carranza and Villa factions of the Constitutionalist Party in Mexico today looked for an early settlement of the differences between the two chieftains, following the action of the Aguascalientes conference late yesterday in adopting a decree deposing both Carranza and Villa from official positions. The protocol was passed by a vote of 112 to 17.

The plan which would retire the two opposing leaders was drafted and adopted unanimously by a joint Committee on Civil and Military Mattters, the members of which were the leaders of both factions. It arranged that the Provisional President, to be named later, should take oath of office before the assembled convention. The document thanked Gen. Carranza and Gen. Villa for their revolutionary activity.

The proposition for the retirement of both leaders was made to the convention by Carranza himself, who insisted that unless Villa also retired he would refuse to step down from office.

The plan of Aguascalientes places full power in the provisional President and the present body of chieftains, which will act in the capacity of a Congress. The plan does not call for elections until after the arrangement of civil reforms by this body. No time is set for the general elections. The plan in this regard says:

"Said President will take oath before the assembled convention and arrange the programme of government which will emanate from this arrangement along the best lines to realize in a preconstitutional period the social and political reforms needed by the country."

This plan borders on the suggested commission form of government, since the provisional President would be acting as Chairman of the convention.

Gen. Carranza was demoted to General of Division, which position he held prior to the drafting of the Guadaloupe plan, which made him Commander in Chief of the Constitutionalist Army during its fight against the Huerta power. All commanders, Gen. Villa included, were placed under the orders of the Secretary of War, who would be named under the new arrangement, although a previous clause clearly stated that both Carranza and Villa "would cease their present functions."

CARRANZA DENIES RESIGNING.

Also Asks Convention Why It Should Seek to Put Him Out.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 31.—Gen. Carranza sent two telegrams to the convention at Aguascalientes today rectifying the apparent impression that he had already resigned. He declares he has only said he would resign when certain specific conditions were fulfilled, viz., the organization by the convention of an adequate provisional government, which should take his place, and the real and effective retirement from command of Gens. Villa and Zapata.

Gen. Carranza also asks the reasons why his retirement is considered necessary by the convention.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 31.—Gen. Carranza tonight sent to the delegates at the Aguascalientes peace conference a telegram relating to the action of the conference yesterday in adopting a decree deposing both Gen. Carranza and Gen. Villa from official positions. The action of the convention was taken after the reading of Gen. Carranza's conditional resignation, based on the provision that Gens. Villa and Zapata must retire to private life if he relinquished the leadership of the Constitutionalists. The message sent by Gen. Carranza tonight follows:

"Through the press I have learned of the ruling of the commission appointed to study my note of Oct. 23. From the same source I have ascertained the views of the various delegates. It would please me if the various military chieftains would fix their attention carefully on the exact contents of my note, which clearly states the conditions upon which I would be disposed to present my resignation, which I have not yet formulated.

"I will present it when I know definitely that the convention has determined on the form of the new provisional Government and that Gens. Villa and Zapata have in fact been relieved of their respective commands. This is an affair of great importance to the country and precipitation on the part of the delegates might place the convention in the position of taking a determination respecting me without fulfilling the conditions laid down in my note.

"I ask you, therefore, to give me assurances at an early date of the acceptance of my terms by Gens. Villa and Zapata and that a new form of government has been approved, that I may then present my resignation in due form."

WILL FIGHT FOR CARRANZA.

Minister Favela Enumerates 130,000 Troops Available for Battle.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 31.—Ysidro Favela, Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, tonight gave out the following statement:

"Gen. Carranza will never leave the Executive chair until both Gen. Villa and Gen. Zapata have been completely eliminated. The Aguascalientes Convention must order that these men leave Mexico, for the present at least. Then Gen. Carranza will do likewise.

"Advices from Aguascalientes say that the delegates are warmly commending the stand of Gen. Carranza, who offers to sacrifice his personality to save the nation. Nevertheless, we are preparing for eventualities. We have 20,000 men at Leon under Gen. Villareal, 8,000 at Tamaulipas under Caballero, 4,000 under Guitierrez in the city of San Luis Potosi, and 18,000 under Gen. Terres in the State of San Luis Potosi. Forty thousand men are stationed at Queretaro.

"Besides these forces, we have in the capital and southern part of the republic 40,000 more ready to fight against the forces of Gens. Villa and Zapata when the Supreme Chief issues the command. We are led to believe that the Generals in Villa's division are divided since the reading of the noble resignation of Gen. Carranza, and in the event of hostilities we believe the struggle will be of short duration, as the popular sentiment of the country backs Gen. Carranza.

"The forces under Gen. Zapata continue to attack San Angel and other suburbs of the capital and the forces under Gen. Lucio Blanco have been ordered to drive them out of the Federal District, decimating them if necessary, to teach them a lesson for their treachery in breaking the agreement made at the peace convention."

CARRANZA RESENTS DEMAND.

Says Our Vera Cruz Conditions Impair Mexican Sovereignty.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 31.—The correspondence between the United States and Mexico in regard to the evacuation of Vera Cruz was published in the local papers this morning and attracted wide attention. When First Chief Carranza submitted the American request to the Aguascalientes Convention the reply was made that it was not thought proper for Carranza to issue any manifesto, but at the same time the convention decided that double duties and taxes should not be collected at Vera Cruz after the American evacuation and that Mexicans who had served the Americans in a civil capacity should not be molested. The convention, however, held that persons liable under law at Vera Cruz ought to be tried by the existing tribunals.

Gen. Carranza, on receiving this reply, wired back that the convention apparently had missed the point. He said the point was not whether such and such guarantees should be granted, but whether they should be granted in compliance with the American request and as an antecedent condition for the evacuation of Vera Cruz. Gen. Carranza added:

"I desire my opinion in the matter to be taken into account. I consider that exemption from new taxes and the amnesty of employes who have served the invader are acts appertaining to Mexico's sovereignty, acts that might spontaneously be decided on by the Mexican Government without affecting national dignity, but which if admitted as a condition imposed by the American Government would constitute a tort to the republic's sovereignty. Moreover, I fear that if the desires of the American Government are acceded to in this respect a fatal precedent will be established in our relations with the United States in the matter of our autonomy."

FOR MADERO-SUAREZ MURDER.

Six Accused of Complicity Before Court-Martial This Week.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 31.—The persons accused of complicity in the death of President Madero and Vice President Pino Suarez will be tried by court-martial next week. Those involved are Rosalio Benitez, Anres Rocha Melendez, Vicente Eurizs, Miguel Huerta, Jesus Ruiz Espana, and Nicolas Ramirez Belmonte.

The case will be tried by the Third Military Court.

BELGIAN MINISTER EXPELLED.

Notified to Leave Mexico—Had Complained of Soldiers' Violence.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 31.—The alleged maltreatment of a Belgian subject who was trying to hide a priest from the wrath of Constitutionalist soldiers led to the summary dismissal yesterday by the Mexican Government of Paul May, Belgian Minister to Mexico, who protested in terms which were said by the Government to be undiplomatic.

The protest made by the Belgian Minister referred to anarchistic conditions. After writing two notes which were unanswered he threatened to bring the Mexican authorities to a realization of their duties to foreigners. In reply Minister of Foreign Affairs Favela gave the Belgian representative twenty-four hours in which to leave the country, saying:

"Please inform your Government that this action was taken purely against your personality and in no manner against the King of the Belgians or his worthy people, with whom the Mexican Government and people desire to maintain most friendly relations."

THIS CITY THE REAL 'CRADLE OF LIBERTY'

Movement Launched to Have History Rewritten to Give Honor to New York.

WE HAD A TEA PARTY HERE

And It Occurred Before the Boston Affair—Historians Accused of Prejudice.

Too long has New York City been deprived of its share of honor in the events which led to the Declaration of Independence and the birth of the nation. This is to be changed, for the Lower Wall Street Business Men's Association and delegates of various New York historical societies met yesterday in the Coffee Exchange and resolved that our history shall be rewritten so that all the world may know that New York, and not Massachusetts, was the real cradle of liberty. The meeting was called for consideration of the best means whereby "errors in history" relating to the city might be corrected.

The meteing was called to order by William Bayne, President of the Business Men's Association, and among those who spoke were Dr. George F. Kunz, Acting Vice President of the Commercial Tercentenary Commission; Col. Asa Bird Gardiner, Charles H. Sherrill, former Minister to Argentina; William Elliott Griffs of Ithaca, Thomas E. Finegan, Assistant State Commissioner of Education, and Hugh Hastings, formerly State Historian. The object of the meeting was explained by Abram Wakeman, Secretary of the Business Men's Association. He declared that it was going to take hard and united work to overcome the prejudice that had been engendered because historians had insisted that this city was the home of "Tories and Treason." Opposed to such an effort, he said, will be eighty historical societies and especially those in Massachusetts.

One of the errors, Mr. Wakeman said, was the contention that the Boston Massacre was the first shedding of blood for liberty. He said that George Bancroft, the historian, was probably the most prejudiced historian in New England's favor, and knowingly belittled New York.

"In all the large libraries may be found the Town of Boston's official report of the investigation made about ten days after the Boston Massacre," he said. "It shows in no possible way that it was connected with our future liberties or union, and with equal facility Bancroft could have learned that the battle of Golden Hill, which occurred a month prior, was based on the fundamental principles of our rights and liberties, which were so successfully carried out by our Revolution. To the Boston Massacre he devoted pages, telling of each little imaginary occurrence, while Golden Hill he belittled, until you are led to believe it was merely a fight over a flagpole, and other historians even failed to mention the occurrence."

Mr. Wakeman then took up the Boston Tea Party and alleged that we had a New York tea party before the Boston Harbor affair. He thought in the recording of this incident alone this city had cause for complaint of historic unfairness. Continuing he said:

"Perhaps the greatest injustice done our city by historians was in stealing from us the honor occurring in the old Merchants' Coffee House, the birthplace of our Union. Historians are united in giving the honor of this important event to Massachusetts, and the date June 17, 1774. I have taken pains to give this event the most careful research, knowing that I had all the historians against me, and I wished there should be no error in our contention that New York was the place, and May 23, 1774, the date."

After listening to the speakers tell of historical errors the meeting decided that a committee of nine should be appointed by the President of the organization to devise ways whereby misstatements in American histories can be corrected. This committee will submit its plan to the various historical societies for their consideration. The delegates present pledged their support to the plan.

The Exchange meeting was preceded by a reception and luncheon.

PASS 1915 BUDGET FOR $199,233,286

Highest Allowance in the History of the City Will Swell the Tax Rate.

AN INCREASE OF $6,237,734

Final Figures Were Pruned from $204,000,000, the Tentative Sum Fixed Upon Last Week.

The Board of Estimate at midnight passed the city budget for 1915. The final figures amount to $199,233,286 the highest in the history of the city. Even this, though, is a decrease from the tentative budget which was figured out last week for more than $204,000,000. As a result of the big increase over the 1914 budget, $6,287,734, the tax rate for all the boroughs for 1915 will be higher than it has ever been. For Manhattan the rate will be between 1.90 and 1.91. The rate for Manhattan for 1914 was 1.78. This is what the rate will be in all five boroughs for 1915, as compared with the present year:

	Total 1915.	Total 1914.
New York County	1.90	1.78
Bronx County	1.97	1.77
Kings County	1.95	1.84
Queens County	1.98	1.80
Richmond County	2.28	1.90

Controller Prendergast gave out this statement explaining how the budget was finally made up:

"The 1915 budget will amount to $199,233,286. This is represented by $192,199,569 of city charges and $7,033,716 of county charges. In addition to this there will also be separate borough charges for special assessments for public improvements, part of the cost of which has been assessed upon the different localities. There will be:

Manhattan	$248,750.68
Brooklyn	184,024.97
Queens	318,174.22
Richmond	225,600.42
Total	$954,600.42

"The tentative budget, as originally reported to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, was $204,000,000. The consideration given to the budget during the last week by the Board of Estimat ehas resulted in additions amounting to $450,000. The largest of these items is the mount of $173,000 to the Department fo Docks and Ferries, of which $150,000 is to provide for part time for employes, who would otherwise be laid off in the Winter or early Spring. The reductions are explained as follows:

"The amount recommended for inclusion in the tentative budget by the Finance Department to cover deficiencies in the taxes was $8,200,000. The Board of Estimate decided to reduce this amount $2,087,000. This does not mean any saving to the taxpayers; it simply means the postponement of the liquidation of this amount of deficiencies to some other year. It will, however, help to keep down the tax rate for 1915.

"The second considerable item is a reduction in the amount to be included in the debt service for the redepmption of special revenue bonds of $2,300,000. This amount represented special revenue bonds, which had been issued for the part of the maintenance of the Public Service Commission, which is properly chargeable under the subway contracts to the cost of construction. Corporate stock will be issued to cover the charge, therefore, while it is not necessary to include this sum in the tax budget, it is represented in another form of debt through the issuance of corporate stock.

"Special assessments upon the boroughs are not a city charge, but must be collected in the tax levy. It is, therefore, not necessary to include them in the tax budget, but the exclusion of this item from the tax budget will not affect the tax rate, as that must be included in the tax levy."

The Budget Committee of the Board of estimate has been busy for the past week trying to prune down the figures. Midnight of Oct. 31 is the limit fixed by law for the budget to be passed, and the clock in the room of the Estimate room was set back half an hour in order to get in under the time limit.

WARSHIPS AT HAITI.

Transport Hancock Arrives at Port-au-Prince—May Land Marines.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The American transport Hancock, which was ordered to proceed with all possible dispatch to Port-au-Prince, the capital of Haiti, reported her arrival at that port today. The Hancock carried over 800 marines. The commander of the Hancock, acting in co-operation with the American Minister at Port-au-Prince, has authority to act as the situation demands.

The indications are that the marines will be sent ashore. The battleship Kansas is also speeding toward Port-au-Prince from Vera Cruz under hurry orders to co-operate with the Hancock.

T. N. VAIL HURT BY FALL.

Injures Knee at Virginia Beach—Probably Not Serious.

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 31.—Theodore N. Vail, President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, fell on a brick sidewalk at Virginia Beach today and injured a knee.

A physician who attended Mr. Vail said tonight he did not think the injury serious but would make a further examination tomorrow.

FIRE RECORD.

A. M.		Loss.
2:05	344 11 Av.; Benj. Capeland	Slight
4:25	320 W. 40 St.; John Contikas	Slight
6:35	163 Suffolk St.; Abr. Greenateh	$100
10:00	W. side of Hamilton Av., bet. 138 and 139 Sts.; O. J. Gude Co.	Slight
10:25	2,555 3 Av.; Lunny & Handibode	Slight
P. M.
12:45	210 W. 68 St.; City Suburban Homes Co.	Slight
2:45	45 Clinton St.; A. Wiesterman	Slight
4:00	52 E. St.; M. A. Erbach	Slight
4:10	Park Av. bet. 128 St.; N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R.	Slight
4:20	236 St. & Matilda Av.; not given	Slight
6:20	10 Av. & 16 St.; Consolidated Gas Co.	Slight
6:40	76-72 Worcester St.; United Corrugated Paper Case Co.	$150,000
6:58	80 Cannon St.; B. Reichert	Slight
7:10	141 W. 117 St.; J. Gottlieb	Slight
7:20	29 Lewis St.; Marie Poleto	Slight
7:45	22 Eldridge; Arnstein & Woronock	Slight
8:40	142 Forsyth St.; Jacob Tauber	$15
11:50	27 Thompson St.; Jacob Menheuer	$100

SHIPS REPORTED BY WIRELESS.

SS Momus, New Orleans to New York, was 252 miles S. W. of Diamond Shoals at noon.

SS Rio Grande, Brunswick to New York, was 14 miles N. of Brunswick Bar at noon.

SS St. Helens, San Francisco to New York, was 260 miles S. of Sandy Hook at noon.

SS Brazos, San Juan to New York, was 505 miles S. at noon.

SS El Norte, Galveston to New York, was 22 miles W. of Tortugas at 6 P. M.

SS Cherokee, Georgetown to New York, was 485 miles S. W. of Diamond Shoals at 7 P. M.

SS El Sol, Galveston to New York, was 190 miles S. W. of Diamond Shoals at 6 P. M.

SS City of Montgomery, Savannah to New York, passed Savannah sea buoy at 6:20 P. M.

SS Concho, Galveston to New York, was 12 miles E. of Galveston Bar at 7 P. M.

SS Santa Clara, Baiboa to New York, was 360 miles from Colon at 8 P. M.

SS Alamo, Mobile to New York, was 45 miles S. of Jupiter at noon.

SS Havana, Havana to New York, was 65 miles N. of Morro Castle at noon.

TO ABOLISH LEASED WIRES.

Postal Co. to Stop Service to Brokers After Nov. 30.

The Postal Telegraph Company announced yesterday that, effective Nov. 30, it would refuse to supply leased wires to brokerage houses. Charles C. Adams, Vice President, said that the required thirty-day notice had been given, and that in future brokers' messages would have to be paid for at the regular rates. The company, however, will continue its leased wire service to newspapers and commercial houses.

Most of the Wall Street houses use wires leased from the Western Union, which has not altered its arrangement with the brokers. The Postal's leased stock wires have furnished but a small part of its business. Mr. Adams says that it is a pretense to say that brokers cannot get sufficiently quick service over public wires, and that the "easy money" accruing to the wires companies from that business is in fact dearly bought.

"Leased wires consume millions of dollars of telegraph business annually," he says. "That business would go over the regular wires if the brokers' leased wire service was abolished."

The Interstate Commerce Commission recently conducted an investigation into the alleged abuses of brokerage wires, but has not published its findings.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Another disturbance is approaching the North Pacific Coast and rains are falling in Washington. Over the remainder of the country the weather was fair during the last twenty-four hours, except in Southern New Mexico and Eastern Maine, where local rains fell.

The Canadian Northwest disturbance has reached the upper lake region, and pressure has fallen generally east of the Missouri River except in New England, but without further result than unseasonably high temperatures in the upper lake region, the Upper Missouri and Mississippi Valleys, and the Plains States. Over the East, South, and extreme West temperature changes were not of consequence.

There will be rain Sunday in the north Pacific States, continuing Monday, and extending into Wyoming and Montana. Elsewhere the weather will be generally fair Sunday and Monday, except from the north upper lake region eastward, where local rains are probable, but not until Monday for the Northern districts. It will be warmer Sunday in the East and South and somewhat cooler in the north upper lake region. Elsewhere the temperature changes will not be marked.

Winds along the North and Middle Atlantic Coasts will be moderate, mostly southwest, Sunday and Monday; South Atlantic Coast, moderate east and southeast, except northeast off the Florida Coast.

FORECASTS: TODAY AND MONDAY.

Eastern New York and New England—Fair and warmer Sunday. Monday, unsettled, probably local rains.

New Jersey, Western New York, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Generally fair Sunday and Monday, without decided change in temperature.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1913.	1914.		1913.	1914.
8 A. M.	39	42	4 P. M.	41	57
6 A. M.	41	39	6 P. M.	39	55
9 A. M.	42	44	9 P. M.	36	54
12 M.	48	50	11 P. M.	35

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 48; for the corresponding date last year it was 40; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 50.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 42; at 8 P. M. it was 54. Maximum temperature, 58 degrees at 4 P. M.; minimum, 39 degrees at 4 A. M. Humidity, 58 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 53 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 30.13 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 30.09 inches.

JAMES A. ALLEN.

For Justice of the City Court

VOTE FOR

JAMES A. ALLEN

and place an able, experienced and upright man on the bench.

Born at Chenault, Kentucky; 43 years of age; married; residence, 312 West 53d Street; office, 35 Wall Street.

Graduate of Transylvania University, at Lexington, Kentucky, where he received the degrees of Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Laws, and Master of Arts, and of Yale University, where he received the degrees of Master of Laws and Doctor of Civil Law.

Has been engaged in the general practice of law in New York City for the past sixteen years; has had a wide experience in litigated matters and in the trial of cases; is a good trial lawyer and is thoroughly familiar with the practical working of the courts.

Has taken an active interest in public affairs ever since he has been a resident of New York, and has been an earnest advocate of measures making for real and substantial political and economic reform.

Elected to the Assembly as a fusion candidate in the old 9th (now 7th) Assembly District of New York County in 1901, and served with courage and independence as a Member of the Assembly of 1902.

Served with credit, under appointment by Justice Ernest Hall, as a commissioner in condemnation proceedings (18th-23d Street Dock Proceeding) with Wilbur Larremore and Stanley W. Dexter, and appraised nearly $8,000,000 worth of property, which furnished him valuable judicial experience and a wide knowledge of the law relating to condemnation proceedings.

Member of the Associatio of the Bar of the City of New York, Kentucky Society, Southern Society, Society of Medical Jurisprudence and West Side Taxpayers' Association.

Nominated by the Democratic Party and Independence League. Endorsed by Jeffersonian Alliance, Cleveland Democracy, N. Y. County Lawyers' Association.

Mark Your Ballot Thus to Vote for Mr. Allen

12 CITY COURT—To Fill Vacancy Expiring December 31, 1919. (Vote for one.)

★	X	JAMES A. ALLEN { Democratic Ind. League

POLITICAL. POLITICAL. POLITICAL.

MAISON MAURICE
Importers
GOWNS MILLINERY FURS
FIFTH AVENUE & 43d STREET
NEW YORK
London Paris

We Will Feature, Beginning Tomorrow,

Many Original Creations

in

TAILLEUR SUITS, TROTTEUR FROCKS, AFTERNOON AND EVENING GOWNS, MILLINERY, WRAPS AND FURS

at very attractive prices

Tailleur Suits in a wide diversity of styles, from the exaggerated full-flare short coat with the extreme circular skirt to the long, slender Russian silhouette— $55, $65 to $250

Trotteur Frocks and Afternoon Gowns—A host of smart effects, from the simple Frock in dark neutral tones to the striking Gown with rich fur trimmings— $28, $38, $45 to $195

Smart Street and Semi-dress Hats, from $15.

Evening Gowns—Exquisite conceptions for all formal occasions, from the dainty Dance Dress and simple Evening Frock to the Dinner Gown of most elaborate character— $55, $65, $85 to $475

Picturesque Hats for evening wear—from $25.

Evening Wraps—Introducing a new creation, "The Limousine"—a symphony of grace and ripple and flare, beautifully fashioned of tete de negre chiffon velvet and a wealth of rich seal. Other stunning Wraps in varied blues, wines, gold brocades and pastel tones— $75, $95 to $250

Iridescent and Metallic Lace Caps—from $12.

Sports Suits in swagger models designed expressly for golf, tennis and Fall country wear, of Callot checks, corduroy and English Tweeds—$55, $65, $95

The unusual MAISON MAURICE Sports Hats, in daring combinations of materials and colors—at $15

Fur-trimmed Coats of velour de laine, chamois velour and Deauville cloth, trimmed with most fashionable furs— $85, $95 to $275

Cloth Coats of rich imported fabrics—$35 to $85

Fur Coats, Fur Sets, Muffs and Scarfs in the most fashionable pelts—at very moderate prices.

Maison Bernard Inc.
330 Fifth Avenue—32d and 33d Streets

Announce Their

Semi-Annual Sale

On MONDAY and TUESDAY, Nov. 2 and 3.

The Entire Stock of
GOWNS, WRAPS, COATS, MILLINERY, FURS AND FUR COATS
At Remarkable Reductions

Just a few examples:—

DAY AND EVENING GOWNS
All our Imported Models as well as our own exclusive designs.
Former Prices, $75 to $250,
$35 to $125

COSTUMES TAILLEUR
Made of Chiffon Velvet and all the new rich fabrics, mostly fur trimmed.
Former Prices, $75 to $200,
$35 to $95

TOP COATS
of Chiffon Velvet and the new Rodier fabrics in the new Cossack and Military models.
Former Prices, $45 to $150,
$25 to $65

EVENING WRAPS
of gorgeous Silver and Gold Brocades, Tissue Velvet, in fascinating evening shades, richly trimmed with genuine foxes, etc.
Former Prices, $125 to $300,
$65 to $125

SIMPLE WRAPS FOR YOUNG WOMEN
of French Broadcloth, Plush, etc., in dainty evening shades, mostly fur trimmed.
Former Prices, $65 to $125,
$35 to $65

75 French Blouses, $10 & $15
Including real Filet Lace models.
Former Prices Up to $55.

MILLINERY
All Trotteur Hats, $5
Including late fur trimmed effects.
None Sold Heretofore for Less than $18.
Dress Hats, $10 to $25.
Formerly $25 to $75.

FURS
Genuine Bargains
Natural Blue Foxes, White Foxes, Silver Foxes and all prevailing Novelties at EXCEPTIONALLY BIG REDUCTIONS.

The New York Times.

"All the News That's Fit to Print."

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR BY THE NEW YORK TIMES COMPANY.
ADOLPH S. OCHS, Publisher and President.
B. C. Franck, Secretary.
Address all communications
THE NEW YORK TIMES.
Telephone 1000 Bryant.

Publication Office.....Times Square
Times Annex...40d St., west of Broadway
Downtown.....15 Beekman Street
Wall Street.....2 Rector Street
Harlem.....263 West 125th Street
Bronx.....149th St. and Bergen Av.
Staten Island....Ferry House, St. George
Jersey City.....538 Jersey Avenue
Long Island City....868 Jackson Avenue
Hoboken.....61 Second Street
Paterson.....15 Park Avenue
Elizabeth.....90 Broad Street
WASHINGTON.....Post Building
PHILADELPHIA.....Public Ledger Building
CHICAGO.....1,202 Tribune Building
ST. LOUIS.....409 Globe-Democrat Building
DETROIT.....826 Ford Building
LONDON.....2 Pall Mall East, S. W.
PARIS.....32 Rue Louis le Grand

ONE CENT Greater New York, Jersey City, Newark. Elsewhere Two Cents. Five Cents Sunday.

Subscription Rates.

DAILY AND SUNDAY, per Year.....$8.50
Per Month, 75c.
DAILY, without Sunday, per Year..... 6.00
Per Month, 50c.
SUNDAY, with Picture Section and Review of Books, per Year..... 2.50
Canada, Sunday only..... 5.00
Postage free in United States, Canada, Mexico, Panama, Canal Zone, Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii, Philippines, Guam, Samoa, Shanghai.

All other countries (postage included.)
Daily and Sunday, per Year.....$24.00
Per Month, $2.
Daily, without Sunday, per Year.. 15.60
Per Month, $1.30.
Sunday only, per Year..... 8.40
Per Month, 70c.

THE ANNALIST, (Mondays,) per Year.. 4.00
Canada, $5; other countries, $5.50.
THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW, per Year..... 1.00
Canada, $1.50; other countries, $2.
THE NEW YORK TIMES MID-WEEK PICTORIAL WAR EDITION, (Thursdays,) per Year, $5; Six Months, $2.50; Three Months, $1.25; Single Copies, 10c.
Canada, one year, $6; other countries, one year, $6.50.
THE NEW YORK TIMES INDEX, Quarterly—Full Cloth, per Year, $8; per Copy, $2.

Entered as second-class mail matter.

NEW YORK, SUNDAY, NOV. 1, 1914.

TRADE AND WORLD FEDERATION.

"Let us assume that everybody "and everything has been properly "damned, and then we shall the sooner "get down to business," said an English statesman whose visitor was wasting a great deal of valuable time in promiscuous profanity. So we would say to Mr. ROOSEVELT, let us assume that the "pacificists" are festooned with all the derogatory epithets of the Sagamore Hill vocabulary, that they are prostrated flat as pancakes under the weight of the opprobrium he heaps upon them. That being done, the Colonel will be free to devote his attention to elaborating, in detail and with specification, his plan of world federation for the peace of righteousness. We know that the American people are profoundly interested in the discussion of ways and means for making peace permanent; we have a well-founded suspicion that they do not share his unfavorable view of the peace treaties or of the men who have made them and believe in them.

If Mr. ROOSEVELT would attentively read the text of the treaty we have signed with a score and a half of nations, he would see that it is not half so bad as he takes it to be. In the fifth of his series of articles, published in the Magazine Section of THE TIMES today, Mr. ROOSEVELT says that if some great triumphant military despotism should flout the Monroe Doctrine, seize Magdalena Bay, deny our right to fortify the Canal and take adjacent territory to erect similar fortifications, then "under these absurd treaties we would "be obliged to go into an interminable "discussion on the subject before a "Joint Commission while the hostile "nation proceeded to make its position "impregnable." Not at all, for Article I. of the treaty provides that the contracting Powers "agree not to declare "war or begin hostilities" until the commission has made its investigation and concluded its report. An act of hostility directed against ourselves would, of course, be a breach of the treaty and would free us from the obligation.

The pacificists and Mr. ROOSEVELT by different routes are seeking the same goal—peace. Most of the friends of the treaties will agree with him that we must maintain a considerable armed force; on his part we hope he will come to admit that the things they advocate may with advantage have a place in his plans for peace with righteousness. It is significant, it is encouraging, that a man of Mr. ROOSEVELT'S place in the public life of the nation should have seriously turned his attention to the formation of a general international federation to promote peace and justice. In THE TIMES of Sunday, Oct. 18, three eminent men, Mr. ROOSEVELT, Dr. BUTLER, the President of Columbia University, and Prof. ALBERT BUSHNELL HART of Harvard discussed this subject constructively and hopefully. They approached the subject from somewhat different points of view, but all were convinced that the principle of international adjudication, the logical development of the principle of intranational adjudication now recognized in all civilized lands, would be demanded by the vital interests of the war-wasted nations of the world. On last Sunday Baron DE CONSTANT and Prof. GIDDINGS of Columbia joined in advocating this principle, predicting its adoption. Each of them, however, laid stress on the opinion that freedom of trade within the international federation would tend powerfully to the prevention of war. In this view we heartily concur. If we examine the causes of modern wars, we find that they lie chiefly in the desire, or the need, or both, for territorial expansion; that territorial expansion has been mainly sought as a means of extending trade, and that the trade pursued has generally been exclusive or specially favored trade. This was clearly the case in the efforts of Russia to secure access to unfrozen waters; in the efforts of France to found an empire in Africa, Madagascar, and China; in the efforts of Japan to control Korea; in Italy's enterprise in Tripoli, and in the steady struggle of Germany to attain an outlet for her teeming population that would strengthen her political and commercial power. If England, the greatest of the expanding Powers of Europe, has seemed, in the last half century, to pursue a different policy, it is because her immense acquisitions were already made under the guidance of the more selfish and less enlightened system still generally adopted.

Here, as we see it, is a vitally important element in any process of federation that may be evolved after the close of the present war. To the extent that the federation can be made to carry with it freedom of exchange its chances of keeping the peace will be increased, for one of the most active, deep-seated, and persistent motives for war will be, in that ratio, eliminated. The strength of some of the most powerful and prosperous of modern nations originates in the scope of free exchange within their wide borders. The essential foundation of the unity of our own country was the provision for untrammeled trade between the States embodied in our Constitution a century and a quarter ago. The beginning of unity in Germany was the Zollverein, which formed the framework that BISMARCK built upon. Though, as we have pointed out, the vast Empire of Great Britain was acquired under the old Colonial system, its immense strength has been maintained and developed by adherence to the freedom of all British markets. Barter, trade, industry, commerce, finance, in their present incalculable scope, are but the successive developments of the primal instinct, the primal need for exchange. Federation, international adjudication, peace and progress will advance only as freedom of exchange is fostered and extended.

PICK CANDIDATES NOW.

Before entering the election booth next Tuesday, and even before starting for the polls, each voter who would make an intelligent choice should provide himself with a list of the men he wishes to see elected. He can no longer vote a straight ticket with one cross-mark under the party emblem. Right through the Massachusetts ballot it is necessary to pick the names, both for candidates in the State and in the voter's district, except for the delegates at large to the Constitutional Convention.

The voter may cast a ballot for fifteen delegates at large and three district delegates. He should, therefore, ascertain the number of his Senatorial district, if he does not know it. In choosing candidates for the convention that is to change the organic law of the State some little care would be well rewarded. Certainly names of men so conspicuous for their abilities and experience as ELIHU ROOT and EDGAR M. CULLEN will arrest the voter's attention. We give the counsel to every voter, whatever be his party, to vote to send Senator ROOT and Judge CULLEN to the convention. But be sure to cast a ballot for convention delegates. Don't cast the separate ballot aside, or hand it in unmarked. The matter is too important.

THE SUBWAY AND THE CITY'S FUTURE.

The record of the Interborough's first ten years is marvelous, looking backward, and even more interesting and important looking forward. There seems no reason to doubt that a record of city traffic without parallel in the world will be repeated, and in that case the city will be made over. In its last year the Subway carried 340,000,000 passengers, or about ninety millions more than its average. Its elevated subsidiaries carried together 311,500,000. Together they averaged just a little short of two million passengers daily throughout the year, counting Sundays as half days. This is the Manhattan portion of the dual subway, whose future business is to be reckoned only in billions. In 1960 the figures of the experts, using past experience, which always hitherto has been surpassed, call for a rapid transit traffic of 21,000,000,000. The figures transcend comprehension, but their meaning may be translated into terms of daily convenience and economy to every man, woman, and child in the city, which then will be the world's greatest and grandest, as its traffic system is already.

The broadest significance of the figures is that New York has ceased to be a city without suburbs. In this respect other American and foreign cities have surpassed this incomparable town. Most of them have had garden quarters, where family life could be enjoyed economically. The new city railway system will end the reproach that this is a city for the very rich or the very poor, for those who lived in palaces or tenements. In Brooklyn, where there are four rapid transit stations, there are to be 140, against the 146 which Manhattan enjoys, and will have increased to 202. Queens, which now has none, is to have 41, compared with the Bronx's 29, to be increased to 75. This does not exhaust the total of new stations along the new lines, and there are to be increased facilities in the way of larger cars, longer trains, and so on. The accessibility of Brooklyn is to be increased thirty-four times, and in some respects the advantages of Queens will surpass those of Brooklyn. Work upon the dual subway is in its last stages, and when completed the most incredible thing of all will be accomplished. There will be provided a capacity annually of a billion seats above the estimated need. Yet looking ahead it may be supposed that those planning this monumental work will be reproached for their inadequate conception of the necessities of the case.

Bringing these figures down to the case of the individual who pays the fares it is to be remarked that these are all dime rides marked down to a nickel. The dual subway abolishes the two-fare system which has levied a daily toll upon those who could not afford it. It gives them access to cheaper and better homes, where children can play in the sunlight with safety, and where their parents will not have to sleep in closets or pay hard tribute to the landlords. Sixty million dime rides are to be converted into the nickel sort, a matter of $3,000,000 to the farepayers. For the city there has been reckoned an addition to values returning annually $10,000,000 in taxes. It seems too good to be true, and yet it is actually occurring, now, not hereafter. The cheap acres, empty according to a city standard, which have been fertilized by the promise of the subway, present an aspect of activity of construction and improvement of values which are a cheering exception to the generally depressed real estate market. In Manhattan there has been a decrease in building projects from $50,000,000 last year to $41,426,000 this year. In Brooklyn there has been an increase from $24,263,509 to $33,797,535. In Queens the increase has been from $12,656,021 to $16,063,267. The travel statistics are wonderful, but their interpretation into terms of daily life shows something better yet—that New York at last is doing its duty by its citizens, and that they are appreciating what is being done for them.

SING SING'S NEXT WARDEN.

May we suggest to Superintendent of Prisons RILEY that his next appointee as Warden of Sing Sing be a man trained to be a Warden? Warden MCCORMICK was not qualified in any sense to have charge of that great prison, in which the problems of discipline have been made more difficult by years of favoritism and ignorant and improper oversight. Mr. MCCORMICK'S predecessor resigned because, he said, he had not the training that would fit him to guard and care for the inmates.

Men are to be found who have experience, who know and sympathize with modern methods of prison administration, and are able managers. Will not the Superintendent of Prisons select one of these men?

THE CIVIC CELEBRATION.

With the imposing and well-ordered parade last night the week of celebration of the tercentenary of the foundation of New York was brought brilliantly to a close. Inevitably this celebration has not filled so large a place in the public mind as it would have filled in a year not so productive of other and graver matters to think about. But the various festivals have been successful, the meetings have been largely attended and the well-devised pageantry has not lacked appreciation. Probably there is no greater excuse for being proud of a city on its 300th birthday than on its 299th, but any occasion that awakens in the generally preoccupied mind of the New Yorker, whether he was born in Boston, Berlin, or Ballyshannon, or, as is sometimes the case, right here on Manhattan, a sense of the relative importance of his city is likely to arouse him also to a clearer comprehension of its shortcomings and its needs if it is to hold its place through the ages as the Western metropolis.

New York is of enormous size, remarkable for the numbers and the quality of its population, splendid in industry and enterprise, and of increasing beauty and dignity architecturally. New York has also great problems that must be solved relating to government, docks, terminal facilities, drainage, and other matters that scarcely disturbed the minds of the worthy fathers whose memory was honored in the week's festivals. With their minds drawn to the notable facts of its development in the celebration of its 300th birthday New Yorkers cannot fail to realize the need of great efforts to make its future development equally worthy of its beginning. For among the great cities of the civilized world New York is still an infant.

MEXICO'S LAND PROBLEM.

The institution of an equitable tax upon land in Mexico would compel the holders of millions of unimproved acres to sell at whatever price and on whatever terms they could get. The agrarian problem might be settled this way, and doubtless would have been on the accession of MADERO to the Presidency if so many of his relatives and friends had not been owners of large tracts of land upon which they were unwilling to pay taxes and which they were determined to hold. CARRANZA'S plan to solve the land problem is to seize all lands to which the holders cannot show a just title and distribute them among the people. This sounds well, but it would not work well. Titles cannot be proved or disproved offhand, and a method of distribution with no existing government to control it would be difficult.

It is reported that the convention at Aguascalientes has adopted the Ayala plan of the Zapatistas, which is simply general confiscation. Many of the largest owners hold incontestable titles which date from the era of CORTEZ. Probably the report is premature. The wrongs inflicted on the small land owners of Morelos in the thirty years of factitious peace are not to be lightly set aside, but ZAPATA'S right to constitute himself the champion of Morelos is doubtful. His methods have been those of the bandit and the murderer. But VILLA and his friends have formed an alliance with the Southern rebel, and VILLA has shown no disposition toward injustice of late. On the contrary, his aim seems to be to restore law and order as quickly as possible, and we are constrained to believe that he will countenance no general confiscation, which, starting with land ownership, would soon involve foreign debts, and would perpetuate the warfare. There are men of sound mind taking part in the deliberations in the city of hot waters, and it is well not to jump at conclusions in regard to their outcome. The appointment of a Provisional President will clear the air.

Meanwhile CARRANZA remains in authority at Mexico City, and his childish behavior daily indicates his lack of capacity. He was but a feeble figure until VILLA pushed him forward during the excitement that followed the Benton affair, but he was at least an "unknown quantity." Now that he has had his opportunity, he has failed, and there are no longer any illusions as to his ability to restore order in Mexico.

TWO CHAMPIONS OF GERMANY.

We print today two articles written to show that Germany did not begin the war, that Germany was not to blame for the war, that she was justified in going to war. Each places the blame elsewhere.

One of these articles is the translation of a pamphlet prepared in Germany which we have received in translation from Dr. DERNBURG, who accepts responsibility for it. It is entitled "England's Share of Guilt in the World War." The other article is a reply to JAMES M. BECK'S presentation of the case of the Allies against Germany. It is written by Mr. EDMUND VON MACH, the author of books presenting the German point of view.

We submit these articles to the candid judgment of our readers, who ought by this time to be able to qualify as experts upon the causes of the war and the responsibility for it. We have put before them in full all the diplomatic correspondence thus far published; they have read in our columns the articles written by Dr. DERNBURG, Mr. ARTHUR VON BRIESEN, Prof. SLOANE, and Prof. BURGESS of Columbia University, upon the German side, and the articles written by ex-President ELIOT, Prof. BRANDER MATTHEWS, and Mr. JAMES M. BECK upon the side of the Allies, or, as we might say, presenting the American view of the controversy. There have been many others upon each side. We bespeak from readers of THE TIMES an attentive consideration of these two articles from German sources. They will be able to weigh and judge them; they are in a position to determine for themselves whether the evidence furnished by the British "White Paper," the German "Memorandum," the Russian "Orange Book," and the Belgian "Gray Book" has been judicially and judiciously reviewed by these writers; if matter that would have weight in the mind of an impartial judge has been omitted, they will detect the omission. They will recognize the force and the merit of the arguments. In short, these German articles offer to the readers of THE TIMES an opportunity to apply their own knowledge, to pass an examination that will test their mastery of the documents they have studied.

NATIONAL NEUTRALITY.

Does It Impose on Us the Duty to Keep Silent?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to express approval of your editorial of recent date drawing a distinction between the duty of national neutrality and the question of individual silence or expression. National neutrality is no more emphatically right than individual silence would be emphatically wrong. For the good of the generation of American citizens now growing up, the moral phases of the war must be freely and vigorously discussed, and the fitting lessons drawn. But even the question of our own interests cannot rightly be neglected. This war, on evidence already in hand, will cost the people of the United States well up in the hundreds of millions, even with the speediest end that any reasonable man can hope for. Are we likely to decrease the prospect of similar blows to our prosperity in the future by carefully keeping our mouths shut now? No; the most ample discussion is the right and expedient thing under the circumstances.

There is one element in the American discussion of the war, however, which ought, on any reasonable theory or propriety in such matters, to be eliminated. I refer to the frequent public utterances of Count Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, not to the newspapers of this country but to the United States as represented by our Government at Washington. He stands here as Ambassador Gerard stands in Germany. It is needless to say that if the latter should attempt to school public opinion in Germany with regard to the war President Wilson would recall him immediately for gross impropriety in the conduct of his office. Why should the German Ambassador be allowed to carry on a fight against the trend of American opinion? It is all right for the American press to open its columns liberally to individual Germans, either visitors or those who are now naturalized citizens, but an official newspaper assault on American views from the walls of the German Embassy is just as improper, let me repeat, as it would be for our Ambassador in Berlin to give out from his official residence an argument against the right of Germany to violate the neutrality of Belgium. W. H. JOHNSON.

Professor of Latin, Denison University.
Granville, Ohio, Oct. 26, 1914.

BELGIUM'S NEUTRALITY.

Did It Exempt Her from the Obligation to Resist Invasion?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial reply to Prof. Burgess's article on Belgium's neutrality should be attentively read throughout the country. It seems convincing and complete. Our American public should be advised that the Granville-Bernsdorff Treaty of 1870 expressly preserved that part of the Quintuple Treaty of April 19, 1839, by which the high contracting powers guaranteed Belgium's independence and neutrality. Neither Dr. Dernburg nor Prof. Burgess in their various allusions to Gladstone's now famous speech of Aug. 10, 1870, mentions the vitally important sentence quoted in your editorial yesterday, which shows that in Gladstone's opinion the contract of 1839 was intended to be perpetual, and remained so despite the temporary treaty of 1870.

In distinguishing between guaranteed neutrality and ordinary neutrality Prof. Burgess correctly says that "no State is under any obligation to defend the ordinary neutrality of any other State against infringement by a belligerent," and adds, "and no belligerent is under any special obligation to observe it." The pronoun "it" refers to ordinary neutrality, or the sentence is meaningless. The professor's view seems to be that no belligerent is under any special obligation to observe the ordinary neutrality of a State. Whatever doubts earlier publicists may have expressed, today the accepted canon of international law is that a belligerent has no right to march its troops or convoy munitions of war or food supplies through the territory of a neutral power, and that a neutral not only has no right to allow the transit of troops or supplies across its borders, but, if it does so allow, is responsible to the combatants injuriously affected by its action. Such aggressions against neutral powers are expressly forbidden in articles formulated by the various Hague Peace Conferences, not, however, by way of innovation but in recognition of well-established rules. I am at a loss to understand what Prof. Burgess means by the assertion that a belligerent is under no special obligation to observe the neutrality of another nation, unless his intention is to deny that neutral territory is inviolable.

This idea seems to infect his entire article, for toward its close, arguing upon the assumption that he has got rid of the "guaranteed neutrality" of Belgium (the assumption which you so neatly puncture) he charges that Belgium has Great Britain to thank for the awful losses inflicted upon her, and that she should have acceded to Germany's demand for "unhindered passage through one end of her territory under the pledge of guaranteeing her independence and integrity and reimbursing every franc of damage." If by the law of nations Belgium was bound to uphold her neutrality, how, unless she meant to defy the opinion of the civilized world, could she have listened to the siren offer of Germany and been bribed into a breach of international law? What shall be thought of the ethics underlying such an argument?

J. HAMPDEN DOUGHERTY.
New York, Oct. 29, 1914.

Attorney General Parsons.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Attorney General James A. Parsons, who succeeded by appointment of Gov. Glynn to the Attorney Generalship upon the resignation of Attorney General Carmody, is now a candidate for election. Apart from his fine public record before he came to the Attorney General's office, and his work as Deputy Attorney General, he has a special claim to the support of the people of the State, and particularly of this city.

Immediately after coming into office several months ago he began the examination of complaints from residents of this city that the "anti-monopoly laws" were being violated openly in the City of New York in unlawful attempts to control the supply and fix the prices of foodstuffs. Mr. Parsons immediately took up these complaints and began a proceeding on behalf of the State, which proceeding is now in progress. Attorney General Parsons by this act has given assurance that the so-called Donnelly act, which has long been on the statute books of this State, shall become a living force in favor of the consumers of the State.

JOHN JEROME ROONEY.
New York, Oct. 26, 1914.

Complains The Times Is Pro-German

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am very weary of the pro-German character of THE TIMES. I have read the paper since its foundation, when I was a student in college, and a nephew of George Jones, its founder, was my roommate. I knew Henry J. Raymond, whose venerable widow has just passed away, and I have kept to the paper for more than half a century. But I cannot stand such dishes of German arrogance and insolence as you are serving up daily to your readers; and your war articles are almost equally prejudiced and one-sided.

It seems as if you believed Bernhardi and Usher and Cramb and their followers. Unless you can give us some genuine American sentiment, unmixed with Germanism, I shall have to find my reading elsewhere.

Rev. Dr. CHARLES AUGUSTUS STODDARD.
New York, Oct. 30, 1914.

"Near Side Stop" Disregarded.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I have some enlightenment as to where the trolley cars may be taken for the "near-side stop" is certainly a failure at such intersecting streets as Fourth Avenue and Twenty-third Street, Twenty-third Street, Broadway, and Fifth Avenue, &c.? Many might be mentioned. I waited at Fourth Avenue and Twenty-third Street on the near side to go north, and twenty cars passed without stopping between Twenty-second and Twenty-fourth Streets. BISHOP.
New York, Oct. 30, 1914.

TIPPERARY.

(At the other end of the long, long road.)

Who is it stands at the full o' the door?
Mary O'Fay, Mother O'Fay.
An' what is she watching an' waiting for?
Och, none but her soul can say.

There's a list in the Post Office long an' black,
With tidings bad, and woeful sad;
The names of the boys who'll ne'er come back,
An' one is her darling lad.

We showed her the list; but she cannot read,
So we told her true, yes, we told her true.
Her old eyes stared till they'd almost bleed,
An' she swore that none of us knew.

She's waiting now for Father O'Toole,
Till he goes her way at the noon of day.
She's simperin' white—the poor old fool,
For she knows what the priest'll say.

* * * * * * *

Who is it sprawls upon the sod
At the break o' day? It's Mickey O'Fay;
His eyes glare up to the walls of God,
And half of his head is blown away.

What is he doing in that strange place,
Torn and shred, and murdered dead?
He's singin' the psalm of the fighting race
As his soul soars wide o'erhead.

He killed three foemen before he fell
(Och, the toll he'd take, and the skulls he'll break!)
And he shrieked like a soul escaped from Hell
As he died for the Sassenach's sake.

Who shall we blame for the awful thing—
For the blood that flows and the heart-wrung throes?
Kaiser or Czar, statesman or King?
Och, leave it to Him Who knows!

JOHN R. KENNEDY.

IS PRUSSIA THE MODERN CYCLOPS?

Chesterton Likens Her, in Her Inability to Recognize Others' Rights, to the Blinded Polyphemus.

By GILBERT K. CHESTERTON.

In the last summary I suggested that barbarism, as we mean it, is not mere ignorance or even mere cruelty. It has a more precise sense, and means militant hostility to certain necessary human ideas. I took the case of the vow or the contract which Prussian intellectualism would destroy. I urged that the Prussian is a spiritual barbarian, because he is not bound by his own past, any more than a man in a dream. He avows that when he promised to respect a frontier on Monday he did not foresee what he calls "the necessity" of not respecting it on Tuesday. In short, he is like a child who at the end of all reasonable explanations and reminders of admitted arrangements has no answer except "But I want to."

There is another idea in human arrangements so fundamental as to be forgotten, but now for the first time denied. It may be called the idea of reciprocity; or, in better English, of give and take. The Prussian appears to be quite intellectually incapable of this thought. He cannot, I think, conceive the idea that is the foundation of all comedy—that in the eyes of the other man he is only the other man. And if we carry this clue through the institutions of Prussianized Germany we shall find how curiously his mind has been limited in the matter. The German differs from other patriots in the inability to understand patriotism. Other European peoples pity the Poles or the Welsh for their violated borders, but Germans only pity themselves. They might take forcible possession of the Severn or the Danube, of the Thames or the Tiber, of the Garry or the Garonne—and they would still be singing sadly about how fast and true stands the watch on the Rhine and what a shame it would be if any one took their own little river away from them. That is what I mean by not being reciprocal; and you will find it in all that they do, as in all that is done by savages.

"Laughs When He Hurts You."

Here again it is very necessary to avoid confusing this soul of the savage with mere savagery in the sense of brutality or butchery, in which the Greeks, the French, and all the most civilized nations have indulged in hours of abnormal panic or revenge. Accusations of cruelty are generally mutual. But it is the point about the Prussian that with him nothing is mutual. The definition of the true savage does not concern itself even with how much more he hurts strangers or captives than do the other tribes of men. The definition of the true savage is that he laughs when he hurts you and howls when you hurt him. This extraordinary inequality in the mind is in every act and word that comes from Berlin.

For instance, no man of the world believes all he sees in the newspapers, and no journalist believes a quarter of it. We should therefore be quite ready in the ordinary way to take a great deal off the tales of German atrocities; to doubt this story or deny that. But there is one thing that we cannot doubt or deny—the seal and authority of the Emperor. In the imperial proclamation, the fact that certain "frightful" things have been done is admitted, and justified on the ground of their frightfulness. It was a military necessity to terrify the peaceful populations with something that was not civilized, something that was hardly human.

"Howls When You Hurt Him."

Very well. That is an intelligible policy; and in that sense an intelligible argument. An army endangered by foreigners may do the most frightful things. But then we turn the next page of the Kaiser's public diary, and we find him writing to the President of the United States to complain that the English are using dumdum bullets and violating various regulations of The Hague Conference. I pass for the present the question of whether there is a word of truth in these charges. I am content to gaze rapturously at the blinking eyes of the true, or positive, barbarian. I suppose he would be quite puzzled if we said that violating The Hague Conference was a military necessity" to us, or that the rules of the conference were only a scrap of paper. He would be quite pained if we said that dumdum bullets "by their very frightfulness" would be very useful to keep conquered Germans in order. Do what he will, he cannot get outside the idea that he, because he is he and not you, is free to break the law and also to appeal to the law. It is said that the Prussian officers play at a game called Kriegspiel, or the war game. But in truth they could not play at any game, for the essence of every game is that the rules are the same on both sides.

But, taking every German institution in turn, the case is the same; and it is not a case of mere bloodshed or military bravado. The duel, for example, can legitimately be called a barbaric thing, but the word is there used in another sense. There are duels in Germany; but so there are in France, Italy, Belgium, Spain; indeed, there are duels wherever there are dentists, newspapers, Turkish baths, time tables and all the curses of civilization—except in England and a corner of America. You may happen to regard the duel as a historic relic of the more barbaric States on which these modern States were built. It might equally well be maintained that the duel is everywhere the sign of high civilization, being the sign of its more delicate sense of honor, its more vulnerable vanity, or its greater dread of social disrepute. But whichever of the two views you take, you must concede that the essence of the duel is an armed equality. I should not, therefore, apply the word barbaric, as I am using it, to the duels of German officers, or even to the broadsword combats that are conventional among the German students. I do not see why a young Prussian should not have scars all over his face if he likes them; nay, they are often the redeeming points of interest on an otherwise somewhat unenlightening countenance. The duel may be defended; the sham duel may be defended.

The One-Sided Prussian Duel.

What cannot be defended is something really peculiar to Prussia, of which we hear numberless stories, some of them certainly true. It might be called the one-sided duel. I mean the idea that there is some sort of dignity in drawing the sword upon a man who has not got a sword—a waiter, or a shop assistant, or even a schoolboy. One of the officers of the Kaiser in the affair at Zabern was found industriously hacking at a cripple. In all these matters I would avoid sentiment. We must not lose our tempers at the mere cruelty of the thing, but pursue the strict psychological distinction. Others besides German soldiers have slain the defenseless, for loot or lust or private malice, like any other murderer. The point is that nowhere else but in Prussian Germany is any theory of honor mixed up with such things, any more than with poisoning or picking pockets. No French, English, Italian, or American gentleman would think he had in some way cleared his own character by sticking his sabre through some ridiculous greengrocer who had nothing in his hand but a cucumber. It would seem as if the word which is translated from the German as "honor" must really mean something quite different in German. It seems to mean something more like what we should call "prestige."

Absence of the Reciprocal Idea.

The fundamental fact, however, is the absence of the reciprocal idea. The Prussian is not sufficiently civilized for the duel. Even when he crosses swords with us his thoughts are not as our thoughts; when we both glorify war we are glorifying different things. Our medals are wrought like his, but they do not mean the same thing; our regiments are cheered as his are, but the thought in the heart is not the same; the Iron Cross is on the bosom of his King, but it is not the sign of our God. For we, alas! follow our God with many relapses and self-contradictions, but he follows his very consistently. Through all the things that we have examined, the view of national boundaries, the view of military methods, the view of personal honor and self-defense, there runs in their case something of an atrocious simplicity; something too simple for us to understand; the idea that glory consists in holding the steel, and not in facing it.

If further examples were necessary it would be easy to give hundreds of them. Let us leave, for the moment, the relations between man and man in the thing called the duel. Let us take the relation between man and woman, in that immortal duel which we call a marriage. Here again we shall find that other Christian civilizations aim at some kind of equality, even if the balance be irrational or dangerous. Thus, the two extremes of the treatment of women might be represented by what are called the respectable classes in America and in France. In America they choose the risk of companionship in France the compensation of courtesy. In America it is practically possible for any young gentleman to take any young lady for what he calls (I deeply regret to say) a joy ride; but at least the man goes with the woman as much as the woman with the man. In France the young woman is protected like a nun while she is unmarried; but when she is a mother she is really a holy woman; and when she is a grandmother she is a holy terror.

By both extremes the woman gets something back out of life. There is only one place where she gets little or nothing back, and that is the north of Germany. France and America aim alike at equality; America by similarity, France by dissimilarity. But North Germany does definitely aim at inequality. The woman stands up with no more irritation than a butler; the man sits down with no more embarrassment than a guest. This is the cool affirmation of inferiority, as in the case of the sabre and the tradesmen. "Thou goest with women; forget not thy whip," said Nietzsche. It will be observed that he does not say "poker," which might come more naturally to the mind of a more common or Christian wife-beater But then a poker is a part of domesticity, and might be used by the wife as well as the husband. In fact, it often is. The sword and the whip are the weapons of a privileged caste.

Pass from the closest of all differences, that between husband and wife, to the most distant of all differences, that of the remote and unrelated races who have seldom seen each other's faces, and never been tinged with each other's blood. Here we still find the same unvarying Prussian principle. Any European might feel a genuine fear of the Yellow Peril, and many Englishmen, Frenchmen, and Russians have felt and expressed it. Many might say, and have said, that the heathen Chinee is very heathen indeed; that if he ever advances against us he will trample and torture and utterly destroy, in a way that Eastern people do, but Western people do not. Nor do I doubt the German Emperor's sincerity when he sought to point out to us how abnormal and abominable such a nightmare campaign would be, supposing that it could come.

But now comes the comic irony; which never fails to follow on the attempt of the Prussian to be philosophic. For the Kaiser, after explaining to his troops how important it was to avoid Eastern barbarism, instantly commanded them to become Eastern barbarians. He told them, in so many words, to be Huns, and leave nothing living or standing behind them. In fact, he frankly offered a new army corps of aboriginal Tartars to the Far East, within such time as it may take a bewildered Hanoverian to turn into a Tartar. Any one who has the painful habit of personal thought will perceive here at once the non-reciprocal principle again. Boiled down to its bones of logic, it means simply this: 'I am a German and you are a Chinaman. Therefore, I, being a German, have a right to be a Chinaman. But you have no right to be a Chinaman, because you are only a Chinaman.' This is probably the highest point to which the German culture has risen.

"The Principle of Being Unprincipled."

The principle here neglected, which may be called mutuality by those who misunderstand and dislike the word equality, does not offer so clear a distinction between the Prussian and the other peoples as did the first Prussian principle of an infinite and destructive opportunism; or, in other words, the principle of being unprincipled. Nor upon this second can one take up so obvious a position touching the other civilizations or semi-civilizations of the world. Some idea of oath and bond there is in the rudest tribes, in the darkest continents. But it might be maintained, of the more delicate and imaginative element of reciprocity, that a cannibal or Red Indian understands it almost as little as a Professor in Berlin. A narrow and one-sided seriousness is the fault of barbarians all over the world. This may have been the meaning, for aught I know, of the one eye of the Cyclops; that the barbarian cannot see round things or look at them from two points of view, and thus becomes a blind beast and an eater of men. Certainly there can be no better summary of the savage than this, which, as we have seen, unfits him for the duel. He is the man who cannot love—no, nor even hate—his neighbor as himself.

But this quality in Prussia does have one effect which has reference to the same question of the lower civilizations. It disposes once and for all at least of the civilizing mission of Germany. Evidently the Germans are the last people in the world to be trusted with the task. They are as short-sighted morally as physically. What is their sophism of "necessity" but an inability to imagine tomorrow morning? What is their non-reciprocity but an inability to imagine, not a god or devil, but merely another man? Are these to judge mankind? Men of two tribes in Africa not only know that they are all men but can understand that they are all black men. In this they are quite seriously in advance of the intellectual Prussian, who cannot be got to see that we are all white men. The ordinary eye is unable to perceive in the Northeast Teuton anything that marks him out especially from the more colorless classes of the rest of Aryan mankind. He is simply a white man, with a tendency to the gray or the drab. Yet he will explain in serious official documents that the difference between him and us is a difference between "the master race and the inferior race."

How to Know "The Master Race."

The collapse of German philosophy always occurs at the beginning rather than the end of an argument, and the difficulty here is that there is no way of testing which is a master race except by asking which is your own race. If you cannot find out, (as is usually the case,) you fall back on the absurd occupation of writing history about prehistoric times. But I suggest quite seriously that if the Germans can give their philosophy to the Hottentots there is no reason why they should not give their sense of superiority to the Hottentots. If they can see such fine shades between the Goth and the Gaul, there is no reason why similar shades should not lift the savage above other savages; why any Ojibway should not discover that he is one tint redder than the Dakotas, or any nigger in the Kameruns say he is not so black as he is painted. For this principle of a quite unproved racial supremacy is the last and worst of the refusals of reciprocity. The Prussian calls all men to admire the beauty of his large blue eyes. If they do, it is because they have inferior eyes; if they don't, it is because they have no eyes.

Wherever the most miserable remnant of our race, astray and dried up in deserts or buried forever under the fall of bad civilization, has some feeble memory that men are men, that bargains are bargains, that there are two sides to a question, or even that it takes two to make a quarrel—that remnant has the right to assist the New Culture, to the knife and club and the splintered stone. For the Prussian begins all his culture by that act which is the destruction of all creative thought and constructive action. He breaks that mirror in the mind in which a man can see the face of his friend or foe.

ART FOR WAR SUFFERERS.

Exposition and Sale of Pictures and Statues Begins Today.

The pictures and statues at the Pietro Studios on exhibition and to be sold for the benefit of the war sufferers bear testimony to the generosity of many artists. The works in nearly all instances are representative and sufficiently important to make a dignified appeal. Mr. Blashfield has sent a fine drawing for a symbolic figure in one of his decorations. Mr. Henri has a brilliant example of his recent work, a child's head in a red cap against a gray background. Mr. Blumenschein's sulky figure of a boy in brown has a fine decorative quality. Leon Boronda's "The Paris Market" is full of light streaming through shuttered openings. Mr. Lie sends an energetic landscape intense in color, with a clear understanding of the anatomy of a hillside up which a road is climbing. Incidentally he paints a cloud shadow that is a true marvel of subtlety.

Francis Jones sends a charming girl in open fields and Mr. Halpert a stark still life. Mr. Linde's picture is rich and full of color. Jeanne Bertrand sends a picturesquely seen and strongly realistic statue of an old cheerful washerwoman. These are a few among many interesting and serious works, given whole-heartedly by men and women in sympathy with the brave and suffering on the other side of the ocean.

During the exposition, which opens today and will continue until Nov. 10, Mayor Mitchel and ex President Taft will be visitors and guests at the exhibition. They head the Honorary Committee, and with them are: Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Mrs. Daniel S. Lamont, Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, Mrs. Vincent Astor, Eva Booth, the Rev. J. Wesley Hill, Henry Clews, August Belmont, John J. Phelps, Stephen H. Pell, John Wanamaker, John Burroughs, and Jules S. Bache.

On the Reception Committee are Mrs. John Beekman, Eva Booth, Miss Frances Brown, Mrs. Rene Carrillo, Miss Christine Dossert, Mrs. Wallace Eddinger, Mrs. Walter Lewisohn, Mrs. William H. Osborne, Mrs. L. D. Rockwell, and Miss Helene White.

A tea will be given by the women of the Honorary Committee and the Reception Committee, assisted by a large number of the women artists who have contributed their work to the cause. All the prominent artists and sculptors who are now within the city's environs will attend the reception on the opening of the exposition.

The committee in charge of the exposition asks that if all artists and their friends who have contributed works of art or money, no matter how small, have not received acknowledgment from the Treasurer, Dr. Frank Dossert, they communicate with him at once at Carnegie Hall, where immediate attention will be given any such oversight. The proceeds will be forwarded to the War Relief Fund for the victims in the war zone, and especially those regions in Belgium and France which are dear to the artists

THOMAS BOWERS WEDS MISS HELLEN

Son of Late Solicitor General Married in St. John's Church, Washington, D. C.

MRS. R. A. TAFT ATTENDANT

Sister of Bridegroom Is Maid of Honor — Breakfast Follows Ceremony—The Guests.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The marriage of Miss Louise Hellen, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Hellen of this city, to Thomas Bowers, formerly of Chicago, and only son of the late Solicitor General of the United States, took place at noon today in St. John's Church, Lafayette Square. The Rev. Dr. Roland Cotton Smith officiated. The ushers were the bride's brother, Arthur Hellen, Laurence Riggs, and George Harrison, all of this city; Philip Roberts of Boston, John Herron of Pittsburgh, Maryland Williams of New Haven, and David Ely of New York.

The bride was escorted by her father, with a matron of honor and four bridesmaids. The former was Mrs. Robert A. Taft, only sister of the bridegroom, whose marriage took place in this same church just two weeks ago. The bridesmaids were Miss Mary Hellen, Miss Frances Noyes, Miss Julia Whiting, and Miss Eleanor Reyburn, all of this city. The bride's gown was of white satin, worn with tulle veil and orange blossoms.

The bridal attendants wore gowns alike of green silk and chiffon on modish lines with long sleeves of chiffon, and no gloves. They wore black velvet hats and black French shoes, which were trimmed in silver. Their bouquets were pink and mauve orchids. Robert A. Taft was best man.

A breakfast limited to the bridal party and immediate relatives followed the ceremony.

Prominent among the guests were the stepmother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Lloyd Bowers; Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Edgar of Minneapolis and Miss Edgar and Miss Helen Taft, all of whom sat in the pews reserved for the bridegroom's family, while on the bride's side in the pew with Mrs. Hellen was the nurse who has brought up all of the Hellen children. The family party here included Miss Celeste Eustis, the great-aunt of the bride; Col. and Mrs. Thomas N. Wood and their daughter, Mrs. Robert H. Dunlop, George Hellen, Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Eustis, Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Peabody, Mr. and Mrs. Almirel, and Mr. and Mrs. William Corcoran Hill of this city.

Other guests were Brazilian Ambassador Da Gama, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Glover, Mrs. Carroll Glover, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Richardson Clover and the Misses Clover, Mrs. Henry C. Corbin, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Faust, Mrs. Rockwood Hoar, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Noyes, Miss Ethel Noyes, Mrs. David S. Barry and Miss Cora Barry, Mrs. Victor Cushman, Mrs. Frederick Chapin, Mr. and Mrs. Garrison McClintock, Miss McClintock, Mrs. Henry C. Mitchell, the Misses Smith, and Miss Cushing.

Sommer-Rohe Wedding Plans.

The wedding of Miss Gertrude Rohe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rohe of 17 West Eighty-seventh Street, and Leopold Sommer, will take place on Wednesday evening, Nov. 11, in the Church of the Advent. Miss Elsa Dohse is to be maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will be the Misses Vivienne Kranich, Loretta Kuser, Olga Moore, and Frances Paine. Charles S. Sommer is to be his brother's best man, and the ushers will include William Flammer, John Dohse, Charles Rohe, Jr., and John Semmer.

Miss Clare L. Brett Engaged.

Mr. and Mrs. George Platt Brett, of 130 West Seventy-sixth Street, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Clare Louise Brett, to James Polk McKinney, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Polk McKinney of Pittsburgh, Penn.

Miss Brett made her début during the Winter of 1911. Mr. McKinney was graduated from Princeton University, Class of '12, and is with the McKinney Manufacturing Company.

No date has been set for the wedding.

"The Holy City" at St. Matthew's.

A special musical service will be given this evening at St. Matthew's Church, Eighty-fourth Street, near Central Park West, at which Gaul's sacred cantata, "The Holy City," will be sung, under the direction of Maurice C. Rumsey. The soloists taking part will be Mrs. Kenneth S. Johnson, soprano; Miss Ida Werich, contralto; William Wheeler, tenor, and Russell A. Bliss, baritone.

Engagements.

Mrs. R. Glickstone of 2,122 Richmond Terrace, Port Richmond, S. I., announces the engagement of her niece, Miss Anna Sewell, to Philip Victor Brown of this city. Miss Sewell is a singer, and Mr. Brown is a lawyer at 2 Wall Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Webster Littlefield of Kansas City, Mo., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Augusta Armour, to James Clement Dunn of Newark, N. J.

Mrs. William Vail of the Hotel Walton, 104 West Seventieth Street, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Dorothy M. Vail, to Walter Editz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Editz of this city. Miss Vail is a daughter of the late William Vail of Tuxedo. No date has been set for the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Gustav J. Staats of this city have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Kathryn May Staats, to Walter Dix Steinbarger of Columbus, Ohio. Miss Staats is a graduate of the Finch School, and Mr. Steinbarger was graduated from the Ohio State University, class of '10.

The engagement of Miss Beatrice Schwartz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Schwartz of Brooklyn, to Jacob Silverberg of this city, has been announced. Mr. Silverberg is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Silverberg of Strassburg, Germany.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Newmark of 951 Sherman Avenue, this city, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sophia Newmark, to Arthur Laubheim of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. William Wheatley of Prospect Street, East Orange, N. J., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Hastings Wheatley, to Harold Welford Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. R. Smith of Harrison Street, East Orange.

Gibb-Whitlock Engagement.

Mrs. Arthur Gibb of 14 East Fifty-ninth Street announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Dorothy Gibb, to Bache McEvers Whitlock, son of Mrs. Bache McEvers Whitlock of 535 Park Avenue.

Miss Gibb is a daughter of Mrs. Gibb by her first husband, the late John Richmond Gibb, and a granddaughter of the late John Gibb. Her sister, Miss Ruth Gibb, was married to Harold W. Carhart last February.

Mr. Whitlock is a graduate of Columbia University, Class of '11, and is a member of the Union Club.

No date has been set for the wedding.

DONALD—TWINING.

The engagement of Miss Edith May Donald of Dongan Hills, S. I., daughter of the late William M. Donald, to Kinsley Twining of Morristown, N. J., is announced. Mr. Twining is the son of Mrs. Kinsley Twining and was graduated from Yale University, Class of '01. He is practicing law in Newark, N. J.

WILL WED ON ISLE OF HOPE.

Marriage of Inez Tiedeman and R. D. Chapin at Crafton Hall.

New York guests will leave this afternoon on two special cars for Savannah, Ga., to attend the wedding of Inez Tiedeman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Tiedeman of that city, to Roy D. Chapin, President of the Hudson Motor Car Company of Detroit, Mich., which will take place on Wednesday at Crafton Hall, the home of the Tiedemans on the Isle of Hope at Savannah.

The bride will have Mrs. George Bourne of New York as matron of honor, and the bridesmaids are to be Miss Edith Adams of New York, Frances Long of Pennsylvania, Helen McBurnie of Minnesota, Moselle Neely and Dorothea Baldwin of Georgia. Mr. Chapin's best man is to be Jules Claemer of New York, whose engagement to one of the bridesmaids, Miss Edith Adams, was announced several weeks ago. The ushers are to be Angus Smith, Bertrand Stroh, and George H. Angell of Detroit, Mich.; Sydney Gardiner of Chicago, and Webb Willetts.

At Philadelphia the New York guests will be joined by others, including the relatives of Mr. Chapin from Detroit. There is to be a large dinner and dance and other festivities for the guests when they arrive at Crafton Hall.

MILLETT-GLOVER WEDDING.

Archbishop Beeman Performs Ceremony in Fairfield, Conn.

The marriage of Gardner W. Millett and Miss Harriet Coleman C. Glover, a daughter of Mrs. Henry Sheaff Glover of New York, took place yesterday in St. Paul's Church at Fairfield, Conn. Archbishop Allen Beeman, rector of the church and Archdeacon of the county, officiated. The church was decorated with Easter lilies.

Miss Glover, in white satin and point lace and wearing a point lace veil and carrying orchids, walked with her brother Dawson C. Glover, who gave her in marriage.

Mr. Millett's best man was his cousin, Stephen C. Millett, and the ushers were Robert R. Reid, Sherburne Prescott, John Le Roy Glover, a brother of the bride, and Henry B. Stimson, all of New York. The reception was held at Mrs. Glover's country home, the Moorlands, and there were about 200 guests, many of whom went from New York on special cars.

On their return from their bridal trip South, about Jan. 1, Mr. and Mrs. Millett will live in New York.

MISS CANFIELD A BRIDE.

Married to Karl B. Smith in St. Paul's Chapel, Yonkers.

The wedding of Miss Frances Canfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Dayton Canfield, Jr., of Yonkers, N. Y., and Karl Beckwith Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Herbert Smith of 29 West Ninetieth Street, this city, took place yesterday in St. Paul's Chapel, Yonkers, the Rev. Dr. W. M. Gilbert, assisted by the Rev. W. W. Bellinger of St. Agnes's Chapel, New York, officiating.

Miss Helen Canfield was her sister's only attendant. F. Shelton Farr was best man. The ushers were Irving B. Kingsford, Robert Piel, F. Dayton Canfield, 3d, Edward E. Page, Malcolm E. Read, and Wilmer Hoffman, all of whom were Princeton classmates of the bridegroom, excepting the bride's brother.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, 354 Palisade Avenue. After a short bridal trip Mr. and Mrs. Smith will reside at 46 West Eighty-third Street. The bride made her début two years ago, and is a cousin of Lawrence Perry, the author. Mr. Smith was graduated from Princeton University last year.

MISS BROWN'S BRIDAL PARTY.

Her Marriage to E. S. Twining, Jr., to be Held in St. Thomas's Church.

Miss Ursula Wolcott Brown, whose marriage to Esmund S. Twining, Jr., will take place on Thursday, Nov. 19, at 4 o'clock in St. Thomas's Church, will have as her matron of honor Mrs. Franklin S. Richardson, (Miss Caro Brown.) Little Miss Ursula Wolcott Brown, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. S. Griswold, a cousin of the bride, will be the flower girl, and the other attendants will be the Misses Angelica Schuyler Brown, a cousin of the bride; Gwendolin Condon, Lisa Stillman, Kathryn Motley, Mercedes de Acosta, and Genevieve Sanford.

Mr. Twining's best man is to be Richard Stevenson. The ushers selected are John Pettie, Reginald Whitman, Allister Morris, Frank Burton, Sinclair Richardson, Robert Grosvenor, Charles Reed, and Wallace Chauncey.

The reception will be held at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Hunter Brown, 56 East Fifty-second Street.

MISS ROCHESTER TO WED.

Daughter of Mrs. Robert S. Reid Engaged to Leland Stanford Briggs.

Mrs. Robert Speir Reid of the Hotel Walton, 104 West Seventieth Street, announces the engagement of her daughter by a former marriage, Miss Katharine Rochester, to Leland Stanford Briggs of this city.

Miss Rochester made her début a few years ago in Rochester, N. Y., her former home, which was named for her great great-grandfather, Nathaniel Rochester. Mr. Briggs is a grandson of the late Senator William P. Frye of Maine and Mrs. Garret Hobart is his sister. He is a member of the Ardsley Club and the St. Nicholas Society. No date has been set for the wedding.

Deal Golf Club Dines Col. Harvey.

A dinner was given to Col. George B. Harvey last night at the Hotel Knickerbocker by twenty-four of his friends, all members of the Deal Golf Club. Col. Harvey was the first President of the club, and was the first to drive a ball on the Deal Links. His country home, Jorjalma, is at Deal. The guests, who were entertained by a vaudeville programme during the dinner, included F. M. Eaton, William R. Hees, R. H. Higgins, James T. Smith, Walter Albertson, Joseph M. Byrne, George V. Haggerty, James G. Newcomb, A. G. Scherer, Francis J. Arend, J. Henry Haggerty, W. R. Delehanty, Gen. W. C. Heppenheimer, and the Rev. John W. Norris.

PASSENGERS FROM EUROPE.

Some of the Arrivals on Lusitania and Nieuw Amsterdam.

Transatlantic liners arriving yesterday and some of their passengers were:

LUSITANIA, (Liverpool.)—J. B. Allan, Miss F. Bates, Miss A. Bates, B. A. Beal, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Beale, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mrs. C. F. Berwind, G. M. Booth, Mrs. R. Brooks, Mrs. J. S. Burnside, Mr. and Mrs. Allston Burr, A. Burt, Mrs. C. B. Clarke, Miss Ina Claire, Ogden Codman, E. J. Corrill, Capt. E. W. Davis, Mrs. R. H. Ducas, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Duryea, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Duveen, Mr. and Mrs. J. Duveen, Lord and Lady Ellenborough, Mrs. W. Goddard, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Hannan, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Havemeyer, Rear Admiral G. E. Ide, U. S. N., ret., Mrs. Ide, S. S. Keyser, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Kling, Sir Henry Kitson, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Laing, Mrs. Lorillard, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Lyman, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Henry La Montaigne, Mr. and Mrs. Honore Palmer, Lieut. B. C. Smyth Pigott, Mr. and Mrs. G. K. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor, Miss Alice Astor, Miss B. Sands, Dr. David Eugene Smith, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Lee Thomas, Mrs. John Wells, Mrs. F. W. Whitridge, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wright, Miss B. Wright, Dr. W. F. Harper, Dr. A. Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Warner, Dr. E. A. Woods, A. S. Wetherbee.

NIEUW AMSTERDAM, (Rotterdam)—Mr. and Mrs. J. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Brown, Dr. and Mrs. E. B. Cade, Mrs. E. L. Clark, Miss E. C. Frost, Mrs. C. L. Held, Miss Harriet Held, Prof. F. Hirth, Miss Lina Horn, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Jackson, Miss G. B. Martin, Mrs. J. A. May, Mrs. B. H. Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Park, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Pike, Mr. and Mrs. T. Leslie Shear, Murray Shelton, Miss C. L. Stanley, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Williams, Mrs. Ella A. Williams, Miss M. A. Young, Miss M. J. Singer, Miss E. J. Singer, Miss A. Spencer, and Miss M. Stratton.

HALLOWEEN LARKS PLAYED BY SOCIETY

Costumed as Witches, Girls Entertain at Mrs. W. R. Grace's Fete at Great Neck.

"GHOST" APPEARS ON LAWN

Mrs. E. H. Harriman Gives a Large Party at Her Country Home at Arden—Other Festivities.

Halloween was celebrated last night, in town and country, with dancing and informal gatherings among the young people in society. The usual Halloween diversions were indulged in, with tricks and merrymaking. Mrs. E. Henry Harriman gave a large party at her country home at Arden, N. Y., and a Halloween fete was held last night at Gracefield, the country home of Mrs. William R. Grace, at Great Neck, L. I., the proceeds of which will be devoted to the destitute Belgians.

The Misses Louise Grace and Katherine Kent were in charge of the affair at Mrs. Grace's, which was largely attended by representative society on Long Island.

The arriving guests found the entrance to the estate decorated with weird jack o' lanterns, and on the lawn a make-believe ghost appeared now and then with telling effect. The interior of the house was decorated with autumnal flowers and foliage and Halloween novelties. In one room were the heads and pelts of wild animals shot by William R. Grace in Africa a few years ago, and these were turned into uncanny objects by the introduction of electric eyes.

A feature of the evening's entertainment was a raffle, the prizes for which were donated, including a set of furniture, given by Mrs. Joseph P. Grace of Manhasset, L. I., also silver vases, canary birds, and puppy dogs.

Costumed as witches, a number of society girls kept the guests entertained. The society witches were the Misses Katherine Kent, Theodora Tiffany, Helen Byrne, Elizabeth Manning, Anne Townsend, Grace Townsend, and Lillian Kent. Exhibition dances were also given by Miss Joan Sawyer.

Under the direction of Mrs. Hallam a Halloween supper dance was held last night at the Hotel Astor, with several unique features. Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas F. Palmer gave a Halloween dance at Alden, their country place at Port Chester, N. Y.

Mr. Edward A. Harriman and Miss Carol Harriman, her daughter, entertained the society colony of Tuxedo last night with a Halloween party at Arden House. There were 250 guests at the dance, which was proceeded by a dinner. The dinner was followed by a supper. Some of those present were Miss Charlotte Harding, Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Tilton, Miss Jean Morris, the Misses Alexander, Miss Marjorie Bourne, Miss Esther Auchincloss, John Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Peck, Miss Iselin, Mrs. Iselin, Col. and Mrs. William Sanger, Mr. and Mrs. Grenville Kane, and Miss Mary Sanger.

ARTISTS HALLOWEEN DINNER.

Salmagundi Club Celebrates Opening of Autumn Season.

Within the gallery of the Salmagundi Club at 14 West Twelfth Street more than 150 artists and members of the club assembled at the annual "Get Together Dinner" last night, and the setting for the event suggested a grotto of the Ice King, with grinning jack-o'-lanterns made from pumpkins suspended amid the frost-like streamers and cornstalks and ears of corn, on Halloween.

On the tables the decorations included Autumn leaves, and witches with broomsticks in hand were represented on yellow papers, everything pertaining to the spirit of a Halloween party. Frederick Ballard Williams, President of the Salmagundi Club, was toast master, and during the festivities introduced Poultney Bigelow as the speaker of the evening.

There was music, and songs were rendered by the members of the artist band to celebrate the opening of the Autumn season.

POPE HONORS FATHER COAN

Chancellor of Brooklyn Diocese Made a Chamberlain.

Bishop Charles E. McDonnell of Brooklyn announced yesterday that the Rev. James J. Coan, Chancellor of the Catholic Diocese of Brooklyn and Long Island and rector of the Church of the Sacred Heart, had been made Papal Chamberlain with the title of Very Reverend Monsignor. The promotion was the result of a request made by Bishop McDonnell to the Pope while on his recent visit to Rome.

Father Coan is45 years of age, and was born in Ireland. He was educated at the College of the Fathers of Mercy at Vineland, N. J., and was ordained in June, 1895.

FITZ JOHN PORTER MARRIES.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Holbrook F. J. Porter Weds Miss F. M. Kitching.

Fitz John Porter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Holbrook F. J. Porter, and a grandson of Gen. Fitz John Porter, was married to Miss Florence M. Kitching at noon yesterday at the residence of the bride, 988 Park Place, Brooklyn.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Almon Gunnison, and was attended only by the immediate relatives of the two families.

The bride wore an ivory satin gown with Court train, and a tulle veil over point lace, and carried orchids and lilies of the valley. Miss Kathleen Kitching, sister of the bride, acted as flower girl. Dr. E. Stagg Whitin was best man.

Mr. Porter is a Columbia graduate, Class of 1912, Arts, and 1914, Law, and is with the firm of Stetson, Jennings & Russell.

PERKINS—HENDERSON.

The marriage of Miss Phoebe Meek Henderson, daughter of Mrs. William G. Henderson of 55 Putnam Avenue, Brooklyn, to Raymond Lynn Perkins of Hannibal, N. Y., was solemnized yesterday morning at the Janes Methodist Episcopal Church, Brooklyn. The Rev. W. W. T. Duncan, pastor of the church, officiated. Only the immediate families were present. After a brief honeymoon in the South, Mr. and Mrs. Perkins will make their home in Brooklyn.

Miss Lurana Sheldon's Lecture.

Miss Lurana Sheldon will lecture on "The Alien, a Lecture in Verse," at the Church of the Messiah, at Park Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street next Thursday evening, for the benefit of the National Child Labor Committee. Dr. Samuel McCune Lindsay will also deliver an address.

Miss Harman to Wed Lieut. Jones.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Valentine Harman, of 324 West 103d Street, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Beirne Harman, to Lieut. Junius Wallace Jones, Coast Artillery, U. S. A. The wedding will take place in the early Winter.

Twin Sisters to Make Debut.

Mrs. James Raynor Hayden, wife of Dr. James Raynor Hayden, will give a reception on the afternoon of Friday, Dec. 18, at her residence, 121 West Fifty-fifth Street, to formally introduce her twin daughters, the Misses Ruth and Faith Hayden, who are the sisters of Mrs. Alfred Macy.

BISHOP C. W. SMITH DIES.

Aged Methodist Leader is Stricken in Home of Justice Anderson.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Charles William Smith, Resident Methodist Episcopal Bishop of St. Louis, died suddenly this morning at the home of Justice Thomas H. Anderson of the District of Columbia, Supreme Court, where he was a guest for the annual meeting here of the Board of Bishops. Yesterday the Bishop attended the session of the board. Later in the day he took to his bed. He was 74 years old. His son is the Rev. Dr. C. L. Smith of Salem, Ohio.

Bishop Smith was born in Fayette County, Penn. His father was a prominent Methodist minister for more than fifty years. Bishop Smith received his education at various schools but did not graduate, later receiving the degrees of M. A. from Allegheny College in 1872, D. D. from Scioto College in 1879, and more recently LL. D. from Union College. He was ordained to the Methodist Episcopal ministry in 1859 and was pastor of churches in and near Pittsburgh, Penn., for the next twenty years. From 1880 until 1884 he was Presiding Elder of the Pittsburgh District and from 1884 until 1908 was editor of The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate and during this time attained the reputation of being one of the most powerful editorial writers of his church. He was made a Bishop in 1908.

Bishop Smith was a Trustee of the Woman's College in Baltimore and of the Puget Sound University in Washington. He was elected a member of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church eight times; in 1884 he was elected a member of the Ecumenical Conference in Washington and was also a delegate to the conference in London in 1901 and in Toronto in 1911. Bishop Smith was a member and Vice Chairman of the committee appointed to revise the constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church; he was a member of the committee which compiled the joint hymnal of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church South and a member of the joint committee on the unification of Japanese Methodism, by which the members of this church in Japan were organized into an independent church.

Bishop Smith married Caroline A. Lindley, a daughter of Dr. Lucullus Lindley of Connellsville, Penn., in 1865.

MAJOR HEADLEY'S FUNERAL.

Military Honors for U. S. Army Chaplain at Fort Totten.

The funeral of Major I. H. B. Headley, Chaplain U. S. A., took place yesterday with military honors at Fort Totten, L. I., where he has been stationed for the last year.

Major Headley was 62 years old and was born in Massachusetts. He was the son of the Rev. P. C. Headley, historian. Major Headley was graduated from Amherst College in 1875. He then took his course in theology in the Andover Theological Seminary. He was appointed a Chaplain in the army with the rank of Captain in 1898.

Major Headley served in North Dakota for five years, and during the Spanish-American war was in command of Fort Yates. In 1901 he was assigned to the Artillery Corps, and later to the Fourteenth Infantry, with which he served several years in the Philippines. He was returned to the Artillery in 1905 and stationed at Fort Hancock, Sandy Hook, and in 1911 was transferred to Fort Howard, Baltimore, Md. In 1913 Major Headley was stationed at Fort Totten.

GEN. JOHN SIMPSON DEAD.

Retired Veteran Served in the Army for Forty-one Years.

GALVESTON, Texas, Oct. 31.—Brig. Gen. John Simpson, U. S. A., retired, died late last night at the home of his son-in-law, Capt. W. L. Guthrie, at the Second Division Encampment in Texas City. Gen. Simpson was 74 years old. The body was sent to Washington, D. C., for burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Brig. Gen. Simpson was born in Bethel, Clermont County, Ohio, and was the son of Samuel and Elizabeth Griffith Simpson. He was educated in the public schools, and in September, 1862, enlisted in the Fifth Ohio Cavalry as a private. From July, 1863, until the end of the civil war, he was attached to Headquarters Division of the Tennessee and the Military Division of the Mississipi. Gen. Simpson remained with the army after the war and was made a Second Lieutenant in 1867.

In 1879 he became a First Lieutenant and a Regimental Quartermaster of the Fourth Artillery. He was made a Captain and Assistant Quartermaster in 1875, and in 1892 a Major and Assistant Quartermaster. In 1897 Gen. Simpson was appointed a Lieutenant Colonel and Deputy Quartermaster General; in 1901 he was made a Colonel and Assistant Quartermaster General, and in 1903 was retired with the rank of Brigadier General. Gen. Simpson married Miss Laura S. Chaffee of Newport, R. I., in 1869.

Dr. Edward Hodges.

Dr. Edward Hodges for twenty years a practising physician and surgeon in Brooklyn, died on Friday night at his residence, 153 Halsey Street, Brooklyn, of pneumonia. Dr. Hodges was a specialist in stomach and intestinal diseases. He was born in Staten Island, and after graduating from the Long Island College Hospital, he was at times connected with the Bushwick, Swedish, Samaritan, and St. Giles Hospitals. During the Spanish-American war, Dr. Hodges served as Assistant Surgeon in the Forty-seventh Regiment. He was also for many years Assistant Surgeon of the Twenty-third Regiment, and was later elected Captain Company M. Dr. Hodges was a former President of the Long Island Medical Society, a member of the Order of American Military Surgeons; Royal Arch Chapter and De Witt Clinton Commandery; Hubbell Camp, Spanish War Veterans, and a Post Master of Euclid Lodge, F. and A. M. He is survived by his widow.

Major William E. Wilkinson.

Major William E. Wilkinson, Eastern Agency Supervisor of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, who died at Mount Sinai Hospital on Oct. 26, was the son of an English clergyman, and as a young man enlisted in the English Army. Major Wilkinson served for many years in India and the Sudan. He spoke Hindustani fluently, and acted as interpreter in India for Gen. Grant, then on his trip around the world. On resigning his commission, he came to this country and for twenty-five years had been prominently identified with the insurance business and was widely known in Masonic circles. Major Wilkinson is survived by his widow and two children.

Coe Downing Tows Dead.

Coe Downing Tows, son of Francis H. Tows, formerly Treasurer of the Rock Island Railroad Company, died yesterday at his apartments in the Hotel Buckingham. For many years he was private secretary for his father, but had not been in active business for some time, preferring to live at his farm in Norfolk, Conn., where he devoted himself to agriculture and the raising of blooded stock. Mr. Tows had been ill for several months. He was a member of the Union League and Players' Clubs of this city, and of the Metropolitan Club in Washington. He is survived by his widow and son.

Rev. Michael Salley.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Oct. 31.—The Rev. Michael Salley, LL. D., died this afternoon in the rectory of St. Patrick's Church, of which he was pastor for fifteen years. He had been ill for two years, a portion of the time in a New York hospital. Father Salley was born in Port Jervis, ordained in 1876, and served in Kingston, Port Jervis, and Newburg. He removed during his long pastorate of St. Patrick's a debt of $40,000, besides putting the church properties in fine condition. He was a Trustee of Washington's Headquarters, appointed by Gov. Dix.

DR. D. M. SHEEDY DEAD.

His Discovery of Infantile Paralysis Now a Subject of Research.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Oct. 31.—Dr. D. M. Sheedy, a well-known physician, dropped dead here today at his home, from heart disease. One of Dr. Sheedy's contributions to medical science was his discovery of the epidemic of infantile paralysis a few years ago, which was extensively discussed in medical journals, and is now a subject of research by the Rockefeller Institute.

Dr. Sheedy was born in Norwalk, Conn., on Nov. 13, 1866. He took a medical course at the New York University, later continuing his studies abroad. He began the practice of medicine in Poughkeepsie in 1890.

Dr. Sheedy was active in the organization of St. Francis Hospital and was one of the surgeons on its staff. He was a member of State and county medical societies. His brother, Dr. B. D. Sheedy, of New York City, is on the Post Graduate Hospital staff. Dr. Sheedy was a trustee of St. Mary's Church and a member of the Knights of Columbus.

Obituary Notes.

WILLIAM COLLINGS, who was well known to Brooklyn business men while manager of the old Tom Blankley's English Chop House in Fulton Street, is dead at his home, 103 Prospect Place, Brooklyn, aged 42 years. He was born in Philadelphia and was a member of the Brooklyn Lodge of Elks and a charter member of the Pomonok Club of Brooklyn.

Mrs. HANNCHEN BICK, widow of a dry goods merchant of Brooklyn, died on Friday at the home of her son, Park Place, Brooklyn, in her ninety-first year. Mrs. Bick had been a resident of Brooklyn for sixty-five years and left two sons, Albert and Henry.

WILLIAM KESSEL, who, with his five brothers, was prominent in the motion-picture business in Brooklyn, died in the Long Island Hospital on Friday from ptomaine poisoning. Mr. Kessel was 34 years old and lived at 179 Decatur Street. He was a member of the Brooklyn Lodge of Elks and left a widow and daughter.

Mrs. MARGARET C. GUARE, wife of James D. Guare, died on Friday at her home, 718A President Street, Brooklyn, of heart disease. She was 43 years old and was a member of the First Reformed Church. Besides her husband she left six sons and a daughter.

Mrs. AMANDA CRAY, long active in the work of the Throop Avenue Presbyterian Church, is dead at her home, 2,108 Regent Place, Flatbush, aged 91 years. She was the widow of Alfred Cray.

Mrs. FRANCES VAN KENNETT THIMME, who died on Wednesday at the home of her son, Dr. Charles Thimme, 429 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, was the widow of Dr. Christopher Thimme, who was appointed Court Dentist to King George of Hanover. She was born in Jefferson City, West Va., eighty-six years ago and married Dr. Thimme when he was practicing in St. Louis. After her husband's death in Berlin she came to live with her son in Brooklyn. She is survived by four sons, Dr. Charles, Edward, Lorenz, an artist, and Harry Thimme, and a daughter, Mrs. L. F. Francisco.

Mrs. KATHERINE MAGRANE, mother of Thais Magrane, the actress, died on Friday in St. Louis, aged 55 years.

EDWIN WEIR PARKER, formerly a member of the brokerage firm of Parker Brothers & Burton, died on Friday at the home of his son, Charles G. Parker, 601 West 113th Street, aged 80 years. He was Vice President of the Whitney Duplicating Check Company.

JOHN KILGOUR, President of the Cincinnati Street Railway Company, is dead at his home there, aged 80 years. He was President of the Bell Telephone Company of Cincinnati until two years ago, and was a stockholder and Director in the First National Bank of Cincinnati.

Weather in Cotton and Grain States

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Forecasts:

N. Car.—Fair slightly warmer Sun. Mon. fair; gentle to mod. s. wind.

S. Car.—Fair Sun., warmer in interior. Mon. fair, gentle to moderate winds, mostly n.

Ga.—Fair Sun., warmer in cent. and n. e. Mon. fair, gentle s. winds.

Fla.—Fair Sun. and Mon.; moderate n. e. winds.

Ala. and Miss.—Fair Sun. and Mon.; gentle to moderate e. and s. e. winds.

La. and East. Tex.—Fair Sun. and Mon.; gentle to moderate s. e. winds.

West. Tex.—Fair Sun.; warmer in extreme w. Mon. fair.

Utah.—Fair Sun. Mon. fair in s., cloudy in n.

Colo.—Fair Sun. and Mon., without decided temperature change.

Ark., Tenn., and Ky.—Fair Sun and Mon.

Ohio.—Fair and slightly warmer Sun. Mon. cloudy, fresh s. w. winds.

Ind.—Fair Sun. and Mon.; moderate s. and s. w. winds.

Ill.—Fair Sun. and Mon.; moderate s. to w. winds.

Mich.—Fair in s., rain and somewhat cooler in n. Sun. or Sun. night. Mon., fair; fresh s. w. to w. winds.

U. Mich.—Unsettled Sun.; probably rain; cooler in n. w. Mon., fair; moderate s. w. to w. winds.

Wis.—Fair Sun. and Mon.; moderate w. winds, becoming variable Mon.

Minn.—Fair Sun. and Mon.; gentle to moderate winds, becoming variable.

Dak., N. and S. Dak., Neb., and Kan.—Fair Sun. and Mon.

Marriage and death notices intended for insertion in The New York Times may be telephoned to 1000 Bryant.

Born.

AGRATI.—To Mrs. Guy J. Agrati, nee Saunderson, of Leonia, N. J., a daughter, Oct. 13, 1914.

GARNER.—To Mr. and Mrs. William Garner, 581 West 161st St., a son, Oct. 27.

WOLFSON.—Mr. and Mrs. Jerome H. Wolfson, 139 Bay 25th St., Bensonhurst, announce the birth of a daughter Oct. 26.

Engaged.

DICKIE—GIBSON.—Mr. and Mrs. Tom Gibson of Ridgewood, N. J., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Laura C. Gibson, to Douglas P. Dickie. Mr. Dickie is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Perry Dickie of New York.

KLUTZMAN—LINDEMAN.—Mrs. Carolyn Lindeman announces the engagement of her daughter, Belle, to Mr. Irving Klutzman.

LAUBHEIM—NEWMARK.—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Newmark announce the engagement of their daughter, Sophia, to Mr. Arthur Laubheim.

SILVERBERG—SCHWARTZ.—Mr. and Mrs. David Schwartz of 107 6th Av. Brooklyn, announce the engagement of their daughter, Beatrice, to Mr. Jacob Silverberg of New York City.

WOLFSON—GOODMAN.—Mr. and Mrs. O. Goodman, 579 Greene Av., Brooklyn, announce the engagement of their daughter Clara to Mr. Max S. Wolfson of New York City.

HARNETT—MANN.—Frances Mann to George Harnett, Jr.

ROSENBERG—RICHEIMER.—Tessie J. Richeimer to J. Milton Rosenberg.

Married.

ANDRUSS—HELMLE.—On Saturday, Oct. 31, 1914, Rosa Marie Helmle to Frank Edgar Andruss.

CAPLIN—REMIZ.—On Sunday, Oct. 25, in Brooklyn, Esther Remiz to Harry Caplin.

HARMAN—COX.—On Saturday, Oct. 31, 1914, at Christ Church, Short Hills, N. J., by the Rev. James P. Conover, assisted by the Rev. C. Malcolm Douglas, Lillien Adele, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles William Cox, to Archer Harman.

MAYERSON—PEABL.—Miss Rose Marie Pearl of 1,025 East 167th St. and Mr. H. Mayerson were quietly married Wednesday, Oct. 28, 1914.

PORTER—KITCHING.—On Saturday, Oct. 31, at 988 Park Place, Brooklyn, by the Rev. Dr. Almon Gunnison, Florence M., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert J. Kitching, to Fitz John Porter of N. Y. C.

RICHTER—LOUGHLIN.—Miss Josephine Loughlin of 1,266 2d Av., and Walter H. Richter, 66 East 79th St., were married at St. Patrick's Cathedral, 5th Av. and 50th St., Sept. 12, 1914.

SMITH—CANFIELD.—On Oct. 31, 1914, at St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, Yonkers, N. Y., by the Rev. Mr. William M. Gilbert, Frances, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Dayton Canfield, Jr., to Karl Beckwith Smith of New York City.

Crocker MOURNING HOUSE
HATS, GOWNS, WAISTS, VEILS, NECKWEAR, FURS.
375 5th Av. at 35th St.
Boston—Copley Square.

Parties.

WUPPERMANN—MULLER.—Miss Alma Rose Muller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Muller of Monticello, N. Y., to Frank F. Wuppermann, at Trinity Church, Hoboken, N. J., on Mar. 17, 1914.

Brooklyn.

LOUGHLIN—CUSACK.—Oct. 28, Frances D. Cusack to Joseph F. Loughlin.

Died.

ALDEN.—Suddenly, on Oct. 31, 1914, Mary Emma, wife of the late Cyrus Alfred Alden and daughter of the late Henry Slate and Emily Virginia Ward. Notice of funeral hereafter.

ALLEN.—At Mount Sinai Hospital, on O

Four Per Cent. Interest
From November 1st
Allowed on all Deposits made on or before November 10th.
GIMBEL BROTHERS, Bankers
(Under Supervision Banking Dept., State of N. Y.)
Main Floor, Rear Balcony.

GIMBEL BROTHERS

Store Opens Daily at 8:30 A. M., Closes at 6 P. M. Open All Day Tuesday—Election Day. Broadway and Thirty-third Street

How Much You'll Enjoy
Taking Luncheon in the GIMBEL Tea Room
Tomorrow!
Music—Grill Room Where Men Can Smoke.
Eighth Floor

300 Phenomenal Suits at $19.75 and $25

Copies of Costly Models—well tailored—the excellence of the materials makes it apparent that these Suits are worth much more than tomorrow's prices.

The Velveteen Suits at $19.75 and $25 are trimmed with skunk opossum. They are in

Black Dark Green Seal Brown Navy

The Broadcloth Suits at $19.75 are elaborately trimmed with bandings of velvet. In

Navy Wood Brown Dark Green Black

279 Women's $37.50 to $50 Dresses at $25

From the best dressmakers in this city—also some from our own Salon Collection. When you see the dresses you will recognize some models that are sold by specialty shops at even more than $50.

Evening Dresses are of Chiffon, Tulle, Net, Crepe Meteor, Charmeuse, and Crepe de Chine—trimmed with iridescent sequins, jet, silver lace and the other new adornments endorsed by Paris.

The Afternoon and Tailleur Frocks are of Satin combined with Velvet, Serge-and-Satin; also some of Charmeuse.

Women's $45 to $145 Evening Wraps at $32.50 to $85

Imported Wraps of Chiffon Velvet, in the model which is illustrated, at $50 instead of $75. Also copies of foreign models in Chiffon Velvet, rich Satins and Plush Raye—quite a few are trimmed with fur, and all of them have beautiful linings.

Plush Coats Trimmed with Skunk-Opossum, $25 to $35

Third Floor

A New Evening Hat of Silver Lace—$12.75

It is harmonious with dinner gowns, and it is very picturesque when worn with any of the new dancing frocks.

The brim of this chapeau is quite unique—as you will see by the illustration—and its binding of black velvet is continued in long streamers which give it added chic.

The newest Afternoon Hats are canotiers of silver lace trimmed with furs and flowers, $12.75.

Spanish Caps of Sequins—$5 to $15—For Dancing

It seems scarcely fair to say that those of striped sequins, in the true Spanish colors, are most artistic, for those of jet or iridescent sequins are very effective.

Paris-Made Hats of Breitschwanz—$6.75—Untrimmed

As the Breitschwanz is one of the best qualities, it requires a keen eye to detect that it is not broadtail fur. The hats are in the new tricornes, turbans and sailors, which have been especially designed for wear with fur coats.

Lyre Bands of Ostrich—Each with a 7-inch Plume—$2

In white, sand color, black, new blue and pink.

Hats Trimmed Without Additional Charge Third Floor

Elegant Coats of Selected Furs, $95 to $225

The Caracul in the coats with Sitka Fox collars at $195, and those in the Russian style, edged with Skunk, at $275, is so fine that it looks very much like broadtail.

The Hudson Seal (dyed muskrat) in the Bernard model, at $145, illustrated, is such a rich quality that it reminds one of genuine Alaska sealskin. And it has the virtue of being exceedingly light in weight.

Hudson Seal (dyed muskrat) Coats with Kolinsky collars, $225.

The best Arctic Seal (dyed coney) is in a $95 model, with Ermine collar.

Coats of Very Good Ponyskin, $27.50

And all of our other prices, up to $500 for broadtail coats, are the minimum.

Skunk—Lynx—Ermine, Ultra In Scarfs and Muffs

The Parisians have never changed their minds about the desirability of skunk—it is, and always has been, their favorite fur for utility wear.

"Le Brun" Muffs of Skunk, $42.50 and $52.50

Pillow Muffs of Skunk, $37.50 to $105. Skunk Scarfs, $14.50, $22.50 to $125.

Lynx

Muffs, the "Le Brun" style, $45; Pillow, $29.50 to $85.
Scarfs & Stoles, $19.50, $32.50 to $75.

Ermine

Pillow Muffs, $32.50, $70 to $95.
Scarfs, $15, $35 to $150.

Special—"Le Brun" Muffs of Skunk Raccoon, $35
Blocked Scarfs to Match, $10.

Furriers Since 1842 Third Floor

Warp Print Ribbons, 25c Yd.

5-in. wide. In pretty floral designs; pink, blue, white and mais. Others from 1 to 8 in. wide, 15c to $1.25 yard.

Satin Brocade Sash and Hair Bow Ribbons, in pink and blue; 5¼-in., 35c yard; 7-in., 50c yard. Main Floor

Pretty Laces—Inexpensive

One need not go to much expense to be in harmony with Fashion, for these trimmings, good to grace any apparel, are decidedly fashionable.

Double-width Chiffon in street and evening shades, regularly 85c, at 60c yard.

Gold-embossed Chiffon and Net on white ground, for dancing frocks, regularly $1 and $1.25, at 65c and 75c yard.

Shadow Laces for theatre blouses and evening gowns, 10 to 27 inches wide, regularly 45c to $2.25, at 25c to $1.

Linen and Fancy White Cotton Laces for fancy work, lingerie and boudoir caps, 2 to 6 inches wide, regularly 20c to 40c, at 15c to 25c yard.

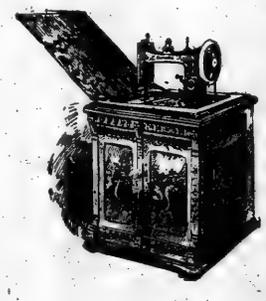
Fashionable Tunics, $6 to $11.50

Of soft satin, crepe de chine, chiffon, Tosca and Brussels net, in black, navy blue and evening shades; side pleated, box pleated, accordion pleated or full gathered.

$4 and $4.50 Belgian Lace Blouses, $2.50

Lined with flesh-colored chiffon in dainty patterns.
Main Floor

$55 "Domestic" Cabinet Sewing Machines, $45



Because of a discontinued design in the woodwork, this concession in price is made. When closed, the Cabinet makes a handsome piece of furniture fit for any living room. In Mahogany, Circassian Walnut or Early English to match your furniture.

This model has all the latest improvements, including the famous looper, which sews either lock or chain stitch at will; is ball-bearing, has the self-threading needle bar, automatic bobbin winder and automatic lift.

$2 Cash and $1 Each Week will make you owner of this beautiful machine, which carries a complete set of attachments and A FIVE-YEAR GUARANTEE, without any other charges. A competent instructress will teach you at your home, if in Greater New York, without charge. Fifth Floor

More Remarkable News of Fine Rugs

Made in United States

In the great amount of merchandise involved, in the way the public responded to our first announcement of last Sunday, and also in the very lowness of the prices themselves, this Sale, to which our $400,000 stocks of Floor Coverings contribute, is extraordinary.

One week's selling cannot greatly affect the assortments of a sale of this size. We have just as promising offerings ready for tomorrow in Oriental and Domestic Rugs, Carpets and Linoleums.

For instance, in large size rugs, we will offer:

$37 Whittall's Teprac Royal Wiltons, 8 ft. 3 in. x 10 ft. 6 in.....$30
$28.50 Whittall's Peerless Body Brussels, 8 ft. 3 in. x 10 ft. 6 in.....$20.50
$41.50 Royal Wilton Rugs, 9x12ft.$32.50
$31 Body Brussels Rugs, 9x12 ft.....$21.50
$42.50 Royal Wilton Rugs, 9x12 ft.....$25
$30 Seamless Axminster Rugs, 9x12 ft.....$25
$22.50 & $25 Axminster Rugs, 9x12 ft..$15 & $20
$42.50 Body Brussels, 9x15 ft....$36
$57 Royal Wilton Rugs, 9x15 ft..$48.50
$57 Royal Wilton Rugs, 11 ft. 3 in. x 12 ft.....$48.50
$42 Body Brussels, 11 ft. 3 in. x 12 ft.....$36
$37.50 Body Brussels, 10 ft. 6 in. x 10 ft. 6 in.....$32.50
$63.50 Royal Wilton Rugs, 10 ft. 6 in. x 13 ft. 6 in.....$55
$48.50 Body Brussels Rugs, 10 ft. 6 in. x 13 ft. 6 in.....$40
$71.50 Royal Wilton Rugs, 11 ft. 3 in. x 15 ft.....$60
$53.50 Body Brussels Rugs, 11 ft. 3 in. x 15 ft.....$45

Sixth Floor

Great Advantage in Attending This Exceptional Sale of Bedcoverings

Europe's increasing demand for cotton goods is causing the wholesale market to rise. But our large stocks, bought at advantage long ago, enable us to offer these remarkable savings. In view of market tendencies, these low prices may not be repeated.

GIMBELS "Hudson" Brand Sheets and Pillow Cases

Excellent wearing and laundering qualities. Sizes before hemming.

Bleached Seamless Sheets

54x90-in.....60c; reg. 80c
63x90-in.....65c; reg. 85c
63x99-in.....75c; reg. 95c
72x90-in.....70c; reg. 90c
72x99-in.....80c; reg. $1
81x90-in.....75c; reg. 95c
81x99-in.....85c; reg. $1.05
90x99-in.....95c; reg. $1.15
90x108-in.....$1; reg. $1.25

Bleached Pillow Cases
(Match the Sheets)

42x36-in.....16c; reg. 20c
45x36-in.....18c; reg. 22c
45x38½-in.....20c; reg. 25c
50x38½-in.....22c; reg. 28c

New Bedspreads, Blankets, and Comfortables

$3.25 Satin-Finish Bedspreads, $2.25
Full size; hemmed. The same, scalloped, and with cut-out corners, regularly $3.50, at $2.50.

$5.50 White Satin Bedspreads, $4.25
Made specially for GIMBELS. Full size; hemmed; in new Fall Marseilles patterns. The same, scalloped and with cut-out corners, regularly $6, at $4.75.

$6.50 White Woolen Blankets, $5 Pair
Part cotton filling; pink and blue borders.
72x82-in.....reg. $7.50, at $6 Pair

Extra Large-Sized Blankets
72x90-in.....reg. $6.50, at $5 Pair
72x90-in.....reg. $7.50, at $6.50 Pair
76x90-in.....reg. $9, at $7.50 Pair

$12.50 Extra Good White Woolen Blankets, $10 Pair
80x90-in.; cut singly and bound with wide silk binding; in pink or blue border.

$4.50 Sateen-Covered Comfortables, $3.50
72x78-in.; pure white cotton filling; pretty floral designs; all colors.

$6.50 Wool-Filled Comfortables, $5
72x78-in. Sateen covering; winter weight; floral designs.

$7.50 Heavy Weight Down-Filled Comfortables, $6.50
72x72-in.; pure new down filling; floral and Persian designs; wide border to match.

Second Floor

Women's Milanese Silk Vests, $1.15

Made with reinforced arm shield. White and pink. Exceptional value.

Women's "Sterling" ¾ Wool Union Suits, $2.50 to $3.50.
Low neck or no sleeves; high neck and half sleeves; low neck and short sleeves; knee and ankle lengths.

Women's American Hosiery Make Union Suits, $2.85 to $7.95.
Heavy lisle, mercerized and pure silk garments. Flesh and white colors.

Children's Fleece Lined Vests and Drawers.
Sizes 3 to 10 years, 35c.; 12 to 15 years, 45c. Union Suits for children, 3 to 10 years, 60c; 12 to 15 years, 70c.

Children's Fine Ribbed 2-3 Wool and 1-3 Cotton Vests and Drawers.
Vests high neck and long sleeves; Dutch neck three-quarter sleeves; Drawers, knee and ankle lengths, 55c. for 3 year size; rise of 5c. on each size. Main Floor

Women's Heavy Weight Silk Stockings, 65c Pair

Exceptional values. Made with deep lisle tops and lisle soles. Black only.

Also broken lines of pure Silk Stockings, 65c. pair. These are in white and colors.

Women's Imported Cotton Stockings, 35c, 3 pairs $1

Various weights. Extra sizes included. All black or with unbleached split soles.
Main Floor

Most Important November Sale of FASHIONABLE DRESS GOODS The GIMBEL Store Has Ever Announced

Thousands of yards in a very remarkable gathering of the season's greatest favorites at emphatic price reductions, notwithstanding the scarcity of imported fabrics.

Blacks and popular colors in extraordinary profusion. A magnificent stock, embracing in large quantities such extremely favored fabrics as Broadcloths, Gabardines, and Serges, and in such constantly demanded colors as browns, greens, plums, navy, blue, and black. For instance:—

BROADCLOTHS, in complete color assortments, at $1 to $3 yd.
GABARDINES, in complete color assortments, at $1 to $3 yd.
FRENCH SERGES, in a splendid color range, at $1 to $2.75 yd.
FRENCH VELOURS and RICH ZIBELINE COATINGS are also shown in extensive variety.

For Monday the Dress Goods Salon has also arranged:

$1.35 Yd. — $2 Broadcloths
Sponged and shrunk; rich, lustrous finish. Browns, greens, navy blue, and other shades.

$1.50 Yd. — French Serges and Chain Weave Gabardines
50 inches wide. All wool, in a firm weave and favorite colorings. Brown, green, taupe, cadet, navy, and other Autumn shades.

$1.65 Yd. — 54-Inch Gabardines
All wool; regular $2.50 quality. Brown, green, cadet, plum, and navy blue. Firmly woven.

68c Yd. — All-Wool Granite Poplins
A very popular weave; firmly woven and richly finished. A complete assortment of colors, including navy, green and brown.

And These SPECIALS IN BLACK GOODS

$2 54-inch Black Broadcloth, $1.35 Yard
Sponged and shrunk.

$1.65 54-inch Black Gabardine, $1.65 Yard
A $2.50 quality.

$2.50 50-inch Black Serges, $1.50 Yard
All wool; fine, even twill.

$2.50 54-inch Black Broadcloth, $1.85 Yard
Sponged and shrunk. Finely finished.

Second Floor

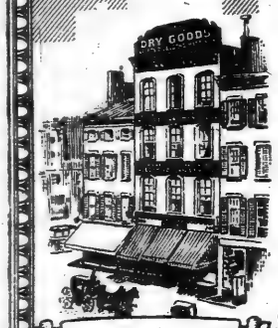
The New York Times.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1914.

R. H. Macy & Co.'s Attractions Are Their Low Prices

Macy's Herald Square Broadway, 34th to 35th St.

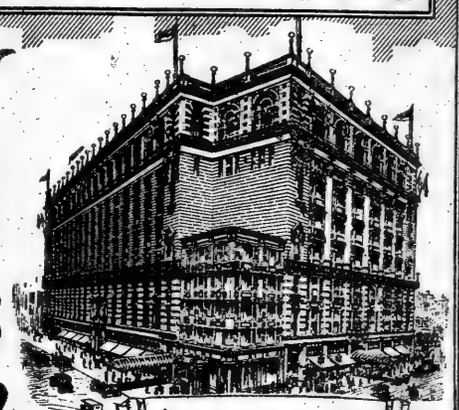
56th MILESTONE ANNIVERSARY



Macy's in 1858

The First Department Store in America 1858

The First New York Department Store Uptown 1902



Macy's to-day 1914

Macy's Was Established 56 Years Ago

¶ In celebration of the event we have arranged a Carnival of Economies for the week eginning tomorrow.

¶ As every Department of the Store participates in the celebration, it is manifest that no one newspaper advertisement can do more than hint at the money-saving opportunities the Carnival affords.

¶ In fact a page each in the World, American, and Herald is inadequate to accommodate all of the advertised special offerings; and the same item does not appear in any two of them.

¶ As fast as one lot of merchandise is exhausted, we expect to replace it with a lot equally attractive.

¶ We believe that in point of Quality and Price, no New York store ever approached these Offerings.

¶ Of course the advertised lots are in a minority. Therefore, customers will do well to look for the "Not Advertised" signs throughout the Store.

Women's Chiffon Velvet DRESSES Specially Priced, $24.74

A charming Afternoon Dress with an all-velvet blouse. The transparent sleeves are of Georgette crepe of self-color; high standing Norman collar of white satin, ornamented with a rose. The velvet skirt has a tunic of Georgette crepe edged with a broad fold of charmeuse; satin girdle. Colors —Navy, Taupe, Brown, Bengais Blue and Black.

Gabardine Dresses, $14.74

This practical Street Dress is made coatee effect and features the long, straight line. The underskirt, sleeves and vestee are of black satin; novelty buttons make an effective trimming. The collar and cuffs are of white silk. Colors —Navy, Brown, Green and Black. THIRD FLOOR, CENTRE.

Fur Coats and Fur Sets

Don't wait until the snow is falling to buy your Furs. Now is the time while our variety is as alluring as our prices.

Caracul Coats, $98.75

Macy's Usual Price, $119.00.

New 42-inch model with full flare and beautifully lined.

Black Fox Sets, $29.75

Macy's Usual Price, $39.75.

The Set comprises an animal scarf and half barrel muff. Both are lined with black satin.

THIRD FLOOR, 34TH ST.

Long Winter COATS

These specially priced Coats are to signalize Macy's 56th Anniversary

Fine Zibeline Coats, $19.74

In shades of black, navy, green or brown. This smart model has deep set-in sleeves, inverted pleat at back and wide belt at waist line.

The front fastens with fancy buttons and coat is satin lined throughout. The collar is of either Australian opossum or skunk opossum.

Boucle Cloth Coats, $13.74

Full belted model; button trimmed cuffs, plush button fastening, deep collar of mole coney fur and satin lined throughout. Colors: black or navy blue.

Smart Plush Coats, $18.74

This kimono sleeve model has a collar of skunk dyed opossum fur. The front fastens with fancy ornaments; satin lined throughout.

Long Coats of Dark Tweeds, $16.74

Very full, mannish modes, with raglan sleeves, button trimmed cuffs, roll collar of Australian opossum or skunk dyed opossum fur. Body and sleeves are satin lined. Colors: gray-and-black or brown-and-black check effect. This is an "ever ready" coat for all out-door occasions.

THIRD FLOOR, CENTRE.

Women's SMART Street SHOES, (pr) $2.97

Standard Price, $4.00.

Made of excellent quality Patent Leather or Gun Metal Calfskin. Backs and tops of fine Black Cloth. Welted soles, plain toes and Cuban heels. Serviceable and dressy.

SECOND FLOOR, REAR.

Organdie Soft Roll Collars, each 18c

Macy's Usual Price, 24c.

The most popular Collar this season. Shown in several shapes, finished with dainty ruffle, picot edge or hemstitched hem — and at this price one can afford to purchase half a dozen.

MAIN FLOOR, B'WAY.

Fine Dress Trimmings

An elaborate collection representing the newest features of the season. Many exclusive designs in gold and silver, jet and colored bead effects, from which you can choose at prices one-third to one-half less than asked elsewhere.

At (per yd.), 49c

Macy's Usual Prices, 69c to $1.69.

Trimmings of Silver Lined Beads and Bugles, Gold and Silver Tinsel, Colored Applique, Black Jet and Embroidered Black Net, from ½ inch to 2½ inches wide.

At (per ½ yd.), 69c

Imported to Sell at $2.00 to $2.75.

Fancy woven Tinselled Materials, 20 inches wide, in beautiful colored effects, outlined with gold or silver, appropriate for vestings and dress trimmings. IN ONE-HALF YARD LENGTHS.

At (per yd.), 98c

Macy's Usual Prices, $1.24 to $2.79.

Trimmings of White Pearl, Rhinestone, Silver Lined Bugles and Beads, Gold Tinsel, Black Silk, Fancy Black Braid and Black Jet, ¾ to 4 inches wide.

Small Trimming BUTTONS, (doz.) 12c

Gallalith, Jet, or Rhinestones.

Macy's Usual Prices, 20c to 35c.

Coat and Suit BUTTONS, (doz.) 29c

Macy's Usual Prices, 39c to $1.50.

Medium and large sizes in the wanted colors of Gallalith or Celluloid, also Black Jet.

MAIN FLOOR, 34TH ST., REAR.

10,000 Yards Satin Charmeuse Heavy Quality—40 Inches Wide, (yd.) 99c

Macy's Usual Price (yd.), $1.49—Elsewhere (yd.), $1.75.

A heavy satin face of exceptional brilliancy. Absolutely perfect goods. Owing to the desirability of the fabric this offering is most unusual. The price cannot be duplicated in any other store.

All the Up-to-Date Evening and Street Shades

Plenty of Black and the following colors:—White—Ivory—Flesh—Pink—Ciel—Lavender—Mais—Turquoise—Apricot—Nile—Russian Green—Taupe—Austrian Blue—Wistaria—Navy—Burgundy—Myrtle—Tete de Negre

SECOND FLOOR, 35TH STREET.

2,000 yds. 50 in. Chiffon Broadcloth (yd.) $1.24

Sponged and shrunk, ready for the needle. There is nothing more desirable today than Broadcloth for tailor made suits. In this sale you will find the fashionable shades of Seal, Midnight-blue, Taupe, Russian Green, Myrtle, Wistaria, Copenhagen, Navy, Plum, also plenty of Black.

3,500 Yards of 54 in. All-Wool Crepe Granite Cloth (yd.) 86c

Usually (yd.), $1.00.

Most popular weaves in dress goods shown in Marine, Tango, Copenhagen, Seal, Medium Brown, Plum, Alice Blue, Olive, Delft, Taupe and Black.

2,000 Yards of 56 in. Navy Blue Costume Serge (yd.) 79c

Usually (yd.), 98c.

This Serge comes in MIDNIGHT BLUE ONLY, which is today among the most fashionable shades worn.

21½ in. English Velveteen (yd.) 49c

Macy's Usual Price, 69c

For dresses or suits.

This English Velveteen comes in Black and about 40 shades, including all the correct street shades.

SECOND FLOOR, BROADWAY.

Damask TABLECLOTHS With Napkins to Match

IMPORTED DIRECT FROM BELFAST, IRELAND.

These TABLECLOTHS, with matching napkins, are in five elegant circular designs, the Cloths woven from full bleached, long, clean flax yarns. SECOND FLOOR, 35TH ST.

TABLECLOTHS			NAPKINS TO MATCH
Size 72-72	(ea.)	$2.69	Size 22-22	(doz.)	$2.97
Size 72-90	(ea.)	$3.29	Size 24-24	(doz.)	$3.79
Size 72-108	(ea.)	$4.29

275 Damask Tablecloths (each) $1.19

Macy's own importation from Belfast, Ireland; full bleached, all Linen Damask, suitable for very hard wear; already hemmed.

Size 66-66 (ea.) $1.19
Size 66-82 (ea.) $1.69

700 Doz. All-Linen Hemstitched Huck Towels (Doz.) $1.80

Macy's Usual Price, $2.49.

These Towels come in colored borders or in plain white, and are suitable for hard wear. Size 18-36.

All-Linen Crash Roller towels, 2½ yards	(ea.)	29c
All-Linen Check Glass towels, 17x35, Hemmed	(ea.)	13c
All-Linen Crash Dish towels, 17x35, Hemmed	(ea.)	12c

Desirable RIBBONS at Savings (yd.) 19c

Elsewhere (yd.) 29c to 49c.

A choice collection of this season's Ribbons in Satins, Moires and fancy effects. 4½ to 7 inches wide, appropriate for many purposes.

MAIN FLOOR, CENTRE.

Shadow Lace and Net Pleatings, (yd.) 15c

Macy's Usual Price 23c and 29c.

Choice assortment of pleatings, ranging in width from 1¾ to 2¾ inches, in white or cream shadow lace or net, also white organdie, embroidered in delicate colorings.

MAIN FLOOR, 34TH ST.

"Artimore" Cigars (box of 50) $3.69

Elsewhere $5.00. Macy's Usual Price, $4.48.

Made by Ruyna Lopez & Co. Two sizes: Ambassadoers & Conquerors. Hand made of the finest Cuban tobacco.

El Prueba Deliciosos El Preso Medio Regalia (box 50), 99c

Sold Elsewhere at (box), $1.50.

Cigars of quality. Made in one of the best factories in Manila.

San Moro Regalia Granda (box 50), $1.74

Sold Elsewhere at (box), $2.50.

A very fine Havana blended Cigar.

FIFTH FLOOR, 35TH ST. AND 33TH ST. ENTRANCE. MAIN FLOOR.

Artists' Materials AT TYPICAL 'MACY' SAVINGS

Van Dyck Easel, $2.94

Especially adapted to academic work; 72 inches high and can be folded to meet the requirements of students working in limited space; will hold a good size canvas.

Box of Oil Paints, $2.19

Containing 12 tube colors, mahogany palette, palette knife, turpentine, drying oil, tracing and transfer paper, sable and bristle brushes, palette cup, academy board and colored studies.

The Art Student's Water Color OUTFIT, $1.34

Japanned tin box, fitted with twelve tubes of moist colors and three brushes.

FIFTH FLOOR, CENTRE.

Untrimmed HATS of Style At Unusual Savings

$3 Black Hatters' PLUSH Hats, $1.49

(one illustrated)

Very becoming Hats, made of lustrous Hatters' Plush with Black Velvet facing, in many new, smart shapes; majority are large and medium Sailors.

High Grade Black VELVET Hats, $1.79

Made to sell for $3.50.

A large assortment of very fine Black Silk Velvet Hats, in a great variety of new shapes; large and medium Sailors, Tricornes, Turbans, etc.

We will trim your Hat without charge if Hat and Trimmings are purchased in our Store. SECOND FLOOR, 34TH STREET.

Men's BLANKET ROBES, $1.74

Sold in Specialty Shops for $3.

Every Robe is cut out of one blanket. Made full and cut correct as to shape and fit. In regular robe style with worsted girdles at neck and waist.

MAIN FLOOR, 35TH ST.

Men's SHOES, Rubber Heeled, Special at $3.19

Standard Price $4.00.

Black and tan calfskin on new, nobby lasts; also black vici kid; broad toes and low heels.

MAIN FL., BALCONY, 35TH ST.

Silk Mull Comfortables, (ea.) $2.19

Macy's Usual Price, $2.75.

Made with plain 9 inch mull borders to match. For full size beds.

100 Jap Silk COMFORTABLES, (each), $6.74

Elsewhere $10.50.

In plain colors, filled with extra heavy layer of Lamb's Wool.

COLORS — Pink, Blue, Old Rose, Green.

200 Pairs White Wool Blankets, Single Bed, (pair,) $2.24

Wool Blankets, Double Bed, (pair,) $2.69

Very slight imperfections, ribbon bound; winter weight.

BASEMENT, REAR.

A Very Special Offering in

Iran Persian Rugs, $37.50

Specialty Shops Charge $50 and $75 Each.

The average size of these beautiful Rugs is 5 ft. 1 in. x 6 ft. 3 in. They come from the weaving districts of Persia and were selected by experts.

FOURTH FLOOR.

FINE LAMPS (AS PICTURED) $8.89

Standard Price, $14.89.

The handsomest and best lamps ever sold at the price. As illustrated, they are of attractive shape, with metal overlay on beautiful cathedral glass; the standards are heavy and in harmony with the shades. The height is 22 inches, and the shade has 17 inch spread. This Lamp is fitted with two pull chain sockets, bulbs, silk cord and plug.

This is only one example of the finest collection of Lamps in the City.

BASEMENT.

Wool Velvet Carpet (yd.) 84c

Novel colors, novel designs, excellent for service.

FOURTH FLOOR.

Figured Cork Linoleum (sq. yd.) 39c

If perfect would be (sq. yd.) 69c.

The goods have a slight misprint. Four yards wide.

FOURTH FLOOR.

GOV. GLYNN TO WIN IF CITY ROLLS UP USUAL PLURALITY

Final Forecasts, in Face of Complicated Situation, Show He Is in the Lead.

EXPECTS MARGIN OF 68,900

Progressive Slump Up the State Will Send Many Republicans to Congress.

G. O. P. TO GET LEGISLATURE

Strong Probability That It Will Control Both Branches at Albany.

BENSEL AND SOHMER TRAIL

Glynn Likely to Run Far Ahead of Nominees Assailed by Whitman and Hennessy.

ISSUES PUZZLING LEADERS

Roosevelt and Sulzer Campaigns, Anti-Catholic Fight, and New Ballot Strong Factors.

A close election, with the outlook favoring Gov. Martin H. Glynn and a majority of the candidates on the Democratic State ticket, providing New York City lives up to traditions and returns a substantial Democratic plurality.

That forecast on the eve of the voting is based on statements from the leaders of the three principal parties and observations made by correspondents of THE NEW YORK TIMES in every section of the State.

The outlook for the Congress elections is less encouraging from a Democratic point of view. While New York City will return a majority of Democratic members of the House, the slump in the Progressive vote up-State will result in many upsets through which Republican Representatives will be sent to take the places of Democrats.

Control of Legislature.

There is a probability that the next Legislature in both branches will be Republican. The Legislature outlook distinctly favors a Republican Assembly, even though in many localities fusions between the Democrats and the Progressives on candidates of strength may make the Republican majority at Albany next year less than it would have been with three candidates in the field everywhere.

Control of the Constitutional Convention which will be held next year is in the balance because the delegates will be voted for on a separate ballot arranged on the party column plan and very different from the form of Massachusetts ballot which will be used for the first time in this State next Tuesday.

In the circumstances there is every probability that there will be more "straight" party voting for delegates at large to the Constitutional Convention, and no guarantee whatever that the vote for district delegates who are voted for with the Senate district as a basis will follow the trend set by the election of State Senators in the various districts.

Complexity of the Situation.

Puzzling problems confront the leaders, such as the new form of ballot, the prospective size of the reconstructed Republican vote, built on the foundation laid by the Hedges vote two years ago and topped off by Progressives returning from the Bull Moose wilds to the Republican ranks; the result of Sulzer's harangues to crowded meetings throughout the State, and the effect of Col. Roosevelt's truculent campaign with the Progressive fire focused on District Attorney Whitman, the Republican candidate for Governor.

The anti-Catholic movement directed against Gov. Glynn and other Roman Catholic nominees has been working covertly in this State for months, but since it was dragged out into the open recently it has caused fierce resentments which may make of it a two-edged sword cuttin into the Glynn strength on one hand, and on the other into the support of Mr. Whitman, whom the sectarian agitators have endorsed.

There has been less prediction by political leaders backed up by figures on the eve of the present election than in any other recent campaign. The Republican leaders, however, admit that a victory for them can come only as a result of these two conditions:

That the Republicans poll fully 80 per cent. of the Progressive vote of two years ago in u-State counties.

That William Sulzer cuts into the Democratic vote in a much larger proportion than he cuts into the Republican.

Breaking Up of Progressives.

In many localities up-State, a correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES observed, a gradual breaking up of the Progressive Party, and in some localities it seemed to have entered upon a stage of decay. In all such localities the Republican leaders expressed the opinion that the bulk of the Progressive defection would come as a legacy to them. A close investigation, however, in nearly every instance, indicated that this presumption was far-fetched. Of the Progressive defection William Sulzer, according to all indications, will be the chief beneficiary.

Gov. Glynn has been received with enthusiasm wherever he has appeared.

LEADERS OF THE THREE PRINCIPAL PARTIES MAKE THEIR FINAL ELECTION FORECASTS

District Attorney Whitman has had good meetings and has received a cordial welcome by those of his own party faith, but there has not been the spontaneous warmth that has marked the Glynn meetings. With the appearance of Gov. Glynn up-State, too, there came a distinct falling off in Sulzer sentiment.

Frederick C. Tanner, Republican State Chairman, said last night that, while he had no hesitation in predicting a Whitman victory, he had no figures to offer.

Estimates furnished by Republican Chairman in the up-State counties, supplemented by the reports from correspondents of THE TIMES, indicate that, at a generous estimate, the Republican pluralities above the Bronx will aggregate not more than 80,400 when the Glynn pluralities in fewer than half a dozen up-State counties which it is practically conceded by the Republicans that Mr. Glynn will carry will have been subtracted. In each instance the estimated Glynn plurality has been taken from the Republican forecast.

The Democratic leaders have not made public any estimate of the vote for Gov. Glynn and the other Democratic candidates. It was yearned, however, that the "inside" figures at Tommany Hall, based on one of the closest canvasses made in many years, gave New York City to Gov. Glynn and the Democratic candidates by 86,500, the pluralities being distributed as follows:

Manhattan	61,000
Kings	12,000
Bronx	6 500
Queens	5,500
Richmond	1,500
Total plurality for Glynn in city	86,500

Another estimate, based on reports made to the Democratic State Committee by canvassers covering the entire State, gives the State to Gov. Glynn and Ambassador Gerard by 68,900. This is based on up-State net pluralities for Mr. Whitman of 53,800 and pluralities for Mr. Glynn in New York City of 108,500, distributed among the boroughs as follows:

Manhattan	60,000
Brooklyn	15,000
Bronx	10,000
Queens	10,000
Richmond	2,500
Total pluralities in city	103,500

Here is the table made public, showing the estimated pluralities for Mr. Glynn and Mr. Whitman in the sixty-two counties of the State:

Forecast by Glynn Managers.

Counties.	Pluralities. Whitman.	Glynn.
Albany	....	1,000
Allegany	2,300	....
Bronx	....	10,000
Broome	1,400	....
Cattaraugus	1,200	....
Cayuga	1,500	....
Chautauqua	5,200	....
Chemung	....	1,400
Chenango	1,400	....
Clinton	600	....
Columbia	....	500
Cortland	1,000	....
Delaware	800	....
Dutchess	....	1,500
Erie	....	6,000
Essex	1,200	....
Franklin	1,500	....
Fulton	1,000	....
Genesee	1,700	....
Greene	....	700
Hamilton	....	100
Herkimer	500	....
Jefferson	1,200	....
Kings	....	15,000
Lewis	300	....
Livingston	1,000	....
Madison	900	....
Monroe	4,500	....
Montgomery	....	200
Nassau	500	....
New York	....	68,000
Niagara	400	....
Oneida	1,900	....
Onondaga	3,600	....
Ontario	1,800	....
Orange	800	....
Orleans	900	....
Oswego	700	....
Otsego	900	....
Putnam	200	....
Queens	....	10,000
Rensselaer	....	1,900
Richmond	....	2,500
Rockland	....	1,000
St. Lawrence	4,500	....
Saratoga	....	400
Schenectady	1,200	....
Schoharie	....	800
Schuyler	300	....
Seneca	400	....
Steuben	....	500
Suffolk	....	1,200
Sullivan	....	500
Tioga	400	....
Tompkins	100	....
Ulster	....	500
Warren	800	....
Washington	1,500	....
Wayne	2,400	....
Westchester	....	1,900
Wyoming	1,200	....
Yates	700	....
	53,800	122,700
Plurality for Glynn		68,900

Bensel May Be Defeated.

There were many indications up State that William Sohmer, the Democratic candidate for Controller, and John A. Bensel, the Democratic candidate for State Engineer, who were singled out for attack by John A. Hennessy, and made targets by Mr. Whitman also, will run so far behind Gov. Glynn that in a close election they may be defeated even should other Democratic candidates win.

No forecast expressed in figures could be obtained in connection with the contest between James W. Gerard, Ambassador to Germany, and James W. Wadsworth, Jr., for the seat in the United States Senate now occupied by Elihu Root.

In New York City the indications were for a Gerard plurality exceeding that of Gov. Glynn. In certain districts of the State he will run ahead of Gov. Glynn, too while in other localities, notably the Western New York counties, where Mr. Wadsworth has shown unprecedented strength, Mr. Gerard is likely to run behind the rest of the Democratic ticket, and possibly be confronted with pluralities for his rival which the great strength of Mr. Gerard with the voters in this city may not overcome.

Both Democratic and Republican leaders admit they have not been able to gauge to their own satisfaction the Sulzer vote or the vote for Frederick M. Davenport, Progressive candidate for Governor. As an indication of the probability that Mr. Sulzer will cut into the Republican vote as well as the Democratic, his strength with railroad men throughout the State is instanced. It is predicted he will get 75 per cent. of all the votes cast by railroad men. In many parts of the State the railroad vote is heavily Republican.

The Republican leaders in this city last night declared that the pluralities claimed by the friends of Gov. Glynn here were absurd. Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the New York County Republican Committee, said that his canvass indicated a plurality of 22,000 in Manhattan for the Democratic ticket instead of the 60,000 claimed in the table made public at Glynn headquarters.

Osborn Not Predicting.

William Church Osborn, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee said:

"I make no predictions; I give no figures. The dust of conflict is too thick around me to let me pose as a seer on a mountain top. Early in the Summer I stated that the final test of this election would be the attitude of the public toward the achievements of the Federal administration, and I believe today that the deciding factor next Tuesday will be the determinatin of the great body of the voters to support the policies and performances of the Wilson Administration."

Frederick C. Tanner, Chairman of the Republican State Committee said:

"Mr. Whitman will be elected, and with him the whole Republican State ticket. There are several things in addition to the great public record of Charles S. Whitman that are working towards his election. The Progressive Party, as such, is disappearing, and the component parts going back to the Republican Party, from whence they came. The average man is unwilling to waste his vote, and he sees the futility of voting for Mr. Davenport. Mr. Davenport will run a poor fourth, and not even Mr. Roosevelt claims any possibility of his election."

State Chairman Robinson of the Progressive Party made the following statement:

"I know of no good reason why the Progressive Party should not poll its full 1912 vote at the coming election for Davenport and the whole Progressive ticket. As far as the Sulzer sentiment is concerned and less Progressive votes on Election Day, the Progressive Party is the only party that has been able to judge the size of the vote Sulzer will get from its ranks. I am confident that Sulzer polled his full strength of the Progressive vote on Primary Day, and this he will get less Progressive votes on Election Day than he did on Primary Day."

CLAIMS OF RIVALS IN NEW YORK CITY

86,500 Plurality for Glynn, with 61,000 in Manhattan, Says Tammany.

FEAR OF SULZER IN KINGS

Whitman Men Think His Vote Will Make Heavy Up-State Support Unnecessary.

NO BULL MOOSE ESTIMATE

Progressives Hope Davenport Will Run Ahead of Sulzer—Trying to Defeat Whitman.

The Democratic campaign in New York City practically closed yesterday, with prophecies from all the leaders of victory. Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, who received reports from all his district leaders on Saturday, would give out no figures. From leaders close to Murphy, who would not be quoted, however, this estimate of Gov. Glynn's pluralities in the various counties of the city were given:

Manhattan	61,000
Brooklyn	12,000
Bronx	6,500
Queens	5,500
Richmond	1,500
Total	86,500

It was stated that this was the most conservative estimate of what Gov. Glynn would carry the various counties by and that it would not be surprising if his total plurality in the city would amount to as much as 110,000. None of the Democratic leaders would admit that Whitman would come down to the Bronx with a plurality of more than 75,000 at the very highest. Glynn's election by a plurality ranging all the way from 11,000 to 50,000 is the estimate of most of the leaders. That the result might be very close was freely admitted by all.

William Harmon Black, Chairman of the Democratic County Committee, said he would not give out any figures until tomorrow. In the Bronx, Arthur Murphy, Democratic leader, said:

"Gov. Glynn's plurality in the Bronx will be 12,000 at least. I would not be surprised if it was still better. The total vote of the county will be about 80,000. Ambassador Gerard will run ahead of Glynn, but how much we have no means of knowing. There is no way to trace the Gerard voters. He is setting the pace for all the other candidates. There is a little Sulzer sentiment in the county, but it is only in spots and will not amount to much. The Democratic party here is united and the very best feeling prevails."

Claims Bronx By 12,000.

Philip J. Schmidt, Democratic County Chairman of the Bronx, said:

"From reports received by me, I firmly believe that Bronx County will give from 12,000 to 15,000 plurality for the entire Democratic State ticket, with every indication that this estimated plurality will be materially increased."

The Sulzer Problem.

Professional and amateur politicians in Brooklyn who have been seeking indications of the probable result of the election in that borough, are finding the problem of the Sulzer vote in Kings County a hard nut to crack. Republican and Democratic leaders alike have been unable to form any clear estimate of the strength of the ex-Governor's candidacy and look upon it as the crux of the situation in the county. But, while confessing themselves puzzled, the local politicians seem agreed that the Sulzer vote must be seriously reckoned with and that it will probably have an important bearing on the outcome in Brooklyn.

The Republican campaign managers assert that they are not deeply concerned about Sulzer and that it is the part of Democratic Leader John H. McCooey to worry about the possible strength of the American Party's candidate for Governor. It is figured out by the Republicans that at least four-fifths of the Sulzer votes will come from the Democratic ranks. Their guess is that about 20,000 Brooklynites will cast their ballots for the former Governor. The Democratic leaders say that Sulzer will not get half that vote in the county and that fifty per cent. of it will be given by Republicans and Progressives. Disinterested opinion is that the Sulzer vote will be from 15,000 to 20,000 and that he will draw the least of his strength from the Republicans. The Progressive organization in Kings has been rapidly disintegrating and the party's candidate for Governor, Frederick M. Davenport, will poll a small vote in the county.

Leader McCooey's public prediction is that Gov. Glynn will have a plurality of at least 25,000 in Kings. He made a tour of the borough with the Governor on Thursday night and expressed himself as enthusiastic over the Democratic candidate's prospects. Privately, Mr. McCooey is said to be figuring the Glynn plurality in Brooklyn at about 20,000. His lieutenants are of the belief that Ambassador Gerard, Democratic nominee for United States Senator, will lead the ticket in the county. Mr. McCooey seems to think that the Democrats will elect seven, and possibly all, of the eight Congressmen from Kings. The district he appears to consider in doubt is the Sixth, which is strongly Republican. It was the only district in the greater city two years ago to return a Republican Representative, William M. Calder. In the Sixth this Fall LeRoy W. Ross, Democrat, is making a strong fight against Frederick W. Rowe, Republican. Mr. McCooey's prediction is that all of the eight State Senators and at least eighteen of the Assemblymen elected will be Democrats.

To Bolt Wadsworth.

The feeling of local Democratic leaders that Mr. Gerard will run ahead of his ticket in the county seems to be due in a measure to reports that many Republican friends of Congressman Calder will cut the candidacy of James W. Wadsworth, because of what they regard as the "raw deal" given Mr. Calder by up-State leaders in the primaries when he was contesting with Mr. Wadsworth for the Senatorial nomination. Mr. Calder himself denies that any of his friends are planning to bolt Wadsworth and declares that the Republicans of the borough are solidly behind the Livingston County man.

Capt. Daniel F. Shea, Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee and the Democratic Campaign Committee of Queens, estimated that Gov. Glynn's plurality in that borough would be at least 13,500. He said:

"Every indication points to a big Democratic vote in Queens this election. Figuring on the registration of 62,000 names, about 55,000 votes will be cast. Glynn will receive 31,500 and the other members of the Democratic State ticket will not fall far short of that figure, with the exception of Gerard for United States Senator. On account of the big German population in Queens we anticipate that Gerard may exceed the vote cast for Glynn. Charles Pope Caldwell will be elected Congressman in the Second District, while the election districts in this borough, which are included in the First Congressional District, will poll a good vote for Lathrope Brown, Democrat, and also for James H. O'Brien of the Ninth District. We are sure of electing Assemblymen in the First, Second and Third Assembly districts and will make a good fight to carry through our candidate in the Fourth District. We have made a most thorough canvass of the borough, and we give 19,000 votes to Whitman and 7,000 divided between Sulzer and Davenport, with Sulzer having the advantage. We will elect Denis O'Leary District Attorney by not less than 8,000 plurality. We will also re-elect State Senator Bernard M. Patten from the Second Senatorial District, which includes the entire Queens Borough."

Situation in Richmond.

Joseph S. O'Grady, Chairman of the Democratic County Committee of Richmond, said that Glynn's plurality in that borough would be 3,300.

"I have received reports from the district captains of the forty-five districts of the borough," he said, "and I am positive that he will receive at least 3,300 plurality. Two years ago the candidate for Lieutenant Governor received 5,500 plurality in Richmond. We will elect our candidates for Senator, Assemblyman and County Clerk by at least 3,500 plurality. There is no way to estimate the vote that Ambassador Gerard will receive, but it is sure to be much larger than that which Gov. Glynn will get.

"No one is going to vote against him that I have heard. There is very little Sulzer sentiment in the borough. The Republicans have held no meetings, while the Democrats have held large ones every night."

None of the Democratic, Republican or Progressive leaders would venture a guess as to what the Sulzer vote in the greater city would be. Bela Tokaji, the Sulzer campaign manager, would not go into details as to estimates in the various boroughs. He said that Sulzer would poll 500,000 votes in the State and would be elected by 45,000 plurality. He said 175,000 Democrats would vote for him, 75,000 Republicans, 75,000 Progressives, 25,000 Prohibitionists and 150,000 independents. Sulzer is expected to show considerable strength in Brooklyn, particularly in the Twenty-second and Twenty-third Assembly Districts, where there is a large independent voting element. Many of the depositors of the Union Bank who suffered financially when that institution failed live in East New York and Brownsville, and the Sulzer campaigners have been making the most of the David A. Sullivan revelations at Sing Sing.

The Gerard campaign managers would not produce any figures to back up their assertion that he would win easily and probably poll a larger vote than Gov. Glynn. According to John M. Bowers, Chairman of the Gerard Campaign Committee, the question is not so much whether Mr. Gerard will win, but rather how great his plurality will be.

"The committee is not a political body," said Mr. Bowers. "No one connected with it has ever been closely identified with a political campaign. It is wholly composed of personal friends of Mr. Gerard who wished to do something for him, in addition to such services as might be rendered by the Democratic State Committee. It feels that it has fulfilled its mission and that the Ambassador, the 'silent candidate,' who has made no speeches, who did not know of his proposed nomination and who has since attended strictly to America's official business in Berlin, will be named to take the place of Elihu Root for the high office of Senator of the United States. Mr. Gerard, if elected, will go into the Senate without making a pledge other than the promise that he will faithfully represent solely the citizens of the State of New York."

CLAIMS OF REPUBLICANS.

Leaders Think Whitman Won't Need Big Up-State Plurality.

The Republican leaders of the five counties comprising New York City are confident that District Attorney Whitman will poll a heavy vote in the city, and that he will not need anything like the 100,000 or more plurality they are satisfied he will get in the up-State counties in order to be elected. Some of the leaders are even predicting a landslide which will give a close vote in the city. The most generous estimate, with 10,000 votes thrown in, gives Gov. Glynn a plurality over Mr. Whitman of less than 60,000.

For New York County (Manhattan) Samuel Koenig, the County Chairman, said that Gov. Glynn's plurality would be less than 30,000, and, in the Bronx the leaders concede Gov. Glynn not more than 6,000. In Kings the Republicans are claiming an even break because of the recent developments in connection with the Union Bank. Even in the private council meetings the highest plurality which it is admitted that Glynn may get in Kings is 5,000. In Queens County it is hoped to hold Glynn's plurality down to 6,500, and in Richmond to 1,200 or less.

Thus the most liberal estimate which has been given by the leaders leaves Gov. Glynn a plurality of 48,700 in the city. They point to the conclusion that the election of Mr. Whitman is therefore assured, even if an additional 10,000 Glynn plurality were granted. That Whitman will get less than 100,000 plurality up State the leaders here refused to admit.

In figuring on the results the Republicans feel sure, as a result of their canvasses, that they will get back into the ranks a large majority of the 112,000 voters who cast their ballots in Manhattan and the Bronx in 1912 for Oscar S. Straus, the Progressive nominee for Governor. They feel that the Progressive Party vote will be very light and that Col. Roosevelt has made very little headway in his efforts to induce his followers to help defeat Whitman. The attacks by Roosevelt, it is asserted, have reacted. William Sulzer is expected to take many more votes away from Gov. Glynn in the city than Frederick M. Davenport will take from Mr. Whitman.

Mr. Koenig of New York based his estimate of less than 30,000 plurality for Glynn on reports from a majority of his election districts, and felt that the complete reports would indicate a decrease in Gov. Glynn's strength. He is counting on Sulzer to cut heavily into the Democratic vote. It is understood that an analysis of the Sulzer vote shows a proportion of seven Democrats, two Progressives and one Republican to each ten votes. In Kings the Republicans expect that Sulzer will draw most of his strength from Glynn, and will poll fully 15,000 votes.

The estimates of some of the Republican county leaders is given here in more detail:

SAMUEL KOENIG, Chairman of New York County Committee.—A careful canvass made of every one of the thirty-one Assembly Districts in New York County indicates that Mr. Glynn's majority will not be more than 22,000. The reports show that Republicans will carry, to a certainty, twelve Assembly Districts, with more than an even chance in three more. The Democrats will carry the remainder, with considerably reduced majorities. The Democrats will undoubtedly be disappointed on Election Day at the poor showing their candidate for Governor will make. We will elect three Senators, with the chances favoring two others. The Republicans are also sure of electing three Congressmen and will likely elect one more. The estimates from New York County leave no room for doubt that Judge Whitman and the entire Republican State ticket will be elected, and that both branches of the Legislature will be Republican by a safe majority.

JACOB A. LIVINGSTON, Chairman Executive Committee, Kings.—It will be an even break in Kings between Mr. Whitman and Mr. Glynn. Sulzer will get about 15,000 and will draw most of his votes from Mr. Glynn. We will elect three of the eight Congressmen—in the Sixth, Ninth and Tenth Districts—a gain of two; four of the eight Senators—in the Fourth, Sixth, Eighth and Tenth Districts—a gain of four, and thirteen of the twenty-three Assemblymen.

WILLIAM H. WADE, Chairman of the Queens County Committee.—Figures received from our canvassers indicate that Whitman will receive 25,000 votes in Queens and that the remainder of the State ticket, including the candidate for United States Senator, will keep pace with him. We feel assured of electing Leander B. Faber District Attorney. He will get a solid Republican vote and the Independent Democratic vote, while Eugene N. L. Young, the Progressive candidate, who is a Democrat, will draw from the regular Democratic vote, thus cutting into O'Leary, the regular Democratic nominee. We are making a good fight to elect Christian Welland State Senator, and are positive of re-electing James S. Eadie Assemblyman from the Fourth District, and will make a fight to carry through our Assembly candidates in the other three districts.

GEORGE S. SCOFIELD, Chairman Richmond County Republican Committee.—Richmond County will give Charles S. Whitman from 500 to 800 plurality. Mr. Whitman will probably run ahead of James W. Wadsworth, nominee for United States Senator, but I expect that Mr. Wadsworth will get at least an even break, and he may get a small plurality. We expect to elect former Borough President George Cromwell to the State Senate by from 800 to 1,000 votes. There is a strong sentiment in Richmond for Mr. Whitman. Sulzer will poll a considerable vote, taking his strength from the Democratic ranks.

JOHN J. KNEWITZ, County Chairman, Bronx.—Gov. Glynn will not get more than 5,500 plurality over Mr. Whitman. We may keep it down to 5,000.

The Senate districts in New York County which the Republicans expect to carry are the Seventeenth, Nineteenth, and Twentieth. The Congress districts are the Nineteenth, Twentieth, and Twenty-first, and the Assembly districts the Fifteenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-third, Twenty-fifth, and Twenty-ninth, which are now represented by Republican Assemblymen, and the Seventeenth, Nineteenth, Twenty-seventh, and Thirty-first.

PROGRESSIVES' HOPE FAINT.

Leaders Work to Run Ahead of Sulzer and Beat Whitman.

No confident prediction of success has been made by the Progressive Party leaders, and they have found it a difficult task to estimate with any measure of certainty just how big a vote the party will poll in the city. The reports, it is understood, have not been encouraging, and the main hope of the party now is that its candidates will run ahead of William Sulzer, who was defeated in his attempt to capture the Progressive nomination for Governor in the primaries. The party leaders not only want to beat Sulzer, but they want to help in the defeat of District Attorney Whitman, and the efforts of the leaders have been concentrated on these endeavors.

That the party will poll but a few thousand votes in the city none of the campaign managers or County Chairman will admit, but definite figures of just what it is hoped to accomplish in New York County and Kings are missing. The big crowds which greeted Col. Roosevelt on his campaign in the city are pointed to as an indication that a heavy vote will be polled.

Some of the Progressive leaders admit that there will be a falling off in that party's vote. While Chairman Francis W. Bird of New York County predicted that the ticket would receive as big a vote as in 1912, a loss of 6,000 votes, or more than half the total cast in 1912, is admitted in Queens, and a loss of 1,300 votes, or about 33 per cent. of the vote cast in 1912, is admitted in Richmond. The Progressives in Kings are reported in bad shape because of desertions from the ranks, and a big falling off is looked for there. In the Bronx from 15,000 to 17,000 votes are claimed for the head of the Progressive ticket.

Here are the reports of the Progressive county leaders:

FRANCIS W. BIRD, Chairman of New York County Committee.—The Progressive Party will poll a large vote in New York City, and I look forward to the election with confidence that our ticket will give a good account of itself throughout the State. Our organization here in the city has been hard at work, and I believe that we shall poll as large, if not a larger, vote than we did in 1912.

The meetings which we have held here have latterly filled the halls to their utmost, and there is every indication that the Progressive Party will go into this election in the County of New York with all the vigor shown in the 1912 campaign and in the Fusion campaign of a year ago.

AUGUST F. SCHWARZLER, Chairman Bronx County Committee.—The Progressives expect to cast 15,000 to 17,000 votes for Davenport. They expect to elect the following candidates in the different districts:

Francis J. Kuerzi to Congress in the Twenty-second Congressional District.

Otto Henschel to the Senate in the Twenty-second Senatorial District.

Henry D. Patton to the Assembly in the Thirty-fifth Assembly District.

George W. Perkins, August F. Schwarzler and Joseph M. Levine as Delegates to the Constitutional Convention.

We have fusion with the Republicans and the Independence League on all the above candidates, and expect that they will be elected without doubt.

HENRY S. JOHNSTON, Chairman of the Queens County Committee.—Conditions look far more favorable for us now than they did ten days ago. According to our estimates we will poll 5,600 votes for the head of our ticket and other State offices. We will have a hand in re-electing James S. Eadie Assemblyman in the Fourth District and our candidate for Assemblyman in the Third District. Horace Schimell, who is also on the Independence League ticket, has a good chance for success.

WILLIAM H. JACKSON, Chairman Richmond County Committee.—The canvass made by the Progressive County Committee and candidates of Richmond County tend to show that the new form of ballot will be of material help to the Progressive ticket. Frederick M. Davenport, Progressive candidate for Governor, will receive 2,240 votes and the local candidates will receive from 1,500 to 3,000 votes.

The Progressive leaders are very anxious to poll a bigger vote for Davenport than that received by William Sulzer. They feel that Sulzer received in the primaries all of the Progressive votes that he will get on election day. They predict the collapse of Sulzer's campaign and say that he will get a much smaller vote than was expected.

STATE OUTLOOK BY COUNTIES.

Chairmen and Correspondents of The Times Give Forecasts of Vote.

THE NEW YORK TIMES has asked the County Chairmen of the three leading parties throughout the State to wire their final estimates of the vote for the principal candidates in their respective counties, based on the canvasses made by them. Below are printed the answers received from County Chairmen supplemented by reports from THE TIMES correspondents where the Chairmen have failed to respond.

ALBANY.

HARRY W. BLANCHARD (Dem.)—With Gov. Glynn, an Albanian, as our candidate, we expect to cut down the Republican plurality in this county to from 3,000 or 2,500. We will probably re-elect Peter G. Ten Eyck, who is running with Progressive indorsement for Congress.

ELLIS J. STALEY (Rep.)—We estimate Whitman's plurality in Albany County at 5,600 and Wadsworth's at 6,000 or better.

PROGRESSIVE FORECAST (by TIMES correspondent)—The Progressive vote in Albany County will be in the vicinity of 2,000.

ALLEGANY.

WARNER M. SWEET, (Dem.)—Our canvass indicates this vote in Allegany:

Republican	4,800
Democratic	2,800
Progressive	1,400
American (Sulzer)	600
Prohibition (Sulzer)	500

DELBERT P. SNYDER, (Rep.)—Probable Republican vote will be 5,500, with an estimated plurality of 2,500 for Whitman and 200 or 300 less for Wadsworth.

BROOME.

REPUBLICAN FORECAST—The Republican ticket will win in Broome by pluralities ranging from 2,200 to 2,000. The Republican candidate for Congress will be re-elected.

WILLIAM H. RILEY (Dem.)—The Republican will not carry Broome by more than 500 plurality.

PROGRESSIVE FORECAST—Best available estimates place the Progressive vote in Broome at from 500 to 700.

CATTARAUGUS.

Indications point to a plurality of at fewest 1,000 for Mr. Whitman. Wadsworth will run nearly as strong. Sulzer's vote will be considerable.

CAYUGA.

MARK I. KOON, (Dem.)—With both parties divided Cayuga County's result is very uncertain. I would estimate Whitman's plurality at 2,200. The uncertain factor is the Sulzer vote, which I estimate will be greater than Davenport's.

CHAUTAUQUA.

Out of a total vote of about 20,000 Chautauqua probably will give Whitman 11,000 to 4,500 for Glynn and 3,000 each to Davenport and Sulzer, who is very strong in Chautauqua. Glynn will run ahead of Gerard and Wadsworth ahead of Whitman, according to predictions of political leaders, based on their canvasses.

CHEMUNG.

DANIEL SHEEHAN, (Dem.)—We estimate the Democratic pluralities in Chemung as follows: Glynn, 700. Seeley for Congress by over 1,500. Bush for Senate by over 1,500. O'Dea, Democrat, will be elected to the Assembly.

BENJAMIN F. LEVY, (Prog.)—

Whitman's vote	4,200
Glynn's vote	4,000
Sulzer's vote	2,500
Davenport's vote	1,500

Plurality for Whitman may possibly grow to 4,500.

VIRGIL K. KELLOGG, (Prog.)—We expect to do a little better than we did in this county in 1912. I look for a Progressive vote of about 3,000.

LEWIS.

HARRY J. HENRY, (Rep.)—I predict that Whitman will carry Lewis by 1,000 and Wadsworth by 800. We will give a plurality for the entire Republican ticket.

LIVINGSTON.

JAMES W. BROPHEL, (Dem.)—We estimate the Republican plurality on State and other offices in Livingston at about 1,500.

GEORGE B. ADAMS, (Rep.)—With favorable weather and roads good Livingston will give a plurality of 1,800 for Whitman and 2,200 for Wadsworth, and elect Republican State Senator and Assemblyman.

MADISON.

The forecasts of political leaders based on their final canvasses, carefully analyzed, give Mr. Whitman a plurality of about 1,200 in Madison County. Mr. Wadsworth, in all probability, will run a little stronger than Mr. Whitman.

MONROE.

CHARLES E. SUNDERLIN, (Dem.)—This is a Republican county, but we expect to hold the Republican plurality down to 3,000, possibly it will be lower. Through a fusion arrangement with the Progressives we hope to elect at least one Democratic Senator and three Democratic Assemblymen, together with our candidates for delegates to the Constitutional Convention.

JAMES L. HOTCHKISS, (Rep.)—We estimate that Monroe County will give 5,500 plurality for Whitman.

ROCHESTER H. ROGERS, (Prog.)—We expect to elect a majority of the Legislative candidates and delegates to the Constitutional Convention in Monroe County. There is Progressive-Democratic fusion on the candidates for these offices.

MONTGOMERY.

In Montgomery County, Whitman, according to the best estimates obtainable from the party leaders, will poll a plurality of 1,200 votes at least. There will be a big falling off in the Progressive vote, but the Republicans will not be the sole beneficiaries from the Progressive defection. Sulzer will get many Progressive votes, and may run as strong as Davenport in Montgomery.

NASSAU.

ELVIN M. EDWARDS, (Prog.)—We confidently expect to cast 2,500 votes for Mr. Davenport for Governor and for the other Progressive candidates in proportion. Total vote for county of all parties will probably be two-thirds of the vote of 1912.

NIAGARA.

The County of Niagara will in all probability give Whitman a plurality of 1,800 and Wadsworth for United States Senator about 3,000.

ONEIDA.

AUGUST MERRELL, (Dem.)—We expect Oneida to repeat its performance of two years and four years ago and give a Democratic plurality. I will not venture any figures.

C. W. CLARK, (Rep.)—Whitman will carry Oneida by 2,500. Sulzer will poll a good vote, mostly from Democrats, although some Republicans in rural districts will vote for him. Davenport will poll about 2,000.

HARRY ACKLEY, (Prog.)—We expect to hold the bulk of the Progressive vote for Frederick M. Davenport our candidate for Governor. Mr. Davenport is a resident of Oneida and is popular here.

ONONDAGA.

WILLIS H. MICHELL (Dem.)—Our canvass shows more Democrats in Onondaga than two years ago. The result here hinges on the size of the Progressive vote. If the Progressives do as well here as they did two years ago Onondaga will show a plurality for Gov. Glynn.

WILLARD A. BILL, (Rep.)—Our estimate based on a partial canvass, shows a plurality for Whitman of not less than 4,000. We will elect a Republican Congressman in place of the Democrat who represents the district in Congress now.

GILES H. STILWELL (Prog.)—We have good candidates and ought to get a good vote, but I am not in a position to tell what that vote will be. We have made no canvass.

ONTARIO.

E. E. CALMAN, (Dem.)—Indications are that the vote in this county will be distributed as follows:

Whitman	4,900
Glynn	4,100
Davenport	1,700
Sulzer	800

ORANGE.

Orange County will give a plurality of 1,500 for Mr. Whitman, according to the Republican leaders. The Democratic leaders concede that the Republicans will carry the county, but place the Republican plurality at 1,000.

ORLEANS.

WILLIAM B. DYE, (Dem.)—I think 1,200 a conservative estimate of Whitman's plurality in Orleans County.

OSWEGO.

JAMES GRAY, (Dem.)—

Whitman	7,100
Glynn	5,000
Sulzer	500
Davenport	1,500

Estimate total vote in this county at 15,500. Party is all formed up again and I believe he will have 8,000 plurality. Progressives are largely for Whitman. Wadsworth will run close to Whitman. Sulzer is drawing heavily from the Democrats.

OTSEGO.

W. L. MORRIS, (Rep.)—

Whitman's plurality	1,200
Wadsworth's plurality	1,000

The balance of Republican ticket will win by about 1,000 plurality.

PUTNAM.

Opposition to the Republican machine and its management in this county will make the result closer than it would be ordinarily. The Republican leaders claim the county for Whitman, but concede that his plurality will be small, possibly not more than 300.

RENSSELAER.

H. L. WALDO, (Prog.)—Our candidates for Congress in Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth Districts are sure of election. We expect to poll a larger vote than in 1912 for the rest of the ticket and hope to elect some of the other candidates, too.

ROCKLAND.

Though there will be a big slump in the Progressive vote in Rockland, the Democratic leaders express confidence that the Progressives will poll sufficient votes to give the county to Glynn by 1,000. This estimate is probably somewhat high, a careful analysis of forecasts from both parties indicate that the Glynn plurality will be about 900.

ST. LAWRENCE.

DEMOCRATIC FORECAST.—Estimated vote in St. Lawrence:

Whitman	6,500
Glynn	4,500
Davenport	3,000
Sulzer	1,000

Sulzer draws from all three parties.

SARATOGA.

The best available estimates give Saratoga County to Whitman by 1,000 plurality with Wadsworth running a little stronger.

SCHENECTADY.

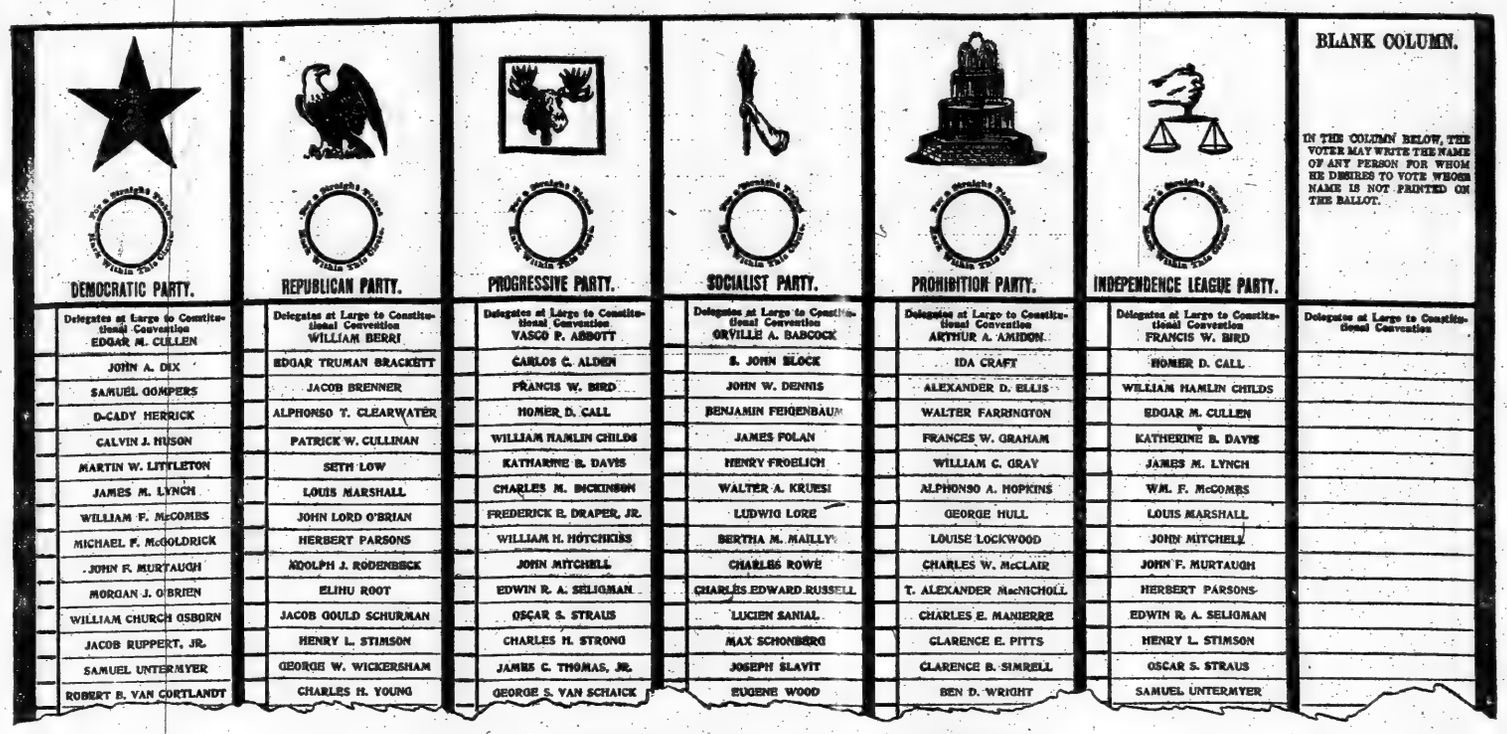
Close canvasses made by the Republican and Democratic leaders, when analyzed, give Schenectady to Mr. Whitman by a plurality of 600. Sulzer will get a big vote, but he will pull from the Democrats and the Republicans alike.

SCHOHARIE.

William Sulzer has shown such unprecedented strength in Democratic Schoharie that the Democratic leaders are seriously apprehensive lest the county go back on its traditions and fail to return a Democratic plurality on Tuesday. Factional strife in the Democratic ranks and the religious issue tend to render the situation more complex. Glynn, in all probability, will run ahead

Continued on Page 3.

1. TO VOTE FOR ALL THE DELEGATES OF ONE PARTY MAKE A CROSS × MARK WITHIN THE CIRCLE ABOVE THE PARTY COLUMN.
2. TO VOTE FOR SOME, BUT NOT ALL, OF THE DELEGATES OF ONE PARTY MAKE A CROSS × MARK IN THE SQUARE AT THE LEFT OF THE NAME OF EVERY CANDIDATE PRINTED ON THE BALLOT FOR WHOM YOU DESIRE TO VOTE. IF YOU MARK ANY INDIVIDUAL DELEGATE, YOU MUST MARK ALL FOR WHOM YOU DESIRE TO VOTE, SINCE NO GROUP MARK WILL BE COUNTED, IF AN INDIVIDUAL DELEGATE HAS BEEN MARKED.
3. TO VOTE FOR ANY CANDIDATE NOT ON THE BALLOT WRITE HIS NAME IN THE BLANK SPACE PROVIDED THEREFOR.
4. MARK ONLY WITH A PENCIL HAVING BLACK LEAD.
5. ANY OTHER MARK OR ANY ERASURE OR TEAR ON THE BALLOT RENDERS IT VOID.
6. IF YOU TEAR, OR DEFACE, OR WRONGLY MARK THIS BALLOT, RETURN IT AND OBTAIN ANOTHER.



DEMOCRATIC PARTY.
Delegates at Large to Constitutional Convention
EDGAR M. CULLEN
JOHN A. DIX
SAMUEL GOMPERS
D-CADY HERRICK
CALVIN J. HUSON
MARTIN W. LITTLETON
JAMES M. LYNCH
WILLIAM F. McCOMBS
MICHAEL F. McGOLDRICK
JOHN F. MURTAUGH
MORGAN J. O'BRIEN
WILLIAM CHURCH OSBORN
JACOB RUPPERT, JR.
SAMUEL UNTERMYER
ROBERT B. VAN CORTLANDT
REPUBLICAN PARTY.
Delegates at Large to Constitutional Convention
WILLIAM BERRI
EDGAR TRUMAN BRACKETT
JACOB BRENNER
ALPHONSO T. CLEARWATER
PATRICK W. CULLINAN
SETH LOW
LOUIS MARSHALL
JOHN LORD O'BRIAN
HERBERT PARSONS
ADOLPH J. RODENBECK
ELIHU ROOT
JACOB GOULD SCHURMAN
HENRY L. STIMSON
GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM
CHARLES H. YOUNG
PROGRESSIVE PARTY.
Delegates at Large to Constitutional Convention
VASCO P. ABBOTT
CARLOS C. ALDEN
FRANCIS W. BIRD
HOMER D. CALL
WILLIAM HAMLIN CHILDS
KATHARINE B. DAVIS
CHARLES M. DICKINSON
FREDERICK E. DRAPER, JR.
WILLIAM H. HOTCHKISS
JOHN MITCHELL
EDWIN R. A. SELIGMAN
OSCAR S. STRAUS
CHARLES H. STRONG
JAMES C. THOMAS, JR.
GEORGE S. VAN SCHAICK
SOCIALIST PARTY.
Delegates at Large to Constitutional Convention
ORVILLE A. BABCOCK
S. JOHN BLOCK
JOHN W. DENNIS
BENJAMIN FEIGENBAUM
JAMES FOLAN
HENRY FROELICH
WALTER A. KRUESI
LUDWIG LORE
BERTHA M. MAILLY
CHARLES ROWE
CHARLES EDWARD RUSSELL
LUCIEN SANIAL
MAX SCHONBERG
JOSEPH SLAVIT
EUGENE WOOD
PROHIBITION PARTY.
Delegates at Large to Constitutional Convention
ARTHUR A. AMIDON
IDA CRAFT
ALEXANDER D. ELLIS
WALTER FARRINGTON
FRANCES W. GRA

STATES TO GIVE THEIR VERDICT ON THE WILSON ADMINISTRATION ON TUESDAY

WILSON THE ISSUE IN MANY STATES

Democrats Base Their Appeal for Votes on the Record of His Administration.

TARIFF IS A BIG FACTOR

Penrose Fight in Pennsylvania Resolves Itself Into Battle for Protection.

CLOSE CONTEST IN ILLINOIS

Prohibition and Miners' Troubles Figure in Tuesday's Election—Republicans Expect Gains.

In nearly all the close political fights that are to be decided at the polls next Tuesday, the Wilson Administration is the issue, the Democratic candidates for the Senate and the House basing their appeals on the party's record under President Wilson and his right to an indorsement at the hands of the voters.

This is particularly true in the Illinois contest, where Roger C. Sullivan hopes to roll up enough of a majority in Chicago to overcome the Republican vote down State, where tariff has been the chief argument with the farmers and small town manufacturing element.

The tariff is the chief argument of the Penrose forces in Pennsylvania, the Republican Senator, who is the storm centre of the fight, pointing to idle mills as an argument against Democratic tariff doctrines.

Reports from nearly all the States in the East and Middle West show the Republicans claiming gains in the House of Representatives and the Democrats confident of holding their own. In Michigan, Maryland, Massachusetts and Illinois the Republicans have strong hopes of gaining several seats in the House. "Uncle Joe" Cannon's followers are loud in their assertions that he will be returned to Congress.

Prohibition also looms up as an issue in many of the States, notably Ohio and Colorado. In Colorado and Michigan the miners' troubles have obliterated party lines in local fights and may have an effect on the contests for Congress in several districts.

Party claims and forecasts from various States as gathered by THE TIMES correspondents follow:

NEW HAMPSHIRE SITUATION.

Senator Gallinger Having the Fight of His Life for Re-election.

Special to The New York Times.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Oct. 31.—Senator Jacob H. Gallinger, Republican candidate for re-election, has the fight of his life at the election on Tuesday to win over Congressman Raymond B. Stevens, the Democratic nominee. This contest far overshadows all others. Stevens has the backing of Senator Henry F. Hollis, and most of the Bull Moose leaders, while Gallinger's cause has been championed by Senators Weeks and Lodge of Massachusetts on the stump.

The Progressive Party does not figure, although it has official recognition as one of the three regular party organizations. A shrinkage of 75 per cent. in its vote is indicated by the primary results and subsequent registration figures. Several Progressive leaders are on the stump for the Republican ticket.

The whole administration in the State is now Democratic, and the candidate for Governor is Councilor A'bert W. Noone of Peterborough, who carried the primary by two votes. Rolland H. Spaulding of Rochester is the Republican candidate, and indications point to his election. Congressman Eugene E. Reed, Democrat, will probably be returned, but Congressman Stevens's successor will doubtless be a Republican, Edward H. Wason of Nashua, a member of the State Legislature.

REPUBLICANS CLAIM VERMONT.

But Prouty Forces Hotly Assail Senator Dillingham.

Special to The New York Times.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Oct. 31.—Political prophets predict the election of the Republican State ticket by a safe majority, State Highway Commissioner Charles W. Gates of Franklin being the Gubernatorial candidate. In the contest for the seat in the United States Senate now held by William P. Dillingham, and strongly contested by Charles A. Prouty, an unprecedented situation has arisen, and the outcome is anything but certain. The Senator's record has been vigorously attacked by the non-partisan Prouty club, whose candidate has the indorsement of the Progressives, Prohibitionists, and the Democratic State Committee.

Prouty failed of nomination in the Democratic Convention, but on the withdrawal of the convention's nominee, Charles D. Watson, the State Committee substituted Mr. Prouty's name. Many Democrats will support Prouty, yet there are some who will vote for Dillingham. Dillingham, however, has been making an active campaign the past few days, and there is no doubt that he has won votes.

DEMOCRATS CLAIM BAY STATE.

But Republicans Are Likely to Gain Two Congressmen.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 31.—It would cause no general surprise if the entire Democratic State ticket won in Massachusetts next Tuesday. At the same time, the Republicans are admittedly putting up a hard fight, and there are serious defections in the Progressive vote.

Gov. Walsh and Secretary of State Donahue are probably thousands of votes stronger than the rest of the State ticket. If the Democratic State ticket is in any danger, they will be the last to feel it.

The vote of Walker, the Progressive candidate for Governor, is generally figured at about 60 per cent. of the vote cast last year for Charles Sumner Bird. This showing does not elect ex-Congressman McCall, the Republican candidate for Governor, unless the votes of the men who supported Foss as an independent are cast solidly for McCall.

The prohibition issue raised by the Progressives is drawing considerable support which otherwise would go straight to the regular Prohibition ticket.

The Congressional delegation now stands eight to eight. The Republicans expect to win the Eighth District, now represented by Frederick S. Deitrick; the Seventh, represented by Michael F. Phelan, and the Thirteenth, represented by John J. Mitchell. They say there is a good chance in the Eleventh, represented by Andrew J. Peters.

It is generally believed that the Republican representation will be increased by at least two Congressmen, making the delegation stand ten Republicans and six Democrats.

There is a big fight for control of the State Legislature, which has always been Republican, but recently by a small margin. Indications now are that it will remain in Republican control.

OUTLOOK IN CONNECTICUT.

Canvasses Point to Baldwin's Election as Senator.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 31.—Sweeping claims were made tonight by David Fitzgerald, Chairman of the Connecticut Democratic State Central Committee, and by Henry Roraback, Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, as the State campaign closed for the election of a United States Senator, a full State ticket, a State Legislature, and five Representatives in Congress. Each of the Chairmen seems to be certain of carrying everything in sight.

Canvasses by Democratic newspapers give Gov. Simeon E. Baldwin, who has been the Chief Executive of the State for four years, a clear lead for Senator and, while the official Republican claims of Senator Frank B. Brandegee's re-election assert that he will have a slight plurality, the canvasses made give Baldwin the election by about 20,000.

The Progressives have made an aggressive campaign, alleging Brandegee to be a relic of the Cannon-Aldrich faction and, in nominating Herbert Knox Smith of Hartford, formerly of Roosevelt's Cabinet, have named a strong candidate.

The Democratic Party has re-nominated its entire State ticket, except for the promotion of Lieut. Gov. Tingrey for the Gubernatorial nomination and Gov. Baldwin for the senatorial nomination. It has re-nominated all its five Congressmen who were elected two years ago.

On two of the rock-ribbed Republican districts indications are that the Republican nominees will be elected, Richard P. Freeman of New London probably succeeding Mayor Bryan Mahan in the Second District and James P. Glynn of Winsted, probably being chosen in the Fifth over Congressman William J. Kennedy. The pluralities of Mahan and Kennedy were only nominal two years ago.

In the First District the Republicans have nominated P. Davis Oakey, a Hartford City Assessor, and in the third the Republicans have chosen Major John Q. Tilson, who was defeated two years ago by Congressman Thomas L. Reilly of Meriden. The Republican nominee in the Fourth District is ex-Congressman Ebenezer J. Hill, who was defeated by Jeremiah Donovan two years ago. Congressman Reilly is expected to be re-elected, but in the First and Fourth Districts the contests will be fairly close, with chances favoring the Democrats. No state canvass has been made by the Republicans for the reason that their nominee for Governor, Judge Marcus Holcomb of Southington, was nominated without his consent and has refused to utter a word during the campaign.

Willard Fisher, a former Mayor of Middletown, is the Democratic candidate for Governor.

Many Republicans concede the election of the two Democratic Congressmen and of Gov. Baldwin as Senator. There is no indication whatever of a landslide for the Republicans.

FIELDER PREDICTS A SWEEP.

Expects New Jersey to Elect 12 Democrats to the House.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 31.—After the fiercest campaign in years, the issue having been made an out-and-out question of the indorsing of President Wilson's Administration, the voters of New Jersey will go to the polls next Tuesday to elect twelve Congressmen, eight State Senators, sixty Assemblyman, and county and municipal officers generally.

Gov. Fielder predicts the election of all of the twelve Democratic candidates for Congress, a gain of two over the party's present representation. The Republicans are claiming variously that they will elect five or seven Congressmen. It is conceded that the Republicans have a chance to win in the First, Second, Fourth, Fifth, Seventh, Ninth, and Tenth Districts, but the voting is bound to be close.

Both parties are claiming control of the Senate. The Republicans may reasonably be expected to elect their Senators in Camden, Union, and Gloucester Counties, while political observers also look for Col. Colgate, the Republican candidate in Essex, to win. The Democrats are certain to be successful in Warren County, and in all probability will win in Monmouth. This leaves Salem and Somerset as the real battleground. In order to control the Senate, the Republicans must win in both Salem and Somerset, besides the other four counties named.

Control of the Assembly will doubtless depend upon the outcome in Essex and Passaic Counties. The indications are that in South Jersey, including Mercer and the counties south of it, the Republicans will elect twelve of the Assemblymen, with Salem in doubt. The Democrats are picked to win in Bergen, Hudson, Hunterdon, Warren, and Essex. Monmouth is also expected to go Democratic. Middlesex, Morris, Ocean, Somerset, and Union are placed in the doubtful column with Salem. If the Republicans can elect the twelve Assemblymen in Essex, the five in Passaic, and can win two others in the counties classed as doubtful, these, added to the South Jersey contingent, will win the Assembly from the Democrats.

PENNSYLVANIA'S HOT FIGHT.

Tariff Looms Big as an Issue and Aids the Penrose Cause.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—An impartial survey of all the counties of Pennsylvania leads to the conclusion that United States Senator Boies Penrose, about whose candidacy for re-election has raged the fiercest fight this State has witnessed in years, will win next Tuesday over Representative A. Mitchell Palmer, Democrat, and Gifford Pinchot, Progressive. In all probability the entire Republican ticket will go through to victory with Penrose.

While the Democrats, backed by the National Administration, and the Progressives, supported by Col. Roosevelt, are claiming, respectively, the election of Palmer and Pinchot, keen political observers, appreciating the complicated situation, predict that Penrose will be re-elected by a small plurality.

Factors favoring Penrose are the operation of the Democratic tariff, the liquor interests, and the disaffection existing in the Democratic Party. The business situation, with many mills idle and no evidence that conditions soon will improve, are the causes that may elect Penrose. The sentiment is overwhelmingly against him as a politician, but, paradoxically, it favors him strongly for the Senate as an exponent of protection.

Dr. Martin Brumbaugh, the Republican candidate for Governor, is the strongest man placed on the ticket for many years. His personal strength has greatly aided Penrose and helped in great measure to bring back to the party the Roosevelt Republicans. It is believed that Brumbaugh will be elected over Vance McCormick, on the Democratic and Progressive tickets, by a majority approaching 100,000.

Throughout the western section of the State Palmer and Pinchot apparently are running a neck-and-neck race, Palmer to all intents and purposes holding his own despite the Roosevelt invasion. In former Republican counties the "breaks" are both ways, with both Progressive and Democratic leaders claiming the advantage. Pinchot seems to have more strength in the extreme western end of the State.

In last-hour predictions, leaders of the three parties claim Allegheny County. Surface indications are that Penrose will carry the county by about 8,000.

State Senator William Flinn, Roosevelt's right-hand man in Pennsylvania, is cautious in his statements, but Progressive leaders believe they will repeat their 1912 showing. It is virtually certain Brumbaugh will run way ahead of McCormick for Governor.

Except in Palmer's Eastern Pennsylvania bailiwick, it appears as though the Roosevelt personal following would make its old-time bid for honors through the anthracite coal belt.

Election Day alone can now decide the result of the Vare-Penrose feud in this city: whether the Vares will openly attack Penrose or secretly knife him at the polls or "make up," just as they have often done when a break seemed imminent.

Representative William S. Vare and State Senator Edwin H. Vare are in supreme power in South Philadelphia, the closely built up section of the city that casts many thousand votes regularly for the Republican ticket. The Vares are head of a great sub-organization of the Republican machine in this city, and should they oppose Penrose, either secretly or openly, it would go a long way toward defeating him.

MARYLAND DEMOCRATS UNITED

Confident of Re-electing Senator John Walter Smith.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 31.—The campaign in Maryland is apathetic because there are no State tickets in the field. The Democrats are united in the Congressional contests, President Wilson and United States Senator Smith now being on friendly terms, and Senator Blair Lee, the President's close friend, who had been fighting the machine, is now supporting the party's candidates for Congress.

The Democrats are so confident of electing the United States Senator that their candidate, John Walter Smith, has not considered it necessary to go on the stump. His opponent, Edward C. Carrington, Jr., who returned to the Republican Party soon after Wilson was elected, is active in his own behalf. He has toured the State and firmly believes he has a chance to be elected, but all indications point to the re-election of Senator Smith by a decisive majority. Senator Smith has been the head of the regular Democratic organization since the death of Senator Gorman. The Democrats predict his re-election by majorities ranging from 25,000 to 35,000.

For the first time voters in registering stated their affiliations, and the returns show that there are enrolled approximately 145,000 Democrats, 105,000 Republicans, 2,500 Progressives, 2,000 Prohibitionists, 2,500 Socialists, and about 12,000 who declined to affiliate and are classed as independents. In four of the Congressional districts the Democratic candidates are practically sure of winning by large majorities, and they have a fighting chance in the other two.

Their hardest fight is in the Sixth District, now represented by D. J. Lewis, the father of the parcel post law and who is a candidate for re-election. Lewis's opponent is State Senator Frederick A. Zihlman, a champion of the labor organizations. Lewis was a coal miner before he became a lawyer and Zihlman is a glass blower.

In the Fifth District Sydney E. Mudd desires to succeed his father, the late Congressman Mudd, and his opponent is Richard H. Johnson, son-in-law of the late Senator Arthur Pue Gorman. This, too, is an interesting fight. The district is normally Republican, although now represented by a Democrat. The fight will be close.

In the First District Jesse D. Price, President of the Maryland Senate, is the Democratic candidate, and against him is Robert F. Duer, a Republican, who is indorsed by the Progressives. In the Second Congressional C. C. Talbott is again a candidate, his Republican opponent being William J. Heaps, an educator.

The Third and Fourth Districts, located wholly in Baltimore City, are now represented by Charles P. Coady and J. Charles Linthicum, Democrats, who are candidates for re-election, their Republican opponents being John A. Janetzke and Thomas T. Hammond. All of these districts are conceded to the Democrats.

MIXED ISSUES IN OHIO.

Gov. Cox Favorite in Betting—Senatorial Fight Close.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 31.—As a betting issue, the election in Ohio next Tuesday is distinctly a puzzle. Were the principal contest narrowed to a plain battle for votes between Gov. James M. Cox, seeking re-election, and Frank B. Willis, Congressman, seeking the Governor's chair, some rational idea of the outcome might be gleaned in the pre-election canvass, but on top of this fight for State office Ohioans are facing a rehot prohibition fight and the contest between Warren G. Harding and Attorney General Timothy Hogan for the United States Senatorship. A Progressive fight for State offices adds to the merriment.

What betting there is favors Gov. Cox. The managers of Mr. Willis's campaign expect an old-fashioned Republican landslide. Those who are operating the campaigns of Arthur L. Garford and James R. Garfield, Progressive candidates, respectively, for Senator and Governor, assert with equal emphasis that the Republican Party in Ohio has gone to smash, and that the voters will elect the entire Progressive State ticket. The Progressive Party has openly indorsed the prohibition movement.

In the Senatorial race a bitter attack has been made on Mr. Hogan on the ground of religion. Mr. Harding, whose record in public life is not marked by factional or other strife, is said by the politicians to have a better chance for election than his opponent.

The liquor interests are confident of sweeping the State with their so-called home rule amendment to the Constitution, which provides for the elimination of the county optional law, and in fact prohibits State-wide prohibition. The betting is 2 to 1 in their favor.

The outcome, so far as the Ohio Congressional, State, legislative, and judicial tickets are concerned, depends largely on the vote of the heads of the State ticket.

HARD FIGHT IN ILLINOIS.

Sullivan Managers Confident—"Uncle Joe" Cannon Hopeful.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—In Illinois the choice of a Senator and a Congressional delegation of twenty-seven members constitutes the absorbing feature of next Tuesday's election. Men in Chicago may vote for forty-nine candidates, exclusive of United States Senator, Congressman, Congressman at Large, State Representative, and State Senator, while women's curtailed suffrage privilege places twenty-one candidates as the maximum they can vote for. There are 165,163 women registered, and they are conducting a lively campaign.

Interest throughout Illinois centres in the election of a United States Senator. There are three candidates in the field—Lawrence Y. Sherman, the present Senator, Republican; Roger C. Sullivan, Democrat, and Raymond Robins, Progressive. A bitter fight has been waged by the three candidates. Mr. Sullivan has enjoyed the support of President Wilson, and practically the entire Administration at Washington, with the exception of William Jennings Bryan. Postmaster General Burleson, William F. McCombs, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee; Dudley Field Malone, Collector of the Port of New York, and other distinguished Democrats have journeyed to Illinois and have made speeches in behalf of Mr. Sullivan's candidacy. Last night Joseph Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson, telephoned from the White House to Charles Boeschenstein, Democratic National Committeeman, that the Administration desired the election of Sullivan. All this has been of great value to Mr. Sullivan.

While all three candidates are predicting victory the indications seem to favor Sullivan. He will carry Chicago by a big vote. This is virtually conceded. The question that arises is, Will his plurality in Cook County be sufficient to offset the plurality of Senator Sherman down State. The Sullivan men are confident that it will be. The Sherman managers claim their man will come up to Cook County with a plurality between 75,000 and 125,000, which the Democrats say is a preposterous estimate. Sullivan's plurality in Cook County has been estimated as high as 65,000. Some forecasters are giving Raymond Robins second place in the running, with Sherman third. Robins has waged a vigorous campaign, has had the personal assistance of Theodore Roosevelt, and because of his labor record as a mine worker will poll a large labor vote. It is not thought probable, however, that he will poll more than 80 per cent. of the vote cast for Roosevelt in 1912.

There is strong probability of considerable change in the complexion of the Illinois delegation to the House of Representatives. The present Illinois delegation stands: Democrats, 20; Republicans, 4; Progressives, 3. The Illinois delegation to the Sixty-fourth Congress will probably stand—Republicans, 12; a gain of 8; Democrats, 14, a loss of 6; Progressives, 1, a loss of 2.

While Republican Leader James R. Mann of Chicago has been threatened with difficulty because of his attitude toward woman suffrage, it is probable that he will be re-elected. In the Eighteenth District, former Speaker Joseph G. Cannon will probably recapture his seat in Congress, despite the opposition of President Wilson, who desires the re-election of Frank T. O'Hair, who defeated "Uncle Joe" in 1912. Another of the "old guard" expected to return to Congress with Mr. Cannon is William B. McKinley, the manager of Mr. Taft's disastrous campaign.

DIVIDED IN MICHIGAN.

Gov. Ferris, Democrat, Favored in Forecast Over Chase S. Osborn.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 31.—Comparison of the reports of the various State Central Committees seem to show that Gov. Woodbridge N. Ferris (Dem.) will be re-elected next Tuesday; that the remainder of the Republican ticket will be elected; that the Legislature will be Republican by an increased majority, and that the Republicans will gain one seat in Congress.

The Democrats are very confident of the success of Gov. Ferris. Two years ago he won by 24,500 plurality, while all other Republican State candidates went in by more than 50,000 plurality. This year there is a heavy defection of Republicans from Chase S. Osborn, who heads the Republican ticket. Gov. Ferris is very strong in the Upper Peninsula because he saved that section of the State from anarchy during the miners' strike last year. The Republican Committee admits a big Republican defection from Osborn, but hopes it will be made up by a defection of disgruntled Democrats to Osborn.

The seat which the Republicans will regain in Congress is that of S. W. Beakes in the Second District. His plurality was small, and there undoubtedly has been a considerable Republican gain in the district. In the Upper Peninsula district the contest is between the Republicans and the Progressives, and probably will be very close. McDonald (Progressive) now holds the seat. Similar conditions prevail in the Tenth District, now held by Roy T. Woodruff, (Progressive.) Ex-Congressman George A. Loud, who went down in the Taft débâcle, has an even chance of victory. There is little doubt that Doremus (Dem.) will be re-elected in the First District.

The Detroit Mayoralty campaign is much in doubt. It is a contest between the present administration of Oscar B. Marx, whose policy has been of the wide-open town variety, and Frederick F. Ingram, a manufacturer, as the Democratic candidate. Normally, Detroit is Republican by 10,000. But party lines have disappeared this year.

WISCONSIN FIGHT IN DOUBT.

Gov. McGovern Strongly Backed for the Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 31.—The Wisconsin election outcome, as far as the Governorship is concerned, will hinge solely on the question of how many Progressive Republicans, of both the La Follette and Roosevelt variety, will abandon the straight ticket and vote for John J. Blaine, the independent Republican candidate, and of how large an addition to this vote there will be from the Democrats who are not satisfied with the reputed stand-pat tendencies of John C. Karel, Democratic candidate for Governor. The betting men think the outcome is certain. Blaine does not figure in any of the bets, the odds being 10 to 8 on the election of Emanuel L. Philipp, Republican regular candidate. To get even money against Philipp one must bet that he will have less than 25,000 plurality.

The Senatorial fight is between Gov. F. E. McGovern and Paul Husting, the latter a radically Progressive Democrat. As Gov. McGovern has the State House support, won by two terms in the Governor's office, he is the favorite in the betting, despite the opposition of Senator La Follette, who is reported to favor Husting, although he has not declared his position.

The Congressional elections do not promise much change, if any, from present conditions. The probabilities are that there will be nine Republicans returned, with two Democrats, although the Republicans promise to make it a clean sweep, and the Democratic Committee expects to cut the Republican representation to seven. There is a bare chance of the return of Victor L. Berger the Milwaukee Socialist, in one Republican district, the Fifth.

IOWA VOTERS APATHETIC.

Light Vote Expected, with Cummins Cohorts Confident.

Special to The New York Times.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Oct. 31.—The interest of Iowa voters seems to be centred chiefly in the race for the United States Senatorship, although there is general apathy among the voters.

The candidates for United States Senator are Albert B. Cummins, Republican; Maurice Connolly, Democrat; Casper Schenk, Progressive; M. L. Christian, Prohibitionist; I. S. McCrillis, Socialist, and Otis L. Spurgeon, independent.

On the surface it looks as though Senator Cummins might be an easy winner for re-election, but the Democrats have the best organization they have ever had, and are being backed by the Wilson Administration in a powerful fight in behalf of Connolly, now Congressman from the Third Iowa District.

Casper Schenk, Progressive, is making a hard campaign. His managers are claiming 40,000 votes. He is sure to receive the vote of many old-line Republicans who never have supported Cummins.

Spurgeon, the independent candidate for the Senate, has raised the sectarian issue, and with these elements to consider, the oldest campaign managers admit that Senator Cummins may have the closest fight of his long and stormy career.

Out of Iowa's eleven Congressional districts it is believed that the Republicans will elect their candidate in all except the Second District. This district is now represented by a Democrat, Henry Vollmer, who refused to be a candidate again. The Democrats nominated W. J. McDonald of Iowa City, and the Republican candidate is Harry Hull, an editor at Williamsburg.

The Sixth District, now represented by a Democrat, Sent Kirkpatrick, is almost sure to elect a Republican in the person of S. W. Ramseyer of Bloomfield. The Republicans also expect to elect Burton E. Sweet from the Third District—the one now represented by Connolly, who abandoned the Congressional race in the hope of obtaining the Senatorship.

If these predictions are verified Iowa will have at least ten Republicans out of eleven, instead of eight as at present. Should Hull pull through, the delegation would be solidly Republican.

Gov. George W. Clarke is a candidate to succeed himself. The Democratic candidate is John T. Hamilton of Cedar Rapids, who is charging State extravagance as the ground of his campaign.

If the weather is good, thousands of Iowa farmers will remain in their cornfields, and the vote will be extremely light.

ALL CLAIMING KANSAS.

Neeley, Democrat, Favored in Forecasts for United States Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 31.—None of the managers of the various political parties in Kansas is able to forecast the result of Tuesday's election. The Republicans, Democrats, and Progressives all claim the State for United States Senator and for their State tickets. This claim on the part of the Progressives is not, however, considered seriously, and that party will not be a factor in determining the result, except that it may draw enough Republican Progressives away from the Republican ticket to insure Democratic victory.

The three candidates for the United States Senate are Congressman George A. Neeley, Democrat; ex-Senator Charles Curtis, Republican, and Congressman Victor Murdock, Progressive. Those of all parties, more familiar with conditions believe Neeley has the best chance of election. Ex-Senator Curtis, who defeated Senator Bristow in the primary in August by 1,800, is handicapped because he was the Taft leader in the State two years ago, and led the fight against the Progressive Republican ticket, which stood with Roosevelt. It is believed that Curtis will run from 15,000 to 20,000 behind the Republican State ticket, and that this loss will insure the election of Neeley.

On the State ticket the contest is between Gov. Hodges, Democrat, and Arthur Capper, Republican, for Governor. These men were the candidates two years ago, when Hodges defeated Capper in the State by twenty-nine majority.

Democrats represent five of the eight Congressional districts in Kansas. It seems reasonably certain that they will lose two of these, and probably three. The tariff is the main issue in these contests, with national woman suffrage and national prohibition as lively side lines.

SOUTH DAKOTA FORECAST.

Republicans Expect to Elect Their Entire State Ticket.

Special to The New York Times.

PIERRE, S. D., Oct. 31.—The general forecast for the outcome of the election in South Dakota would be for the selection of the complete Republican State and national ticket, with the strongest probabilities in that direction. As a matter of fact, no one questions the selection of the Republican State ticket for any place other than Governor, where there is a three-cornered contest, with Frank M. Byrne, the regular Republican nominee; R. O. Richards, an independent Republican candidate, and J. W. McCarter, the Democratic candidate.

On the Congressional ticket, Congressman Burke as the regular Republican nominee for United States Senate is considered as certain of election, but he also has the Democratic candidate, E. S. Johnson, and the Independent candidate, H. L. Loucks to contend with. But as there is a heavy Democratic disaffection in what is called the insurgent element of that party, it is contended that this will go to Burke and Byrne and pull them both through without question.

NORTH DAKOTA ONE-SIDED.

Entire Republican Ticket Regarded as a Winner.

Special to The New York Times.

FARGO, N. D., Oct. 31.—The indications are that the entire Republican Senatorial, Congressional, and State tickets will be elected next Tuesday. The chief fight by the Democrats this year is for the election of ex-Senator W. E. Purcell over Senator Gronna. This may be the closest fight of the campaign. A bitter fight is being waged against Gov. Hanna. He was formerly a member of Congress and is serving his first Gubernatorial term. His re-election is generally conceded.

There is no question about all three of the Republican Congressmen and the rest of the Republican State ticket.

Great interest has been aroused over the woman's suffrage question, which will be passed upon by the voters.

COLORADO DEMOCRATS LEAD.

Betting Favors Election of Senator Thomas and T. S. Patterson.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Oct. 31.—Democratic success in the Senatorial, Congressional, and Gubernatorial contests, to be decided on Tuesday, seem certain in Colorado. Betting favors the dominant party in poolrooms, and odds are also offered that the Statewide prohibition amendment to the Constitution will be defeated by at least 14,000 majority.

Charles S. Thomas, for United States Senator, seems certain of re-election, his Progressive opponent, Benjamin Griffith, being placed second, and Dr. Hubert Work, Republican, third.

The election of four Democratic candidates for Congress is practically conceded, although in the Second District H. H. Seldomridge faces internal party opposition, Ben Hilliard in the First District, Edward Keating in the Third, and Edward Taylor in the Fourth are picked as certain winners.

Thomas M. Patterson, Democratic nominee for Governor, is a 3 to 1 favorite in the betting against George A. Carlson, Republican, and E. P. Costigan, Progressive. Carlson and Patterson represent the "drys" and "wets," respectively, and the Gubernatorial vote will indicate the fate of the prohibition amendment.

Carlson has been charged with representing the Rockefeller coal interests, while Patterson has been an adviser of the union miners for many years, and the election of one or the other will be taken as an indication of the public view of the coal strike.

Mrs. Agnes V. Riddle, Progressive, stands a splendid chance of being elected Secretary of State.

The headless ballot will be used this year for the first time, and that is expected to complicate the vote to some extent. More than 98,000 voters are registered.

MORMON ISSUE IN UTAH.

Dignitaries of Church Said to Favor Senator Smoot.

Special to The New York Times.

SALT LAKE, Utah, Oct. 31.—The indications are that the Republican Party will carry Utah by a small majority, and that the Progressive-Democratic fusion ticket may be successful in some of the counties of the State. However, the fact that Joseph F. Smith, President of the Mormon Church, and a number of leading church officials appeared last week at a reception to Senator Smoot in the city, wearing Smoot campaign buttons, was regarded as significant. About 80 per cent. of the population of Utah belongs to the Mormon Church.

James H. Moyle, the fusion candidate, who also is a Mormon, recently said if he could find any evidence of direct interference by the church in the election he would place the evidence in the hands of Washington officials.

CLOSE IN CALIFORNIA.

Gov. Johnson 10 to 7 Favorite—Phelan Leads for Senator.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—With a three-cornered fight for Governor and a similar situation in the Senatorial fight, the result of the election in California next Tuesday is subject to many forecasts. However, careful students of politics virtually are agreed that Hiram Johnson, incumbent and Progressive, will be the next Governor, with John D. Fredericks, the Republican nominee, second, and John B. Curtin, the Democratic nominee, third. All appear agreed that the race will be close and neither candidate has indicated that he has lost confidence of success.

Before the primary in September the registration was: Republican, 472,677; Democrats, 236,982; Progressives, 214,022. Since the primary the registration shows the same disparity, but there is a general feeling that the registration does not represent the actual relative strength. For the primaries the voter must register under some party name in order to vote a party ticket, but in the general election the voter is not bound by party designation and it is believed in many cases that a large proportion of the Republican registration will go to Johnson. The betting favors Johnson 10 to 7.

James D. Phelan, the Democratic candidate for the United States Senate, running as a personal friend of President Wilson, is conceded to be the strongest candidate for that place opposed to him are Congressman Joseph R. Knowland, Republican, and Francis J. Heney, Progressive. It is figured that Phelan will represent the Democratic strength, and that the Republicans and the Progressives will scatter their respective votes.

For Congress the Progressives undoubtedly will re-elect William Kent, John L. Nolan and William D. Stephens. Charles W. Bell, Progressive incumbent, seems likely to be defeated by Charles H. Randall, Prohibitionist.

The Democrats probably will return John E. Raker and Henry S. Church, incumbents. Three Republican incumbents, Charles F. Curry, Julius Kahn, and E. A. Hayes are likely to be re-elected, and ex-Congressman J. C. Needham and George H. Derrick are other Republicans likely to win.

SITUATION IN OREGON.

Supporters of Senator Chamberlain Hopeful of Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 31.—Senator Chamberlain, candidate for re-election in Oregon, has a battle on his hands with Robert A. Booth, wealthy timberman, formerly a State Senator, but it seems most probable that Chamberlain will win another six-year seat in the upper house.

A. F. Flegel, candidate for the Democratic ticket for the seat in Congress now occupied by A. W. Lafferty, former Republican and Progressive, but now an Independent, is growing stronger every day and, while C. N. McArthur, Republican candidate for Lafferty's seat, is making a great fight, the real contest is between Lafferty and Flegel. Flegel is making his fight as a Wilson adherent.

Dr. C. J. Smith, Democratic candidate for Governor, named as successor-to-be by Democratic Gov. West, who has made many enemies in office, seems likely to suffer defeat at the hands of Dr. James Withycombe, long connected with the Oregon Agricultural College and known to every farmer in the State. The latter has refused to meet Smith in a joint debate on the State issues of the day.

INTEREST LAGS IN KENTUCKY.

Democrats Expect to Elect Two Senators and Nine Congressmen.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 31.—Voters of Kentucky will choose two United States Senators and eleven Congressmen in the election of next Tuesday. Less interest is being shown in the present election than any of recent years. The election of both Senators and nine Congressmen is conceded to the Democrats, while two Congressmen are conceded to the Republicans. The Progressives are believed to be completely out of the running.

Only in two Congressional districts is there any particular interest. In the Third the Republicans are making a hard fight to elect J. Frank Taylor over the present incumbent, R. Y. Thomas Democrat. The other fight is in the Eleventh, where the Progressives and Democrats are behind ex-Congressman John Henry Wilson, Independent, who is making the race against Caleb Powers, but the strength of Powers is so great in the mountains that the success of this fusion movement is extremely doubtful.

According to figures obtained after having compared all the claims of the three parties the following seem the most likely winners in the election: United States Senator (long term) J. C. W. Beckham, Democrat; U. S Senator (short term) Johnson N. Camden, Democrat; Congressmen: First District, A. W. Barkley, Democrat; Second District D. H. Kincheloe, Democrat; Third District, R. Y. Thomas, Democrat; Fourth District, Benjamin Jonahon, Democrat; Fifth District, Swager Sherley, Democrat; Sixth District, A. B. Rouse, Democrat; Seventh District, J. C. Cantrill, Democrat; Eighth District Harvey Helm, Democrats; Ninth District, T. J. Fields, Democrat; Tenth District, John W. Langley, Republican; Eleventh District, Caleb Powers, Republican.

NO ISSUE IN ARKANSAS.

Only One Change Expected in the Congress Delegation.

Special to The New York Times.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 31.—With the exception of the Third Congressional District in Northwest Arkansas there is little interest in the election of Nov. 3. Arkansas voters will elect seven members of the National House and one United States Senator. Six of the seven Congressmen now representing Arkansas at Washington will be returned, and Senator James P. Clarke also will be returned for another, his third, term.

Judge John N. Tillman, Democrat, probably will succeed Congressman J. C. Floyd in the Third District, although he has two opponents, W. N. Ivey, Republican, and Richard Putnam, Progressive. Congressman Floyd is retiring voluntarily.

Senator Clarke has an opponent, but the opposition is nominal only. Harry H. Myers, Republican, and former Superintendent of the Government reservation at Hot Springs, is making the race against Senator Clarke.

The Democratic candidates at the Federal election, all of whom probably will be elected, follow:

First District, T. H. Caraway; Second District, W. A. Oldfield; Third District, John N. Tillman; Fourth District, Otis Wingo; Fifth District, H. M. Jacoway; Sixth District, Sam Taylor; Seventh District, W. S. Goodwin.

RYE LEADS IN TENNESSEE.

Contest for Governor Close — No Congress Change Likely.

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 31.—Tennessee will elect a Governor, one Railroad Commissioner, ten Congressmen, and the Legislature on Tuesday. The Governorship fight is in about as much doubt as was the case in the last campaign, although forecasts seem to favor the election of Gen. T. C. Rye, the Democratic opponent of Gov. Hooper.

The fight is resolved into the question of what gains Gen. Rye will make in West and Middle Tennessee against the majority of 8,000 that Hooper had in 1912 and the additional vote he expects in East Tennessee this year.

Gen. Rye will gain greatly in West Tennessee, and the battleground is the middle section of the State.

The Congressional line-up as the State is now represented in the national House will hardly be changed in any instance.

The New Blanket Ballot and How to Vote It.

1. TO VOTE FOR A CANDIDATE ON THIS BALLOT MAKE A CROSS X MARK IN ONE OF THE SQUARES OR IN THE SPACE AT THE LEFT OF HIS NAME.
2. TO VOTE FOR A CANDIDATE NOT ON THIS BALLOT WRITE HIS NAME IN THE BLANK SPACE UNDER THE CANDIDATES FOR THAT OFFICE.
3. MARK ONLY WITH A PENCIL HAVING BLACK LEAD.
4. ANY OTHER MARK, ERASURE OR TEAR ON THE BALLOT RENDERS IT VOID.
5. IF YOU TEAR, OR DEFACE, OR WRONGLY MARK THIS BALLOT, RETURN IT AND OBTAIN ANOTHER.

1 GOVERNOR (Vote for one).

MARTIN H. GLYNN	Democratic, Ind. League
CHARLES S. WHITMAN	Republican
FREDERICK M. DAVENPORT	Progressive
GUSTAVE A. STRIEBEL	Socialist
WILLIAM SULZER	Prohibition, American
JAMES T. HUNTER	Social Labor

2 LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR (Vote for one).

THOMAS R. LOCKWOOD	Democratic
EDWARD SCHOENECK	Republican, Ind. League
CHAUNCEY J. HAMLIN	Progressive
STEPHEN J. MAHONEY	Socialist
CHARLES E. WELCH	Prohibition
JEREMIAH D. CROWLEY	Social Labor

3 SECRETARY OF STATE (Vote for one).

MITCHELL MAY	Democratic, Ind. League
FRANCIS M. HUGO	Republican
SYDNEY W. STERN	Progressive
FLORENCE CROSS KITCHELT	Socialist
JOHN E. CLEMENTS	Prohibition
EDMUND MOONELIS	Social Labor

4 COMPTROLLER (Vote for one).

| | |
|---

DEMOCRATS EXPECT TO CONTROL CONGRESS

DEMOCRATS EXPECT GAINS IN THE SENATE

Also Assert That They Will Control the Next House by Majority of at Least 100.

REPUBLICANS ARE HOPEFUL

Wadsworth Says He Feels Sure of Victory—Liquor Question a Puzzling Factor in Six States.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Republican and Democratic leaders tonight appear optimistic as to the result of the polls on next Tuesday. While the Democrats, in a statement issued tonight by the National Congressional Committee, said they would control the House in the next Congress by a majority of 100 members, they admit privately that their majority may fall below fifty. Some close political observers predict that the Democratic majority of nearly 150 in the present Congress will be reduced to twenty-five or thirty after March 4. Republicans feel very confident of gains in the House. Unbiased reports indicate that the Democrats probably will make a slight gain in their present majority of ten in the Senate.

High officials of the Administration are confident that the voters will support President Wilson by returning a safe working Democratic majority in the House. The President has written a score or more of letters in the interest of Democratic nominees and he is said to be confident as to the outcome on Tuesday.

In six States, the question of State-wide prohibition will be settled on Tuesday. The liquor issue, it is admitted, upsets the calculations of the political leaders, and makes the outcome of the voting in these States more than uncertain than is usual. These States are Ohio, California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and Colorado. In New York and Pennsylvania the liquor questions has also figured in a less direct way.

James W. Wadsworth, Jr., Republican nominee for the Senate in New York, who is in Washington, predicted today the election of the entire Republican ticket in the Empire State. He expressed the opinion that William Sulzer would poll a sufficient number of Democratic votes to make certain the election of Charles S. Whitman, Republican candidate for Governor, over Martin H. Glynn, his Democratic opponent.

Point to Wilson's Record.

The Democratic Congressional Committee issued this statement:

Reports gathered with particular care from all parts of the country indicate a sweeping Democratic victory Tuesday. The remarkable programme of progressive legislation enacted by Congress under the leadership of President Wilson has made a profound impression on the country, and the opposition has been powerless to stem the tide of approval. They have been without an issue upon which to appeal to the people, and, although often challenged to do so, have been unable to state in what particulars they would change the legislation of the last eighteen months if returned to power.

In districts where they have attempted to make the tariff an issue no candidate, so far as we have been able to learn, has the temerity to pledge himself to the re-enactment of the Payne-Aldrich tariff, which caused the split in the Republican Party and led to the organization of the Progressive Party.

Democratic sentimen is particularly strong in that section of the country west of the Mississippi. This is well illustrated in the former Republican State of Montana, where the vote for Congressmen Evans and Stout in the primaries exceeded the combined vote of all other parties. Gains are confidently expected in Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and other Western States.

In the East our prospects are particularly gratifying. In the Second Massachusetts District, for instance, Prof. E. M. Lewis has been making a wonderful campaign and public sentiment there strongly points to his election. In the First New Jersey District and other districts in the East, now represented by Republicans, prospects for Democratic success are exceptionally good. Making due allowance for the fact that quite a number of Democrats in the Sixty-third Congress represent strong Republican districts, which under normal conditions we could not hope to win, it is difficult to see how the Democratic Party will fail to organize the next House with approximately 100 majority.

Hope for Congress Gains.

Our majority in the Senate will be increased by the election of Senators in Connecticut, New York, Ohio, Kansas, and Illylinois; all of which are represented now by Republicans. Stevens in New Hampshire, Johnson in South Dakota, Purcell in North Dakota, Moyle in Utah, Phelan in California, Husting in Wisconsin, have fine chances of success, according to the best reports while Palmer in Pennsylvania and Connolly in Iowa appear to be gaining strength rapidly, and our latest reports from these two States are very reassuring.

The most striking feature of all the reports received is the tremendous popularity of President Wilson. It reaches into every nook and corner of the land. His handling of the difficult and trying questions growing out of the great world crisis has appealed to the people with peculiar force, and they will not embarrass the present situation by electing a Congress antagonistic to him. The general situation could not be better, and the friends of this Administration who confidently expect a verdict of approval for real public service will not be disappointed.

Chairman Woods of the Republican Congressional Committee is in Chicago, and no formal statement was issued at the Republican headquarters in Washington.

The Times Searchlight to Tell the Results of the Election

After the closing of the polls, at 5 P. M. next Tuesday, the counting of the vote will start immediately throughout the State. As soon as enough returns have been received to make the results of the complete count reasonably certain, the verdict of the voters will be instantly communicated to everybody for miles around through the use of the great searchlight on the tall tower of The Times Building. The signals will be as follows:

GLYNN ELECTED GOVERNOR.—White shaft of light pointing south.
WHITMAN ELECTED GOVERNOR.—White shaft of light pointing north.
GERARD ELECTED SENATOR.—White shaft of light pointing west.
WADSWORTH ELECTED SENATOR.—White shaft of light pointing east.
DEMOCRATIC CONGRESS.—White shaft of light south, swinging east and west.
REPUBLICAN CONGRESS.—White shaft of light north, swinging east and west.

Detailed election returns will be thrown by a stereopticon on a large screen on The Times Building, Broadway and Forty-second Street.

HARD FIGHT IN THE 19TH.

Senator Simpson Commended by Business Interests.

The three-cornered fight for the State Senate which is in progress in the Nineteenth District, embracing Washington Heights and part of Harlem, is arousing widespread interest among voters. The Democratic candidate, George W. Simpson, is the present Senator. He has been most active and painstaking. The Citizens' Union, which was niggardly in praise of Democratic candidates for the Legislature in its recent report, said the character of bills introduced by Senator Simpson "indicates appreciation of his legislative duties."

Senator Simpson introduced thirty-eight bills at the recent session of the Legislature, and many of his measures received the approval of Gov. Glynn. Among the measures bearing his name was the bill to prevent exorbitant charges for theatre tickets by speculators, bill providing for the registration and examination of architects, which received the approval of the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, and two bills to promote safety to pedestrians in the streets by increasing the personnel of the Traffic Squad and making disobedience of traffic regulations a misdemeanor. Both bills received the indorsement of the Merchants' Association. He also fathered measures which have won him commendation from real estate owners, and showed great activity in the furtherance of education. He was Chairman of the Senate Committee on Public Education.

Senator Simpson's two rivals in the Senate fight are Frederick E. Higgins, Republican, and Henry Salant, Progressive. Mr. Salant was a candidate two years ago and was seated on the returns, but was disqualified after a recount of the vote, when it was found that Senator Simpson had a plurality. His Republican opponent two years ago was Josiah T. Newcomb, who since has left the Republican Party and joined the Progressiveyes.

Senator Simpson, who is a lawyer, has been an active worker in the Democratic organization of his district.

CRIMMINS OUT FOR GLYNN.

He Pays a Warm Tribute to the Governor and Ambassador Gerard.

John D. Crimmins in discussing the political situation yesterday came out strongly for the election of Martin H. Glynn for Governor and James Gerard for United States Senator.

"My sympathies," said Mr. Crimmins, "are now, as they always have been, with the Democratic Party, because, in my opinion, that party best represents the ideals of the founders of this Republic, which are to secure freedom and equality within the boundaries of our nation for all men who deserve and appreciate the ineffable blessings of freedom and equality.

"In the President of our nation and in his success we have exemplary proof of the power which the fathers of our country gave to us in their wisdom and foresight. Our Democratic Party has given to us this year as candidate for Governor and as candidate for United States Senator men who round out in the fullest measure the ideals of character and service that our State demands in its representatives. Both Gov. Glynn and Ambassador Gerard are sons of the soil of New York State. They both have been tested. They both have grown constantly, through acceptable service, in the public regard. To Mr. Gerard has been given an unexampled opportunity and responsibility unparalleled in this generation, and he has measured up to the exalted human service required of him with a manly capacity and a patriotic unselfishness that are the pride of our nation. He deserves in every State practical proof of our appreciation.

"Gov. Glynn, if he had done nothing else than perfect the workmen's compensation law, would have merited return by the electorate to the Governor's chair. That measure is a very bulwark against the attacks of the agitators of unrest. It is a just measure. A far-sighted measure. A measure that bridges the chasm between the employer and the employe, and this chasm has long been the breeding place of the un-American and the un-Christian element, of both the employing and the employed classes.

"There is another thing—you will recall that about the middle of August last there was a great financial agitation here due to the European war. Among the men in the highest circles of finance, whose responsibilities to the public are not sometimes appreciated one tithe so much by the public as they are felt by these eminent American men, a grave crisis developed. It produced the semblance of a panic among the leaders. A moratorium was thought of. Great pressure was brought to bear on Gov. Glynn to declare a moratorium for thirty to sixty days. The pressure came from most influential sources. It was in discredit to the men who fathered the idea. Their motive was patriotic. Gov. Glynn bore the impact of their appeal with calmness. He waited and he thought, and as a son of New York he felt that this great occasion was not really great enough to warrant the disturbance, not to say the confession of incapacity involved in the calling of a moratorium.

APPEAL FOR GLYNN ISSUED.

Prominent Men Sign Plea to Independent Voters.

An appeal to the independent citizens of the State to vote for Gov. Glynn, signed by independent Democrats, was given out yesterday at the Glynn headquarters in the Hotel Vanderbilt. The signers were Frederic R. Coudert, Everett P. Wheeler, Lewis L. Delafield, L. L. Kellogg, Lawson Purdy, Jacob H. Schiff, Cyrus L. Sulzberger, Herman Ridder, George McAneny, and George C. Van Tuyl, Jr.

After advising independent voters to support Gov. Glynn, the appeal says:

"No axiom in good government seems to us more patently self-evident than that the best reward for public service well performed is continuance in office. What can give such assurance that one will fill an office well as the fact that he is doing so?

"There is no time for experiments. All citizens, of whatever party, have reason for congratulation that a Presidential election is not impending and that our President, calm, fearless, already familiar with his duties, is there to serve the interests of the whole people. In this State, also, it is not a time to shift from a Governor who has been tried and found not wanting.

"With Gov. Glynn firmly in his seat for two years more, every citizen would in his heart be at ease that, neither through infirmity of purpose nor through any failure to put forth his best efforts, would the Governor of New York fall short of his full duty to the State."

Gerard's Managers Confident.

At the Gerard campaign headquarters yesterday it was said that no attempt would be made to give out figures, as the plurality which it was expected Ambassador Gerard would receive, as there was no way to estimate the vote he would receive. The candidate's campaign managers, however, said he would be elected by an enormous majority.

WOMEN HOLD RALLY TO BOOM DR. DAVIS

Political Education League Supports Her for Constitutional Convention.

SPEAKERS DIRECT VOTERS

Miss Boswell Explains to the Men Present How They Can Scratch a Ticket Safely.

Representatives of three political parties came together yesterday morning at the meeting of the League for Political Education in the Hudson Theatre, held to advance the candidacy of Commissioner of Correction Dr. Katharine B. Davis, who seeks election as Delegate at Large on the Progressive ticket for the Constitutional Convention.

Mrs. S. B. Ayres, representing the Democratic Party; Miss Helen Varick Boswell, the Republican, and Miss Alice Carpenter, the Progressives, all supported Dr. Davis. The only one of the three who did not mention Dr. Davis in her address was Miss Carpenter.

"I am afraid Dr. Davis is not right when she says that men talk more than women," said Miss Carpenter, sadly, later in the morning. "I intended to speak of her when I was talking, but, as usual, I forgot the time."

"I believe there should be one woman in the Constitutional Convention," said Miss Boswell in her address. "Ask your friends to scratch one name and vote for Dr. Davis." There was hearty applause.

"Bring the name of Katharine Davis to your husbands' attention," said Mrs. Ayres. "They believe in women or they wouldn't have married you. We should have a woman at the Constitutional Convention. By the time there is another convention, in another twenty years, the women will have the vote. Even the antis admit that."

"How can we help elect Dr. Davis?" asked a woman in the audience.

"There is only Monday," said Miss Carpenter, "but get hold of as many men as you can and tell them to vote for her. I think Miss Boswell can tell you more in detail about what to do."

"I beg the pardon of the men here," said Miss Boswell, "but I think the best thing to do will be to tell them how to vote. There is a separate ballot for the Constitutional Convention and the way to vote for Dr. Davis, who is a Delegate at Large, is to put a cross before fourteen or fifteen names of your own party, but scratch one and in place of that vote or Dr. Davis on the Progressive.

"You don't want to scratch such names as Martin Littleton or Seth Low, for those are the kind of men we want in the convention, but some less well-known man. We, in New York City, might scratch the name of an up-State man. There is Clearwater, for instance, whose thoughts are not as clear as his name; or Ahearn or Laffin."

"And don't," advised Mrs. Ayres, "put your cross in the circle at the top and then before one of the names too. The cross in the circle means that you vote the straight ticket. If you put another cross, then, before one of the names it means that you have voted twice for one person and the ballot is thrown out. There were 108 Democratic ballots thrown out at one election where that was done. Cross the fourteen names if you wish for your own party, and then a cross before the name of Dr. Davis."

Dr. Davis will be the speaker at the meeting of the League for Political Education next Saturday.

LEARY GIVES OUT FIGURES.

Ex-Superintendent of Elections Estimates Vote of City.

William Leary, former State Superintendent of Elections and a Republican, gave out figures yesterday placing Gov. Glynn's plurality over District Attorney Whitman in New York City at 56,500. He predicted that Glynn would poll 305,500 votes, Whitman 249,000, Sulzer 41,500, and Davenport 15,000.

In New York County Mr. Leary gave Glynn 120,000 votes and Whitman 88,000. In Kings he estimated the vote as: Glynn, 108,000; Whitman, 103,000; in the Bronx, Glynn, 39,000; Whitman, 31,000. In Queens he gave Glynn a plurality of 10,000 and in Richmond 1,500.

WILSON NAMED PROGRESSIVE

Error Which Caused Indorsement of Illinois Candidate Quickly Rectified.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31. — Official Washington chuckled today when it heard that through a clerical error President Wilson had sent a letter of indorsement to J. C. Vaughan, Progressive candidate for Congress in the Second Illinois District, instead of to M. B. O'Leary, the Democratic candidate. The letter praised Mr. Vaughan's Democracy and urged voters to send him to Washington to aid in carrying on the Democratic legislative programme. This is the district in which James R. Mann, the Republican leader in the House of Representatives, is a candidate for re-election.

When the mistake was discovered, Mr. Wilson wired Mr. Vaughan, explaining the circumstances and asking him not to use the letter.

MANY CHALLENGES PLANNED

District Attorney Has Sent More Than 400 Names to Elections Head.

More than 400 names have been handed to the State Superintendent of Elections by Assistant District Attorney Weller for challenge on Tuesday. Many are those who have been served with "ask-to-see" subpoenas from the District Attorney's office and who have refused to obey them.

In his investigation of charges of colonization in lodging houses on the Bowery and in other places Mr. Weller ordered a number of subpoenas issued. These "ask-to-see" subpoenas are not enforceable by contempt of court proceedings, and the persons who received them have been so notified by the election district Captains.

Magistrates Freschi and Krotel, sitting in the library of the District Attorney's office, yesterday issued about fifty warrants in election cases. One of the cases which came before the Magistrates was that of John H. O'Brine, who is charged with registering from 137 East Fifteenth Street, a boarding house. The woman who ran the boarding house testified that O'Brine shared a room with another lodger, but investigation showed that the room was a hall bedroom with a single bed. It is alleged that O'Brine was also registered in the Seventeenth Election District of the Twenty-fifth Assembly District.

WOODS CAUTIONS POLICE.

Tells Them About Reports of Marked Sample Ballots.

Police Commissioner Woods sent these final instructions yesterday to all the police stations of the city, to be read to the patrolmen:

"Reports have been received that sample ballots already marked in favor of some candidates for office in the coming election may be distributed either within the polling place or just outside on Election Day. Any electioneering in a polling place or within 100 feet of it is illegal.

"The police will be instructed to class as electioneering the attempt to distribute any marked sample ballots or circulars calculated to influence a voter in the performance or act of voting and to prevent any such distribution. The only exception to this would be the official ballot or the official sample ballot and the only persons who have the right to distribute these are the official ballot clerks or the election officials."

MURPHY STUDIES REPORTS.

"Nothing to Say," His Reply to Election Questions.

Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, was busy yesterday going over the figures submitted by the various district leaders. These figures were delivered at Tammany Hall in sealed envelopes. Asked if he intended to give out any figures, Mr. Murphy said:

"I have nothing whatever to say."

"Will you make any estimate of Gov. Glynn's plurality?"

"I will make a statement election night," was his only reply.

McANENY AS "CATSPAW."

P. J. McCook Criticises Figures in Defense of Glynn.

Philip J. McCook, President of the New York Young Republican Club, criticised President McAneny of the Board of Aldermen yesterday for the latter's statement in defense of the Glynn administration.

"The President of the Board of Aldermen has been badly fooled," he said. "His figures do not for a moment stand superficial scrutiny, let alone verification by the records. He has been used as a catspaw and has subscribed his name to the groundless assertions of Gov. Glynn and Controller Sohmer, who were fighting him last year."

Indorsements of Buttenwieser.

Letters have been received by Joseph L. Buttenwieser, Democratic candidate for Congress in the Nineteenth District, from Jacob H. Schiff, Senator O'Gorman, Thomas M. Mulry, and Allan Robinson recommending him for election.

NAMED DISH IN HER HONOR

But Mme. Trentini Objected When Told Spinach Was Like Cabbage.

The management at the Claridge decided yesterday after a sharp speech delivered in the restaurant of the hotel by Mme. Trentini that it would in the future ask permission of an opera singer before naming a dish in her honor. When the singer found that they had named a dish of spinach after her, and a friend told her that spinach was something like cabbage, people heard a commotion.

The chef of the Claridge had fixed up a new kind of spinach—something with a lot of pepper and spice in it. When a foreign chef cannot find a Prince or a Princess to stand sponsor for one of his confections, he usually christens it by the name of an opera singer, and as Mme. Trentini was stopping in the house, the chef immediately called the dish after her.

When the singer, accompanied by her manager, took a table in the restaurant yesterday, she picked up the bill of fare, and, as the plat de jour, in heavy red type read, "Ham with spinach à la Trentini."

For an instant she looked pleased. Then she turned to one of the men. "What is spinach?"

"A vegetable something like cabbage," was the reply.

"Eet ees? Ha! I will not stand for eet. It is a disgrace to put my name on a low spinach. Queeck, call the manager. I will protest."

Manager Merry was sent for on a hurry call.

"I am damaged by the spinach!" shouted the singer, stamping her feet. "I shall have the lawyer," and then followed words in Italian which drew the attention of the whole room. "You have no right to name the dish after me without my consent. I will leave."

The manager explained that lots of people think spinach is a dainty, and that the chef had thought this particular kind of spinach deserved to be named after a famous artiste. This somewhat mollified the singer, and after much persuasion on the part of her friends and the manager, she consented to go on with her meal.

SELF-REFORMATION IN A JERSEY PRISON

Inmates of Rahway Institution Are Successfully Taught to Govern Themselves.

FEW INFRACTIONS OF RULES

Reformatory Is Now Known Throughout the Country as "The University of Another Chance."

New Jersey's reformatory at Rahway is not called by its official title by inmates and former inmates. They have adopted for the institution the name which Dr. Frank Moore applied to it when he assumed charge as Superintendent, and endeavored to do real reforming of his nearly 1,000 charges. It is known throughout the United States as the "University of Another Chance."

Dr. Moore cares more for results than for red tape. Unable to personally study the traits and shortcomings of each of his thousand wards, he has set them to studying themselves. He holds, and tells the reformatory inmates, that his business is not to criticise the bad in them, but to find the good and cultivate it. Dr. Moore is no dreamer or idealistic philanthropist. He is intensely practical, and, being practical, he did not attempt to reform the reformatory methods all at once. The process has been gradual. The inmates of the Rahway Reformatory are now self-governing. Two years ago there were reported to the Superintendent 4,889 infractions of the rules.

Offered Self-Government.

Dr. Moore broached his self-government scheme to the inmates. He told them that it rested entirely with themselves whether they were granted autonomy or not. Last year the number of inmates increased, but the number of reported infractions of the rules was 2,002 less than during the previous year. The older inmates, who were working for the privilege of being treated like citizens, were seldom reported, and they did much to tame the new inmates who were inclined to be obstreperous. Dr. Moore called the inmates together and told them that the time had come when he was going to grant them autonomy. He outlined his plan, which was to have the officers of inmates judged and punishment for them meted out by a council of prisoners elected by their fellows.

On July 12 of this year each of the fourteen tiers elected two Councilmen to represent it. Each Tuesday and Friday the Council meets to act upon reports of misbehavior by inmates. The Council has a President, who is presiding Judge, and a Secretary, who is Clerk of the Court. Prisoners are produced before the Council and faced by their accusers, who are their fellow-inmates or Councilmen from their tier, and they are given an opportunity to cross-examine witnesses and testify in their own defense. If the accused is found guilty he is sentenced to the loss of some privilege.

The decision of the Council is final. It is not subject to approval by the Superintendent or any officer of the institution, and none of the officers is permitted any voice in its deliberations. If a Councilman misbehaves and becomes amenable for a serious breach of discipline he is tried by his fellow-Councilmen. If a Councilman is ousted for cause an election to select his successor is immediately held on his tier. Never has the decision of the Council failed to meet with the approval of the prisoners.

Discipline Has Improved.

Under the rule of the Council discipline has improved to such an extent that Dr. Moore has greatly increased the privileges of the inmates. Not only have the inmates of the reformatory had a baseball league, composed of eight teams from the shops, but during the Summer fifteen outside baseball teams from various parts of the State played the reformatory boys, and ten out of the fifteen were defeated. On Columbus Day a high-class vaudeville and minstrel show was given. The costumes were made in the tailor shop, the music sheets were donated by a music publishing house, and talent was drummed up from among the prisoners, some of whom had been theatrical performers. Not more than $1 cash was expended, and a show was produced for an audience of 1,000 which compared favorably with many professional performances.

Here are some of the governing rules of the Council:

To do all in our power to stop the use of profane language among the inmates.

To try to ascertain the number of any inmate guilty of stealing articles from the room of another inmate, and submit his name to the council for action.

To try to do away with all disorder in the dining room, especially sissing and loud talking, and to keep perfect order.

To try to have the inmates take a pride in their general behavior, and in that way reduce the number of reports against the inmates of the institution.

To try to instill a better fellowship and spirit among the inmates. To try to lead them from the habit of doing things for which they are liable to be reported into the habit of doing things that are manly and clean.

The council shall take a lively interest in all amusements for the benefit of the inmates on holidays and other times. To try to arrange to give shows from time to time, especially on holidays.

Councilmen will ask the inmates on their tiers to send them suggestions from time to time for the betterment of the inmates of the institution.

Dr. Moore says that the prisoners govern themselves better than a host of guards could govern them. The honor roll has grown under autonomy in the State Reformatory, and the delinquent roll has decreased correspondingly.

MISTOOK PRAISE FOR "BOO."

Spanish Violinist Chagrined When Gallery Gods Whistled His Tunes.

In England the gallery gods "boo" when they don't like a piece. In Germany and Austria they whistle, according to Theodore Bauer, an authority on gallery etiquette as practiced here and abroad. Here in New York, as every one knows, when the gallery whistles, it is usually in approval. His friends at the Claridge were lamenting yesterday that they had not coached Manuel Quiroga, a young Spanish violinist, who recently made his first appearance in the United States.

Señor Quiroga had almost finished playing a "concerto" when the gallery began whistling. He did not recognize it, and the Señor flushed, and in his mortification felt as if he must sink through the stage. The moment he finished, he ran into the wings. Applause followed his exit, and he was urged to respond, but he refused. Finally Nahan Franko, who was directing the orchestra, had to fairly drag him upon the stage to acknowledge the applause.

"They whistled at me," said Señor Quiroga yesterday, "and wherever I have played in Europe, that meant I had failed to please. My ear told me that I had played the concerto correctly, and I was disheartened by the sounds from the gallery. Next time, if I am whistled at, I shall enjoy it."

GEORGE F. WILLIAMS BACK.

Ex-Diplomat Satisfied with the Stand He Took on Albania.

George Fred Williams, who went to the Balkans as Minister for the United States and resigned at the request of the State Department, returned yesterday from Europe on the Holland-America liner Nieuw Amsterdam satisfied that he had done his duty toward humanity.

"I am quite satisfied with the stand that I took in Albania," said Mr. Williams, and I have won the affection of the people."

He said that he was not forced out of the diplomatic service, but resigned his post because of a statement he had made that he felt the United States Government could not stand behind. Mr. Williams went on to say that he believed the Balkan situation had reached a crisis with Turkey in the field against Russia and with Italy and Greece having an evident understanding in Albania.

He traveled through Germany on his way home and had no trouble whatever in getting through the country, nor did he see any signs there of financial or business depression.

EXERCISES AT N. Y. U.

Cornelius Baker Hall of Philosophy to be Dedicated Tomorrow.

New York University will dedicate with fitting exercises tomorrow afternoon the Cornelius Baker Hall of Philosophy erected by Mrs. John Stewart Kennedy in memory of her father, Cornelius Baker, one of the founders of the university.

The exercises will be held in the afternoon and will include addresses by Dr. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, Chancellor of the university; Dr. John Henry Jowett, Chancellor Emeritus Henry Mitchel MacCracken, Dr. Adolphus F. Schaufer, and Syndic John H. MacCracken. The building was completed last year and has been occupied since then pending the formal dedication.

NEW JERSEY HAS $1,081,383.

Fiscal Year's End Shows Balance That Pleases Controller.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 31.—The fiscal year of the State of New Jersey closed today with a balance of $1,081,383 in the Treasury. The exact condition is outlined in the following telegram sent to Gov. Fielder by Controller Edwards when the balance was ascertained:

"The close of the State's fiscal year leaves a balance for State purposes of $1,081,383.69, notwithstanding extraordinary payments of some $110,000 for unpaid bills of previous years in excess of appropriations for those years.

In addition $50,000 has been put aside to establish a fund to insure State property. The disbursements show an increase of over $340,000 for improvements and additions to the institutions of the State over the previous year.

"This condition should render unnecessary supplemental appropriations of any great amount."

OIL CO.'S INDICTED IN GASOLINE WAR

Jersey Invokes Seven Sisters Acts Against Standard and Gulf Refining.

PRICE CUTTING THE CHARGE

Rate Ran Down from 22 Cents a Gallon to 10 Cents Where There Was Competition.

Indictments of the Standard Oil Company and the Gulf Refining Company have been voted by the Hudson County (New Jersey) Grand Jury, after a special inquiry in Jersey City. The criminal bills are based on the gasoline war which has been in progress in Hudson County for several months, during which the price was cut from 22 cents a gallon to 10 cents.

The original complaint was made last July by the Crew-Levick Company, an independent concern located in Jersey City, against the Standard Company under the Seven Sisters acts, passed while President Wilson was Governor, to check monopolies. The contention of the complainants was that the Standard was cutting prices for the purpose of driving its competitors out of the trade in Hudson County, to which the cut-rate war was then limited, its rates being higher in the other parts of the State.

The investigation of this complaint by County Judge Sullivan revealed that the Gulf Refining Company was the concern that started the cutting and that it had made contracts with its customers to sell gasoline at a cent less per gallon than the Standard charged, without regard to what the Standard's price might be. The court put the responsibility on the Gulf Company and held that it should have been the defendant. The complaint was referred to the Grand Jury, and George H. Lakeslee, who organized the Mutual Oil Company, alleged to be the subsidiary concern of the Standard to carry on the gasoline war, and William J. Kelly and Eugene Homan, who conduct large garages which handle the Gulf Company's oil, were closely interrogated about their contracts for gasoline. A large number of dealers were also examined, and when the Grand Jury completed its inquiry on Friday it decided that the two big oil companies were making an effort to "freeze out" their small competitors, and voted the indictments.

ASKED FOR DAMP ROOM.

Dancer Finds New York Air Too Dry, So She Sleeps Near the Bath.

Countess Thamara de Swirsky, who danced over here several years ago, and who is now in Mme. Pavlowa's company, is convinced that the atmosphere of New York is too dry for a person who wished to remain supple.

"This New York, it is too dry," the Countess told Theodore Bauer. "I mean, of course, the climate. It must be changed."

Bauer's hands went up. He is a Hungarian, and not used to ultimatums from a Russian—even a fair one; besides, the order was rather large.

"I like my room, but the air of my room is too dry," continued the Countess. "I must have a bed in the bathroom; just a simple mattress and pillow; because I have determined that I must sleep in a warm, damp room, and I intend to let the hot water trickle into the bath tub all the night, so as to make the bathroom warm and damp."

And, according to Mr. Bauer, the Countess's bathroom was yesterday afternoon fitted up in the way she demanded.

TRUSTEES IN CONTEMPT.

Failed to Pay Mrs. Brill Income from Oberndorf Estate.

Supreme Court Justice Guy yesterday declared the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company and Edward Oberndorf, trustees under the will of Julius Oberndorf, in contempt for failing to pay $425 every three months to Mrs. Minnie G. Brill, the divorced wife of William D. Oberndorf. Two years after leaving her husband she sued to compel her husband to pay her a part of his income from the trust fund. She won the suit, but the Appellate Division set the judgment aside. The Court of Appeals reversed the Appellate Division and ordered a new trial.

Justice Guy heard the case and ordered the quarterly payments until the legal expenses and all arrearages, amounting to $2,350, should be paid. After these are paid the quarterly payments to Mrs. Brill will be $275.

Two Binders
To Preserve in Good Condition
New York Times Mid-Week Pictorial War Extra
Obtain a strong, durable binder of full cloth for $1; full imitation leather at $1.35; or of half leather, gold-trimmed, for $1.50.
The War Extra is a comprehensive pictorial history of the war, printed by the beautiful Rotogravure process.
Times Square, New York

THE ANNALIST
Consulted for exact information on important events in finance, commerce, agriculture, railways, and other public utilities, and for prices of stocks and bonds on the New York Exchange. Attractive and substantial binder to hold a complete volume of The Annalist sent through the mail for $1.25.
THE ANNALIST
Times Square, New York

The Vacation War Relief Committee
Appeals for the help of the public in the effort to provide work for women sufferers by the war. Permanent positions are found for them and others are employed making garments for European hospitals and war refugees.
A free employment bureau has been opened and a temporary workroom is already making garments.
The committee needs positions for unemployed women and girls, orders (large and small) for the workroom, all kinds of woolen and linen materials, and money to meet the expenses of the entire work.
ANNE MORGAN, Treasurer, 38 W. 39th St., New York City.

SUPERINTENDENT
Municipal Lodging House.
Applications for examination for this position will be received until 4 P. M., Thurs., Nov. 12th.
Candidates must have had experience in institutional management, or that of industrial organizations, or in handling of the destitute for charitable agencies. Knowledge of the local employment conditions necessary; also public and private charitable agencies of this city. The position calls for a man with executive ability and knowledge of best methods in charities administration.
Minimum age, 25 years; Maximum age, 50 years.
Salary, $2,400 a year and maintenance.
Also position of Deputy Superintendent at $1,800, with maintenance.
Application blanks to be had only at Application Bureau, Room 1400, Municipal Building, Manhattan; or sent by mail on receipt of 4c. stamps.
Municipal Civil Service Commission.

Large assortment of rich Furs, including Blue and White Fox.
KRAMER FUR CO.,
13 EAST 16TH S., Bet. B'way and 5th Av.

Cammeyer directs the Attention of Fashionable Women to
The First Comprehensive Showing in New York of Nigger Head Brown Button and Lace Boots of Quality
Ready Monday in the Most Effective Combinations
CAMMEYER NEW YORK
Branch De Luxe, 381 Fifth Avenue (Above 35th Street)
Main Store: 6th Avenue at 20th Street

MANUFACTURER'S SALE OF FINE FURNITURE AT 33⅓% Below Cost to Dealers
FOR forty-one years we have manufactured the highest grade of dining room and bed room furniture. Our products have been sold only by the best furniture houses and decorators in New York.
Because of an over-production we must move our oak and mahogany dining room and Circassian walnut and enamel bed room furniture, and we have decided to sell it direct to the user at a reduction of 33⅓% from the wholesale price.
Oak Dining Room Suites from $325.00 up.
Mahogany Dining Room Suites from $425.00 up.
Circassian Walnut and Enamel Bed Room Suites from $400.00 up.
Also odd dining tables, side boards, side tables and glass closets, some in the raw wood which can be finished any special color.
Factory will be open for your convenience Election Day.
HENRY FULDNER & SONS
ESTABLISHED 1873
Factory, 404 E. 14th St., near 1st Av., New York

Thurm
Originators and Importers announce a comprehensive display of Hats
Gowns Furs
Evening Wraps
Fifteen East Fifty-second Street

ENGLISH HOSPITAL CALLS FOR NURSES

Red Cross Will Send Helpers at Once—Yale University Gives Two Ambulances.

TYPHOID SERUM TO AUSTRIA

Belgian Fund Gains $9,610—Mrs. Whitlock Organizes Aid for Mercy Committee.

Dr. Howard M. Beal, in charge of the American Red Cross units in England, cabled the Red Cross yesterday asking if twenty additional nurses and extra surgeons for duty in the American Hospital at Paignton, England, can be sent to him. The Red Cross replied that two additional surgeons and six nurses would start for England immediately and that others would be sent provided funds to bear the extra expense are forthcoming. The hospital at Paignton is equipped for 350 military patients.

Yale University has informed the Red Cross that the university has decided to send an ambulance to the American Hospital in Paris and another to the German Red Cross organization. The ambulances will be sent through the American Red Cross as a gift from Yale University.

Enough anti-typhoid serum to inoculate 5,000 persons has been sent to Austria by the American Red Cross. The serum was sent in response to the cabled request of the American Red Cross units now serving in Austria.

All contributions to the Red Cross should be sent to Jacob H. Schiff, Treasurer, at 52 William Street or 130 East Twenty-second Street. The Red Cross Fund in New York now totals $317,084.62, of which amount $2,712.03 was received yesterday. The donors and their gifts, cents omitted, were:

Through Dr. B. Dernburg	$1,167
Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, fifth contribution	500
Good Citizens' League, Upper Flushing, proceeds of card party and dance	365
Alfred H. Smith Company	150
Clonalis Perera	100
Christ Church Parish, Ansonia, Conn.	52
Tea at Saugerties-on-Hudson	66
A. F.	50
Through Elizabeth, N. J., Daily Journal	41
Through Miss Jane B. Elanhard	37
Through Elmira, N. Y., Star Gazette	24
Fifth Avenue Branch Red Cross	24
Trinity Church, N. Y. C., additional	18
S. R. Bener, annual special Society	15
Collected on S. S. Philadelphia	15
St. George's Society, Huntington, L. I., Subscription dance, Schenectady, N. Y.	12
Woman's Club of Irondequoit	12
May Number Co., Inc., Mobile, Ala.	10
P. Y. Friend	5
Philip J. Eberhard	5
S. M. M.	3
Primary Sunday school class, Grand View, Ohio	2
Juliet S. Noble	2
Men's Club, St. Paul's Church, Watervliet, N. Y.	1
G. E. Kimball	1
W. I. Grosvenor	1
Benjamin F. Clark	1
Cash	1
Mrs. Samuel Goldnasser	1

Belgian Fund Gains $9,610.

The fund for the relief of the nonbombatants of Belgium is now $264,936.72, of which amount $9,610.65 was received yesterday. Subscriptions to this fund should be sent to J. P. Morgan & Co., 23 Wall Street, or the Belgian Relief Committee, 8-10 Bridge Street. Yesterday's subscribers to the fund and their gifts, cents omitted, were:

R. F. Cutting	$2,500	E. T. Christmas	5
Troy Belgian Fund	1,150	M. N. Buckner	25
Cash	1,000	Mrs. W. B. Trail	25
George Arents	500	G. E. Townley	25
M. L. Schiff	500	Miss Towar	20
L. E. Stoddard	175	Anonymous	15
A. H. Smith Co.	150	Charles Conant	20
Mrs. Parsons	100	C. C. Corner	10
Walter D. Hines	100	Mrs. F. S. Hall	15
Andean Trad'g Co.	100	E. L. Warner	5
Richard Mutter	100	A. H. F.	10
W. J. Wallace	100	Off Steppard	5
Joseph Seep	100	Louise D. Vanderbilt	25
Charles Collins	100	Nathan Myers	25
Friend from Penn.	85	Emma C. Thursby	5
W. F. Decker	50	Emma C. Thursby	5
Horace Starr	50	M. W. Openhym	100
J. M. Goetchius	50	Mrs. S. F. Smith	25
A. F.	50	M. W. Phanmer	5
W. B. Dickerson	50	G. B. Hedges	5
Una M. Merriam	50	Mrs. Pirson	5
Allen Hazen	50	E. C. Myrick	5
S. E. Kilner	50	F. M. R.	3
Charles H. Baum	50	R. F. Brewer	10
Frederick Bruce	200	J. L. Boynton	5
C. Heyton	1	Margaret C. Richet	1
Emma Whitmore	1	Soer	200
E. G. A. Fitch	25	J. T. Belford	10
F. A. W.	2	Silas Tuttle	10
T. P.	20	Edward Setzer	10
W. Reed, Jr.	5	A. Topin	2
Edwin S. Lines	20	Angelo Berbieri	2
R. R. Brown	10	D. Barbieri	5
Miss E. Lawton	5	Altin	1
Miss W. Lathrop	5	Etney	1
Mrs. A. F. Dudley	10	S. Martus	10
Maggie Hooper	25	S. Trournal	5
I. C. Thallon	5	M. A. Setzer	5
Mrs. B. C. Flake	5	John T. Smith	10
Mrs. E. V. Stoddard	5	Sergeant, Jr.	10
H. L. Reed	10	Genesee, N. Y.	13
N. M. Thomas	3	Charles G. Osgood	10
A Friend	10	S. M. Meeker	25
Margaret Hill	10	F. H. Friend	10
James Cox	25	S. P. Tallman	3
H. M. Sutphin	5	Elizabeth Tousey	25
S. S. Benjamin	25	Dr. J. C. Corbett	10
Miss M. L. Spring	5	Dr. S. V. Constable	5
Cash	5	Dr. F. C. Carle	2
Mortimer Adler	5	Selma Rossman	10
Anonymous	5	Mrs. Hugh Hazelton	5
Sarah L. Clark	25	Stella Henveh	5
G. F. Sullivan	10	S.	10
S. S. Hoffmann	3	M. F. R.	3
R. C. S.	10	M. M. F.	2
E. R. Rumsey	5	Alexandria Kahn	5
E. C. Wood	10	Eliza C. Ripley	10
D. P. Lockwood	10	S.	5
D. M. M.	25	Milton H. Way	50
Mary H. Kellogg	10	H. J. Donnelly's employes	66
Miss M. T. Dure	25	Cash	1
Mrs. C. N. Kessler	5	Cash	10
Julia C. Scudder	20	H. N.	10
J. W. Scudder	2	Eva	2
Mrs. N. Marie Peck and Mrs. George M. Brown	25	S. H. Ordway	25
Mrs. I. G. Rossman	5	M. E. Richardson	5
Smithfield Ch., Pr. of North River	53	E. P. Foechheimer	50
Miss E. L. Mapes	5	F. R. Conrey	25
De Acebonas	5	A. Blumletn	50
G. Panneston	10	R. W.	1
W. M. Houser	10	A. C. L.	10
A. Hagaman	10	M. S. Brisk	1
Eleanor Laird	10	W. I. Lever	10
Mrs. H. R. Munger	10	Magnus Bank	10
Mrs. R. H. Clarke	5	Miss Markham	2
W. H. Harding	10	Gimcrack	5
A. Brock	5	Sanborn Co. Clerks	5
W. I. Jennings	25	Emile Sacre	182
A. B. Harmon	5	Dewey-Gould Co.	50
Miss J. R. Auchincloss	10	Anonymous	20
C. E. K.	5	E. C. Williams	10
Lily E. Dunn	5	Henry L. Saam	100
F. T. McClintock	25	Anonymous	10
Henry Fuld	10	Mrs. Meyer Mond	5
Elizabeth R. Beckwith	10	Mary Scott	25
		A. B. Holliday	25
		G. W. Coggeshall	7

For Relief of Artists:

The Fund for the Relief of Destitute Families of Artists in France, subscriptions to which should be made payable to and mailed to the Harriman National Bank, 527 Fifth Avenue, now totals $8,327.87. These additional subscriptions, amounting to $1,362, were acknowledged yesterday:

S. M. Stetson	$5	F. J. Loesch	$10
M. H. Dodge	25	W. C. Hanborough	5
H. M. Clarke	2	Mary H. Elsler	5
New Bedford Art Club	10	C. Josephine Bryce	5
Miss I. Hammond	5	F. H. Brooke	50
W. P. Nelson	10	S. H. Church	5
Mrs. E. A. Loomis	20	W. Woodridge	10
Irene Rockwell	5	M. W. Baldwin	10
A. V. Churchill	5	Monsieur X	25
L. E. Mulready	2	Mrs. E. C. Post	7
F. F. Ayre	100	Arthur I. Merggs	5
James Mears	5	Victor Sorchan	20
Anonymous	5	W. H. Lancaster	5
Anonymous	10	Esther L. Hoyt	10
Henry Clews, Jr.	100	Anonymous	15
Mrs. M. C. Jones	5	Anonymous	1
Anonymous	5	F. Usher De Voll	25
Miss E. D. Sharpe	25	Leonard M. Thomas	50
Henry D. Sharpe	25	George J. Glover	25
Walter E. Kilham	5	Mrs. Ernesto Fabbri	20
A. W. Longfellow	5	Henry Walters	250
M. F. Schiavern	10	George M. Allen	15
Fanny P. Mason	200	Hiram W. Sibley	200

The War Relief Committee, comprising the Misses Elizabeth Marbury, Elsie de Wolfe, Anne Morgan, and Mrs. Walter Farwell, has received donations, at 670 Fifth Avenue, amounting to $3,306. Yesterday the committee sent on the French liner Chicago five cases of goods to the American ambulance at Neuilly-on-Seine, under the direction of Dr. Joseph Blake. Last week a similar quantity was sent to Havre. The committee has received the following subscriptions:

Mrs. Crocker	$200	Mrs. H. C. Frick	$100
Edmund Clark	100	Anna V. Mattrie	3
Miss A. L. Westcott	100	James Deering	50
F. Gottschalk	25	Mrs. Lillian Aymar	2
Mrs. S. C. Migrue	10	Mrs. C. Platt	35
Miss France	10	Lawrence Perkins	300
Miss Hanscom	25	Mrs. C. Perkins	30
Mrs. Gibbs	10	Susan Day Clark	15
Mrs. Peter Larsen	500	Mrs. F. P. Mason	200
Mrs. A. D. Pratt	50	Mrs. Codman	200
Mrs. A. Dodge	5	Annie C. Stebbins	10
C. A. Coffin	100	Mr. Jefferson	25
Mrs. Kidder	5	Mrs. A. V. H. Kimberly	27
B. Colby	10	Henri Bendel	100
Mrs. Eldridge	5	Louise A. Chubb	10
Mrs. Knapp	5	Mrs. S. D. Clark	1
Mrs. R. E. Westcott	8	Miss Kilmartin	5
Mrs. A. Winston	2	L. J. Duplan	10
Mrs. Mura Bayley	10	Mrs. P. Whitehouse	40
Mrs. J. M. Menendez	10	Mrs. M. Sears	40
Mrs. D. Tenney	3	Mrs. C. Sagi	50
Mrs. D. Almy	9	Miss C. L. Platt	85
James Speyer	200	Russell Perkins	250
Mrs. Wm. Whitlock	7	Elisabeth D. Woodbridge	5
Mrs. Greenough	30	Edmund Clark	55
Harriet T. Forest	10	Mrs. D. M. Curtiss	14
Mrs. N. E. Newberry	20	Mrs. C. L. Boardman	3
Mrs. F. W. Halstead	5	R. I. N. G.	$10
F. H. Baldwin	25	W. M. C.	2
Emily C. Minor	5	A friend	2
Sarah Fullon	5	Blank	1
Eleanor B. Ives	25	M. C. R.	25
Harriet C. Wilhee	1	James Gee	20
S. B. Floyd	10	Arthur A. Thomas	10
		Walter Scott	20
		W. C. Hawley	10
		D. M.	25
		C. B. Burr	10
		Glen Wright	10
		Mrs. Clara King	10
		Mrs. F. Kelly	10
		Margaret Brown	5
		C. W. Wagner	5
		Elizabeth M. Colt	50
		J. Conlon	5
		Mabel D. Gardner	3
		H. G. W.	3
		M. P. B. Hazard	25
		Night Compositors	10
		L. F. Cranshaw	20
		L. A. C.	5
		E. P. Hood	10
		A. F. W.	5
		W. B.	1
		Mrs. W. B.	1
		Mrs. A. C. Barstow	5
		C.	2
		C. H. Bowden	3
		A. M.	5

Emma C. Thwisby. 5
Mrs. S. B. Keys. 5
Miss Keys and Mrs. H. C. Hollister 3
Miss K. L. Angur. 1
Sophie K. Rousmaniere 100
Joslin Mfg. Co. 100
J. C. C. 10
H. 1
Clara Amuels 1
M. J. S. 1
W. R. W. 5
E. De K. R. 25
E. Bowchard 1
E. De W. R. 10

The fund for the relief of the women and children of France, contributions to which should be sent to Mrs. Whitney Warren of 16 East Forty-seventh Street, amounts to $23,093.28, of which $100 was received yesterday from the following persons:

T. S. Yought	$5	Mrs. Gay	$10
Ella S. Newell	10	Mrs. F. Houltsan	5
William Salomon	25	Mrs. W. Greenough	30
Mrs. E. F. Hyde	10

A matinée for the benefit of the fund of the British War Relief Association will be given at the Lyceum Theatre on Friday afternoon of next week. The proceeds will be used to purchase field ambulances and to send trained nurses to France and Belgium. Any surplus will be given to the Prince of Wales National Relief Fund. Among those who will appear at the benefit are William Faversham, Burr McIntosh, Beatrice Forbes Robertson, Olive Wyndham, Vivian Rushmore, Margaret Wycherly, Mme. Yorska, David Bispham, Maclyn Arbuckle, John E. Kellerd, Beatrice Herford, Sallie Fisher, and many others.

OLD COLUMBIA TREES DYING

Two Remarkable Yews Transplanted in 1821 Are Doomed.

Columbia is about to lose one of the connecting links between the university of today and the college of 100 years ago. Two old yew trees, flanking on either side the steps leading from 116th Street up across the quadrangle to the library, are dying, in spite of all efforts to save them. Quite a history attaches to the trees, which are wonderful specimens of their kind. They formerly flourished in the Botanical Garden, a site extending from Forty-seventh to Fiftieth Street and between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. The Botanical Garden was granted to Columbia College in 1814 by the State of New York for a botanical establishment to teach this branch of medical science. A former professor of Columbia College, Dr. Hosack, (1795-1811,) had successfully urged such a move.

The Trustees were unable properly to develop and care for the garden, through lack of funds, and in 1821 many of the trees were transferred to the grounds of the New York oHspital at Bloomingdale, the New York Hospital at Bloomingdale, ent site of Columbia University.

ROLLED PIANO IN STREETS.

Singer Demanded Delivery of One at Night and She Got It.

Many persons who passed through Forty-second Street near Fifth Avenue early night before last wondered why a piano was being pushed through the street by four men who looked like hotel porters. The reason was disclosed yesterday at the Biltmore. Mlle. d'Alnert, a young French singer, had needed a piano in order to serve new songs, but every piano in the hotel was in use.

Her distress was so apparent that some one sought the manager. The latter called up a piano store, trusting there might be somebody there he knew. As it happened there was. The manager explained the circumstances. It was explained that it was unusual to send pianos out at night.

"Can't you put it on rollers?" asked the manager. "I'll send enough porters to push it here." And it was done.

SEAS BREAK OVER LUSITANIA'S BRIDGE

Capt. Dow Regrets Lack of Kaiser's Power to Command the Winds "Be Still."

ASTOR AND BRIDE ARRIVE

Henry Duveen Thinks Art Suffered Little in Belgium—Three Liners Get In.

Capt. Daniel Dow, R. N. R., of the Lusitania, said when he arrived yesterday from Liverpool that his ship was only twenty hours late through stormy weather, although she was delayed twenty-four hours by fog in the Mersey.

"We left the landing stage, Liverpool, at 3:22 P. M. Saturday, anchored in the river at 4 P. M., and did not get clear of the Mersey until Sunday afternoon. Unfortunately, I am not like the German Emperor and cannot say to the winds, 'Peace, be still,' and be obeyed. So we had to face a stiff northwester off the Irish coast and go at reduced speed. From noon Monday to noon Tuesday was the worst, when the Lusitania steamed only 379 miles. In the middle watch a sea came over the port side of the bridge and smashed the windows, but did not do any serious damage. We had head seas right across to Nantucket."

A number of well-known persons were included in the list of 659 cabin passengers. Vincent Astor returned with his bride and his sister, Alice Muriel, for whom he went over on the Mauretania four weeks ago. He said his mother was taking an active interest in the Red Cross work in England.

Mrs. Astor said that London was very quiet and the only evidence of war were the recruits drilling and the women knitting and sewing everywhere for the soldiers.

Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, who returned from London with his wife, said that he had been to England to deliver a series of lectures to young men. He intends to lecture in New York before returning to his home in Trenton, N. J.

Henry Duveen, head of Duveen Brothers, said he did not think many works of art had been destroyed in Antwerp or any city in Belgium, because the people had ample time to move them away.

Lord Ellenborough arrived on the Lusitania, with his wife, on his way to Canada on personal business. He said he admired President Wilson's attitude of neutrality and intended to follow his example here by not discussing the war.

D. A. Holmes, attorney of the Union Pacific Railroad, said that when he left New York the newspaper bulletin boards were surrounded by hundreds of people, day and night. In London he never saw more than ten persons reading a bulletin outside the newspaper offices. The people appeared to be indifferent, but beneath it all tremendous preparations were going on. An army of 1,200,000 was being drilled and equipped to take the field in the Spring. All the people he met expected the war to last two years.

Three liners arrived yesterday, bringing a total of 2,816 passengers from Europe, including 1,908 on the Nieuw Amsterdam from Rotterdam, 918 on the Lusitania from Liverpool, and 738 on the Patria from Marseilles.

Capt. Jan Baron, R. N. R., of the Nieuw Amsterdam, said he had rough weather from the English Channel to Nantucket Lightship; a succession of southwest and northwest gales with heavy seas.

On the last eastward trip the Nieuw Amsterdam was ordered into Plymouth by the British authorities and held there six days while 1,400 barrels of cylinder oil was unloaded from her hold into lighters. Then she was allowed to proceed to Rotterdam. While in New York a bronze tablet will be presented to Capt. Baron by a committee representing the 2,500 American refugees brought over on the Nieuw Amsterdam from Rotterdam on Aug. 17.

The tablet will be placed in the companionway leading to the dining saloon opposite the portrait of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland.

TO KEEP DOWN TAX RATE.

Service Board Asks for Capital Stock to Pay Engineers.

At the request of the financial officers of the city, who are anxious to keep down the tax rate, the Public Service Commission held a special meeting yesterday to ask that the cost of its engineering force, engaged on the construction of the new subways, should be paid for by capital stock.

Since last March this force has cost the city about $3,583,000. Ultimately, this sum will be charged up to the cost of the new subways, and will consequently have corporate stock issued to take care of it. At present, however, it has been met by revenue bonds, which would have to be discharged from the revenue of the city next year, and would consequently involve the raising of the tax rate. To avoid this, the commission has asked that corporate stock to meet this amount be issued immediately.

CITY BREVITIES.

James B. Ricketts of Astoria was killed yesterday by a fall from the abutments of the New York Connecting Railroad near the Shore Road on the Long Island shore of the East River.

Leo Reynolds, a chauffeur, of 522 Tenth Avenue, was arrested by Detective Young of the Second Branch yesterday on suspicion of knowing something about the robbery on Thursday of $3,750.25 by taxicab bandits from two clerks of John T. Stanley, a soap manufacturer at 642 West Thirtieth Street.

On his third arrest for speeding Allen A. Thompson of 249 Garden Street, Brooklyn, was fined $100 yesterday by Magistrate House.

A special meeting of officers of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society will be held at Temple Emanu-El on Sunday, Nov. 15.

The Silk Association of America decided yesterday to hold a Silk Exposition in this city at an early date to promote American-made goods.

The Ninety-ninth Street station of the Columbus Avenue elevated will be opened at noon today.

Reuben Hartzberg, who was shot at his home by three men on Friday evening, lived at 385, not at 332, Pearl Street, Brooklyn.

Contributors to the Montefiore Home will hold their annual meeting at the home on Nov. 8.

The new dispensary of the Hospital for Deformities and Joint Diseases at Madison Avenue and 123d Street will be dedicated on Tuesday.

LET US BE YOUR ALMONER.

The aims of the A. I. C. P. are as follows:

To relieve distress by providing immediate temporary relief without red tape or formality for any man, woman or child.

To reduce dependence by supplying the real needs of the poor in their homes and helping them to help themselves.

To reduce poverty by combating the immediate causes that produce dependency.

To study the fundamental causes of poverty with a view to promoting social betterment.

To prevent sickness by fighting for a pure milk supply; for better housing conditions for the poor; for the prevention of tuberculosis and other preventable diseases.

To save lives by providing medical treatment for sick babies and mothers; by sending mothers to our convalescent home and by instructing parents in baby and child care.

We solicit the support of all who indorse these aims.

Send contributions to Robert Shaw Minturn, Treasurer, Room 210, 105 East 22d Street.

NEW YORK ASSOCIATION FOR IMPROVING THE CONDITION OF THE POOR.
CORNELIUS N. BLISS, Jr., President.
R. FULTON CUTTING, Chairman, Finance Committee.

REFUGEE SOCIETY FORMED.

Americans Who Were Marooned in Europe to Make Peace Crusade.

There has been incorporated under the laws of New York an organization to be known as "The American Refugee Society, European War, 1914," American citizens who were marooned in Europe when the war started are being enrolled as members, and R. Dulaney Whiting, 1 Liberty Street, is the temporary Chairman of the organization. Louis Bonaparte May is the acting Secretary.

The society, it is stated, has been formed for the purpose of "recording and perpetuating the impressions and experiences of all those American citizens who were marooned in Europe at the beginning of the great European war." The purposes of the society as given out yesterday are:

To promote and facilitate social intercourse among its members.

To secure and protect the welfare and interests of all in future travels.

To favor and patronize "home industries" in every line of goods "made in America."

To use and encourage the use in every possible way (personally and for household purposes) "cotton cloth goods made in America."

To render diplomatic and financial aid to its members and their descendants who may be in need in a foreign country in the event of war; but mainly

To institute a propaganda against "burdensome armament," and to use our good offices, severally and collectively, in an earnest endeavor to secure "peace among nations."

The Citizens' Committee in London estimated that there were about 100,000 Americans marooned in Europe at the beginning of the war, consequently it is not only our sacred duty, but peculiarly incumbent upon all of our American citizens who have had a foretaste of the horrors of war and can speak from personal experience, to bring and bind ourselves together in an endeavor to accomplish that mighty and ever-desirable purpose "Peace on earth, good will toward men."

Any white person whose name appeared on the list of the American Committee in London or those of any of the American Embassies and Legations in Europe at the time of the outbreak of the war or during the stirring days immediately following is eligible to membership. There are no dues.

CHECK BABIES DURING SHOW

Bronx Movie Theatre Adds Nursery to Its Conveniences.

Not content with establishing as the home of the "movies" one of the largest theatres on all Broadway, New York now has a moving picture theatre in the Bronx which has added a day nursery. At the Westchester Avenue Theatre this newest wrinkle is having a splendid tryout. During the first five days mothers left 258 children between the ages of 6 months and 10 years to be entertained in the nursery during performances.

The nursery is located next to the theatre in a large store, which has been fitted up with a sandpile, three swings, four rocking horses, low chairs, and a corner filled with toys of all sorts, and pails and the other tools of the trade for digging in the sand. There is no chance that these babies will be mixed up by some Little Buttercup, for each child is tagged, a claim check being given to the mother or father.

"In this institution is a boon to mothers of large families is shown by Greek are within Mr. Brennan's range many afternoons and deposits her flock of six, ranging from Lulu, aged 2, to Eleanor, aged 10. While Mother Goldstein takes a looked at the pictures the younger Goldsteins have an equally enjoyable afternoon in the nursery. Not only do mothers avail themselves of this opportunity to shift their burdens, but fathers and big sisters are just as keen for release.

CLERK LEARNS 6 LANGUAGES

Former Employe of Waldorf Spent Spare Time in Study.

If any Yale man wanders into the Hotel Taft now and wants to talk in a classical or a modern tongue that is not his own, all he will have to do will be to ask for the new assistant manager, James Brennan. Italian, Spanish, French, German, Latin, and modern Greek are in Mr. Brennan's vocabulary. For many years he was chief clerk to Mr. Oscar at the Waldorf. Having picked up a little French and German, Mr. Brennan determined he would be able to read the classics, ancient and modern, and his plan was to devote a year to the cultivation of a language. In his hotel work he soon found it an advantage to be able to converse with the employes in their own tongue.

Every time he had a vacation he would spend the entire time in study. Some months ago Mr. Brennan attached himself to the McAlpin, and when the management took over the Claridge and Mr. Merry of Merry & Boomer transferred his residence to the New York hotel, Mr. Brennan was sent to New Haven to assist in the management of the Taft, and it is expected that he will find the classical atmosphere of New Haven thoroughly congenial.

NEW YORK BIRTH RATE LOW.

Health Board Report Shows Steady Decline Since 1908.

According to a report made by Dr. Shirley Wynne, Assistant Registrar of Records of the Department of Health, the birth rate in New York City has shown a decided decline since 1908. The rate was 23.50 in 1908 it was about 29.00. This second rise was due to the more complete notification of births rather than an increase in the actual number of births. The department estimates that from 1908 it has received about 90 per cent. of all birth that have occurred in the city. Since then the number of births reported is accurate. The decrease here is but a reflection of the general decline in the birth rate of the world, Dr. Wynne says.

HEBREW AID APPEAL.

The Charitably Inclined Urged to Help Those Near Them First.

The American Hebrew Aid Society has issued an appeal for help for the poor of New York City, whose condition is aggravated at present by the fact that most business houses have had to decrease their staffs, thus in many cases throwing the only wage earner of a family out of work. Moreover, under present circumstances, it is rarely possible to find situations for the poor who want them.

The society's appeal asks the charitably inclined to "help your immediate neighbor before considering a wider scope for your charity, or assist such societies as this one."

The society's workers, it is stated, receive no remuneration of any sort. Meetings are held on the second and forth Thursdays in each month at the Free Son Building, at 21 West 124th Street, and any one interested in the work is welcomed.

To Relieve Bronx Court Congestion.

At the invitation of the Bronx Bar Association, Presiding Justice Ingraham of the Appellate Division visited the Bronx yesterday and held a conference with Supreme Court Justice Brady, County Judge Gibbs, and a number of lawyers, as to the best methods of relieving the crowded condition of the court calendars. It was said that plans would be begun for the addition of one more Justice of the Supreme Court by Dec. 1. A separate building for the accommodation of the District Attorney, to be finished by May 1, is also proposed.

VOCATIONAL SCHOOL HEAD GOES TO WORK

Director Wirt Arrives from Gary, Ind., and Inspects Buildings.

REPLIES TO SALARY CRITIC

Says He Did Not Seek the Place, and Will Gain Nothing Financially by Taking It.

William Wirt, Superintendent of Schools at Gary, Ind., arrived in New York yesterday morning to begin his work as supervisor of vocational courses in the elementary schools. By a contract made between him and the Mayor and Controller, and approved by the Board of Education, he will receive $10,000 for one year, during which period he will devote one week in each month, or two weeks, if necessary, to the organization of the vocational system in the elementary schools.

His first visit was to the Board of Education Hall, where he went into conference with Associate City Supt. William L. Ettinger, who has been assigned by the Board of Education to vocational work in the elementary schools, and Principals William E. Grady and John E. Wade of Schools 64 and 95, Manhattan, two of the five buildings which have been equipped at an expense of $85,000 for vocational work.

Upon leaving the Board of Education Hall Mr. Wirt went to Schools 64 and 95, where he spent the rest of the day inspecting the work done there. It was nearly 7 P. M. before his work of inspection was through.

To a reporter of THE TIMES Mr. Wirt expressed satisfaction with what had been accomplished thus far, and his belief that the vocational courses would be successfully established eventually throughout this city.

On Monday Mr. Wirt and District Supt. Ettinger will have another conference. At the end of the week they, together with Frank D. Wilsey, Chairman of the Board of Education's Committee on Buildings, and Superintendent of School Buildings Snyder will leave here for Gary.

Mr. Wirt was informed of the fact that at last Wednesday's meeting of the Board of Education, when the matter of his appointment was under discussion, Cornelius J. Sullivan, a member, had expressed the opinion that $10,000 seemed a high sum to pay for what was virtually only twelve weeks' work. Mr. Wirt said he did not consider the pay excessive. He had not sought the appointment, and in accepting it he would be compelled to give up other work that would pay him quite as much. Among the things that he would have to abandon would be the delivery of lectures. As a matter of fact, he said, he would not gain anything financially from the appointment, but at the end of his term would be out his traveling expenses.

As to the nature of his work here, he said he would first inspect the five schools which have been equipped for shop work, &c. When this was completed he would start on a survey of all of the public school buildings in the five boroughs to see how many of them could be adapted to the duplicate school plan, by which two schools may occupy the same classrooms, auditoriums, shops, library, and playground. Mr. Wirt said he believed the system could be established in the newer school buildings without additional cost to the city. The old school buildings would have to come down, and some new buildings would have to be built in sections where the changes in population made it necessary.

DIDN'T EXONERATE BENSEL.

Clark Says Carmody's Version of His Inquiry Is Misleading.

John Kirkland Clark, counsel to the Sullivan Investigating Committee, said yesterday that a statement issued by Attorney General Carmody was misleading, which said that Mr. Clark took up the investigation of State Engineer Bensel's administration after Mr. Whitman had made an investigation in New York County, and that "the result was the complete failure to find any wrongdoing." He said:

"The Sullivan Committee made no investigation whatever of Mr. Bensel's work on the canals. It did summon Mr. Bensel as a witness and gave him an opportunity of stating his answer to the charges made by Gov. Glynn's own investigator, James W. Osborn, who had accused Mr. Bensel of being criminally negligent in expending and wasting $1,000,000 in 1912 for worthless repairs on the highways.

"Mr. Bensel, following his previous refusal in New York County to appear before the Grand Jury without receiving an immunity bath, refused to testify before the Sullivan Committee unless there too he received such immunity bath. This the committee declined to allow."

The presentment of the Grand Jury in New York County said Mr. Clark made it evident that the Grand Jury was morally certain that there was wrongdoing and that if competent evidence could have been obtained to prove the facts, criminal proceedings would have been instituted.

NEW RESPITE FOR TONGMEN

Governor Reprieves Condemned Chinese Murderers Till Dec. 7.

Eng Hing and Lee Dock, the two Chinese tongmen who were sentenced to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing Prison during the week beginning tomorrow for the murder of Lee Kay in Chinatown in 1912, have won a second respite. The Governor granted a stay until the week beginning Dec. 7.

Acting Warden Weed had set Thursday for their execution, and D. J. Hickey, Secretary to the prison, had all arrangements made to send out the official invitations.

The Rev. Father William E. Cashin, Catholic chaplain of Sing Sing, under whose religious care the Chinamen have been since their commitment, brought the good news to the death house. The Chinamen grabbed his hands and thanked him profusely, believing that his prayers had gained the respite.

ADMITS AIDING BIG FORGERY.

Goodwin Says He Stole Stock for $75,000 Laclede Gaslight Fraud.

Charles Goodwin, a clerk, now in the employ of the Norwich Union Fire Insurance Company, walked into the District Attorney's office yesterday afternoon and made a confession, which, it is probable, will have much to do with clearing up forging of Laclede Gaslight Company certificates valued at more than $75,000, in connection with which George H. Lowden, a broker, was arrested on Wednesday and is now held in $20,000 bail.

Goodwin, although he asserts that he never knew Lowden, mentioned the name of a man who, it is known, was well known to Lowden. He said that this man had in his possession ten certificates of 100 shares each of the Laclede Gaslight stock, which Goodwin turned over to him.

In November, 1911, Goodwin was employed by the Standard Trust Company, which was then the fiscal agent of the Laclede Gaslight Company. He confessed to Assistant District Attorney Du Vivier that he stole ten shares of the Laclede Company at that time and took them uptown, where he met the man who knew Lowden.

It was intended, Goodwin confessed, to issue the certificates, and the necessary rubber stamps for the countersigning were brought uptown at the time to Lowden's friend. For some reason the plan fell through and the certificates were never put on the market. Goodwin thought at that time that they had been destroyed. Goodwin confessed that he forged the indorsement of William C. Cox of the Guarantee Trust Company, which later became the fiscal agent of the Laclede Company.

Goodwin said that he first had an intimation that the forged certificates had been "uttered" when he read of Lowden's arrest in the newspapers. Then, he told Mr. Du Vivier, he went directly to the District Attorney's office and gave himself up.

Lowden is still in the Tombs, having been unable to furnish bail. The charge against him is the "uttering" of one of the certificates, which was deposited with Ehrich & Co., of 67 Exchange Place on an account which was opened by Lowden in the name of a friend, whom he described as "Frank A. Weston."

'GRAND JURIES HUNGRY LOT'

Official Says They Always Visit Institutions at Meal Time.

Deputy Charities Commissioner Henry C. Wright had this to say yesterday regarding the activities of the Kings County Grand Juries, particularly in regard to their visits to the department institutions on Blackwell's Island.

Kings County Grand Juries are the hungriest ones in the entire city. The figures prove it and the appearance of the Kings County indicters and presentment-makers at meal time is pretty regular. It may be the air over in Brooklyn; anyway there is something peculiarly strange, for once a month the panel, twenty-three members strong, visit the Kings County Hospital—quite by accident—at meal time.

I don't know whether this custom originated, but nobody seems to have had the courage to upset it. Some cunning jury, way back, must have conceived the idea, although it is absolutely futile, just as Among the things that would have to abandon would be the delivery of lectures. As a matter of fact, he said, he would not gain anything financially from the appointment, but at the end of his term would be out his traveling expenses.

As to the nature of his work here, he said he would first inspect the five schools which have been equipped for shop work, &c. When this was completed he would start on a survey of all of the public school buildings in the five boroughs to see how many of them could be adapted to the duplicate school plan, by which two schools may occupy the same classrooms, auditoriums, shops, library, and playground. Mr. Wirt said he believed the system could be established in the newer school buildings without additional cost to the city. The old school buildings would have to come down, and some new buildings would have to be built in sections where the changes in population made it necessary.

RECORD N. Y. U. ENROLLMENT

5,140 Students Registered for the Nine Degree-Giving Schools.

The final figures on the year's registration at New York University were made public yesterday. The enrollment of 5,140 students for the nine degree-giving schools of the university is a gain of 10½ per cent. over the figures for last year and establishes a new record. This gain is mainly due to the large increase in the School of Commerce, which this year has 2,433 students, a net gain of 880 over the number registered at the beginning of last year's school term.

Not a single school has a smaller registration. The Veterinary College, the smallest school of all, has the honor of the largest relative gain.

HYGIENE OF LOFTY CLIMBS.

Physicians Recommend Mountaineering for the Sedentary.

In several respects mountain climbing is a peculiarly wholesome form of athletic sport for the large number of persons whose vocations are sedentary. The indoor life which these persons commonly lead and the protection from even the slightest rigors of climate which their mode of housing and places of work afford them are more than likely to render them oversensitive to the extremes of weather. It is for precisely such unexposed persons that an occasional trip to the highlands and an alpine excursion has most refreshing recuperation and stimulus in store, according to physicians.

OLD COUNTRY EDITOR WINS HONOR AT LAST

Governor of Kentucky Makes Cooper a Colonel Just When Times Seemed Darkest.

SERVED PEOPLE FAITHFULLY

Aged Newspaper Man Asked Some Younger Man to Take His Paper and Give Him a Job on It.

Here is a little story of contemporaneous human interest, and quite as human as it is contemporaneous and interesting. The characters in it are a Kentucky Governor and a Kentucky editor, either of whom may be the hero, and a New York writer, who merely files in to make the story complete.

Down yonder in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky, as far back as 1865, a civil war Union veteran, Spencer Cooper, started a newspaper at Hazel Green, Wolfe County, a hamlet of probably 250 persons, in a county miles and miles away from railroads, steamboats, telephones, wireless, Broadway, and most other luxuries of modern progress. His was the only newspaper in a dozen or more counties, and it was mighty hard sledding in a community which had never known a newspaper and where subscribers, when he succeeded in capturing them, didn't know whether they would get their paper each week or the entire fifty-two copies at the end of the year. As for advertising, it came chiefly from the outside, and the amount received didn't make the mail carrier's horse sway-backed.

Cooper stuck to it through thick and thin—the labor was thick and the returns were thin—and in time The Hazel Green Herald became an institution of the mountains at $2 per year, invariably in advance—the everlasting joke of country editors. When Max O'Rell wrote his "Jonathan and His Continent," he mentioned The Herald as one of the two distinctively American newspapers he had seen in this country, but the mention did not add materially to the circulation of The Herald, because the great majority of its constituency had never heard of Max O'Rell.

As time passed and Eastern Kentucky developed educationally to the point of having a newspaper in almost every county, The Herald kept bearing down on the Archimedean lever which moves the world, and Hazel Green grew to be a city of nearly 400 people. During these lean years, and still lean, The Herald has been fearlessly Democratic, the Kentucky mountaineers being largely Republican to the contrary notwithstanding. But for all his wheel-horse service to his party, Spencer Cooper received no political preferments. Nor is it a matter of record that he made any great effort in that direction. He was an editor for the people's sake, and the people didn't worry. That was enough if people didn't worry for his paper and paid for it when they felt like it. More than any other help to him was his wife, an invalid from rheumatism for many years, whose hands helped him when they could and whose heart upheld him. He referred to her in print as his better seven-eighths, and she was all and more than that.

A year or more ago Mrs. Cooper died, and the editor's prop was gone. Her loss was more than he could bear in silence, and he cried out in his bereavement and sorrow through his paper. Sympathy was extended to him from all parts of the State, for he and his labors were known to all his fellow-editors. Editing his paper, doing most all of the work of printer, pressman, editor, reporter, business manager, and "devil," came with greater difficulty after this, for he was bearing as well the burden of declining years and ill-health, and a month ago he announced in The Herald that he wanted some good man to take the paper off of his hands and let him work about the office in any capacity for which he had the strength. A bare maintenance was all he asked, and the new man could have the paper when the old one had finished his work. For the veteran editor, after all his years of labor, the prospect was not roseate.

Now comes the writer, one who lives in New York, who had began his writing career along the border of that same land of illiteracy, and for the past few years has been writing various matters of local interest for The Herald as a slight token of his appreciation of his friend Cooper's perseverance. On Oct. 10 of this year he sent to The Herald a column article on a subject of farming interest, and in concluding it spoke of his regret that the editor felt himself no longer able to continue his fight. Other things he said to cheer the waning warrior, and as he finished a great thought came to him—how to get

Apartments to Let

Unfurnished.
Thirty cents a line.

East Side.

18 West 31st St., near 5th Av.—Washington Square section: refined and exclusive; only one apartment left: parlor floor, 7 rooms and bath, steam heat; fine kept property; must be seen to be appreciated. To lease $60. E. Franklin, 19 East 69th St. Plaza 1659, or Superintendent on premises.

92d, 74 East.—Four light rooms, all improvements: top floor; private house: one or two adults; $30-$40, including electricity.

57th, 47 East.—Two rooms, bath; redecorated; finest neighborhood; conveniences; leases preferred.

1,761-1,765 Madison Av., (corner of 116th St.)—Six large light rooms and bath; steam heat and hot water; $20-$25.

New, elegant apartments, 3 and 4 rooms, latest improvements. Marmion Apartments, East 176th St., corner of Mohegan Av.

48 EAST 89TH ST.,
southeast corner Madison Av.—Light apartments of 7, 8 rooms; $800, $960.

48 EAST 88TH ST.,
southeast corner Madison Av.—Light apartments of 7, 8 rooms; $800, $960.

1,911 Anthony Av., (corner Tremont.)—Six rooms and bath, all improvements; very large, light, attractive rooms; $37.

109-111 East 58th St.—Two large, light rooms and bath in elevator apartment; chamber-maid service included. In rent.

50th St., 51 East.—Two rooms and bath, top floor, $25. Fred T. Darcy Co., Agents, 646 Madison Av.

12th, 126 East.—Five rooms; bath, elevator, steam heat, hot water. Janitor.

104 East 124th St.—Seven large light rooms and bath; $20-$23.

1,787 Madison Av., (near 118th St.)—Seven rooms, bath; steam heat and hot water; $31.

Wellemere, s. e. cor. 77th St. and Broadway. 2, 7, 9 rooms, $1,000, $1,750, $3,000.

New Jersey.

At beautiful Rose Villa, (Rosseville,) 7 handsome rooms; complete improvements; parquet floors; white electrolizers; 3d Av., 2d floor; 4 minutes to station; only $32.50; immediate possession. Feist & Feist, 738 Broad St., Newark, N. J.

Boarders Wanted

Twenty cents a line.

East Side.

5TH AV., 7.—Exceedingly attractive, freshly furnished; electricity, steam; private baths; refined service.

5TH AV., 47, (12th St.)—Attractive steam heated room; private baths; table board.

7TH AV., 2,053, (123d.)—Comfortably furnished rooms; steam, hot water; home cooking.

11TH, 29 EAST.—Desirable large, small rooms; heated; running water; excellent table.

15TH ST., 210 EAST.—Desirable large and small rooms; home cooking; telephone; references.

19TH, 116 EAST, (Gramercy Park.)—Connecting and single room; southern exposure, sunny dining room; telephone; references.

21ST, 145 EAST, (Gramercy Park.)—Sunny rooms; private bath; steam; excellent table.

21ST ST., 47 EAST.—Handsomely furnished suite; running water; excellent table.

34TH ST., 117-119 EAST.
Large and small rooms, with board.

36TH ST., 148 EAST.—Desirable rooms; private bath; table board.

39TH ST., 342 Lexington Av.)—Cheerful, large rooms; excellent meals; private.

61ST, 158 EAST.—Large, small rooms; excellent board; telephone; Jewish house.

76TH ST., 32 EAST.—Attractive rooms; furnished, unfurnished. Ideal location; board optional.

IRVING PLACE, 71.—Large room, private bath; one small room. Gramercy 1978.

MADISON AV., 486.—Sunny third-floor room, with alcove, large closets; references.

MADISON AV., 165.—Large, small rooms; private bath; one block 34th Subway.

THE PARK.—Beautiful rooms; private baths; $10. Washington Square, 101 Waverley Place.

West Side.

12TH ST., 39 WEST.—Large, small front, sunny rooms; bath adjoining; excellent table.

16TH, 7 WEST.—Large room, private bath; excellent table; telephone; billiard room.

16TH, 20-22 WEST.—Large room; private bath &c.; unexcelled board; telephone.

23D, 404 WEST.—Massachusetts lady offers attractive rooms; unexcelled home cooking; reasonable.

26TH, 303 WEST.—Large, small desirable rooms; all conveniences; excellent table; moderate.

WEST 37TH ST., NO. 45.
Large and small rooms; private bath; table guests.

54TH, 54 WEST.—Newly decorated rooms, private baths; electricity; references.

56TH ST., 62 WEST.—Desirable rooms with board; table board; references required.

68TH, 14 WEST.—Desirable double, single rooms; private baths; Southerners accommodated; reasonable.

69TH, 151 WEST.—Private house; bachelor apartment; 2 elegantly furnished rooms, bath; all modern conveniences; board optional; exceptional opportunity.

69TH, 153 WEST.—Attractive rooms, connected, and private bath; table guests accommodated

69TH, 102 WEST.—Attractive large room; also single room; steam; board optional.

70TH, 170 WEST.—Large southern exposure room, private bath; excellent home table; parlor dining; single room.

71ST ST., 125 WEST.
TABLE D'HOTE, 50C.
Served every evening 6-8. Double rooms, private baths; single rooms; steam heat, electric lights; table board; reasonable.

71ST ST., 62 WEST.—EXCELLENT BOARD; DOUBLE AND SINGLE ROOMS; PRIVATE BATHS; STEAM HEAT; ELECTRICITY. TABLE BOARD REASONABLE.

71ST ST., 130 WEST.—Accommodations for gentlemen; refined homelike.

72D, 122 and 131 WEST.—Attractive rooms and suites for families; private bath; superior table; references; table guests accommodated.

72D ST., 233 WEST.—Double and single room; southern exposure; superior cuisine.

73D, 142 WEST.—Large and small rooms; handsome suite; board optional; references.

73D, 236 WEST.—Desirable rooms, with board; references exchanged.

73D, 251 WEST.—Two minutes Subway, "L" express; double, single rooms; American family.

73D, 275 WEST.—Large and single rooms; every convenience; references; excellent board.

74TH, 131 WEST.—60th year; large, small rooms; baths; excellent table; references.

78TH, 139 WEST.—Second floor front, sunny room, with board; references.

78TH, 127-129 WEST.—Large, small rooms; exceptional table; parlor dining; reasonable.

78TH ST., 174 WEST.—Large front room, second floor, with board; references.

78TH, 249 WEST.—Desirable rooms; parlor dining; references.

77TH 301 WEST.—Select pension for those seeking refined surroundings; exquisite suite in rose velvet carpets, velour draperies, bedroom suite French gray furniture; private bath; also second floor large, sunny front and rear room, equally elegant furnishings; superior home table; electricity, phone.

77TH ST., 123 WEST.—Single room; table boarders; parlor dining; reasonable.

78TH, 164 WEST.—Newly decorated large room; excellent board; table guests; references.

78TH, 127 WEST.—Exclusive private house; large, sunny rooms; shower; gentlemen; rent reasonable.

78TH, 157 WEST.—Nicely furnished large and medium rooms; board; all conveniences.

79TH, 114 AND 132 WEST.—Unusual and attractive "pensions," with large parlors, tearoom, and lounge; Southern cooking; white maid service; private telephone; booklet on request.

79TH, 121 WEST.—Rooms, with board; private bath, refined, quiet; newly renovated throughout.

79TH, 132 WEST.—Large and small rooms; electricity; excellent table; Subway, "L."

80TH, 123 WEST.—Homelike accommodations, en suite or single; hot water supply; convenient Subway, elevated; excellent cuisine; references.

80TH ST., 106-108-110 WEST. THE HOUSE RICHARDS.—A satisfactory home for refined people; high-type furnishings; pure food; wholesome, generous, well-balanced meals; references.

80TH, 129 WEST, (Kenilworth.)—Light, attractive rooms; excellent cuisine; table guests.

80TH, 134 WEST.—Desirable large, sunny room; also medium room; generous table.

80TH, 143 WEST.—Unusually large room; private bath; one small room; references.

81ST, 129 WEST.—Large front room, southern exposure, bath room floor; also small; moderate.

81ST, 133 WEST.—Large room, second floor; table guests; telephone 8510 Schuyler.

82D, 54 WEST.—Newly decorated large and small rooms; private baths; references.

82D, 66 WEST.—TABLE GUESTS; good, substantial home cooking.

82D, 5 WEST.—Suite, singly; private bath; modern improvements; table unsurpassed; references.

83D, 17 WEST.—High-class Jewish house, home surroundings; excellent table; table guests.

83D, 55 WEST.—Large, small, newly decorated rooms, bath; southern exposure; board optional.

83D ST., 11 WEST.—Newly decorated rooms; private bath; home comforts; board optional.

85TH, 250 WEST.—Cheerful rooms; good meals; comfort with refined surroundings. Yo.une..

85TH, 26 WEST.—Suite of two rooms and bath; also one other room; private house; homelike; good table; references.

85TH ST., 125 WEST.—Large, sunny front room; bath; parlor dining; private house.

86TH, 114 WEST.—Large and small rooms; references.

86TH, 28 WEST.—Desirable large room, private bath; smaller rooms; excellent table.

87TH, 70 WEST.—Handsome rooms, excellent cuisine; refined neighborhood; references; table guests.

88TH, 344 WEST, (Riverside Drive.)—Large room; private bath; excellent board; Southern family; references. Tel. 6051 Schuyler.

88TH ST., 261 WEST, (Near West End.)—Desirable rooms; private family; few boarders.

88TH, 180 WEST, (Hell 2.)—Cozy room for home loving gentleman; excellent board.

89TH, 276 WEST.—Unusually attractive large, small rooms; steam, electricity; table a specialty.

91ST, 25 WEST.—Desirable large front room; southern exposure; refined surroundings; parlor dining.

93D, 20 and 31 WEST.—Large front room, adjoining bath; also other rooms; good meals; parlor dining, table guests.

93D, 252 WEST.—Beautiful large connecting rooms; private bath; excellent meals; references.

93D ST., 109 WEST. (Riverside, 89.)—Large, small rooms; private bath; new, desirable.

94TH, 60 WEST.—Attractive second floor; parlor dining; Southern cooking; table guests.

94TH, 14 WEST.—Large, small rooms, newly decorated; parlor dining; moderate; telephone.

94TH, 16 WEST.—Newly renovated rooms; electric lights; excellent cuisine; telephone; reference.

94TH ST., 147 WEST.—Desirable room; parlor dining room; exceptional table; telephone, electricity.

94TH, 142 WEST.—Satisfactory home for refined people; wholesome food; table guests.

96TH, 14 WEST.—Attractive rooms; private baths; superior table board; Park; references.

96TH, 54 WEST, (near Central Park.)—Good rooms and board; terms moderate.

97TH, 202 WEST.—Large, outside, sunny room; lavatory; steam; electricity; attractively furnished; private family; block Subway, "L"; references essential; high-class elevator apartment. Roger.

101ST ST., 215 WEST, (corner Broadway.)—Rooms, with lavatory, adjoining bath; suitable for two; home cooking. Maslin.

104TH, 150 WEST.—Agreeable man to make fourth in congenial family, where comfort is first consideration. Apt. 31. Telephone 3832 Riverside.

104TH, 245 WEST.—Desirable sunny room; homelike surroundings; gentleman; private. Tenzen.

104TH, 61 WEST.—Large, small rooms; running water; private bath suites; parlor dining room; $7 up; table board.

104TH, 257 WEST, (West End Av.)—Sunny rooms; private house; board; references.

105TH, 76 WEST.—Spacious front room; also suite; exceptional table; reasonable; Southerners.

106TH, 300 WEST.—Corner West End Avenue, near Broadway and Riverside; elevator apartment; private bath; refined family will rent large room suitable for one or two gentlemen; excellent table; home comforts. Glover.

107TH, 14 WEST.—Two front rooms, in suite, with board; excellent location; private family, Schendel, Apt. 9.

112TH, 605 WEST, (near Broadway.)—Beautiful sunny rooms; excellent meals. Apartment 51.

113TH, 560 WEST.—Two large rooms, private bath; excellent cuisine.

113TH ST., 508 WEST.—Jewish family has large, light room, connecting with bath; suitable for two; German cooking; references exchanged. Apt. 42.

114TH ST., 100 WEST.—Large front room for one or married couple. Elsner.

116TH, 321 WEST.—Clean, large, sunny room; German table. "L"; reasonable. Hauweide.

122D, 129 WEST.—Newly decorated rooms; American family; table guests; Subway; reference.

121ST, 266 WEST.—American family; large, small rooms, near bath; good table; telephone; subway, "L."

129TH ST., 601, (corner Broadway.)—Outside front room, immaculately clean; next to shower bath; in modern apartment. American family of two gentlemen. Apartment 61.

140TH, 455 WEST.—Large room; electricity; large closets; bath; unexcelled cuisine.

141ST ST., 597 WEST.—Large, sunny alcove room; excellent board; steam heat; telephone.

142D, 633 WEST.—Handsome rooms, overlooking Hudson; continuous heat, hot water; excellent table; telephone; select private house; references.

143D, 515 WEST.—High class elevator house; large, attractive room; all conveniences; small private American family. Apartment 22.

145TH ST., 349 WEST.—Newly renovated rooms; established 15 years; excellent cooking; reasonable.

145TH, 613 WEST.—Large rooms, southern exposure; running water; good meals; telephone.

145TH ST., 623 WEST.—Room, with board; all home comforts; corner Riverside Drive, near Subway station; moderate.

145TH ST., 623 WEST.—Room with board; all home comforts; corner Riverside Drive; near subway station; moderate.

Attractively furnished room and board; adjoining bath; small private family; Hudson River; 25 minutes from 42d St.; couple preferred. Phone Yonkers 824W.

BROADWAY, 2,403.—Beautiful warm, sunny room, overlooking Hudson; running water; small, congenial family; excellent table; couple, $20; $14 for one; single room, adjoining bath $8. Apt. 15.

CENTRAL PARK WEST, (near 82d.)—A lady having beautiful private home wishes few paying guests; every comfort. T 109 Times.

FRENCH FAMELY of culture offar board and French conversation at $15 a week to person appreciating refined home; no other boarders; references exchanged. Answer Mme. Roche, 102 West 90th.

GENTLEMAN can find suburban home with refined private family; large, sunny room; steam heat; best home cooking; fifteen minutes from Herald Square. Comfort, S 80 Times.

PRIVATE family residing in best residential section of Brooklyn, half hour from Times Building, desires lady or gentleman to occupy room with board, or room only; references required. Box M 307 Times Downtown.

RIVERSIDE DRIVE, (near 157th St. Sub.)—American mother and son want business man to board; exclusive apartment; home of culture and refinement; personal attention given; home cooking; references. L. W., 119 Times.

RIVERSIDE DRIVE, 147, (corner 87th St.)—Beautifully situated and exclusive home, for refined people; many improvements; elevator and garage; few desirable rooms left; references exchanged. Mrs. Stein, Schuyler 9087.

RIVERSIDE DRIVE, 549.—Elegant rooms, with superior board; beautiful home; $10 to $15 weekly. Telephone 4960 Morningside. Payne.

RIVERSIDE DRIVE, 645.—Attractive home, private family, for refined gentleman. Apt. 42.

ST. NICHOLAS AV., 265, (124th.)—Large front room; excellent board; private family. Spitz.

THE EVELYN LODGE.
Charming Winter residence; lovely view. Beautiful rooms; most excellent cuisine; every modern convenience; unusually attractive. Single, $10; two, $17 up, with meals.
71 Central Av., St. George, S. I.

THE WOODBURY, 856 RIVERSIDE DRIVE, two blocks north of 157th Subway; country house; wonderful grounds. Audubon 4412.

WEST END AV., 531, (86TH ST.)
Comfortable double room; steam heat; also single; references required; table guests entertained.

Board Wanted

Twenty cents a line.

REFINED, young American couple, with three-year-old son, desire two rooms and table board with private family; references exchanged. Address Confidential, N 34 Times.

WANTED—By a lady in private family, (American,) large, light room, board; house on elevator apartment; east side; 60th to 84th St.; references exchanged. Address E. L. P. care of S. Berdit, 883 Park Av.

GENTLEMAN, musical, desires board with refined private family; preferably Washington Heights; state terms. Address H. M., 302 Times Downtown.

WANTED—Room board, vicinity 110th St., west, by young lady (Jewish) studying singing. Albert, 501 West 110th St.

BOARD and room in a strictly private family, below 42d St., 3d to 7th Av.; state terms. N 60 Times.

YOUNG MAN desires board with working class family; west side; between 14th and 34th St. M. W., 370 W. 35th.

Country Board

Thirty cents a line.

New York City.

EDGEHILL INN, SPUYTEN DUYVIL ON THE HUDSON.
An all-year-round home for a few guests; beautifully situated, combining country charm and city comfort; tennis, bowling, and billiards; convenient to riding paths; transit facilities, Subway and New York Central. Address Miss Mary Huntington.

Staten Island.

ST. GEORGE HEIGHTS.—Superior accommodations; large grounds; overlooking bay; five minutes from ferry. 51 Hyatt St., New Brighton.

Westchester County.

In a quiet country home, charmingly situated, near school, Post Office, and church; 45 minutes from Grand Central Station; two or three boarders will be received for the coming Winter; references given and required. Address Port Office Box 116, or telephone 320W Scarsdale, N. Y.

Fall and Winter engagements now made; large, well-heated house, large dining room; beautiful river views; unexcelled home cooking. Highcliff Hall, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y., 2,161 Yonkers.

Beautiful home, Chester Hill; every comfort, excellent table; best references. 153 Prospect Av., Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

Long Island.

Permanent home for chronic semi-invalids; excellent table; nurse and physician in attendance; suburbs; $10 up. M 301 Times Downtown.

New York State.

FARVIEW COTTAGE.
An ideal spot for rest and recuperation in the most picturesque part of Dutchess County; four miles from Millbrook and two miles from Verbank; high location; fine view; hot water heat; running water, bath and toilets; rates $8 to $12. Address Millbrook, N. Y. R. F. D. 29. Box 43.

Adirondacks.—Accommodations for few adults; private cottage; one Winter equal to three Summers for persons convalescing; weekly, $10 up. Write for particulars, Pine Hill House, Lake Clear Junction, N. Y.

CENTRAL VALLEY, N. Y.—Private family; all modern conveniences; will accommodate parties week ends or longer; references. Box 324.

New Jersey.

THE MARLBOROUGH.
"30 Minutes from Broadway."
Cor. Arlington Av. and William St., EAST ORANGE, New Jersey.
We have only eight suites left for Winter booking. Reservations can be made on deposit of $10. Suites consisting of parlor, one or two bedrooms and a private bath, with unsurpassed dining room, from $25 to $30 per week for two persons. Exclusive and homelike; beautifully furnished and warm and comfortable. Take Lackawanna at Hoboken. One block from East Orange Station 380 trains per day. W. T. READY, Prop.

A HOME IN THE WOODS for the Winter.—In the midst of 12 acres of pine, fir, and oak; located in a warm nook on the hillside; extensive views; large, cheerful rooms; 10 minutes from station; 1 hour out; $10-$18, double. The Pudding Stone Inn, Boonton, N. J.

One large room, with private bath; one room, convenient for bath; gentleman; terms moderate for Fall and Winter; ideal location; all modern improvements; real, comfortable Winter home; convenient to station; 32 minutes on train. Arnold. H 29 Times Annex.

Commuting distance; refined surroundings; excellent table; meals optional; home comforts; telephone; reasonable. Kerby, 162 Anderson Av., Palisade, N. J.

Smythe Farm.—Furnished rooms with or without board quiet place for any one needing rest and care; moderate rates. Box 3, West Summit, New Jersey.

NURSE'S country home; quiet, refined, convalescing and elderly people; moderate. S. Straley, Newton, N. J.

Nurse's country home; quiet, refined, convalescing and elderly people; moderate. S. Straley, Newton, N. J.

Montclair.—Commuting distance; attractive rooms; good table; central; all conveniences. 104 Valley Road.

Connecticut.

Enjoy health-giving Fairfield, Conn.; Le Cottage Rosemary; most comfortable, modern, accessible.

Georgia.

JONES ST., 215 EAST, Savannah, Ga.—Desirable; refined bath, cold and hot; close public park; $3.50 week; gentlemen.

Furnished Rooms

Twenty cents a line.

East Side.

5TH AV., 25.—Splendid rooms; suitable two; references, breakfast optional; fine location.

13TH ST., 211 EAST.—Two connecting rooms, $10; small, $4; electricity, telephone. Benson.

16TH, 206 EAST.—Large studio room; running water, steam heat phone; private house.

19TH ST., 134 EAST.—Sunny suite; two large rooms, bath; telephone; gentlemen; references.

24TH ST., 120 EAST.—Large extension room, southern exposure, private bath; refurnished house.

29TH, 46 EAST.—Large, small rooms, private baths; beautifully furnished; conveniences; telephone.

30TH, 201 EAST.—Large, light room; elevator; steam; telephone; bath; $4 week; housekeeping, 50 cents extra; Jewish. Apt. 65.

34TH, 123 EAST.—Large, small rooms; private bath; beautifully furnished; conveniences; telephone.

36TH, 38 EAST.—Extra large front room for two or three business people; references.

40TH, 120 EAST.—Beautiful furnished rooms and parlor floor for business purpose or for doctor; table guests accommodated.

40TH ST., (04 Park Av.)—Room with bath; private house; select gentlemen.

42D, 4 EAST.—Desirable rooms for bachelors; hot water heat; electricity, telephone service; breakfast optional; references exchanged.

43D, 16 EAST.—Gentleman, tired hotel life, can find homelike, comfortable room, private bath; breakfast if desired; references.

45TH ST., 16 EAST.—Handsome room; private bath; square room; breakfast optional; reference.

46TH, 165 EAST.—Large parlor bedroom; running water; heat; accommodations; private. Heron.

53D, 65 EAST.—Elegant large, small rooms; select private house; all conveniences; refined surroundings; moderate. Tel Plaza 1304.

55TH, 83 EAST.—Excellent large, airy rooms with southern exposure.

60TH, 134 EAST.—Comfortable rooms; suitable for one or two; shower bath.

62D, 211 EAST.—For refined gentlemen, elegantly furnished room; Jewish private residence.

79TH ST., 134 EAST.—Dainty furnished rooms; modern conveniences; private residence.

82D, 130 EAST, (Near Museum.)—Large rooms, suitable two; private house; family two; steam heat; $3, $7. Ackermann.

IRVING PLACE 14.—Front rooms; box spring beds; tiled bathrooms; absolute cleanliness.

LEXINGTON AV., 662.—Two large, handsomely furnished rooms; bath; every convenience; also back parlor; refined private home. (Owner.)

LEXINGTON AV., 588, (62d.)—Homelike; bath; breakfast; scrupulously clean; references; select; telephone.

MADISON AV., 175.—Handsomely furnished large room; private bath; breakfast optional; references.

MADISON AV., (In Sixties.)—Entire floor private house. Leland, 40 West 35d.

MADISON AV., 766.—One or two room apartments with bath; reasonable. Buss.

West Side.

9TH ST., 17 WEST.—High-class bachelor apartments; one, two rooms; electricity; telephone; references.

9TH ST., 26 WEST.—Large and small rooms, all conveniences; telephone; references.

9TH, 37 WEST.—Elegant large room, private bath; also single; convenient cars.

11TH ST., 35 WEST.—Large front room; all conveniences, homelike apartment; reasonable.

11TH, 146 WEST.—Front room; hot and cold water; private family; gentlemen.

12TH ST., 41 WEST.—Attractive rooms; running water, telephone; references; clean, quiet house.

12TH, 34 WEST.—Newly opened, decorated, private bath, also en suite; steam, electricity; telephone.

21ST, 234 WEST.—Business women, couple; sunny connecting rooms; modern elevator apartment; breakfast or kitchen privilege; references. Rand 22D, 477 WEST.—Superior rooms; refinement, privacy; accessible location; references; most reasonable.

32D ST., (between Broadway and 5th Av.)—Rooms, with private bath, $10 to $12 per week; same price for one or two persons in room. Hotel Aberdeen.

32D ST., Hotel Strand, Just East of Broadway.—Room, with private bath, $9 and $10 per week; parlor bedroom and bath, $40 per month; same price for one or two persons.

37TH ST., 17 WEST.—Room and bath; also small single room; references. Tea room. 953 Greeley.

40TH ST., 58 WEST.—Large, exceptionally pleasant room with bath; private house; gentlemen.

40TH, 66 WEST.—Large room, adjoining bath, in high-class private house; references required; bachelors.

46TH, 28 WEST.
Large, small rooms; all conveniences; gentlemen.

47TH ST., 1 WEST.—Large, fine room, private bath; electricity, steam; telephone; excellent house.

47TH, 41 WEST.—Excellent single front room, steam heated house; all conveniences; select.

47TH, 56 WEST.—Handsome, large room, private bath; steam, electricity, phone; single rooms.

49TH ST., 45 WEST.—Attractive parlor floor; other rooms; refined home; all conveniences; references.

50TH ST., 43 WEST.—High-class house offers accommodations to gentleman; rooms hot, cold water; baths; breakfast if desired.

52D, 236 WEST.—Nicely furnished double, single rooms; hot, cold running water; private house; telephone.

53D, 62 WEST.—Parlor floor; equipped doctor's office; large rooms; private bath.

55TH, 329 WEST.—Nice, clean, well-heated room; quiet, respectable house; telephone.

56TH ST., 314 WEST.—Large front or back parlor; private bath; telephone; small room.

57TH, 280 WEST.—Large light rooms, modern improvements; subway, "L;" references. Hammond.

57TH, 356 WEST.—Attractive rooms; all improvements; quiet, refined house; near Subway.

58TH, 23 WEST.—Large rooms; nicely furnished; private bath; electricity; telephone; kitchenette; excellent location; $10, $11, $12.

58TH ST., 126 WEST.—Room with alcove; also large, sunny room; modern conveniences; select location; telephone.

64TH, 10 WEST.—Nicely furnished parlor and bedroom; heat, bath; gentleman. Coyle.

68TH, 58 WEST.—Comfortable single rooms; gentlemen; unlimited hot water; bath adjoining.

68TH, 70 WEST.—Handsomely furnished large rooms; private bath; also small rooms.

69TH ST., 50 WEST.—Attractive, sunny rooms; private bath; electricity; 1 flight up; gentleman.

69TH, 108 WEST.—Large room, private bath, telephone; meals optional; ladies preferred.

69TH ST. AND BROADWAY.—The Nevada; tastefully furnished large, sunny corner rooms, swell apartment. Phone 685 Columbus. Apartment 1E.

70TH.—Refined couple offers to gentleman of culture daintily furnished quiet room, running water, shower bath; home comforts; no others. Apply Don B., 2,030 Broadway.

70TH ST., 105 WEST.—Nicely furnished room, back parlor, kitchenette, private bath.

30 WEST 70TH ST.
Elegantly furnished second floor, with private bath; also fourth floor; smaller rooms, with bath; all conveniences; board optional.

70TH, 125 WEST.—Handsomely furnished rooms; parquet floor; rugs; hot water; heat; gentlemen.

70TH, 134 WEST.—Large, comfortable rooms, bath adjoining; continuous hot water; references.

70TH, 109 WEST.—Exceptionally clean, attractive rooms; all conveniences; near transportation; investigate.

70TH ST., 117 WEST.—Nicely furnished medium rooms; suitable gentleman; small rooms; phone.

70TH, 262 WEST.—Pleasant, sunny, well-heated room.

70TH ST., 136 WEST.—Beautiful south room; private bath; also small room; $3.50.

71ST, 220 WEST.—Just opened, newly decorated and furnished large, small rooms; beautiful home; hot water; telephone; reference.

71ST ST.—Delightful home for one gentleman; large room, private bath. Columbus 10106.

71ST, 208 WEST.—Suite, parlor, bedroom, bath; beautifully furnished; modern private house; references.

71ST, 206 WEST.—Large front room; attractively furnished; also smaller room; modern, private house; reference.

71ST, 71 WEST.—Attractive room, single or double; continuous hot water; reasonable.

70TH, 138 WEST.—Room; private bath; steam heat; electricity; private house; gentleman.

71ST ST., 57 WEST.—Sunny hall rooms; continuous hot water; gentlemen only; $3.50; references.

71ST, 282 WEST.—Beautiful front corner room; suite suitable two, three gentlemen; electricity; phone.

71ST, 142 WEST.—Large room, one flight, containing strictly private bath; southern exposure; suitable for two gentlemen. Call mornings.

71ST, 118 WEST.—Attractive large front rooms; electricity, steam heat. Columbus 2685.

71ST, 147 WEST.—Private family offers single rooms or suite; meals optional.

71ST, 305 WEST.—Desirable rooms, large, small; bath; $7, $6. 9987 Columbus.

72D, 147 WEST.—Just opened, beautiful sanitary rooms running water; new furniture; baths, toilets; abundant heat; telephone; references.

72D ST., 47 WEST.—Two front rooms; bachelor only; southern exposure; use of kitchen and bath; $40 per month.

72D, 123 WEST.—Physician's suite; large, small rooms; bachelors only; owner's residence.

72D, 53 WEST.—Light, heated rooms; elevator apartment; call today; $5. Sly.

72D, 268 WEST.—Parlor, running water, business, living, large, medium, front rooms.

73D, WEST, (between Broadway and West End.)—Attractive rooms, southern exposure; strictly private family; gentlemen; references exchanged. Y 237 Times Annex.

73D, 182 WEST.—Large, sunny room, adjoining bath; electricity; private house; gentleman.

74D, 177 WEST.—Desirable rooms; dressing room; all conveniences; breakfast; Subway; reference.

73D, 158 WEST.—Large and small, attractively furnished rooms; electricity; Subway express.

73D, 272 WEST, (Between Broadway and West End.)—Double, medium, single; showers; electricity; references.

78D, 164 WEST.—Attractive large room; steam heat; near Subway; private house. Heron.

73D, 136 WEST.—Desirable rooms, with board; references exchanged.

73D, 169 WEST.—Magnificent large and small rooms; well furnished; all conveniences.

73D, 173 WEST.—Room, suitable one, two; single room; references.

73D, 255 WEST.—Large, sunny room, with or without bath; also small room.

74TH, 165 WEST.—Comfortably furnished room adjoining bath, single or double; private house; elegant neighborhood; near Subway.

75TH ST. WEST.—Private residence; charming suite; singly; permanent; electricity. Phone Schuyler 7793.

76TH, 116 WEST.—One large room, private house; electricity; steam heat; references.

76TH, 24 WEST.—Bay window; front; one flight; all conveniences; also small room.

75TH, 50 WEST.—Attractive rooms, single or double; adjoining bath; private home.

76TH, 100 WEST.—Large and small rooms; hot and cold water; large closets; convenient to bath; elevator service; telephone; $3 and $5.

76TH, 119 WEST.—Attractive, large room, adjoining bath; also medium-sized room; running water.

76TH, 171 WEST.—Large second-story room, southern exposure; running water, shower; electricity.

76TH, 148 WEST.—Large and medium-sized rooms, bath adjoining; electric light; telephone.

76TH ST., 125 WEST.—Attractive, sunny front rooms; exclusive neighborhood; breakfast; telephone; references.

76TH, 100 WEST.—Small rooms, newly furnished; $2.50 week; elevator. Henderson.

76TH, 168 WEST.—Exceptional, large rooms, with dressing room; single; $3 up.

77TH, 126 WEST.—Unusually handsome rooms, bath adjoining; front parlor, all conveniences.

77TH ST., 102 WEST.—Handsome double room, private bath; select home; parlor. 10082 Schuyler.

77TH, 156 WEST.—Exceptionally large, warm room; southern exposure; next bath; reference.

77TH, 160 WEST.—Newly decorated large, small rooms; gentlemen; also physician's office.

77TH, 194 WEST.—Newly, well-furnished large and medium rooms; private baths; beautiful parlor; reasonable.

77TH, 141 WEST.—Large, well-furnished room, bath adjoining; electricity; (private family.)

77TH, 100 WEST.—Large front room; second floor; smaller; kitchenette; telephone; moderate.

78TH, 112 WEST.—Newly furnished large, small rooms; every convenience; pleasant home. 10074 Schuyler. E. K. Haight.

78TH, 160 WEST.—Ready for occupancy, newly-furnished house; handsome large, small rooms; southern exposure; reasonable; Subway, elevated.

78TH, 169 WEST.—French lady has large, small room; homelike; telephone. 3d bell.

79TH, 100 WEST.—Large, well-furnished room; block Subway; adjoining bath; gentlemen.

79TH, 173 WEST.—Beautifully furnished rooms; private bath; southern exposure; Subway, telephone.

79TH, 328 WEST.—Large room; private bath; electric light; near Subway; references.

79TH ST., 213 WEST.—Delightful large room; southern exposure; running water; Subway; references.

79TH, 225 WEST.—Beautiful, large room; private bath; electric light; Subway; references.

80TH, 163 WEST.—Nicely furnished rooms; refined family; Subway, "L." Vaughan.

80TH, 126 WEST.—One large room; private bath; medium room; every convenience; references.

80TH, 165 WEST.—Beautiful parlors; private entrance; running water; small rooms. Coldwell.

80TH, 122 WEST.—Ideal home for bachelors; electricity; all modern conveniences; references.

80TH, 144 WEST.—Elegant large and medium rooms; private baths; excellent table.

81ST, 251 WEST.—Business man or woman can find REALLY DESIRABLE and well-furnished rooms in high-class elevator apartment, connecting or single; southern exposure; near Subway and elevated.

81ST, 160 WEST, (The Ingleside.)—Neatest, prettiest; large front room, beautifully furnished; smaller, $3; breakfast optional; telephone. Fuller.

81ST, 119 WEST.—Rooms; private house; concessions to reliable parties; references.

82D, 63 WEST.—Beautiful large room; private bath; southern exposure; other rooms, board.

82D, 134 WEST.—Large room, adjoining bath; running water; reasonable rates; gentlemen.

82D, 140 WEST.—Attractive rooms; large, small; reasonable, telephone; private house; references.

82D ST., (West of Broadway.)—Desirable front room; bath; gentleman. Schuyler 6194

82D ST., 138 WEST.—Well furnished suite or single; private house; telephone, elevator.

82D, 115 WEST.—Attractive, large, sunny rooms; also back parlor; private bath.

83D, 63 WEST.—Desirable large, small rooms; clean, homelike; references; private family.

84TH, 29 WEST.—Sunny outside room; apartment; refined private family; references. Ochs.

84TH, 25 WEST.—Newly furnished, handsome room; near Park; private references. Porter

84TH, 51 WEST.—Desirable, cheerful, steam-heated, large room; $3; refined surroundings.

84TH, 113 WEST.—Handsomely furnished, cheerful rooms; bath, closets, telephone; reasonable. Hanson.

84TH ST., 43 WEST.—Large, front room; private house; suitable two; adjoining bath.

84TH, 133 WEST.—Rooms, suitable one or two; housekeeping if desired. Guldemeister.

85TH, 201 WEST.—Large, comfortably furnished room; elevator apartment; breakfast; reasonable; reference.

85TH, 207 WEST.—Attractive medium light room, improvements; block subway; $5. Lyons.

85TH, 130 WEST.—Private house; large, small; home surroundings; central location; telephone.

837 WEST 86TH.
Rooms, southern exposure, near Riverside; Subway.

86TH, 306 WEST.—Handsomely furnished rooms; private dwelling; Subway station, telephone; references.

86TH, (537 West End Av.)—Attractive rooms; convenient subway, "L;" exclusive neighborhood.

87TH, 350 WEST.—Well-furnished suite, with bathroom, $8; private house. Telephone 0379 Schuyler.

87TH, 352 WEST.—Private family, owning home, will rent good single room, next to bath, to gentleman; $6.

87TH, 174 WEST.—Large double rooms, one single; running water; refinement. Bruns.

87TH ST., 319 WEST.—Handsome large room; gentleman; private family; references.

88TH, 107 WEST.—With private family; 3-room suite; independent entrance; suitable for two or three; phone. Hammond.

88TH, 181 WEST.—Beautiful large rooms; private bath; all conveniences; breakfast optional.

88TH, 108 WEST.—Well-furnished room; private family; gentlemen preferred; references. Riverside 7018.

88TH, 172 WEST.—Beautiful large room, all conveniences; private house; suitable for two.

88TH, 259 WEST.—Attractive, large front room suitable for two; electricity; phone.

90TH, 312 WEST.—Handsomely furnished rooms, en suite; bath; single; electricity; steam. 5258 River.

91ST, 46 WEST.—Large room, suitable for two gentlemen; telephone; references.

92D, 214 WEST.—Large, small rooms; $5 up; elevator. Apartment A, fifth floor.

93D, 148 WEST.—Newly decorated house; sanitary, large rooms; refined surroundings; reasonable.

93D, 139 WEST.—Delightful parlor, doctor, dentist; high-class studio; refined neighborhood.

93D, 251 WEST.—Parlor rooms; southern exposure; heated; electricity; board optional. Crane.

94TH, 262 WEST.—Elegantly furnished front room; running water; private house; gentlemen.

94TH ST., 315 WEST.—American lady offers room, elevator apartment, private family. Gill.

94TH, 306 WEST.—Large front room; bay window, running water; quiet, refined house.

94TH ST., 306 WEST.—Beautiful room; all modern conveniences; strictly private family; gentleman. Apt. 18.

94TH ST., 20 WEST.—Attractive back parlor; bright and sunny; private bath; references.

95TH, 122 WEST.—NEWLY FURNISHED, BEAUTIFUL ROOMS; HOT WATER; EVERY CONVENIENCE; GENTLEMAN.

95TH ST., (232 Central Park West.)—Private house; few exceptional rooms; references.

95TH, 151 WEST.—Bachelor's suite; private bath; kitchenette, electricity. Telephone 2511 Riverside.

95TH ST., 255 WEST.—Exceptionally well-furnished front room; breakfast optional. Linn.

95TH, 171 WEST.—Medium, front; running water; refined business lady only. Post.

95TH, 219 WEST, (near Riverside.)—Front room; all improvements; $7. Apartment 52.

96TH, 231 WEST.—Handsome room, facing Broadway; running water; board optional. Apt. 7-C.

9 WEST 96TH ST.
Large, smaller rooms; breakfast; owner's residence.

97TH, 64 WEST.—Attractive rooms; well kept; reasonable. Telephone 3249 Riverside.

97TH ST. WEST.—Single room; modern apartment; Jewish family. Riverside 7380. Apartment 3.

97TH ST., 141 WEST.—Large and medium sized room

Business Opportunities
Forty-five cents a line.

A WELL-KNOWN AND SUCCESSFUL NOVELTY MANUFACTURER DESIRES TO MEET ONE OR TWO GENTLEMEN OF MEANS, WHO ARE THOROUGH BUSINESS MEN, AND WELL VERSED IN THE HANDKERCHIEF BUSINESS; THE OBJECT IS TO ORGANIZE AN EXCLUSIVE NOVELTY HANDKERCHIEF CONCERN; THE ADVERTISER IS THE OWNER OF ONE OF THE BEST-EQUIPPED NOVELTY PLANTS IN THIS COUNTRY, SITUATED IN GREATER NEW YORK, AND EQUIPPED TO MANUFACTURE ARTISTIC NOVELTIES ADAPTABLE AS CONTAINERS FOR HANDKERCHIEFS FOR MEN, WOMEN, AND CHILDREN; THE IDEAS AND NOVELTIES ARE ENTIRELY NEW AND VERY UNIQUE; ALL MADE BY AUTOMATIC MACHINERY, WHICH INSURES LOW COST AND NO COMPETITION; REPLIES MUST COME DIRECT TO THE PRINCIPALS, GIVING EXPERIENCE AND AMOUNT OF CAPITAL THAT THEY CAN INVEST. SUCCESSFUL, R 308 TIMES DOWNTOWN.

Powder mills are running 18 hours per day and cannot supply demand; foreign Governments offering orders to reliable concerns for years ahead.
Thorough, practical, experienced powder manufacturer starting in business for himself would like to have several business men join him; bank references furnished; no brokers. Address Opportunity, S 58 Times.

WILL BUY
Merchandising or manufacturing business that can be made profitable through an efficient canvassing agents' organization and through extensive advertising. No store, no schemes, no undeveloped patents. Only business will be considered which shows some evidence of life. LEGITIMATE, 157 Times.

COMMERCIAL SECURITIES CO., 1,482 Broadway, cor. 43d. Bryant 6295. Businesses anywhere financed, sold quickly, partnerships arranged, loans negotiated.

FOR SALE.
Profitable hardware store; bargain, New Jersey drug store; owner died.
Grocery, market, bakery; owner retiring.
Well-located furnished rooming house.
Five small lots, Alberta, Canada.
Profitable Long Island boarding house.
Hair-dressing-manicuring parlor.
Millinery shop, good business; bargain.
Partner, pat. portable chart index.
Partner, bldg. material supply business.

A Partner Wanted.—An active working partner who has $2,000 to invest in a growing, small newspaper in a small city; money to be invested in machinery, therefore, secure. Address Established, P. O. Box 412, Plattsburgh, N. Y.

Restaurant, near Penn. Station, shopping district; good business, low rent; opportunity seldom offered. S 101 Times.

Business Notices
Forty-five cents a line.

Fireproof windows and fire-escape work; Labor Department violations removed. J. Eisenbudt, 212 East 52d St., Phone 3683 Plaza.

Looking for pearl necklace from a private party that is a bargain, also graduated. Slater, 853 5th Av.

Detectives.

Malts Detective Bureau, 261 Broadway. Investigations. Telephone 5647 Barclay.

Jewelry.

Diamonds at Wholesale.—Bought, sold, and appraised. M. J. Averbeck, 10 Maiden Lane.

Laundries.

SANITARY work; quick service; collections. Custom Laundry, 870 9th Av. Col. 4829.

Physical Culture.

PROF. ATTILA AND MISS BAUMANN, leading athletic instructors and exponents of Naturopathic Culture for both sexes; all ages. Strength doubled in one course. Undue obesity reduced without dietary restrictions. 42 West 38th St. Greeley 6236.

Business Loans.
Forty-five cents a line.

Manufacturers, wholesalers, outstanding accounts financed, notes discounted. Kutyn, 194 Bowery. (Bank Building.)

Manufacturers' and wholesalers' outstanding accounts financed, notes purchased. Nassau Finance, 119 Nassau.

Make loans outstanding accounts, notes, bank books. Security Finance Co., 149 Broadway.

Printing and Multigraphing.
Forty-five cents a line.

PRINTING—SAME DAY—PRINTING.
1,000 bond letterheads, $1.25; books, booklets, catalogues, folders, labels, cards, everything; call and see our plant; every time high-grade work; "Same Day" service; inquiries requested on large or intricate work anywhere; ideas suggested that aid your business; forceful literature written; small orders prompt attention; two linotypes working night and day; cylinders, automatics, art and engraving departments; sketches submitted while you wait; cuts made. New York's most complete Printing Plant 1910 Gramercy. Call's, (C. Fowler,) 390 6th Av., (23d-24th,) over Childs, New York.

A FIRST-CLASS
letterhead, bond, $1.50 per 1,000; envelopes, $1.10 per 1,000; other printing low prices. Suite 613, 108 Fulton St.

MULTIGRAPH letters, 300, $1.30; 1,000, $1.75; 10,000, $9; prompt. Phone Beekman 5350. G. R. Weatherford, 116 Nassau. Room 1,005.

Help Wanted, Female
Twenty-five cents a line.

ADDRESSER.—Temporary work for good writer. Penmanship, R 312 Times Downtown.

A BEAUTIFUL YOUNG LADY wanted, who is willing to permit her photo to be used in connection with advertising perfumes and toilet products; splendid remuneration and permanent employment with old-established, high-class house; state age, education, and present employment, if any. S 63 Times.

AMBITIOUS WOMEN WANTED TO HANDLE A PRIVATE CORSET BUSINESS; PREVIOUS BUSINESS EXPERIENCE NOT NECESSARY; THOROUGH TRAINING GIVEN. APPLY PERSONALLY OR BY LETTER TO THE SPIRELLA COMPANY, 306 FIFTH AV. WHEN AN APPOINTMENT WILL BE MADE FOR AN INTERVIEW WITH THE MANAGER.

BOOKKEEPER.—Competent double entry, having knowledge of controlling system. Address Bookkeeper, 208 Broadway, Brooklyn.

COLORISTS, EXPERIENCED IN COLORING WITH AIR BRUSH; NO OTHERS NEED APPLY. CAMPBELL ART CO., ELIZABETH, N. J.

COOKS, $30, $70; chambermaids, Protestant waitresses, nurses. Kernaghan's Agency, 244 6th Av.

GOVERNESS, German, wanted, alternate afternoons for child of six years. 126 West 76th St., between 2 and 3 o'clock.

HEARN,
West 14th Street,
requires,
MILLINERS,
capable of making entire hats.

HOUSEKEEPER wanted for prominent New York club; must live on the premises; only those who have had hotel or similar experience need apply; state qualifications; high-class references required. Address G. T., Box 35 Times.

HOUSEKEEPER wanted for small bachelor flat; young woman to keep house for two business men; state wages, age, nationality. S. S., Box N 96 Times.

HOUSEWORKER.—Young woman, with some experience for general housework in apartment. Call at 412 West End Av., Monday between 9 and 11.

LADIES—You can increase your income by selling our novel hat bag; ideal Christmas gift; liberal commission "Handi" Hat Bag Co., 5134 Chestnut St., West Philadelphia, Pa.

MILLINERY DESIGNER:
To one who is fitted by taste and knowledge of fine hats to assume the responsibility of STYLE for one of New York's leading houses, the finest position in America is open.
The advertiser believes that the person she will eventually engage for this position is now employed in a similarly responsible capacity.
Communications addressed are personally opened by the head of the concern, and thorough assurance is given that this will be confidential.
HATS, 148 TIMES.

MILLINERY DESIGNER:
The curtailment of style from Europe has necessitated one of the leading houses who have hitherto depended solely upon Paris for style to seek
AMERICA'S LEADING DESIGNER.
The purpose of this advertisement is to find out who that person is.
Positive assurance that your communication will be held in strictest confidence.
PREMIER, 171 TIMES.

NEAT, CAPABLE WOMAN wanted, to take lady out in wheel chair. For particulars address Rider, 103 Waverley Place, Hotel Earle.

PANTRY WOMAN wanted, (white,) and assistant to woman pastry cook on family hotel; advancement for conscientious worker. Address Hotel Alvord, East Orange, N. J.

PHOTOGRAPHER.—Experienced photographic saleswoman; good position and splendid future for American woman of good address and pleasing personality. Marceau, 258 5th Av.

SALESWOMAN. — Experienced saleswoman; splendid opportunity for rapid advancement; good future for American woman of good address and pleasing personality. Apply Marceau, 258 5th Av.

SPANISH young woman wanted, well educated, bright and capable of writing Spanish grammatically, having good knowledge of English, to translate fashion descriptions for magazine. Apply Foreign Department, Butterick Building, New York.

THREE WOMEN wanted, of GOOD APPEARANCE and PERSONALITY, to act as general solicitors and engage others; HOURS to YOUR CONVENIENCE; strictly commission; big opportunity for CUMULATIVE INCOME. Apply Marton, Salon Cosmetiques, Room 320, Longacre Building, Broadway and 42d St.

WELL educated young German girl wanted, not over 25 years of age, capable of correctly translating English into German, may find a desirable position as junior editorial assistant by applying Foreign Department, Butterick Building, City; letters should be written in German and state what business experience if any applicant has had.

Instruction.
Thirty cents a line.

A.—A.—THE NEW YORK SCHOOL OF SECRETARIES.
Three Months' Course. Students Subject to Probation. Graduates Registered.
AEOLIAN HALL, No. 27 West 42d St.
V. M. WHEAT, Director.

A SPECIAL COURSE FOR TRAINING SECRETARIES,
at a reliable school. Registered and Inspected by the Regents of the State of New York. Day and evening session. Individual instruction; monthly payments. PRATT SCHOOL, 64 West 45th St. Known throughout the country for thorough work.

COLLEGIATE SECRETARIAL SCHOOL, 38 West 32d St., New York.—Secretarial training for educated students; short, thorough, complete course. 7281 Madison Square.

GOVERNMENT JOBS OPEN TO WOMEN, $65 to $150 month; list positions open, free. Write immediately. Franklin Institute, Dept. 679 S., Rochester, N. Y.

STENOGRAPHY.—I am one of five sisters, each earning $25 or more per week. I had a good position four months after my first lesson. I can do the same for you. Speed lessons $5 monthly. Miss Elliott, N 42 Times.

Employment Agencies.

A. A. HOFMAYER, Reed & Barton Building, 226 5th Av., Ninth Floor. (Agency.)—Reliable servants for permanent and temporary situations.

Help Wanted, Male
Twenty-five cents a line.

ADVERTISING SOLICITORS to handle a supreme metal novelty on commission basis. Only thoroughly experienced men need apply between 12 and 2 Monday.
Room 407, 114 East 28th St.

ARTIST, oils, of ability; state training and where exhibited. G 27 Times Annex.

B. ALTMAN & CO.,
Fifth Avenue—Madison Avenue,
34th and 35th Streets,
have vacancies for several energetic young men, experienced in all branches of a large upholstery department. Apply by letter only, stating previous experience.

BOOKKEEPER wanted; opening for reliable man, who understands advanced bookkeeping methods; good handwriting essential; records must bear closest investigation; salary to start $18; reply in own handwriting, giving complete facts, stating age, experience, and whether married. Address Live Bookkeeper, Box R 314 Times Downtown.

BOOKMAN.—Experienced bookman in one of New York's largest book stores; one thoroughly familiar with the filling of orders in new and standard books; experience in buying very essential; position requires one of executive ability; good salary and commission; confidential; give full particulars. N 93 Times.

BOY of presentable appearance wanted in large fire insurance office; high school graduate preferred; excellent opportunity for advancement; state previous experience, if any; and salary expected. M 295 Times Downtown.

BOY wanted; opening for a polite, well-bred boy, who has finished school, to act as errand boy and to grow up in the business; give full particulars in own handwriting. Address Reliable Boy, Box R 311 Times Downtown.

CARETAKERS.—Two respectable colored families to act as caretakers; rent free. Apply second floor, 276 Grand St., between 10 and 12 A. M. Joseph Salinger.

COOK, USEFUL MAN.—Couple wanted for country; woman for cook and laundry work; man generally useful inside and out; wages, $30 a month. P. O. Box 165, Mountain Lakes, N. J.

DRAUGHTSMAN.—Mechanical draughtsman familiar with brass mill machinery preferred; state salary and experience. S 74 Times.

MANAGER for billiard parlor and bowling alley. Henry, 202 West 12th St.

MIDDLE-AGED MEN of good appearance and character can obtain lucrative employment on big commission basis; references required. Apply between 10 and 3. Standard Registry Company, Room 607, 347 5th Av.

OFFICE BOY wanted who has had a high school education. Address William, S 82 Times.

OFFICE MAN.—Wanted, thoroughly experienced office man residing in Brooklyn; Answer, giving fully experience references, salary earned, and age. Y 222 Times Annex.

OPTICIAN.—Rare opportunity for refracting optician. Apply by letter, giving particulars. Delerue's, 42d and Broadway.

PHOTOGRAPHIC OPERATOR.—Experienced young operators for permanent position. Marceau, 258 Fifth Avenue.

SALESMAN.—A COMPETENT AND CAPABLE SALESMAN FOR THE BUILDING AND PLUMBING TRADES OF NEW YORK CITY; PERMANENT POSITION IS OFFERED TO THE RIGHT MAN. ADDRESS, GIVING FULL PAST EXPERIENCE, WHICH WILL BE RECEIVED IN STRICT CONFIDENCE; SALARY. P. O. BOX 1,826, NEW YORK OFFICES.

SALESMEN.—Salary and commission; we are about to issue a book, which will be of intense interest to every intelligent and patriotic man, woman, and child of the hundred million in this country; success certain; write for territory; state experience, references. M 280 Times Downtown.

SALESMEN.—Abraham & Straus, Fulton St., Brooklyn, need several linesmen of experience in silk department; also several thoroughly experienced salesmen for the lace curtain department. Apply to Superintendent, Subway floor, east building.

SALESMAN. — Manufacturer will pay $20 commission daily to traveler who can carry side line of two new small metal specialties and sell dealers a bill of goods amounting $250 for $100 cash. Burrows, 74 Washington St., New York.

SALESMAN.—Kimono salesman, with references, acquainted with the best department store trade; territories New York and New England States. Address Fashion Kimono Co., 88 E. 22d St., city.

SALESMEN wanted to carry our line of advertising signs, calendars, and novelties; line unsurpassed; commission basis; references required; write today. MAHON NOVELTY CO., KENTON, OHIO.

SALESMEN.—Salary and expenses paid; must positively have high-class selling experience and present excellent appearance; give age, full experience, salary expected, first letter. N 56 Times.

SALESMAN wanted on ladies' plush and pile fabric coats for the city; good opportunity for the right man; commission. Hyman Levin, 151 West 26th St.

SALESMAN, WHOLESALE POULTRY AND VEAL; MUST UNDERSTAND THE BUSINESS; STATE SALARY. S 87 TIMES.

SALESMEN.—Experienced in cloaks and suits; inexperienced need not apply; salary. 1,071-3 B'way, B'klyn.

SALESMAN.—Experienced, with good infant cap trade; commission. K. L., Times, Harlem.

Help Wanted, Male
Twenty-five cents a line.

SALESMEN WANTED.—A LARGE PRINTING HOUSE OF THIS CITY, WITH A THOROUGHLY MODERN AND COMPLETE EQUIPMENT, PRODUCING PUBLICATIONS, MAIL ORDER CATALOGUES, HIGH-GRADE CUT AND COLOR WORK, &C., REQUIRES THE SERVICES OF SEVERAL SALESMEN; ONLY THOSE NEED APPLY WHO AT PRESENT ARE COMMANDING A TRADE OF AT LEAST $60,000 AND UPWARD A YEAR, AND WHOSE CHARACTERS ARE OF THE BEST; TO SUCH PARTIES UNUSUALLY FAVORABLE PROPOSITIONS WILL BE OFFERED BY A WELL-KNOWN FIRM OF HIGH STANDING IN THE TRADE. BOX N 97 TIMES.

SALESMAN for domestic laces and novelties; must be experienced and well acquainted with jobbing and manufacturing trade; state experience; commission basis. Y 269 Times Annex.

SOLICITOR wanted, an experienced solicitor of advertising who is in a position to handle live trade papers on a 25 per cent. commission; part or whole time; chance for a stayer to work into a valuable connection; no triflers. Apply between 12 and 1, Room 504, 196 Broadway.

SOLICITORS.—Men of good address to solicit wealthy clienteles on a proposition of exceptional merit; men who are conversant with fire and burglary insurance; condition prepared; liberal commission basis. Call, 45 Nassau St., Room 815.

STAMPERS—Abraham & Straus, Fulton St., Brooklyn, require hand pressers in bond and color work. Apply in person or by mail to Superintendent.

STENOGRAPHER for commercial house; state age, experience, and salary expected. S 76 Times Downtown.

SUPERINTENDENT for high-class apartment house; engineer preferred; good executive; must have previous experience; $80 per month. Reply, stating references. S 79 Times.

WANTED—To engage a gentleman who has a large circle of friends and wide personal acquaintance among reputable citizens in Brooklyn, New York, Long Island City, and Flushing; his duties will be to introduce a salesman representing a responsible Fifth Avenue, tailoring establishment and later possibly represent us; to the man who can fill such a position we will pay a good salary and expenses; give business experience, age, and references; none but men of excellent reputation will be considered. S 95 Times.

YOUNG MAN wanted, bright, who wants to be a salesman; good opportunity in sales and missionary work; state age, height, and salary. Y 246 Times Annex.

YOUNG MAN, 19 to 20, to assist; must have some knowledge of typewriting. Apply 9 A. M. Monday, box office of Carnegie Hall.

Instruction.
Thirty cents a line.

A.—A.—THE NEW YORK SCHOOL OF SECRETARIES.
Three Months' Course. Students Subject to Probation. Graduates Registered.
AEOLIAN HALL, 27 WEST 42d STREET.
V. M. WHEAT, Director.

COMPLETE SECRETARIAL COURSE; also stenography, bookkeeping, &c.; individual instruction by specialists day or night; penmanship lessons by appointment, and improvement guaranteed, civil service; see catalogue. WILMERDING INSTITUTE, (Founded 1858.) Broadway, at 72d St.

EARN WHILE LEARNING MECHANICAL dentistry; NUMEROUS POSITIONS WAITING; growing demand everywhere for mechanical dentists; pleasant, steady, high-paying occupation; taught practically, rapidly, and thoroughly; mornings, afternoons, or evenings; NEW concise method, most highly approved; individual instruction; easy payments. THE DENTAL SCHOOL OF AMERICA, (Dept. T,) 25 West 45th St. Tel. Bryant 2946.

GOVERNMENT POSITIONS in Post Office, railway mail, and other branches are good. Prepare for "exams" under former U. S. Civil Service Secretary-Examiner. Booklet H. 11 free. Write today. Patterson Civil Service School, Rochester, N. Y.

MECHANICS.—Mechanical drafting, blue print reading, mathematics, machine tool designing; day or evening; monthly payments allowed. Send catalogue, or call, Kovarch's Engineering College, 343-345 Lenox Av.

MEN.—Great demand; a splendid income is assured the mechanical dentists of today; positions secured, $20 to $50 and upward weekly; taught thoroughly in 3 to 6 months; day or evening; no book study; easy payments; earn while learning; start now. Beedee's Dental Trade School, Dept. T, 489 5th Av., near 42d. The first school recognized by the Dental Profession. Est. 1892.

SALESMEN wanted; experience unnecessary; easy work, big pay; write (or call) for particulars and large list of openings offering opportunities to earn $100 to $500 a month while you learn. Address National Salesmen's Training Association, Dept. 1,001C, Candler Building, Times Square, New York.

SALESMANSHIP.

10 well recommended young men wanted to learn salesmanship evenings in a way that affords opportunity to earn money while receiving instruction. Write for appointment, W. W., 127 Times.

YOUNG MEN.—Learn photography in all its branches, and photo engraving; earn $50 to $100 weekly as a motion picture photographer. Earn $20 to $50 weekly as a studio operator, newspaper, or war photographer, official Government photographer, photo engraver, or start your own business; practically without capital. Full term, 1 to 3 months. No book study. Practical demonstration. We assist you to positions; $10 starts you. Earn while learning. Men and women call or write. New York Institute of Photography, 1,269 Broadway at 32d. Directed by E. Brunel.

Agents Wanted
Thirty-five cents a line.

Eight dollars a day if you sell only two sets. New automobile accessory. Nothing like it on the market. Every car needs it. Easily applied. Others are making big money. Indorsed by big business men. Costs you only one dollar to start. Get busy this minute. Send your name, address; and at least one reference. We want the best men we can get. Will make it worth their while. Brown, 321 Citizens' Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio.

USE YOUR SPARE TIME to build up a mail order business of your own. We help you start for a share in profits; 27 opportunities. Particulars free. Opportunities Exch., Buffalo, N. Y.

Send for free particulars about our specialty. It's a fast seller and easily demonstrated. H. G. W., 1,713 Taylor Av.

AGENTS.—nursery agents wanted on commission; pay weekly. Perry Nurseries, Rochester, N. Y.

Situations Wanted
Fifteen cents a line.

Female.

A LADY with exceptional household ability and experience will do marketing and catering daily or semi-weekly, as desired. Morris, 168 Times.

ASSISTANT HOUSEKEEPER or charge of linen room in first-class hotel or club. C 113 Times.

BOOKKEEPER-STENOGRAPHER; 3 years' manufacturing experience; thoroughly familiar controlling accounts; trial balance; high school graduate. M 258 Times Downtown.

BOOKKEEPER.—Eight years' experience double entry; can take entire charge of office; excellent references. Utility, Room 814, 621 Broadway.

BOOKKEEPER, assistants, knowledge typewriting and stenography; competent, reliable; 3 years' experience. Mrs. Steiner, 327 Beckman Av., Bronx.

BOOKKEEPER, STENOGRAPHER. — FIVE YEARS' EXPERIENCE; FAMILIAR OFFICE ROUTINE, MONTHLY BALANCE. N 54 TIMES.

BOOKKEEPER. — Double entry; typist; 5 years' experience; highly educated; versed up-to-date methods; $12. M 315 Times Downtown.

CARETAKER.—Private or furnished room house; city or country; willing, and hard worker; woman, (26,) boy, 5 years; husband employed. N 95 Times.

CARETAKER.—Respectable American woman wishes a furnished or unfurnished house in city; best reference. Address M 292 Times Downtown.

CHAMBER WORK by a reliable young woman of 23; good references; or will take care of child. (A) F. B., 162 Madison Av. Murray Hill 906.

CHAPERONE, secretary; part or whole time; school and church references. Y 248 Times Annex.

COMPANION.—An American woman wishes position as attendant to convalescent or companion to an old widow; small wages; references. Address Mrs. Thompson, 50 W. 95th St., city.

COMPANION.—Young English lady desires position as companion, traveling or otherwise; musical, speaks French and German. M. L., 115 W. 127th St.

COMPANION, useful; chaperon to young girls, also superintend household. Address Cultured, 708 Columbus Av.

COOK.—Experienced first class cook, middle aged, desires position in private family, best of references. Address 15 Whitman Av., Jersey City, or phone 1589W Bergen, asking for above address.

COOK—BUTLER.—Couple, Austrians; both first-class; cook and butler; private family; wages $80. 384 Bridge St., Brooklyn.

COOK.—For parties; cooks, waits, cleans up; reasonable; references. Mrs. R. Bergesen, 470 West 163d St.

COOK, colored, first class, in private family; 5 years' references. F. Williams, 224 W. 17th St.

COOK.—Very good; $45; best references. Care of O'Brien, 2,075 8th Av.

COOK.—Colored girl wishes position cooking, laundry; reference. 235 West 63d. Apt. 1L

Female.

CORSET SALESLADY and fitter desires to take charge of a corset store. Address S., 242 Kosp St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

DAY'S WORK.—Wanted, by a competent, reliable woman, work for a few days a week. Mrs. Wright, 354 5th Av.

DRESSMAKER, first class, reliable English woman, at home or out by day; $4. A. Morris, 1,366 St. Nicholas Av. Phone 2885 Audubon.

DRESSMAKER.—Artistic French designer wishes engagements by day in families; $4. Mlle. Marguerite, 501 River. 173 West 88th.

DRESSMAKER.—Experienced; all branches; in out work; references. Maskowska, 348 East 86th St.

DRESSMAKER. — Experienced remodeling; out, home; references. Conway, 102 Greenwich Av., West 12th.

DRESSMAKER, colored; experienced gowns; reference; 'phone; home, out. 261 West 134th, Apartment 26.

DRESSMAKER.—Evening, tailor gowns, waists; home and out; remodels. Ryan, 76 West 50th St.

DRESSMAKER, excellent, by day; references; will call evenings. Ulbel, 501 West 156th.

DRESSMAKER, first class, wants day's work. 'Phone 7730 Lenox. Room 433.

DRESSMAKER; experienced; work by day; reference by letter. Dressmaker, 124 W. 95th.

GENTLEWOMAN, educated, practical, will give sympathetic care to motherless children, where servant is kept; home preferred to large salary. M 49 Times.

GENERAL HOUSEWORK. — Neat colored girl; small wages. C. Hunt, 46 W. 99th St.

GIRL would like a position as a file clerk or doing clerical work; three years' experience; ambitious. Address Box G 25 Times Annex.

GOVERNESS.—Experienced visiting governess, school experience, instructs two hours daily; $20 monthly; references, prominent families. Brown, 52 Morningside Av.

GOVERNESS or NURSE; girl, 4 years or older; age 24; also speaks German; inexperienced, but willing. G., 2,110 Mapes Av., Bronx.

GOVERNESS.—North German; experienced English branches, French, (Paris,) music; Froebel's, Montessori's methods; physical care; fond children. N 64 Times.

GOVERNESS.—Position as visiting governess wanted; morning or afternoon; formerly public school teacher; musical qualifications; also reading. N 11 Times.

GOVERNESS.—Educated North German governess to grown children; good seamstress; six years' references. Address Governess, 810 Broad St., Newark, N. J.

GOVERNESS, French, thoroughly experienced, wishes position, one child preferred; entire charge; distance immaterial. Address Governess, 365 West 20th.

GOVERNESS.—American young lady wishes engagements few hours daily visiting governess or teacher; public school experience. S 90 Times.

HOUSECLEANER, widow; day or hour. Dolphin, 844 Dawson St. Tel. 3274 Melrose.

HOUSEKEEPER.—Middle aged lady seeks position as housekeeper or companion in refined home of one or two adults; best references. N 81 Times Downtown.

HOUSEKEEPER, &c.—Woman of experience and education desires position as housekeeper, nurse, companion, or charge of child. Y 239 Times Annex.

HOUSEKEEPER.—Position wanted as working housekeeper; thoroughly competent. Address S. A. S., Midland Park, N. J.

HOUSEKEEPER.—Reliable woman to care for apartment part time; will do mending, &c.; exceptional references. Reliable, Times Harlem.

HOUSEKEEPER.—American woman, reliable, good cook, bread, pastry, baker. L. K., Times Harlem.

HOUSEKEEPER.—Lady desires position as housekeeper or companion; best references. C 26 Times Annex.

HOUSEWORKER. — Experienced general housewerker, good cook, neat young widow, with school girl 9 years, wishes position; city, country; personal references. Mrs. L. Johnsen, care of Mrs. B. Richardson, 476 Clinton Av., Brooklyn.

HOUSEWORKER.—Lady obliged to curtail her household help highly recommends colored girl for general housework. Call 59 West 97th St. or phone 3246 River.

HOUSEWORKER, &c.—Colored girl, housework or chambermaid, waiting; good reference. James, 52 W. 139th.

HOUSEWORK.—Finnish girl wishes general housework. Olfen, 28 W. 132d.

HOUSEWORK, general; colored woman; references. Cullins, 226 West 58th St.

IMPORTER WOULD LIKE TO SECURE POSITION FOR YOUNG LADY, ASSISTANT BOOKKEEPER AND TYPIST; GOOD PENMAN; QUICK AND ACCURATE AT FIGURES; FOR FURTHER PARTICULARS ADDRESS BOX M 323 TIMES DOWNTOWN.

LADY'S MAID.—Young girl with good experience in hair dressing and manicuring wishes position as lady's maid with nice family. Call or write Miss Sarah Prunty, care Mrs. Farrell, 388 East 136th St.

LADY to make herself generally useful in household; good needlewoman. L 159 Times.

LAUNDRESS wants family hamper washing at home, open air drying; private house; reference. Mrs. Reed, 562 East 224th St.

LAUNDRESS, first class; take home; private family wash. Eklund, 289 East 58th.

LAUNDRY.—German woman, takes laundry home, out by day; open drying. Folderman, 124 West 49th St.

LAUNDRESS.—Wanted, position as laundress by the day. 7 years in one place. Apply 54 East 67th St.

LAUNDRESS, high class, wishes hamper wash; best references. Call or write, M. C., 4,521 Carpenter Av.

MAID, SEAMSTRESS. — Remodel dresses, hairdresser; care linen, gentleman's clothes; elderly lady; best personal references, S. F., Box S 91 Times.

MAID desires position; capable seamstress; graduate masseuse. F. Nelson, 400 W. 54th.

MASSEUSE.—Graduate of Stockholm, with hospital experience, wishes permanent position as masseuse and nurse for invalid lady; highest references. Djerf, 242 East 50th St.

MASSEUSE.—Battle Creek graduate wishes patients; ladies' residences. Howard, 101 W. 63d St.

MASSEUSE.—Swedish method; $1 hour; ladies' residences. Address "Rex," 212 West 84th St.

MOTHER'S HELPER or nursery governess, kindergarten training; experienced in physical care; good sewer; generally useful; best references. Box N 102 Times Downtown.

MOTHER'S HELPER.—English gentlewoman, 25, as mother's helper; experienced with children; generally useful; good seamstress; moderate salary. N 35 Times.

MOTHER'S HELPER.—Gentlewoman, well educated, wishes position as mother's helper, generally useful; moderate salary. N 50 Times.

NURSE.—German trained nurse would like permanent position with semi-invalid; would not object to travel; first-class references. Address Voss, 146 West 104th St.

NURSE.—Swiss girl, speaks French, German, and some English, wishes position as nurse; understands dressmaking; city references. N 70 Times.

SALESLADY.—Young lady desires to travel as saleslady; wishes connection with progressive firm; may be any line; traveled for two years for New York corset company. S. D., 242 Kosp St., Brooklyn N. Y.

SECRETARY, &c.—Clever, tactful woman, speaking, writing English, French, German, desires position in business house as secretary to author or chaperon in artist's studio. To reading this, tell your friends. N 57 Times.

SECRETARY, STENOGRAPHER.—2½ years as executive on a magazine; 5½ years secretary to a successful short-story writer; part or whole time; references. M 282 Times Downtown.

SECRETARIAL WORK.—By well educated, well-bred woman, afternoon secretarial work; good stenographer, typist, correspondent; excellent references. Address N 68 Times.

STENOGRAPHER.—I don't blame my firm for cutting my salary, but I cannot support my mother and myself; perhaps you can use a $35 stenographer at $25; absolute accuracy with speed is what I'll give in return. Expert, 41 Times.

STENOGRAPHER-SECRETARY; handle dictation, any line; competent look after and balance accounts; thoroughly conversant requirements high-class office; initiative; tactful; reliable; references; $12. A. M., Times Harlem.

STENOGRAPHER, (21;) knowledge bookkeeping; conscientious, willing, ambitious worker; high school education; three years' experience; understands office work thoroughly; salary reasonable. M 290 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER.—Educated North German governess to grown children; good seamstress; six years' references. Address Governess, 810 Broad St., Newark, N. J.

STENOGRAPHER, assistant bookkeeper, and clerical worker; has worked for magazine in subscription and advertising department; best references. (S.) F. B., 162 Madison Av. Murray Hill 906.

STENOGRAPHER.—Exceptionally bright; 2 years' real estate experience; accurate transcriptions; excellent speller, grammarian, mathematician; $8. M 316 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER, switchboard operator, office assistant; six years' experience; thoroughly competent; grammarian; neat, accurate, rapid; moderate. M 293 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER.—Five years' experience; high school graduate; knowledge bookkeeping; good references; (24;) possess initiative; $12. M 293 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER, thoroughly experienced in all branches of hotel office work, desires position with first-class hotel; reference from former employer. Y 240 Times Annex.

Situations Wanted
Fifteen cents a line.

Female.

STENOGRAPHER.—Office assistant; experienced; high school graduate; neat appearance; references; $8, with chance for advancement. M 222 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER.—Refined, capable woman, 25, experienced general office work, executive ability, requires immediate employment; excellent references. N 61 Times.

STENOGRAPHER, TYPIST.—Few months' experience; competent, bright American girl; excellent school record; no agency; $6. M 214 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER.—High school graduate; clean cut, (22;) qualified by experience; accustomed rapid dictation; $10; reference. M 304 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER, with three years' experience, understands and is familiar with all kinds of office work, including proofreading. (S.) F. B., 162 Madison Av.

STENOGRAPHER.—Commercial, real estate, insurance; varied dictation; operates standard machines neatly; reads notes rapidly; $7. A. S. G., Times Harlem.

STENOGRAPHER.—Two years' commercial experience, competent, accurate; not afraid of work; moderate salary. L. Kallish, 880 E. 180th St.

STENOGRAPHER.—Five years' experience, rapid typist, excellent English scholar, executive ability, unquestionable references. Room 424, 60f 5th Av.

STENOGRAPHER and typewriter, neat, intelligent girl, 10 months' experience, seeks position with reliable firm; moderate salary. miss L., 310 Sandol St., Evergreen, L. I.

STENOGRAPHER.—6 years' experience; Wadleigh High School graduate; unexcelled references for efficiency, reliability, retirement. M 312 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER.—Smart, appearing girl, (20;) 2 years' real estate experience; legible penman; good education; $8. M 303 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER.—Business school graduate; takes dictation quickly and transcribes accurately. Zeta Sacks, 605 Madison Av. Phone Plaza 2084.

STENOGRAPHER, TYPIST, knowledge bookkeeping; two years' experience; references. Marcus, 583 Rockaway Av., Brooklyn.

STENOGRAPHER.—First class every detail, experienced, desires position immediately. G. B., 30 Times.

STENOGRAPHER.—Competent beginner; assist with office work; $6. Y. E., 41 Times.

STENOGRAPHER, assistant bookkeeper; 3 years' experience; salary no object. F. R., 808 Times.

STENOGRAPHER, TYPIST. — Experienced; operates switchboard; filing; $9. Write B. G., 28 Avenue A.

STENOGRAPHER.—Several years' experience; knowledge office details, dictaphone; $12; Protestant. N 68 Times.

STENOGRAPHER, bookkeeper; accurate, rapid; best of experience, but limited. E. N., 201 Times.

STENOGRAPHER, executive; 3 years' experience; initiative; executive ability; A1 credentials. N 78 Times.

STENOGRAPHER.—Knowledge bookkeeping, bill clerk, office assistant; industrious worker; experienced; salary $15. S 98 Times.

STENOGRAPHER.—Two years' experience; understands office work; references; $8. M 254 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER, business college education; intelligent, neat, Christian. M. B. Irwin, 15 Bank St.

STENOGRAPHER.—Experienced; references; willing; office details understood; $8-$9. M 291 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER.—Experienced; transcribes rapidly and correctly; references; $8. M 290 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER.—English and Italian dictation; three years' experience. M 300 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER.—18; 1½ years' experience; competent; American; $6, $7. M 288 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER.—High school graduate; some experience; $8. Phone Plaza 7063. S 65 Times.

STENOGRAPHER, taking German, English dictation, desires position; salary moderate. M 270 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER.—Neat, intelligent beginner; business school graduate; $6. M 299 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER, thoroughly competent, experienced in various mercantile lines, seeks position. M 161 Times.

STENOGRAPHER.—Three years' experience; rapid, accurate worker; American; $10. M 263 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER, 4 years' experience; familiar filing, billing, switchboard; $10. M 257 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER.—Eight years' experience; Christian, intelligent, capable, conscientious; $12. M 259 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER.—Well-educated, good, reliable girl wishes opportunity. M 318 Times Downtown.

STENOGRAPHER-BOOKKEEPER, 2 years' experience; ambitious. Miss B., 814 Hewitt Place, City.

STENOGRAPHER.—Experienced law work; salary $10. Industrious. L 317 Times Downtown.

TEACHER.—Experienced; college graduate, public school methods; all branches; coaching. Progress, Times Harlem.

TEACHER, capable, fond of children, wishes tutoring for Saturdays. Y 265 Times Annex.

TUTOR.—Young lady, college graduate, will tutor in algebra and geometry; reasonable; near Broadway and 103d St. N 63 Times.

TYPIST—Educated woman, owning machine, engagement with 103d St. or near; dictation to machine; moderate. D. D., 178 6th Av.

VISITING COMPANION.—Refined, educated French young lady desires position as visiting companion or governess. Mademoiselle, 65 East 53d.

WAITRESS.—Colored, willing; highly trained, give good service; reference; will do work of any kind; experienced housewerker; half time. Lipscomb, 129 W. 134th.

WASHING taken home; outside drying. Anderson, 82 Audubon Av. Telephone 5672 Audubon.

YOUNG WOMAN desires position in linen room, first class hotel; experienced; excellent references. Wolven, 1,234 58th St., Brooklyn.

YOUNG WOMAN, bright, educated, seeks any position except clerical work. Colwell, 71 West 127th St.

Employment Agencies.

BERTHA CARLSON'S AGENCY, 2,415 Broadway, corner 89th St.; first-class servants. 9463 Riverside.

COLORED DOMESTICS—All kinds supplied free to employers. Telephone Columbus 8935, Agency.

COLORED HOUSEWORKERS.—Several neat girls, experienced, good references, thoroughly investigated, want places; other Southern help

The New York Times.

KOLEHMAINEN 10-MILE RUN CHAMPION AGAIN---MACK TO DISPOSE OF BENDER AND PLANK

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR KOLEHMAINEN

Two Finns and a Greek Take Honors in Championship 10-Mile Run—Renz Wins Walk.

Hannes Kolehmainen, of the Irish American A. C., premier long distance runner of the world, easily retained his American ten-mile championship at South Field, Columbia University, yesterday afternoon, but failed to even approach the world's record of 50:40 3-5 held by Alfred Shrubb, or even his own American mark of 51:03 2-5, made last year over the same track. Leading from start to finish and minus the advantage of a pacemaker, the wonderful little Finlander negotiated the ten miles in 52:47 3-5, very good time under any conditions, but far slower than he was expected to do. All the conditions were in favor of a record-breaking performance, the day being almost made to order for the championship event, but for some reason Kolehmainen saw fit to lag when, by extending himself a little he undoubtedly could have established at least a new American mark. It was not lack of condition that held the Finn in check, for he finished the last lap like a sprinter. In the final quarter-mile, the Irish American representative gained more than 110 yards of another Finn, Willie Kyronen, unattached, who finished second a lap and a quarter behind Kolehmainen. Nick Gianacopulos, of the Millrose A. A., was third, almost two laps behind the victor, so that while the race was for the American championship, it had anything but an American flavor to its result, two Finns and a Greek taking all of the honors.

Eddie Renz, of the Mohawk Athletic Club, American three-mile champion walker, added the seven-mile national championship to his collection, and in winning made a much better showing than Kolehmainen did in his event. Renz stepped the seven miles in 54:13 3-5, only 6 3-5 seconds behind the American record hung up by E. E. Merrill at Boston on Oct. 5, 1880. Renz, like Kolehmainen, had everything his own way, winning by 100 yards from Dick Remer, the gray-haired pedestrian of the Irish American A. C. Fred Kaiser, of the New York A. C., the dethroned champion, was more than 300 yards in the rear of Remer.

Sixteen men answered the gun in the walking eevnt and nine finished. Fourteen broke in the ten-mile run, and only two failed to negotiate the entire distance.

For finishing within the one-hour mark, Renz, Remer, Kaiser, Frank R. Plant, of the Long Island A. C., and William Plant, his brother, of the same club, got special medals donated by the Walkers' Club of America.

Kolehmainen, Kyronen, Gianacopulos, James W. Plant, De Stefane, Maier, Becker, Voteretsas, Morris, Costello, and McCullough received the special silver medals given to all starters who finished ten miles within fifty-eight minutes.

More than five thousand persons, including all the prominent officials of the Amateur Athletic Union, and many old-time running and walking champions, were on hand to witness the two big events.

Starting the ninth mile Kolehmainen passed Kyronen for the first time. Gianacopulos he had caught on the previous mile. After lapping Kyronen, Kolehmainen contented himself with running side by side with his fellow countryman thus elliminating whatever chance he had for a record. On the gun lap, he broke away from Kyronen, however, and made his rival appear as though he were standing still. The order of finish and times:

Hannes Kolehmainen, Irish-American A. C.	52:47 3-5
Willie Kyronen, unattached	54:14 1-5
N. Gianacopulos, Millrose A. A.	55:07
James W. Plant, Long Island A. C.	55:26 2-5
Charles de Stefano, Osanam Ass'n	55:42 3-5
Jacob Maier, Bronx Church House	55:53
Gotch Becker, Holy Family Lyceum	56:12 2-5
Victor Voteretsas, Greek-American A. C.	56:31
Aaron Morris, Smart Set A. C.	57:24
John J. Costello, Bronx Church House	57:51
F. McCullough, Mohawk A. C.	57:51 3-5
Frank Zunt, Irish-American A. C.	58:42

The walk was really the feature of the afternoon from a competitive point of view. For five miles Renz had to show his best to keep Remer from taking the lead, but in the last two miles the title holder held the upper hand. At the five-mile mark Renz's lead at one time seventy-five yards, had been cut to five yards, and at six it was thirty-five. The Irish Club walker could not contend with the great sprint of Renz's in the final mile, and with every stride fell behind him.

Al Voelimeke, the Pastime A. C. walker, was, as usual, disqualified; he was Jack Goldenberg of the Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A., junior metropolitan champion. The summary:

Edward Renz, Mohawk A. C.	54:13 3-5
Dick Remer, Irish-American A. C.	54:48 3-5
Fred Kaiser, New York A. C.	55:26 1-5
F. R. Plant, Long Island A. C.	58:10 2-5
William Plant, Long Island A. C.	59:16 3-5
J. E. Goldstein, unttached	1:00:41
M. R. Schwartz, Irish-Am. A. C.	1:01:16 3-5
J. F. Whalen, Irish-Am. A. C.	1:01:44
G. A. Braunlich, Long Island A. C.	Not taken

Barringer School Remains Best.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 31.—Barringer High School's cross-country team today won the championship run of the Newark High Schools Athletic Association over the Branch Brook Park course of about three and a half miles. Because of the withdrawal of the Central High School team, which last year won the national interscholastic cross-country title, left the race between the Barringer and South Side teams. Barringer won the race by the score of 25 to 32, though a South Side man, Andy Moore, finished first in 17:03 1-5. Moore nipped Bozza, the Barringer Captain, in a sensational finish. Lloyd Granger, a Barringer man, was third, while H. Schwartz, the South Side Captain, was fourth. The others finished in the following order:

Ellis, Barringer; Gibbons, Barringer; Staehle, South Side; Silverman, South Side; Evangelista, Barringer; Angilla, Barringer; Harrison, Barringer; Rummell, South Side; Pilling, Barringer; Izon, Barringer; Friedrich, South Side; Pierson, Barringer; Beltz, South Side; R. Schwartz, South Side.

Harriman Horse Going South.

Special to The New York Times.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Oct. 31.—The Arden Farms' trotters, owned by William Averell and Roland Harriman, sons of the late E. H. Harriman, will be shipped from here Monday night to Jackson, Tenn., where they will remain in charge of trainer Col. John D. King until Spring. There are ten horses in the string.

YALE TEAM'S VICTORY.

Princeton Man, However, Is First in Cross-Country Run.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 31.—Yale won the cross-country run with Princeton today over the six-mile course, which has been approved for the intercollegiate run on Nov. 21, scoring 24 points to Princeton's 32. Morrison of Princeton was the first man home, beating out Overton of Yale by 100 yards. His time was 35 minutes 29 2-5 seconds, while Overton's time was 35 minutes 46 seconds.

The order of finish, embracing five men of each team, was as follows: D. F. Morrison, Princeton; J. W. Overton, Yale; H. Holden, Yale; C. E. Clark, Yale; W. S. Doty, Princeton; S. K. Atha, Princeton; D. F. Frost, Yale; N. H. Platt, Yale; J. W. Dowell, Princeton; H. F. Sullivan, Yale; S. I. Cooper, Princeton.

CORNELL RUNNERS WIN.

Harvard No Match for Ithacans In Cross-Country Race.

ITHACA, N. Y. Oct. 31.—Cornell won the annual cross-country race with Harvard here today, defeating the Crimson with ease. The score was Cornell, 28; Harvard, 30. Windnagle, of Cornell, was the individual winner, and he was followed by seven other Cornell runners.

CLINTON HARRIERS VICTORS

Win Four-Cornered Chase at Van Cortlandt Park with Low Score.

In a four-cornered cross-country run yesterday at Van Cortlandt Park between the hill and dale teams of De Witt Clinton High School, High School of Commerce, and Boys' High School of New York, and St. Benedict School of Newark, the first named was victorious over the three-mile route, with the low score of 26 points. It was the largest of the popular early morning runs of the schoolboys held this season, with forty-seven boys participating. All forty-seven managed to finish the course.

Individual honors fell to W. Larson of the Clintonians, who was timed for the circuit of the A. A. U. course in 18:00. Last week, in a similar run, Charles Boughton of Newark, the scholastic record holder at two miles, established a record for the course when he was caught in 17:53. Second team honors went to Commerce, with a team score of 54, and Boys' High and the Newark lads finished in third and fourth places respectively, with tallies of 61 and 101.

The Clintonians got home runners in first, second, third, eighth, and twelfth places.

The order of finish follows:

Larson, De Witt Clinton; Locker, De Witt Clinton; Segreto, De Witt Clinton; Boyd, Boys' High; Nulty, St. Benedict; Calzini, Commerce; Green, Boys' High; Latoff, De Witt Clinton; Zabrinsky, Commerce; Field, Commerce; McCarthy, St. Benedict; Gensburg, De Witt Clinton; Young, Boys' High; Vandeft, Commerce; Cleary, Commerce; Warshaw, Boys' High; Tully, St. Benedict; Schulmann, De Witt Clinton; uBrt, De Witt Clinton; Jacobson, De Witt Clinton; Fisher, Boys' High; Guerrier, De Witt Clinton; Roane, De Witt Clinton; Nilan, Commerce, and Tonda, Commerce.

MORRIS HARRIERS WIN.

Capture Dual Cross-Country Run with Commerce, 15 to 50.

Seven Morris High School cross-country runners finished before a Commerce man crossed the tape in a dual cross-country match starting and finishing in Crotona Park yesterday. Morris gained an easy triumph with the low score of 15 points, against 50 for Commerce. The race was to have been a threecornered affair, with Stuyvesant High School as the third team, but at the last moment Commerce objected to Stuyvesant as a starter, and they were ruled out. Commerce, Morris, and Stuyvesant were scheduled to compete on Oct. 17, but the latter declined to run on that day, and the run had to be postponed.

W. Fleck of Morris captured first honors, covering the two and five-eighths mile course in 16:13. R. Spear and L. Cohen tied for second place, three seconds behind the victor.

R. Mercker was the first Commerce man to complete the route, his time being 16:42.

Twenty-three boys started, and all finished. The order of finish of the first twenty:

W. Fleck, Morris, 16:13; R. Spear, Morris, 16:16; L. Cohen, Morris, 16:16; H. Aichorn, Morris, 16:31; J. Wells, Morris, 16:39; R. Lenton, Morris, 16:40; F. Baldwin, Morris, 16:41; R. Marker, Commerce, 16:42; C. Cerriano, Commerce, 16:45; R. Kerley, Commerce, 16:46; E. Fala, Commerce, 16:49; W. Rose, Commerce, 16:50; E. Lichtenstein, Commerce, 16:58; Z. Daly, Morris, 17:14; A. Reiss, Commerce, 17:48; J. Zasnovsky, Commerce, 17:50; M. Weiss, Commerce, 17:52; M. Shapiro, Commerce, 17:54; S. Kattenberg, Commerce, 18:00; M. Hertz, Commerce, 18:22.

City College Outruns Lafayette.

Joe Scarlata, running for the City College, won the annual dual cross-country run from Lafayette College over the Van Cortlandt Park course yesterday. Scarlata went in the lead at the crack of the gun, and was never headed. Van Blancom of the Easton team ran in the second position at the end of the first lap, but after a hard fight was compelled to yield the place to Jaffee of the local team. On the second round the Lafayette team began to pick up much ground, and bettered their position slightly. One of the visitors and one of the home team ran over a wrong course. The points for the ninth and tenth positions were divided equally to settle the question. The final score was C. C. N. Y. 23½, Lafayette 31½ points. The order of the finish and the time are as follows:

J. Scarlata, C. C. N. Y., 39:57; H. Jaffee, C. C. N. Y., 40:50; Von Blancom, Lafayette, 40:59; H. Schaffer, C. C. N. Y., 41:15; R. Ellis, Lafayette, 41:20; T. McCurdy, Lafayette, 41:22; F. Weberpals, C. C. N. Y., 41:35; H. Bannerman, Lafayette, 41:39; A. Skelding, C. C. N. Y., and E. Miller, Lafayette, tied for ninth. Ran over wrong course.

New England Boys Win Race.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 31.—For the second consecutive time Arlington, Mass., High School won the annual cross-country run here today, scoring 65 points. One hundred runners, representing seventeen high schools, were catered. Dresser of Ithaca High won the race after Jenkins of Far Rockaway, who had been leading the field by 200 yards, turned his angle near the finish. I. Trowbridge of Griffin-Fleischman High School finished second, and Powers of Buffalo Technical, third. In the team scoring Buffalo Technical was second; Hutchinson High School of Buffalo, third, and Bloomfield, N. J., High School, fourth.

Wesleyan Runners Beat Bowdoin.

BRUNSWICK, Me., Oct. 31.—Wesleyan defeated Bowdoin today in a five-mile cross-country run, 27 to 28. The first man to finish were the Captains, Crosby of Bowdoin, who crossed the line in 30 80-83, and Cashman of Wesleyan, who was 200 yards behind Crosby.

AMERICAN RUN AND WALK CHAMPIONSHIPS ON SOUTH FIELD

THE FIELD IN THE 10MILE RUN.
Left to Right: Webb, Plant, Kyronen, Granacopulos, Lohman, Kolehmainen, Meier, Costello, Mc.Cullough, Voteretsas, Becker.
PHOTOS BY AMERICAN PRESS ASS'N.

KOLEHMAINEN. (© AMERICAN PRESS ASS'N)

ED. RENZ, Winner of 7Mile Walk.

MICHIGAN GIVES HARVARD A SCARE

Crimson Wins by a 7 to 0 Score, While Westerners Threaten Their Line Twice.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 31.—Just as happened nineteen years ago on Soldiers' Field, and on the occasion of Michigan's last visit to the Crimson camp, so today was a hard-fought football match between Harvard and the Ann Arbor players decided by a single touchdown and goal. The only score made in the game, which was secured by Harvard, was a touchdown, which netted a goal midway in the second period, and the score of 7 to 0 remained until the end. This was the reward of a steady advance of 45 yards up the field and on plays mainly through the Michigan tackles and guards. There was one brief repulse, but a wellexecuted and completed forward pass fitting in at the right moment, Harvard, with the ball on the Wolverines' 8-yard line, drove across the goal in three plays.

Michigan threatened twice today, while Harvard, except when it scored, never got nearer than 25 yards of the Wolverine's goal with the ball. Early in the game Michigan, showing only hard, old-fashioned plunging football, run off from a cleverly conveived formation scheme, landed on Harvard's 3-yard line, and for a third down with only a yard or so to go, but the Crimson threw back the next two charges for a loss. Later, in the third period the Yost machine made another long journey up toward Harvard's end of the gridiron and again was held for downs, this time hardly half a yard being needed to retain the ball and for a first down between the last chalk line and the goal.

The 26,000 who went to the stadium expecting to see a game full of thrills and all the new wrinkle stuff in football saw nothing of the sort. What they did see was two heavy and well-matched rush lines fighting against each other all afternoon, each having the jump on the other alternately, when on attack, and the two groups of blackfield men putting in as busy a defensive day as they ever will have in their lives.

Michigan continually unbalanced its line, the centre often putting the ball into play from the end of it, and the attack being covered up by all sorts of feints and signal queries which often had the effect of throwing the Crimson rush line defense off guard.

Harvard, putting on many successful plays, involving delayed passes and crossbucks, was able, just as Michigan was, to get things going often and for some good, solid gains for distance parades up the field. As for the open footbal, it was Harvard and not the Westerners who put it on. All the afternoon long the Wolverines used only one forward pass, and this was cleverly caught by Harvard's quarterback, Mal Logan, and converted into a pretty gain. Harvard, on the other hand, made three successful forward passes, Hardwick making all of them and the receiving being cleverly done by Smith, T. J. Coolidge, and C. Coolidge, the Crimson wings. Hardwick threw another pass instead of punting on the fourth down, and his shot missed going outside on the seven-yard line by only a few inches.

These were all the frills there were today in the Stadium, there was not even one try for a field goal by either team. It was hammer and bang, mixed with some good and some extremely poor kicking. The intersectional idea was not there at all. Any two big Eastern football teams might have been on the battlefield, each playing the most conservative sort of football.

The crowd in the Stadium was the most brilliant of the season. The Michigan rooters sang and cheered all day, while between the halves their band marched and manoeuvred down on the field. The best of spirit prevailed, and the officials were unanimous in proclaiming it the cleanest match they had ever seen.

Little Maulbetsch, the Michigan half back, was the star of the game and the strength of the Michigan rushing game, while Francke came through beautifully in his first big game in the Harvard backfield.

These were the powers of the rushing game today, Harvard gaining 141 yards and the Wolverines 206 yards, and in about twenty more plays from scrimmage. Line-up:

Harvard.	Position.	Michigan.
T. J. Coolidge	Left end	Benton
Parson	Left tackle	Reimann
Withington	Left guard	Watson
Wallace	Centre	Raynesford
Weston	Right guard	McHale
Trumbull	Right tackle	Cochran
Smith	Right end	Staats
Logan	Quarter back	Hughitt
Bradlee	Left half back	Maulbetsch
Hardwick	Right half back	Lyons
France	Full back	Spiawn

Referee—William Langford, Trinity. Umpire—Lieut. Hackett, West Point. Head Linesman—Lieut. Nelly, West Point—Time of periods—Fifteen minutes each. Scoring: Harvard—Touchdown, Hardwick. Goal from touchdown—Hardwick. Substitutions: Harvard—R. Curtis for Parson; Bigelow for Wallace; C. Coolidge for Smith. Michigan—Dunne for Benton; Rheror for Watson; Quail for Hale; James for Staatz.

ALL SCORING IN LAST PERIOD

Illinois Defeats Minnesota in Hard Contest, 21 to 6.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 31.—Illinois defeated Minnesota today, 21 to 6, in one of the most fiercely contested games ever played in the Western Conference. The teams struggled through the first three periods with honors about even. All the scoring came in the final quarter.

Johns Hopkins Easy for Lehigh.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Oct. 31.—Lehifh, with nearly a substitute team, showed her heels to Johns Hopkins today, 83 to 0. At that Lehigh played a wretched game. The visitors' line was fairly strong, but the ends were weak, and it was around them that Mattern, Hollowell, Green, Hoban, and Maguinness skirted for long runs. It took the Lehigh team the whole of the first period to get under way, and in that time the Brown and White lost three good chances to score. Three times after running the ball down the field a fumble would result or the signals get twisted. Hallowel, the tiny Lerigh quarter backe, starred in his open-fied running. His best effort was a dash for seventy-five yards for a score through the whole Hopgins team. The forward pass as worked by Lehigh falled in seven out of nine attempts, but in one—the last try—it worked beautifuly for a score. The line-up:

Johns Hopkins.	Position.	Lehigh.
Toechler	Left end	Green
Burroughs	Left tackle	Good
Yewsk	Left guard	Ostrum
Primrose	Centre	Scruggs
Menagle	Right guard	Pons
Jackson	Right tackle	Richards
Fear	Right end	Sawtelle
Layfield	Quarter back	Hallowell
Rindall	Left half back	Maguinness
Uhler	Right half back	Hoban

Touchdowns—Hallowell, (2); Kirkpatrick, (2); Hoban, 1; from touchdown—Green, (3.) Substitutions—Johns Hopkins: Mealy for Layfield, Martham for Wilkinson, Frick for Menagle, Wilkinson for Barthams, Leigh; Green for Mattern, Chapman for Green, Decker for Pons, Kirkpatrick for Decker, Early for Scruggs, Knoss for Good, Pons for Becker, Lambert for Green, Bacon for Sawtelle, Good for Bacon, Bacon for Hoban, Hoffman for Early, Agreault for Maguinness, Levin for Ostrum, Wills for Lambert.

Referee—Mr. Fonda, Stevens Institute. Umpire—Mr. Davidson, University of Pennsylvania. Head Linesman—Mr. Keogh, University of Pennsylvania. Time of Periods—Ten minutes each.

Bergman Shows Up Haskell.

NOTRE DAME, Ind., Oct. 31.—Bergman, Notre Dame's midget quarter back, played wonderful football today, and his team defeated Haskell Indians, 21 to 7. Three times Bergman, catching Haskell's punts, went through the entire broken field for touchdowns. His runs averaged seventy yards. Wilson played great ball for Haskell Indians, repeatedly rushing through lines for gains from five to ten yards.

BIG GAME IN THE WEST.

Wisconsin and Chicago in Scoreless Battle at Madison.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 31.—For the first time in two years the University of Chicago football team today left the gridiron without the laurels of victory. The fighting University of Wisconsin team played a game worthy of its importance and held Chicago to a pointless draw.

For Wisconsin, Bellows was the mainstay. His accurate, long punts so far outdistanced those of Des Jardien and Russell that the ball during most of the game was on Chicago ground. The loss of Gray, whose twisted leg gave way early in the game, weakened the Maroon attack, though Russell's dash and Flood's line drives partially made up for the absence of Gray.

Straight football predominated in the attack on both sides, and though at least a dozen forward passes were tried by both teams, the opposing backs and ends wrecked nearly all. The one double pass attempted by Chicago gained only a yard or two. Both Maroons and Cardinals tried for field goals in vain.

A warm day favored the 12,000 spectators and made the going hard for the players, but substitutions were few. The line-up:

Chicago.	Position.	Wisconsin.
Huntington	Left end	Stavrum
Shuh	Left tackle	Buck
Stegeman	Left guard	McMaster
Des Jardien	Centre	Ennedy
White	Right guard	Mucks
Hackedorn	Right tackle	Meiser
Spark	Right end	Kelly
Russell	Quarter back	Bellows
Gray	Left half back	Cummings
Schafer	Right half back	Smith
Flood	Full back	Kreuse

Umpire—Mr. Reid, Michigan; Referee—Mr. Birch, Ohio Wesleyan; Linesman—Mr. Hutchins, Purdue.

SYRACUSE BEATS INDIANS.

Carlisle's Open Football Smashed—Calac Gains Through Centre.

BUFFALO, Oct. 31.—Ten thousand people saw Syracuse University defeat Carlisle here today, 24 to 3, in the first intercollegiate game played on a Buffalo gridiron in several years. Carlisle's attempts at the open game usually ended disastrously, the Indians' most notable gains being made by Capt. Calac through the Syracuse centre. Rose played a sensational game for the New York State team. The line-up:

Syracuse.	Positions.	Carlisle.
Woodruff	Left end	Wallette
Schlichter	Left tackle	Welmas
White	Left guard	Hill
Forsyth	Centre	Norris
Mollgott	Right guard	Bush
Johnson	Right tackle	Martel
Shufelt	Right end	Bird
Seymour	Quarter back	Crane
Wilkinson	Left half back	F. Broker
Rose	Right half back	Pratt
Kingsley	Full back	Calac

Scoring by periods:

Syracuse	0	8	16	0—24
Carlisle	0	0	0	3—3

Time of quarters—Fifteen minutes each. Referee—David Fultz, Brown. Head linesman—Mr. Hinkey, Yale. Umpire—Mr. J. Thompson, Georgetown. Touchdowns—Woodruff, Kingsley, Rose. Field goals—Rose, 2; Calac, 1. Substitutions—Meisser for White; Gilman for Welmas; L. Johnson for Seymour; White for Meister; O'Connell for Kingsley; Welmas for Crane; Winnischofer for Norris; Weidner for F. Broker.

YALE WIPES OUT COLGATE DEFEAT

Blue Team Beats Up-State New Yorkers by Score of 49 to 7.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 31.—For giving Yale a 16 to 6 drubbing last year the Yale football team this afternoon hitched a revenge score of 49 to 7 on the up-State New York Colgate eleven. The visitors were allowed to score when the Yale second eleven was bodily gridironed during the third period. Facing the "Eli subs" Colgate found the traveling much smoother and ground a highway through for 40 yards to the Yale goal for their only touchdown. Aside from this trespassing of Eli territory, Colgate threw a scare into the Yale regulars in the closing minutes of the second period, pushing them back till within a yard from the home eleven's citadel, where the Yale bulldog's back stiffened and the Colgate attack was expended in four futile downs. Legore's 65-yard kick relieved the pressure, but Colgate came crashing back, and Swartout and Robinson had ploughed to the Yale 30-yard line when the half closed.

Colgate was dangerous at no other time. Yale swept the field in opening the battle, traveling the length of the field four times the first half and breaking across the visiting goal for touchdown in every instance. There were no phenomenal runs, but the Yale artillery attack, only occasionally varied by a lateral or forward pass, brushed the New York State team for four series of runs that began at the Yale 20-yard line and did not cease till four touchdowns had been registered. In all four cases the rushes that rang up the touchdowns were for less than five yards each.

The game was practically played in this period.

Yale crashed for more than half the length of the field, however, in the first five minutes of the second for her fifth touchdown. Lapsing then into defensive play, Yale allowed Colgate to wrest 80 yards in brillinat end runs, which ended with the Yale goal only inches away.

Yale's scrub team opened blithely in their period, Waite, Easton, and MacLeish breaking through tackle for 10-yard gains each, but three successive 15-yard penalties against the Blue compelled Guernsey to punt. Three times the Colgate attack drove through the Yale substitute line, twice to be halted, but on the third occasion to find rush-line gaps that carried it from the Colgate 20-yard line to the Yale goal.

With the regular Yale combination operating the passing game in the closing period, Yale mounted two more touchdowns upon the scoreboard.

For the first score Yale perforated the visitors' line from her 40-yard mark after snatching the ball on fourth down, and for the second the Eli attack, gaining the ball on a fumble at the Colgate 30-yard line, quickly smashed it over. Yale kicked four times for 180 yards. Colgate five times for 180. Yale used four forward passes, two of which were successful; Colgate two, one of them working, the other being tossed deliberately out of bounds.

Yale was penalized for 60 yards, Colgate for 20. Yale made 29 first downs, Colgate 17.

Under ideal weather conditions, 13,000 people saw the game Line-up:

Yale.	Position.	Colgate.
Brann	Left end	Stewart
Betts	Left tacgle	Brooks
Conroy	Left guard	Weber
White	Centre	Regan
Walden	Right guard	Good
Whittlesey	Right tackle	Abel
Mann	Right end	Belton
Scovil	Quarter back	Anderson
Ainsworth	Left half back	Robinson
Knowles	Right half back	West
Legore	Full back	Swartbout

Touchdowns—Legore, (1,) Guernsey, (1,) Mann, (1,) Scovil, (2,) Ainsworth, (2,) Robinson, 1.) Goals from touchdown—Legore, (5,) Guernsey, (2,) Brooks, 1.) Referee—Mr. Evans, Williams. Umpire—Mr. Williams, University of Pennsylvania. Linesman—Mr. Wright, Princeton. Field judge—Mr. Gillinder, University of Pennsylvania. Periods—Fifteen minutes. Substitutes—Warren for Swarthout, Gannesse for Geed, Whittlesey for G. Sullivan, Blodgett for Brann, Gould for Blodgett, Loughridge for Betts, Farrar for Conroy, Wiley for White, Chatfield Taylor for Whittlesey, Jim Sheldon for Walden, Church for Stillman, Schrass for Church, Macelish for Scovil, Easton for Ainsworth, Waite for Knowles, Guernsey for Legore.

Five Touchdowns for One Man.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Oct. 31.—Indiana had little trouble here today in defeating Miami by a score of 48 to 3. The visitors were completely outclassed by the greatly improved Indiana machine, and at no time threatened Indiana's goal line. The game was featured by the wonderful open field running of Whitaker, who scored five touchdowns before leaving the game. Miami's greatest success was with the forward pass. The game was marred by rough playing.

MAY HAVE BROKEN BACK.

Layfield, Johns Hopkins Quarter Back, Seriously Hurt at Lehigh.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Oct. 31.—An accident which may result in a broken back for Layfield, the Johns Hopkins quarter back, occurred in today's football game with Lehigh. It was an accident and occurred in the open field. The game had hardly started when Mattern, running for Lehigh, skirted right end and with a clear field before him, except Layfield, was running swiftly when Layfield made a flying tackle and was doubled up when the two came to earth.

Layfield was rushed to St. Luke's Hospital, where the surgeons tonight stated that an X-Ray would have to be taken to determine the real injury to the player, but that present indications seemed to point to a broken back in the dorsal region.

CORNELL BEATS HOLY CROSS

Ithacans Score Almost at Will, Even with Subs in Line-Up.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 31.—Cornell overwhelmed Holy Cross here today by the score of 48 to 3, scoring seven touchdowns and gaining almost at will whenever they had the ball in their possession. The Cornell first team wore down the visitors in the first half, when two touchdowns were made, and then in the second a constant stream of fresh substitutes were sent into the Cornell ranks and, they being fresh, wrought havoc with their opponents, three touchdowns were made in the final period, one of them a run the length of the field after a kick off by Williams, a substitute full back.

Barrett, Shuler, and Philippi proved the big Cornell ground gainers today, the two latter in particular doing especially well. When Barrett went out in the second period Philippi had his chance, and his line plunging was irresistible. Shuley played another spectacular game, gaining more ground than any of the other backs and frequently breaking through three and four tacklers. The defense of the Cornell line was very effective, and their charging good, but Holy Cross circled O'Hearn for a number of gains and managed to execute several passes.

Cornell scored in the first two minutes of play and again in the end of the first period, a series of rushes from midfield scored the third touchdown. Cool recovered a Holy Cross fumble on the five-yard line and Cornell tallied again, while Eckley son thereafter recovered Philippi's fumble for another score. Murphy kicked a field goal from the 25-yard line in the first period, Holy Cross never menacing Cornell's goal, however. The line-up:

Cornell.	Position.	Holy Cross.
Shelton	Left end	Healy
Gallogly	Left tackle	Haggerty
Tilley	Left guard	Lynch
Cool	Centre	Brawley
Anderson	Right guard	O'Keefe
Fisher	Right tackle	Cahill
O'Hearn	Right end	Donovan
Barrett	Quarter back	Devlin
Collyer	Left half back	McCarthy
Shuler	Right half back	Lee
Hill	Full back	Murphy

Touchdowns—Barrett, Collyer, Williams, Philippi Shuler, (3.) Goals from touchdowns—Barrett, (2,) Shuler, (3.) Brown. Goals from field—Murphy. Referee—Mr. Tierney, West Point. Umpire—Mr. Holderness. Head linesman—Mr. Risley of Colgate. Timeof periods—Fifteen minutes each.

Substitutions—Holy Cross: Manning for Healey, Morissey for Brawley, Kane for McCarthy, Lee for Murphy, Murphy for Lee. Cornell: Eckley for Shelton, Jewett for Gallogly, Butts for Jewett, Snyder for Tilley, McKeage for Snyder, Munnicck for McKeage, Brown for Cool, Bamman for Brown, McCormick for Anderson, Jameson for Fisher, Allen for Jameson, Laitz for O'Hearn, Shuler for Barrett, Shock for Philippi, Beebe for Collyer, Philippi for Shuler, Williams for Hill.

FOOTBALL RESULTS.

At New Haven—Yale, 49; Colgate, 7.
At Princeton—Princeton, 7; Williams, 7.
At Cambridge—Harvard, 7; Michigan, 0.
At Ithaca—Cornell, 48; Holy Cross, 3.
At Buffalo—Syracuse, 24; Carlisle, 3.
At Easton, Penn.—Pennsylvania State, 17; Lafayette, 0.
At Hanover—Dartmouth, 32; Amherst, 0.
At Providence—Brown, 12; Vermont, 9.
At Philadelphia—Pennsylvania, 40; Swarthmore, 6.
At Annapolis—Navy, 16; A. and M. of North Carolina, 14.
At West Point—Army, 41; Villanova, 0.
At Cambridge—Harvard, 7; Michigan, 0.
At Kingston—Rhode Island, 7; Norwich, 0.
At Waterville—Colby, 14; Maine, 0.
At Medford, Mass.—Tufts, 7; Massachusetts Agricultural College, 6.
At Pittsburgh—Pittsburgh, 96; Dickinson, 0.
At South Bethlehem — Lehigh, 83; Johns Hopkins, 0.
At Allentown—Bucknell, 0; Muhlenberg, 0.
At Middletown, Conn. — Wesleyan, 14; Worcester Technical, 0.
At Hoboken—Delaware, 0; Stevens, 0.
At Madison, Wis. — Chicago, 0; Wisconsin, 0.
At Exeter—Phillips Exeter, 23; Princeton Freshmen, 0.
At New Haven—Yale Freshmen, 7; Phillips Andover, 0.
At Clinton, N. Y.—Hamilton, 26; St. Lawrence, 0.
At Richmond, Va.—Randolph-Macon, 13; Richmond College, 8.
At Macon, Ga.—Mercer, 39; Furman, 0.
At Charleston.—Clemson, 14; Citadel, 0.
At Newport News, Va.—Hampden Sydney, 19; William and Mary, 0.
At Athens, Ohio,—Marietta, 23; Ohio, 19.
At Granville, Ohio.—Denison, 16; Wesleyan, 7.
At Richmond, Ind.—Depauw, 17; Earlham, 0.
At Terre Haute.—Franklin, 7, Rose Poly, 0.
At Indianapolis.—Transylvania, 47; Butler, 0.
At Washington.—Washington and Jefferson, 40; West Virginia University, 0.
At Stamford.—Stamford High School, 19; Peekskill Military Academy, 0.
At Oestining.—Holbrook, 14; Hackley, 14.
At Manlius.—Manlius School, 20; Masten Park High School, Buffalo, 0.
At Montclair.—Montclair Academy, 26; Newark Academy, 0.
At Dallas, Tex., and M., 63; Louisiana, 9.
At South Band, Ind.—Notre Dame, 21; Haskell, 7.
At Brunswick—Bates, 27; Bowdoin, 0.
At Minneapolis—Illionis, 21; Minnesota, 6.
At Louisville—Wabash College, 7; University of Louisville, 3.
At Bloomington, Ind.—Indiana, 48; Miami, 3.
At Meyerstown, Penn.—Albright, 32; Susquehanna, 0.
At Nashville, Tenn.—Virginia, 20; Vanderbilt, 7.
At Alliance, Ohio—Mount Union, 40; Case, 0.
At Pittsburgh—Carnegie, 33; Bethany, 19.
At Cincinnati—University of Cincinnati, 14; State University of Kentucky, 0.
At Troy—Union, 23; Rensselaer, 0.
At Washington, D. C.—Georgetown, 27; Western Virginia Wesleyan, 0.
At Middlebury, Vt.—Springfield, 27; Middlebury, 7.
At Lansing, Mich.—M. A. C., 75; Akron College, 3.
At Haverford, Penn.—Franklin and Marshall, 14; Haverford 0.
At Cleveland—Western Reserve, 6; Oberlin, 0.
At Lincoln, Neb.—Nebraska, 20; Ames, 7.
At Columbia, Mo.—Missouri, 12; Kansas Aggies, 3.
At St. Louis—Washington, 7; Drake, 7.
At Lawrence, Kan.—Kansas, 15; Oklahoma, 15.
At Colorado Springs—Colorado University, 10; Colorado College, 7.
At Winston-Salem, N. C.—North Carolina, 14; Davidson, 7.
At Atlanta—Georgia Tech., 20; Sewanee, 0.
At Roanoke, Va.—Washington and Lee, 7; V. P. I., 3.
At Memphis—Onachita, 7; Mississippi, 0.
At Athens, Ga.—Mississippi A. and M., 9; Georgia, 0.
At Austin—University of Texas, 50; Southwestern University, 0.
At Watertown, Conn.—Pawling School, 21; Taft School, 0.
At Simsbury, Conn.—Westminster, 28; Canaan, 0.

BENDER, PLANK, AND COOMBS TO GO

Connie Mack Asks Waivers on His Three Veteran Pitchers—Federal League Involved.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—Pitchers Bender, Coombs, and Plank wil not be with the Athletics next year. This was admitted by Manager Connie Mack in a statement given out today by the leader of the former world's champions. Connie Mack was shown a copy of the story in which Hughey Jennings was credited with making the announcement that Mack had asked for waivers on his trio of stars. In reply he said:

"Before releasing a player unconditionally all the clubs in the American League must ask waivers on said player or players.

"While I had no intention of retaining the three players named for the season of 1915, I would not have asked for waivers on the players at this time but for the fact that one of the three had told me that he was talking business with the Federal League. He told me that he had been offered big money and did not suppose that we wanted to meet the offer. I suggested to this player that perhaps some of the other clubs in the league would meet the demand. I want it strictly understood that I am for the American League in victory or defeat.

"When a waiver is asked on a player it is supposed to be treated in confidence by owners and club managers, but this much could not be expected of Jennings, who devoted six months of the year to baseball and the other six months to his vaudeville act.

"He should worry as long as Frank Navin can give him a great team to manage every Spring."

Surprise for Plank.

Plank admits he has been talking business with the Federal League. Coombs is in Maine and Bender up State, but from his Gettysburg home over the telephone Plank said:

"It was a complete surprise to me, and I knew nothing about it until a friend of mine called me this morning from Philadelphia and

ARMY OVERWHELMS VILLA NOVA ELEVEN---WILLIAMS TIES PRINCETON---SCHOOLS' FOOTBALL

VILLA NOVA BRUISED BY ARMY ATTACK

Soldiers Bury Their Opponents Under the Rush of Six Touchdowns—Score, 41 to 0.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, Oct. 31.—The Army eleven went on a scoring ramapge this afternoon and battered the big Villa Nova team into submission under the grueling attack of six touchdowns. The score was 41 to 0. The cadets scored at will, and showed an encouraging display of open football, which had Villa Nova bewildered from the start.

The soldiers raised havoc with the forward pass, and once, in the third period, carried the ball 65 yards to a touchdown in four cleverly executed passes, one of which netted more than 30 yards. Prichard, the Army quarter, was behind the long tosses(and handled the leather oval with skill and accuracy. From the 25-yard line, in the third period, he heaved a pass to Tully, who stood waiting for it behnid the line.

The sensation of the day was furnished just before the end of the game by Benedict, who intercepted a Villa Nora forward pass on his own 10-yard line and galloped ninety yards to a touchdown. The whole Villa Nora team gave chase, but the flat-footed soldier outraced them all with a margin to spare.

Villa Nora had a powerful set of forwards, but they had to take a terrific hammering from the Army backs. The Army's tactics called for both old and new football, and they ripped great openings in the visitors' line with old-fashioned line plunges. Hodgson and Place were jammed through the Villa Nora line repeatedly for big gains. Both Prechard and Harmon ran the team well at quarter. Coach Daly used substitutes by the dozen and one after another, all the players got a chance to make Villa Nora miserable.

Villa Nova suffered disastrously from the bruising Army attack and the game was held up repeatedly with Villa Nova players laid out on the grass. McGuckin, the quarter back, was helped off the field with a badly injured knee, while Hanlon's collarbone was fractured. Villa Nova had only a limited number of "subs" on hand and it was a pretty badly smashed up band of players that limped ocrss the plains at the end of the game.

The Cadet Corps waxed enthusiastic over their eleven's speed. Although Villa Nova did not come up to expectations in their resistance, the Army showed more football and of a greater variety than at any other time this season. The cadets are more anxious than ever to defeat the Navy this season after the long squabble over the annual contest. All the new songs for the Navy game were sung today and the roar of the soldiers' cheers rumbled over the reservation every time the Army tore the Villa Nova line asunder.

The teams hadn't been playing five minutes before the soldiers had rushed the ball over.

Benedict's great play came in the last period, when Villanova in desperation was tossing the ball arond hap-hazard trying to make a successful pass.

Standing on his own ten-yard line Bentdict jumped and caught the ball as it had been tossed from Prendergast's hands. He broke loose from the scrimmage and started up the field. Two of the Villanova players tried to catch him, but they were soon put out of the running by the Army's excellent interference.

Villanova in the last period managed to work three forward passes, which gave them their only first downs of the game. Line-up:

Army.	Position.	Villanova.
Merrillat	Left end	J. Reap
Butler	Left tackle	Regan
Harris	Left guard	Kiley
Goodman	Centre	Lynch
Meacham	Right guard	Henry
Weyand	Right tackle	T. Reap
Kaltz	Right end	Hanlon
Prichard	Quarter back	McGucken
Hodgson	Left half back	Frazier
Van Fleet	Right half back	Forst
Hogue	Full back	Prendergast

Score by quarters:

Umpire—Mr. Whiting, Cornell. Referee—Mr. Tyler, Princeton. Head Linesman—Lieut. Fuller, Army. Time of periods—Two of ten and two of twelve minutes each.

Touchdowns—Hodgson, (2,) Van Fleet, Place, Tully, Benedict. Goals from touchdowns—Merrillat, Hodgson, Coffin, Woodruff, Benedict.

Substitutes.—Army—Tully for Merillat, Prickett for Tully, Tully for Prickett, Larkin for Butler, Butler for Larkin, Larkin for Butler, O'Hare for Herrlicy, Herick for O'Hare, Bradley for Goodman, Goodman for Bradley, O'Hare for Goodman, Timberlake for Meacham, Meacham for Timberlake, Timberlake for Meacham, Parker for Weyand, Weyand for Parker, Parker for Weyand, Simkins for Kelly, Kelly for Simkins, Harmen for Prichard, Mahoney for Harmon, Prichard for Mahoney, Harmon for Prichard, Griffin for Hodgson, Hocker for Coffin, Place for Hocker, Woodruff for Van Fleet, Heat for Woodruff, Benedict for Hess, Place for Benedict, Benedict for Place, Place for Hogs and Hoge for Place. Villanova—Corcoran for Reap, Wilson for Kiley, Ward for McGuicken, Dougherty for Forst.

Navy Wins Well Played Game.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 31.—No finer football game on the local field can be remembered tha ntoday's contest in which the Naval Academy won from North Carolina Agricultural and Mechanical College by 16 to 14. In stamina and resourcefulness it would have been hard to find two better matched teams. Both teams had powerful back fields, and the total number of yards gained by each was large. The visitors made much better use of the forward pass than the midshipmen, and no team that has ever played here had such a large percentage of successful efforts with this play.

The first period resulted in a hard-fought draw, and the visitors scored first in the second. Tenney breaking through the Navy left tackle and running sixty yards for a touchdown. Riddick kicked the goal. H. Harrison scored for the midshipmen in the same quarter, and a safety scored for the midshipmen in the third quarter. After Harrison and Blodgett had made long runs, Harrison scored the Navy's final touchdown in the last period, and by an assortment of forward passes and gains by Tenney, Reddick and Van Brackiin, the ball was brought to the Navy's five-yard line, from which Reddick carried it over, also kicking the goal. The Navy was forcing the fighting as time was called. The summary:

Navy.	Position.	A. and M.
Overesch	Left end	McDougall
Kennedy	Left tackle	Turner
H. H. Jones	Left guard	Proffitt
Parry	Centre	Pryor
Graham	Right guard	Young
Mills	Right tackle	Cook
Jackson	Right end	Seifert
Miller	Quarter back	Van Brackiin
Blodgett	Left half back	Townsend
Harrison	Right half back	Riddick.
Reddick	Full back	Tenny

Touchdowns—H. Harrison, (2,) Tennsy, Reddick. Goals from touchdowns—Blodgett, (2,) Riddick, (3.) Substitutions: Naval Academy—T. Harrison for Overech, Deroode for Kennedy, H. K. Jones for Graff, Ward for Schlossbach, Schlossbach for Jones, Kenworth for Jackson, Mitchell for Miles, Miles for Mitchell, Mitchell for Miles, Craig for Failing, North Caroline—Wunston for Turner, Champin for Tenney, Medlock for Champin. Referee—Mr. Church, Yale. Umpire—Edward Thorpe, De La Salle. Head linesman—Mr. Stollenwerck, Johns Hopkins. Time of quarters—Twelve minutes each.

Morristown School, 88; Stone, 0.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Oct. 31.—Morristown School team ran up its largest score of the year by defeating Stone School 88 to 0. The greatest asset for Morristown was the speed of Wendell And Catt. Clement, together with the accurate kicking of the former. Tweddle and Keck also starred.

BENDER, PLANK, AND COOMBS TO GO

Continued from Preceding Page.

three of which the Athletics won, in 1905, 1910, 1911, 1912, and 1914.

Plank was always a steady pitcher, but not as brilliant as the great Indian, who was his fellow boxman. In the last world's series, the Boston Braves found it harder to beat Plank than any of the Athletics' pitching staff.

Charles Albert Bender, the second of the great Athletic trio slated for release, was for years the acknowledged star of the Athletics' pitching staff. He was the man upon whom Mack relied in the pinches. It was he who was called upon to bear the brunt of the world's series and until 1914 he never once failed. In 1905 he won the only game which the Athletics won from the great old Giant team. Bender, popularly known as Chief, is a Chippewa Indian. He was born in Brainerd, Minn., May 5, 1883. When 18 years old he began to play first base for the Carlisle Indian team, and in 1903 was pitching for Dickinson College. He was signed by the Athletics that year and has been with the team ever since. Despite his long baseball career, he is only 31 years old.

John W. Coombs might still be among the great pitchers in the major leagues had his strength not been undermined by a violent attack of typhoid several years ago. He first attracted attention as a pitcher for Colby College, and was secured by the Athletics in 1906 after four years with the college team. He immediately became a star, and he was on in the pitching box for the Athletics in their famous twenty-four-inning game that year with Boston, the longest game on record in the major leagues. He didn't live up to his early promise, however, and for one whole year Mack tried to make him into an outfielder. In 1910 he "came back" as a pitcher and he, Plank, and Bender made a wonderful combination for the Athletics, which enabled them to win the American League pennant and the world's championship. He continued to do excellent work until his illness, but he has never done very well since then. This year he only pitched one game for the Athletics and lost, although in the box only a couple of innings. Mack used him in the outfield for a time toward the end of the season.

Bender and Plank were still doing steady work this year, and Plank did well in the world's series. Bender's fate, when he was knocked out of the box in the first game of the world's series, probably decided Mack to let the old timers go. Their records this year were as follows;

	W.	L.	SO.	BB.	H.	Av.
Bender	17	3	103	54	159	.850
Plank	16	6	108	42	161	.727
Coombs	1	0	1	0	1	.000

Bender was among the leading pitchers of the American League, and Plank was not far down in the list.

Union Smothers Forward Passes.

Special to The New York Times.

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 31.—Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute lost to Union this afternoon in a hard fought game by a score of 24 to 0. Rensselaer's failure with the forward pass and the snappy work of Roof in intercepting them was largely responsible for most of the touchdowns.

Union started the scoring in the first period when Girling dropped the ball over from Rensselaer's 40-yard line. In the second period, Jackson intercepted Peart's forward pass and ran 65 yards for a touchdown. Girling kicked goal. In the latter part of the third period Union scored again when Roof intercepted a forward pass from Gallagher and broke through Rensselaer's interference for a 40-yard run for a touch down. Roscrans kicked a goal. In the fourth period, Union forged on to Rensselaer's 5-yard line, and after successive plunges Beaver carried the ball over on the fourth down. Girling kicked goal. Gallagher, Young, Goodell starred for Rensselaer while Girling, Roof and J. Beaver played best for Union. The line-up:

Rensselaer.	Position.	Union.
Parrott	Right end	Friday
Lockman	Right tackle	Jenkins
Praeger		Rocknell
Connant	Right guard	Jackson
Young	Centre	Hokkerk
Frank	Left guard	Price, Gardner
Con. Moore	Left tackle	Wood
Zahn, Schildt	Left end	Starbusk, Atkins
Peart	Quarter back	J. Beaver
Gallagher	Right half back	Roof
Goodell	Left half back	Rosecrans, Mudge
O'Hara	Full back	Girling, Angerson

Umpire—Mr. Saunders, Columbia. Referee—Mr. Draper, Williams. Head Linesman—Mr. Huntley, N. Y. U. Periods—15 and 12 minutes each.

Scoreless Tie at Stevens Tech.

Stevens "Tech" and Delaware College ended one of the most exciting games witnessed this season on Castle Point Field in a tie, neither side scoring. Both teams restorted to straight football throughout.

Todd, as usual, played a great game for Stevens, his long end runs being the feature of the game. The fine punting of Webb and the line plunging of Herrisoff were also excellent. Crawford and Gray of Delaware played a star game. The line-up:

Stevens.	Position.	Delaware.
Howell	Left end	Smart
Stretch	Left tackle	E. Wilson
Oldis	Left guard	Greeve
Hilli	Centre	Cruthers
Graydon	Right guard	Handy
Hoinkis	Right tackle	Cann
Moeller	Right end	Groff
Anderson	Quarter back	Fidance
Todd	Right half back	Gray
Herrisoff	Left half back	Taylor
Webb	Full back	Crawford

Substitutions—Delaware, Foster for Cann, Newton for Foster, Cann for Greeve, Foster for Foster, Foster for Newton, Greeve for Foster; Stevens, Marshall for Howell, Howell for Marshall, awl for Graydon, Poole for Herrsioff.

Referee—Mr. Fawer of Princeton. Umpire—Mr. Way of Swarthmore. Head linesman—Mr. Burnham of Stevens. Time of periods—Ten minutes each.

Brown Barely Defeats Vermont.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 31.—Brown had hard work to beat Vermont, 12 to 9, on Andrews Field today. The work of the linemen on both teams was poor. Vermont's touchdown was made as a result of Gordon's blocked punt, the ball going behind Brown's goal line, where Malcolm fell on it for the score. Malcolm kicked a goal from Brown's 22-yard line for Vermont's other score. Brown scored soon after the first period started, and got another in the third, the latter being on the prettiest forward pass seen on the field this year. Murphy on a long throw from Gordon made 50 yards, and Norcross won across the score on the next play.

Previous to the game the Brown cross-country runners defeated the Worcester Polytechnic Institute runners over a four-and-a-half-mile course. The score was 26 to 31 and the time 23:49 2-5.

Sanction for Speedway Auto Race.

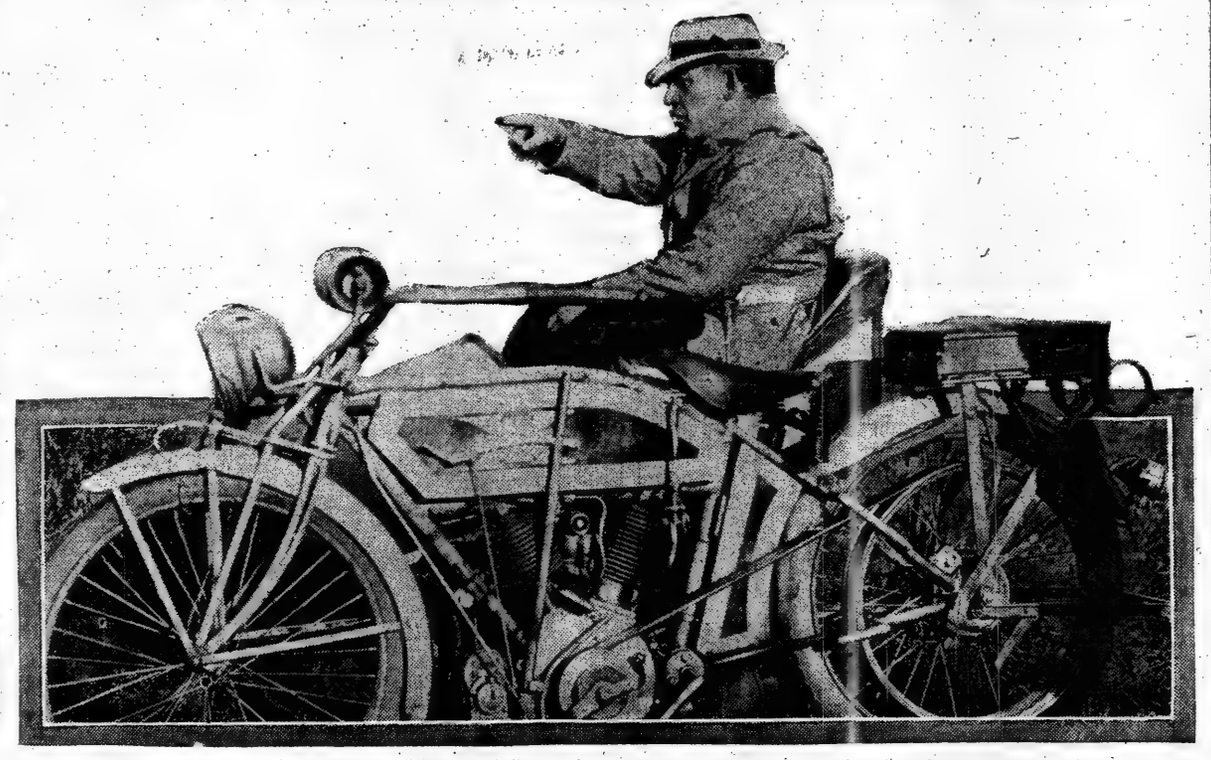
INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 31.—Official sanction has been obtained by the Indianapolis motor speedway from the American Automobile Association for its next five-hundred-mile race, thereby refuting recent reports to the effect that the owners of the Hoosier tracic contemplated breaking with the parent organization. Speedway officials assert that they are on the friendliest terms with the A. A. A., and have no thought of taking independent action.

The recent announcement by the track management that it would in the future supervise manufacturers' tests on its own responsibility is declared well founded on precedent, similar trials having been conducted under the auspices of the Chicago Automobile Club without A. A. A. sanction, nor, it is said, is there any animus manifested toward the A. A. A. by the speedway in taking such action.

Williams Stay-at-Homes Celebrate.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Oct. 31.—Williams undergraduates went wild this afternoon when they heard of the remarkable showing made by the 'Varsity football team against the Tigers at Princeton this afternoon. To show their enthusiasm for the work of the team a big bonfire was made on the old campus and the undergraduates gathered around it and pandemonium was

A NOVEL METHOD OF COACHING A FOOTBALL TEAM



Coach Alonzo A. Stagg of the University of Chicago football team has been badly crippled by rheumatism since the start of the football season, but determined that this should not interfere with his work he has employed a motor cycle side-car in which he is driven by the cycle driver up and down the field behind his charges during the practice.

WILLIAMS COLLEGE TIES PRINCETON

Tigers' Ends Fail to Check Fast Backfield of Massachusetts Team.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 31.—Williams College's fast backfield surprised Princeton here this afternoon and held the Tigers to a 7-to-7 tie.

Toolan proved the hero for the visitors and left Princeton with a reputation greater than that which he had when he came. It was his sensational running that baffled the Tigers repeatedly and forced them to be satisfied with a tie score.

The showing made by Princeton indicates a busy week ahead for them. The most disappointing feature of their playing was the work of the ends. Brown and Lamberton started, and played far below their usual standard. In running down they allowed the Williams backs to get a start that proved disastrous. In covering forward passes, too, they failed. This was due in large part, however, to the poor throwing of the ball. Once again Princeton's open game failed to materialize. Out of ten attempted passes one proved successful, and that was of the horseshoe variety.

The generalship of the Princeton team was poor. The fact that Princeton rushed the ball over 200 yards, twice as far as did their opponents, and that Driggs outpunted Eels of Williams by ten yards, would indicate that Princeton should not have been held to a tie. The failure of forward passes which crossed the goal line and went out of bounds lost the ball for the Tigers in critical moments. Ames threw away an opportunity to win for his team at the close of the fourth period, when, with the score tied and the ball on Williams's 20-yard line, he elected to try a forward pass instead of giving the ball to Law for a drop kick.

Williams put up a plucky game against their heavier adversaries. Not only did the backfield do brilliant work, but the line displayed unexpected strength repeatedly. The purple forwards broke up the Tiger offense on the two-yard line in the second quarter and took the ball on downs. Glick was the only man they couldn't stop. His playing was the one redeeming feature for Princeton.

The ball shot from one end of the field to the other with lightning rapidity at the outset of the game. Williams kicked off to Lamberton, who ran back to the 35-yard line. A 60-yard punt by Driggs put Williams on their one-yard line, from which position Eels kicked out 35 yards. After one first down the Williams line held, and Ames attempted a goal from the field. At this time neither Tibbott nor Law, who had done all of the Tigers' drop kicking to date, were on the field. Ames's kick was blocked, and Furness fell on the ball on his 35-yard line. Toolan then surprised the Tigers with a 55-yard run, Moore catching him from the rear. Before the Princeton players recovered from this setback, Toolan shot a perfect forward pass to Overton for a touchdown. Eels kicked the goal.

Glick went in for Ames, and iDckerman for Moore at the opening of the second period. After an exchange on kicks Driggs intercepted a short pass, and on the next play Frank Glick got away for 60 yards before he was downed by Overton in a stern chase. After making one first don, the Purple defense again stiffened.

Glick called for a forward pass, but the ball was intercepted on the two-yard line. Princeton kept the ball in Williams's territory, but could not score.

In the second half Hogg picked up a fumble for Princeton and paved the way for a spirited attack. Three line plays by Driggs and Trenkmann placed the ball on Williams's one-yard line. Glick and Trenkmann made four yards each. Glick's quarter back buck added one more, and Trenkmann then got the ball. Tompkins saved Williams, however, and broke through the line and downed the Tiger back for a three-yard loss. Princeton kept plugging away and was finally rewarded in the final quarter. Another fumble gave them the ball on the 14-yard line. After four plays Glick shot over the line for the Tigers' first score. Law was substituted immediately to kick the goal, and filled the breach successfully.

In the last two minutes of play the Orange and Black made its one completed pass. Law shot the ball 40 yards to Highley, who was subbing for Brown. This put his team within striking distance, but a second pass lost the ball and the chance to win. Line-up and summary:

Princeton.	Position.	Williams.
Lamberton	Left end	Hubbell
Love	Left tackle	Garfield
Shenkle	Left guard	Eeels
Gennert	Centre	Funnes
Hogge	Right guard	Driscoll
Ballin	Right tackle	Brown
Brown	Right end	Laplante
Ames	Quarter back	Jones
Merrill	Half back	Toolin
F. Trankmann	Right half back	Overton
Driggs	Full back	Tomkins

Score by periods: Princeton, 0, 0, 0, 7—7; Williams, 7, 0, 0, 0—7.

Referee—Mr. Pendleton, Bowdoin. Umpire—Mr. Hallahan, Boston Herald. Linesman—Mr. Plumer, Cornell. Time of periods—Fifteen minutes each.

Princeton scoring: Touchdown—Glick. Goal from touchdown—Law. Williams: Touchdown—Overton. Goal from touchdown—Eels.

Substitutes—Princeton, Glick for Ass, Dickerman for Moore, Moore for Dickerman, Law for Driggs, Highley for Lamberton, Shea for Brown, Boland for Law, Driggs for Boland, Law for Driggs, Ames for Glick; Williams, Austin for Eels, Eels for Austin, Austin for Eels.

Indianapolis Weeding Out Team.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 31.—Waivers have been obtained on Daddy Livingstone, Jim Galloway, Willis Cole, Sandy Burk, Chief Laroy, and Johnny Kelleher, who played with the Indianapolis American Association club last season, it became known today. Manager Hendricks intimated that almost an entirely new team would represent Indianapolis next season.

Harness Races at Tuxedo.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., Oct. 31.—The Fall matinee given by the Tuxedo Horse Show Association closed here today with some very exciting racing. Many society people, who were spending the day here, witnessed the races, and a large contingent of horse followers from Orange County were also present.

Six races were held today and one special race, in which The Expose, driven by William Burgess of the Parkway Farms, went to beat 2:20, doing the mile in 2:16½, the best time of the Fall meeting. The summary:

Class A Trotting.—Best two in three; one-mile heats.

Directum B., Riverside Farms, (Dickerson)	2	1 1
Elsie Gentry, Ardea Farms, (Harriman)	1	2 2
Campania, Parkway Farms, (Burgess)	3	3 3

Time—2:17¼; 2:30; 2:29.

Class B Trotting.—Best two in three; one-mile heats.

The Expose, Parkway Farms, (Burgess)	1	1
Roberta Bingen, Brook Farms, (Murray)	2	3
McClintock, W. F. Redmond, (Miller)	3	2

Time—2:17¼; 2:18½.

Class D Trotting.—Best two in three; one-mile heats.

Empress of Russia, Brook Farms, (Murray)	1	1
Notice B., P. Lorillard, Jr., (Lorillard)	3	2
Helena Constantine, Monts Cristo Farms, (Harriman)	2	3

Time—2:19¼; 2:19¾.

Class F Trotting.—Best two in three.

Just So, Edward Lafferty, (Lafferty)	1	1
Prince B. H. Manaye, (Montanye)	2	2
Mona, William Berry, (Berry)	3	3

Time—2:24¼; 2:24.

WILLIAMS'S FORMIDABLE FOOTBALL LEADERS.

Capt. Payson, right half back.

Coach Daly

KINGSLEY ADDS ANOTHER VICTIM

Takes Horace Mann Into Camp and Keeps Its Record of No Defeats Since 1912.

Horace Mann's football eleven went down to defeat at the hands of the strong Kingsley School eleven of Essex Fells, N. J., yesterday afternoon by a score of 10 to 0. The game was played on the Horace Mann Field. The Kingsley School has not lost a football contest since 1912. Both teams played on even terms, and the Kingsley victory came after the hardest sort of line bucking and quick headwork.

Kingsley outplayed its rivals in the first and second quarter, but met stiff opposition at critical moments, failing to score in either period. In the third quarter Kingsley drove the New York lands down the field, and Tremaine dropped a field goal over the bars from the 35-yard line. In the final period Bingham, Kingsley's full back, ran 70 yards to a touchdown. The line-up follows:

Kingsley.	Position.	Horace Mann.
Schultz	L. E.	Kadison
Vendrell	L. T.	Tying
George	L. G.	Raymond
Gryden	C.	Livingston
Underwood	R. G.	Hafflacker
Tooley	R. T.	Prince
Reavey	R. E.	Kampe
Tremaine	Q. B.	Goepel
Sperry	L. H. B.	Coburn
Field	R. H. B.	Rosenthal
Bingham	F. B.	Horn

Touchdown—Bingham. Field goal—Tremaine. Goal from touchdown—Sperry. Referee—Jones. Umpire—Moeller, Newark High School. Time of quarters—10 minutes each.

A new record in schoolboy football scores was hung up by the St. Paul's School eleven yesterday afternoon when they defeated the Oyster Bay High School team on the former's field at Garden City by the score of 92 to 0. The Oyster Bay lads were completely baffled by the open playing of the St. Paul's team, which executed a long string of forward passes for telling gains. A total of fourteen touchdowns were scored by the victors, five of them resulting from forward passes.

The line-up follows:

St. Paul's (92.)	Position.	Oyster Bay (0.)
Smith	Left end	Freeman
Waterman	Left tackle	Wright
Hendrickson	Left guard	Hill
Miller	Centre	Ervin
Horsfall	Right guard	Plower
Brown	Right tackle	Kitson
Birch	Right end	Tinker
Dietrich	Quarter back	Haimsseit
Reed	Left half back	Phippe
Woodburn	Right half back	Fox
Emery	Full back	Freeman

Touchdowns—Emery, (4,) Woodburn, Reed, (4,) Dietrich, (3.) Smith, (2.) Goals from touchdowns—Woodburn, (8.) Referee—John Thorpe, Columbia. Umpire—Mr. Smith, Vermont. Head linesman—Mr. Sporer, Trinity. Time of quarters—Ten minutes.

Brooklyn Prep's football eleven won the championship among the Catholic schools of Brooklyn yesterday afternoon by defeating St. John's Prep. School at Hawthorne Field by the score of 19 to 0. Two of the three touchdowns were made on flukes. The line-up:

Brooklyn Prep.	Position.	St. John's Prep.
Reilly	Left end	McCormick
McCulloch	Left tackle	Salamack
Sullivan	Left guard	Raguera
Vail	Centre	Healy
Carlin	Right guard	Guereri
Weldon	Right tackle	McGuinn
McGrath	Right end	Kenney
Parks	Quarter back	Murphy
Kelley	Left half back	Viverito
Etzel	Right half back	Merrick
Deghuee	Full back	Court

Touchdowns—Weldon, Deghuee, McGrath. Goals from touchdown—Deghuee. Substitutes—For Brooklyn Prep.: P. Carlin for Kelley, Kelley for Parks, McMahon for Etzel, Etzel for McMahon; for St. John's: Connell for McGuinn, McGuinn for Connell. Referee—Mr. Edgoate. Umpire—Mr. Fitzgerald. Head linesman—Mr. McCaffrey.

Flushing High School found little trouble in defeating the light St. Francis College eleven yesterday afternoon at Ingleside Field, Flushing, by a score of 34 to 0.

The second football team of Poly Prep defeated the Boys' High seconds yesterday afternoon at Poly's field by the score of 19 to 0.

Other Local School Scores.

Kingsley School, 10; Horace Mann, 0.
St. Paul's School, 92; Oyster Bay School, 0.
Brooklyn Prep, 19; St. John's, 0.
Flushing High, 34; St. Francis College, 0.

N. Y. M. A. Runs Up Big Score.

The New York Military Academy of Cornwalls-on-Hudson defeated the Irving High School of Tarrytown, N. Y., yesterday by a score of 59 to 0. This is the first time that the New York Military Academy has been scored upon this year. The New York Military Academy expects to play Boys' High and Commercial High of Brooklyn next month. They defeated the Manual Training High School by a score of 20 to 0 last month.

Resolutions for Mrs. Sullivan.

Mrs. James E. Sullivan, widow of the late leader of amateur sports, received at her home, 540 West 114th Street, yesterday a set of engrossed resolutions from the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, of which Mr. Sullivan was President for more than twenty years. Terence Farley, Chairman of the Resolutions Committee, had charge of the presentation, which took place after the two national championships had been decided at South Field, directly opposite the home of Mrs. Sullivan. Many men prominent in athletics attended the simple ceremony. Among them were Frederick W. Rubien, President of the Metropolitan Association; Supreme Court Justice Bartow S. Weeks, Acting Secretary-Treasurer of the A. A. U.; George Mathews, representing the local Registration Committee; Herman Oberlissening, official handicapper of the Metropolitan Association, and C. Y. Gilbert, winner of the one-mile American running championship in 1885, and a life-long friend of Mr. Sullivan's.

COLUMBIA TENNIS.

Wainwright and Miller in Final Match Win the Doubles.

S. Wainright, '15 L., and S. Miller, Jr., '15 L., have won the doubles in the tennis tournament at Columbia University. The latter was the winner of the singles, which were completed Friday. Some remarkable playing featured this tournament, which extended over two weeks. In the finals the winning team was forced to defeat two freshmen, C. Hollander and B. Van Raalte, winning three straight sets, 6—4, 6—3, 6—3. Summary:

First Round—C. Hollander, '18, and B. Van Raalte defeated R. McKim, '18, and K. Kunhardt, '18, 8—6, 6—1; A. Haarem, '16 L., and A. Butler, '16 L., defeated F. Cowan, '17 L., and R. Bowers, '17, 6—2, 6—1; E. Untermeyer, '15, and L. Connick, '15 L., defeated E. Burghard, '16, and K. Herkert, '16 L., 4—6, 6—2, 6—2; S. Wainright, '15 L., and S. Miller, Jr., '15 L., defeated C. A. Funke, '16, and W. Katz, '18, 6—2, 6—4; F. Barth, '16, and K. Valentine, '15, defeated G. Oberrender, '16, and J. Shimmon, '17, 6—3, 3—6, 8—6; R. Tunis, '16, and H. Hubbard, '16 L., defeated O. Hammerstein, '16, and M. Meyer, '16, by default; T. Wood, '15, and A. Von Bernuth, '17, defeated F. T. Appleby, '16, and F. S. Appleby, '16, 6—2, 6—2; K. Grafton, '16 L., and W. Collins, '16, defeated H. Willis, '15, and D. Lamb, '17, 6—4, 4—6, 6—0.

Second Round—C. Hollander, '18, and B. Van Raalte, '18, defeated A. Haaren, '16 L., and A. Butler, '16 L., 6—4, 7—5; E. Untermeyer, '15 L., and L. Connick, '15 L., defeated S. Barth, '16, and K. Valentine, '15, 6—2, 6—4; S. Wainwright, '15 L., and S. Miller, Jr., '15 L., defeated R. Tunis, '16, and H. Hubbard, '16 L., 6—1, 6—2; T. Wood, '15, and A. Von Bernuth, '17, defeated K. Grafton, '16 L., and W. Collins, '16, 6—1, 5—7, 8—6.

Semi-finals—C. Hollander, '18, and B. Van Raalte, '18, defeated E. Untermeyer, '15 L., and L. Connick, '15 L., 6—2, 4—6, 6—2; S. Wainwright, '15 L., and S. Miller, Jr., '15 L., defeated T. Wood, '15 L., and A. Von Bernuth, '17, 6—1, 6—3.

Final—S. Wainwright, '15 L., and S. Miller, Jr., '15 L., defeated C. Hollander, '18, and B. Van Raalte, '18, 6—4, 6—3, 6—3.

New Tennis Champions.

W. Dickson Cunningham and Walter L. Pate clinched their hold on tennis titles during the past week. Cunningham won the Yale championship in singles in the largest tournament ever decided on the courts of New Haven. Cunningham, who is a young member of the West Side Club, defeated Jerry H. Weber of Chicago in the final by the score of 8—6, 7—5, 2—6, 1—6, 7—5. The champion is Captain of the Yale tennis and handball teams.

Pate, the Secretary of the National Ranking Committee, regained the championship of Brooklyn in Singles by defeating Robert H. Boggs, the defending player, at 6—4, 5—7, 1—6, 6—2, 10—8. The long match was fought through two sessions on the courts of the Brooklyn Tennis Club, Pate capturing the championship for the third time and with it making the valuable cup his permanent possession.

FOOTBALL RECORDS.

YALE.		HARVARD.
20—Maine	0	44—Bates	0
21—Virginia	0	44—Springfield	0
20—Lehigh	3	10—W. and J.	9
28—Notre Dame	0	13—Tufts	6
7—W. and J.	13	13—Penn. State	13
49—Colgate	7	7—Michigan	0
	23		28
PRINCETON.		PENNSYLVANIA.
12—Rutgers	0	14—Gettysburg	0
10—Bucknell	0	0—F. and M.	10
12—Syracuse	7	0—Lafayette	0
16—Lafayette	0	13—Navy	6
16—Dartmouth	12	7—Indiana	0
7—Williams	7	40—Swarthmore	6
	26		22
CORNELL.		INDIANS.
28—Ursinus	0	20—Albright	0
8—Pittsburgh	7	17—Lebanon Valley	0
7—Colgate	7	6—West Va. Res.	0
21—Indians	0	6—Lehigh	21
48—Bucknell	0	0—Cornell	21
28—Brown	7	3—Pittsburgh	10
48—Holy Cross	0	0—Pennsylvania	7
		3—Syracuse	24
179	28		83
NAVY.		ARMY.
13—Georgetown	0	49—Stevens	0
6—Pittsburgh	13	13—Rutgers	0
6—Pennsylvania	13	21—Colgate	7
48—West. Reserve	0	14—Holy Cross	0
16—No. Carolina	14	41—Villa Nova	0
90	39	138	7
BROWN.		LEHIGH.
24—Norwich	0	12—F. and M.	0
20—R. I. State	0	21—Indians	6
0—Amherst	0	3—Yale	20
15—Wesleyan	0	24—Carnegie	20
7—Cornell	28	27—Muhlenburg	0
12—Vermont	9	33—Johns Hopkins	0
79	37	120	46
FORDHAM.		N. Y. UNIVERSITY.
0—Georgetown	0	27—St. Stephens	0
7—Gallaudet	6	26—Hamilton	0
21—Rochester	0	13—Haverford	7
28—Middlebury	0	17—R. P. I.	7
21—Rhode Island	0
		83	14
77	6
AMHERST.		STEVENS.
0—Bowdoin	7	0—Army	49
17—Middlebury	0	13—Johns Hopkins	16
0—Brown	0	13—Union	7
0—Trinity	0	0—Haverford	38
16—Wesleyan	0	0—Delaware	0
0—Dartmouth	32
		26	110
83	39
WILLIAMS.		DARTMOUTH.
3—Vermont	0	20—Mass. Aggies	6
3—Dartmouth	21	74—Norwich	0
17—Springfield	13	21—Williams	3
20—Trinity	14	42—Vermont	0
7—Princeton	7	12—Princeton	16
		32—Amherst	0
50	55
		210	25
LAFAYETTE.		RUTGERS.
41—Delaware	0	0—Princeton	12
7—Ursinus	7	22—R. P. I.	0
0—Pennsylvania	0	0—Army	13
0—Princeton	16	17—Muhlenburg	7
14—Villa Nova	3	16—Tufts	7
0—Penn. State	17
		65	39
62	45
W. AND J.		PITTSBURGH.
28—Mt. Union	0	9—Cornell	3
105—Dickinson	0	21—Westminster	10
9—Harvard	10	13—Navy	0
28—Westminster	0	6—Indiana	0
12—Yale	7	21—Georgetown	0
40—West Virginia	0	96—Dickinson	0
251	17	166	3

DARTMOUTH IN DULL GAME.

Amherst Easily Beaten by 32 to 0—Many Players Injured.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 31.—Dartmouth had an easy time with Amherst today and won, 32 to 0. The Green team knew that it had an easy opponent, and this knowledge spoiled the game as a spectacle, for Dartmouth developed next to nothing on the offense and was content to reach out for occasional scores when down in its opponent's territory. Amherst put up a steady fight against a team which was impervious to her attack whenever it concentrated its attention on the game. If there was any feature, it was the fact that more injuries resulted from the afternoon's play than in any previous contest.

Whitney, Curtis, Telfer, Cotton, and Merrill were all on the bench from the start of the game, and injuries added McAuliffe, Child, and Murdock to the list before the final play. As a result Dartmouth was minus her entire first string backfield and three of her four tackles, and the dullness of the game was increased by the spectacle of linemen playing in various combinations of strange positions. Line-up:

Dartmouth.	Position.	Amherst.
Ellms	Left end	Goodridge
Pudrith	Left tackle	Swazey
Smith	Left guard	Cross
Milmore	Centre	Kimball
Spears	Right guard	Lind
Child	Right tackle	Shumway
Winship	Right end	Brown
Ghee	Quarter back	Cooper
Cannon	Left half	Warren
Gerrish	Right half back	Rider
Murdock	Full back	Ashley

Touchdowns—Ghee, (2;) Tuck, Cumiskey, Perry. Goals from touchdownTuck, (2.) Substitutes—Drtmouth: Perry for Ellms, Redfield for Perry, Merrill for Smith, Spears for Pudrith, Soutar for Merrill, Baxter for Milmore, Barrows for Soutar, Gile for Baxter, Colby for Spears, McAuliffe for Child, Duhamel for Cannon, Pudrith

TERRIERS BENCHED AT MINEOLA--ATLANTIC CITY AND METROPOLITAN GOLF---HORSE SHOW

NOROSS RADIANT BEST BULL TERRIER

Western Judge Has No Easy Task in Ring at "Club" Show at Mineola.

It was a small but very select group of dogs that faced Dr. R. L. James of Blue Island City, Ill., in the ring at the Mineola (L. I.) Fair Grounds yesterday at the ninth annual show of the Bull Terrier Club of America. About fifty dogs appeared before the judge, who was making his first appearance in the East. It was a trying task he had for James Mortimer, a veteran of the show ring both as exhibitor, manager, and judge, said "this is by far the best lot of bull terriers I ever saw in one show; the most evenly balanced lot, and the nearest to the very highest standard." Competitors, critics, breeders, and the judge agreed with him."

Under such circumstances criticism was to be expected, but there was little of it openly indulged in except in the decision in the winners' class for dogs, in which Dr. James placed E. J. Schmidt's Champion Artesian Invasion over T. S. Bellin's Heamoor Ted. This seemed particularly to displease the critics, who insisted that the latter was a bit nearer to the type which Eastern breeders fancy. It was purely a question of fancy as to those very minor points which always set the breeders at odds when discussing the finest of the fine points of the dog, points which to the average dog owner are so trifling as hardly to be distinguishable, such as carriage, stand, texture of coat and shape, and color of the eye.

Once again Dr. James's idea as to the right type of dog caused disagreement with his award when he gave the blue ribbon in the class for novice bitches to Mrs. C. G. T. Oswald's Spokane Tuffie, which had ears that were not cropped while the competitors in the class were all cropped as the bull terrier standard specifically says they must be. It was assumed that the doctor favored the uncropped dog.

As the judge had never seen any of the animals that were in the ring before, he was without prejudice, of course. But he found a much higher type than is customary in the Western exhibitions, where the standard is not adhered to so implicity as here in the East and abroad. There was general agreement with Dr. James's decision in declaring the bitch Champion Noross Radiant the best animal in the show, even though the placing of Champion Artesian Invasion as the best of the opposite sex, again came in for criticism and again in favor of Heamoor Ted. Summary:

Best Dog or Bitch in the Show.—Noross Kennels' bitch champion Noross Radiant, 2 years 4 months, by champion Noross Patrician-Gilt Edge Victoria; best of opposite sex, E. J. Schmidt's champion Artesian Invasion, same age, by combination Bob of Wonder-Joy of Clinton.

Winners.—Dogs—E. J. Schmidt's champion Artesian Invasion; reserve, J. S. Bellin's Heamoor Ted; bitches, Noross Kennels' champion Noross Radiant; reserve, T. S. Bellin's Burning Daylight.

Braces.—Noross Kennels' champion Noross Radiant and champion Noross Patrician; reserve, T. S. Bellin's Heamoor Ted and Burning Daylight.

Team of Four.—Noross Kennels' champion Noross Radiant, champion Noross Patrician, Noross Glory, and Noross Domino Girl; reserve, F. R. Herriman's Prince, Earl, Duke, and Lass.

Puppies.—Dogs—C. A. Helm's Dunblane Gladeye, first; W. Ivan Coulston's Noross Tango, second; E. T. O'Brien's Ireland's Hope, third. Bitches—Mrs. C. G. T. Oswald's Spokane Toffie, first, (only exhibit.)

Novice.—Dogs—F. R. Herriman's Prince, first; same owner, Earl, second; R. H. Elliott's Haymarket Patrician, third. Bitches—Mrs. C. G. T. Oswald's Spokane Toffie, first; R. H. Elliott's Haymarket Patricia, second; Noross Kennels' Noross Fashion, third.

American Bred.—Dogs—R. H. Elliott's Haymarket Patrician, first; C. A. Helm's Dunblane Glad Eye, second; Scott L. Libley's Williston B. L. M., third. Bitches—T. S. Bellin's Burning Daylight, first; S. L. Libby's Williston Empress, second; F. R. Herriman's Lass, third.

Limit, Dogs and Bitches not exceeding 35 pounds.—W. E. Cable, Jr.'s, Noross Conqueror, first; Noross Kennels' Noross Morning Glory, second; Mrs. W. E. Cable, Jr.'s, Noross Lassie, third.

Limit, over 35 Pounds.—Dogs—T. S. Bellin's Heamoor Ted, first; C. A. Helm's Dunblane Glad Eye, second; S. L. Libby's Williston B. L. M., third. Bitches—Noross Kennels' Glory, first; same owner's Dominoe Girl, second.

Open, Dogs and Bitches, not exceeding 35 pounds.—S. L. Libby's Williston Independence, first; W. E. Cable, Jr.'s, Noross Conqueror, second; Noross Kennel's Noross Morning Glory, third.

Open, over 35 pounds.—Dogs—E. J. Schmidt's Champion Artesian Invasion, first; T. S. Bellin's Heamoor Ted, second; R. H. Elliott's Haymarket Patrician, third. Bitches—Noross Kennels' Champion Noross Radiant, first; T. S. Bellin's Burning Daylight, second; S. L. Libby's Williston Rose, third.

Green Dogs and Bitches.—E. P. O'Brien's Ireland's Hope, first; Wex Jones's White Cavalier, second.

Yearling Dogs and Bitches.—T. S. Bellin's Heamoor Ted, first; S. L. Libby's Williston B. L. M., second; R. H. Elliott's Haymarket Patrician, third.

Breeders' Dogs and Bitches.—R. H. Elliott's Haymarket Patrician, first; S. L. Libby's Williston Independence, second; Corporation Kennels' Palladin, third.

Empire State and Canadian-owned Dogs and Bitches.—Noross Kennels' Champion Noross Radiant, first; T. S. Bellin's Heamoor Ted, second; W. E. Cable's Noross Conqueror, third.

Members' Class.—Dogs—Heamoor Ted, first; Haymarket Patrician, second; G. T. Shepard's New London Kupie, third. Bitches—Champion Noross Radiant, first; Burning Daylight, second; Williston Rose, third.

WELSH AND WOLGAST BOUT.

Ex-Champion Predicts That He Will Win Title from Englishman.

When Referee Billy Roche calls time to send Freddie Welsh, world's lightweight champion, and Ad Wolgast, the "Michigan Wildcat," together tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden, there will be many anxious ones waiting for the ex-champion to make good with his prediction that he would win his title back by a knockout. Those who have seen Wolgast work the past few days at Cooper's gymnasum were well satisfied that the erstwhile champion is fit to show his best. Not since Wolgast fought Battling Nelson, when he won the title of lightweight champion, has he been in better condition that he is at present.

Welsh may be dethroned as champion tomorrow night, but it will not be until after he is helpless on the mat. The champion did not pick Wolgast as a soft one, but, on the other hand, selected him because he is a fighter of the first water.

The preliminaries arranged by Manager Johnston are of high class. Eddie Morgan, bantamweight champion of Wales, will box the best product of the East at 124 pounds, Eddie Wallace, in the ten-round semi-final. In the six-round curtain raiser Eddie Nugent will oppose Jimmy Ryan—a pair of welterweights of the slugging variety. The first contest will be staged at 8:45.

FALL BASEBALL AT YALE.

Month's Practice Develops Team That Will Be Strong Next Year.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 31.—Yale's Fall baseball work has just been stopped by cold weather. Coach Frank Quinby has enjoyed a month of practice on the 'Varsity diamond, and has taken advantage of it with daily games between teams of the squad. As a result a veteran nine has been assured for the beginning of the 1915 season. Although missing the veteran campaigners, Capt. Blossom, Cornish, Gile and Brown, the losses appear entirely filled by the brilliant influx of material from last year's freshman class.

Harry LeGore gave promise, in 1917 uniform and in his career at Mercersburg, of proving one of Yale's greatest shortstops, and his batting and base running are of the same quality as his fielding. He and John Reilly, the third baseman, have turned down several major league offers. They will be side by side on the Yale nine next Spring and should prove a stonewall defense to the Blue.

In Milburn, of last year's freshman nine, Yale has a second baseman who seems sure to make good Cornish's loss. Milburn was one of the fastest infielders who ever wore a Yale freshman uniform, and batted for an average of .325.

First base will be fought for by "Dutch" Swihart, who held the place last Spring, and Bush, of the freshmen, who is a heavy batsman.

In Capt. Lou Middlebrook, Johnny Hughes, Vaughn, and Hal Pumpelly Yale has a veteran outfield of strength and speed, and Easton of the freshmen will make a hard effort to break into it.

Hunter, last year's backstop, and Shaffer of the freshmen should keep up the backstop standard.

Yale will be stronger in the box than for many years. "Pie" Way, the best member of the twirling staff last year; Dick Watrous, a big lefthander, who was ineligible last Spring; Larry Walsh of the substitute staff last season, and Underwood, a brilliant freshman pitcher, combine to assure the university a pitching squad of unusual ability.

Capt. Middlebrook has reappointed the coaching staff that has developed Yale nines for two years. Frank Quinby will again have charge of the general campaign, and the pitchers will be developed by Bernie Tommers.

Balch Western Golf President.

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—Nomination being equivalent to election George R. Balch of the Cincinnati, Ohio, Golf Club will be the next President of the Western Golf Association, according to announcement made today by R. R. Stone, Secretary of the association. Mr. Balch will succeed Frank L. Woodward of Denver, who declined renomination by reason of having been placed at the head of the United States Golf Association ticket. Through Secretary Stone the Nominating Committee of the association issued the ticket which will be voted on at a meeting to be held here on Jan. 16. George F. Henneberry of Glen View, Chicago, has been nominated to succeed Mr. Stone as Secretary.

Handicap Golf at Weeburn.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Oct. 31.—An 18 hole handicap at golf was played today at Weeburn. The results: Chesters Selleck, 84, 5—79; J. S. Gillespie, 87, 6—81; J. J. Cloonan, 94, 12—82; D. L. Elliman, 98, 14—84; T. E. Rinehart, 93, 8—85; R. Burchard, 102, 16—86; J. H. Staub, 95, 8—87; P. N. Knapp, 100, 11—89; D. T. Woodbury, 109, 16—93. In the October prize play A. S. Pitt beat Dr. Schavoir 1 up at the nineteenth hole in the first four. In the second four J. S. Knapp defeated H. S. Miller 1 up.

TRACK AND FIELD SPORTS.

Another year will pass before the A. A. U. rules will be changed to conform with those of the International Athletic Federation, as planned by "Jim" Sullivan. The legal men of the governing organization have not time to draw up the necessary legislation. Piece by piece it will have to be framed. Some new changes are certain to be made this year, but these will be insignificant to those which will follow.

Athletic supporters agree that there is room for much needed reforms in the A. A. U. code, which can be copied from the International Federation rules. Within two years the rules of this body will be recognized throughout the world, and will govern amateur athletic sports wherever they are fostered.

While the change is certain to come, the fifty-six pound weight throw for height, and the pole vault for distance will hardly be eliminated from the indoor championship programme this year. There are objections to be overcome and other trivial matters in conection with the obliteration of these events which will hold up the Championship Committee. The New York A. C. and Irish-American A. C. are willing to abide by the changes, for neither will gain by such action. In past years the Irish Club swept the fifty-six pound weight throw, while the New York's invariably captured the majority of places in the vault.

RISLEY ATLANTIC CITY GOLF CHAMPION

Third Time in Three Years He Has Won Title of Home Club.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 31.—Maurice E. Risley of the home club won the chief cup in the annual Fall golf tournament of the Country Club of Atlantic City today when he defeated Thomas P. Endicott, another local player, by 5 up and 4 to play in the final round. It was the third time in three years that Risley has won the chief cup in either the Spring or Fall tournaments. Earlier in the day Risley eliminated Morris P. Jones of Frankford by a 3 and 2 margin, while Endicott brushed aside Dr. F. H. McCall of the local club on the twentieth green.

Chisholm Beach, the New York Athletic Club champion, won the cup in the second sixteen, defeating Garfield Scott of Philadelphia, 2 and 1.

Henry J. Topping of Greenwich and Harry G. Legg of Minneapolis played off their tie for the qualification medal. Topping won it by going around in 79, as against 82 for the Westerner. Summary:

First Sixteen.—Semi-Final Round—Thomas H. Endicott, Atlantic City, beat Dr. F. H. McCall, Atlantic City, 1 up, (20 holes;) Maurice E. Risley, Atlantic City, beat Morris H. Jones, Frankford, 3 and 2.

Final Round—Risley beat Endicott, 5 and 4.

Beaten Eight, First Sixteen.—Semi-final Round—A. W. Brand, St. Andrew's, beat Spencer D. Wright, Aronimink, 1 up; Henry J. Topping, Greenwich, beat W. E. Shackelford, Atlantic City, by default.

Final Round—Brand beat Topping by default.

Second Sixteen.—Semi-Final Round—Garfield Scott, Philadelphia Country, beat Harold McSweeney, Atlantic City, 2 and 1; Chisholm Beach, Fox Hills, beat Herman Wendell, St. David's, 1 up.

Final Round—Beach beat Scott, 2 and 1.

Third Sixteen.—Semi-Final Round—R. C. Maxwell, Trenton, beat H. B. Newton, Frankford, 5 and 4; Charles A. Spofford, Garden City, beat Thomas Halton Whitemarsh, 1 up.

Final Round—Maxwell beat Spofford, 2 and 1.

Fourth Sixteen.—Semi-Final Round—S. Y. Ramage, Wanango, beat Horace Smedley, Merion, 6 and 5; Percy Thomas, Atlantic City, beat E. M. Jones, Philadelphia Country, 3 and 4.

Final Round—Ramage beat Thomas, 4 and 3.

Fifth Sixteen.—Semi-Final Round—C. E. Cattell, Atlantic City, beat H. C. Edwards, Atlantic City, 4 and 3; F. M. Small, Old York Road, beat C. M. McInnes, Princeton, 2 and 1.

Final Round—Cattell beat Small, 4 and 2.

SURPRISES AT SQUASH.

Champions Defeated in Fall Tournament at Heights Casino.

Several surprises marked the early rounds of the Fall squash tennis tournament of the National Squash Tennis Association yesterday on the courts of the Heights Casino Club, Brooklyn. J. O. Low, Heights Casino, defeated E. W. Putnam, the Columbia Club champion, in easy fashion, but R. W. Goepel, who defeated Low for the Heights Casino championship last Fall, lost to F. S. Keeler, Columbia Club. The latter match was well contested, but Keeler's superior experience materially aided in bring about teh result.

Charles M. Bull, Jr., Heights Casino, and H. S. Winston, Harvard Club, played the best match of the day. Bull's knowledge of the court angles and long experience in tournament play proved too much for Winston, who was plainly nervous. Bull won the first game with little difficulty, but Winston rallied in the second and equalized matters. The third and deciding game went to extra sets before Bull won, 18-14.

George Whitney, Harvard Club, was drawn against H. D. Buckley, Columbia, but withdrew with the consent of all the players and J. H. Williams, Heights Casino, was substituted. The summary:

Preliminary Round—F. S. Keeler, Columbia, defeated J. Taylor, Princeton, 15—10, 15—10; A. J. Cordier, Heights Casino, defeated F. W. Bellamy, Heights Casino, 15—8; 12—15, 15—4.

First Round—Charles M. Bull, Jr., Heights Casino, defeated H. S. Winston, Harvard, 15—8, 6—15, 18—14; F. S. Keeler, Columbia, defeated R. Goepel, Heights Casino, 15—10, 15—13; J. V. Onatavia, Jr., Harvard, defeated R. E. T. Riggs, Heights Casino, 15—3, 15—10; Hamilton Hadden, Harvard, defeated W. H. Vanderpoel, squash, 15—10, 15—6; J. O. Low, Heights Casino, defeated E. W. Putnam Columbia, 15—12, 15—11, E. U. Du Pont Irving, Harvard, defeated D. R. Noyes squash, 15—10, 15—3.

GOLF FOR RELIEF FUND.

Garden City Beat Nassau in Match for Belgians' Benefit.

Something like thirty on a side got together in a team match on the links of the Garden City Golf Club yesterday. The visiting delegation represented the Nassau Country Club, but when the total had been footed the honors easily rested with the home team, 77 to 56. The incentive was a desire to do something for the Belgian relief fund, and every competing golfer contributed something toward the cause.

It had originally been intended to have the opposing factions made up of foursomes, with the best ball counting two points and the next best ball one point. Those were the conditions except where singles were played. Walter J. Travis paired with Ralph Peters, Jr., defeated Findlay S. Douglas and Howard F. Whitney, the first named scoring nine points. The greatest "clean-up," however, went to the credit of another Garden City pair, James L. Taylor and T. M. Robertson, who scored 20 points at the expense of W. F. Richards and A. E. Whitney.

The summary follows:

GARDEN CITY.

C. L. Tappin and C. E. Gardner, Jr.	2
Raph Peters and H. Wigglesworth	2
C. J. Sullivan and W. B. Rhett	8
J. C. Powers and A. C. Clapp	0
W. J. Travis and Ralph Peters, Jr.	9
J. L. Taylor and T. M. Robertson	20
M. J. McConville	0
Harold Goodwin and J. B. Mabon	8
W. R. Simons and Louis Livingston	0
John Anderson	0
F. Smith	3
J. C. Lord and R. Frederick	0
C. B. Meenuhy and H. C. Duval	5
W. H. Mills and A. E. Smythe	0
George E. Watson and C. P. Turner	0
C. Wallace and H. H. Man	0
G. D. Breck	9
Total	77

NASSAU.

G. T. Brokaw and W. E. Kimball	0
H. Dean and G. C. Smith	0
F. C. Jennings and William L. Hicks	0
J. C. Renard and Victon Sorchan	17
F. S. Douglas and H. F. Whitney	0
W. F. Richards and A. E. Whitney	0
J. H. Ottley	2
S. C. Mabon and H. W. Taft	0
A. L. Norris and W. R. Thurston	0
H. Corkran	6
A. M. Peck	0
C. Sayer and H. W. Maxwell, Jr.	16
Edward Kemp and H. O. Smithers	0
William Bearn and F. L. Bermingham	2
Seney Plummer and C. E. Richardson	8
H. W. Maxwell and T. F. Millett	4
A. C. Sumner	0
Total	56

Four-ball foursomes competition, with combined scores counting, was the principal attraction at the Forest Hill Field Club yesterday. The winning pair, L. Andrews and L. Hack, had a score of 84—19—65, while J. A. Wilson and R. Sanderson, with 74—8½—65½, were a close second. There was also a sweepstakes in two classes. The Class A winner proved to be T. J. Lintott, with 84—12—72, while there was a tie for second place involving R. Sanderson and J. A. Wilson, with respective cars of 81—8—73 and 82—9—73. H. Smith and C. B. Harris, each with a score of 104—27—71, were involved in a tie for the Class B prize. The foursomes scores follow: L. Andrews and L. Hack, 84—19—65; J. A. Wilson and R. Sanderson, 74—8½—65½; J. B. Garfield and W. Allsopp, 76—8—68; R. Gordon and H. Salmon, 86—19—71.

At the Glen Ridge Country Club members took part in a best ball handicap yesterday, resulting in a triple tie, involving J. O. Newell and H. M. Walker, R. Bickforth and F. Conneil, and H. B. Rogers and B. G. Bartlett, each with a net score of 68.

The following returned cards: J. O. Newell and H. M. Walker, 68; R. Bickforth and F. Conneil, 68; H. B. Rogers and B. G. Bartlett, 68; H. J. Forest and C. W. Yates, 70; L. N. Olds and W. J. Worcester, 70; Clarence Place and G. B. Martin, 70; B. C. Dunham and H. Cathfield, 73; H. D. Smith and W. Thomas, 72; G. D. White and P. E. Connell, 73; Charles Ames and E. A. Greeman, 73; R. C. Thomson and Harry Snyder, 75; H. E. Benedict and F. Bywater, 75.

Waddell Catchings won the eighteen-hole medal-play handicap, with a card of 86, 10—76, on the links of the Fox Hills Golf Club yesterday. Matches were also run off in the President's Cup series, resulting as follows: Charles McGhee beat R. R. Mallock, 7 up and 6 to play; T. D. Conroy beat G. W. Fairchild, 5 up and 4 to play; C. Joost, Jr., beat G. E. Armstrong, 9 up and 1 to play; B. T. Allen beat John Kerr, 3 up and 2 to play.

J. I. Simons, with 81, 6—75, won the Class A Sweepstakes at the Montclair Golf Club yesterday, while there was a tie for second place, involving Joseph Hodgson, Jr., and C. A. Gallagher, with respective cards of 82, 6—76, and 86, 12—76. In the Class B set W. H. Loftus captured the prize with 84, 13—71.

There was a woman's putting competition, won by Mrs. J. A. Philbrick, while Miss Allen was a close second.

In addition to the usual weekly Red Card competition in two classes yesterday, members of the Dunwoodie Country Club took part in the final round for the October Cup, also in two divisions. In the Class A division, N. D. Becker defeated W. M. Babcock on the tune of 2 up and 1 to play, while W. F. Allerton beat F. W. Nye, 5 up and 4 to play, in Class B. In Class A of the Red Card competition, Becker also won with a card of 86, 12—74, while C. H. Treadwell, with 93, 23—70, topped the Class B list.

Members of the Ardsley Club took part in an eighteen-hole medal play handicap yesterday. J. P. Clark, with 87—15—72, being returned the winner. There was a tie for second place, involving B. G. Broad and F. C. Werthmar, with respective scores of 96—23—73 and 91—18—73. The following returned cards: J. P. Clark, 87—15—72; B. G. Broad, 96—23—73; F. C. Werthmar, 91—18—73; R. H. Swartwout, 101—27—74; T. S. Fuller, 85—10—75; H. D. Gayley, 87—11—76; J. S. Spraker, 96—21—77; H. G. Sanford, 96—18—77; D. S. Horton, 96—18—78; D. Hewitt, 100—19—81; R. S. Thomas, 91—9—82.

In the best ball competition against par at the Scarsdale Golf and Country Club yesterday, W. B. Whitney and M. G. Starrett and George Standing, former champion racquet player, and E. W. Morrow finished all even. The play-off will be decided later. In the Class A of the sweepstakes, W. B. Whitney topped the list with 85—11—74, while in Class B Henry Melville, with 103—21—82, captured the prize.

W. B. Whitney and M. G. Starrett...Even
W. B. Whitney and M. G. Starrett...1 down
George Standing and E. W. Morrow...Even
B. H. Quereau and F. W. Douglas...1 down
Henry Herring and P. S. McLaughlin...1 down
S. C. Holston and E. F. Sanford...1 down
Scott Stewart and C. S. Allen...1 down

NOVEL FEATURES FOR HORSE SHOW

Famous Paintings to be Reproduced on Tanbark—Horseshoeing to "Anvil Chorus."

There will be some high class stagecraft used at the American Horse Show, which will be given for the benefit of the Red Cross and White Cross Societies at Madison Square Garden Dec. 7 to 12, if the plans now being considered are carried out. In the past, a horse show has been an exhibition of fine horses from one viewpoint, a society function from another, and a combination exhibit of horses and society from the popular point of view.

This year besides its old aspects the Horse Show will include a series of spectacles, according to the suggestions now being worked into a definite programme.

It has been proposed that the show be opened with a reproduction of Rosa Bonheur's celebrated painting, "The Horse Fair," using a hundred or more magnificent Percherons, Clydesdales, Shires, and Belgians, with beribboned tails and mains. These equine giants, stepping high and with necks proudly arched, would make an inspiring picture, and in all probability it will be carried out.

S. W. Taylor, a member of the Executive Committee, is preparing the plans of several unusual features. One of the sessions will be opened with an appealing scene. The arena lights will be dimmed and in a line across the floor will be ranged portable forges, with the flames from their furnaces shedding a red glow that reveals a dozen or more of the brawniest blacksmiths that can be secured in New York. Before each forge will be a horse, preferably a white one, the scene being set for a horseshoeing contest, in which the smiths will heat and hammer out a shoe and fix it in place. Prizes will be given for the best and speediest job. Mr. Taylor is working to secure the co-operation of the Arion Society or the Liederkranz, with the idea of having a male choir sing the "Anvil Chorus" to the accompaniment of the band and the anvils in the ring.

Another suggested feature is the assembling of a ring full of hansom cabs, with the wives or sweethearts of the cabmen in costume as passengers, something after the order of the attractive Coster features that are always included at Olympia.

The tea room could be made very attractive if the plan proposed of having a prominent social leader preside each afternoon, with the attendants in uniforms of the charities represented. This would lend an interesting atmosphere to this part of the show.

It is the purpose of the management to make the show as popular as possible, and one of the matters under consideration is the setting aside of certain sections of the upper gallery for school children and orphans every afternoon. These plans contemplate some attractive singing numbers for the edification of the assembled patrons of the show and tableaux showing the "Soldier's Dream" and other celebrated paintings.

Invitations have been addressed to President Wilson, Governor Glynn, the Secretaries of War and the Navy, to Mayor Mitchel and the heads of military organizations to be patrons of the show. Special boxes, appropriately decorated with bunting and the arms of the nation, State, and city will be at their disposal.

CODFISH SEASON HERE.

Cold Weather Brings Them to Deep Waters in This Section.

Codfish are taking the anglers' bait at the Cholera Banks, Stone Pile and Iberia wreck off Long Beach, Angler Banks, mussel beds off Rockaway, Seabright, the Farms, and Seventeen Fathoms. Thousands of men will go to the fishing grounds today because the advance schools arrived with the cold weather of Tuesday last, and since then boats coming into Wreck Lead, Rockaway, Long Beach, Sheepshead Bay, Gravesend Bay, and the Battery have had on board from half a dozen cod to three dozen or more.

As the colder weather approaches and becomes more steady these cod catches will increase in size and also the individual fish will be heavier, when the big schools are found by those who receive pay for finding schools of fish.

Twenty-seven pounds is the heaviest taken so far, but when everybody fishes, this fish will seem to be a baby in comparison with the fish brought in later in the season.

In recent years there have been numbers of cod taken weighing between forty and fifty pounds, although in our grandfathers' day cod were taken in the local outside waters and along the Manhattan shore weighing much more than that.

But in the last twenty or thirty years codfish have been almost exclusively found in deep-water. The nearest localities to search for them were the Cholera and Seabright banks and the Rockaway shoals.

Small crab, spearing, mussel, skimmer, soft clam, hard clam, and sandworm are all good baits. The favorite in the local waters is the large skimmer clam. Almost all of this clam is useful for bait. Practically the entire clam is one tough, white piece of meat, and usually the skimmer is as killing a bait as anybody could desire. Do not be sparing with them, say those who know, but put a big piece on each hook. Another good bait is the soft clam. Lacking either of these, good hard clam is excellent. Sandworms have been found good at all times. As a matter of fact, codfish will eat almost anything that comes along.

The rod for codfishing should not be more than seven feet long. Six feet is enough. The line should be a good twelve or fifteen thread line, carried on a reel capable of holding at least 400 feet. Most anglers prefer a large wooden reel.

Everything must be stout. The rod must be stiff enough to hold a good weight without yielding more than slightly. The sinker alone weighs from six to eight ounces and sometimes more, so the tackle must be strong if only on account of the natural and constant strain of the rig.

The codfish has a huge mouth, and hooks must range from 7-0 to 9-0. They must be of thick steel, well tempered, for when a big fish is hooked they are under immense strain.

Manhattan College Basket Ball.

The Manhattan College basket ball schedule as announced by Manager Killeen is as follows: Dec. 5, Princeton at Princeton; Dec. 12, C. C. N. Y. at New York; Dec. 16, Brooklyn College at New York; Jan. 8, Lafayette at New York; Jan. 13; Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute at New York; Jan. 16, Army at West Point; Jan. 19, Seton Hall at South Orange; Jan. 29, St. Johns at Brooklyn; Feb. 3, Seton Hall at New York; Feb. 9, St. Johns at New York; Feb. 13, Fordham at New York; Feb. 19, Rutgers at New Brunswick; Feb. 23, Niagara at New York, (pending;) March 1, Cathedral at New York; March 5, Brooklyn College at Brooklyn.

The home games will be played on De La Salle Court, 106 West Fifty-ninth Street.

SIX-DAY RACE FAVORITES

Eddie Root, New York.

Jackie Clark, Australia.

Floyd MacFarland, manager of the fifteenth annual six-day cycle race in Madison Square Garden, starting Nov. 16, has booked stars from France, Italy, Germany, Belgium, Denmark, England, Australia, Switzerland, and the United States for competitors.

On Saturday night, Nov. 14, with the indoor sprint and motor-paced championship events as the feature of a high-class card, the representatives of the various countries will engage in a preliminary skirmish to test their strength and the speed supply of their respective combatants.

The feature events will be the sprint championship and the motor-paced championship. In the sprint championship Frank Kramer will meet Francesco Verri of Italy, Alf Goullet of Australia, and Charles Meurger of France. The paced championship will be a battle between Clarence Carman, winner of the American national title this year on the outdoor tracks, and Leon Seres and Louis Darragon of France and Bobby Walthour of Atlanta, the runner-up to Carman for the American championship. Seres is the champion of Europe and Darragon won the championship of France.

Champion Kramer, who won his fourteenth American championship this year, in addition to taking the world's title, will face three of the best foreign sprinters. Goullet gave Kramer a battle for the American championship this year and lost to the Yankee by four points after a series of title races covering the greater part of the season. Verri has competed in America before, being beaten by Kramer in two match races in 1913, but he is a greatly improved rider, and in addition to regaining his title of national champion of Italy, won many of the European classics this year, including the Grand Prix of Italy. Meurger is the youngest star of Europe, being only 18 years of age.

Thys and Deruyter, refugees from Belgium, and Fidi-Russe, an Austrian refugee, will compete in the five-mile open professional and in the one-mile handicap along with Egg of Switzerland, Halstead of England, Grenda, Clark, and McNamara of Australia, and eighteen Yankee riders. The two amateur races which will be featured in this prelude to the six-day grind will mark the final appearance of Harry Kaiser, the amateur champion, and Willie Hanley of California, in the amateur class. They will both jump to the professional division to compete in the six-day race.

Bankrupt Stock of

Overman Tires

World's Best

Auto Tire

Will Be Sold at

1,657 Broadway, near 51st St.

Adjustments Guaranteed.

PREPARING FOR WINTER

If you intend to buy a new car next Spring, or if you wish to avoid the expense of Winter storage for your present car, dispose of your present motor at a good price. High-grade used cars are always in demand.
An advertisement in the Automobile Exchange column of The New York Times (see page 5, this section) will reach the automobile buying public.
Rates upon request.
Telephone Bryant 1000.

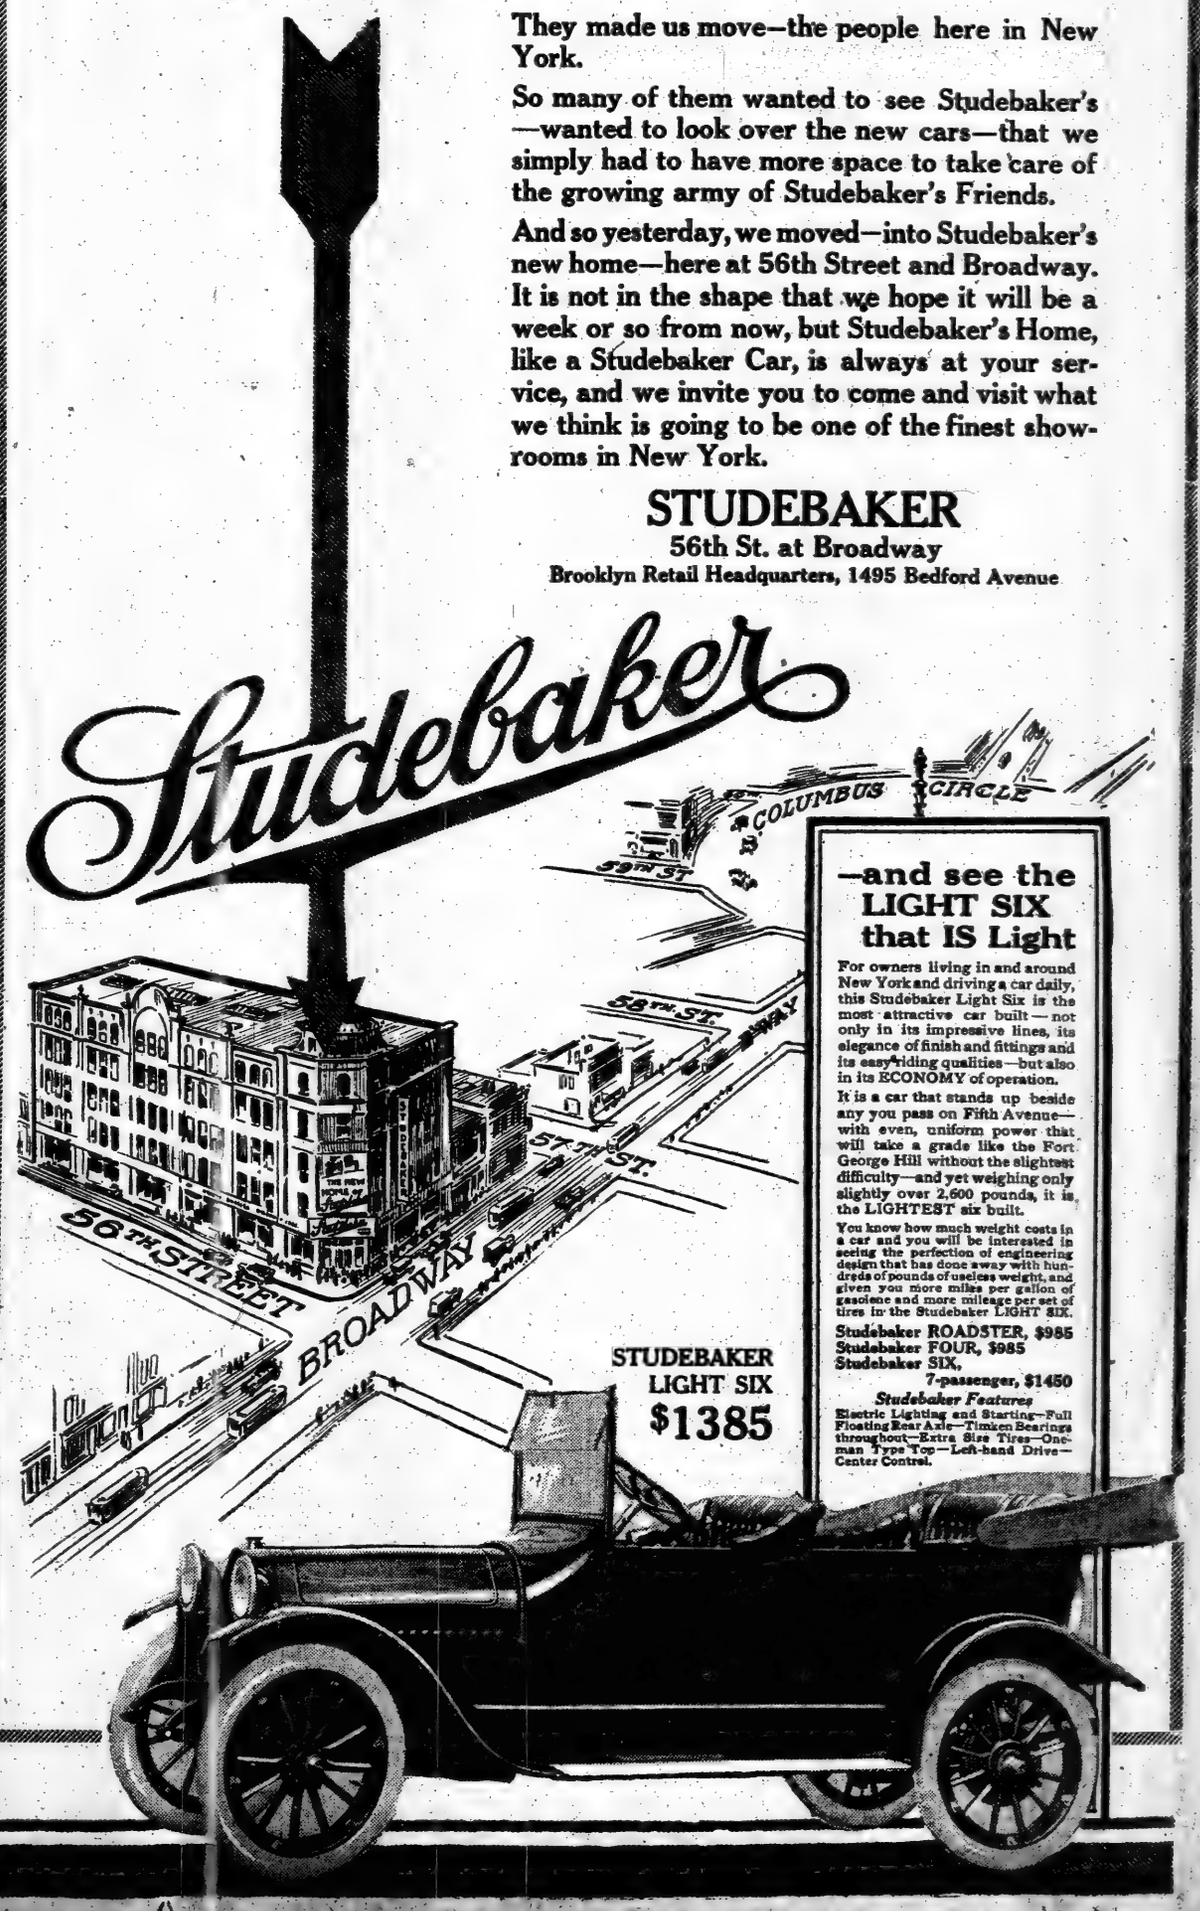
Studebaker Moves Into Larger Quarters (56th St. at Broadway)

They made us move—the people here in New York.

So many of them wanted to see Studebaker's—wanted to look over the new cars—that we simply had to have more space to take care of the growing army of Studebaker's Friends.

And so yesterday, we moved—into Studebaker's new home—here at 56th Street and Broadway. It is not in the shape that we hope it will be a week or so from now, but Studebaker's Home, like a Studebaker Car, is always at your service, and we invite you to come and visit what we think is going to be one of the finest showrooms in New York.

STUDEBAKER
56th St. at Broadway
Brooklyn Retail Headquarters, 1495 Bedford Avenue



—and see the LIGHT SIX that IS Light

For owners living in and around New York and driving a car daily, this Studebaker Light Six is the most attractive car built—not only in its impressive lines, its elegance of finish and fittings and its easy riding qualities—but also in its ECONOMY of operation.

It is a car that stands up beside any you pass on Fifth Avenue—with even, uniform power that will take a grade like the Fort George Hill without the slightest difficulty—and yet weighing only slightly over 2,600 pounds, it is the LIGHTEST six built.

You know how much weight costs in a car and you will be interested in seeing the perfection of engineering design that has done away with hundreds of pounds of useless weight, and given you more miles per gallon of gasoline and more mileage per set of tires in the Studebaker LIGHT SIX.

Studebaker ROADSTER, $985
Studebaker FOUR, $985
Studebaker SIX,
7-passenger, $1450

Studebaker Features

Electric Lighting and Starting—Full Floating Rear Axle—Timken Bearings throughout—Extra Size Tires—One-man Type Top—Left-hand Drive—Center Control.

JOHNSON'S FAILURE TO STAR A SURPRISE

Blames Failure of Senators to Support Him in Batting.

By BILLY EVANS,
American League Umpire.

What ails Walter Johnson?

That question has been put to me a thousand times during the last Summer. Baseball fans have always connected the name of the great Washington pitcher with victory. "Johnson pitches another shut-out" has been a standing head in every newspaper office since that star pitcher broke into the American League. During the past campaign readers of the sport pages on perusing the box scores were often apprised of the fact that Johnson had suffered another defeat. The average fan is an inquisitive individual. Walter Johnson, with his terrific speed, has always seemed to him well-nigh unbeatable.

Johnson himself is at a loss to explain his failure to win consistently. He insists that he feels as good as ever, that his speed is just as terrific as of old, that his arm does not trouble him in the least. Johnson offers as the argument for his failure to win the fact that his club has not played consistently behind him, has not made the runs for him it did in past years. In evidence he offers the record of his games during the 1914 campaign. The record shows that he has been beaten in a majority of the games lost by a one-run margin, in a number of cases his teammates failing to get a single run for him. In most of the games he held the opposition to a very low score.

On the other hand, fans and critics point out that many more hits have been made off Johnson this year than in previous seasons. They also dwell on the fact that he no longer boasts of the long string of strike outs that always in the past featured his work on the pitching mound. In rebuttal Johnson says he no longer tries for strike outs, as he did when breaking into the majors; that he depends more on his fielders; that he uses a curve and a slow ball very frequently.

I umpired the first game of ball Walter Johnson pitched in the American League. He opposed the Detroit team, then at its best, a slugging aggregation feared by every twirler in the organization. Johnson lost a hard luck game 2 to 1, although he pitched masterly ball. A few bunts, a throw that arrived a fraction late on an intended force, an error and a fly netted the Tigers enough runs to win. During the entire game Johnson relied entirely on speed, because he didn't boast of a curve at the time, and a slow ball to him was unknown. The Detroit club, to use the slang of the diamond, was a team that simply "murdered" speed. That Johnson could hold a team almost helpless that was noted for its ability to hit speed was proof conclusive that the big recruit had something on the ball.

For the first three or four years Johnson was in the American League he relied almost entirely on his speed. Now and then he dished up a dinky curve that was hardly taken seriously by the opposing batters. His success was marvelous; he was the sensation of the baseball world. Players regarded his fast ball with horror. Sluggers who favored pitchers with speed never enthused when Johnson was announced as the Washington pitcher. Most of them insisted that it was impossible to hit what you couldn't see, and Johnson's fast ball was listed as one thing that couldn't be seen with the naked eye. It was an unusual thing for him in those days to go through a game without striking out five or more men. Of late he has often pitched games in which less than five men were retired over the strike out route.

The very first day I watched Johnson work I marveled at his free, easy delivery. I recall what the veteran, Cy Young, said the first time he saw Johnson in action.

"What do you think of the big fellow?" I asked Cy as he walked past me on his way to the bench from the coaching lines. Johnson had just retired three of the hard-hitting Bostonians on strikes. No greater pitcher, taking all things into consideration, ever lived than Cy Young. I was curious to know just how he regarded Johnson.

"Why, that fellow is faster than Russie. He gets up his speed without any exertion. Those long, sweeping arms enable him to get a world of stuff on the ball. That fellow ought to pitch big league ball longer than I have, Bill, and you know I've been up here quite a while," remarked Cyrus.

Last year Johnson won thirty-six games and lost only seven, a very remarkable performance, but entirely within keeping of his ability. During the season just closed Johnson suffered a reversal of form, winning twenty-eight and losing eighteen.

In every respect except one, I think the Walter Johnson of 1914 is a better pitcher than the Johnson of former years. Johnson has one of the best curve balls in the league. It is fast and sharp breaking. He has a change of pace that is worth while, because he has better than the average control of the slow ball. He is a finished fielder, and a much improved hitter, and he always could hit the ball rather hard. In only one department has he shown an inclination to go the other way. I refer to his speed. Walter Johnson at present is as fast as any pitcher in the American League, possibly a bit faster, but Walter Johnson of today is not as fast as the Walter Johnson of former years.

In talking about catchers, I once asked Bill Dineen which catcher he liked best of all the men who had handled his delivery. "I was always fortunate," answered Bill, "in having good catchers. I did pretty well with most of them, always was a good winner with the great Criger receiving me, but after all, I guess I liked to pitch to Charley Farrell better than any of the others. I've often gone to the clubhouse after pitching a hard game feeling physically exhausted. I don't believe I ever felt that way after a game in which Charley Farrell had handled my delivery. Most catchers persisted in calling for my curve ball, knowing it was a mighty hard ball to move in the pinch they would invariably call for the curve. I believe I am conservative when I say that in games in which Farrell was the catcher I threw just half as many. Farrell used to make me rely to a large extent on my speed and slow ball, mixing the curve up now and then to keep the batsman a trifle upset. My experience taught me conclusively that the excessive use of the curve ball was a strain, not only on the pitching arm, but the entire system.

I have discussed this phase of the game with many of the best pitchers in the country. They seem a unit in the opinion that a pitcher can do much to weaken his arm by too excessive use of the curve ball. I feel certain that Walter Johnson would soon regain that lost speed which made him the most feared pitcher in the country if he would cut down his use of the curve.

Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Evans.

RIDING TO HOUNDS.

Plenty of Sport at Hunting Clubs in This Vicinity.

Riding to hounds these brisk mornings with just a tinge of frost in the air, whether the hounds are on the scent of a fox or following a drag trail makes life worth living to the man or woman who delights in the baying of the hounds, the sharp rush across country on the back of a sure-footed horse, the excitement of the "kill" and the possible capture of the brush at the end of it all.

Foxes are practically an extinct animal in the western end of Long Island, but the members of the Meadow Brook Hunt find pleasure in the drag hunts now run practically every day in the week from Piping Rock, Westbury, Jericho, Meadow Brook, Woodbury Church and other points where there is open country over which they can ride. Eighteen couples of hounds are in the kennels, and those in the saddle frequently number fifty or more, with hardly a run with less than twenty-five starters, about equally divided as to sex, for the ladies of the hunting set are as enthusiastic over the sport as are the men who accompany them, and are frequently first at the finish. Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock; her daughter, Helen; Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark, Mrs. C. C. Rumsey, Mrs. Harry Nicholas, Mrs. J. E. Davis, Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden, Mrs. James A. Burden, Miss Marion Hollins, Miss Vera Cravath, Miss Lida L. Fleitmann, and Miss Janet Dana are among the most persistent of the riders.

Out at Southampton, L. I., the Suffolk Hounds are having meets three days a week, with William W. Hoffman acting as M. F. H. when Richard Newton, Jr., is unable to do so. They are running seven couples of English foxhounds and small packs of American foxhounds and beagles.

Up at Millbrook in Dutchess County the sport has been of the finest this Fall and the Hunt Club there is working twenty-three couples of hounds in the brisk runs they have over a country where foxes are plenty and the drag does not have to be resorted to. Oakleigh Thorne and his associates propose to continue their tri-weekly meets until the ground becomes frozen too hard to make it possible to follow the scent and ride with any degree of safety.

Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H. of the Watchung Hunt Club at Plainfield, N. J., is working an average of about fifteen couples of hounds of his own breeding with two or three meets a week and excellent sport so far, as it seems quite easy to turn out a fox on most any of the country over which they ride. At Peapack, N. J., the Essex Fox Hounds are having the finest kind of sport and keep twenty-seven couples of foxhounds, a dozen couples of drag hounds and a small pack of beagles at work three days a week. A. Fillmore Hyde being master of the foxhounds.

Daily rides are the order with the Glen Arden Hunt, in Orange County, where there are no end of foxes and where thirty couples of hounds and seven couples of beagles are worked under the leadership of Miss Carol Harriman and John R. Townsend, joint masters of the foxhounds.

Howard S. Burden has been acting as M. F. H. in some of the runs of the Monmouth County Hunt over the territory near the estate of Robert F. Collier, where the hunters and hounds are out two and three times a week.

SECOND GENERATION STARS.

Three Princeton Players with Names Famous in Football History.

The names of Ames, Poe, and King, who are now among the players who are fighting the football battles of Old Nassau, sound strangely familiar to the old Princeton grads, who can remember cheering their fathers on the football field a quarter of a century ago or longer. All through Princeton's football history the same names seem to recur time and time again, but never before has the Orange and Black been so lucky as at present in its crop of second generation stars.

K. L. Ames, the 'Varsity quarter back, is a son of the famous "Snake" Ames, who starred on the Princeton teams from 1886 to 1890. The old "Snake" Ames got his nickname from his ability as a dodger and broken-field runner. He was one of the greatest players of his day, and the generalship and ability shown by the present quarter back is probably 50 per cent. instinct. The great Snake Ames was a baseball pitcher and a track athlete as well as a football player, and was a star in both sports. Young Ames has already inherited his father's nickname, and when he has been seasoned by a year of 'Varsity experience bids fair to equal his father's reputation.

The other two players have just as illustrious pedigrees, but they have not yet had the opportunity to prove that they are of the same calibre as the heroes of the past who bore their names. They are both freshmen and have started well by taking positions on the freshman team, being prohibited by the intercollegiate rules from trying for the 'Varsity team until their second year.

Poe is a son of Edgar Allan Poe, who captained the celebrated Princeton championship team of 1869, and the nephew of five other almost equally brilliant 'Varsity players. The great Johnny Poe, who kicked a winning goal against Yale but little more than ten years ago, is one of young Poe's uncles. On the 1889 team, which the first Poe captained, the old "Snake" Ames was full back, while Poe, Sr., was quarter back.

King is a nephew of the great Phil King, who played half back on the 'Varsity team and third base on the baseball team. Young King is considered a football find by his classmates and is expected to get a place on the 'Varsity team next year.

Young Ames still has a couple more years at Princeton and it is not improbable that next or the following year may see all three of the famous names of Poe, King, and Ames together in the Orange and Black line-up.

Bronx Church House Games.

The annual diamond athletic meet of the Bronx Church House and Company B, Twenty-second Regiment Engineers, will be held at the armory of the latter organization on Saturday evening, Dec. 12. Solid gold diamond-set Japanese signet rings will be awarded to first, second, and third in each events, except in the relays, where bronze statues will be awarded to the men on the winning team. The list of events comprises 100-yard dash, handicap; 300-yard dash, handicap; three-quarter-mile run, handicap; one-mile run, novice; one-mile walk, handicap; three-mile run, handicap; two standing broad jumps, handicap; running high jump, handicap; twelve-pound shot put, handicap; Bronx County medley relay championship, Mohawk A. C., Pastime A. C., Bronx Church House; one mile, 220, 880, and 440 yard races; one-mile interscompany relay, (Twenty-second Regiment,) handicap, 440 yards for each man. Entries close Dec. 7 with J. H. Kelly Bronx Church House, 1,511 Fulton Avenue; Edward Coyle, Company B, Twenty-second Regiment, 168th Street and Broadway, and Diegre & Clust, 30 John Street, New York.

Wrestler Zbyszko Returns.

Wladek Zbyszko, the Polish wrestler, has returned to New York after a successful tour through the South American countries. Zbyszko arrived on the Voltaire from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, in which city he made his most recent appearance on the mat. He spent four months in South America, and during that time added many victories to his string. His most notable success was in the athletic tourney at Buenos Aires, Argentina, where his skill in wrestling impressed the natives.

Zbyszko will remain in the city for some time preparing himself for a number of engagements in which he will participate throughout the country this Winter. He is especially desirous of obtaining an engagement with Frank Gotch, the wrestling champion.

SWIMMING LESSONS FOR DEAF CHILDREN

Latest Development in Physical Training for Defectives in One School.

There is only one public school in the world where deaf children are taught to swim. It is New York Public School No. 45, on East Twenty-third Street, of which Miss Carrie Wallace Kearns is principal. Here it is that the deaf children in the Greater City are assembled for instruction in all grades from the kindergarten to the highest grade of the grammar department. Coincident to the training which converts a mute to a speaking child through the lip-reading method, there is manual training which helps fit the unfortunates for such trades as the deaf may follow, and physical training which helps them overcome the peculiar handicaps under which a child born or made deaf through illness suffers.

Swimming is the final development in the physical training course, reached in the six years in which the school has been in existence. First undertaken three weeks ago it has already proved an unqualified success in arousing the enthusiasm of three classes of twenty-two lads and one of seventeen, most of whom at various times during the past two years have expressed a desire "to swim as other boys do."

To express a wish of that sort among the teachers who have the loving and affectionate care of the deficients in the special branches of the educational department of the city is akin to a command to the instructors. If there is no known way to comply with the wish a way is made. This at least has been the policy of Dr. G. Ward Crampton, Director of Physical Training, and his assistant, Dr. A. K. Aldinger, who have practically had to create a system of training for the crippled, blind, and deaf children who come under their care. A practical solution of their problem as to how to teach the deaf to swim has been reached, which finds its application in the swimming classes every Wednesday from 11:30 to 1:30 in the Public Bath at Twenty-third Street and Avenue A, within a couple of blocks of the building occupied as a School for the Deaf.

With only three weeks of the trial of the swimming syllabus, it cannot, of course, be said that perfection in the method of teaching has been attained. A stranger entering the bathing room assigned to the class of youngsters during the instruction period of twenty minutes to a class, and not knowing that the sturdy youngsers splashing about the pool under the watchful eyes of their instructor, J. H. Petelle, and his assistant, were deaf, would never suspect that they were anything except a crowd of normal boys taking a swimming lesson.

Occasionally a rapid movement by one of the lads in the expressive sign language of the deaf and dumb is noticeable, a sort of dropping into the vernacular or "slang," for to so great an extent as is possible the boys are required to use the lip reading among themselves whenever they are under the care of an instructor. There are shouts of delight or encouragement at intervals in those weird uncertain tones of a boy who has learned speech artificially. Should Mr. Petelle ask for it there would be the school cheer, for the School for the Deaf has its school cheer just as have the students in the schools where only "talking boys" are the students.

Just now the boys are attempting the mastery of the breast stroke, the principles of which they have been taught in what is known as the "land drill," that is, instruction in its principles and movements in the schoolroom. In the water these principles are applied.

Normal boys are taught in classes, however, when principles are to be conveyed. But the shrill whistle of an instructor, which would call instant attention among a crowd of normal boys, is unheard in a case of deaf lads. For many other reasons which have appeared to the men who have mapped out the methods of instruction, class work in unison with these defectives is impossible, and individual instruction is necessary in order that he may fully learn his lesson.

At grasping that lesson none are quicker than these deaf boys, who are patient, persistent, and overflowing with gratefulness to the man who labors so patiently with them to help overcome obstacles with which birth or illness has handicapped them.

No boy is allowed the privilege of the swimming class until he has developed himself through the training for posture, rhythm, endurance, and control, parts of the regular training in physical culture which gives him the necessary confidence to take part in basket ball, baseball, football, and field and track games. These systematic exercises, modified to suit the deaf—in some cases intensified instead of modified—fit him for the more trying task of learning swimming, just as, theoretically, it was assumed they would. The lads make quick progress, sometimes rather quicker than instructors desire, so that they have to be curbed at the beginning, or once afloat they would discard the breast stroke and go in for the trudgeon or the crawl as some of the more proficient among the beginners have expressed a desire to do even before they have thoroughly mastered the breast stroke. They all know the value of the racing stroke and are anxious to learn it so that they may get into competition with their friends who are blessed with the possession of all five senses.

Girls at the schol are now receiving the land drill preparatory to the swimming lessons which they will begin probably next week, when arrangements are made for suitable hours for their exclusive use of the pool, where the water is kept at an even temperature of 72 degrees, so that there will be no danger of their catching cold.

Of the many activities the Public Schools Athletic League has fostered and made possible for defectives, none seems more thoroughly practical than this one of instructing the deaf in the means of saving their lives in case of accident which would throw them into the water. They are peculiarly helpless at such times, as once they get under water they seem to loose an ability to cry out for help, even when they have the power of acquired speech. It also opens to them a field of delightful competitive sport, and one in which their deficiency will be no handicap once they learn the strokes and how to dive. It gives them one more field for competition in which they can meet the normal boy on even terms and stand a chance of winning.

Most Notable Sports Feature.

Justice Bartow S. Weeks, now guiding light of the Amateur Athletic Union, looks upon the standardization of amateur rules by the International Athletic Federation as the most notable achievement in amateur athletics during the year past.

NEW WATER POLO RULES.

Revision of Code for Collegiate Competition Meets with Favor.

The Graduate Committee of the Intercollegiate Swimming Association has completed the revision of the rules governing water polo, and the amended code, which will be adopted for the coming season, promises to improve the game materially.

Experts, in fact, are praising highly the work of the revisers and express the opinion that although the changes made are apparently insignificant they will have considerable influence on the style of play and make the 'Varsity matches faster, eliminating much roughness, will be less trying on the contestants and more interesting to the spectators.

The entire responsibility for the heralded improvement is placed upon the new penalty for fouls. In the past any offense not severe enough to cause banishment from the game was punished by awarding a free trial for a touch-goal to the team fouled, and as the three attacking forwards were allowed to fight for a goal, with only three rival backs opposing them, until a score was made or the ball passed beyond the fifteen-foot line, long and grueling scrimmages often resulted. Furthermore, the free trial never proved costly to the team having a backfield strong enough to prevent a tally.

The new rule, instead of the free trial, gives the offended side a throw from the twenty-foot line at the enemy's unguarded board, and counts two points if successful. This will not only do away with the hard scrimmages and so save the players, but also should serve as a strong check on fouling, for the penalty is a real one, it being an easy matter to hit the big board from the twenty-foot mark.

It has been suggested to the graduates the advisability of not inflicting so severe a penalty for a technical and frequent offense like crossing the four-foot line ahead of the ball. Accordingly, this off-side play will only be punished by taking the ball from the team at fault and giving it to the goal tender of the other side.

The decision of the rule-makers to divide the game into two eight-minute halves instead of the three six-minute periods tried last year is commended. The latter system was taken up as an experiment for the purpose of allowing the men to rest and recuperate, but it did not prove satisfactory. The double intermission caused a great deal of unnecessary delay without benefiting the game, and even the players pronounced in favor of two halves after trying it. For the rest, there is no reason for the three-period match now that Captains are permitted to substitute men at will, when their team is in possession of the ball, and withdrawn players may return into action.

The abolition of the thrown goal after a tally, another of the amendments, will be welcome to water polo fans. The throw was introduced in imitation of the kick in football, after a touchdown, but added nothing to the game and took up more valuable time than it was worth.

ANXIOUS TO PLAY HOPPE.

Cassignol and De Oro Ready with Challenge for American Champion.

Willie Hoppe, champion of the world at almost all kinds of billiards, promises to have a warm reception when he returns from the tour in which he has shown himself to be the superior of Melbourne Inman in the mixed game matches they have been playing.

Firmin Cassignol, the French champion, is waiting to challenge him for the championship at the 18.2 game, at which Cassignol is an expert if his game in the exhibition matches he has been playing since his arrival in this country may be taken as a true measure of his skill. He feels so certain of defeating Hoppe at this game that he says as soon as he has won that championship he will challenge Hoppe for the championship at the more difficult 14.1 game. Cassignol is ready for the 18.2 match at any time that will suit Hoppe, and the sooner the better. Two months' time is all he asks after that match is disposed of before he will be ready for the 14.1 game.

Alfred De Oro feels a trifle "touchy" whenever he hears billiard enthusiasts boast of Hoppe's superiority at any game of billiards. De Oro is prepared to contest that claim for supremacy, and is going to propose a series of matches with Hoppe to settle that question. De Oro professes to be willing to play Hoppe at any ten games of billiards he may name for any sum up to $10,000 a side, the winner of a majority of the matches to take the stake. Or he will play Hoppe for $2,500 a side at balk-line, three cushions, pool, English, and Spanish billiards for $2,500 a match.

Hoppe will hardly consent to such a billiard potpourri as De Oro suggests, in the opinion of his friends, but would be willing to play the Cuban at any of the recognized American styles of the game, though his preference is first to measure skill with Cassignol, who is to make a regular challenge in a regular way.

Sports for War Sufferers.

With a prospect of the renewal of the Olympic Games remote, athletes in the United States have been attracted by the activity of the Irish-American A. C. in putting together a programme of indoor games at the Madison Square Garden on Saturday evening, Nov. 28. President P. J. Conway has announced that a portion of the proceeds of the meet will be given to the Committee of Mercy, sometimes called the "White Cross," an organisation which is raising a fund in America to alleviate the destitution of women and children and non-combatants in the European war zone.

NEWS FOR THE ATHLETES.

Much bitterness has again developed between the authorities of the Sixty-fifth and Seventy-fourth National Guard Regiments of Buffalo. Athletes of one regiment are not permitted to compete in the armory of the other regiment. To make matters more interesting, both regiments have secured sanctions from the Metropolitan Association to hold their annual indoor games on next Jan. 1. The Seventy-fourth recently asked the Registration Committee if it was possible to compel the Sixty-fifth to change its date, but the committee decided that it was impossible, as the latter regiment was a member of the A. A. U.

The Catholic Club, Lewis Avenue and Hart Street, Brooklyn, one of the foremost organizations in the borough across the Bridge, will shortly become affiliated with the Amateur Athletic Union. Few track athletes belong to the Brooklyn club, but it is represented by the champion amateur football team of New York, as well as a good basket ball and swimming delegation. A set of indoor track and field games will be held under the auspices of the Catholic Club, probably on Jan. 12. George Matthews of the Registration Committee is a supporter of the club and is attending to its A. A. U. affairs.

Among the walkers who will compete in the twenty-five-mile championship to be held by the Walkers' Club of America on Nov. 14 in the Twenty-second Regiment Armory are Rena, Remer, the Plant brothers, Kaiser, Voellmeke, Schwartz, Hearns, Mortin, Hocking, Leckwmacher, Morrison, McSorley, Burkhardt, and Allen. Entries close on Nov. 7 with Sam Schwartz, 421 East 187th Street. Substitutes under 16 years old will be admitted for 10 cents.

CYCLE RIDERS' EARNINGS.

Frank L. Kramer Leads List of Money Getters with $10,511.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 31.—According to the announcement of E. de B. Newman, Secretary of the Cycle Racing Association, $35,873.18 has been paid out to cycle racers during the past outdoor season. The figures will probably reach $100,000 when the riders collect for their services in the six-day race at Madison Square Garden. Frank L. Kramer, the American champion, is shown to be the highest paid of the riders, for he drew down $10,511 for his end of the money.

Walter Rutt, the German rider, was second, with $5,976 to his credit, while Alfred Goullet, the Australian, was third, earning as much as $5,122.

Among the pace followers, Bobby Walthour was the heaviest winner, his earnings being $2,740, while George Wiley was next, with $2,410, and Clarence Carmen third, with $2,266. Charles Turville, the motor pacemaker, received $2,055, while Charley Stein, the Brooklynite, who proved himself so good at the pacemaking game that dissension over his services by the pace followers drove him out of that style of riding, made only $886.55.

Other riders who earned more than $1,000 at the game are: A. Jackie Clark, Australia; Alfred Grenda, Australia; Cesar Moretti, Italy; Joseph Fogler, Brooklyn; James F. Moran, Boston; Percy O. Lawrence, San Francisco; Robert Spears, Australia; Elmer Collins, Boston; Menus Bedell, Lyndhurst; Leon Didier, France; Frank Cavanagh, Newark; Iver Lawson, Salt Lake City; Peter Drobach, Boston; Worth L. Mitten, Davenport, Iowa; Freddy Hill, Boston; George Cameron, New York, and William Bailey, England.

ATHLETICS FOR CHARITY.

Track Games and Soccer Draws Crowd to Polo Grounds.

A series of athletic events attracted a good-sized crowd to the Polo Grounds yesterday. The proceeds were donated to the Urania Tuberculosis Preventorium Society at Otisville, N. J., and although the actual receipts did not reach the expectation of the committee, it was announced that a substantial sum would be realized, as many tickets were purchased and not used. Dr. Thomas Darlington, former Health Commissioner of New York City, the President of the society, and the members of the committee arranged an interesting programme, of five events, consisting of four running races and a soccer football game. The latter event was not completed before dusk, but nearly all the spectators remained until the end of the contest.

In the athletic part of the programme three events were open to registered athletes in the A. A. U., while the fourth event brought together 116 elementary school boys in a 360-yard scratch relay race. The soccer game, which closed the programme, ended in favor of the Bronx United by the score of 2 to 1 after an exciting match with Columbia Oval. The Catholic Protectory Band played during the afternoon.

Twenty-nine school boy relay teams competed in the opening event. Four trial heats were run, which reduced the number of teams to eight. The boys were not permitted to run in their ordinary running costumes, owing to the cold. The final heat furnished an exciting finish, with the quartet from Public School 27, Manhattan, in the lead by a couple of yards. The second team of No. 10, Manhattan, captured second medals by a good margin from 62, Manhattan. Summary:

150-Yard Dash, Handicap.—Won by R. K. Walter, unattached, (3 yards;) Charles A. Keough, St. Agnes A. C., (8 yards,) second; Edward J. Farrell, St. Vincent de Paul's Lyceum, (8½ yards,) third. Time—0:16.

600-Yard Run, Handicap.—Won by Myes McHugh, Pastime A. C., (scratch;) E. F. Gilmore, Dominican Lyceum, (5 yards,) second; C. Eastman, Dominican Lyceum, (20 yards,) third. Time—1:15 4-5.

One-Mile Run, Novice.—Won R. A. Hesse, Pastime A. C.; William Eowman, unattached, second; William Maguire, H. P. S. S., third. Time—4:50 3-5.

880-Yard Relay, Scratch.—Won by Public School 27, Manhattan, team composed of G. A. Reeder, E. Hosmer, L. Parisi, and J. Willinsky; Public School 10, Manhattan, team composed of Zinn, Benvunes, O'Connor, and Blumberg, second; Public School 89, Manhattan, team composed of Armour, Galliber, Jackson, and Grant, third. Time—1:37 1-5.

Line-up and summary of soccer game:

B. United.	Position.	Col. Oval.
MacRae	Goal	T. Dillman
J. Harper	Right full back	F. Waskel
J. McAllister	Left full back	R. Ellis
H. G. Costatter	Right half back	W. Raichwage
C. Cowll	Centre half back	T.
D. Winchester	Left half back	S. Blatchford
J. McAllister	Outside right field	J. Dayes
C. H. Ellis	Inside right field	J. Lapsley
R. Dorg	Centre field	B. Maskell
F. Porter	Outside left field	J. Fodl
G. Gamble	Inside left field	Dickson
Louis Dorg	McAllister, Linesmen	Referee—C. Creighton.

Linesmen—G. Caldecott and W. Waldron. Time of halves—Thirty minutes.

A Wonderful Airedale Dog.

Those interested in the Airedale breed of dogs are waiting with more than ordinary interest the appearance at the Airedale Specialty Club Show in Philadelphia, on Nov. 21, the appearance of Theodore Offerman's new dog, Ryburn Swell. The animal was imported a couple of weeks ago, and he will make his bow in competition at the Philadelphia show against the best in the country. Ryburn Swell, which was whelped in December, 1912, is considered by many English breeders as the best dog of his breed in England, and Mr. Offerman paid a big price for him. A season of his service was sold, and the interest shown in his appearance in this country, lies in the fact that at the Kennel Club show in London last Spring the dog worked his way through from a novice puppy to championship honors. Later at other shows all over Great Britain he won nine other championships over the best that the English and Welsh breeders could put in the ring. The awards were made, too, under a half dozen different judges, which seems to add materially to the strength of the claim that he is "the best Airedale in Great Britain."

Ryburn Swell and a kennel companion, Polam Milkmaid, a bitch which had a good career in England, are both being put in show trim by a Long Island handler preparatory to their appearance at Philadelphia and later at the Westminster and other high-class shows in this country. Ryburn Swell has a long trip ahead of him, apparently, as it is said to be Mr. Offerman's intention to gather in all the ribbons and cups possible before sending the dog to the stud.

Auction Block for Fast Trotter.

One of the sensational young horses of the year was General French, a two-year-old trotter, which made a record of 2:10¾ in the first heat of the race for the Horse Review Futurity at the Columbus (Ohio) meeting in September, and was then beaten, chiefly through lack of condition. George Gordon Moore of the Dromore Farm at Port Huron, Mich., who owns him, refused an offer of $4,000 for him made by Roy Miller, who trained and drove the horse, believing he would fetch more at auction. General French has, therefore, been consigned to parties in this city with a number of ten others from the Dromore Farm to be sold here in the latter part of November.

MINING STOCK QUOTATIONS.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Alta	.05	Kentucky Con	.02
Andes	.03	Mexican	.38
Belcher	.70	Occidental Con	.85
Best & Belcher	.85	Ophir	.17
Caledonia	.45	Overman	.17
Con. Cal. & Va.	.06	Seg. Belcher	.03
Crown Point	.35	Sierra Nevada	.07
Gould & Norcross	.03	Union Con	.06
Hale & Norcross	.01	Utah	.02
Justice	.02	Yellow Jacket	.41

TONOPAH.

Belmont	4.20	D'field Daisy	.02
Jim Butler	.55	D'field Black B.	.02
Midway	.07	Florence	.30
North Star	.18	G'field Con. M.	1.02½
Rescue Eula	.07	G'field Merger	.17
Tonopah Exten.	2.25	Jumbo Exten	.47
West End	.54	Silver Pick	.03
GOLDFIELD.		Vernal	.04
Atlanta	.20	Nevada Hills	.25
Booth	.08	Round Mountain	.27
C. Q. D.	.01	MANHATTAN.
Comb. Fraction	.04	Manhattan Con.	.02

COLORADO.

	Bid.	Asked.		Bid.	Asked.
Dr. J'pot	9	9¾	Jackpot	5	6
Elkton	42	43	McKinney	24	28
El Paso	100	150	Old Gold	.005	2
Findlay	2	3	Portland	103½	107
Gold Dol.	¾	1	Vindicator	105½	107
Isabella	10½	10¾	R. E. H.	3	4

HYGIENIC ASPECTS OF THE GREAT WAR

It Has Been Demonstrated That Alcohol and Fighting Are Incompatible, Doctor Writes.

BOOM FOR SAFETY FIRST

The Same Spirit of Reform Crops Out in the Welfare Movements Among Industrial Workers.

The war in Europe has awakened in the medical profession an interest in military surgery and hygiene which nothing short of a gigantic armed struggle could stimulate. Accordingly, the various professional publications are devoting a good deal of space to the consideration of every phase of the medical side of the conflict. The Journal of the American Medical Association comments in its current issue on "The Value of Health in Industry and War." The editor declares that it has already been demonstrated that alcohol and fighting are incompatible.

There is food for reflection in the fact that even the preparation for real or anticipated war may bring about hygienic reforms which widespread preaching and earnest exhortation are at best slow in promoting. The "safety first" slogan, the editor states, is one aspect of a movement to increase the personal welfare of the individual by decreasing the liability to injury through the carelessness of a fellow-man.

The same spirit crops out in the "ten trade commandments" of the worker which are posted conspicuously here and there in factories where personal injuries and loss of life furnish unfortunate and—let it be frankly added—unprofitable incidents in the conduct of manufacturing operations, the writer states.

The reminder "thou shalt not" gains added force, he adds, when its value is expressed in terms of practice and daily experience rather than in the more vague language of ethical considerations. And, accordingly, there is a telling force in such direct admonitions as the following, quoted from a recent compilation for use in a factory:

Thou shalt take no unnecessary risks, nor play practical jokes, for by thy carelessness thou mayst do injury which will have effect unto the third and fourth generations to follow.

Remember thou art not the only one on the job, and that other lives are just as important as thine own.

Thou shalt not throw matches or greasy waste on the floor, as a dirty worker is a clumsy worker, and a clumsy worker is a menace to his fellow workers.

"These and similar timely suggestions," the writer remarks, "put in a form that is sure to attract notice, cannot fail to promote the mutual and reciprocal interest of the employer and the employed. Modern hygiene and preventive medicine have recognized long ago that the individual can no longer claim a liberty in his actions independent of his neighbor.

"Our provisions for quarantine, vaccination against smallpox, and divers other regulations in the interest of the public health have, in the past, been enforced only with the annoyance that comes from lack of co-operation and from personal resentments together with the indifference for restrictive rules that is bred in a community of 'free' people. Yet, now we see, in the combined enterprise and altruism of modern employers, preventive devices put in operation to secure, without friction or resentment, the same sort of welfare results that the Federal Government or State or municipality would find difficulty in getting under way.

"That the unexpected situations created by the war have not furnished the stimulus for new inventions and useful processes is too well known to require detailed comment. It would appear in the present situation that the war against universal peace may actually be a war against intemperance. The navies of today represent the most efficient fighting forces that the nations can command. No device, no agency that will contribute to their power and preparedness is willingly neglected. Health is a prime consideration in this respect.

"Field Marshal Earl Kitchener is reported to have counseled the English soldiers to abstain from drinking while abroad, reminding them that their duty cannot be done unless health is preserved. It is of slight consequence whether or not these rumors are entirely correct. They represent the current tendencies, which are undeniable by any one who has watched the recent decisions of American naval authorities in the face of not a little apparently adverse criticism couched in the usual phrases concerning personal liberty. The truth is that the relation of alcohol and fighting has been squarely met, and the fact admitted that they are not compatible."

A recent editorial writer has expressed this by saying that a temperate army was something not conceived of in the old theories of war; but a drunkard is today as much out of place in an army as he would be on a battleship."

Trying Out Yearling Racers.

Belmont Park will be the scene of considerable activity next week, when the string of yearlings owned by Gifford A. Cochran will be added to those already there, the property of Richard A. Carman. The former has nineteen yearlings, and the latter twenty-six, all of which will be tried out before the snow flies. There are some thirty other youngsters at the track awaiting the arrival of the horses from the Maryland tracks, and the early morning hours are full of activity, with the stable boys exercising and giving the youngsters fast breathing work, preparatory to being asked the question; when the head trainers come on for the test which will show whether they are worthy to be entered in stake events to be decided next Summer, or relegated to the ranks of the sailing platers and overnight classes.

Mr. Gifford has decided to send his colt His Majesty to the stud, and Connemara and Early Rose to his string of matrons which are at a farm in Virginia. Pigtiany, the most prominent of Mr. Cochran's string of racers, will be sent to Aiken, S. C., where Mr. Cochran spends his Winters, and where the best of his yearlings will be taken for their Spring training under his own eye. William Midgely will, as usual, put the finishing touches on those which may prove fit to race.

Gwynne Tompkins's Steeplechasers.

Weldship and Juverence are the only horses in the string of steeplechasers which Gwynne Tompkins will carry over into next year's campaigning string. During the Summer Mr. Tompkins picked up a dozen of three and four year olds which he will school this Winter at his Virginia farm for steeplechasing over the Metropolitan Circuit, where there will be better chances for the jumpers than in the past, as it has been found that the public rather prefers this sort of sport to flat racing. During the season just closed Mr. Thompson has raced his horses mostly in Canada, where there were a number of rich stakes for both hurdlers and cross-country animals. Bigot, The Prophet, Ruaker's Run, and Turbine, members of Mr. Tompkins's string, have been presented to friends of the trainers, and are now being used as hacks and hunters in the Virginia hunting country.

MOTOR CYCLE NOTES.

Four hundred and seven miles in thirteen hours is the time made by M. D. Cooper of Cleveland, Ohio, on a recent motor cycle trip to Wellsboro, Penn.

With a membership of twenty-four, a new motor cycle club has been formed at Charleston, S. C.

Twenty-eight new motor cycles have been ordered for the Police Department of Los Angeles, Cal.

Eight motor cycles have been placed in service in the collection department of the Milwaukee, Wis., Post Office.

Harry Lewis of Cheyenne, Wyo., is making a motor cycle trip to Chicago.

One of the long-distance riders who attended the recent motor cycle show at Chicago was Mr. Becket of New Orleans, La., who rode his motor cycle to the Windy City.

Officials of Balboa, Canal Zone, have ordered three motor cycles from the United States, to be used in the police and fire departments.

Frank J. Patrick, a rural mail carrier of Utica, S. D., says he covers about 12,000 miles a year on his motor cycle.

In four months the number of motor cycles registered in Connecticut was increased from 1,975 to 2,328.

MURPHY LEADS DRIVERS.

More Than $100,000 Won in Sulky During Grand Circuit Season.

Thomas W. Murphy, who will winter his string of light harness racers at the Hudson Driving Park, at Poughkeepsie, heads the list of successful drivers this year with winnings for horses he himself has driven, aggregating more than $100,000 for the season just closed. Mr. Murphy campaigned on the Grand Circuit only, his victories in stakes and purses in races driven over those tracks aggregated nearly $96,000, his chief winners being Peter Volo, 2:08¾, and Anna Bradford, 2:00¾.

If to the total is added the $6,150, their share of the Stallion Stakes at Lexington—which were divided by agreement instead of being raced for—and the value of a score of gold and silver cups he won with them and others, Mr. Murphy's winnings in the sulky will reach several thousands over the $100,000 mark.

This is a new record of winnings for a driver in races, the previous high mark having been Murphy's winnings in 1911, when he had $86,000 to his credit. He also led the list of winning drivers in 1900, 1912, and 1913. Horses in Murphy's string driven by an assistant would add nearly $5,000 to his score if the amounts they won were added to those of the horses he personally piloted.

An Imported Bulldog's Debut.

Flirty Westall, a bull bitch recently imported by William E. Oakley of Bayonne, N. J., and which has been named Oakwell Flirty, will make her first appearance in the show ring in this country at the annual show of the Bulldog Club of America, to be held in this city on Election Day, Nov

Section 5 | Magazine Section

The New York Times.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1914.

Magazine Section | Section 5

THE PEACE OF RIGHTEOUSNESS

Fifth of a Series of Articles on What America Should Learn from the War

by

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

Come, Peace! not like a mourner bowed
For honor lost and dear ones wasted,
But proud, to meet a people proud,
With eyes that tell o' triumph tasted!
Come, with han' gripping on the hilt,
An' step that proves ye Victory's daughter!
Longin' for you, our sperits wilt
Like shipwrecked men's on raf's for water.
Come, while our country feels the lift
Of a great instinct shouting "Forwards!"
An' knows that freedom ain't a gift
That tarries long in han's of cowards!
Come, sech ez mothers prayed for, when
They kissed their cross with lips that quivered,
An' bring fair wages for brave men,
A nation saved, a race delivered!

THESE are the noble lines of a noble poet, written in the sternest days of the great civil war, when the writer, Lowell, was one among the millions of men who mourned the death in battle of kinsfolk dear to him.

No man ever lived who hated an unjust war more than Lowell or who loved with more passionate fervor the peace of righteousness. Yet, like the other great poets of his day and country, like Holmes, who sent his own son to the war, like gentle Longfellow and the Quaker Whittier, he abhorred unrighteousness and ignoble peace more than war.

These men had lofty souls. They possessed the fighting edge, without which no man is really great; for in the really great man there must be both the heart of gold and the temper of steel.

In 1864 there were in the North some hundreds of thousands of men who praised Peace as the supreme end, as a good more important than all other goods, and who denounced war as the worst of all evils. These men one and all assailed and denounced Abraham Lincoln, and all voted against him for President.

Lincoln's Stand Against Mediation

MOREOVER, at that time there were many individuals in England and France who said it was the duty of those two nations to mediate between the North and the South so as to stop the terrible loss of life and destruction of property which attended our civil war; and they asserted that any Americans who in such event refused to accept their mediation and to stop the war would thereby show themselves the enemies of Peace.

Nevertheless, Abraham Lincoln and the men back of him by their attitude prevented all such effort at mediation, declaring that they would regard it as an unfriendly act to the United States.

Looking back from a distance of fifty years, we can now see clearly that Abraham Lincoln and his supporters were right. Such mediation would have been a hostile act, not only to the United States, but to humanity. The men who clamored for unrighteous peace fifty years ago this Fall were the enemies of mankind.

These facts should be pondered by the well-meaning men who always clamor for peace without regard to whether peace brings justice or injustice.

Very many of the men and women who are at times misled into demanding peace as if it were itself an end instead of being a means of righteousness, are men of good intelligence and sound heart who only need seriously to consider the facts, and who can then be trusted to think aright and act aright.

There is, however, an element of a certain numerical importance among our people, including the members of the ultra-pacificist group, who by their teachings do some real, although limited, mischief. They are a feeble folk, these ultra-pacificists, morally and physically; but in a country where voice and vote are alike free, they may, if their teachings are not disregarded, create a condition of things where the crop they have sowed in folly and weakness will be reaped with blood and bitter tears by the brave men and high-hearted women of the nation.

Facts of History Must Be Told

THE folly preached by some of these individuals is somewhat startling, and if it were translated from words into deeds it would constitute a crime against the nation.

One professed teacher of morality makes the plea in so many words that we ought to follow the example of China and deprive ourselves of all power to repel foreign attack. Surely this writer must possess the exceedingly small amount of information necessary in order to know that nearly half of China is at present under foreign dominion, and that at this moment the Germans and Japanese are battling on Chinese territory and domineering as conquerors over the Chinese in that territory. Think of the abject soul of a man capable of holding up to the admiration of free-born American citizens such a condition of serfage under alien rule!

Nor is the folly confined only to the male sex. A number of women teachers in Chicago are credited with having proposed, in view of the war, hereafter to prohibit in the teaching of history any reference to war and battles.

Intellectually, of course, such persons show themselves unfit to be retained as teachers a single day, and, indeed, unfit to be pupils in any school more advanced than a kindergarten.

But it is not their intellectual, it is also their moral shortcomings which are striking. The suppression of the truth is, of course, as grave an offense against morals as is the suggestion of the false or even the lie direct; and these teachers actually propose to teach untruths to their pupils.

True teachers of history must tell the facts of history; and if they do not tell the facts both about the wars that are righteous and the wars that are unrighteous, and about the causes that led to these wars and to success or defeat in them, they show themselves morally unfit to train the minds of boys and girls.

If in addition to telling the facts they draw the lessons that should be drawn from the facts, they will give their pupils a horror of all wars that are entered into wantonly or with levity or in a spirit of mere brutal aggression or save under dire necessity. But they will also teach that among the noblest deeds of mankind are those that have been done in great wars for liberty, in wars of self-defense, in wars for the relief of oppressed peoples, in wars for putting an end to wrongdoing in the dark places of the globe.

Any teachers, in school or college, who occupied the position that these foolish, foolish teachers have sought to take, would be forever estopped from mentioning the names of Washington and Lincoln; because their names are forever associated with great wars for righteousness. These teachers would be forever estopped from so much as mentioning the shining names of Marathon and Salamis. They would seek to blind their pupils' eyes to the glory held in the deeds and deaths of Joan of Arc, of Andreas Hofer, of Arnold von Winkelried, of Kosciusko, and Rakotski. They would be obliged to warn their pupils against ever reading Schiller's "Wilhelm Tell" or the poetry of Koerner. Such men are deaf to the lament running, "Oh, why, Patrick Sarsfield, did we let your ships sail, Across the dark waters from green Innisfail?" To them Holmes's ballad of Bunker Hill and Whittier's "Laus Deo," MacMaster's ode to the Old Continentals, and O'Hara's "Bivouac of the Dead" are meaningless. On them lessons of careers like those of Timoleon and John Hampden are lost; in their eyes the lofty self-abnegation of Robert Lee and Stonewall Jackson was folly; their dull senses do not thrill to the deathless deaths of the men who died at Thermopylae and the Alamo—the fight of those grim Texans of which it was truthfully said that Thermopylae had its messengers of death but the Alamo had none.

Like Taking Club from Policeman

IT has actually been proposed by some of these shivering apostles of the gospel of national abjectness that, in view of the destruction that has fallen on certain peaceful powers of Europe, we should abandon all efforts at self-defense, should stop building up battleships and cease to take any measures to defend ourselves if attacked.

It is difficult seriously to consider such a proposition. It is precisely and exactly as if the inhabitants of a village in whose neighborhood highway robberies had occurred should propose to meet the crisis by depriving the local policeman of his revolver and club.

There are, however, many high-minded people who do not agree with these extremists, but who nevertheless need to be enlightened as to the actual facts. These good people, who are busy people and not able to devote much time to thoughts about international affairs, are often confused by men whose business it is to know better.

Peace Treaties Will Be Valueless

FOR example, a few weeks ago these good people were stirred to a moment's belief that something had been accomplished by the enactment at Washington of a score or two of all-inclusive arbitration treaties; being not unnaturally misled by the fact that those responsible for the passage of the treaties indulged in some not wholly harmless bleating as to the good effects they would produce. As a matter of fact, they probably will not produce the smallest effect of any kind or sort. Yet it is possible they may have a mischievous effect, inasmuch as under certain circumstances to fulfill them would cause frightful disaster to the United States, while to break them, even although under compulsion and because it was absolutely necessary, would be fruitful of keen humiliation to every right-thinking man who was jealous of our international good name.

If, for example, whatever the outcome of the present war, a great triumphant military despotism declared that it would not recognize the Monroe Doctrine or seized Magdalena Bay, or one of the Dutch West Indies, or the Island of St. Thomas, and fortified it; or if—as would be quite possible—it announced that we had no right to fortify the Isthmus of Panama, and itself landed on adjacent territory to erect similar fortifications; then, under these absurd treaties, we would be obliged, if we happened to have made one of them with one of the countries involved, to go into an interminable discussion of the subject before a joint commission, while the hostile nation proceeded to make its position impregnable.

It seems incredible that the United States Government could have made such treaties; but it has just done so, with the warm approval of the professional pacificists.

These treaties were entered into when the Administration had before its eyes at that very moment the examples of Belgium and Luxemburg, which showed beyond possibility of doubt, especially when taken in connection with other similar incidents that have occurred during the last couple of decades, that there are various great military empires in the old world who will pay not one moment's heed to the most solemn and binding treaty if it is to their interest to break it.

If any one of these empires, as the result of the present contest, obtains something approaching to a position of complete predominance in the Old World, it is absolutely certain that it would pay no heed whatever to these treaties, if it desired to better its position in the New World by taking possession of the Dutch or Danish West Indies or of the territory of some weak American State on the mainland of the continent. In such event we would be obliged either instantly ourselves to repudiate the scandalous treaties by which the Government at Washington has just sought to tie our hands—and thereby expose ourselves in our turn to the charge of bad faith—or else we should have to abdicate our position as a great power and submit to abject humiliation.

Since these articles of mine were written and published, I am glad to see that James Bryce, a lifelong advocate of peace and the stanchest possible friend of the United States, has taken precisely the position I have taken. Bryce dwells, as I have dwelt, upon the absolute need of protecting small States that behave themselves from absorption in great military empires. He insists, as I have insisted, upon the need of the reduction of armaments, the quenching of the baleful spirit of militarism, and the admission of the peoples everywhere to a fuller share in the control of foreign policy—all to be accomplished by some kind of International League of Peace. He adds, however, as the culminating and most important portion of his article:

> But no scheme for preventing future wars will have any chance of success unless it rests upon the assurance that the States which enter it will loyally and steadfastly abide by it and that each and all of them will join in coercing by their overwhelming united strength any State which may disregard the obligations it has undertaken.

This is almost exactly what I have said. Indeed, it is almost word for word what I have said—an agreement which is all the more striking because when he wrote it Lord Bryce could not have known what I had written.

Righteousness Before All Else

WE must insist on righteousness first and foremost. We must strive for peace always; but we must never hesitate to put righteousness above peace. In order to do this, we must put force back of righteousness, for, as the world now is, national righteousness without force back of it speedily becomes a matter of derision. To the doctrine that Might makes Right, it is utterly useless to oppose the doctrine of Right unbacked by Might.

It is not even true that what the pacificists desire is Right. The leaders of the pacificists of this country who for three months now have been crying "Peace, Peace," have been too timid even to say that they want the Peace to be a righteous one. We needlessly dignify such outcries when we speak of them as well-meaning. The weaklings who raise their shrill piping for a peace that shall consecrate successful wrong occupy a position quite as immoral as and infinitely more contemptible than the position of the wrongdoers themselves.

The ruthless strength of the great absolutist leaders—Elizabeth of England, Catherine of Russia, Peter the Great, Frederick the Great, Napoleon, Bismarck—is certainly infinitely better for their own nations and is probably better for mankind at large than the loquacious impotence, ultimately trouble-breeding, which has recently marked our own international policy. Strength at least commands respect; whereas the prattling feebleness that dares not rebuke any concrete wrong, and whose proposals for right are marked by sheer fatuity, is fit only to excite weeping among angels, and among men the bitter laughter of scorn.

At this moment any peace which leaves unredressed the wrongs of Belgium, and which does not effectively guarantee Belgium and all other small nations that behave themselves against the repetition of such wrongs, would be a well-nigh unmixed evil.

As far as we personally are concerned, such a peace would inevitably mean that we would at once and in haste have to begin to arm ourselves or be exposed in our turn to the most frightful risk of disaster.

The Lesson of Belgium

LET our people take thought for the future. Belgium was absolutely innocent of offense. Her cities have been laid waste, or held to ransom for gigantic sums of money; her fruitful fields have been trampled into mire; her sons have died on the field of battle; her daughters are brokenhearted fugitives; a million of her people have fled to foreign lands.

Entirely disregarding all accusations as to outrages on individuals, it yet remains true that disaster terrible beyond belief has befallen this peaceful nation of six million people, who themselves had been guilty of not even the smallest wrongdoing. Brussels has been held to enormous ransom, although it did not even strive to defend itself. Antwerp did strive to defend itself. Because soldiers in the forts attempted to repulse the enemy, hundreds of houses in the undefended city were wrecked with bombs from airships and throngs of peaceful men, women, and children were driven from their homes by the sharp terror of death. Be it remembered always that not one man in Brussels, not one man in Antwerp, had even the smallest responsibility for the disaster inflicted upon them. Innocence has proved not even the smallest safeguard against such woe and suffering as we in this land can at present hardly imagine.

What befell Antwerp and Brussels will surely some day befall New York or San Francisco and may happen to many an inland city also if we do not shake off our supine folly, if we trust for safety to peace treaties unbacked by force.

At the beginning of last month, by the appointment of the President, peace services were held in the churches of this land. As far as these services consisted of sermons and prayers of good and wise people who wished peace only if it represented righteousness, who did not desire that peace should come unless it came to consecrate justice and not wrongdoing, good and not evil, the movement represented good.

In so far, however, as the movement was understood to be one for immediate peace without any regard to righteousness or justice, without any regard for righting the wrongs of those who have been crushed by unmerited disaster, then the movement represented mischief, precisely as fifty years ago in 1864 in our own country a similar movement for peace, to be obtained by acknowledgment of disunion and by the perpetuation of slavery, would have represented mischief.

In the present case, however, the mischief was confined purely to those taking part in the movement in an unworthy spirit; for (like the peace parades and newspaper peace petitions) it was a purely subjective phenomenon; it had not the slightest effect of any kind, sort or description upon any of the combatants abroad and could not possibly have any effect upon them.

It is well for our own sakes that we should pray sincerely and humbly for the peace of righteousness; but we must guard ourselves from any illusion as to the news of our having thus prayed producing the least effect upon those engaged in the war.

There is just one way in which to meet the upholders of the doctrine that Might makes Right. To do so we must prove that Right will make Might, by backing right with might.

In his second inaugural address Andrew Jackson laid down the rule by which every National American Administration must guide itself, saying:

> The foreign policy adopted by our Government is to do justice to all, and to submit to wrong by none.

The statement of the dauntless old fighter of New Orleans is as true now as when he wrote it. We must stand absolutely for righteousness. But to do so is utterly without avail unless we possess the strength and the loftiness of spirit which will back righteousness with deeds and not with words.

We must clear the rubbish from off our souls and admit that everything that has been done in passing peace treaties, arbitration treaties, neutrality treaties, Hague treaties, and the like, with no sanction of force behind them, amounts to literally and absolutely zero, to literally and absolutely nothing, in any time of serious crisis.

International Agreement Needed

WE must recognize that to enter into foolish treaties which cannot be kept is as wicked as to break treaties which can and ought to be kept.

We must labor for an international agreement among the great civilized nations which shall put the full force of all of them back of any one of them, and of any well-behaved weak nation which is wronged by any other power.

Until we have completed this purpose, we must keep ourselves ready, high of heart and undaunted of soul, to back our rights with our strength.

Theodore Roosevelt

Copyrighted, 1914, by the Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

TO RECONSTRUCT OUR PORT

An Elaborate Plan

Suggested by T. P. Shonts

Former Chairman of the Panama Canal Commission, Now President of the Interborough Metropolitan Company, Writes of the Harbor Needs of New York.

By Theodore P. Shonts.

NEW YORK is, and always has been, the great commercial metropolis of this continent. She is losing many large lines of trade by reason of the development of other parts of the country, and because other cities are offering better and cheaper facilities for the transaction of business.

New York was once the great grain-shipping port of the United States; she ships practically none at all today. Baltimore has taken the grain trade of the Atlantic Coast; that of the Mississippi Valley goes out through ports on the Gulf of Mexico, and for that of the Northwest Montreal has become, at New York's expense, a great point of export. The bulk of the cotton formerly handled in New York now goes through Gulf ports, and an enormous coal traffic that once was shipped by way of New York goes out through Norfolk and Newport News.

When the Panama Canal is opened New York will be confronted with additional competition due to the greater proximity of other ports to the short cut across the Isthmus; and, while she has extraordinary natural advantages as a harbor, she must augment these artificially in such manner as to make the facilities at her marine gateway the most convenient and the most economical of any on our seaboard for the handling of the vast volume of trade she will secure if these conditions are complied with. At the same time she must contrive a plan whereby her own industrial activities may be developed in order that she may retain her paramount position among the great manufacturing centres of the country.

Benefit to the railroads, to the city itself, and to the shippers must be comprehended in an ideal solution of this problem. The railroads must be so placed that, at a minimum of time, cost, and equipment, they can exchange traffic with each other, with the water carriers, and with the shippers.

Harbor Congestion Growing.

There are daily standing on the railroad tracks about New York from 4,000 to 6,000 cars, awaiting the opportunity to discharge their contents and return to normal trade channels. This means that an investment in cars alone of from $4,000,000 to $6,000,000 is lying idle, because the facilities of the Port of New York are inadequate even with the business at present being done, and the situation will not be relieved until ferries, car floats, and lighters shall be superseded by a continuous freight movement through river tunnels. The natural location for great railroad yards to handle, assemble, and classify all this traffic is the Hackensack Meadows in New Jersey.

The matter of exchange of traffic between the railroads and the water carriers brings up the question of a great import and export depot at Bayonne, N. J. It has been estimated that the terminal cost of handling a ton of "all rail" or "water and rail" freight at the Port of New York is as much as to move the same ton 300 miles on any of our trunk lines of railway.

The waters of New York Harbor, which are continuously becoming more and more congested, divide the port into five grand divisions—Manhattan, the Bronx, Long Island, Staten Island, and New Jersey. The water front of Bayonne is the economic and geographic location for an import and export harbor. Piers 4,000 feet long could be extended into New York Bay without interfering with navigation, into which cargoes could be unloaded from ships into storage and then to cars, and vice versa, with the minimum of handling.

With Bayonne as the exclusive import and export harbor of the Port of New York, there would be saved on 80 per cent. of her import and export tonnage the cost of floatage, and the congestion of her water-borne traffic would be relieved to just that extent.

Much of the freight coming from the interior of the country into Jersey City is lightered across New York Bay and stored in Brooklyn, is afterward lightered to Manhattan, and then lightered back to the different New Jersey railroads. By the construction of storage facilities in the Hackensack Meadows in New Jersey, as elsewhere explained, the cost of floatage of this business could also be saved and the congestion of water-borne traffic further relieved.

The question of the traffic between the railroads and the shippers is one that involved the streets of New York as well as the wharves. The matter that is the most vitally pressing at present, so far as the interest of the shippers is concerned, is the acquisition of more deep-water frontage for big ocean-going ships, which may best be accomplished by releasing this class of frontage from the less important use to which it is now put.

This may in turn be effected by a plan of exchanging traffic between the railroads and the city's industries that will relieve a great many of the piers now occupied by the railroads for lighterage and local [illegible] business, but the system must be so worked out as to produce the [illegible] amount of vehicular [illegible] the handling of freight in the streets.

In New York City the centre of traffic density is south of Twenty-third Street, Manhattan, whence access may be had to the wholesale distributing centres and the steamship piers, and connection may be had with existing lines of communication over the East River bridges to the manufacturing, commercial, and distributing centres of Brooklyn. On the New Jersey side of the Hudson the centre of traffic density is south of a point opposite Thirty-third Street. The origin and destination of a greater part of this traffic is in the lower sections of Jersey City and Hoboken; in the Cities of Bayonne, Newark, Elizabeth, and Passaic; and in the surrounding territory contributory to and accommodated by the ferries of the New Jersey Central, the Pennsylvania, the Erie, the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, and the West Shore Railroads.

Economy in movement—street and rail haul—of course requires that existing centres of traffic in communities on both sides of the river be linked up in the most direct manner possible, and convenience in the handling of the commerce of the port requires that this link shall connect up, also in the most direct manner possible, with the through traffic lines extending over the East River.

These circumstances naturally bring the location of a physical link between Jersey City and New York to a point considerably south of Thirty-third Street in Manhattan, which disposes of the question of making that connection by a bridge over the Hudson, since topographical conditions are adverse to bridge construction anywhere below Fifty-seventh Street.

A bridge located at Fifty-seventh Street would involve "lost motion" in long street and rail hauls on both the New York and New Jersey sides of the river, which is opposed to the fundamental principle which any plan for improving general freight distribution on Manhattan Island must aim for, that is, to bring about the greatest possible diffusion of receipt and delivery with the shortest possible street and rail haul in and across the Borough of Manhattan to Long Island, and on the New Jersey side.

Moreover, a bridge over the Hudson would in any event afford distributing facilities for the west side of Manhattan only, and could never be made to fit in with any comprehensive plan looking toward the future requirements of the other side of the island, whereas, unless something be done to improve terminal conditions on the east side, a large proportion of business there that now goes to antiquated piers on the East River is bound to be attracted to the west side, necessitating a longer street haul and tending toward greater congestion of traffic across the borough.

During the past decade business in New York City has been rapidly extending northward. Notwithstanding this fact, with the improvement of terminal facilities and the substitution of more modern buildings for the present one, two, and three story structures of obsolete design now found in great numbers in lower Manhattan, it is certain that the density of business south of Thirty-third Street will also become greater. The late Mayor Gaynor more than once publicly stated his belief that commercial enterprises that had moved further uptown would eventually come back to the district below Thirty-third Street, which he held to be the natural business centre of the city.

On the New Jersey side of the Hudson there has been a marked movement southward to Bayonne and Greenville, and Staten Island is showing healthy growth. On Long Island there has been an appreciable movement to South Brooklyn, especially of manufacturing industries, and any plan for freight distribution throughout New York must contemplate the most direct line of through traffic between Long Island and New Jersey.

The tunnel is the solution of New York's freight distribution problem. Tunnels may be built one after another, as needed. They may be located between points as and where changing future requirements may demand. Besides creating the shortest and most economical route between New Jersey and New York, the desirability of minimizing the number and length of necessary rail movements in the freight subway in Manhattan must be kept in mind.

With a bridge, traffic would have to come across the river concentrated through one fixed channel, which would mean that for all time freight, after reaching Manhattan, would have to be handled either in the subway or by an elevated structure for the full distance from Fifty-seventh Street to a southern terminus—say Cortlandt Street.

"Battery" of Tunnels.

The tunnel is an entirely different proposition, however. Should the future density of traffic coming into Manhattan warrant it, communication between the shores of the Hudson could be carried on through a "battery" of tunnels. The volume of business could be split up by having one tube connecting up on the Manhattan side, say at Canal Street, to serve the tonnage zone between Canal and Cortlandt Streets; another at Fourteenth Street, to serve the zone between that and Canal; another at Twenty-third Street, to serve the zone between that and Fourteenth Street; another at Thirty-third Street, to serve the zone between that and Twenty-third Street, and so on as the requirements of commerce demanded.

With a freight subway on the west side of Manhattan, served by tubes under the Hudson River, logical extensions could be carried across Manhattan Island to another freight subway on the east side of the city, to be constructed, link by link, as occasion required.

The next logical extension would be under the East River into the great manufacturing and commercial centres of Brooklyn and South Brooklyn, thereby, incidentally, making the shortest possible direct connection between the railroads of New Jersey and New England (by means of a comparatively short line to the Connecting Railroad, now in process of construction) and linking up the distributing terminal facilities of the Port of New York into a homogeneous unit.

In conjunction with this general traffic evolution would come the construction of a belt line on the New Jersey side of the Hudson, with receiving and clearing yards in the Hackensack Meadows adequate for the economic handling of the business of the New Jersey railroads; the establishment there of warehouses with capacity for the accommodation of all storage business from the interior, and the development of Bayonne along the most scientific lines as an exclusive import and export harbor—as hitherto mentioned.

Upon the completion of the tunnels under the Hudson and across Manhattan into Long Island, the waters of the harbor would be relieved of the floating service now operated by the New Jersey railroads, and the water front given over almost entirely to modern piers for the exclusive accommodation of passenger steamers and the freight and express business they carry.

This solution of New York's traffic problem would mean economy of time, cost, and equipment to the shipper as well as to the railroad—to the dealer in raw material, the manufacturer, the wholesaler, and the retail merchant.

With the completion of what might be called the "subway belt line" in Manhattan, receiving and delivery stations would be erected to accommodate the different freight zones, reducing the street haul to a minimum and relieving street congestion.

Thus, in Manhattan, the Bronx, or Brooklyn, a merchant or manufacturer, instead of being compelled to send his wagon to each one of the railroads having freight depots in New York for receipt or delivery of goods, as is the present routine, will load or unload at the nearest zone station. On obtaining a receipt at any one of the delivery stations, the shipper will have effected delivery to any one of the railroads, and every one of the railroads will unload freight consigned to a merchant or manufacturer at the zone receiving station nearest his place of business. This system also gives the shipper, practically at his door, the choice of any one of the railroads, under equal conditions and on equal terms, for the forwarding of goods to any destination.

The fact that the proposed tunnel or tunnels under the Hudson will bring the rails of the [illegible] roads that now terminate on the New Jersey side of the river into New York, connotes a union passenger station in Manhattan, which would probably be located somewhere near Forty-second Street.

While the tunnel solves New York's freight-distribution problem, a bridge of suspension type over the Hudson is structurally feasible, and it is not improbable that at some future time both tunnels and a bridge will be necessary to meet the commercial requirements of New York—the bridge to form the connection with the great highways of vehicular and pedestrian travel of New Jersey, Manhattan Island, and Long Island, and the tunnels to accommodate the railway, freight, and passenger business, as well as heavy trucking traffic.

As has been stated, topographical conditions are adverse to bridge construction over the Hudson anywhere below Fifty-seventh Street. Geological conditions are also unfavorable below the same point, as soundings made from 180th Street to the Battery show. Opposite Fifty-seventh Street bedrock has been found at a depth which would enable men to work in caissons with comparative safety.

North of Fifty-seventh Street there are several locations where the configuration of the land is favorable to bridge construction, but these locations are out of the question so far as serving the economic needs of commerce are concerned. At any point below Fifty-seventh Street the land on both sides of the Hudson is low, which, with the consequent land damages, would be expensive.

In the event of a freight bridge over the Hudson, a question to be considered is what type of construction would be necessary for general distribution purposes of railroad traffic after reaching Manhattan. The most logical would be an elevated structure, which would be unsightly, practically constituting an open-air terminal freight yard up and down the west side of Manhattan Island, with the attendant nuisances of sight and sound; it would no doubt be considered a civic crime.

Further, as has been previously noted, while such a structure might afford distributing facilities on the west side, it could not be made to fit in with any plan to improve terminal conditions on the east side of the city.

The greater expense of a bridge over that of a tunnel is a matter to be considered. The original estimate of the North River Bridge Company, which had a charter for a bridge opposite Twenty-third Street, but was compelled for reasons already mentioned to change its site to the neighborhood of Fifty-ninth Street, as to the cost of a structure of sufficient capacity to answer all purposes, including approaches, connections, and stations, complete, was between $90,000,000 and $100,000,000. More recent estimates made for a suspension bridge to meet all requirements including eight lines of rapid transit, two thirty-six feet-wide driveways, and two eight-feet-wide sidewalks, place the cost at $42,000,000, as compared with an estimated cost of approximately $7,000,000 for a tunnel. That is, the cost of a bridge would be approximately equivalent to the cost of six tunnels.

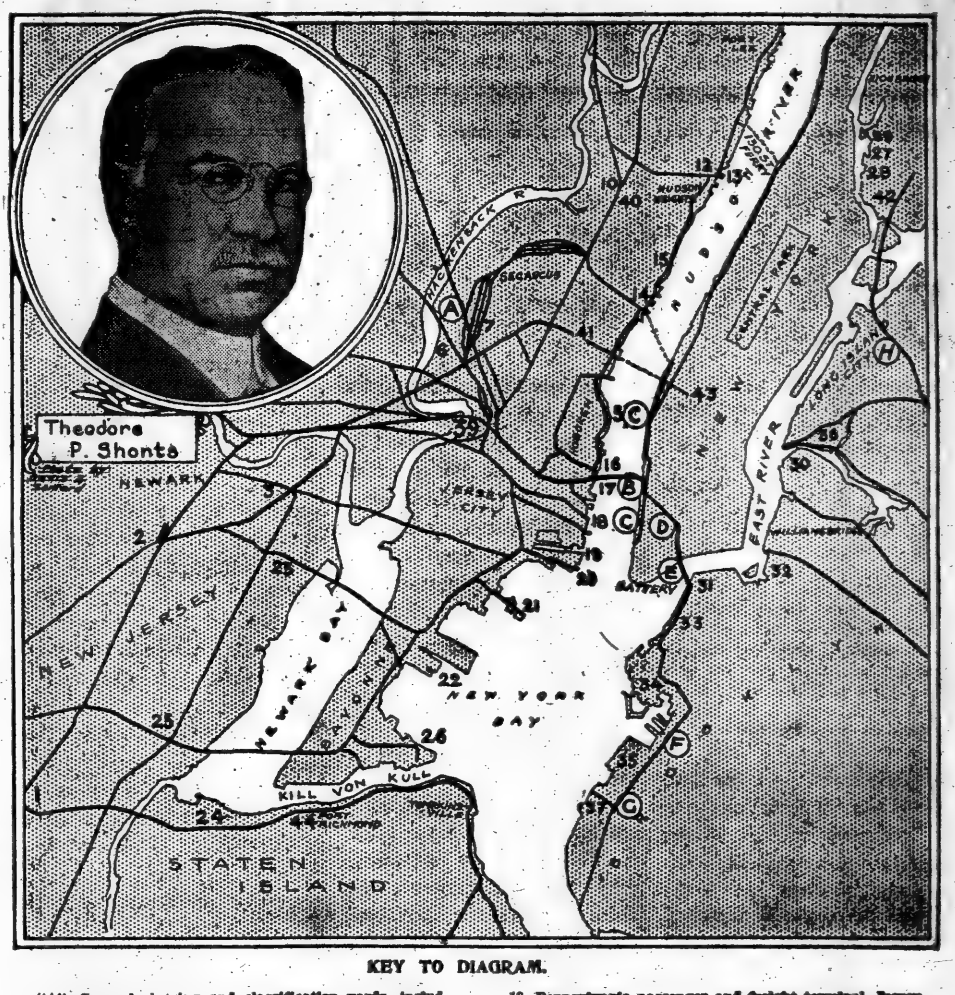
It is evident that the long span of a bridge makes imperative the use of the lightest track and road construction possible, which would therefore be the least durable, whereas in tunnel construction the heaviest and most durable track and road construction could be used with economy. I feel safe in making the statement, therefore, that the cost of maintenance of a bridge would considerably exceed similar cost for the upkeep of the number of tunnels sufficient to equal the capacity of that bridge.

To connect operations over a bridge with a freight subway down the west side of Manhattan would seem impracticable; at least it would tend to increase operating grades, already long and heavy, considering the height to which a suspension bridge over the Hudson would have to be carried.

It so happens that the urgent necessity that at present exists for the complete reorganization of the freight-handling system of the Port of New York comes at a time when the city is practically without funds, and any solution of our problem is therefore incomplete that does not comprehend the financial question involved. Fortunately for New York, the railroads having terminal stations within her borders have credit, and if the city is willing to treat them fairly they can without doubt be influenced to provide the amount essential to the carrying out of such a project as I have outlined.

Not So Difficult, After All.

Keeping in mind the fundamental thought that the railroads may be induced to pool their present properties, one is surprised, on studying a map of the port, to note how readily and at what relatively small expense existing railroad properties may be connected up; how short stretches of rail will unite the terminal lines in New Jersey with the great clearance yards to be established in the Hackensack Meadows; how another short stretch to Bayonne will link them up with the great import and export depot to be built there; how a tunnel or tunnels under the Hudson will connect with a subway up and down, say, Eleventh Avenue, and switches run to such piers as the traffic necessities of the city indicate ought to be reserved for each particular freight zone; how an extension of the subway across Manhattan to one alongside the East River, with switches to piers on that water frontage, will link up with a tunnel under the river to tap the nucleus of a series of belt lines to be extended indefinitely through Brooklyn and Queens—which two boroughs are the natural field for an unlimited development of the city's manufacturing industries for generations to come.



KEY TO DIAGRAM.

"A"—General clearing and classification yards, including cold storage and general warehouse facilities.
"B"—Tunnels or tunnels to connection with subway, railroad warehouse and loft facilities along marginal way.
"C"—Development of warehouse and loft facilities along marginal way.
"D"—Tunnel extension across Manhattan to subway, railroad warehouse and loft development along South or Front Street on East River.
"E"—Tunnel under East River.
"F"—New municipal railroad along Brooklyn waterfront.
"G"—Connection with belt line connecting railroad.
"H"—Belt line connecting railroad.

1—Connection Baltimore & Ohio R. R.
2—Connection Lehigh Valley.
2—Pennsylvania Freight Transfer.
3—Connection C. R. R. of N. J.
5—Hoboken Shore R. R.
6—Connection D., L. & W., Secaucus yard and transfer of package freight.
7—Connection E. R. R., Bergen yard.
10—Connection N. R. R. of N. J.
10—Connection N. Y., S. & W. R. R.
10—Connection West. R. R.
10—Connection N. Y., O. & W. R. R.
12—N. Y., S. & W. tunnel to Hudson River.
13—N. Y., S. & W. terminal, Hudson River.
14—West Shore R. R., Weehawken.
15—Shore Line from Fort Lee to Bergen Point, owned jointly by E. R. R., W. S. R. R., and connects all railroads and freight transfers.
16—D., L. & W. passenger and freight terminal, Hoboken.
17—E. R. R. passenger and freight terminal, Jersey City.
18—Pennsylvania passenger and freight terminal, Jersey City.
19—Lehigh Valley passenger and freight terminal, Jersey City.
20—C. R. R. of N. J. passenger and freight terminal, Jersey City.
21—Lehigh Valley (Black Tom) warehouses.
22—P. R. R. Greenville freight yard.
23—L. V. R. R. transfer platform.
24—Staten Island Rapid Transit (B. & O. R. R.).
25—C. R. R. of N. J. freight transfer platform.
26—C. R. R. of N. J. coal piers for barges.
29—L. V. R. R. Harlem River freight terminal.
28—C. R. R. of N. J. Harlem River freight terminal.
27—D., L. & W. Harlem River freight terminal.
27—D., L. & W. Harlem River freight terminal.
30—Brooklyn Eastern District terminal.
31—Jay Street terminal.
32—D., L. & W. Wallabout terminal.
33—N. Y. Dock Company.
34—Baltic Dock Company.
35—Bush Terminal.
36—New York Barge Canal.
37—N. Y. connecting railroad, for Penn. and N. Y., N. H. & H. traffic (now under construction).
39—New construction, about half mile, connecting all lines west of Passaic River to the N. Y., S. & W. R. R.
40—West Shore Granton transfer platform to and from all New York and Brooklyn stations.
41—Penna. R. R. passenger tunnel to N. Y. and Long Island.
42—N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. flat bridges for traffic moving to and from Penn. R. R. Greenville yard.
43—Penn. passenger station.
44—Freight transfer platform, B. & O. R. R.

NEW DANCES THAT HAVE SMOOTHNESS AS A KEYNOTE

HERE is a new kind of a dance and here is a new rule in dancing. There has come another step in the evolution of the modern "dance craze."

It has all been changed again, made new with the coming of a new season. Under the patronage of Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt, Mrs. Berry Wall, Mrs. Oliver Harriman, and other members of the American Dance Club of Paris, a new idea in ballroom dancing has come overseas to New York. The new idea is what dancers call "evenness," and with it an extreme simplicity; the new rule is a stern one, and succinct withal: we must dance as if we were carrying pails of water on our heads!

Vouched for by prominent New York women and introduced for the first time at Delmonico's, two new dances have made their way to America for the coming Winter season. These, it is promised, will revolutionize the tango, do away with the dance of the acrobat, and bring about a marked change in the ballroom dancing of the coming year.

The new dances are the opera tango and the opera waltz. They will be danced at Delmonico's, the Holland House, the Astor, and the Majestic. They are exceedingly simple and exceedingly smooth, and are entirely new to America.

The opera tango and the opera waltz owe their names in the first place to the similarity in membership between the list of opera boxholders of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York and the American Dance Club of the Hotel Majestic in Paris. Not all the boxholders for the opera belong to the Paris club, but many members of the Paris club are habitués of the box circle at the opera here, and the name seemed in the beginning [illegible] suitable [illegible] fact that the supper dances at Delmonico's will be definitely "after the [illegible] held at Maxim's nights. And there is also interest for the names of the dances in the fact that their sponsors suggest the use of various pieces of well-known opera music as excellent to "tango" and waltz by. One of the airs from "Lucia di Lammermoor" has already been adapted for the opera waltz.

For it is one of the most astonishingly "new" features of these slow-moving and stately new dances that many of the older melodies are more suitable for them than the dance music that is now.

The new dances are being brought to New York under the general management of Mrs. Newton Adams, a niece of the late Bishop Potter, who has spent much time in Paris and learned the new dances there, and Hiram E. Foster, a New York man who has been associated with the famous M. Duque of the Parisian salons de danse. M. Duque is responsible for the maxixe; Mr. Foster himself gives us the opera tango and the opera waltz. He invented them both, and with them he has won prizes at Lasgers, the Chateau Rouge, and various dancing contests in Paris. The actual introduction of the dances is by Miss Lorraine Mishler and George E. Rule, who are assisted by Miss Asta O'Connor and William Ormond.

Mr. Rule explained the steps of the new dances.

"The whole idea is the simplicity and evenness of it," he said. "The effect is of floating along on the music, without any irregularities or sharp breaks. The dances are both modified versions of one or more of the older dances and steps, with no open positions, and with the irregular figure and motions all left out. The smooth movements are brought together.

"The opera tango is a much-modified version of the old tango, so arranged as to revolutionize the old tango idea, yet keeping some of the same steps. The music must be slow and dreamy, as in an old-time waltz, and must be played very evenly and regularly.

"The man starts on his right foot, the woman on her left, as all tangos do. They take two straight steps, then a little hitch step, short, but still smooth; the man bring his left foot up to the right, and that general figure is repeated several times; then they move into the 'cortes' from the Parisian tango. After that the man falls back four steps, the woman following, and the cortes is repeated as often as desired.

"Then, the man starting on his left foot and the woman on her right, they go into the double cortes, first on one foot and then on the other, which is very like the waltz step.

"The opera waltz owes its derivation to several dances—the opera tango, the one-step, and the old Boston dip. They are all greatly modified, of course, in the features that are combined. With the man on his right foot and the woman on her left, the waltz starts with the old hesitation step in the grapevine form, then a slow step on the right foot, then two steps, and after that a slight hesitation forward, the woman swinging backward. Then the man raises his right foot slightly, and falls back on his left foot, pivoting to the left after that on his right heel; he rises on the toes of his right foot and makes a half turn back to his right heel, the girl following around with the man as a pivot in a slight hesitation step, from which they move back to the grapevine figure that is the beginning of the dance.

"It is essential that all movements be straight movements, with no sudden changes. We want to get away from the old acrobatic agility into a simpler and more graceful, as well as smoother, form of dance. It is necessary also, to have the music played slowly in both these dances.

THE CASE AGAINST WILSON, BY COL. GEORGE HARVEY

The Editor of The North American Review Analyses the Arguments of the Opposition in Seeking the Suffrage of Citizens in the Coming Elections.

By special arrangement The New York Times is enabled to present here the article by Col. George Harvey which will appear in the forthcoming North American Review for November.

Copyright, 1914, by The North American Review Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

By George Harvey.

SINCE enumerating in the October number of this Review the reasons why a Democratic Congress should be returned we have awaited without prejudice and with open mind the appearance of arguments designed to impel a contrary conclusion. So it is that now, but a few days prior to the election, the question arises:

Upon what grounds does the opposition, upon which the burden of proof clearly rests, seek the suffrages of American citizens?

For answer we can look only to the declarations of recognized leaders. Of these the most notable, of course, is Our Colonel, who is not merely the chief, but is rapidly becoming the rank and file, of the Recessive Party. Since, however, for obvious reasons, it seems fitting to leave him for passing consideration after the event, let us advert to the outgivings of Republicans who are supposed to speak with authority.

First upon the list appears the name of William Howard Taft; that is to say, as the name of a former Republican President it should appear there, but it does not. Why, we can only surmise. Perhaps Mr. Taft has definitely determined to rest upon his well-earned laurels as the worst-licked, the least-sore, and the best-liked of all our Presidents. If so, we would not ruffle his repose.

Enter Elihu Root.

Then comes Elihu Root, lawyer, statesman, diplomat, the best-equipped all-around mind in American public life, whatever may be thought of his predilections or his partisan proclivities. As in duty if not in pleasure bound, this most distinguished of Senators attends and presides over the party convention of his State and strikes—what shall we say? The keynote? The tinkling cymbal? Or the flatulent bassoon? Let us see. The Senator declared:

> The Democratic Party took possession of the National Government a year and a half ago with a programme of policy by which they proposed to set free every American from the incubus of too great success by others, to reduce the cost of living, and to give new life and prosperity to American production and commerce and more ample and certain returns to American industry.

What he meant to say, of course, and what he would have said if he had been defining an intent before an unprejudiced court instead of before a biased convention, was that the Democratic Party had proposed to free every American, not from "the incubus of too great success"—a quite ridiculous and wholly unwarranted assertion—but from unfair competition "by others"; that it had declared a belief "that no substantial relief from the high cost of living can be secured until import duties on the necessaries of life are materially reduced and criminal conspiracies are broken up"; and that it had expressed an aspiration to expand the boundaries of American commerce. Complaint need hardly be made of the Senator's interpretation of the Democratic purpose. Though shrewdly inexact, it was in a broad sense substantially correct, and full compensation for its unpreciseness is to be found in the seemingly unconscious implication of grave need of such reforms after sixteen years of Republican rule. The Senator continued:

> The tariff was to be for revenue only, and by removing protection it was to set free American industry and reduce the cost of living. * * * Have the rewards of American industry been increased? We all know that they have not; but that, on the contrary, production has been decreased. Many mills and factories have closed or are running but a part of the time. Great numbers of American employes have been thrown out of work.

This statement is, we believe, correct as of the date of making, although there has since been a marked revival in some lines of manufacturing. The circumstance was probably inevitable; in any case, the fact is quite evident that sufficient time has not yet elapsed for full readjustment of industrial conditions to the new requirements; and the party in power must necessarily accept the consequences. The Senator continued:

> Although eight months have passed since the Banking and Currency act became a law, it has not yet been put into operation, while the proposed legislation against trusts and corporations has not yet been completed. These measures, however, have not been without their effect upon the welfare of the country. The various forms in which they have been cast, the discussion upon them, the avowed objects, the unavowed but ill-concealed objects, the spirit of the dominant party in dealing with them, all have combined to impress the enterprise of the country with a sense that the Government is hostile. Assurances to the contrary do not avail against the general weight of evidence derived from conduct.

Whether the Senator meant to chide the Administration for not hastening the operation of the Currency act and the passage of the anti-trust laws is not apparent. If so, not only as a captious critic, but as a conservative citizen, he stands alone. The remainder of his utterance is cryptic to a degree. When a statesman skilled in the expression of ideas begins to make mysterious discrimination between "trusts" and "enterprise" as "avowed" or "unavowed" objects of Government hostility, we can but conclude that he finds himself upon ice so thin that rapid movement is essential to his own preservation.

"And yet," the Senator concluded, reproachfully, "the cost of living has not been reduced; we all know that it has not."

Indeed, yes; but would it have been lessened by perpetuating the excessive tariff taxation and monopolistic control which not only caused its rise, but fixed the increase so firmly that years, perhaps, must elapse before material reduction can be achieved? We all—and none better than the Senator himself—know that it would not and could not. Senator Root's attack upon the intrenched Democracy is the merest peck. Let us pass on.

Philander C. Knox, emerging from the dusk of comparative obscurity, rises to remark that "the Democrats prattle about peace, yet they have the distinction of beginning a war upon a famished and distraught neighboring people"—an accusation whose falsity hardly calls for demonstration. That President Wilson erred in refusing to recognize the de facto government of Mexico we were convinced at the time and still believe, but if it be a fact that "all the bloodshed with which Mexico has been cursed during the past eighteen months was due to the failure to recognize Huerta," we would ask, politely, upon whose shoulders rests the primary responsibility, if not upon those of President Taft and Secretary Philander C. Knox, who deliberately withheld such recognition for weeks, and thereby created a precedent which their successors could hardly ignore with propriety? True, an issue—a just cause of criticism—may lie in the present Administration's course toward Mexico, but not for Mr. Knox.

No Real Issue Here.

Senator Smoot, as the successor of Mr. Aldrich in partisan leadership, directs attention justifiably to "extravagant and ever-increasing appropriations," but when he declares that "if the tariff law as it existed before the passage of the Underwood bill had been left alone" there would be no need of a war tax, he must know that he only discredits the intelligence of his hearers. Cessation of imports necessarily involves cessation of revenue; as between tariffs it is wholly a matter of degree, and the President stated a simple fact when he wrote to Mr. Underwood:

> The import duties collected under the old tariff constituted a much larger proportion of the whole revenue of the Government than do the duties under the new. A still larger proportion of the revenue would have been cut off by the war had the old taxes stood, and a larger war tax would have been necessary as a consequence.

A school boy, to say nothing of a statesman of Senator Smoot's recognized ability, can understand that. Whether or not the facts warrant the President's further assertion that "no miscalculation, no lack of foresight, has created the necessity for the taxes, but only a great catastrophe, world-wide in its operation and effects," is a matter of opinion. The truth is that nobody can tell whether the Underwood bill would have produced sufficient revenue for the present fiscal year under normal conditions; all that is really known is that it did for the preceding year; all else is conjecture. For ourselves, we have our doubts, but frankly should not have lamented a deficiency which might have made reduction in expenditures essential. There is no real issue here, but Senator Smoot makes one when he says:

> The law authorizes the President to borrow money on certificates of indebtedness, so far as may be needed, up to $100,000,000. It has never been the policy of the Government to raise by way of taxation all funds necessary in such a case as that now presented. It would be much better to use that $75,000,000 deposited in the banks as it might become necessary, as it would almost immediately return to circulation, than to impose additional taxes. It would be better to issue temporary certificates of indebtedness than to impose taxes with the present condition of the country and with the enormous increase in taxation already imposed upon the people.

The President set forth his views upon these proposals in his message to Congress in these words:

> The Treasury itself could get along for a considerable period, no doubt, without immediate resort to new sources of taxation. But at what cost to the business of the community? Approximately $75,000,000, a large part of the present Treasury balance, is now on deposit with national banks distributed throughout the country. It is deposited, of course, on call.
>
> I need not point out to you what the probable consequences of inconvenience and distress and confusion would be if the diminishing income of the Treasury should make it necessary rapidly to withdraw these deposits. And yet without additional revenue that plainly might become necessary, and the time when it became necessary could not be controlled or determined by the convenience of the business of the country. It would have to be determined by the operations and necessities of the Treasury itself. Such risks are not necessary and ought not to be run. We cannot too scrupulously or carefully safeguard a financial situation which is at best, while war continues in Europe, difficult and abnormal. Hesitation and delay are the worst forms of bad policy under such conditions.
>
> And we ought not to borrow. We ought to resort to taxation, however we may regret the necessity of putting additional temporary burdens on our people. To sell bonds would be to make a most untimely and unjustifiable demand on the money market; untimely, because this is manifestly not the time to withdraw working capital from other uses to pay the Government's bills; unjustifiable, because unnecessary.
>
> The country is able to pay any just and reasonable taxes without distress. And to every other form of borrowing, whether for long periods or for short, there is the same objection. These are not the circumstances, this is at this particular moment and in this particular exigency not the market, to borrow large sums of money. What we are seeking is to ease and assist every financial transaction, not to add a single additional embarrassment to the situation.

> In a word, the Senator would cripple business or borrow; the President would encourage business and pay as he goes. So according to the record, but not for a moment, in our belief, as a fact. Mr. Smoot knows better; here he speaks as a politician, not as a statesman committed to sound finance; hence whatever the President proposes is wrong. Cannot one hear in ready imagination the Senator's ringing denunciation of a Democratic President actually straining the nation's credit or fettering its commerce in a time like this? Compared with what he surely would have said of such a performance, his present declamation is the merest whisper. But if, as a maker and interpreter of Republican policy, he finds the issue which he has raised to his liking, both the President and the Democratic Party may well rejoice. And there, perhaps, we may leave Senator Smoot.

A Welcome Change.

It is refreshing to turn from politics to statesmanship, from prejudice to reason. Senator William E. Borah stands forth, by contrast with the Smoots, the Knoxes, the Penroses, the Manns, the Cannons, and the Paynes, the foremost Liberal Republican of the present day. Intellectually the peer of Mr. Root or Mr. Lodge, he surpasses either in comprehension of the public will and public hope, and has imbibed more freely from his environment the moving spirit of the times. A strong partisan, as one may well and properly be, yet not a bigot, firm in conviction but ever amenable to argument, resolute but tolerant, the power of his mentality, his earnestness, and his sincerity is enhanced immeasurably by his breadth and fairness. It is with a sense of relief and gratification that we advert to presentation of the case of the opposition by such a one.

Speaking in the Senate on the pending emergency tax measure, not wholly as a partisan, although he had "no objection to, being considered one," Mr. Borah first recounted the many Democratic iterations in favor of economical government, and then said:

> If our friends had no more than approached the amount of expenditures which had preceded their inauguration into power, if they had no more than equaled the amount which had been expended during the immediate previous Congresses, what would be their position with reference to this subject of extravagance? It would seem that they would still be clearly within the inhibition and within the anathema which they had assessed upon their predecessor.
>
> But what is the situation? It is not that it has been equaled, and thereby is subject to their own charge of extravagance, but it has far exceeded, during the last eighteen months, that of the previous Congresses or the previous months of the previous Administration. That which they denounced as shameless waste approaches economy in the light of the record of these past eighteen months. With this stern denunciation fresh upon the lips of Democracy we find all about the indisputable evidence of insincerity and want of candor.

The truth of this indictment is indisputable. Nevertheless, unlike his fellow-Republicans, Senator Borah did not place the entire responsibility for excessive expenditures upon the Democratic Party; he recognized the effect of a general and seemingly irresistible trend toward extravagance, which in his judgment had hardly begun. He continued:

Blame Right and Left.

> We are inaugurating with marvelous speed and remarkable inconsiderateness a system of government which will devolve upon the people of this country a burden of taxation the like of which the people have never for a moment contemplated. We propose now, Sir, to have an expert, a special agent, an investigator to accompany every citizen and to oversee every business and every line of industrial activity. The present thus being presented to the people may be what they want, but I warn them now it will be costly beyond anything they have contemplated. Such a system fattens by what it feeds upon. It creates a governmental class always complaining of too much service and too little pay; it invents jobs and fosters all forms of waste and expenditures.

That this criticism would apply with approximate equality to Democrats, Republicans, and Progressives alike is sufficiently evident to all observers and is, indeed, the plain inference to be deduced from the Senator's utterance. With respect to the immediate situation, he found the Democratic Party culpable in certain specific instances, such as is afforded by an increase of more than 1,000 employes in the Treasury Department alone—surely a just cause for complaint; but he did not hesitate to allot a fair proportion of blame to the common tendency. He continued:

> The new currency law created five new offices, with salaries of $12,000 each and increased the salary of the Controller of the Currency from $5,000, at which sum it had remained for fifty years, to $12,000. The new Trade Commission act creates five Commissioners at $10,000 each, and a secretary at $5,000 and that is only an intimation of what that will be.
>
> The Interstate Commerce Commission deals with about 2,300 corporations. The cost of running the Interstate Commerce Commission last year was $1,833,209. We have in the United States about 300,000 corporations. Out of this 300,000 about 103,000 will come under the Trade Commission's jurisdiction if it see fit to exercise the jurisdiction.
>
> So, Mr. President, if we should provide or make an allowance such as is based upon the expenditure of the Interstate Commerce Commission the operation of the Trade Commission alone would amount to $1,867,000,000 a year. But suppose it only amounts to one-half that, and if it ever amounts to anything at all in the way of effective service it will have to amount to at least one-half of that.

Senator Borah declared with admirable candor:

> Those things the people may desire and will approve of, but there should be no longer any complaint about extravagance in the way of the operation of the Government, because if the people of the United States want their entire business done at Washington they will have to pay for it. If they want these matters to be overseen and controlled and regulated 1,000 miles or 2,000 miles from their homes they will have to pay for it.

Would Not Criticize President.

But whether it shall prove satisfactory to the people or not, this much is true: The amount of the governmental expenditures heretofore in the operation of the Government at Washington will be comparatively small and modest compared with the amount of expenditure which will be made in all future years if we continue to enlarge upon these bureaus.

Already for this year the actual expense of our departments at this time is $3,000,000 a month in excess of the last year of the Republican administration. That is not by reason of the fact that there has been any defalcation or anything of that kind, but it is because of constantly enlarging and creating offices, providing salaries, and providing for those people who shall do those things that ought to be imposed upon the individual citizen himself to do under the observance of some law which had been passed for his guidance. That is only a beginning of what we may expect in a very short time if these bureaucratic practices continue.

While holding that the emergency tax would not have been required if economy had been practiced, Mr. Borah emphatically declined to be drawn by his partisan colleagues into criticism of the methods recommended by the President. Replying to Senator Bristow, he said:

> I understand that the President thinks it is unwise to withdraw Government money from the banks, because that would be to take it out of the channels of business; and that he is of the opinion that to tax the people and collect the money in that way is not to take it out of the channels of business. I may not interpret the message correctly, and I would not do the President an injustice. There may be another view.

And to Senator Townsend he declared flatly:

> I agree with the proposition that in the present condition of business affairs it might be very disastrous to call for money anywhere in large amounts. I think that it would be likely to create a condition of affairs which would be serious.

So far as the present exigency is concerned, therefore, Mr. Borah, while deploring the need, virtually upholds the President. And clearly it was from no partisan spirit that, in conclusion, he spoke these suggestive words:

> Mr. President, the first and indispensable principle of any righteous system of taxation is economy. Any tax, however and wherever laid, whether upon the necessaries or luxuries, upon the virtues or vices of men, beyond that necessary for the economical administration of the Government is nothing less than the exploitation of the people through the arbitrary and brutal power of the Government.
>
> It is true the people can pay this tax, and would do so were it many times heavier. But that is not the question. Economy in public expenditures makes for good citizenship; it builds up the moral fibre of the people; it strengthens their faith in their Government and augments and arouses their patriotism. It teaches economy and frugality in private affairs. It breeds confidence, and lights up the whole field of private endeavor with optimism and hope. It makes for a happy, contented, sturdy, hopeful people.
>
> Instead, therefore, of laying more taxes, or putting heavier burdens upon the business world and upon wages, why not commence with this economy to which we have all time and time again most faithfully pledged ourselves? Extravagance has gone far enough to justly excite the alarm of the most conservative and patriotic men. The cancer spot may not be large, but it is a cancer just the same. No hour can be too early to cut it out.
>
> And even, Sir, if all the honor and the glory should finally be accredited to the present leader of the Democracy, which his fondest admirers believe will be his, this excision would in the long course of the years, if followed up, exceed in glory all the rest. If he should establish the precedent of real economy and bring the Government back to a sane basis in this respect, while men might differ and disagree as to all other acts, the people would pay to him undivided homage for this.

These are words of wisdom which the President may well ponder to advantage. While justifiably criticisable for neglect of this vital problem thus far, it is but fair to assume that he recognized the evils of the system as portrayed by Senator Borah, but found them rooted so deeply that he could not hope to attack them successfully while so many matters of greater imminence pressed for attention.

But the way is now cleared, and we have reason to believe that it is the purpose of Mr. Wilson to undertake a complete reformation of governmental appropriations such as Mr. Taft essayed somewhat tentatively and failed utterly to achieve. That he will succeed if accorded full opportunity is a fair deduction from his past performances, but it is quite certain that no efforts can avail with a Government politically divided. The facts of the situation, therefore, fortified, oddly enough, by the strong indictment and powerful plea of Senator Borah, constitute an unmistakable reason for the election of a House of Representatives whose co-operation with the President will be assured.

So much, then, for the main grounds, both partisan and rational, upon which the Republican Party seeks partial reinstatement. There may be others, but if so they are not in evidence. Indeed, there has appeared nothing more remarkable in our political history than the transparent fear of the opposition to attack the present Administration.

Time was when the Republican Party was aggressive to the verge of recklessness. Today it is more than timorous; it is positively benumbed in the face of a personality so strong as to have become for the time at least irresistible. The name Wilson appears in no Republican platform, is spoken by no Republican orator; the Hon. William Murray Crane, we are credibly informed, does not venture even to whisper it; and, as for Our Colonel, all the king's horses and all the king's men cannot draw it from his parched lips.

Richard Olney's Views.

Among public journals, too, barring a few great daily newspapers, this Review seems to be the only one of consequence that recognizes, and, of course, will continue to recognize its obligations to praise only when praise is due, and to condemn unsparingly when just warrant for censure shall appear. But for a painful lack of that undefinable attribute commonly termed a sense of humor we should derive no little amusement from contemplation of a condition which, after two years, finds Woodrow Wilson smiling benignly upon a united Democracy, a paralyzed Republican Party, and a withered Armageddon.

We have received the following communication:

> Boston, Oct. 17, 1914.
>
> Sir: I have read with much interest your judicious and judicial review of the accomplishments of the present Democratic Administration, and welcome your conclusion that the country can fairly be urged to make the coming elections an emphatic testimonial of its approbation and confidence.
>
> Personally I have been immensely impressed with what has been done in so short a space. In the ordinary career and history of a nation eighteen months is an almost negligible fraction of time. If the Wilson Administration had occupied itself since March, 1913, in settling itself in the saddle and in planning for great things to be done in the future, it would have pursued the customary course and could not easily have been censured. But the fact is that during that period the National Government has devoted itself to its duties with an assiduity quite unparalleled, has undertaken and brought to conclusion much important work—work largely constructive in its nature and bound to permanently influence for good the fortunes of the country.
>
> A high protective antiquated tariff, for example, full of absurdities and abuses, has been subjected to a reasonable downward revision, has been supplemented by an income tax which puts upon wealth a larger and fairer share of the burdens of taxation, and signalizes the passing—never to return—of such legislative crudities and extravagances as the Dingley bill and the Payne-Aldrich bill.
>
> The Federal Reserve bill inaugurates a new era in the financial history of the country, and, in the judgment of bankers, business men, and experts generally, will gradually, but surely, do away with the confusion and chaos which have heretofore disgraced American finance.
>
> The trust legislation and the Alaska Railroad bill also embody legislation which may fitly be described as essentially constructive. It is not claimed, it is not to be claimed, that these measures, or any of them, are the last words on the subjects they relate to. At this very writing the Federal Reserve act, studied by statesmen and experts of all parties with the utmost diligence and enacted with as much deliberation and care as any statute ever had, is before Congress for amendments believed to be necessary and proper.
>
> It is to be remembered that these measures represent a new order of things. They have been brought about in the face of fierce opposition by the lovers of the old order and, no doubt, embody more or less unavoidable, even if undesirable, compromises and concessions. Yet, when all is said, they at least make good beginnings, are steps in the right direction, and are faulty, if at all, rather in matter of detail than in point of sound principle.

Democratic Sagacity.

If the Democratic Party showed great sagacity in picking Woodrow Wilson for the Presidency, it has shown no less in trusting itself to his leadership. It was that trust which brought about the repeal of the "Panama Canal tolls exemption" through the votes of many Congressmen who honestly doubted the justice and wisdom of the repeal. They now unquestionably plume themselves upon their action. They now unquestionably realize that, because of that repeal and of the President's Mexican policy, and because of the good faith, sincerity, disinterestedness, and law-abidingness which mark the President's course in both these cases, the United States today occupies a position of supreme importance in the world. It is the one great power not party to the awful carnage which is now desolating Europe and making modern civilization seem a sham and a reproach. It acts in foreign relations through its President, and is the one agency through which ending the war can be urged upon the belligerents with the best chance of a hearing.

To weaken the President's prestige at this crisis, to make it appear that he and his Administration are not trusted and supported by the American people, would be a calamity. At this juncture, and until discredited by some overt act of the American people, the President of the United States is not a Democratic asset merely, nor even an American asset, but an asset of the civilized world. It is due to ourselves, to the unhappy arring nations, and to humanity generally, that we do nothing to impair its value. I am, Sir, very truly yours,

RICHARD OLNEY.

Here speaks with characteristic vigor the Elder Statesman, the leading Elder Statesman, we should say, of the Democratic Party, if not of the country. Having covered the same ground affirmatively in the October number of this Review, and having now demonstrated, to our own satisfaction at least, that the Republicans have no case worth heeding, we have only this to add:

The President may, indeed, in his own words "look forward with confidence to the elections." There need be no apprehension of defeat when, anomalously, it is the opposition, not the party in power, that is on the defensive. Moreover, to our amazement and delight, Our Colonel, responding magnificently to our appeal, has 240 candidates for Congress in the running—a sufficient number, in all conscience, to turn the flank of the enemy. Serenely, then, we guess—

That the Democrats will have a majority of between 50 and 100 in the next House; that Gov. Glynn will carry New York by more than 50,000; that Mr. Gerard will get even more, regardless of the effect upon the President's perturbed heart; that Our Colonel's former ally, Sulzer "the crook," will poll more votes than Mr. Davenport; that Roger Sullivan will win in Illinois; that Senators Smoot, Penrose, Gallinger, and Dillingham will be re-elected; that Mr. Cannon and Mr. Longworth will regain their seats, and that Gov. Walsh will beat Mr. McCall if he has the luck which is the rightful heritage of a descendant of the Kings of Ireland.

George Harvey

THE TERCENTENARY OF OUR CHARTERED COMMERCE

Senator Chauncey M. Depew Writes Its Story Since the Early Days of the Dutch and Tells of the Lessons That May Be Learned from It for the Future.

By Chauncey M. Depew.

THE first quarter of each century has been distinguished by events which have had a marked influence on the history of the world. In 1314 the union was formed between France and Navarre which created a new and dominant power in Europe.

In 1415, one hundred years later, was fought the battle of Agincourt which gave France to England for a long period of years. In 1610, two hundred years later, Henry IV. was murdered, the tendency toward liberalism was stopped, and France came under the baleful influence of Mary de Medici. After the brilliant government of Cardinal Richelieu, the Edict of Nantes was repealed, the Huguenots scattered over the world, to the great enrichment of other nations and the paralysis of French industry.

In 1814 the battle of Waterloo ended the career of Napoleon and restored Europe for a time to Bourbon and autocracy.

We turn to Germany and find the same fateful first quarter of the century; 1508 to 1517 saw the rise of Luther and the most significant revolution of the Middle Ages. In 1618 began the thirty years' war, which destroyed cities and wasted the country, and after awful horrors and slaughter left Germany seriously depopulated and impoverished. But in 1813 arose the Order of the Iron Cross, which drove Napoleon from Germany, aroused German patriotism, and regained German independence.

Great Britain in her history singularly illustrates the same rule. In 1215 the Barons at Runnymede wrung from King John Magna Charta, the genesis of our own liberties. In 1314, one hundred years later, the battle of Bannockburn united England and Scotland; 1611 witnessed the completion of our authorized version of the Bible. Its influence has been incalculable upon English and American history, upon literature in the English language and upon the language itself; 1814 was the zenith of the activities of Shakespeare, and the battle of Waterloo in 1814 gave to Great Britain her escape from the peril to her empire and her commerce and a commanding influence on the ocean and in the affairs of Europe, Asia, and Africa. The victory at Blenheim in 1704 was followed by the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713, which conceded the things necessary for the British Empire of the future.

The year 1914 is one of the most fateful, not only to the United States but to the world. The most gigantic war of all the centuries is in progress. Eight hundred millions of people, one-half of the inhabitants of the earth, are in deadly conflict, with engines of destruction never imagined by the soldiers of the past. The destinies of dynasties, the boundaries of empires, the liberties of peoples, the future of civilization, the influence of Christianity are all involved in this titanic conflict.

But at the same time for the United States 1914 is an era of the victories of peace. It witnesses the completion of a century of peace between the United States and Great Britain. It heralds the end of four hundred years of effort in the completion of the Panama Canal. It witnesses the completion of the enlargement of the Erie Canal. It brings us together to celebrate the three hundredth anniversary of that small beginning of the commerce of New York, which has flowered and fruited in the centuries with a speed unknown in the history of more ancient capitals into the leadership of all but London and rivalry with her.

The often tried and often defeated efforts to find a northwest passage to the East are what led to the discovery of America and the event we celebrate. This was the quest of Columbus and which caused other navigators to try for an open door along the Atlantic Coast and the Isthmus of Darien. The failure of their search revealed a continent instead of a strait. It gave to the world the opportunity of ample room for the development of civil and religious liberty, so remote from old despotisms that before its meaning and result could be comprehended a new and mighty nation would become their guardian and protector.

Achievements of the Dutch.

The effort of Philip II. to exterminate this liberty in Holland by persecution so terrible that it carried one hundred thousand men and women to the stake aroused a spirit of defiance and independence which turned a whole people into an organization known to fame and history as the "Beggars of the Sea." These glorious mendicants took toll of the ocean. They won their lands from the waves by their dikes and flooded them to drown their invaders and persecutors. They sunk or drove into ports the fleets of King Philip and extended their power over Java and East Indian islands, and others in the West Indies which Holland still owns.

But their spiritual development was greater than their material victories. In an age enveloped in darkness they gave home and welcome to alien races and religions. The Jew was safe, and Catholics and Protestants found equal freedom. The Puritans, fleeing from England, had the unrestricted enjoyment of religion according to their belief, an open field for earning a living by their industries and the incalculable advantage of Dutch schools and Leyden University, at that time the best in Europe. Dutch scholars were leaders of thought and their artists of unequaled genius. Their inventors gave to science the microscope and improved the telescope. Such were the people who founded New York and started it upon its imperial career.

The discovery of North and South America stirred nations and individuals to grasp and utilize their treasures. The only settlement purely for liberty in all the tragic story of those centuries upon the Americas was that of the Pilgrims on Plymouth Rock. Cortes and Pizarro were ruthless and savage conquerors. St. Augustine was founded in 1565 as a Spanish military post and developed no commerce. The English settled in Jamestown in 1607, but the colonists had to be supported for years by the mother country, not even raising enough for food. In 1614 they commenced cultivating and exporting tobacco, which after some years made them self-supporting, but they created no commerce.

The Pilgrims from their settlement devoted themselves to domestic affairs, but had no foreign trade. The settlement of New York between the dates of Jamestown and Plymouth was purely a commercial enterprise. It was successful from the start, and the growth and expansion of its commerce have gone on during three centuries until it has reached its present imperial and worldwide proportions.

Henry Hudson's Voyage.

Henry Hudson, an Englishman, was prominent among those early adventurers whose tales could draw cash and ships from Kings and merchant princes. His story captured the imagination of Henry IV. of France, the hero of Navarre, but the merchants of Holland were quicker and more audacious and secured his services. He made both believe that he was the sole possessor of the secret of the coveted northwest passage to India. The solid men of Amsterdam gave him the good ship Half Moon of 100 tons, fully manned and equipped for a long voyage.

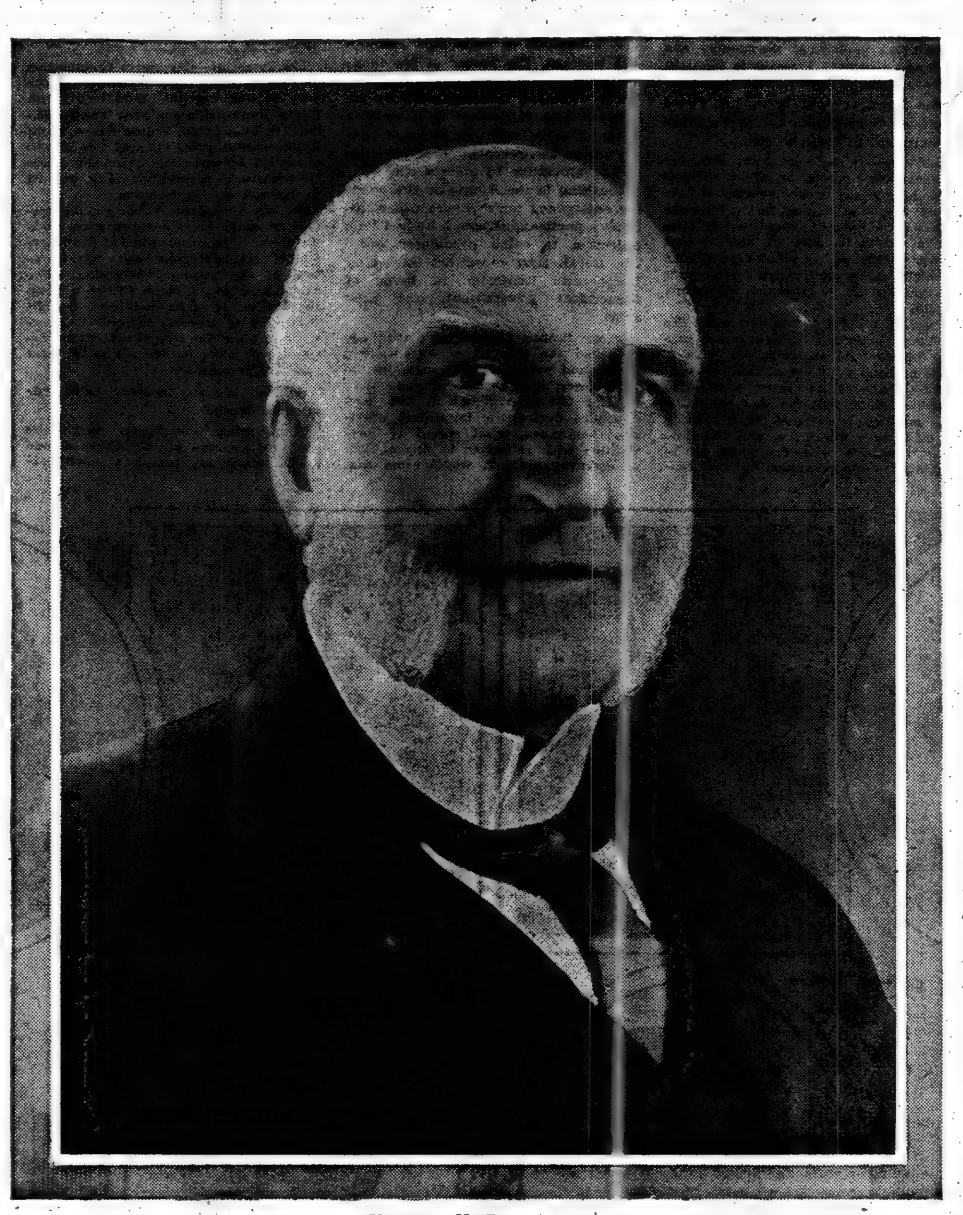
Henry Hudson was never in a hurry. He added to his English stolidness and tenacity a large measure of Dutch phlegm and love of ease. On Wednesday, Sept. 2, 1609, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, according to the log of the Half Moon, she dropped anchor at Sandy Hook. She remained in the lower bay ten days to give time for the Captain and his Holland staff to reflect on the situation. Sept. 12 she raised anchor, sailed through the Narrows and anchored off the Battery. The next day, Sept. 13, she made eleven and a half miles to Spuyten Duyvil Creek. There Hudson's boats discovered that Manhattan was an island, and old New York owes to him this important information. On the 14th the Half Moon reached Yonkers, and, being satisfied that he had found the strait leading to the goal of his quest, the northwest passage to India, he continued up the Hudson until the shallows near Troy grounded his ship and dispelled his hopes. He reached New York on his returning trip Oct. 4, having in the month demonstrated the navigability of the river and gained immortality for himself by giving his name to this most picturesque of rivers. When he cleared the harbor and pointed his prow for Europe, the Half Moon became the pioneer of the ocean sailing vessels and steamers which for three centuries in large fleets have made New York the chief port of the Western Hemisphere.

Hudson, having failed in his contract to find the northwest passage, stayed in England on his return, but sent the Half Moon and the maps and accounts of his discoveries to the East India Company at Amsterdam. The Half Moon, the pioneer of shipping to and from New York, was lost in 1615 in the Indian Ocean. These far-sighted and enterprising Dutch merchants saw the possibilities in Hudson's report and maps of the new country he had found and explored.

The Dutch had not three hundred years ago advanced to our present distrust of the individual and fear of his success. They encouraged their citizens to undertake adventurous enterprises all over the world by promising them large returns if successful, not from the State but from the results of their discoveries. The explorers took all risks and perils, and if unsuccessful the losses, but were protected in their conquests until amply repaid. The East India Company, operating in the East Indies and eastern coasts of Asia and Africa, had not only gained riches, but added enormously to the wealth and prosperity of their country.

The present colonies of Holland in the East came from the East India Company. In 1612 the enterprising merchants of Amsterdam fitted out two ships to confirm Hudson's discoveries, one under Capt. Christensen, the other under Capt. Block. They built four huts for trading purposes on what is now 39 Broadway, and there the commerce of New York began.

Here we pause to pay tribute to Capt. Block. His ship was burned in our harbor. Nothing daunted, this intrepid navigator turned ship builder. The magnitude of the task would have been appalling to the average man, but Capt. Block was a pioneer of civilization. With no shipyards, no tools but those saved from the wreck, no machinery for cutting down the trees or sawing the logs, the Captain hewed out of the primeval forest the materials for a ship forty-four and a half feet from stem to stern and eleven and a half feet wide. He named her the "Onrush," or Restless. Her activities justified her name. She sailed lightly through the perils of Hell Gate, rounded Cape Cod on the north and anchored in Delaware Bay on the south. Her intelligent Captain made maps, whose accuracy was subsequently verified, of Long Island Sound and the coasts of Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Connecticut. This modest hero, whose achievements have little mention in our histories, whose only monument is Block Island, whose reward was to be made commander twelve years after, in 1624, of the whole fleet sailing between this port and Holland, was the founder of the mercantile marine of the United States.



Chauncey M. Depew.

Birth of New York's Commerce.

"The States General of the Free United Netherlands Provinces" published in March, 1614, that they would "grant to whoever shall resort to and discover new lands and places" the right that they "shall alone be privileged to make four voyages to such lands and places from these countries exclusive of every other person until the aforesaid voyages shall be concluded." The return of Capt. Block with his report of his discoveries and statement of the possible commercial opportunities of the territories along the Hudson and Long Island Sound aroused the Dutch merchants to renewed efforts. They formed a company called the New Netherlands Company, and this company on the 11th of October, 1614, was granted a charter from the Government of which the following are the main features:

Grant of exclusive trade to New Netherlands. The States General of the United Netherlands to all to whom these presents shall come, greeting: Whereas Garrett Jacob Witssen, ancient Burgomaster of the City of Amsterdam (and certain other persons named) all now represented in one company have respectfully represented to us that they the petitioners after great expense and damages by loss of ships and other dangers have during the present year discovered and found with the above-named ships certain new land situated in America between New France and Virginia, the sea coasts whereof are between forty and forty-five degrees of latitude, and now called "New Netherlands"; and whereas we did in the month of March last, for the promotion and increase of commerce, cause to be published a certain general consent and charter, setting forth that whoever should thereafter discover certain new havens, lands, or passages might frequent or cause to be frequented for four voyages such newly discovered and found places, to the exclusion of all others from visiting or frequenting the same from the United Netherlands until the discoverers or finders shall themselves have completed the said four voyages, or cause them to be completed within the time described for that purpose under the penalties expressed in our said Octroy, etc.; they request that we shall record to them due account of the aforesaid Octroy in due form.

Which being considered, we therefore in our assembly have heard the pertinent report of said petitioners * * * have consented and granted, and by these presents do consent and grant to said petitioners now united into one company, that they shall be privileged exclusively to frequent or cause to be visited the above newly described lands in America, between New France and Virginia * * * for four voyages within the time of three years commencing the 1st of January, 1615, next ensuing, or sooner, without it being permitted to any other person from the United Netherlands to sail to or frequent the said newly described lands, havens, or places, either directly or indirectly, on pain of confiscation of the vessel and cargo wherewith infraction hereof shall be attempted, and a fine of fifty thousand Netherland ducats for the benefit of said discoverers or finders; provided nevertheless that by these presents we do not intend to prejudice or diminish any of our former grants or charters, and it is also our intention that if any disputes or differences from these are developed they shall be decided by ourselves.

We therefore expressly command all governors, justices, officers, and inhabitants of the aforesaid United Countries that they allow the said company peaceably and quietly to enjoy the whole benefit of this our grant and consent, ceasing all contradictions and obstacles to the contrary. For such we have found to appertain to the public service.

Given under our seal, paraph, and the signature of our secretary.

At The Hague, the 11th of October, 1614.

Thus, on Oct. 11, 1614, not by accident, but by able and farsighted citizens of Holland, recognising the wonderful situation and limitless future of our unequalled harbor and an enlightened Government encouraging their efforts, was begun in a formal way and under solemn official sanction the commerce of New York.

The first report of the beginning of commerce came two years later from Capt. Cornelius Hendricksen, who reported to the Government that he had for his masters, the New Netherlands Company, "discovered certain lands in North America and did trade there with the Indians, said trade consisting of sable furs, robes and skins. He hath found the country full of trees and hath seen in said country bucks and does, turkeys and partridges."

Trade developed rapidly. Present business was profitable and increasing. So at the end of four years the New Netherlands Company applied for and was granted by special license an extension for three years until June 23, 1621. When the company asked in 1621 that instead of special license the charter should be renewed for a long period, the request was denied. In this connection there develops an interesting and epoch-making chapter in the history both of Holland and of New York.

Holland Bestirs Herself.

The eighty years war for Dutch independence had resulted in 1609 in the impoverishment of Spain, and Holland becoming one of the richest and most enterprising nations in Europe. Spain asked for a truce until 1621 which was agreed upon. This truce was followed immediately by activities in exploration and of commerce by Holland and its first result was the sailing of Hudson and the Half Moon a few days after.

In 1579 the Dutch, having revolted from the tyranny and persecutions of the Spanish, had formed a confederation of the seven provinces and united them as States in the union of the United Netherlands. This successful federated Government of independent States gave the idea and methods to our forefathers for the creation of the Republic of the United States. When the truce of 1609 to 1621 was ended by Spain renewing the war for the subjugation of the Netherlands, the Dutch Government in denying the extension of the charter of the New Netherlands Company notified the petitioners that they must form a new and more powerful corporation which could not only increase the commerce of the mother country, but be sufficiently strong in armed ships to protect it.

New York Loses a Chance.

Acting upon this suggestion, the members of the company invited a general subscription for a new corporation to take over the business of the old and meet the requirements of the Government. It was capitalized at $2,800,000, an enormous sum for those days, but the capital was oversubscribed $48,261.44. Each of the seven provinces or States had a representation in the directory of twenty, proportional to their subscriptions. The company was granted vast powers not only for commerce, but for war and peace.

On Feb. 12, 1620, New York lost one of those opportunities which, if availed of, change the course of history. Pastor Robinson, the minister and leader of the Pilgrim Fathers in Holland, desired to bring his flock of 400 families to New York. The New Netherlands Company was most anxious to secure these settlers, but not having the transportation or warships to convoy them, petitioned the States General for both. The States General were exhausting all public and private facilities to prosecute the renewal of the war with Spain and were obliged to decline.

If the Pilgrims could have waited a year until the powerful West India Company had its fleet on the ocean, the settlement of Massachusetts might have been long postponed, and under the mellowing influences of our unsurpassed climate and associations with the genial and hospitable Dutch, the Pilgrim Father might have become a Dutchman. But literature and eloquence would have lost some of their noblest and most inspiring contributions.

The West India Company in the midst of its activities in war systematically and wisely developed its New York possessions. The Dutch, acting with traditional honesty, instead of taking the land by force opened negotiations with the Indians, and the company reported to the States General that it had purchased the Island of Manhattan from the wild men "for the value of sixty guilders; it is eleven thousand morgens in extent." If that is translated in terms of today, the Island of Manhattan consisting of twenty-four thousand acres of land was bought from the Indians for twenty-four dollars.

Immigration was encouraged, and the price of the passage from Amsterdam to New York, everything included, was only six dollars, though the time was about eight weeks. The land increased rapidly in value. The records show that in 1640, twenty-four years after the purchase of the island, in the settled parts and on the principal streets a lot with a frontage of thirty feet on the best business street could be bought for fourteen dollars, while in the residential part the same sum would secure one hundred feet frontage. In 1656, thirty years after the arrival of the first permanent settlers, a census was taken which enumerated seventeen streets, one hundred and twenty houses and one thousand inhabitants.

Early Export Trade.

Our study naturally turns to the beginning and development of trade from this port. The first account is the arrival at Amsterdam in 1624 of the New Netherlands, which had carried out thirty families and the equipment for their settlement. Her return cargo was 500 otter skins, 1,500 beavers, and other things which sold for 28,000 guilders, or about $11,000. The first official report to the Government is as follows:

High and Mighty Lords:

Yesterday arrived here the ship "Arms of Amsterdam," which sailed from New Netherlands at the River Mauritius (the Hudson) on the twenty-third of September. They report that our people are in good heart and live in peace there; the women have borne some children there.

They have purchased the Island Manhattaes from the Indians for the value of sixty guilders; it is eleven thousand morgens size. They had all their grain sowed by the middle of May and reaped by the middle of August. They send some samples of summer grain, such as wheat, rye, barley, etc. The cargo of the aforesaid ship is 7,246 beaver skins, 178½ otter skins, 675 otter skins, 48 minck skins, 36 wild cat skins, 33 mincks, 34 rat skins, and considerable oak timber and hickory.

Herewith, High and Mighty Lords, be commended to the Mercy of the Almighty.

To the High and Mighty Lords:

My Lords, The States General at the Hague.

Your High Mightinesses' Obedient,
(Signed) P. SCHAGER.

This shows that in two years the trade had about doubled—from $11,000 in value of exports to $20,000. Oak and hickory timber had been added to furs. This germ of a commerce which is now the most important in the Western Hemisphere, if not in the world, seems insignificant. That it has grown to its present magnitude in three centuries is an additional wonder of the world. During this period many cities and ports, famous and powerful then and in preceding centuries, have lost their commerce and decayed.

But our city has had a steady and uninterrupted growth. Part has been due to its wonderful natural advantages, but much to the enterprise and public spirit of its citizens. The construction of the Erie Canal opened up to settlement the vast territories around the Great Lakes and made them tributary to New York. The network of railways promoted and built by New York capital have emphasized for our city the ancient legend that all roads lead to Rome.

The West India Company published a table of its trade under the title "A list of returns from the New Netherlands, 1624 to 1685," but includes only beavers and other skins, and gives their values at 27,125 guilders in 1624, 85,825 in 1625, 68,001 in 1630, and 134,925 in 1635. The trade had grown in ten years from eleven thousand to fifty thousand dollars in these articles alone. The import of general merchandise for the colony kept pace with the exports, and were about equal value during these years. The rules of the company were not favorable to general commerce, as they required that all trade, whether European or coastwise, carried by the colonists must be brought to the custom house in New York (then New Amsterdam) and pay a duty of 5 per cent.

While we are the heirs of all the ages, we inherit all the problems which our ancestors failed completely to solve. The currency question vexed our primitive fathers three hundred years ago as acutely as it has and still does ourselves. The people began to be troubled with this obstacle to their commercial interchanges almost immediately. Their principal trade was with the Indians in the purchase of furs and sale to them of merchandise.

The currency of the Indians was known as "sewan," or "wampum," consisting of beads made from shells. As the colonists had no mint, this currency became common not only in dealing with the Indians, but among themselves. Six white or three black beads were equal to one stiver, a Dutch coin worth 2 cents of our money. As the trade of the colony extended to New England, the Yankees in dealing with the Dutch used this "sewan," or "wampum." The mint of the colony was on Long Island, and the issue of money carefully guarded and restricted. But the enterprise of their Connecticut neighbors was soon evident. The colony was flooded with false wampum manufactured and put in circulation by the Yankees. As fiat money and free silver drive out gold, the same inexorable rule in infant New Amsterdam led to the good wampum being hoarded and disappearing. Stringent laws were passed, penalties imposed, and the Connecticut currency placed on a 50 per cent. basis compared with the Dutch.

Financial chaos was prevented by the English conquest of New Amsterdam in August, 1664. They changed the name from New Amsterdam to New York and introduced the gold standard which happily has prevailed ever since. History constantly repeats itself. When old Governor Petrus Stuyvesant passed the city and colony over to the British in 1664, because he was compelled by overwhelming of the enemy, the city had four hundred houses and a population of about three thousand.

The value of the commerce of New Amsterdam when the British gained control was about $50,000 annually in exports, mainly furs, and an equal amounts of imports. The first official report in 1697 under the English flag gave the exports to the British Isles at £10,093, showing no growth, or about $50,000. The Dutch merchants of New York had not adjusted themselves to the breaking off of their relations with Holland and compulsory traffic with Great Britain. The exports of Virginia and Maryland for the same year were £220,758 in value, or nearly five times New York; New England £26,282 and South Carolina £12,874 exceeded New York by £2,870. New York supplied less than five per cent. of American exports at any time prior to the Revolutionary War. The value of the exports of all the American colonies to Great Britain, almost their only market, was in 1700 £395,000, of which New York sent £17,567. In 1750, £814,000, of which £35,668 only went from New York, and in 1775, the last year before the troubles began which culminated in 1776, £1,000,369, of which £60,000 was contributed by New York.

After the Revolution New York began to forge ahead, and in 1791 took fourth place among the exporting States. Pennsylvania came first with $3,436,093, Virginia next with $3,181,865, then Massachusetts with $2,519,621, and New York with $2,239,691. But in 1800 New York took the first place in the export trade. In the decade ending with 1800 New York supplied 19 per cent. of the exports from the United States, in the period ending with 1850, 26 per cent., in 1860, 35 per cent., and the decade ending in 1880, 48 per cent.

In recent years new and vigorous competitors against New York have arisen because of the construction of north and south railways in the Mississippi Valley, our great and increasing exports to Mexico and Canada, and the multiplication of ports and their facilities and steamship lines. But against all these powerful diversions and local efforts New York's share of the export trade of the whole United States is still 40 per cent., and of the import trade 60 per cent. The total trade of New York in 1913 was $2,000,000,000, nearly equally divided between export and import.

The exports from the United States in the Colonial period were mainly furs and timber, and later tobacco from the South. In 1803 our exports began to be varied and to show the expansion of our industries. Agriculture contributed $30,000,000, the forests $5,000,000, the fisheries $2,500,000, and manufactures $1,000,000. But it is in manufactures where we have made the most progress and rapid gains. Our surplus for export has grown from $1,000,000 in 1800 to $1,000,000,000 in 1913.

In 1800 the United States was fairly equipped to enter the competition for the commerce of the world with the old and highly organized industrial countries. In the succeeding half century steam had revolutionized navigation, the Erie Canal had opened the vast and fertile West, railroads were piercing the passes from the Atlantic coast to the interior.

From 1800 to 1913 the commerce of Great Britain has grown from $335,000,000 to $5,500,000,000 a year; that of what is now the German Empire from $108,000,000 to $4,500,000,000, and that of the United States from $85,000,000 in 1800 to $4,500,000,000 in 1913. Stated in percentages, the trade of Great Britain and France is now eighteen times as much as in 1800; Germany twenty-four times as much, and the United States fifty times as much.

Our Great Opportunity.

Three hundred years ago the commerce of New York began in a log hut built on the site of 39 Broadway for the storage of beaver and otter skins. Venice was still mistress of the seas; Genoa, with declining trade, was enjoying the luxuries of her accumulated riches; Great Britain and France were gaining commerce for their cities by battles and victories on sea and land; Spain was accumulating the wealth which proved her ruin from Mexico and South America. Peking and Moscow were controlling the productions of the Orient. Three centuries of unparalleled revolutions in the power of peoples, the boundaries of empires, inventions of steam and electricity have so altered the commercial highways of the world that ancient marts are archaeological museums and new centres have grown by leaps and bounds until they have accomplished more in a few generations than older cities in as many centuries.

New York becomes easily the greatest metropolis of the world while all other nations are involved in this awful and disastrous war. It is an opportunity which in the interest of civilization and humanity we profoundly regret. But with opportunity is coupled duty, and in the performance of that duty we help dependent peoples who are cut off from their sources of supply and keep open channels of commerce, needed alike by combatants and non-combatants. We should prepare for these great responsibilities. We should learn the wants of peoples whose commercial connections are paralyzed or suspended, and our manufacturers should expand their productions to meet the requirements of the world. The seas and ports of the earth should once more welcome an American merchant marine, the creation and growth of this miraculous opportunity.

We hope for peace, we pray for peace, and when it once more reigns and blesses we will hail with joy our rivals of all lands to an open door for the revival of their trade and commerce.

Chauncey M. Depew

THE WAR AND BUSINESS

Non-Hysterically and Impartially

Studied by an Export Expert

William M. Benney, Manager of the Foreign Trade Department, National Association of Manufacturers, Says Exact Knowledge of Conditions Favors Optimism.

By Edward Marshall.

THE general European war now has been in progress long enough to enable the American business community to begin to clarify its sight, seeing details of the unprecedented commercial picture which at first seemed but a vision of chaos.

It is now plain to the intelligently broad-eyed that neither the prophets of complete calamity nor those who predicted that out of the misery of others America would easily reap a golden harvest, were entirely right.

The commercial situation which has confronted the business men of the United States has been entirely a new one; that they have staggered before the outer waves of the storm which has laid the balance of the world prostrate is not surprising. But they are beginning to adjust themselves to the unprecedented circumstances; the world seems to have been reassured that they will rise to meet the situation as Americans have always risen to meet every situation which has confronted them.

No man in the country is in a better position to estimate the problem as a whole than William M. Benney, Manager of the Foreign Trade Department for the National Association of Manufacturers. He may be called the consulting expert to whom a very large number of America's greatest business houses in all lines turn for advice concerning export markets, and his work has attracted favorable attention in almost every part of the world. Probably he has had a better opportunity to take a bird's-eye view of the export situation during recent years than any individual outside of the Federal service, and, in the minds of some, his especial investigations, through their more personal note, have had a certain value impossible for Government reports to duplicate.

Adjustment Necessary.

Naturally he has studied with especial care the commercial situation which has grown out of the European war with relation to American trade, and it is fair to assume that his conclusions, as expressed in the following carefully revised interview, will be found by the American business man to have particular value.

Both pessimists and optimists may easily find backing for their arguments in things as they are. It was the pessimist's side which Mr. Benney first presented, because I asked him to do exactly that, and not because he leans away from optimism.

"Commerce cannot expand," said Mr. Benney, "without an adjustment of the financial situation, for credits must be rehabilitated. Until this is accomplished the United States can do little in the way of trade extension.

"Many plans toward this end have been proposed; little actually has been done. The National City Bank has been making praiseworthy efforts through the establishment of branch banks in South America, but time enough for results has not yet elapsed; transportation is still a problem in all our foreign trade; American bottoms are insufficient, and on the seas there are cruisers hostile to most other shipping.

"A still more serious handicap upon foreign shipping lies in the lack of foreign exchange on London.

"There are those who believe that if the war should last years instead of months the transfer of the world's financial centre from London to New York would occur, but if the seas were kept clear, as probably they would be, London, as a matter of fact, might retain her financial supremacy, unless Great Britain should be completely crippled by the absorption for military purposes of the vast majority of her male industrial workers. Only that, I think, could make New York the exchange centre of the world, or even render it a formidable rival in this regard of London, Paris, and Hamburg.

"So it seems to me that that rosy dream of financial supremacy for New York as a result of the great war is not justified by facts.

"Nor do I believe that there is the slightest likelihood of a realization of the prophecies that the war will result in a great boom in our general trade.

War Bound to Hurt Us.

"I am sure that the best we can look forward to is partial compensation for the loss of European markets through an unusual demand from neutral European and non-European countries for certain supplies which normally they would buy in Europe."

I asked if this might not wholly offset our loss, through immediate profit and the retention of trade after the war.

"Scarcely," Mr. Benney answered. "Europe has been taking three-fifths of our exports, much of her draft consisting of foodstuffs. Our exports of foodstuffs will increase, of course, but ten years of such increase would not be sufficient to offset the inevitable decrease in our European trade in raw materials, such as cotton, oils, and metals.

"Our exports of manufactured products to the belligerent nations will be hampered for many years after the war ends. Europe's governmental financial resources will be absorbed very largely for a long time by the liquidation of war debts, by the rebuilding of cities, railways, and other properties destroyed by military operations, and by the payment of pensions to the maimed and the families of the dead.

"Death, disease, and wounds will enormously decrease, too, the earning ability of her people; emigration is likely to be heavy, helping to impoverish her; a necessarily increased burden of taxation still further will lessen her purchasing power, by enforcing economies among all classes.

"All these things will mean a decreased collective purchasing power for the superior article, which so frequently means the American article. Cheaper substitutes of European manufacture will be favored of necessity.

"Europe, for instance, will offer a decreased market for costly passenger automobiles. Utility and economy will be considered, for a long time, as against pleasure and luxurious extravagance.

"War's effect will go beyond that. It will mean not only the destruction of factories which it will take years to rebuild and the demoralization of businesses which it will take years to reorganize, but the destruction of the lives of business owners, of clerical forces, of factory workmen, and, above all, of buyers themselves—many in all these classes being the providing heads of families. The English class which buys luxuries—the rich—is losing its men by thousands.

"So we shall find after the war not only that luxurious commodities have been extensively destroyed, but that their purchasers, or, at least, the fortunes of their purchasers, have been extensively destroyed.

"The incomes of those left will have been considerably decreased by diminished returns from investments at home and abroad.

"South American, South African, and even American dividends have been immensely slowed up by the war. It has wrecked many European enterprises in which European money was invested and has handicapped many foreign enterprises in which European money is invested.

"The burden which will be placed upon industry by the destruction of workingmen will directly decrease not only the total of wages, and, therefore, the purchasing power of the working classes, but the total of dividends, and, therefore, the purchasing power of the owner classes.

"So the buying capacity in general of the belligerent nations will be immensely lessened for many years to come; this will adversely affect other nations' exports to these nations, harming the exporting countries, and, in turn, decreasing their purchasing power. Thus we must suffer directly and indirectly; directly through loss of trade with the belligerent nations, indirectly through loss of trade with non-belligerent but affected nations.

"In other words, any reduction of the producing power of any nation will adversely affect all nations normally exporting goods to it, or to any nation which normally would supply it. To put it still differently, the decrease of any nation's purchasing power means a reduction of the world's export trade.

Europe Will Spend at Home.

"The adverse factor represented by the destruction of skilled workers will not only decrease wages earned and thus deplete the purchasing class, but will tend to increase the cost of manufactured goods and thus again hamper our exportations of raw material through lessened ability of purchasing nations to buy.

"Higher interest rates will add an appreciable percentage to the cost of that rebuilding and re-equipping which inevitably must follow destructive warfare.

"For a long time to come money will be tight and high in all parts of the world. For an indefinite time the great financial nations of Europe will need for their own purposes so large a proportion of their capital that they will have little or none to lend or to invest elsewhere.

"This, too, will be outreaching. If the great borrowing nations outside of Europe find themselves unable to secure financial assistance for their own development, their growth will be retarded thereby and their capacity as markets for manufacturing nations like the United States will be decreased.

"Sentiment is already making itself felt in affording opportunities to American manufacturers, as the business men of Russia, Germany, Austria, France, and the United Kingdom are coming to the United States or writing to our business people stating that they now wish to substitute American goods for those of enemy countries which they have heretofore handled.

"While this matter of sentiment will have some effect, any one who relies on sentiment alone for the increase of his business is sure to be disappointed. Other things being equal, sentiment may turn the scale in favor of the supposed friend, but a greater discount or the chance for larger profit will in the long run, and more and more as years go on, turn the scale in favor of the article on which the most profit can be made."

This, on the whole, made a very gloomy picture. I hastened to ask Mr. Benney to display such optimistic signs as he could find, for he had assured me that there were such signs.

"We should gain," said Mr. Benney, "through the rehabilitation of credits. This will begin definitely when the way once more is free for the movement of food products and certain raw materials, as, for example, the cotton of the United States, the jute of India, the wool of Australia, the grain of Argentina.

"The machinery for the financing of these matters has been located for so long a time in Europe, particularly in London, that it will be a difficult, a complicated matter requiring much time to so readjust things that the United States will fully or even partially benefit; but this must come.

"A prolongation of the war of necessity would force New York into the position of the world's centre for the adjustment of accounts between exporters and importers of all countries. From her possession of this business London has won prestige and a profit, which, though somewhat intangible, has been real. Through handling and rehandling the world's money she has made immense bankers' profits, which have not been at all intangible.

"These affairs attracted to London the financiers of all nations needing money for the development of enterprises, governmental and private, and this gave the British investor, manufacturer, and merchant certain practically exclusive opportunities to take the pick of the world's trade, the largest of the world's profits, with comparatively little accompanying effort on their part. They were sought, not seekers.

"With New York gradually working into a similar position, similar advantages will be available here, and these will inevitably react upon our capable men, stimulating that creative imagination and grasp of great business facts which have been lacking in this American generation.

"There are several wholly logical good reasons why New York should be, if not the world's principal financial centre, at least a much greater financial centre than she ever has been.

"For instance, we are the world's greatest coffee consumers, and Brazil, the coffee producer, needs our manufactured products. Yet we have done business with Brazil almost exclusively through Europe. This would seem to be our opportunity to begin to do business with her through New York.

Chance for Huge Expansion.

"And if this is true in regard to Brazil's coffee it also is true in regard to Brazil's rubber, in regard to Japan's silks and China's teas. We have been the largest ultimate consumers of Africa's feathers and diamonds, yet we have done business with Africa through London. Probably we are the largest consumers of India's jute, but we have dealt with India through London.

"If we now exercise proper intelligence and the war is a long one we may take noteworthy steps toward transferring all this vast financial business from London to New York, and this not only will wield a direct profit, but will be a large economy, tending toward expedition and efficiency. Some of our ablest financiers are chary of predicting this, but to me it seems to be a reasonable hope.

"Of course, war has enormously decreased the manufacturing capacity of all the fighting nations, and all the great manufacturing nations except the United States are among the fighting nations. It, therefore, forces importing countries to look hither for supplies. The belligerent nations now turn and will turn to us for goods hitherto provided by their present enemies.

"These great facts open for the American manufacturer opportunities for such trade expansion as would have been impossible without the war.

"Although there are certain obstacles in the way to prevent us from taking the fullest immediate advantage of these opportunities, although our factories and workshops are not humming with all the new business which, theoretically, should be coming already to our merchants and manufacturers, it is a fact that some of our industries have been tremendously stimulated by rush orders to make good losses of required material, and this already is beginning to react favorably upon general conditions.

Manufacturers Busy Everywhere.

"Our manufacturers of commercial automobiles and other vehicles, of picks and spades, of shoes and boots, of blankets, of harness and saddlery, of hospital supplies, and many other commodities have their hands full of rush orders at the present moment.

"While business in articles of this sort is at present largely dependent on needs resulting from military operations, the merits of such American goods will have been established by the time peace is declared. The excellence of articles used in war should be a valuable advertisement of the general quality of American goods, bearing fruit after peace comes. The man of imagination can easily see the real importance of this fact.

"For the trade in manufactured goods of neutral nations outside of Europe we now have scarcely any rival except England, and her overseas trade will necessarily be seriously impaired, at least until the war ends.

"While the financial situation of many of the neutral nations outside of Europe is far from satisfactory, we still may trade extensively and profitably with them, for their natural products provide them with means of exchange for our manufactured articles.

"And once the machinery of financial exchange is adjusted it is only fair to expect a constantly increasing volume of goods going thence from the United States.

"Even with the decreased financial resources and the enforcement of economies in public and private buying which characterized the period there immediately preceding the war, the volume of imports to these countries from the belligerent nations was so great that if the United States only adds a small part of it to its present volume of exports to these neutrals, our exports will be large enough to materially improve industrial conditions here.

"There are other aspects of the situation from which encouragement may be drawn. Among the material destroyed by war will be immense numbers of horses. The resulting deficit will not only place our horseflesh at a premium, but will vastly extend our market for motor-propelled vehicles.

"The destruction of European factories, and especially the destruction and demoralization of European workers, as well as their emigration, will immensely decrease European manufacturing capacity, thereby increasing opportunity for successful competition on our part in all foreign markets.

"The European scarcity of labor, which, owing to death, disease, and psychological upset, will follow the war, may be sure to mean, as some have said, increased European wages to such efficient and willing workers as remain there when the war ends; but these increased wages, coupled with dearer money, will mean an increased cost of European manufacture, perhaps sufficient to place European manufacturers on a cost par with ours.

"The American manufacturer, on the other hand, while probably feeling somewhat the increased cost of money in his borrowings of capital, very likely will be, otherwise, in a better position than before to meet foreign competition in prices.

Labor Advantage Probable.

"Whether or not the manufacturing industries of the United States will be benefited by the increased immigration which surely will follow the war is debatable, but very likely we may find good in the fact that many of the best will be driven from Europe by the hard times period which will follow the making of peace, and even if, at the same time, we suffer from an influx of the somewhat undesirable, we probably shall gain a labor advantage over the European manufacturer.

"But certain factors must be very intelligently utilized if we are to take full advantage of the situation. While all these generalizations may be useful to those who have only begun to study foreign trade opportunities, taking advantage of them must depend upon the energetic efforts and intelligence of individuals.

"The individual American merchant and manufacturer must so study present and prospective trade possibilities that by their concerted efforts the trade of the United States as a whole may show that increase which it is our duty as well as our opportunity to achieve.

Ground for Optimism.

"Of the individual manufacturer this will require, first, knowledge of the requirements of the foreign markets, then knowledge of the extent to which his goods already do or can be made to meet them; then acquaintance with the dealers or users in the foreign countries and their commercial and financial responsibility; then the establishment of means of approaching them in their own language and in accordance with their own customs, and then the patience which overcomes difficulties and calmly awaits results of wise and persistent effort.

"The channels through which reliable information necessary to the planning of export campaigns may be secured already are at the service of American manufacturers in the machinery of the Government and of various business organizations; reports on the financial responsibility of foreign merchants are readily obtainable; the American with experience in foreign travel and knowledge of foreign languages and customs is now not hard to find, and measures have been devised whereby foreign accounts may be financed through American facilities.

"An intelligent beginning has been made toward the development of an American merchant marine which eventually will enable American exporters to send American goods abroad in American bottoms; so, taken all in all, although the situation is full of complications and doubts, while the cataclysm of the war is too great and terrible to mean unmixed good for any one, analysis still gives good ground for a real American optimism."

William M. Benney.

To a recent issue of Le Figaro, Edmond Rostand contributes a sonnet, suggested by the death of the composer, Alberic Magnard. It is said that Magnard was shot while defending his house, near Compiègne, from German troops. Magnard's greatest work is his music drama, "Berenice," in which he used a theme on which Racine based a famous tragedy. To this, and to Corneille's play, "Tite et Berenice," the sextet of the sonnet alludes:

MAGNARD

SEE how this foe of treachery and lies
Who loved the muse with constant love and great
And fought for art against barbaric hate
Fights also for his home, and fighting, dies!

O Radiant Death, harmonious and wise!
O Perfect Symmetry of work and fate!
Let him dwell in the realms whence rose the State
Where master-poets greet him with proud eyes.

Two Shades will talk to him of Berenice,
For this man's sake their rivalry shall end,
For monument his hearthstone shall abide;
And let this Frenchman in sweet earth be laid;
He did the measure and the purpose blend,
Sang like Racine, and, like Corneille, he died!

THE KING OF IRELAND'S DAUGHTER

By DONN BYRNE.

THERE'S many and many a margrave
And many a margrave's son
Whose hearts would break if they understood
The errand I am on.
Pale moon and starry mountains,
And a singing salt sea-wind,
And a stretch of silver roading,
Left many a mile behind!
Pale moon and starry mountains,
And a ribbon of golden strand!
I ride to woo the daughter
Of the King of Ireland.

The starry mountains whisper:
"No maiden as fair as she!
And none but thee shall win her,
Thou mirror of chivalry."
And the salt sea-winds are singing:
"Spare neither heel nor hand.
He rides to woo the daughter
Of the King of Ireland."

The King of Ireland's daughter
Walks in her green pleasance
With knights of Kent and Cornwall
And with chevaliers of France.
And her father smiles and murmurs:
"There is the bride-to-be
Of the Palatine of Prussia,
Or the King of Saxony."
But he knows not of the rider
Who rides by the gold sea-sand,
Who rides to woo the daughter
Of the King of Ireland.

The starry mountains whisper:
"No maiden as fair as she!
And none but thee shall win her,
Thou mirror of chivalry."

Disproved.

Knicker—Things that are equal to the same thing are equal to each other.

Booker—Not at all. The Smiths are both equal to a quarrel, but not to each other.

And the salt sea-winds are singing:
"Spare neither heel nor hand.
He rides to woo the daughter
Of the King of Ireland."

The King of Ireland's daughter
Walks in her greenery,
And before her harping blithely
Go her minstrels three by three.
But she knows not of the rider,
Nor of the songs he sings
That set high hearts a-quiver
With a flutter of swallows' wings.
Pale moon and starry mountains
And a twinkle of shimmering strand!
I ride to woo the daughter
Of the King of Ireland.

The starry mountains whisper:
"No maiden as fair as she!
And none but thee shall win her,
Thou mirror of chivalry."
And the salt sea-winds are singing:
"Spare neither heel nor hand.
He rides to woo the daughter
Of the King of Ireland."

GEN. VON FALKENHAYN, NEW HEAD OF GERMAN ARMY

Character of Minister of War, Who Has Just Succeeded von Moltke, Is a Sharp Contrast to That of the Latter—New Chief Is Live, Energetic, and a Bundle of Nerves.

By Richard Barry.

HALF a century ago the offices of Minister of War and Chief of Staff were held by the same person in Prussia. The Great von Moltke (history will doubtless write down the two Moltkes as the Greater and the Lesser) succeeded in separating the two offices in 1857, since which time they have been held by different men.

The War Minister in Germany, unlike the War Ministers of the United States, France, and England, has always been a professional soldier. He is the personal choice of the Kaiser, and holds a position advisory to the Kaiser.

In July, 1913, the Kaiser appointed as his Minister of War to succeed von Herringen the youngest man who had ever held the office, one whose rank it was necessary to elevate to give him authority commensurate with his new position. This was Lieut. Gen. (then Major General) Erich G. A. S. von Falkenhayn, who was born on the 11th of September, 1861, and who was therefore not 52 years old when he came into position next to that of supreme importance in the German Army.

Within the last two weeks Gen. von Falkenhayn has been appointed Chief of Staff to succeed von Moltke, who has left the front because of a severe attack of liver trouble. Some reports say that he is dying; others that he is not seriously ill; others that his supposed illness is but a convenient excuse seized by the Kaiser to retire one about whom he has never been enthusiastic.

In any event, the new man at the head of the German Army presents a sharp contrast to the old man who is just gone. As the age of commanding officers goes in modern armies, he is very young, while Moltke is over 66.

In temperament—well, Falkenhayn has one; Moltke none. Falkenhayn is live, energetic, a bundle of nerves, sometimes very agreeable, sometimes very irascible, intuitional, aristocratic, and venturesome. Moltke is placid, methodical, even-tempered, democratic, literal-minded, and cautious.

The two men are about as far apart as Germans could be. Moltke never got into a scrape in his life. Falkenhayn has been repeatedly in situations from which only a genius or a favorite of fortune could extricate himself. Falkenhayn is certainly a favorite of fortune, and events will show whether or not he is a genius.

Looks Like Japanese Leader.

Physically, the new leader of a world army bears a strange resemblance to that wonderful other Chief of Staff, Kodama, the Japanese. He has the same alert eye, the same winning smile, the same tumultuous habit of asking interminable questions, the same ringing vitality, the same prime robustness of youthful middle age.

An officer who once served under him has described to me how Falkenhayn reviewed troops during the few years in which he had active command. He is an infantryman, and was at the head of regiments of foot soldiers in the decade previous to the Boxer war, and he also commanded a regiment of Prussian guards in 1910 for a while.

"He could not stand or sit still during a review," said this officer. "It seemed to be necessary for him to walk or ride about constantly. It seemed a part of his mental intensity and of his nervous curiosity. This is a trait very rare among German officers."

An older General once observed this tendency on Falkenhayn's part and said to him: "Why do you walk about so much? Don't you think it has the effect of making your troops less steady?"

"Nonsense!" replied Falkenhayn, "soldiers are not ninnies. Should an officer be a post or an object of art to remain stationary while soldiers are in action? An officer should be only a super-soldier. He should move twice as much, think a hundred times as much, and act a thousand times more quickly."

And that he may be able to "move twice as much" Falkenhayn has always taken good care not to grow fat. He is of the middle height and extremely slender. Which is quite unusual for a German officer past 50.

Little Field Training.

Yet from the first Falkenhayn has been very little with troops; only enough to conform to the regulations which require that no one designed for staff duty can entirely escape service in the field. He is a graduate of the War Academy, and before occupying his present position was twice Chief of Staff, though never before to the entire army. During 1909-10 he was Chief of Staff to the Sixteenth Army Corps, headquarters at Metz, and previous to his appointment as Minister of War was Chief of Staff to the Fourth Army Corps, headquarters at Magdeburg.

The only active service undertaken by Falkenhayn previous to the present war was during the Boxer rebellion, when he served in China on the staff of Count Waldersee. After the Boxer war he was retained by the Chinese Government, with the consent of the Kaiser, to instruct a number of young officers in the Chinese Army. Thus he spent the better part of two years in the Orient.

As a fruit of this Oriental experience the collection of war medals now in the possession of Chief of Staff von Falkenhayn contains several which he may be inclined to treat as his imperial master is reputed to have treated his English decorations. For Falkenhayn holds two Japanese medals (an order of the Rising Sun and one of the Holy Treasure) presented to him by the Emperor of Japan, and another medal presented to him by the Czar of Russia. Because of China's inability to restrain Japan from violating her neutrality in attacking Kiao-Chau he may not feel as proud as once he did of his beautiful decoration of the Two Dragons presented to him by the late Empress Dowager.

For a dozen years or more the Kaiser has been particularly interested in Falkenhayn, and as long ago as his return from China picked him out for advancement. As a definite earnest of his trust and regard he placed under Falkenhayn's charge the Crown Prince, and intrusted to him the military education of the Crown Prince. This trust, one of peculiar delicacy and importance, Falkenhayn has shared with only one other officer, von Herringen, who preceded him in Berlin as Minister of War.

Von Herringen is a considerably older man, and at the outbreak of the war was placed in command of the army of the Vosges, while Falkenhayn was retained in the more important post of Minister of War. This, however, took from him the society of the Crown Prince, with whom he has been a prime favorite for more than ten years. The Prince went with von Herringen to command the army adjoining his to the west, but in reality to be under the constant watch and guidance of the ex-Minister of War.

This arrangement was in pursuance of a plan made by Falkenhayn, with the sanction of the Kaiser and approved by Moltke, to place the Crown Prince in a position where he could gain the most credit, if credit were gained by any one, and to receive the least blame if some one must be blamed.

One reason for the great camaraderie which has developed between Falkenhayn and the Crown Prince (though the new Chief of Staff is considerably older than the heir apparent) lies in the superior birth of the General. It is said that none of the high commanding officers of the present day can boast of as ancient a family as that of Falkenhayn. His noble blood dates back for seven or eight centuries. That was something to begin with in attaining the friendship of a Hohenzollern.

Always a Soldier.

However, though undeniably a royal favorite, it is not charged, even by his enemies, that Falkenhayn lacks independence of character or sturdiness of thought or that he has not contributed to his work an individuality of purpose. He is said to be even more independent, when it comes to questions purely military, than was Moltke, the taciturn recluse.

His viewpoint on all matters is purely that of the soldier. He has never been a diplomat and never an agitator. His attitude on the dueling question is illustrative of his type of mind—one which does not try to conceal a condition by evasion either of fact or logic.

Early in the present year there occurred a duel in the German Army in which Lieut. Haage was killed. As this was contrary to army regulations, in violence of the edict of the Kaiser, and against the concerted modern public opinion, the new Minister of War was called upon to abjure the event and castigate the survivor.

He did nothing of the sort. He said frankly in a public statement that, although dueling was against the laws of God and man, every German officer must be ready to vindicate his manhood by personal combat if necessary. He added that he was doing everything in his power to diminish dueling in the army; that he had encouraged the appointment of courts of honor among officers which should consider the merits of cases usually submitted only to the code of the duello, and that he would be glad if there were no more duels.

But with the other hand, and at the same time, Falkenhayn asserted that the willingness of a German officer to meet an adversary on the field of honor was an evidence of physical courage, and that, although the penalty might fall on the wronged man, all German officers must be ready to regain their self-esteem and to repel imputations by a duel.

It may have been bad statecraft or faulty reasoning, or both, for a modern Minister of War to so declare. Yet it was undeniably the expression of a disciplinarian who lacked neither courage nor a sympathetic understanding of the code of his kind.

Stormy Reichstag Debut.

It was in December, 1913, that Falkenhayn first made himself felt as a national figure in Germany. He impressed himself on the national consciousness in a peculiar way, which threatened at the moment to limit his usefulness to the Kaiser once and for all, but which eventually resulted in leaving a good impression of him in the minds of practically all parties.

It was during the debate in the Reichstag on the Zabern affair. The Radicals, the Socialists, and the Alsatians had made vigorous speeches, in which they denounced the Government for what they declared was a military dictatorship in Alsace-Lorraine.

In reply to this, Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg defended the Government's action, and was not very diplomatic about his defense. Instead of quelling the uprising, he converted it into a practical riot, in which the staid members of the Reichstag were acting like unruly schoolboys. The Chancellor retired in confusion and disorder.

This particularly inopportune moment was chosen by the just-appointed Minister of War to make his initial appearance before the Reichstag. It was the first bow of a soldier in the rôle of a diplomat. And he was not only a soldier; he was, for the moment, regarded as the mouthpiece of the Kaiser, for he had just returned from a visit to the Kaiser, and presumably brought the imperial message on the Zabern affair.

He was received with silence and respect. Falkenhayn went direct to bat. His first statement attacked the kernel of the matter. He said that the Government had no intention of giving any assurances that there would be any change in the policy in Alsace-Lorraine. That was all there was to say.

The storm broke before he had completed a dozen words. Jeers, shouts, shrieks rent the air. Labadour, the leader of the Socialists, ran to the speaker's rostrum and yelled, "come down!" Other members hurled shouts of "Insult!" "Impudence!" "Falsehood!" at the Minister of War.

The aged President of the Reichstag rang his bell repeatedly and in vain. A mob of football players or a regiment of charging troops would have been easier to control than the supreme lawmaking body of Germany at that moment. It looked for a while as if the delegates would drag the Kaiser's new Minister of War from his high estate and hurl him into the street.

Meanwhile Falkenhayn became more poised than ever. His mercurial, volatile, energetic nature seemed to have been completely settled by the rising temperature of the aroused delegates. He waited quietly for the uproar to cease. It were as though he was watching a battle for the opportune moment to attack.

Finally the tumult subsided. Then Falkenhayn deliberately and with evident full measure of the meaning of his words repeated what he had said before in precisely the same phrases.

There arose a worse tumult than the first. Members leaped to their desks and shrieked that he was a traitor. Several started to drag him by main force from the speaker's place, but were deterred by the more temperate. The sounds could be heard three blocks away. For seventeen years—since the colonial debates in 1896—the Reichstag was not so swept off its feet as by Gen. Falkenhayn then.

He did not wait for the second tumult to subside. He stepped to the very edge of the platform and in the voice of a commander, which rose shrill and harsh above any in the hall, Falkenhayn proceeded to lay down to the lawmakers what he considered the law to be.

He declared that the Zabern incident had been exaggerated by the press, yet he added that the military authorities could not have given way in the Zabern incident or it would have led to chaos, because the Alsatians would have taken advantage of it to break all bounds. Military authorities could not and would not recede before such opposition.

Then Falkenhayn became very dramatic. By that time all could hear, for the force of his personality had compelled attention. He arose to his toes and cried:

"The army is a part of the people, and certainly not the least important part, as shown by the indisputable fact that without the army not one stone of this proud building would be standing.

"The army is a terrible weapon. It must be if its purpose and object are to be attained. It was not created for police duty. Military intervention in civil affairs is hateful to me, but," and as he concluded he stretched out his hand in a threatening attitude, "once the army steps in harshness and rigorous measures are necessary."

Embodies Army Ideals.

With that he left the rostrum. For a few days he was roundly abused in the majority of the papers and by nearly all parties. But after a week public opinion veered. "If we must have a Minister of War, that is the kind of Minister of War for us to have; one who knows his business and is not afraid to speak up for it," is the way one Socialist organ put it.

Berlin had found a new and vigorous entity.

It has been said recently that Falkenhayn is a representative of the Bernhardi theory of militarism. If so, he has never preached it, either through writing or by public speech. Bernhardi himself is looked upon among German officers as a rather annoying old scold, a pessimist who sees nothing but the decaying effects of luxury.

Falkenhayn is, however, a vital representative of the German military caste. He embodies the ideals and traditions of the German officer, and, in the sense that he will inspire confidence in subordinates, has been, for that reason, if for none other, a happy choice.

FRENCH AND BELGIANS AROUSE MOST OF BRITAIN'S ENTHUSIASM

At Least This Is True of London Music Halls, Where "Marseillaise" Is More Popular than "God Save the King"—Incidentally, Upper Classes Are More Demonstrative.

YOU may think that any one who desires popularity in London today should wear a red jacket, tight trousers, and a pill-box hat strapped over the right ear, and be a British soldier. But you are wrong. British soldiers overflow the parks and buses and bars; they are as numerous and as commonplace as sparrows. If you really want the Lohdoners to like you, to cheer you when you walk in the Strand and to offer you free drinks and cigarettes, be a Frenchman or a Belgian refugee.

The English (here is a world-shaking discovery) are not an emotional race. But they regard their newfound allies with an enthusiasm that is almost hysterical. The Belgian Relief Fund appeals to the philanthropic more strongly than does the Prince of Wales's Fund for National Relief; the tricolor evokes more applause than the union jack; even little boys who march through the streets wearing newspaper helmets and carrying wooden swords whistle the "Marseillaise" rather than "God Save the King."

The theatres and music halls give an interesting illustration of this phenomenon. When, for example, at the Palladium, the massed bands of His Majesty's Scots Guards and His Majesty's Royal Horse Guards signalise the end of the performance by playing "God Save the King," the audience rises, of course, as it has done for many years. But it shows no enthusiasm; it gropes for its hat and it puts its woman companion's scarf about her shoulder, but it does not attempt to sing. Of course, it does now know the words. But, then, you do not know the words of "The Star-Spangled Banner," and yet at any rate you sing "La la la la la la!" with great expression.

But when the aforementioned bands play the "Marseillaise," every one in the Palladium rises, applauds, hums the stirring tune, and sings at least "Marshong! Marshong!", and there is similar excitement when the band plays the national anthems of Russia and of Belgium, and even when it somewhat diffidently essays a complicated and monotonous exercise alleged to be the patriotic hymn of Japan.

Of course, there is patriotism among the Londoners; they are not wholly given to affection for their allies. They are enlisting by the thousand—that is sufficient proof. But it is nevertheless true that the Londoners are not now given to those loud and obvious demonstrations of patriotic feeling which would in similar circumstances be expected of the people of New York or Paris.

Not that opportunities for demonstrations are lacking. If the Socialist Party in England—like the Socialist Party in Germany—were not now given over wholly to the novel experience of patriotism, there is no doubt that The Clarion and The New Age would be loud in their denunciations of the theatrical managers—"tools of the capitalistic, militaristic class." For there is no theatre or music hall in London to which one can go for an evening's entertainment without being entreated, urged, implored, to enlist.

As might be expected, the most obvious and insistent theatrical effort to swell the ranks of the army is to be found at that home of melodramatic thrills, the Lyceum. Here, nightly, is shown "Tommy Atkins," a lurid drama in four acts and fourteen scenes. The Lyceum, in spite of its excellent location, (just off the Strand and not far from the Gaiety,) is nowadays by no means an aristocratic house, being given over to the sort of sensational drama shown in New York years ago at the Thalia. "Tommy Atkins" is a hastily prepared medley of battle, murder, and sudden death, having as its moral the burden of a song sung (very seriously) by the leading comedian, "So come, my lad, and be a soldier!"

There is enthusiasm enough among the soldiers and civilians—more than half the audience is in khaki—who follow the adventures of Harold Wilson, the preternaturally brave and beautiful curate who turns soldier. But the enthusiasm, it must be admitted, is not called forth chiefly by the numerous patriotic utterances.

When, for instance, the redoubtable Wilson strips off his cassock and dons a red jacket, exclaiming, (to slow music,) "There's a job for every man so long as England needs soldiers," the applause needs careful stimulation by the young women ushers. Even when the guns are popping like anything on the entrenchments in the last act the gallant Captain does not produce at all the desired effect when he says, "Now, lads, let's show them how British bulldogs fight!"

But, on the other hand, every virtuous platitude is received with tumultuous joy. When the persecuted heroine (clutching to her breast a baby or a marriage certificate or something of the sort) exclaims passionately, "Yes! that's the way of the world! It's always the woman who has to pay!" the handclapping is loud and spontaneous. So it is when she spurns the villain, when the villain is shot, when the comic soldier refuses to shake hands with the villain—at all the events and expressions of sentiment which such a crowd as this might naturally be expected to applaud. The audience falls into every trap set for it, every sensational speech "went over big"—except those that were patriotic.

Of course, the natural conclusion to draw from this is that the audience was not patriotic. But this would be a false conclusion. These people—shopkeepers, clerks, laborers, housemaids—are patriotic. The men are enlisting by the thousand, the women are giving out of their pitiful salaries to the Prince of Wales's Fund for National Relief, and spending all their leisure in work for the soldiers and for the Belgian refugees.

As they sat there that night most of the women were busily knitting socks to be sent to the troops. Why, then, did they conceal their patriotic emotions so diligently? Why did they not applaud "Now, lads, let's show them how British bulldogs fight!" as loudly as they did "It's the woman who always pays"?

I asked my companion, the editor of one of the London weeklies, about this. He said: "Well, we Englishare a curious people." (Englishmen always preface remarks on their race with this statement.) "We aren't accustomed to display our patriotism very much. We have a certain reticence and strangeness about it. You see, it's a long time since the Boer War."

"But there are several explanations of this lack of patriotic—ah—display. One is that most of these men have already enlisted—they are in the army now, do you see? So they don't see any use in cheering attempts to get them to enlist; they're a bit blasé, do you see? And those other chaps, they can't show too much patriotic spirit without some one saying to them: 'Look here, old chap, if you feel as bad as all that about it, why don't you enlist?' You see, when war was first declared there was a lot of enthusiasm, chaps marching about the streets all night with flags, singing 'Rule, Britannia!' and all that sort of thing. But old K. of K., he put a stop to it, and told them that if they wanted to march about the streets they could join the army and learn how to march properly.

"And, then, there's another thing about it, too—we English feel differently about expressions of patriotism from the way you Americans and Frenchmen feel. I can't quite explain it, do you see? But if you've read that chapter in Kipling's 'Stalky and Company' in which the old fellow gives the union jack to the boys in school I think you'll see what I mean. It can be really explained; Kipling gives you a good illustration of it, and the way these chaps act is another.

"And now," he continued, "you'll see something that really is patriotic feeling, though you may not think it at first. This chap is going to sing 'It's a long way to Tipperary.'"

The stage was full of remarkably spruce soldiers and remarkably gay village maids. Came to front centre the juvenile lead, his cap cocked rakishly, his short stick cutting the air. He sang a simple ballad, done after an ancient recipe, of a lonely Irishman in London. And then, as the whole house listened with breathless interest, he swung into the chorus:

It's a long way to Tipperary,
It's a long way to go.
It's a long way to Tipperary
To the sweetest girl I know.
So good-bye, Piccadilly,
Farewell, Leicester Square,
It's a long, long way to Tipperary,
But my heart's right there.

He repeated the chorus and the audience sang it with him, sang it loudly, with a joyful abandon almost Gallic. And when he had finished they applauded as they had not done before on that evening and made him sing it again.

One phenomenon which no American can hope to explain is that in London the upper classes are more demonstrative than the lower classes. Sir Henry Beerbohm-Tree, with characteristic acuteness, is producing "Drake," and with characteristic generosity is giving his profits to the Prince of Wales's Fund. The house is packed every night with well-to-do Londoners, and they are much more enthusiastic in their appreciation of this stirring drama than are their humbler brothers and sisters to whose patriotic sensibilities "Tommy Atkins" is supposed to appeal.

The life of a London theatrical manager must be nerve-racking. What do these people want? What will stir them to patriotic frenzy? Apparently they are just now interested chiefly in the negative side of patriotism, that is, they prefer denunciations of Germany to celebrations of England.

They are only mildly impressed, for instance, by the beautiful rendition of Elgar's "Land of Hope and Glory" at the Palladium. But at the same hall they cheer to the echo Frank Esmond's recital of Barry Pain's "God and the Kaiser"—a terrific denunciation of England's greatest enemy, which, since its first publication in The London Times a few weeks ago, has become the most popular of the hundreds of war poems now in circulation. Here is its conclusion, which never fails to win thunderous applause:

Impious braggart, you forget;
God is not your conscript yet;
You shall learn in dumb amaze
That His ways are not your ways,
That the mire through which you trod
Is not the high white road to God,
To Whom, whichever way the combat rolls
We, fighting to the end, commend our souls.

Perhaps the reason why the Londoners prefer this sort of invective to the English counterpart of "She's a Grand Old Flag" is because the dominant passion in England at the present time is simply rage—bitter, relentless rage.

At first the mob satisfied itself with tearing down the signs and breaking the windows of German shopkeepers in London. But now the people want something more thorough than a street riot. Men who are too old or too weak to enlist are actually praying for a German invasion so that all Englishmen can get into the fight. Journals hitherto pacific in tone are urging general conscription, and The English Review, the most blasé and advanced of periodicals, expresses editorially a hope that if German ships endeavor to land an army in England, they may be permitted by the British Navy to do so, so that the people of England may tear their army into pieces!

Therefore it is that the Londoners are rather bored by the fustian patriotism dished out to them by the music halls and theatres, and really moved chiefly by sincere expressions of hatred for the national enemy. Even at Maskelyne and Devant's "Mysteries" the alleged comic conjuror is sure of a burst of applause when he makes a hostile reference to the Kaiser.

If the appeals to his patriotism were not so insistent, perhaps the Londoner would be more demonstrative. Every taxicab and every omnibus bears an enormous placard urging him to enlist, he passes a recruiting station on every block, and handbills entreating him to do his duty are thrust under his nose at every turn. Probably he will enlist; perhaps he has already done so; but the superabundance of appeals to his patriotism have rendered him somewhat callous.

He would be more deeply moved, for instance, when at the Empire he hears Marie Tempest sing "Who's for the Flag?" If he had not already seen Ben Webster's "Patriotic Scena" at the Palladium and heard Elizabeth Hyde sing "There's a Land" at the Oxford. He is surfeited with histrionic patriotism; he must, in self-defense, be reserved.

RARE MEZZOTINTS SHOW XVIII. CENTURY ENGLISH LIFE

On Exhibition at the Public Library Are 300 Specimens of This Beautiful Art, Giving an Unusual Pictorial Review of the England of Old—Bequest of the Late John L. Cadwalader and Valued at Over $50,000.

"Black Monday," or the Departure for School"
by John Jones, after W.R Bigg

"Inside of a Country Alehouse"
by William Ward,
after George Morland

ONE of the largest, most valuable, and most interesting collections of mezzotints in America is now on exhibition at the New York Public Library.

Approximately 300 mezzotints are in the collection, which was left to the library by the late John L. Cadwalader, President of the Board of Trustees, and a connoisseur who for years had made mezzotint collecting one of his art hobbies.

Frank Weitenkampf, Chief of the Art and Prints Divisions of the library, who is familiar with the great mezzotint collection of the British Museum and other collections abroad, told a TIMES man that prints of practically all of the most famous mezzotints in the world are in the Cadwalader collection, with many others less known, but rare and beautiful.

And every print in the collection, with but one or two exceptions, is a good one, which means that the prints were among the first drawn from their respective plates. The later copies drawn from a mezzotint copper plate are likely to be somewhat faint in parts, and thus not as desirable as first prints.

Dr. Weitenkampf was asked by THE TIMES man to estimate the value of the collection. He replied that it would be almost impossible to give an accurate estimate, because of the fluctuations in the mezzotint market, the changes in taste and demand, but added that "an estimate of $50,000 would be extremely conservative."

In addition to the beauty and interest of the mezzotints from the viewpoint of the visitor with art knowledge, much interest attaches to the collection for any one who is curious to get a graphic idea of the life of England during the latter half of the eighteenth century. The mezzotints, which are reproductions in this form of the works of portrait and genre painters, give an excellent idea of many of the costumes and customs, of numerous phases of daily existence in England between 1750 and about 1800.

Classified according to what they depict, the mezzotints divide themselves into three—prints of portraits, of scenes of everyday life, and of sporting scenes. Among the portraits whose originals came from such masters of the art of portraiture as Sir Joshua Reynolds and Sir Thomas Lawrence are ladies of the Court, of society, of the stage; there are statesmen and soldiers, actors and peers. Styles in hairdressing and in hats, in gowns and cloaks, in uniforms, in coats, in jewelry—all are shown in the pictorial review of the eighteenth century which passes before the visitor's eyes as he looks on the beauties and the gallants of the old days of Merry England.

Some of the mezzotints show the fashion, which prevailed widely in England and France during the period under discussion, of great ladies having their portraits painted in the guise of a goddess or a nymph, a character from a poem or a book.

Portraits and Everyday Scenes.

Among the portraits are those of the Countess of Ancram, Charles James Fox, Gen. Cornwallis, Countess of Jersey, Duke of Hamilton, Duchess of Bedford, Mrs. Siddons, Duchess of Hamilton, Duchess of Argyll, Countess of Salisbury, Duchess of Ancaster, Countess of Essex, David Garrick, Duchess of Rutland, Duchess of York, Lady Harriet Grosvenor, Duchess of Marlborough, Countess of Jarnac, Lady Charles Spencer, and many others. By far the larger number of the portraits are of women.

The representation of scenes of everyday life covers a wide range, including many views of childhood. Alehouses and smithies, farms and drawing rooms and butcher shops, scenes of milking and smoking and bargaining and fighting—all are shown. Children playing with dogs are portrayed, children going to school, happy children, frightened children. And each mezzotint adds something to the general impression of English life in the eighteenth century which is afforded by the collection in its entirety.

There is a moralizing tendency in some of the pictures, examples being the two companion pieces, "The Effects of Idleness" and "The Fruits of Industry," mezzotinted by William Ward after paintings by George Morland. In the first the head of the family, with his wife and children, is seen in want in a bare garret, while in the second the scene is that of a comfortable house, the members of the family beautifully dressed, a negro servant attending upon them.

In the pictures of sporting life the place of honor is held by fox hunting, of which there are more portrayals than of any other sport. Most of the sporting prints are in color, colored mezzotints also predominating among those depicting everyday life. The portraits are in one color—some being printed with black, others with brown ink.

Fox Hunting Pictures.

The pictures of fox hunting include representations of the gathering of the pack by the master of the foxhounds, the start of the hunt, taking fences, hounds running in cover, and the death. There are a number of miscellaneous mezzotints of dogs, showing such subjects as bulldogs and a badger, a setter and partridges, while other sporting prints show hawking, shooting, and angling.

By far the larger number of the portrait mezzotints are after Reynolds. Lawrence, Romney, Nattier, Peters, Read, Ramsay, and Pond are also represented.

The work of Morland predominates in the scenes of everyday life and in the sporting scenes. Other painters whose work is reproduced are Bigg, Wheatley, Sartorius, Corbould, Downman, Ibbetson, Miller, Northcote, Westall, Kauffman, Frye, and Bennet.

The mezzotinters who copied on copper plates the paintings from the brushes of these old painters include the great names in the art of mezzotinting, as well as others not so well known. One of the strong points of the Cadwalader collection is that it has specimens of the art of so many of the masters of mezzotint.

Among the mezzotinters represented are J. R. Smith, Valentine Green, James Ward, William Ward, Thomas Watson, J. Watson, John Jones, George Keating, S. W. Reynolds, J. Young, Robert Dunkarton, McArdell, William Dickinson, John Dixon, Grozer, Humphrey, Houston, Finlayson, Spilsbury, Earlom, Burford, C. H. Hodges, Barnard, Dodd, Merke, William Pether, E. Dayes, W. Say, C. Turner, and Edward Fisher.

One of the most famous specimens of the entire collection is Thomas Watson's "Mrs. Bamfylde," after Reynolds. A print like the one now on exhibition is stated to have brought the highest price ever paid for an example of the mezzotinting art. A print from this plate sold for $185 at the Sir John Stuart Hippesly sale at Sotheby's, London, in 1868; a few years ago it sold for $6,000, and is stated within the last year or two to have changed hands again at a price approximating $10,000.

There is also an impression in the Cadwalader collection of J. R. Smith's "Mrs. Carnac," after Reynolds, another print of which sold for $150 at Sotheby's in 1872; the most recent price at which a print from this plate was sold was $6,090.

The market price of mezzotints is largely governed by their rarity. From some plates but few impressions were taken originally; in the course of time a number of even these few will be withdrawn from the market by being placed in public collections or will disappear; an advance in price will follow. Of recent years it is stated that more and more mezzotints are being withdrawn into public collections, which is having the natural tendency to raise prices.

Almost all the valuable and famous mezzotints are reproductions of paintings, the number of famous original mezzotints being small. There have been a few fine original mezzotints in which the mezzotinter has placed his own composition upon the copper, but in the vast majority of instances the mezzotinter has drawn from an original by a painter. In the Cadwalader collection are five original mezzotints by J. R. Smith, four being portraits and one being a fanciful sporting scene.

More Interesting Exhibits.

The mezzotint in this regard thus stands upon an entirely different footing from the etching, collectors always having been willing to accept mezzotint reproductions of paintings, but wanting original etchings.

Among others of the portrait mezzotints of the collection in the library are James Ward's "Mrs. Billington as St. Cecilia," Dickinson's "Lady Charles Spencer," Dickinson's "Mrs. Pelham," Valentine Green's "Lady Betty Delme," and John Jones's "Mrs. Tollemache as Miranda," all after Reynolds.

In addition may be mentioned J. R. Smith's "Mrs. Siddons as Zara," after Sir Thomas Lawrence, and Smith's "Mrs. O'Neil," after Peters; "Her Royal Highness the Duchess of York," painter and engraver unknown; John Jones's "General Cornwallis," after Gardner, and the same mezzotinter's "Mrs. Jordon as Hippolyta," after Hoppner; Houston's "Elizabeth, Duchess of Hamilton," after Nattier, and Dunkarton's "John Penn," after Beechey.

Among the scenes of everyday life are John Jones's "Black Monday; or, the Departure for School," after Bigg; William Ward's "Inside of a Country Alehouse," after Morland; J. Young's "The Setting Sun," after Hoppner; W. S. Reynolds's "The Sower" and "The Thresher," after Westall; C. Turner's "Going Out Milking," after Wheatley, and the following, all after Morland, by Crozer, Keating, William Ward, Young, and Reynolds: "Happy Cottagers," "Children Playing at Soldiers," "The Farmer's Stable," "Children Nutting," "The Turnpike Gate," "Villagers," and "Paying the Hostler."

Two interesting specimens among the sporting scenes are "A Party Angling," by Keating, after Morland, and "The Angler's Repast," by William Ward after Morland.

The Cadwalader collection thus shows British artists because it was in England that the art of mezzotint reached its highest development, mezzotint's "golden age" being in England in the latter half of the eighteenth century, and particularly in the last quarter of the century. The mezzotint gained but little hold in France. The art was invented in the seventeenth century.

Mezzotinting is sometimes referred to as a "lost art," but this is declared by experts to be incorrect. The art is stated to have suffered from the great development of photogravure, but nevertheless mezzotinting is still being practiced, particularly in England, where there are enough mezzotinters to maintain a Society of Mezzotint Engravers.

Dr. Weitenkampf was asked by THE TIMES man to discuss the mezzotint from the art standpoint.

"The notable characteristic of the mezzotint," said Dr. Weitenkampf, "is that it is an art of light and shade, of soft gradations, while other methods of engraving—line engraving, etching, wood engraving—are arts of line. There are no lines in pure mezzotint. In their place we get soft outlines unbounded by lines, and massed effects of light and shade."

The following description of mezzotinting is from Dr. Weitenkampf's book, "How to Appreciate Prints":

The difference between mezzotinting and the other modes of engraving is not only one of effect, but of means. In both wood engraving and line engraving on copper the engraver works from light to dark, puts in lines to produce various degrees of shadow, various suggestions of local color or of texture, and leaves the plate untouched where he wants the high lights to appear.

The mezzotinter, on the other hand, works from dark to light. He scrapes out all the gradations from the highest light to the deepest shadow from a surface that would print black.

To prepare a copper plate for mezzotinting it is first worked over with an instrument known as a "rocker" or "cradle," something like a chisel or small spade with a rounded toothed edge. This instrument is rocked completely over the plate in all directions, about eighty times in all.

By that time the lines of dots crossing and recrossing each other have produced innumerable minute hollows separated by thin walls of metal, like the burr raised by the dry-point process in etching. If the plate, thus evenly roughed, were inked and printed from, the paper would show a uniform tint of deep, velvety black, similar to the effect produced by heavy dry-point work in which none of the burr has been removed by the scraper. Hence the French name for the art of mezzotinting, la manière noire (the black manner.)

Upon the plate thus "rocked" the design is now traced, and the engraver then goes over it with the scraper, removing both hollows and burrs altogether for the very lightest lights, and less and less for the successive stages between the highest lights and the darkest blacks, for which latter the plate is left untouched. The German name for the art, schabkunst, "scraping art," is therefore characteristically descriptive.

The inking of a mezzotint plate is a difficult operation, for it takes judgment and experience to know how much ink to leave when "wiping out." Inks of various shades of dark brown have often been used, giving a warmer and more effective tone than pure black. When completed and inked the plate is printed from a copper-plate press.

In an impression from such a plate the highest lights, where the plate has been completely scraped and perhaps burnished, so as to hold little or no ink, are represented by almost white paper. Then the gradations of shadow, from the most delicate to the very darkest, appear in a gradually darkening grain, which, in its lighter stages, more or less plainly shows the marks of the rocking tool, and shows also that this tool was used with some individuality by various engravers to suit their style as well as the particular subject in hand. So that the style is in evidence both in the rocking and the scraping, despite the apparent sameness of mezzotints.

The want of line in pure mezzotint causes a softness, an indefiniteness, a lack of precision and decision that led to the occasional employment of some etched lines to supply energy. This was done at a fairly early date, but with such restraint as to be often noticeable only after very close inspection. * * *

In the nineteenth century there was developed the "mixed" style, in which etching, roulette, stipple, and burin work were all added, sometimes in considerable proportions, to give strength. But the charm of the mezzotint was lost in the operation, and such a combination was generally sparingly used by the best men and in the best work. * * *

It is highly interesting, in studying these mezzotints, to find an art which has been characterized as lacking in precision and consequently greatly lifted, affording such scope for the display of individual style, of personal expression, and this despite the fact that mezzotinting has been so essentially a reproductive art.

I have heard the question put more than once by those who had studied mezzotints well: "Now, do these absolutely render the original paintings?"

And the questioners themselves replied with gentle doubt. More than that, it has been asserted that in some cases the mezzotint was better than the original painting. Perhaps the engraver did at times show a personality that was not the painter's. But one feels that the spirit of the painter is there. * * *

It is significant, too, that in some cases the painters corrected the proofs. So in some instances, at least, we have proof of the painter's satisfaction with the engraver's work, a satisfaction voiced by Sir Joshua Reynolds when he asserted that the mezzotints of McArdell and others would immortalize him.

Stipple Engravings Also.

About thirty prints of the finest quality can be drawn from the copperplate bearing the mezzotint; after that the prints beginning to show a faintness in the very dark places, so it is stated by Cyril Davenport, another authority, in his book "Mezzotints."

Mr. Davenport says that the dark parts show wear first, because there the plate is most delicate. He declares that after the first thirty impressions have been taken, "it is probable that about 100 more can be made which will be good enough for all ordinary purposes."

Besides the mezzotints, Mr. Cadwalader left to the library a number of other interesting prints, including over seventy stipple engravings, and a number of etchings, aquatints, and line engravings. There are seven etchings by Rembrandt and three by Whistler, and three line engravings by Marc Antonio Raimondi after Raphael.

Among the stipple engravings are plates by Bartolozzi, J. R. Smith, F. D. Soiron, Tomkins, Conde, Wilkin, Burke, Ryland, Scorodomoff, Ryder, Gauguin, Stubbs, and others.

When the mezzotints are removed from the room in which they are now being exhibited, they will be filed in the prints division of the library for reference.

Mr. Cadwalader's interest in library affairs extended over many years. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Astor Library prior to its consolidation with the Lenox and Tilden Libraries, and was Trustee of the consolidated library from its formation—in all, a library connection of more than thirty-four years. One branch of the work in which he took a particularly keen interest was the creation and development of a print department, following the example set long ago by the British Museum.

"A Party Angling"
by George Keating
after George Morland

"Mrs. Billington as St. Cecilia"
by James Ward,
after Sir Joshua Reynolds

CENTRAL PARK HAS BEST PUBLIC TENNIS COURTS

And Thousands of Players and Spectators, Took Advantage of Them This Year.

WHEN members of the Central Park Tennis Club began to talk some years ago about the need for new "dirt courts" at South Meadows, they didn't know that they—and Central Park—were going to get the finest public tennis courts in the United States. Indeed, Officer Peter Burns of the park police, who is in charge of the new tennis courts, hazarded the opinion soon after the courts were opened that there were probably no finer private courts in the country.

"I don't believe there's anything anywhere to beat 'em!" said Officer Peter Burns.

The establishment of clay courts to take the place of the old grass plot tennis grounds at South Meadows was an idea of former Park Commissioner Stover some years ago. The Central Park Tennis Club and other associations wanted new courts and said so. Scores of "private individuals"—boys and girls who came to play tennis all Summer in the park—urged the ned of clay courts. So the old courts were closed at the end of the Summer of 1912, and for almost two years there was no tennis at South Meadows. A few days after the courts were opened last Summer nearly ten thousand people, asplayers and spectators, visited the tennis ground in the course of one afternoon.

There are twenty-nine courts at South Meadows, near Ninety-third Street and Central Park West. On the Sunday after the courts were opened about 700 people played on the new grounds. The number of players ran up into the hundreds on every fair day, and on Saturdays and Sundays there have been always, if the weather is good, between three and ten thousand people there both to play and to watch the game.

The South Meadows courts are laid out with permanent guide posts, and are surfaced with clay. The tract is bounded with a cement curb. Down in the Department of Recreation they call these the "model tennis courts," and point out that in addition to the more obvious advantages of clay courts, an immense benefit is derived from these for the particular use of a big city, because they are never put out of commission by rain.

"When there are so many people wanting to play tennis it is important to have the courts always in good condition," remarked William J. Lee, head of the City Department of Recreation. "A grass court isn't fit to play on after rain. These courts up at South Meadows are in fit condition for good, hard games just as soon as the rain has stopped falling. There are no long, stupid waits for 'the courts to be in order.' The courts are always in order, unless it is actually raining."

The new courts are absolutely free to any one and every one who wants to play on them. All that is necessary it to get a permit from the Department of Recreation, which, under Park Commissioner Ward, has the public tennis grounds in charge. And not only are the South Meadows courts free for players, but they are supplied with nets by the city. The old rule that players must bring their own nets to the city courts no longer holds good here. Players supply their own balls and racquets, and they are not allowed to go on the new courts without tennis shoes. But the nets are the property of the city. This, too, the men in charge point out, saves time.

"You don't want to waste time on a public tennis court," said Officer Peter Burns. "People are there to play—not to fuss about nets.

"And I've never lost a net," he added, proudly. "Any one who wants to play plays here, and I'm not always on the watch—not by any means. I couldn't be if I wanted to. But nothing happens to the nets beyond the ordinary wear and tear. The boys and girls who play—and the folks that come to look on—are just as proud of these courts as we are."

A natural advantage of the South Meadows courts for tournaments and club games is in the shaded sloping ground around the flat courts. On all sides the ground rises in a slope just steep enough to establish a natural amphitheatre, and the courts are almost entirely surrounded by shade trees. The ground is laid out in blocks of three and four courts, with an irregular "wing" on the northwest end, where the "championship" court, number 29, occupies a proud position slightly apart. Twenty-nine looks like the best court, but as a matter of fact players in tournaments often prefer one of the courts on the eastern block, because the ground slopes higher there, and more people can find shady seats to look on. The annual tournament of the Central Park Tennis Club was played off this year on court eight.

The court permit is for two hours of playing, and Mr. Burns, who takes in the permits and keeps the courts "checked up" so that he knows who is playing on each, assigns the courts to the players as they register. Seven hundred and fifty persons in one day is about as many as the courts can hold, and 500, players, say, is about the average. The number of spectators, of course, runs into the thousands.

The South Meadows courts were built with no expense to the city except for the labor in digging, hauling, and "laying" the courts. All the clay and mold for the new courts came from the space where the additions to the Museum of Natural History is being built, and there was no expense whatever for material for South Meadows. The new courts were not finished as soon as had been expected, owing to delays in getting the surface material, but now that they are open they give every evidence of being as nearly "everlasting" as tennis courts can be.

"It is a good thing that the courts were opened last Summer," Mr. Lee pointed out, "because this has been a 'tennis year.' More than 7,000 tennis permits for Manhattan and Richmond were issued by the Department of Recreation early in the Summer—3,000 more than were requested during the entire Summer last year."

THE GENTLE CYNIC

The man who likes crowds should never aspire to the pinnacle of fame.

A debt defies all the laws of nature. The more debts are contracted the more they expand.

Some people will be surprised when they get to heaven to find that the free list is absolutely suspended during this engagement.

This is the land of the free, but don't try to get too free with some people.

If you are going to get in debt, it is perhaps better to run in than to be pushed in.

Lots of people are criticised because they don't love their neighbors as the neighbors love them.

GILLETTE AT LAST CAPITULATES TO AN INTERVIEWER

The Actor-Author Breaks His Long Self-Imposed Rule of Silence and Talks Delightfully About His Ideas of the Actor's Art—and the Playwright's, Too.

FOR the first time in his thirty-seven years as an actor William Gillette talked to a newspaper interviewer the other day about what he thought of the actor's art. And in the pleasantest way possible, with fervent disclaimers of any controversial intent, he threw down the gauntlet to certain of the "intellectualists" and declared that in the actor's profession the pursuit of the so-called "Highest Art" was as nothing beside the condemned, despised, but nevertheless supremely important, use of one's own personality.

"It is my firm opinion," said Mr. Gillette, with entire amiability, "that the critical folk who scorn the actor who 'is himself,' simply do not know what they are talking about.

"From the beginning of time—in the theatre—the great actors have 'been themselves' in their great parts. These are the parts in which they have been successful; in the parts in which they could not use their own personality they have failed.

"This is always true. It is true today and it was true years ago. And it holds true through all the changes that come in the standards of acting. Of course, the whole art of acting has been turned upside down in the last fifty years.

"An actor of fifty years ago—say of thirty-seven years ago," Mr. Gillette smiled, "would say, if he went to our best plays today, that there was no such thing as acting any more, and that there were no more actors. In his sense, that is altogether true."

And again in the most agreeable fashion imaginable, Mr. Gillette unbuttoned his foil for the intellectualists.

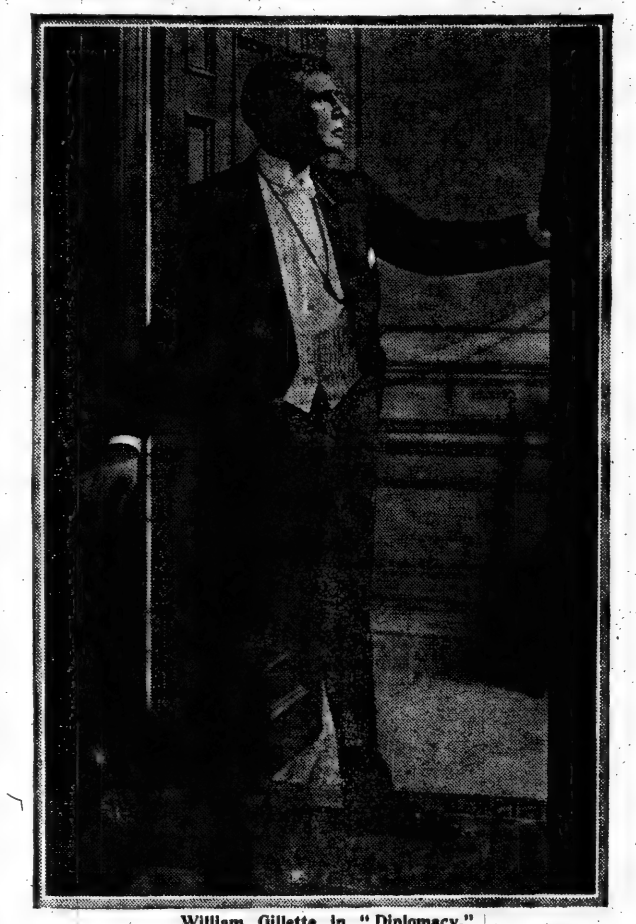
"It is interesting to see how extremes of, say, education meet in this matter of the development of acting," he remarked, suavely; "one hears such exceedingly intellectual people lamenting the passing of some of the old artificial forms of stage speech and manner, and in the worst and crudest forms of playing, for the entertainment of crude and uneducated audiences one finds those old artificialities still in existence.

"Between these two extremes the great, sensible, intelligent public goes on more or less consciously demanding that the 'behavior' of the theatre be the 'behavior' of ordinary life, and enjoying the acting that is simple and natural."

Nothing could be further from William Gillette's mind than the wish actually to take issue with those "critical folk" who, he thinks, do not "know what they are talking about." He has persistently refused to be interviewed because he does not like to express his opinions. He declares repeatedly that he does not want to disagree with any one; he does not want to censure any one else's opinion; he modestly reiterates the statement that this is "only what I think," and he cannot, for the life of him, he avers, understand why any one wants to know what he thinks, anyhow.

But, pressed for the denial or confirmation of these same beliefs, he repeats them; after all, this is what he does think. The intellectualists do not know what they are talking about. Personality is what counts in great acting and small. And the old idea of acting has vanished; rules and standards are gone; "correctness" is utterly deadly on the stage of today; no one should ever try to do anything "right."

Mr. Gillette does not set these up as formal dicta of belief or behavior. He has been too busy all these years, he says, to try to work his scattered opinions into any sort of a dogmatic form, even if he wanted to, as he doesn't. But the being "busy all these years" has meant thirty-seven years of acting and the writing of fifteen plays. With the best and the humblest intentions in the world, Mr. Gillette cannot rob his "scattered opinions" of the flavor of authority.



William Gillette in "Diplomacy."

Personality's the Thing.

"I will tell you what I think about these things if you insist on it," he said, with a funny air of complete helplessness, "but I do not want to set up my opinions. I hate it. And if you could possibly put it that I do not want to disagree with any one or find fault with any one I should be tremendously grateful!

"It seems to me," he went on, after a barely perceptible pause, "that these awfully learned people who place 'art' above personality in acting are not only altogether wrong, but altogether inconsistent.

"If they worked out their theory to its sane conclusion, you know, they would go to see no one but the lightning-change performer of the vaudeville stage. They would celebrate him as the highest kind of—in fact, the only possible—artist. They would make acting a kind of trick imitation—the imitation of as large as possible an assortment of tricks. They would regard the actor as a sort of "character" acrobat.

"Now, what the great actor does is use his own personality. He is himself in his parts. He doesn't simply enter another personality and make it his. He fuses his own personality with that of the character he is playing. That is the only way he can make his character great.

"The great actor is not the man who can get out of his own personality into one or a dozen other 'rôles.' The great actor is the man who can fuse himself into a part, fuse all that he himself is, be the man he is playing; because he can put into that man's character-portrayal what he himself is. It is a matter of fusing—and you've got to have something to fuse. The man who can simply jump from one kind of part to another isn't a great actor; he is a trickster who can do clever imitations. They are always imitations. To omit his own personality is to fail in the creation of vitality and truth.

No Getting Away from Self.

"Notwithstanding all that is said against it—and there is a great deal said against it by a large percentage of earnest and conscientious people who talk and write about the theatre—notwithstanding all this, it is a plain fact that personality is the most important thing in really great acting. To censure an actor because he 'is himself' is meaningless. A great actor is his character; but he is himself, too—or else he couldn't be his character in any real and great and forceful way.

"Some actors may have the sort of personality that can diffuse itself over a great many parts, but that is the most that can be done in the way of great arrays of different rôles. Joe Jefferson, for instance, could diffuse his personality over a great many comedy parts; he couldn't put it into tragedy rôles at all. He 'was himself' as Rip Van Winkle. That is why his Rip Van Winkle was so much greater than all the other Rip Van Winkles that have been excellently played by men who apparently had all that Jefferson had, but who lacked the perfect Rip Van Winkle personality. I don't mean to say that personality is everything. But his own personality is the one most important quality in giving his representation life.

"Take the elder Salvini, for example. The elder Salvini's Othello towered so high above all other modern Othellos that you just can't see them at all. He was the one great Othello that our modern stage has known. His Gladiator was a tremendous piece of work, too. It was great and magnificent acting. But when he tried to play Hamlet it was rather unfortunate. He hadn't the personality for it, and he could only play those parts well in which he could put his own personality. Salvini was a great actor, of course; he wasn't a lightning-change artist. When I hear this 'mere personality' talk I think of Salvini.

"And, contrariwise, I think of Booth. Booth was a marvelous Hamlet. He couldn't play Othello. There you are. No performer has ever been able really to make use of a personality not his own. All the great actors that we know anything about have been great because they have had strong personalities and have transferred them to the right rôles."

This matter of personality has always been important, Mr. Gillette points out. But, he adds, it is more important today than it ever was. What certain critical-minded men and women call "mere" personality is the one greatest essential in the theatre today, because today, as never before, the demand in the theatre is a demand for life. "Correctness" has gone, and tricks of manner with it.

"We have no more actors," said William Gillette, "In the older sense the art of 'acting' is gone. If a great actor of 50 years ago came back today he would say that there was no such thing as acting. And if a great actor of many, many years before that had returned and seen the stage of fifty years ago he would have said that there was no acting then. He would have said it because it would have seemed to him so terrible and inartistic and utterly impossible that the actors did not wear masks!

"It is exactly the same thing today. The progressive abolition of masks has gone on."

Mr. Gillette had been sitting almost motionless in a big chair, his legs stretched out in front of him, his shoulders hunched up, his hands clasped under his chin. Now he shifted his position suddenly, unclasped his hands with a rather boyish gesture, and laughed.

"Makes me think of a story," he said. "Makes me think of what was really what people call 'the turning point in my career.' It was when I was in high school." He laughed again. "You see," he went on, "I had a taciturn old father who thought a good deal and didn't always tell what he thought. I could make out pretty often what was in his mind, and I always wanted to know, because I had so much respect for his opinion and I wanted him to think well of me.

"Well, it was my next-to-the-last year in high school, and I went in for the elocution contests. I always did. I liked them. You know the kind? The boys recited—orations, and things like that; the girls read 'selections.' And there were prizes. This year I chose a part of Daniel Webster's reply to Hayne—the famous reply that is said to have really killed Hayne, you know. I had worked very hard on it, and I did it as well as I could, and I won the first prize, and when it was over I hurried out to find my father and see what he thought.

"'What did you do that for?' he asked. I stammered and blushed, and asked him what he had said. I could see that he wasn't pleased, and I didn't understand it.

"'What did you do that for?' he growled at me again.

"'Why, didn't I do it right?' I inquired weakly.

"'Right! Of course you did it right! That's what was the matter with it! Do you suppose if Webster had done it "right" any one in the Senate would have listened to him for two minutes?'

Fatal Correctness.

"And then," Mr. Gillette went on, "he told me about Webster, and about how that speech was delivered. He told me how Hayne had started in to talk when Webster was not in the room, and how Webster's friends had sent for him and he had come running in in a hurry, all unprepared, and answered Hayne. He made me see Webster, all eager and uncertain, hunting for the right words, searching for the thing to say and the strongest way to say it, hesitating, going on—

"And he said that I had reeled that oration off so that every one would know I had just 'learned my lines,' that I had all the correct pauses and gestures and manners and intonations, and that I had made the whole thing meaningless. And I never forgot it. I never forgot that a word was a fine thing that must be searched for, and that the way to make a speech was not in the way that was 'correct' as elocution, but the way that the man actually made it in the first place.

"The next year," added Mr. Gillette, "I chose another speech of Webster's for my part in the elocution contest—and some one else got the prize. They said I didn't know my lines!

"But all the same," he went on, after a laughing little pause, "I think of that scene with my father to this day. I think of it when I'm playing and when I'm studying a part and when I try to say anything about the development of acting in the last forty years. That old New England gentleman had the idea that has come to be the controlling idea on the stage today—in spite of the intellectual critics who mourn the passing of 'the way to read blank verse.' The idea is that we are not reciting literature—not reciting anything that has ever been written or said before; we are talking, saying the first things that come into our heads, thinking them out as we say them, hesitating and wondering and sometimes blundering over it all. That is the way to recite Webster's speeches; it is the way to play Shakespeare; it is the way to do everything on the stage. It is not confined to speech; the same principle must govern stage actions—this illusion of the first time.

"Only I couldn't do it at first," the actor added. "They wouldn't let me. I began very humbly indeed, in stock, and if I had tried to be natural I'd have lost my position. My business then was to master the tricks of the stage. We had our tragic walk, our proper comedy face, our correct and dreadful laugh, our carefully learned gestures, our shrieks and outcries and stilted voices. We were to hope for success in so far as we mastered these rules and tricks and put force and personal vigor into our 'execution' of them. Forrest, I am told, did that marvelously; he had the most magnificent force.

No Use for Limelight.

"No actor nowadays wants the centre of the stage. No sensible actor, I mean. He hates it. If he had his way he would always play his part away back toward the wings. He says he feels like playing it that way. And the only argument against that is that if you get too far on one side there is danger that some of the people in the audience can't see you.

"All this is revolutionary, of course. And the change came about, like all other changes that amount to anything, not because the critics demanded it, but because the public wanted acting that was a nearer approach to life. Now and then, in those old stock days of mine, for example, a man would neglect to act in the 'right' way. Either he would make a mistake, or he would be so interested in his part that he would forget to do it 'correctly,' or he would like his character so much that he couldn't resist making him just a real person, or for some reason or other he would drop away from the tradition of the stage. And once he had begun to drop away he wasn't likely to go back. The audience wouldn't let him.

Natural vs. Grand Manner.

"Lots of times in those old days I've seen an audience break out into spontaneous applause at the failure of some one actor to do his part 'right.' For a moment he would lapse into sheer unconscious naturalness, and out would come his public in spontaneous praise. In ways like that the present style of acting—the natural method—began. Some people still lament the loss of the 'grand manner' and the passing of the 'palmy days.' In some faraway little districts you can still find crude and untaught actors 'performing' for crude and untaught audiences according to the ideas of those 'palmy days.' But the great mass of the people have dismissed the 'grand style' long ago.

"And now that it has been dismissed the need for sheer personality in acting, in vivifying the theatre, is greater than it has ever been before.

"Sometimes I have amused myself by trying to think out names and formulas for our present-day theatrical demands. There is what I call the 'first-time' principle that my father taught me when he talked about Webster and his reply to Hayne. I get as far as that. But I cannot think out any other 'rules.' It is impossible to tell any actor how to act nowadays, or what is to be done in the interpretation of a part. If he doesn't give his character life and individuality, if he doesn't meet the unnamed standards of the present time—and even the word standards seems too formal—the manager merely gets some one else quick!"

It is very difficult seriously to interview William Gillette because he is a very gay and charming conversationalist who persists in regarding an interview as all sorts of a lark. It is a new experience. Apparently he believes in making it a delightful experience, for the reporter, if not for himself, and he believes personally, it is evident, in getting all the fun out of it he can. He says that he loves to talk and he hates to express opinions. To persuade him to express opinions is hard work. To listen to him talk is a most pleasurable way of spending an afternoon.

"At this point," he interpolated, in the midst of his talk of Salvini and Booth, "I suppose you will say something like, 'Here Mr. Gillette tore out his hair.' That is the way you do it, isn't it? Or, perhaps, you would rather say, 'Whereupon the actor lay down on the floor and began to scream.' Which do you think is better? Must I really do either?"

"The conventional thing," remarked the interviewer, making a desperate effort to catch up with the Salvini notes, because Mr. Gillette talks very fast, "would be for you to get up and walk across the room to the fireplace."

"But there isn't any fireplace," he objected. "I suppose you wouldn't go so far as to say there was a fireplace when there wasn't?"

"No," said the interviewer, ramming the pencil down hard on the last of the Salvini notes, "What were you saying about Booth?"

"We might pretend there was a fireplace," went on Mr. Gillette, pleasantly.

"What," repeated the interviewer, sternly, "were you saying about Booth?"

"I don't see why you want to quote me, anyhow," said Mr. Gillette.

William Gillette went on the stage because, from the days that antedated the high school contests, he had never wanted to do anything else. Some members of his rather stern New England family objected at that time to his choice of a profession, but his father, who had taught him how to act, backed him up. Apropos of which he had, sitting up there in the Empire Theatre talking to a TIMES reporter, another story to tell.

New Play by Shakespeare.

"When I was a boy we were always allowed to see Shakespeare's plays, and never by any chance the plays of any other writer," he said. "I had a cousin, about my own age, who lived with us, and we were both awfully keen about the theatre, and wanted to see everything that came along. As a matter of fact, some of the things we did see were pretty dreadful. There are some Shakespeare plays that ought to be suppressed, you know. They have been, practically, since then; that is, they don't put them on any more. But in those days everything that was Shakespeare was all right, and everything that was not was all wrong. So we went to the Shakespeare plays and to nothing else.

"My cousin and I wanted to see 'The Colleen Bawn,' which was coming to our town. And we thought it would be a splendid idea to make my father believe that that was one of Shakespeare's plays. If we could just do that we were sure it would be all right about going to see it! We found an old picture of Shakespeare writing at a desk, and on that we built our plot. For my cousin had a printing press," and it was simple enough to print at the bottom of the picture the interesting legend, 'William Shakespeare writing "The Colleen Bawn."' So I went to my father and told him all about the new Shakespeare play that was coming to our town.

"'The Colleen Bawn'? repeated the old gentleman; 'I don't remember that in Shakespeare's plays.' And he got out his Shakespeare and showed me that it wasn't there.

"'Well,' I said, 'of course, I don't know anything about it, but I found this picture.' And I showed him 'William Shakespeare writing "The Colleen Bawn."'

"'Hm,' he said, with a perfectly grave face, 'if that is the case I think you had both better go and see what it is like!'

"It was years before I knew that my father had let us go to the play because he really admired our sublime nerve!"

Good Plays Always Good.

Mention of Mr. Gillette's appearance this year in Sardou's "Diplomacy" brought up—as, in an interview with an actor-playwright, perhaps, something was bound to—the question of the "dramatic outlook." How about plays, anyway, he was asked—plays of today and yesterday?

"The date doesn't matter," Mr. Gillette replied, briskly. "A good play is a good play. It doesn't matter when it was written or what period of life it portrays—historical drama, for instance, or Shakespeare tragedy, or the newest of the new 'uplift plays.' The point is that it must be a good play.

"As for Sardou—there is certainly, at the present time, no such master of the technique of situations. It is almost trite to say that. Such art only comes once in a generation or two, or three, or four. People just now have a contemptuous way of saying that Sardou was 'full of tricks.' But the mastery of one or two such 'tricks' as Sardou threw off by the half-dozen makes a man a real dramatist today!"

"Do you really think the drama at the present time is as decadent and debased as we are led to believe from many authorities on the subject?"

Mr. Gillette thought a few seconds before answering this question and then said:

"Well, please don't let's talk about that. The decadent business means livelihood to such a lot of charming and intellectual people that it is a pity to interfere with it in any way. These writers don't do any harm and there is no other variety of talk about the drama that will sell. Nobody on earth can get anything into a newspaper or magazine on the subject of the drama having an upward tendency. At the same time when you meet somebody who begins to talk about decadency to you there is a perfectly safe answer which will end all discussion on the subject and I give you a glad permission to use it. All you have to do is to state to these people that the highest authority in existence has set forth in plain language that the true purpose of the play is to hold the mirror up to nature—meaning, of course, human nature; and this being done at the present day a child in a kindergarten could see why the reflections in that mirror are of the cheapest, meanest, most vulgar and revolting description. You can easily see from this that the reform of the drama must necessarily begin elsewhere than on the stage."

"HOW I INVENTED MAXIM GUN"---HIRAM MAXIM

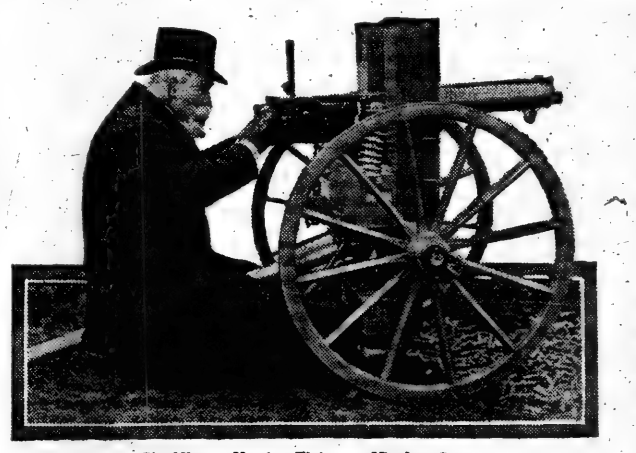
Outbreak of World-War Moves Veteran American Inventor to Describe for The Times His Epoch-Making Idea.

383 Norwood Road, West Norwood, London, S. E., Oct. 16, 1914.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

AS so important a part in the present war is being played by the Maxim automatic gun and smokeless powder, both American inventions, I think that some account of how they came to be invented may not be uninteresting to American readers.

In the Autumn of 1881 I was made a Chevalier de La Legion d'Honneur in Paris on account of a chemical discovery and an electrical regulator that I had invented and exhibited, and the following Winter, finding myself in Vienna, I met a very clever American who said: "Maxim, hang your electrical machines! If you wish to make your everlasting fortune and pile up gold by the ton, invent a killing machine—something that will enable these Europeans to cut each other's throats with greater facility—that is what they want."



Sir Hiram Maxim Firing a Maxim Gun.

Although these remarks were not seriously made, still to me they certainly appeared very sound and reasonable, and I could not help thinking on the subject. I had fired a military rifle in the States and had remarked the powerful kick that it gave, and it occurred to me that I might turn this to useful effect; there was certainly enough energy in it to load and fire the gun, and so on my return to Paris I commenced at once to make drawings of an automatic gun. Later on I came to London, established a little workshop, and made a gun that actually loaded and fired itself by energy derived from the recoil. It was a veritable nine days' wonder; every one of note, from H. R. H. the Prince of Wales down, came to see me and fire my gun. When I was asked to fire it before the Government officials at Enfield I fired 333 rounds in half a minute and a belt of 2,000 cartridges in slightly over three minutes. Then the British Government gave me a large order which enabled me to organise a company and fit up large workshops.

In making these preliminary trials I had noticed the vast cloud of smoke produced; in fact, Lord Wolseley had said to me that my gun would be of little use unless I could invent a smokeless powder.

In studying the subject it occurred to me that notwithstanding the fact that guncotton and nitroglycerine went off with a snap, still I believed that if the two were combined and made into blocks or grains they would burn from the outside after the manner of black powder; it would be like tying two strings of a piano together, which would destroy the natural vibration of both. But at that time there was a Fenian scare on, and it was not safe for an American to have anything to do with nitroglycerine or guncotton. I therefore made arrangements to have smokeless powder made for me in Scotland by Mr. McRoberts, an expert in high explosives. I made for Mr. McRoberts a screw press for spinning a compound of nitroglycerine and guncotton into threads, and later on I patented this apparatus (see English patent No. 2623 of 1887). It is a curious and interesting fact that later on the Government experts made a powder in the form of threads which had exactly the size and same appearance as those made by McRoberts, the only difference being that the Government powder contained 5 per cent. of vaseline.

At that time I was advised by military experts that no Government on earth would even look at a smokeless powder that contained a particle of nitroglycerine; but as it was necessary that I have a smokeless powder, I started a little laboratory of my own. I first commenced by dissolving pure guncotton of the highest degree of nitration in acetone, evaporating out the acetone, and then cutting up the horn-like substance into small squares. By this means I made a smokeless powder that did a little better when freshly made than black powder, but after being exposed to the air for a short time it became violent and dangerous. When freshly made it contained about 8 per cent. of acetone.

I therefore added 8 per cent. of castor oil to the solution, and as the castor oil could not evaporate, the powder remained stable and constant. I then commenced to add small quantities of nitroglycerine, commencing with about 3 per cent. and gradually increasing until I had more nitroglycerine than guncotton, and all of these powders worked well, but as there was a strong prejudice against using nitroglycerine I finally settled down to make a powder with 72 per cent. of guncotton, 25 per cent. of nitroglycerine, and 3 per cent. of castor oil. All of this, of course, took time; I, however, took out a considerable number of patents on the powder and the apparatus for making it and recovering the solvents.

Learning that the Americans wished to have a smokeless powder I made a considerable quantity of very fine appearance that was quite as good as anything that has ever been made since.

In the meantime my brother Isaac, who had conveniently, and for obvious reasons, changed his name to Hudson, learning of my success, came to England. He was immensely interested in my work. He expressed his astonishment when he saw a single barrel gun load and fire itself continuously at the rate of eleven shots a second. But he was still more interested in my chemical laboratory. I employed him at a large salary and sent him to Springfield, Mass., where he entered my powder in the name of H. Maxim, and at the trials my powder beat all others at all points completely out of the field and my American friends congratulated me very much. They said if it had been a matter of mechanics they would have known that I should come out ahead, but the smokeless powder was a question of pure chemistry, and that as I had beaten the field it was certainly a feather in my cap.

But later on certain events took place in which the "H. Maxim," which was supposed to be the Hiram Maxim, became Hudson Maxim, and that is the way that Hudson Maxim became "the inventor of smokeless powder" in the States.

In the great Cordite case in which Nobel sued the Government for infringement of his patent all the patents on smokeless powder ever issued were thoroughly gone into and thrashed out, with the result that Nobel lost his case on account of the work that I had done. A full account of this great lawsuit and the invention of smokeless powders, with the number and dates of patents, will be found in Engineering of Jan. 2, 1911, from which I quote the following:

Fourteen days after Sir Hiram Maxim had applied for his patent, a patent for practically the same object was applied for by Sir Frederick Abel and Prof. Dewar; the only difference resided in the percentage of nitro-glycerine. It has been found that 60 per cent. of nitroglycerine is altogether too much. The percentage recommended by Sir Hiram Maxim after careful experiment is within 1 per cent. of what has been found best on the Continent of Europe. * * *

On Sept. 21, 1894, Sir Hiram took out a patent, No. 17994, for making smokeless powder into multi-perforated grains, * * * and as a matter of fact this patent bears the earliest date of any showing multi-perforated smokeless powder. * * * In the great Cordite case, Nobel vs. Government, Sir Richard Webster, now Lord Alverstone, repeatedly said, "Sir Hiram Maxim was the first to combine nitro-glycerine and true guncotton in a smokeless powder," and this was the decision of the court that defeated Nobel. In neither Cordite case was any reference made to any American who had ever done anything in the direction of developing smokeless powder except Sir Hiram Maxim.

Nobel was not satisfied with the decision of the high courts, so he appealed, and the House of Lords decided that Sir Hiram Maxim was the true inventor of modern smokeless powder.

As there is an abundance of documentary evidence to prove all of the foregoing up to the hilt, I do not think that after this there should be any doubt as to who was the inventor of smokeless powder.

Hiram S. Maxim

"WHAT IS BEST JOKE?" ANSWERED BY HUMORISTS

Seventeen Writers Renowned in World of Fun Give Their Favorite or Near-Favorite Anecdotes.

SEVENTEEN writers renowned in the world of wit and humor have answered this question addressed to them by THE NEW YORK TIMES:

"What is the best joke or anecdote that you ever heard?"

Those who valiantly came to the fore with replies to the momentous question include both American and British humorists—it was decided to limit the contest to writers of those two nationalities. Fortunately the great war had not broken out when THE TIMES's question reached England, otherwise it is to be feared that it would have found the funny men over there in a mood precluding not only the making of new but also the remembering of old jokes.

Here is the eminent band who put themselves on record:

Franklin P. Adams.
George Ade.
John Kendrick Bangs.
Ellis Parker Butler.
Irvin S. Cobb.
Tom Daly.
Simeon Ford.
Strickland Gillilan.
Montague Glass.
Capt. Harry Graham, (Col. D. Streamer.)
Canon James O. Hannay, (G. A. Birmingham.)
Wallace Irwin.
Jerome K. Jerome.
S. E. Kiser.
C. B. Lewis, ("M. Quad.")
Judge Henry A. Shute.
Carolyn Wells.

Of these no less than eight came out flat-footed with what they considered the funniest thing that they had ever heard. Another qualified his choice by remarking that it was "perhaps the funniest."

The rest from whom answers to the question were received declared that they would not attempt the gigantic task of picking out an absolute winner, but sent in one or more anecdotes which they thought among the best that had ever reached their ears.

The eight who knew just what story pleased them most and had no fear of saying so were: George Ade, Ellis Parker Butler, Carolyn Wells, Irvin S. Cobb, Capt. Harry Graham, Canon Hannay, Judge Shute, and S. E. Kiser.

George Ade's Choice.

Here is how the author of "Fables in Slang" expressed himself in answer to THE TIMES's inquiry:

Hazelden Farm, Brook, Ind.

I suppose the best joke or anecdote a man ever hears is the latest new one. For some reason the joke that I seem to remember best of all is a very brief wheeze that I caught from the pages of a funny paper several years ago.

Two solemn-looking gentlemen are riding together in a railway carriage. One gentleman says to the other, "Is your wife entertaining this Summer?" Whereupon the second gentleman replies: "Not very."

I know it is a chestnut now, but it will always seem fresh and glistening to me.

George Ade

Cobb Picks Texan Yarn.

Irvin S. Cobb, now adding to his laurels as jokester and short-story writer those of war correspondent, evidently gave mature deliberation to THE TIMES's question, as becomes a funny man who takes joking seriously. He wrote as follows, while on a vacation after his literary labors in New York and before his campaigning in Europe:

North Hatley, P. Q., Canada.

You ask me a mighty hard question when you want to know the best joke or anecdote I ever heard. Because I always think the last one I hear is the best, providing either that it be new, or old enough to be new.

But, searching back in my mind, I'm inclined to think my favorite is the little story of the large, slew-footed darky who was leaning against the corner of the railroad station in a Texas town when the noon whistle in the canning factory blew and the hands hurried out, bearing their grub buckets. The darky listened, with his head on one side, until the rocketing echo had quite died away. Then he heaved a deep sigh and remarked to himself:

"Dar she go. Dinner time fur some folks—but jes' 12 o'clock fur me!"

I like that story because it is short, because there is pathos under the laugh—as there always should be to make the laugh go better—and because there is a certain philosophy bound up in it which is not only Afro-American but American. Sincerely yours,

Irvin S. Cobb

Carolyn Wells's Selection.

Carolyn Wells has no doubts about her choice for first place. "I like the inclosed by G. K. Chesterton best," she wrote. It was this:

In a little square garden of yellow roses, beside the sea, there was a Nonconformist minister who had never been to Wimbledon. His family did not understand his sorrow nor the strange look in his eyes. But one day they repented their neglect, for they heard that a body had been found on the shore, battered, but wearing patent leather boots. As it happened, it turned out not to be the minister at all. But in the dead man's pocket there was a return ticket to Maidstone.

Carolyn Wells

From an English Humorist.

In the midst of the bitter disappointment which readers will derive from Capt. Harry Graham's confession, there is one consolation—it is to be presumed that the wonderful story which impressed him more deeply than any other was an American story. Here is what the sprightly author of "Ruthless Rhymes for Heartless Homes" and "Misrepresentative Men" has to say on the subject:

11 Gloucester Place,
Portman Square, W.,
London, England.

The best story that I ever heard was one that I was told once in the Fall of 1905, (or it may have been 1906,) when I was visiting Boston—at least I think it was Boston; it may have been Washington, (my memory is so bad.)

I happened to run across a most amusing man whose name I forget—Williams or Wilson or Wilkins; some name like that—and he told me this story while we were waiting for a trolley car.

I can still remember how heartily I laughed at the time; and again, that evening, after I had gone to bed, how I laughed myself to sleep recalling the humor of this incredibly humorous story. It was really quite extraordinarily funny. In fact, I can truthfully affirm that it is quite the most amusing story I have ever had the privilege of hearing. Unfortunately I've forgotten it. Yours very truly,

Harry Graham

One of Lamb's Sallies.

This was not the case with another British humorist, Canon James O. Hannay, who, under the name of G. A. Birmingham, has been achieving fame for some years by his whimsical stories dealing with the life of his native Ireland, and who recently was a visitor to these shores. He not only knows what piece of humor pleases him best, but also, fortunately, remembers it. Witness this letter from him:

Sackville Cottage,
Beaulieu, Hants.

I observe that THE NEW YORK TIMES very properly professes to have only "All the news that's fit to print." With this limitation I give you as the best joke I know Charles Lamb's reply to a doctor who advised him to go for a walk every morning on an empty stomach.

"Whose?" asked Lamb.

I am yours very truly,

James O. Hannay

True to New England.

Judge Henry A. Shute, whose "Real Diary of a Real Boy" tickles all who hard back to school and swimming-hole days, showed himself faithful to the scenes of his boyhood in making his selection. He wrote to THE TIMES as follows:

Exeter, N. H.

Naturally a local joke appeals to me more than another kind, and the following appears to me the most ridiculous one in my experience:

A locally famous sign painter, now deceased, was asked to paint a sign:

"The Union Five Cents Saving Bank."

As this was a new bank in town he was instructed to turn out something rather unusual, and he promised faithfully to do his best. When the sign was finished it was brought for the inspection of the Trustees, who were somewhat disquieted when they saw that the sign read as follows:

"The Union Five-Cent Savings Bank."

Considerable discussion ensued when they requested him to add an "s," which he had omitted, and he insisted that no "s" was necessary, but as they insisted he took it back to the shop, very much disgusted with the evident lack of the first principles of education.

When he brought it back it read as follows:

"The Union Five-Scent Savings Bank."

"Thar," he said, "b' Godrey, be you satisfied now?"

Very sincerely yours,

H. A. Shute

S. E. Kiser's Favorite.

Turning from the above choice of a New England anecdote by a New England humorist, we look to Chicago, whence comes this from S. E. Kiser, born in Pennsylvania, but identified for many years with the West:

Here is my favorite joke:

"The man who wins me for his own," said the beautiful maiden, "must have done something that no other man has done."

"That's all right," replied the middle-aged widower; "I can qualify."

"What great thing have you ever achieved? In what way have you made yourself unique?"

"I'm the only man who ever carried a 150-pound sack of flour from Schenectady to Brattleboro to pay off an election bet."

S. E. Kiser

No Wonder He Likes It.

Ellis Parker Butler, author of "Pigs Is Pigs" has special personal reasons for liking the story which he chose, but he distinctly says that it is the story he likes best, so he must be placed among those with a definite opinion on the subject. He wrote from his home out in Flushing, on Long Island:

This is the anecdote that is most firmly implanted in my mind, and why:

An Englishman returning from Africa brought with him a tortoise, and had no trouble until he was obliged to transfer from one train to another at a small station in England. When he was about to enter his compartment of the outgoing train the assistant stationmaster stopped him and demanded a ticket for the tortoise, claiming that it was live stock and came under the same rule as dogs, cats, and other animals.

The Englishman objected, the train was held up, and the head stationmaster sent for. He was an Irishman. He looked in his book of rules, came to the station platform and looked at the tortoise, scratched his head, and delivered his ultimatum:

"I niver see such an animal as that, but 'tis plain 'tis no dog. Accordin' to the custom iv this railway dogs is dogs, an' cats is dogs, an' squirrels in cages is dogs, but that there animal is an insect an' goes free."

The reason this is firmly implanted in my mind is that I was carrying a clipping upon which it was printed at the time when a certain magazine editor suggested a story about guinea pigs left at an express office. Hence Mike Flannery, my Irish express agent, and his somewhat famous "Pigs Is Pigs!"

Ellis Parker Butler

Not Always in Good Humor.

In solemn bell-like tones, Franklin P. Adams, of "Always in Good Humor" and "Conning Tower" celebrity, tolls this rebuke:

The practice of Sunday newspapers asking for the best short story, the best poem, or the best joke in the world is the third best joke in the world.

The second best is the seriousness with which the public takes such symposia.

The best is the seriousness with which the people asked for judgment take it. Yours sinseriously,

Franklin P. Adams

From "Finnigin's" Creator.

And Strickland Gillilan, who leaped into fame in a night with his "Off agin, on agin, gone agin, Finnigin" is not quite sure which he thinks the funniest story in the world, but nevertheless he almost commits himself. He says in his letter:

You asked me something. There are hundreds and hundreds of the funniest stories I ever heard, but perhaps this one—loved partly for its delicious self and partly because of my love for the man who bequeathed it to me—is as good as any. Robert J. Burdette, the blessed Pastor Emeritus of the American Press Humorists, endowed me with this one:

Burdette's Bull and Bear Story.

Once upon a time two men were crossing a large field. When they were right in the middle of the field a big brindle bull came along to show them the nearest way to the fence.

One of the men found a tree and climbed it as rapidly as possible. The other couldn't get to the tree in time, but, seeing a large, sociable looking hole in the ground, he jumped into the hole.

The bull pretty nearly got him as he went down, but just missed him and jumped over the hole. The man came up again like a jack-in-the-box, the bull gave a snort and a jump at him. Down went the man and over went the bull, up came the man and back came the bull, till the man up in the tree got excited and called down:

"You blamed fool, you, why don't you stay in that hole? You'll get that bull so mad he'll keep us here all Summer!"

"Blamed fool yourself," yelled the man below. "There's a bear in that hole!"

For a rough-and-ready, easily digested yarn, that one is as good as any, if not the best of all.

Strickland Gillilan

One on Barrie.

Jerome K. Jerome, who has been a member of the élite of English-speaking funny men since "Three Men in a Boat" burst on the world, also dodged when asked to pin himself down to a final choice as to the best short story. But he found in a joke on a fellow-wit and Englishman a substitute and concocted this answer to THE TIMES's question:

Monks Corner,
Marlow Common,
Bucks.

I do not pretend to be a judge of humor. I sell it, together with other dry goods of a like character; but I always refuse to give a guarantee; the customer takes it as his own risk.

How tastes differ is shown by a story which J. M. Barrie once told me. The merits of a youthful foreign dramatist were being discussed. One man described him as a Dutch Shakespeare. Another was of opinion that he was a cross between Aristophanes and Sardou.

"I will tell you what he is," came an authoritative voice from the other end of the table. "He is J. M. Barrie WITH humor."

Sorry that I cannot help you.

Jerome K. Jerome

J. K. Bangs on Humor.

John Kendrick Bangs contributed these thoughtful remarks in response to THE TIMES's appeal:

Cape Neddick, Me.

Your question is not quite so easy to answer as it appears to be. What is funny and what is not funny sometimes seem to me to vary almost as much as there are ears in the world, irrespective of their length.

For example, one man thinks that the Progressive Party is a joke, while to another who has to sit by and see his country ruled by an incompetent minority because of the vagaries of the Megolists it is almost a cause for tears. Again, to one man it seems funny that you should think any reader of THE TIMES could possibly be interested in the reasons why Chesterton does not visit the United States, or should really care whether he comes or not, while to another reader it seems not at all "funny," but merely extraordinary.

And so the thing goes. What is one man's joke is another man's trial. There are people who laugh when they see an old man slip and fall heavily on a small boy's slide in Winter. There are people who take Bernard Shaw seriously. I know a man who never goes to funerals, because although he enjoys them hugely, he is always seized with an irresistible desire to laugh when he even sees an undertaker.

Then again, even if mankind were to settle definitely the question as to what is funny and what is not so; so definitely that we could say that thus and thus make laughter as certainly as the Cubists can say that five times seven makes nine hundred and seventy-three and seven-eighths, there would still remain the matter of comparisons to deal with. What is funny, what is funnier, what is funniest, would need to be determined before your question could be answered properly. What is "funnier than" something else would be an idle speculation, since such a speculation would involve the setting up of a standard, and speculations involving standards in these progressive days are futile because our modern leaders of thought refuse to have anything to do with anything so wholly reactionary, believing, or professing to believe, that they are utterly valueless, since, as is well known, the sum total of human experience comes to this: that whatever has been is foolish, and that whatever is is wrong, else it would not be.

Then, too, there are many kinds of anecdote that appeal to us as good, better or best, according to the mood of the moment, and that appeal to our sense of humor in many different ways.

So you see you have put up a poser in your interesting inquiry, and some day when you feel that you can give up your whole Magazine Section to my views on the subject, and are willing to back an expedition to the Poles of Humor as liberally as you backed Admiral Peary and others in chillier realms, I shall be delighted to accommodate you.

Meanwhile, lest this communication strike you as wholly fruitless, I append two items that have recently struck me as amusing, even though they may not qualify as the funniest stories I ever heard.

The first tells of a German farmer who was in search of a good driving horse.

"I have got just the thing you want," said a dealer in equine perversity. "This little animal is only five years old, as sound as a nut, and he goes ten miles without stopping."

"Mein Gott!" cried the German. "Held neffer do for me. I liff eight miles from here, andt mit dot horse I have to valk back two miles!"

And this one rather appealed to my sense of humor the other day. I copy it from a newspaper clipping.

Submitted in Rebuttal.

(Harvard '05 Addressing Alumni Gathering.)

"All this talk about Harvard being snobbish is tommyrot, and I speak from personal experience, for I was coxswain of the crew and knew every man in the boat except two, and they sat way up in the bow."

The elements of humor in this paragraph were twofold. First, it was a fairly good joke upon Harvard, and, second, it appeared in a Boston newspaper. On the whole, I think the latter fact is the funniest thing about it.

John Kendrick Bangs

Too Many for a Choice.

Wallace Irwin felt confronted with an embarrassment of riches when asked to name his pet joke and could not be cornered into giving a decision. But he wasn't scared away entirely from the task, for he contributed this:

Port Washington, L. I.

To ask an American citizen to name his favorite joke is like commanding an inhabitant of Smyrna to describe the best fig he ever tasted.

There is a Down East dialogue, which I have often thought might furnish the motif for a tragedy under the pen of Mary E. Wilkins Freeman. It runs like this:

"Where be y' goin', Si?"

"Goin' down to Portland to git drunk. And, Gosh, how I dew dread it!"

There is a Scottish-American tale on which my father reared me and which, I admit, sometimes exacts from me the passing tribute of a smile. It also, I regret to say, deals lightly with the curse of intemperance.

A Scotch sheep herder slouched into a Western town which had recently gone for prohibition. He entered a drug store and, as was customary, made a signal on the soda counter. Now, the proprietor was out, so the assistant, a young lad, understanding the Indian sign, took a bottle from a shelf and helped the customer to half a gobletful of brown liquid. The Scotchman smacked his lips, paid his score, and went his stolid way.

Shortly afterward the proprietor came back and said to his assistant:

"Any business?"

"Scotchman came and tapped the you-know on the counter," replied the boy, "so I gave him some." He pointed to the bottle of brown liquid standing alone on the shelf.

"Great heavens, child," shrieked the proprietor, "that ain't whisky. That's sulphuric acid!"

Tableau.

For two weeks the druggist lived the life of a haunted man. He discharged his helper, made his will, contemplated suicide and spent real money advertising for the widow of the unfortunate customer whom his carelessness had sent to an agonizing death. Just as he was about to surrender to despair he was suddenly relieved by beholding the same Scotch sheep herder, healthy and matter-of-fact, shuffle into his drug store, step to the counter, beckon mysteriously, and whisper:

"Losh, laddie. Ye maun gie me a wee nippie. And mind ye pour it out o' the same bottle. It's a wee bit strong, but it puts heart in a mon!"

Wallace Irwin

From Montague Glass.

"I can't remember the best anecdote I ever heard, but this is one of the best," writes Montague Glass, creator of "Potash and Perlmutter," and appends the following:

A railroad magnate was visited in his office by a boyhood friend whom he had not seen for many years. The boyhood friend told a pathetic story of misfortune comprising bankruptcy, the loss of wife and children, and his own recent illness. He concluded with a plea for assistance, and the railroad magnate, overcome by emotion, touched a bell on his desk. A burly colored man responded.

"John," said the magnate, his voice choked with sobs, "throw this poor fellow downstairs. He's breaking my heart."

Montague Glass

Tom Daly Heard From.

"How dare you in such hot weather?" thundered Tom Daly, father of the McAroni ballads, at THE TIMES's query—for it reached him in a torrid Summer spell. But, forbidding as was the opening sentence of his letter, it did not mean, after all, that the Irish poet who, as becomes a man from the land of Irish "bulls," knows Italians even better than he does Irishmen, was not going to give a satisfactory answer to the question. The letter went on: "I do hope the inclosed will be of some little use to you, for, to save my soul, I can't think of anything better to say." The "inclosed" read as follows:

The best joke, to my mind, is the one you are trying to put over this instant on the humorists. It reminds me of the remark of the skeptical farmer after he had observed a dromedary for the first time: "Heck! There ain't no such animal!"

That, by the way, is a good joke. I say that and I didn't write it; but I wouldn't attempt to tell you the best joke I ever heard. I couldn't. All jokes have their day and carry their own atmosphere with them. Many have an atmosphere that is turgid and they, unfortunately, are often otherwise good.

Then again I can remember jokes that I once split my sides over, but they wouldn't raise a ripple now. I remember some years ago Bert Leston Taylor of The Chicago Tribune dilated at some length upon this subject. He was at that time editor of a humorous weekly and he spoke rather pessimistically of the antiquity and general decrepitude of most of the new jokes which were being sent in to him by the contributors.

But he waxed enthusiastic over one which had come to his notice just before he sat down to write his article. It was the first joke in months which had made anybody in the office laugh.

It went something like this:

Little boy (reading in class)—The horse was goin'.

Teacher—Don't forget your "g," Willie.

Little boy—"Gee," the horse was goin'.

You've heard it? Of course—everybody has—but when it burst from its shell brand-new and hit Bert Taylor in the midriff, it was perhaps the best joke of the moment. What more can I say?

Tom Daly

A Hotel Joke.

Simeon Ford, who accomplished the extraordinary feat of running the Grand Union Hotel and being a humorist of nation-wide reputation at the same time, and, now that the hotel is deceased, is presumably turning his whole attention to the convulsing of dinner guests over their coffee, expressed himself with much modesty in reply to THE TIMES's question.

"I never tell stories," wrote he, "nor can I remember them." That looked discouraging. But presently Mr. Ford brightened up amazingly, and finished his communication in this way:

Here is a bit of humor, however, and a true hotel happening.

Our steward had printed on the bills of fare the following notice:

"Articles brought into the hotel and used at the tables will be charged for as though furnished by the house."

Some one mailed me one of these bills and under the notice he had written:

"Does this apply to false teeth?"

A. M.

"M. Quad" Had to Grin.

The veteran humorist C. B. Lewis, who under the pen-name of "M. Quad" has amused thousands of newspaper readers for many years with the Bowser family and other harassed individuals, wrote in answer to THE TIMES's query:

In the fifty years I have been in the literary harness I have read one million jokes. I have read half a million anecdotes. I have listened to half a million drummers' yarns, and I have had a hundred thousand conundrums put up to me. In no instance have I tried to repeat one of these things an hour after hearing or reading it, but that I found that I had somehow lost the kernel of it.

Therefore, in giving you "the best joke or anecdote I ever heard," a reverence for truth constrains me to reply that it is right before me—in your asking me to remember and write you something that made me grin. I am grinning now, but it will go the same way that all my other grins have.

M. Quad

Job Hedges Refuses.

And that ends the list of humorists who answered THE TIMES giving either their choice of the best joke they had ever heard or something which they thought pretty near it. But in conclusion it is necessary to put in what that famous after-dinner humorist, Job E. Hedges, said. Soon after he got the inquiry from THE TIMES he called up on the telephone, apparently in a state of great agitation, and disclaimed emphatically that he was a humorist.

"Always around election time," he averred, "the newspapers make me out one, but I'm not. I simply plead guilty to a sense of humor. And as for choosing what is the funniest thing I ever heard—why, I never did such a thing in my life!"

Venerable "Chestnuts" and Quips That Are Apparently New Figure Among Selections.

ARGENTINE EXPERT ANALYZES NATIONALITY LAWS

Dr. Zeballos Finds a Great Difference Between the Conception of Them Held Here in the United States and That Which Obtains Among His Own Countrymen.

By Leopold Grahame

TO the average educated layman the subject of international law is a closed book. Its very name strikes terror into the mind of the college student who, by force of habit, associates it exclusively with the complexities of such problems as extra-territoriality, the usages of war, neutrality, and a number of doctrines, rules, and principles which govern the relations and intercourse of States with one another.

Even the most prominent lawyers who confine their professional activities to advocacy in the courts, or to chamber practice in matters affected by the ordinary or municipal law, are prone to regard the knowledge of international law as something in the nature of an "extra-professional" accomplishment. Yet there is at least one branch of it, that commonly described as private international law, which, as a subject of study, is of such vast importance to a people so widely different in origin as those of the United States, that it should form a compulsory advanced course in every college and university in the Union, for the lay student as well as for the lawyer.

Private international law relates to such intimate personal matters—where different territories are involved—as nationality, citizenship, jurisdiction, succession, wills, marriages, divorce, contracts, military service, legitimacy, and a hundred other similar questions that must frequently arise in a community of persons chiefly of foreign birth or ancestry.

I have been led to these reflections by the perusal of a work, just published in the French language (two volumes, 1,350 pages) on the subject of "Nationality," both from the point of view of theory and of positive law, by that eminent international jurist, Dr. Estanislao S. Zeballos, who is well known in the United States as a former Argentine Minister at Washington and more recently as Minister of Foreign Affairs of his own country and a Permanent Member of the International Court at The Hague.

In this work, which comprises a series of collected and edited lectures delivered by the author as Professor of International Law at the University of Buenos Aires, Dr. Zeballos traces the development of the conception of nationality and proceeds to disclose and discuss its position in international law and in the laws of various States, ancient and modern. Beginning with the formation of States, he traverses the entire field of private international law with copious references to comparative legislation on the subject, indicating as his main point that citizenship is the chief source of nationality and that, in consequence, controversies spring up between nations growing out of conflicting claims of allegiance, particularly between claims based on nativity and claims based on naturalization.

Prof. Moore's Opinion.

As the differences of view upon this point have special applicability to the United States, I consulted Prof. Bassett Moore, who kindly placed the work at my disposal, and that distinguished authority has accorded me permission to reproduce the instructive and interesting communication he made to me in regard to this phase of Dr. Zeballos's book. Prof. Moore says:

It is unfortunate that nations have been unable to reach a general agreement for the solution of these difficulties. Such difficulties have been especially serious in the case of the United States because of the immense immigration to its shores during the last seventy years. After the formation of the Constitution of the United States almost eighty years elapsed before the United States was able to conclude any international arrangement on the subject. The first naturalization treaties were made with the German States in 1868.

These are commonly known as the Bancroft Treaties, because they were negotiated and signed on the part of the United States by George Bancroft, who was greatly aided in his work by the friendliness of Prince Bismarck. Subsequently similar treaties were concluded with other powers, and then the process almost suddenly came to an end, the reason being the tendency of young men on the eve of liability to military service coming to the United States, and, after obtaining naturalization, returning to their native land, so as to enjoy exemption from obligations to which those who remained at home were subject.

The naturalization treaties of the United States generally provide that the change of allegiance shall be recognized only after an uninterrupted residence of five years in the country of adoption. This is the period prescribed for ordinary naturalization in the United States, but there are special statutes under which naturalization may be obtained in a shorter time.

Such naturalization is not effective for purposes of expatriation in the sense of the treaties which required a five-year residence, and would be recognized as ridding the individual of his original allegiance only after such period of residence. An exception to this rule is found in the naturalization treaty with Great Britain. The British Government prior to 1870 adhered to the doctrine of indelible allegiance, but when Parliament decided to depart from that principle it abandoned it altogether. Consequently it is provided in the treaty of naturalization with Great Britain that adoptive citizenship shall be recognized whenever acquired.

Conflicts of Alligiance.

The United States has no naturalization treaty with France, with Italy, with Russia, with Spain, or with numerous other countries. The great obstacle to the conclusion of such treaties is evidently the system of general liability on the part of the male population to military service. Italy, for instance, recognizes expatriation after an absence of a certain number of years, but this is subject to the qualification that the individual on his return to Italy remains liable to military service if he failed to perform it prior to his naturalization.

The rule is substantially the same in France. Formerly where a Frenchman who had not performed his military service was naturalized abroad he was, if he returned to France, subjected to prosecution, and after a trial, which was usually held within six weeks, was declared to have lost his French character, and then became subject to expulsion as an alien. But as this process afforded a way of escaping military service, the French Government, early in the nineties, feeling more and more the necessity of strengthening its military organization, changed its regulations and took substantially the same position as that which is maintained by Italy.

Another case in which conflicts of allegiance exist is that which grows out of competing claims of blood and nativity. For instance, the United States claims as citizens substantially all persons who are born within its territory. At the same time it claims as its citizens all persons born abroad of American parents. As the laws of certain other countries make similar double claims, conflicts necessarily arise. In the laws of some countries the provision is made against a clash by definitely giving a superior place to the one source of nationality as against the other. In the laws of the United States no such clause is found. One solution of the difficulty is to treat the individual in such a predicament as having a dual nationality during his minority. On this principle he would be subject to the claims of whichever one of the two countries he happened to reside in, and on attaining his majority would be obliged definitely to elect which of his two allegiances he would exclusively retain.

Dr. Zeballos deals exhaustively with most of the points urged by Prof. Moore and, by way of illustrating his general argument in favor of an international codification of many of the questions arising out of the complicated subject of nationality, he cites two cases to show the diversity and extent of the conflicts of jurisdiction to which the existing system of private international law lends itself.

In the first he presents a commercial case. A merchant in Buenos Aires received from his local bank a draft on a bank at Antwerp. The payee, having proceeded to Paris, where he needed the money, indorsed the document in favor of another banker in that city. The Paris banker, who had accounts to liquidate in London, reindorsed the draft in favor of his London creditor, which constituted a third contract of cesion. The London banker later presented the draft for payment to the banker at Antwerp, who, in the meantime, had become bankrupt.

Thus there became involved a series of contracts which brought the transaction, first, under Argentine jurisdiction as the country in which the contract was originally made; secondly, within French jurisdiction at the time of the first indorsement; subsequently within British jurisdiction, when cesion was made to the English banker, and, finally, within Belgian jurisdiction, which had to deal with the bankruptcy of the banker on whom the document was drawn.

The second case, still more important, was of a civil order and applied to a mixed marriage and its effects in private international law. In 1874 a cause célèbre was heard in France which aroused a considerable amount of public feeling and a violent controversy among eminent jurisconsults in the leading European newspapers and reviews. The case, which is now historic, marks the most discouraging check which private international law has so far received as a protective force in maintaining the organization of the family as well as the patrimony and honor of its members.

The "Affaire de Bauffremont."

The case is known in the legal records of Latin countries as the "affaire de Bauffremont." The Princess Caraman-Chimay, Belgian by birth, had contracted a marriage with the Prince de Bauffremont, a French citizen, and had consequently, in that way, acquired French nationality. In 1874 the Princess de Bauffremont obtained a separation from her husband by decree of the Tribunals of the Seine, under certain conditions demanded by the Prince, one of which fixed the domicile of the Princess during the separation. In 1875 the Princess, without permission, transferred her residence to Germany, where she constituted her domicile in conformity with local laws and acquired German nationality by naturalization in the Duchy of Saxe-Altenbourg, and, by virtue of the laws which conferred upon her the new nationality, she married a Rumanian subject, the Prince de Bibesco.

The Prince de Bauffremont immediately proceeded in the courts to obtain a nullity of this marriage on the ground that under the decree of separation from the Princess he had conserved all his marital rights over his wife, except the obligation of living in community. He further alleged that the German naturalization was of no effect and that his wife retained her French nationality, which she could not change without his consent, the separation from her husband being simply a séparée de corps. The legal proceedings were protracted and painful, and subjected European institutions to a severe trial. Two distinct systems of jurisprudence were brought into conflict. The French and Belgian tribunals declared the German marriage to be bigamous, while the German courts declared it to be legitimate. In Belgium, the Court of First Instance and the Court of Appeal were also in conflict. The most unfortunate part, however, of the case was the effects upon the children, who became the innocent victims of opposing judicial decisions. The French and Belgian courts declared the children of the second marriage to be illegitimate, while the German tribunals logically declared otherwise.

Dr. Don Estanislao S. Zeballos

It is in such cases as these that Dr. Zeballos claims the superiority of the Argentine school of private international law over those of other nations, by reason of the fact that in the Argentine Republic in that department of legal science human rights are considered paramount to legal points. He proceeds to say:

Our school is today known and honored far beyond our frontiers because it furnishes the just solution of problems such as I have indicated, and attests the fact that in the Argentine Republic, which, owing to the considerable numbers of its alien population, is a vast field for the application of its experience in these matters, it has never occurred that a marriage legitimately celebrated either between nationals or foreigners has been denied definite legal protection.

The Argentine Republic has the honor of being recognized as the first country to codify what I may term the supernational law in imposing silence upon the provisions of our national law in the case of strangers where the foreign law may be reasonably applied. Thus, for example, to cite one of many cases in which that course is followed, it has frequently happened that we have recognized the legal majority of a person of 21 years of age according to the law of his own country, while our own laws provide 22 years as the minimum age at which a citizen may exercise his full civil rights.

On the question of citizenship Dr. Zeballos draws a comparison of the difference in the definition of nationality in the United States and the Argentine Republic and refers generally to the peculiarities in the American conception of the law of nationality. As a matter of fact the word "nationality" is not used in the American Constitution, which speaks only of "citizens" when speaking of persons born in the United States or those who have established their legal domicile in this country. This term comprehends at the same time the citizen who votes and the nationals who do not participate in the exercise of sovereignty. The woman and the child who never vote are thus nationals. "Are they also citizens?" he asks.

The American Constitution, in adopting the word "citizenship," refers, without doubt, to the juridical view of nationality in general, but it furnishes no precise definition. He calls attention to the first article of the American Constitution, which provides that a representative in Congress must have served seven years of citizenship, while to be elected a Senator it is necessary to prove a continuous term of nine years of citizenship, and the President of the United States, who must be born in the country, can only be chosen by the citizens who have the right to vote. Who these persons are, says Dr. Zeballos, is not as clearly defined as it should be and as it is in the Constitutions of other republics.

Again he draws a distinction between the United States and the Argentine Republic. In the former there must be two fundamental elements of citizenship, namely, birth within its borders and domicile, while in Argentina it suffices to be born in the country to be a citizen. It is provided in the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution that all persons born within the territory and subject to the jurisdiction of the United States are citizens. It therefore results that the child born of foreign parents in the United States, subsequently taken to Europe and so domiciled in a foreign country, ceases to be an American citizen because he is voluntarily subjected to foreign jurisdiction. This point has been decided uniformly by many American tribunals, which have refused nationality in such cases. Therefore the United States admits the right of foreign parents to select for their children born on American soil a foreign nationality.

Full of Human Interest.

Although a great portion of the two volumes is devoted to a critical examination of the systems of private international law adopted in the countries of the American continent, considerable attention is paid by the author to the legislation and decisions of the courts of European states and to the treaties relating to naturalization and citizenship. Yet, while the mere mention of these intricate matters appears bewildering to the lay mind, the work is replete with human interest and with romantic incidents. It is a work teeming with brilliant, original thought and profound legal knowledge. The two volumes, which bear the title of "La Nationalité," (au point de vue de la Législation Comparée et du Droit Privé Humain,) have been translated into French from the Spanish by Dr. André Bosq, Chief Translator of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Argentine Republic.

ENGLISH AUTHORS IN WARLIKE MOOD, SAYS BARRY PAIN, ONE OF THEM

Noted Writer, Just Arrived Here, Tells of "United Arts Force," Formed by His Confreres, Which He Will Join on His Return Home.

LARGE Englishmen with bushy black beards look more natural in little London gardens than in the spacious lobbies of New York hotels. This is one of the important conclusions drawn by a TIMES reporter who, some six weeks after taking tea with Mr. Barry Pain in his pleasant London home, again approached him ("bearded" is too personal a word) on the first day of his first visit to New York.

Mr. Barry Pain will not dance with delight if you quote to him

> The lilies lie in my lady's bower;
> O weary mother, drive the cows to roost,

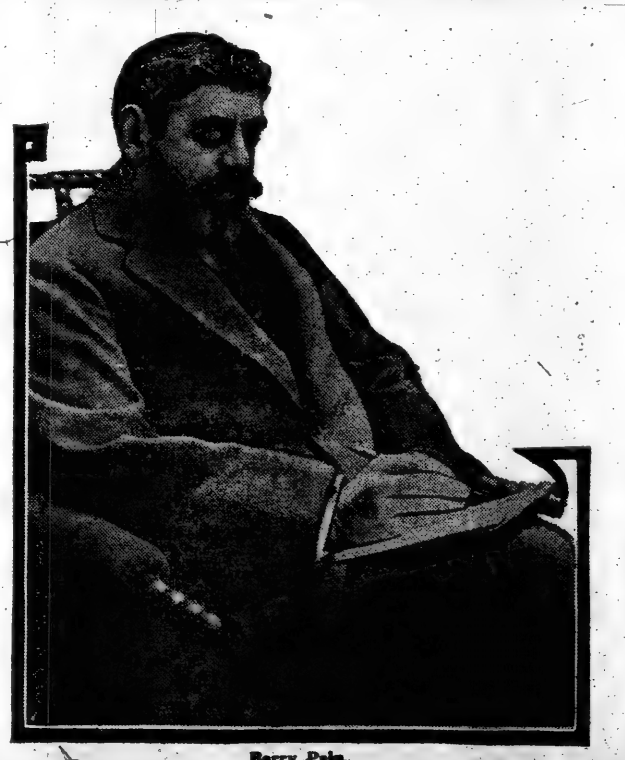
nor any other selection from that admirable series of parodies "The Poets at Tea." Nor is he eager to be known to fame as the author of that delectable bit of insanity, "Martin Luther at Potsdam." His attitude toward this famous nonsense is much like that of Mr. Gelett Burgess toward "The Purple Cow."

For Mr. Barry Pain—as one Robert Louis Stevenson knew—is primarily concerned with the difficult and subtle art of short-story writing. The author of "Stories in Grey" has strong convictions about the short story, and some of them he told to THE TIMES reporter. But first, of course, he had to talk about the war.

The United Arts Force was mentioned. "I'd be in it if I were in England," he said. "I expect to join it when I get back. It is made up, you know, of men connected with the arts—writers, musicians, painters. John Lavery, the artist, is most enthusiastic about it and so is Kébie Howard, the novelist—John Kebie Bell is his real name.

"I suppose the United Arts Force would be used only for defense. Most of the men are too old for active service. But even if they are not needed for the defense of England, they can be of use releasing territorials.

"About 1,200 men have joined the United Arts Force already. The War Office has not yet given it recognition, but will do so as soon as it has a sufficiently large enrollment.



Barry Pain.

"What bothered us most in the early days of the war," continued Mr. Pain, leaning back in his chair and drawing on a cigarette that looked ridiculously small in the mighty jungle of his black mustache and beard, "was the difficulty of exchange. On Saturday, Aug. 1, I had to pay out £7. I gave a check for that amount to the keeper of some stalls where I traded.

"In about an hour the foreman came back looking five years older and very sick. He said he had changed the check, but could not get gold in full for it. He had received one five-pound note and two sovereigns. He had been all over the city trying to change the note, but with no success.

"Now this," said Mr. Pain, "was a great shock to me. I had changed a five-pound note some years before in a Paris restaurant where I had never been before, and now this note couldn't be changed in London!

"'Go to the Bank of England,' I said; 'you can get it changed there.'

"'But suppose the Bank of England won't change it?' said he.

"'In that case,' I said, 'you'd better go down to the Embankment and jump into the river, for if the Bank of England won't change its own notes, then the whole show is over and the curtain down!'

"The London kids are funny," said Mr. Pain. "They play war all the time. In the park one day I saw a little girl and a little boy with wooden guns and newspaper helmets. The little girl aimed her wooden gun at her brother and said, 'Bang! Now you're dead!'

"'No, I ain't!' said he. And, presenting his gun, said 'Bang! Now you're dead!'

"'No, I ain't!' sobbed the little girl; 'you want to do all the shooting and all the killing and none of the dying! Mother spoke to you about it once!'

"That pleased me very much," said Mr. Pain. "It's quite true."

But the conversation must be led into literary channels. So the reporter, after a vain search for a subtle and appropriate method of approaching the subject, demanded sternly: "What effect has the war had on literature?"

"Well," said Mr. Pain, "of course it has stimulated poetry very much. Every one seems to be writing war poems. Many people who have not hitherto been known as poets are writing very strong war poems. One of the most popular and effective of them was written by a Henry Chappel, who is a railway porter."

"And what effect has it had on fiction?" he was asked.

"It has checked the flood of fiction," was the answer. "The English publishers now are publishing no novels except those by writers with big followings. And that is not altogether a bad thing for a while.

"The chief fault of modern English fiction is that there is too much of it. People write too much, and English publishers are too ready to bring out English books not really worthy to be put between covers.

"War books, of course, are selling tremendously. Bernhardi's book is everywhere. I believe that Bernhardi does not get royalties on the translation. I have been told that the publisher bought the rights for £30, and that he has already made £8,000.

"It is not a bad thing for the number of published books to be lessened. I have been a reviewer, a publisher's reader, an editor, and for twenty-five years I have written stories. And it seems to me that too many stories are written.

"The amateurs, especially, are too eager to write. They write more than the professional story writers would think of attempting.

"Once I told a young girl, who brought me some stories that she had written, that she did not work hard enough. She replied 'I write 5,000 word a week!'

"'After this,' I said 'write 1,000 words a week!'"

Mr. Pain has positive views as to the way in which a writer should give information. "You must give the reader information without letting him know that you are doing it," he said.

"Suppose that at the end of your story the villain is to throw the heroine down a well in the garden. You may describe the well at the very beginning of the story, dwelling upon its depth, its position, its picturesqueness. But if you do this, your reader will become suspicious. He will say, 'This well is not here for its health. Somebody will be going down it directly!'

"Now, information about the well can be given skillfully in many ways. For instance, it is not necessary to mention it at all. If you speak of the rust from the chain in the drinking water, and describe the old men coming through the garden with pails of water hanging from yokes, the reader will know about the well, but not know how he knows about it.

"Or the well may be put in as a side issue. You may speak of the beauty of the syringa bushes in full bloom beside the old well. Then the reader will think it's the syringa bushes you are worrying about.

"Another way is to give your reference to the well in dialogue. Let the characters talk about it, not the novelist.

"Dialogue is the most important thing of all in story writing. We are often surprised, in real life, by what people do, but seldom by what they say.

"The subtlest and best and most pleasing character delineation is got by making the character speak as he naturally would speak. If you want to give the effect of a shade of commonness to a character, don't analyze and describe the shade for a page and a half. It will not be interesting, it will not be real. Let the character speak as he would speak—that is all that is necessary.

"George Meredith did this admirably, and so do Kipling and Galsworthy. And, in this—it seems an audacious thing to say—in this Sir Walter Scott and others of his school failed. In the ordinary historical novel all the characters talk in the same way."

Mr. Pain has not yet read the works of O. Henry—warmly recommended to him by his friend, Alfred Noyes—but he is conversant with much contemporary American fiction.

"On the whole," he said, "I think that the short stories in the leading American magazines are better than the modern English short stories. But they certainly are more leisurely than the English stories. That is one American activity in which there is no 'hustle.' I admire greatly Henry James's work. He surely is not a 'hustler'!

"I knew Bret Harte, and admire his work very much, especially his poetry. He was very encouraging to me. Once he told me that a sense of humor was nothing but a sense of proportion, that it consisted of understatement or overstatement."

"What has impressed you most on your trip so far?" asked the reporter.

"The German ships in New York harbor," said Mr. Pain promptly. "And it's pleasant to see trees again. You see, the ship has been my world for the last week. Everything on the ship has been real, and trees, houses and streets and everything that belongs to the land have been fiction."

ART AT HOME AND ABROAD: NEWS AND COMMENT

The Jarves Collection at Yale to be Saved—Activities in the Art in Trades Club—Millet at Library.

THE arrangements made for the preservation and care of the Jarves collection are now about to bear fruit, and those pictures in the collection requiring treatment to prevent their disintegration are to be put under the care of expert restorers. It is unfortunate that the word "restorer," the only title for the man who undertakes to improve the physical condition of a painting, should have assumed in the public mind a sinister significance. In the past much damage has been done by inexpert and ignorant members of this profession, and many have come to regard the handling of a picture by a "restorer" as the unpardonable sin of expertise. There is still sufficient excuse for this prejudice to make it in the highest degree desirable that the technical processes of a restorer should be superintended by an artist sensitive to any impairment of the picture's aesthetic quality, and the Jarves collection is fortunate, indeed, in having Sergeant Kendall to perform this very exacting duty, for which he has the indispensable requisites of artistic knowledge and artistic conscience.

Mr. Kendall is taking the necessary steps to determine upon the men best fitted to the requirements of the case, and nothing is to be done that is not absolutely necessary to either the physical or aesthetic life of the paintings. In certain instances panels will need reinforcement, in other instances modern and disastrous restorations will have to be removed in order that the work of the original artist may become visible, but beyond such essentials it is not intended to go, and all the paintings will remain in the galleries while under treatment.

There is no collection in America more deserving of the scrupulous care awarded precious objects. There are 120 pictures representing the period between 1250 and 1500 in Italian art, with a few extremely interesting examples of the art of the sixteenth century. Attention last year was called to the fact that while the European galleries contained more masterpieces of the earlier period, none except those of London, Berlin, and Florence excelled the Jarves collection in representative character. The rare Byzantine paintings of the late thirteenth century, those rude, intensely significant expressions of the spiritual ferment that was still going on in a world newly awakened to spiritual forces, are twelve in number, more than can be found in any European museum except the Academies at Florence and Siena. Among them is a Tuscan-Byzantine crucifixion with the Y-shaped cross remarkable in Christian art and the bent and twisted body found in the thirteenth century enamels.

The Gothic fourteenth century is seen through more than twenty pictures. The loveliest of them is a little Sienese "Assumption of the Virgin" by an anonymous master, one of those gracious artists, tender and gay, who kept themselves free from the progressive influences of the time, yet retained vitality and the joy of religion. Here, too, is a "Crucifixion" ascribed in the catalogue to Giotto, but given by modern expertise to Lorenzo Monaco, who lived about 1400 and contributed to the young fifteenth century a spirit in which refinement and intensity of feeling united. Passion and ecstasy are controlled not by rigid formulae but by a natural dignity of temper reflected in the restraint of the gestures and in the fine balance of the compositional masses.

Of the fifteenth century pictures none so vigorously claims attention as that given to the Florentine, Pollaiuolo, an attribution made in the catalogue and sustained by modern scholarship. The subject is "Hercules Killing Nessus," one that affords ample opportunity for the artist to show his extraordinary anatomical knowledge and his profound interest in the reactions of muscles in motion. Hercules is seen shooting his poisoned arrow at the Centaur, who is bearing away Dejanira, the wife of Hercules, across the stream. The beautiful play of line in the woman's figure under her thin draperies is not less stimulating than in a Botticelli nymph, and in the figure of Hercules a dynamic energy communicates the sense of enhanced vitality and physical force. The episode is placed in the Florentine environment, the background city is Florence, the river is the turbulent and yellow Arno, rushing through its fertile valley.

Pollaiuolo's artistic successor, Signorelli, was also capable of conveying the sense of physical organization and energy, but he is represented in the Jarves collection by a little "Adoration of the Magi," conspicuous chiefly on account of its jeweled color and the fine state of preservation in which it still is found.

In a wholly different mood is the noble Madonna by Gentile da Fabriano, warm and rich in color and faintly quissical in expression, with a humor that enlivens the statleiness of the composition. This picture is a rare example of bad and good luck in restoration. Once disfigured by repainting, it was later brought back to brilliancy with no slight skill, and is now a moving piece of color.

There are some legends by Sassetta, the sprightly story teller of the Sienese School, at once naïve and humorous, and there is an "Adoration of the Magi" by his pupil, Sano di Pietro, in which the procession of figures is draped like a garland against the landscape background. The black curves beautifully echoing those of the low hills.

The collection is fortunate in possessing several of the panels painted for bridal chests, in which the fifteenth century was rich. These panels, when painted by competent artists, are marvels of dainty invention and gay, charming color. Perhaps the most entertaining in the present group is a vivacious account of a tournament in the Piazza Santa Croce at Florence. Along the side of the square opposite the spectators the windows of the palaces are open and hung with rich carpets and tapestries. Ladies, elaborately dressed, are looking down from the windows on the jousting below, the knights and judges filling the middle distance. In the foreground is a board fence. Boys and men are standing on benches to look over it, or else are peering through chinks and holes. The animation of the scene, the quick observation and witty statement, bring it close to modern feeling, but the elegance of the draughtsmanship and design place it definitely back in a century enamored of technical felicities.

The sixteenth century is represented only by mediocre examples, if we except the "Lady with a Rabbit," formerly given to Francia and now transferred to Piero di Cosimo. A fair landscape of blue hills and blue water forms the background for a head almost ruddy in color. Concerning it Mr. Mather says: "It was probably painted about 1505, when all Florence was talking of Leonardo's Mona Lisa. If it lacks the glamour and complete mastery of its famous prototype, it is none the less a very fine picture. It would grace any gallery, and if it were in a European museum it would be world famous." Its particular charm lies in the rich humanity of the expression, as far as possible from the withdrawn and cryptic smile of the Lisa, yet with a sensitive and gracious sympathy in eyes and lips that place it psychologically in the same rank with Leonardo's masterpiece.

There is still another sixteenth century painting in the collection that may and may not be a masterpiece. At present it is a Venetian composition, dulled and vulgarized by overpainting, a version of the "Presentation in the Temple." Certain critics, Mr. Mather among them, are inclined to regard the work as a deeply injured masterpiece that will reveal its beauty when cleaned of smudgings. The name of Giorgione has even been hinted. Improbable as this possible authorship seems, even an improbability of such heroic cast is worthy of test, especially as the picture in its present condition is quite unrewarding.

These are merely fragments of a singularly integral whole. The New Haven gallery is pervaded by the bland and lovely spirit that is Italy, the soft idealism that has faded from modern art. The experts are by no means done with it, but whatever the ultimate attributions, the student of art will find here aesthetic values that all may recognize, and while one may covet for the larger museums some of the historically important examples, it is on the whole best that the collection should exist where it is, on the threshold of a great university, an introduction to the art life of many generations. No pains should be spared to preserve the individual pictures, and it is also permitted to hope that an adequate and fully illustrated catalogue may soon be forthcoming.

Portrait by Piero di Cosino. (In the Jarves Collection at New Haven.)

Portrait of Child by Robert Henri. (In Exhibition for the Benefit of the War Sufferers at the Pierto Studios.)

Activities of the Art in Trades Club.

Of one thing we are all quite certain, that this is the moment for the establishment of an American style in decoration and an American system of collaboration between designers and manufacturers. One danger, however, should be guarded against with all possible vigilance, the danger of self-satisfaction. Because we have a great opportunity it does not follow that we can meet it as well as some of our former competitors could have met it. Nothing is done in a moment, and the period of our preparation has been brief. It is of the greatest importance that we make our American style as rich in varied influences and as strong in personal direction as possible, since creating an art that shall express the life of the people means for us creating an art that shall express the life of many peoples gathered under one flag. The problem is not, of course, one that can be solved by rule. The life itself must develop the art as in past periods and other countries. But we can create favorable conditions and set such art as we have free from hampering prejudices and restraints. For that purpose it is necessary that there should be constant and intelligent intercourse between all the people concerned with products into which art enters.

The Art in Trades Club is an organization that already has done a good deal to further this intercourse, and especially to broaden the field of specialists. It has helped to teach the carpet man something about wall papers and the furniture man something about carpets, and all something about the fundamental principles of art and the way in which these have been applied to the art of the past. The object of the club, as stated in its constitution, is "To bring into association men engaged in or interested in the arts and art trades for mutual advancement and study; to study the principles of art as applied to trades connected with the decoration and furnishing of buildings; to harmonize commercial activity with the growing art tendencies of the present time; to foster feeling and taste for art expression in general, and to strengthen the natural bond between those thus allied by fellowship and a community of interests." The club was formed six or seven years ago, and its plan originated with one hundred of the graduates of a course of instruction in house furnishing and decorating in the Young Men's Christian Association. The lectures given before the club have been by specialists in different fields, and in connection with them visits have been made to museum and private collections, as well as to factories, shops, and looms. In a general way the lectures have been divided between painters, sculptors or designers, and practical men engaged in the trades. They are addressed to an audience that can do more than any other one class to influence public taste and to pave the way for American styles. It is natural for a conservative business man to be timid concerning this odd thing "style." It is easy to make people laugh at an old joke and to make them buy a pattern only slightly different from that sold sixty years ago. It is easy to explain the virtues of a well-established style and difficult to impress them with the characteristics of a new thing. New things, moreover, stand alone until there are enough of them to make an ensemble. New American never will be happy in the same room with old Italian or new German with old French.

The logical way to create a new style would be to create a new architecture, and then decorations and furnishings to fit it, but even in a comparatively young country that sort of thing rarely happens. It is simpler to work from within out. It is probable that the new American style will be achieved by a more or less gradual process of evolution and adaptation, and the more life that can be put into it by free discussion and stimulating argument on the part of those commercially involved the better. One point, however, must never be forgotten if our designers are to make a place for themselves in the history of industrial art. The design must suit the public. A design of Scandinavian type could not live in the atmosphere of the Argentine Republic. A genuine artist will, of course, turn this restriction into opportunity and find his account readily in the exercise of his insight and judgment. And the better trained he is in psychology the better chance he will have for success in modern competition. The mind that has learned the value of research and critical analysis will grasp more quickly than the untrained mind the secrets of aesthetic appeal. For this reason some of the more ambitious friends of industrial art are convinced that a general education carried as far as possible before vocational training sets in is essential to a designer who wants to make more than merely a superior workman of himself. There must be, however, a great many plain workmen, a great many salesmen who know what they are selling, a great many buyers who know what they are buying, before the general public can be led into righteous ways of furnishing their homes, planting their dooryards, building their homes, modeling their city. Everything that helps any one to understand something about good design is worth while, and especially worth while is the instruction that helps toward appreciation of the vital principle in art and leads away from crass imitation of old things. "The old in the new" should be the motto of the American designer. He is not himself new enough to start a style, nor has any one been since the delving of Adam. As a country we are all compact of ancient inherited forms of doing things, and the most original artist will be he who unwinds the thread of life in these old forms and weaves it into patterns suited to his special public.

Essays in Pure Color at the Daniel Gallery—Dr. Valentiner Writes on the Work of Michelangelo.

unites it to a movement that is specifically that of today. Seen in pictures of this organic beauty, one learns to understand the austere appeal of the younger school and to enjoy its harsh veritles.

Exhibition of the Keramic Society of Greater New York.

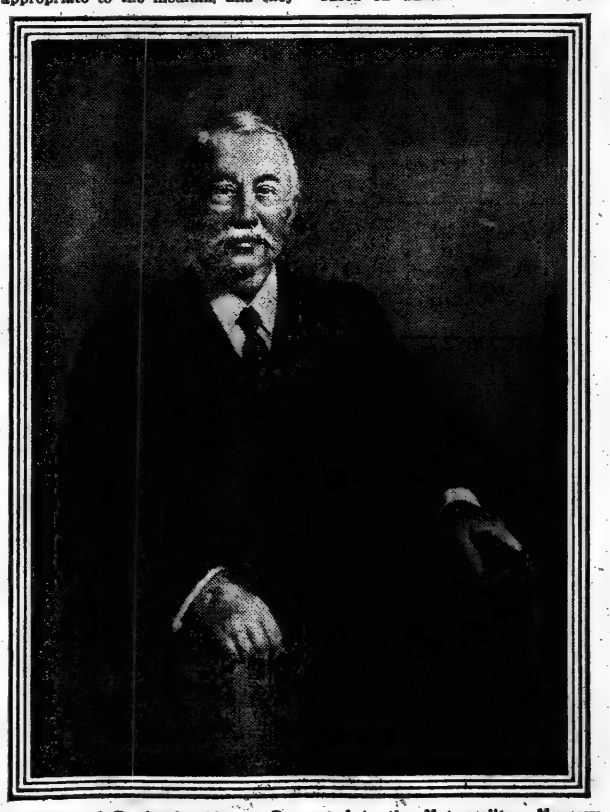
The Keramic Society of Greater New York will open an exhibition of the work of its members at the Hotel McAlpin on Nov. 9. A large variety of decorated porcelain will be shown, with special attention paid to china in designs suitable to period furnishings, a decidedly new feature in modern keramic work. In addition to table china there will be pieces for bedrooms, libraries, and porches, and the objects will include lamps and tiles. The exhibition will be shown in a setting provided by the hand-woven fabrics of the Mountain Community, and the efforts of the society to meet modern needs in many directions formerly ignored will be fully demonstrated. The Vice President, Mrs. Elling, has offered a prize of $100 for the best bowl design.

Millet at the Public Library.

The Chief of the Prints Division in the New York Public Library announces an exhibition in honor of Jean François Millet, the centenary of whose birth occurred on the 4th of October. A number of cases in the Stuart Gallery, in the main building, at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street, are filled with the etchings of Millet, the woodcuts executed by his two brothers after his designs, the four large lithographs of American Indian life by Charles Bodmer, for which Millet, his friend and neighbor, drew the figures, and the usual prints and books concerned with the artist. Nearly all the material belongs to the Avery collection. "It always gives a deep, serious pleasure," Mr. Weitenkampf writes, "to come back to these plates of Millet, these visions of the French peasant, simple and large in styles, and rendered in a big, classic spirit. These 'Gleaners,' 'Diggers,' the 'Shepherdess,' the unforgettable 'Peasant with a Wheelbarrow'—they are not merely illustrations of French rural life, but typical figures of the gleaner, the digger, the sower, in which the significance such actions have for us is summarized with a noteworthy force of expression. The deep feeling that lies behind these works is contagious and compelling, and the apparent simplicity of expression becomes evidently subtle if we regard the harmonious flow of line in such a composition as 'The Gleaners.' Technique, always a means with Millet, and not an end, is also always intelligently fitted to his medium. So, also, in his woodcuts, bold in execution, done in a few lines, with kinship to the work of the men of the sixteenth century. His art responds to no call of fad or fashion. Its interest is perennial, because it is based on human ideals and sympathies that are part of our heritage and of our future hopes."

At the Daniel Gallery.

Some brilliant paintings in watercolor by Charles Demuth are at the Daniel Galleries until Nov. 4. They show the charming qualities of pure color and vivacious handling that are appropriate to the medium, and they also show the stripped-to-the-bone construction of the modern school. These fresh, vigorous landscapes; farms seen from Mount Gilboa, studies of trees and dunes, views of a bay, are not so different in the manner of using the pigment from the good watercolor paintings of an earlier time; but in the significance of the forms, the intense simplification of the design so that its principal lines stand forth like the muscles of a well-trained athlete, the use of realistic material without the slightest obtrusion of its representative character, the fine emotional rhythms, we get the very flavor of modernity. Mr. Demuth has not only learned the idiom of his time, he has assimilated its thought. He expresses personal freedom in a highly personal fashion, yet the heroines of his work



Portrait of Benjamin Altman Presented to the Metropolitan Museum by the Executors of the Altman Estate. The Portrait Was Painted by Ellen Emmet Rand from the Only Known Photograph of Mr. Altman in Existence.

Paintings at the Macbeth Galleries.

A group of very good paintings by very well known artists constitutes the first exhibition of the season at the Macbeth Galleries. "Interwoven," by Arthur Davies, is an affirmation of that painter's belief in formal significance freed from representation. All that is moving in the work is so on account of the all-pervading rhythm. The forms are derived from nature, however, and the realism of the flesh-like modeling, the intense humanity of the individual figures, will interest those who are repelled by the abstract character of the design.

Charles W. Hawthorne's "Annunciation" is a remembered primitive as far as emotion goes. Many a stiff little Flemish virgin was less a creature of flesh and blood than this girl with a lily stem and a half-acknowledged halo. But if the Fleming was occasionally uncertain about his proportions, he never was uncertain on the question of his religious sentiment. It is a forced and unconvincing suggestiveness that is thrust upon this pretty paralyzed child, who stands as though she never would move again, and who has nevertheless a haunting look of youth and life. One likes better Frieseke's indolent lady in her garden chair, a French chair and a French garden, with lilies and bluebell flowers. The artist catches the charm of that civilized out-of-doors so possible in Europe, which next year we must set ourselves to emulate in our own country.

Mr. Sartain's "Along the Stream" is a pleasant reminder that one need not lose delicacy of vision with time. He is no longer a young man, but he remains a young painter. And he was very clever about getting his luggage out of Paris. Other people were paying 30 and 40 francs for men and wagons, the supply falling short of the sudden sharp demand, but Mr. Sartain, they say, went around the corner and picked up a pushcart man who was glad to trundle everything to the station for a commonplace sum.

Other pictures in the collection are Robert E. Spencer's "Along the Creek," gray color hatched into vibration; Alfen Weir's lovely "Summertime," Childe Hassam's "In the Old House," Emil Carlsen's "In Venice," and Gifford Beal's "The Fountain." Elliott Daingerfield's "The Lone Cypress," Charles H. Davis's "Summer Morning," Ben Foster's "Afternoon in the Pines," Ivan Olinsky's "The Statuette," Henry Ranger's "Moonlight—Noank," Chauncey F. Ryder's "The Stone Sledge," "Winter Glow" by Gardner Symons, and "Down the Valley" by Frederick Ballard Williams. The exhibition lasts until Nov. 16.

Dr. Valentiner's Book on Michelangelo.

Seldom in the history of expertise do we find united in one mind an intense response to human values and the power of detached and scrupulous analysis. Dr. Valentiner, in his book on Michelangelo, (published by Frederic Fairchild Sherman, New York,) shows that he can claim both qualities, each in a highly developed form. No one has made the mysterious giant of the renaissance live for us in the same degree. By restraining the trivial exercise of fancy where only the slightest possible support is given by recorded facts, and letting the higher faculty of imagination connect Michelangelo with the human race and its common characteristics, the author has brought him as close to us as may be in the case of a personality so aloof.

It is in the later years that men speak most directly of their personal standpoint, therefore this essay has to do with the artist's late works, the "Pieta" at Viterbo, sketches made for his two great friends, Vittoria Colonna and Tommaso Cavalieri, the dome of St. Peter's, designed in his eightieth year; the "Pieta" in the Cathedral at Florence, and others.

In all these the author finds the deepened sense of humanity, the simplified emotional quality for which he looks in the later works of all great masters. "One is perhaps tempted," he says, "to assume the existence of a more subtle and complicated spirituality in the late works of the great masters. In reality the exact opposite is the case, and these works, which seem rather to belong to a more primitive era of culture than to the highest sphere of art, are characterized by a singular simplicity and directness of expression. Subtlety is not the ultimate ideal of the great masters, although it may be a midstation of their development. Lyrically gifted men of lesser genius, whose work appeals to a small circle of the ultra-cultured, may confine themselves to the delineation of subtleties, of those intermediate states of the soul which are in reality impermanent and in the long run wearisome. The allegiance of the really great artist returns ultimately to the portrayal of those simple and powerful emotions whose appeal is universal."

Michelangelo is thus portrayed in the long, late years of his life, warmer in feeling with a deeper understanding of his fellow-creatures than he had in youth, emotionally simplified, yet fitted by his sustained and arduous training to undertake the most technically complicated tasks. He followed the habit of many men of genius in carrying easily through in his age an essay of great difficulty daringly attempted in his youth; in his case the production, of a mass of intertwining figures in free or almost free sculpture. It is, however, the dome of St. Peter's that is the noble crown of the master's labor. His hand trembled, but his mind was clear and soared to a height at which his passionate efforts toward self-expression were ennobled by his complete command of the scientific problems involved.

Dr. Valentiner adds to our impression of Michelangelo a vital human element by the stress he lays upon the artist's friendship with Vittoria Colonna, a friendship formed when he was 63 years old and she 46. To her we owe the sentence addressed to the artist: "Those who know your works know but your lesser part," and Dr. Valentiner rehearses the known incidents of her cordial intercourse with this shy and taciturn nature in a vein of appreciation that emphasizes the importance of her tact and understanding to the work done by him after he knew her. The fact that we see in him as much through his eager gratitude for sympathy as through his unsocial irascibility and gloom the undisciplined temper of a child only adds to our wonder at the mighty disciplne he exercised over his intelligence and the hand obeying it.

THE LITTLE GALLERY
15-17 East 40th St.
FIFTH FLOOR
SPECIAL EXHIBITION OF RECENT SILVERWARE BY GEORGE C. GEBELEIN. TABLE-SILVER, TEA SETS, PORRINGERS, PUNCH BOWLS, INDIVIDUAL IN DESIGN AND UNEXCELLED IN WORKMANSHIP. REPLICAS OF HISTORIC PIECES FOR MUSEUMS.
November 2d to 14th

IMPRESSIONS OF THE PASSING SHOW

THE COMING OF THE ALLY

A "SCRAP" OF PAPER.

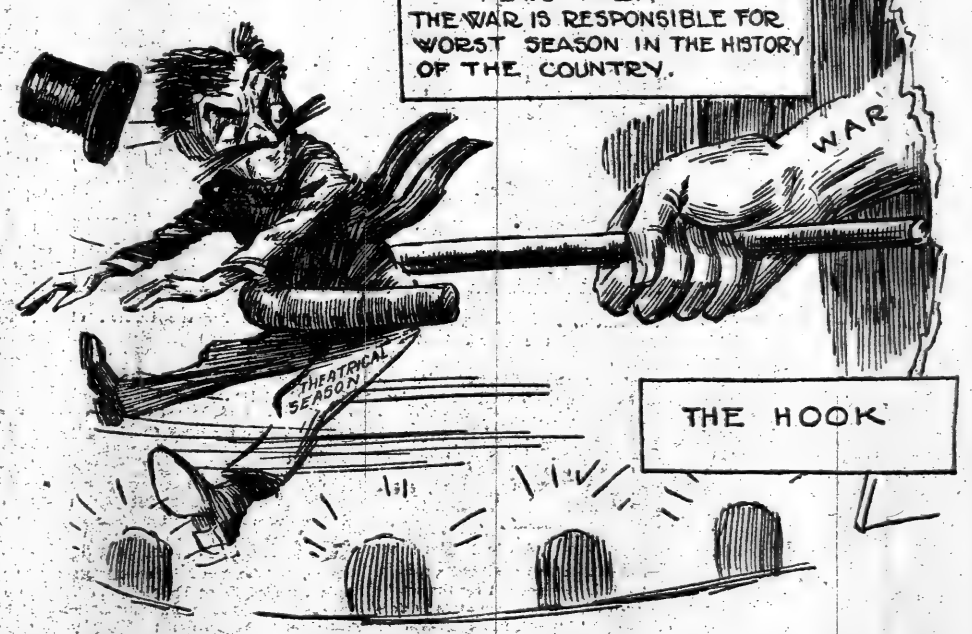
THE ROMEOS AND JULIET

JULIET:- (AFTER THE SERANADE) COME BACK TUESDAY FOR YOUR ANSWER BOYS".

HALLOWE'EN

MEXICO:- ITS NO USE, I CAN'T GET HOLD OF IT!

NEWS ITEM
THE WAR IS RESPONSIBLE FOR WORST SEASON IN THE HISTORY OF THE COUNTRY.



THE HOOK

The New York Times
Review of Books

LITERARY SECTION OF THE NEW YORK TIMES

SECTION SIX | NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 1, 1914 | 12 PAGES

PARTY GOVERNMENT

Prof. W. M. Sloane Traces Development of Certain Features in the Political System of the United States

PARTY GOVERNMENT IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. By William Milligan Sloane, Ruth Law Professor of History in Columbia University. New York and London: Harper & Brothers. $1.

IN the academic year 1912-13 Prof. William M. Sloane of Columbia University delivered a series of lectures in German at the Universities of Berlin and Munich, which were published in Leipsic. These, with some elaboration and addition, are now published by the Harpers under the title of "Party Government in the United States of America." The lectures must have been intensely interesting to the university audiences of Munich and Berlin, delivered with Prof. Sloane's characteristic animation, in German as idiomatic as his native tongue and with nice appreciation of the facts and comment that especially would appeal, in a most novel subject, to intelligent and curious students. For the professor holds, with much justice, that American parties "resemble no others in any substantive way, but are indigenous to American soil." For one thing they are not and never, so far, have been revolutionary. They have fought fiercely over the interpretation of the Constitution; none of them has undertaken to change the form of Government. Even when, in 1860, the extreme wing of the Democrats of the South brought about the secession of ten slave States, they proceeded to set up a Federal Union, under a Constitution exactly like that they had tried to leave, except as to slavery. Then by war they were subdued and the States brought back into the Union the old political party life was resumed, and nothing in the framework of the national system was radically changed. That is a view of our party activity that does in fact resemble no other to which Europe is accustomed.

Prof. Sloane lays stress on the fact that the American party system did not spring directly from democracy, for the very good reason that at first, and for more than a generation from the start, our Government was not in reality democratic in the sense in which that term is now employed. It was at its origin a modified aristocracy based, to a certain extent, on family, to a greater extent on wealth and ability, a fluctuating aristocracy open from below and with slight recognition of heredity, but practically exclusive for the time, and with a fairly definite and effective class feeling animating its members. This feeling was expressed and enforced for more than a half century after independence in the restriction of the suffrage. The revolution was led, the Constitution was made, the Government for a full generation was managed by this class. Nearly all the most striking features of the Constitution—most of them have lapsed or have been diverted in practice from their purpose—were directed to preventing the growth of democracy, especially the indirect election of the Executive and of the Senate.

Party divisions began to show themselves very early, were marked in Washington's second Administration, and were violent at the close of John Adams's single term. They were as yet based on differences between the members of the aristocracy, but they followed a line of cleavage that persisted when the suffrage was extended in many new States toward the close of the first third of the nineteenth century. The general issue was that of broad, or "loose," construction, as Prof. Sloane calls it, and strict construction of the Constitution. But he makes it very clear that the Americans of that day, like their ancestors in England and their successors today, are apt to make their theories fit their desires and needs and never think of sacrificing their needs or desires to consistency. Prof. Sloane traces in a most interesting way the varying processes by which the actual working of the Constitution was brought about by a steadily broadening interpretation, alternately supported or resisted by each of the main parties. Throughout our history, though often in great confusion and with infinite difficulty, the persisting and controlling purposes of the nation have, in Carlyle's happy phrase, "got themselves" accomplished. One generation after another has made its contribution to the vast result, often with a curiously vague consciousness of what it was trying to do and a still more vague notion of what actually it was doing. Now and again the people have done what certainly never was, or could have been, intended in the Constitution, from the purchase of Louisiana to the conquest and purchase of the Philippines. Equally they have refused to do what the Constitution intended that they must do, when, every four years, they choose a President by direct universal suffrage and not by the choice of uninstructed electors.

Two broad facts stand out in the story of this mighty evolution. One the steady spread of the democratic principle in the rapid extension of the suffrage until now it embraces practically all male adults—and many women; the other the unprecedented development of transportation and communication by which the operation of democracy has been made possible. To both of these Prof. Sloane gives adequate attention. A nearly equally important process he traces—that of the gradual change from the ideas and methods of representative to those of delegated government. It is in this portion of his volume that he shows most plainly his gifts as a philosophic historian and observer.

The professor is not a pessimist or, though acutely critical, a carping critic. He recognizes that party government in the United States is pretty much what the people of the United States striving more or less intelligently have made it, and that it cannot radically be changed in any short time. He recognizes also that it has wrought substantial service which is too generally ignored. For one thing, it has disciplined the great mass of ordinary men, it has induced or compelled them to act in unison—to do "team work"—while it has given scope and aim to their activities as to public affairs. Party machines have been corrupt or arbitrary and tyrannic, but when they have gone too far in that direction they have been checked or crushed. The party system, by the very qualities that, in excess, have led to abuse and evil, has worked much good. It has been immensely charged with energy, and in this country of rapid change great work demands extraordinary energy. Especially the party system has aided in the assimilation of the immigrants and their immediate descendants. It has given them an active interest, however narrow or misguided, in civic affairs. More than any one force the sympathetic current of partisanship has fostered and developed the sense of nationality, without which our Federal Republic would have dissolved in hopeless confusion and conflict.

Prof. Sloane takes a view by no means gloomy even of the working of parties in our cities. He recognizes the shortcomings and the evils, but he compares the results generally favorably with those attained in the cities of Europe where the difficulties are far less. Those are old, homogeneous, governed by tradition, possessed of a civic spirit, within wide limits independent. Ours are new, swiftly growing, with a motley and shifting population, subject to constant interference from without. Yet our "victories are noteworthy. The public order, safety to life, limb, and property are just as completely safeguarded, while the numbers of the police are relatively much less. The social evil is proportionately less. * * * The public health and the death rate, the water supply and the sewage distribution, the park systems, all compare favorably." And the prospect is cheering for much better things.

LATEST WORKS OF FICTION

Novels by H. G. Wells, Mary Johnston, Alice Hegan Rice, Horace A. Vachell, the Williamsons, and Others

THE WIFE OF SIR ISAAC HARMAN. By H. G. Wells. New York: The Macmillan Company.

HERETOFORE Tomorrow and Today have absorbed Mr. Wells. We expect, when we read him, to be tremendously modern, or to "dip into the future to see the Vision of the World," to paraphrase a bit. It is singular, then, to find oneself flung back into the past in his latest novel, to be busy thrashing out questions no longer being asked, to be moving in a Yesterday that already seems a generation back.

For this book was naturally written before the outbreak of war, and it is concerned with those thoughts and actions, storms and rebellions then obsessing most of England. It is a story of the woman's revolt, and there is even one window broken—though not precisely in the cause of suffrage. None the less that window is broken as a sign that the day of the masters is over, and it brings Lady Harman some shadowy concessions, a kind of phantom freedom. For Mr. Wells makes it pretty clear that as matters now stand between men and women, and between both and ideas, no real freedom is at present possible.

The book is about marriage, and its primary purpose is to show that so long as marriage is regarded as in any sense a thing of ownership, whether by the man of the woman, as it happens in the story itself, or by the woman of the man, or even by both of one another, just so long marriage is based on a degraded idea, and must partake of that degradation. The slave idea of marriage must be eliminated, if there is to be any marriage worth the name. Given a man like Sir Isaac, the man who grasps and holds, who wishes to dominate the very thoughts, the very solitude, of his wife, a man to whom ownership is the first essential, and the woman, whether she knows it or not, is a prisoner in a prison far more fatal and desperate than that of stone and iron scorned by Lovelace. It is in such a situation that we discover Lady Harman, at about the time when she herself becomes aware of it. And it is her efforts to escape from this prison, without relinquishing her accepted duties as a wife, that make the story. Lady Harman, in fact, is in a struggle to save her soul alive, and it is this struggle we watch.

It is a struggle that grips one, all the more because Lady Harman is a woman of the gentlest and most unselfish spirit, a creature unbreakable, to be sure, but only because of her fineness.

With a subtlety, and with a deep insight into the human heart, gifts we are right to expect in Mr. Wells, but which are present only in the great novelist, we are made to realise a singular fact. It is this: That behind and animating the love Sir Isaac bears his wife is hate, and behind her hate of him is love. Superficially it is Sir Isaac who is the lover, who wants his wife near him, who is passionately jealous of her affection, who showers gifts upon her, who cries at the thought of her leaving him, who is entirely content to drop all other women for her sake. Yet under it all is murder, the killing of the real Ellen, a sick rage at that individuality that cannot be crushed out, a desperate desire to beat down whatever conflicts with anything in him, be it of the basest.

And Ellen, though she shivers at this hard, ugly, absurd little man, though she recoils from him with an ever-growing horror of the flesh, is willing to help him, desires good and not evil for him, would have him happy. Not priggishly, but instinctively, because her response toward life was one of kindness, of giving, while his was of coercion, of self-seeking.

But beside the interest of the theme, this book is full of the most amusing reflections of life and character which Wells has ever indulged in. You are constantly being surprised into delicious chucklings, you find yourself responding vividly to the author's felicities in summing up a situation or a personality or a state of mind. There one of the most entertaining episodes in a very entertaining novel—they are all flesh and blood people whom it is a pleasure to meet. The book is written in a delightfully easy style, through which gleams steadily the golden thread of a kindly humor. Mr. Vachell finds this dealer in antiques and his career both amusing and appealing, and the reader is entirely in accord with him. A trip through "Quinneys'" will be found well worth the making.

LATEST WORKS OF FICTION

(Continued from Preceding Page)

A NEW FICTION SERIES

THE Bobbs-Merrill Company has entered upon the experiment of publishing complete cloth-bound novels new and copyrighted, at 50 cents each. Three volumes of this series are "A Tale of Red Roses," by George Randolph Chester; "Whitaker's Dukedom," by Edgar Jepson; "The Red Mirage," by I. A. R. Wylie.

Mr. Chester's story is one of his swiftly moving business romances with a conquering hero who sweeps all before him. But this time the hero, instead of being young, personable, and likable, is middle aged, of huge and awkward physique, and although of kindly heart, somewhat crude in his social instincts. He is head of a street railway enterprise in an unlocated small city and prime mover also in many financial games. He falls in love with the pretty daughter of one of his business associates and sends her red roses, her favorite flower, literally by the wagonload, and makes known his appreciation of her charm by giving her an automobile with one breath and a diamond necklace with the next. There is a business intrigue against him in which the girl and her father take part, but he wins finally and celebrates his triumph by carrying the girl off bodily in her wedding gown from the marriage she is about to celebrate with another man and persuading her to marry him, when presently she discovers that she really loves him after all. The tale has something of Mr. Chester's old-time dashing good humor, but it lacks much in the plausibility and the human nature that formerly marked his stories.

Mr. Jepson's novel, "Whitaker's Dukedom," is an English story growing out of that theme beloved of novelists ever since novels have been written, a physical resemblance between two people so complete that in appearance they are doubles. His poor young man, a London dealer in second-hand furniture, faces his double in a country wood, then both are struck by the lightning of a sudden thunder storm, and the other man is killed. The poor young man, finding that his double had been a Duke, cannot resist the temptation of stepping into his shoes. The story recounts his experiences as he cautiously feels his way along the blind path to ultimate success in his assumption of the dukedom.

"The Red Mirage," by I. A. R. Wylie, is a tale of the French Foreign Legion in Algiers, having a complicated plot and much incident. Part of the action takes place in London, but the greater part in North Africa—sometimes in the desert, sometimes at the headquarters of the legion. The plot is concerned with the supposed treachery of an officer of the Enclish Army years before the story opens, and with its consequences to the next generation. There is a colorful desert background for much of the action, and an exceedingly vivid portrayal of the rigorous discipline maintained by the officers of the legion.

SICILY ANN

SICILY ANN. By Fanny Heaslip Lea. Illustrated by F. Graham Cootes. New York: Harper & Brothers. $1.

As slight and soap-bubbly a story as one might find in a long search—or even as one might wish to find, Mrs. Lea's novel is also dainty and gay and mildly amusing. It is about the love affairs of a Virginia girl who visits her married sister in Honolulu, has a delightful time every day of her life, and attracts men and proposals of marriage as a saucer of syrup attracts bees. Although the author tells us that her age is "sweet and twenty," she still retains many of the characteristics of ten. Her creator did not, seemingly, think it worth while to give her much save surface manifestations of character, but these phases are treated with skill, and as far as there is anything to know about Sicily Ann the reader feels when he gets through that he knows her pretty well. She is docile and demure and has the very old Eve's facility in making the suitor of the moment believe that she is particularly interested in whatever interests him. But she is also obstinate, on occasion, and then she always gets her own way by sweetly feminine and extremely youthful methods, without regard for the consequences for herself and others in the end, also, after all the other varied suitors have been disposed of she gets the man she has really wanted to marry all the time, even if she had been shipped off to Honolulu to make her forget him. The action, after the opening chapter, all takes place in Honolulu, and there is a pretty background in bright, gay colors of the life and the amusements of Americans dwelling in the capital of that island territory.

GUY GARRICK

GUY GARRICK. By Arthur B. Reeve. New York: Hearst's International Library Company. $1.

The hero of Mr. Reeve's story of ultra-scientific detective work in the unraveling of a mysterious crime is the same Guy Garrick who has figured in several of his many previous novels of crime and its detection. He photographs the tire prints of automobiles in the roadway as he would the finger prints left on a window sill by a thief; he is on the lookout for the results of anaesthetic bullets; he recognises the signs at once when a desperate criminal has killed some one with a cartridge full of tallow instead of lead; when it is necessary he can summon aid by telephoning on a sunbeam he discovers the signs of heart disease and incipient paralysis in the handwriting of an anonymous letter; and he is able to march triumphantly straight down the trail and stage his final scene with surety and an eye to dramatic effect. It is very scientific, too that final scene, with each member of the little audience connected with a galvanometer which makes electro-cardiographs of the mental sensations and physical reactions of each one as they watch a succession of moving pictures recounting scenes much like those which have marked the stages of the development of the case. And the scientific detective's climax of evidence clinching all the rest, is the impression made by the hammer of a pistol on the shell of a cartridge. The story starts out as if it were to be concerned only with the theft of an automobile in New York City and the endeavor of the police and the detectives to catch the criminal and put a stop to the operations of [illegible]. But it quickly carries the reader into a maze of criminal plots, and it gives him an exciting time as he follows Guy Garrick through the labyrinth.

THE COPY-CAT

THE COPY-CAT, AND OTHER STORIES. By Mary E. Wilkins Freeman. Harper & Brothers.

A book by Mrs. Freeman is sure of its welcome. We have long ago learned to expect from her sympathetic portraits of New England character drawn with a touch at once firm and delicate. The dozen stories published under the title of their initial tale, "The Copy-Cat," in nowise fall below their predecessors, and in many respects follow the same lines. Among other human types as have the children, with whom Mrs. Freeman has made us familiar and who, by the bye, always and, to the comfort of the reader, but hardly in accord with things as they are by breaking through the hard, Puritanical shell of their parents or guardians; and we have the grown-ups of many types but nearly all "with a screw loose." One or two of the stories point out, as Mrs. Deland has done, the essential immorality of unselfishness carried to an extreme, and furnish not a little food for thought. All command interest, and it is needless to say, are distinguished by fine workmanship and subtle insight—though we suspect that Mrs. Freeman somewhat overaccentuates the peculiarities of the New England people she has studied and portrayed so long which is but saying that she travels in the path of Dickens rather than of Jane Austen.

THE LAST CHRISTIAN

THE LAST CHRISTIAN. By George Kibbe Turner. Frontispiece in color. New York: Hearst's International Library Company. $1.25

Mr Turner's story begins in New England some thirty years ago when, according to its narrator, there was a revival in New England village churches of sermons and talk about the most gruesome features of the old theology. The fires of hell burned again as fiercely as ever, and fear of them for her dead son was about to drive into insanity the grandmother of the little boy who listened to it all and himself joined the church at an early age to escape the terrors of which he heard. He tells the story in the first person, putting much of it into dialogue. The action moves very slowly through enough years to carry him from childhood to man's estate, and is concerned almost entirely with the slow dislodging of the

(Continued on Page Following)

PERCH OF THE DEVIL

By GERTRUDE ATHERTON

Author of "The Conqueror," etc.

Do you know Ida Compton? Mrs. Atherton's new heroine is one of the big women of American fiction. "A real creature of flesh and blood."—San Francisco Chronicle.

At all booksellers.

Through the Brazilian Wilderness

By THEODORE ROOSEVELT

Here is Colonel Roosevelt's own vivid narrative of his explorations in South America; his discovery of the famous "River of Doubt," his visits to remote tribes of naked and wholly barbarous Indians, his 500-mile journey on mule-back across the height of land between the river systems of Paraguay and the Amazon, his observations on the most brilliant and varied bird life of the South American tropics; hunting of the jaguar, the tapir, the peccary, the giant anteater, and other unusual animals of the jungle. All of this varied panorama is depicted in the author's most graphic and picturesque style, full of the joy of new adventures. The book is a permanent addition to the literature of exploration.

Profusely Illustrated. $3.50 net; postage extra.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

PERSONALITY PLUS

By EDNA FERBER

Author of "Roast Beef, Medium"

Here is the Emma McChesney of "Roast Beef, Medium" helping her son Jock begin the advertising business. It is humorous and touching.

At all booksellers

This is Marie Antoinette Riding to Her Death—

Here is history's most tragic story. Have you read what Burke wrote about the French Revolution—one of the great fascinating books that have made history?

In all the world there are only a few of these books—speeches, letters, poems, essays, biographies—that have really made history. To read these few great works systematically and intelligently is to be really well read.

What are these few great works? The free booklet mentioned below answers that question. It tells how Dr. Charles W. Eliot, from his sixty years of reading, study, and teaching, has chosen the few really worth-while books out of the thousands of useless ones, how he arranged them as

The Harvard Classics

The Five-Foot Shelf of Books

Now yours for only a few cents a day

One hundred thousand business men are using the pleasant, helpful reading courses therein laid out. They are reading the great histories, seeing the great plays, hearing the great orations, meeting the great men of history.

A FREE BOOKLET FOR YOU

We want to send you by mail a "Guide Booklet to Books," absolutely FREE. It is the most wonderful little booklet of its kind ever written; it shows how to select a library without waste or worry—what few books are most worth while; it contains the best advice to you of the best-read man of his day.

The booklet was printed to give away; your copy is wrapped up and ready to mail; no obligation; merely clip this coupon NOW.

P. F. Collier & Son, 416 W. 13th Street, New York City.

Without any obligation whatever to me, please send me a copy of the free "Guide Booklet to Books," with the story of the Five-Foot Shelf. N.Y.T. 11-1

Name .....

Post. Address .....

City..... State.....

P. F. Collier & Son, Publishers of Good Books

is that word "huffiness," for instance, in the following observation. It is precisely the word you have often vaguely clutched after to fit a similar case:

Lady Harman's mother treated religion with a reverence that was almost indistinguishable from huffiness. She never named the Deity and she did not like the mention of His name. * * * She put God among the objectionable topics—albeit a sublime one.

Then there's Gobbin, "a man with a lot of hair and that sort of loose tie that so often seems to be less of a tie than a detachment from all decent restraints." And there's Snagsby, the butler at the Harmans, who, "like most well-trained English servants, dropped as many h's as he could when conversing with his superiors * * * just as he was always careful to wear a slightly misfitting dress coat and to fold his trousers so that they creased at the side and had a wide, flat effect in front.

But it is with Lady Beach-Mandarin that Mr. Wells has his most joyous moments. Lady Beach-Mandarin "was almost as much to meet as one can meet in a single human being, a broad, abundant, billowing personality with a taste for brims, streamers, pennants, panniers, loose sleeves, sweeping gestures, top notes and the like that made her altogether less like a woman than an occasion for public rejoicing." Whenever we meet her she contributes to our delight and admiration. And there are others, many of them, all indicated and commented upon and developed with a sureness contained in the least number of effective words that yet are never strained. Mr. Wells's style has escaped from its faults in this book, and has found a new excellence—fits his thought with a perfection not hitherto achieved.

One can be thankful that the book was finished before the war broke out, since it is unlikely that there will be another like it. The England of Lady Harman is now a past phase, and Mr. Wells's next book will reflect the new England, whatever it may be. To be, sure, the larger human relationships on which the story is based will remain to engage our thought and emotion, but the special social aspects into which these are reflected will suffer modifications—modifications that must necessarily deeply affect so sensitive a mind as Wells possesses. The book is the most complete and successful of the group to which it belongs, as it is the last, and I repeat that we must be thankful that it was not crowded out of existence by the events so soon to follow upon its fortunate completion.

HILDEGARDE HAWTHORNE.

THE WITCH

THE WITCH. By Mary Johnston. Houghton Mifflin Company. $1.40.

READERS who raved over the endearing young charms of "To Have and to Hold" ten or fifteen years ago may not care for its author's latest effort—unless, indeed, they happen to have matured considerably in the meantime. For while "The Witch" is not lacking in interest, heart and other, it is a novel so full of the vital things of life, and so pared of its superfluities, that it requires a certain education in living properly to appreciate it.

In every tale that is not merely a moving picture, above and beyond the characters looms a larger hero, or more often heroine; an abstraction, but one that dominates and animates the whole. In "The Witch," this great figure is Truth. The dark shadow of witchcraft delusion and persecution in the England of James I. furnishes the background for an uncommon love story. There are a hero and heroine according to the flesh, fine up-standing creatures, both of them, who love each other with a frank sincerity and directness. But the great love and devotion of each is to Truth. They do not discuss this love with elaborate phrases, they live it. They are accused by the terrible witch-hunting preacher who "burned like a flame, a wind-tossed flame, burning blue." They feel the tide of superstition swelling about them:

Out of the deep veins, out of the elder world, old and gross superstitions had been whistled up. It had not far to come; the elder world was close of kin. On the climbing road of the human mind the scenery of the lower slopes began to glow.

They escape, Fate again claims them; to those less firm in the faith, Truth herself might have seemed to laugh. But through it all the words of Aderhold to Joan Heron sound:

I have seen brave men and women, but I have seen none braver than you, Joan. Life is very great. There are in it threads of all colors and every time that is, and if happiness is not stable, neither is misery. You are brave—be brave enough to be happy.

And happy they are, to the doors of prison and beyond. For the message of the book is that real and permanent happiness can be found only in freedom of the spirit; any other kind is a candle flame in tempest. Aderhold and his Joan were great lovers; they loved truth in each other, they followed it together, and though its pursuit seemed visibly to separate them, they themselves felt that it united them instead, eternally and indissolubly. People as brave as they were could not help being happy.

Miss Johnston is not at her best when she writes of superficialities, whether historical, as in "To Have and to Hold," or social, as in "Hagar." Neither is she altogether at home in the presence of masses of detail, unsoftened and unilluminated by distance, as in her stories of the civil war. But place her at grips with more vital things, things essentially of the spirit, and "The Witch" shows what she can do.

THE HONORABLE PERCIVAL

THE HONORABLE PERCIVAL. By Alice Hegan Rice. New York: The Century Company. $1.

MRS. WIGGS of the immortal cabbage patch and Lovey Mary, the adorable, have a new companion. No, it is not the Honorable Percival. It is the heroine of the novel named after that ornament of the British aristocracy, and Bobby is her name.

She was not christened Bobby, perhaps she never was christened at all. But Roberta was too formal for the khaki-clad young woman, who, astride a bronco, raced with the train across Wyoming, her black hair flying behind her in thick scarlet-ribboned plaits, Bobby suited her best.

Now, fortunately for Mrs. Alice Hegan Rice's readers, the Honorable Percival Hascombe happened to be on that train. He had been jilted by Lady Hortense Vevay, and was solacing his sad heart with an inspection of barbarous America. He was, in Mrs. Rice's delightful phrase, a convalescent from love. And Bobby, when she saw him surveying the landscape through his monocle from the platform of the observation car, flirted with him.

It is a terrible thing to make this statement about a heroine. But she did flirt with him, most outrageously. She actually blew him an audacious kiss from her finger-tips! Of course, she was on her bronco and he was on his train, speeding away from Wyoming and Bobby. Still, nobody had ever before flirted with the Honorable Percival.

Well, the Honorable Percival was gratified, and considered the incident closed. But, to his consternation, on the first day out on his trip from "the States" to Hongkong, he found his deck chair filled with a blue and lavender steamer coat. And this steamer coat was filled with Bobby!

The Honorable Percival was annoyed. He adjusted his monocle, and endeavored to snub Bobby. But it is difficult even for British aristocrats to snub distractingly pretty young girls from Wyoming. Instead, Bobby snubbed the Honorable Percival. Then she made him fall in love with her. Then she snubbed him again. Then she forgave him. Then she—

But it would not be fair to readers of Mrs. Rice's delectable chronicle to tell what Bobby finally did to the Honorable Percival. There were romantic complications—Bobby was the daughter of the captain of the vessel, and he disliked Englishmen, especially Englishmen with monocles. Also, there was a bronzed, bronco-riding lover back in Wyoming. And Bobby's idea of the situation was different from that of the Honorable Percival.

The end of the romance is absolutely unexpected, but convincingly natural. Unlike most close students of character, Mrs. Rice knows how to construct a good plot and in "The Honorable Percival" she uses that knowledge to advantage.

It seems strange to call so entertainingly whimsical a writer a close student of character. Yet characterization is her greatest power. Earnest young realists labor through page after page of minute psychological and physiological description, and in the end they fail utterly to create people as genuinely human as this over-bred young Englishman and this primitive and captivating young Western girl.

Mrs. Rice seems in this story to write merely for the joy of writing. She may rest assured that the joy is contagious. It is not likely that she intended to typify in Bobby the simplicity, freedom, and spirit of Western America and in the Honorable Percival the true and courageous, but caste-ridden and highly sophisticated, manhood of England. Nevertheless she has done this—she has accurately symbolised two civilizations, has conducted a successful experiment in what may be called symbolic psychology. But—what is more important—she has told a wholesome, vivacious, and thoroughly amusing story.

THE OPEN DOOR

THE OPEN DOOR. By Richardson Wright. McBride, Nast & Co. $1.35 net.

WHATEVER fault may be found with this, Mr. Wright's first novel, it is very improbable that any one will call it commonplace. Not because its central idea is very new, but because it is so very, very old that it is one which our modern world has almost if not quite forgotten. "It sounds like a chapter out of the life of some mediæval saint," declares one of the principal characters. "It doesn't fit in at all with this year of 1913." Kitty Flint herself insists that this is only because "nowadays the world doesn't like to speak of atonement or reparation or expiation," but it can very safely be asserted that many readers will deny the truth of her dictum, believing that it is merely her particular method of expiation which has become obsolete, and this because better ones have been found.

For Kitty Flint, feeling that through her act "the divine scheme of things had been broken down" and that it was therefore her "duty to build it up again," spent the best years of her life "convalescing spiritually" behind the closed shutters of the house whose threshold she never crossed—the house with "The Open Door." In what seemed to the neighbors a strange contradiction, the shutters of "Miss Kitty's" house were never opened, and the door was left on the latch every day and night in the year save one; on Christmas Day Miss Kitty backed her door. When the novel begins, Kitty Flint has been for fourteen years a voluntary prisoner in the house which her many times great grandfather built, and from which the Philadelphia suburb of Thursley, the scene of the story, took its name. Naturally, such extraordinary conduct as hers could not pass unnoticed or uncriticised, especially in the town in which she had spent most of her life, and many of whose inhabitants still remembered her as a beautiful young girl, riding astride her cob in a divided skirt, to the horror of all and sundry. So her opposite neighbors, Mrs. Colston, wife of the proprietor of "Colston's Chronic Cold Cure," those two virtuous but somewhat acid maiden ladies, the Misses Alethea and Sabrina Meigs, and stupid, good-natured Mrs. Batteraby, started a campaign against the closed shutters—which in their opinion were immoral—a campaign whose results form quite an important part of the plot. This little coterie of curiosity-racked females provides the book with some very amusing pages; Mr. Wright has drawn them well, and never once permitted his sketches to degenerate into caricatures, not even when they lead Thursley into the throes of that farce for all things Colonial which ended so uproariously at the meeting of the Thursley Historical Society in the auditorium of Columbia Institute.

These four gossips are by no means the only well portrayed characters in the book. Hugh Lincoln, the lonely little boy to whom Miss Kitty "was a mother," Mr. Josephus Octavius Flagg—nick-named by Hugh "Og, King of Bashan"—Sallie Pringle, Mr. Adams and Officer Taylor and several others are all pleasant, human people whom we are glad to know. And Kitty Flint, the young-old woman, is adored by every one of them, and not merely by them, either, for hers was "that sort of soul which, like some philosopher's stone of the spirit, reduced all manner of men and women to fine gold." Witness the famous salons, where under her guidance men and women of every class and kind, mental and social, met and mingled harmoniously.

The book has some of the faults usual in a first novel. But it is cleverly written, there is humor, some deft phrasing, a feeling for character, and an interesting point of view. Altogether, it is a novel which inclines one to the belief that its author has a worth-while future before him.

QUINNEYS'

QUINNEYS'. By Horace Annesley Vachell. George H. Doran Company. $1.25 net.

THE many readers who are accustomed to look for good work from Mr. Vachell will not be in the least disappointed by this new and charming book, but they will certainly be more than a little surprised. For "Quinneys'" is something of a new departure for the author of "Blinds Down." It is the quiet, humorous, very human story of a man who inherited an antique shop in the old cathedral town of Melchester from a miserable curmudgeon of a father, whose death, as he frankly avowed, caused him not the slightest grief, although he was ready to do "what was expected in the way of a tombstone." The elder Quinney had had a few good bits of old furniture and porcelain, but the majority of his stock consisted of that "rubbish" which the son abhorred from the very bottom of his soul. "Don't touch rubbish. Rubbish is beastly. Rubbish is wicked," he told his astonished stepmother-in-law to be, whose taste was that of a generation which put open Japanese umbrellas in its fireplaces. For this energetic little man, who had had no education to speak of, strewed stitches all over the floor and well up in many of the tricks of a trade which does not bear the best possible reputation for honesty, was an artist through and through, loving beauty, fairly worshipping the exquisite things in which he dealt. However, he had other loves, too, and his relations with the young wife for whom he bought the "Dream Cottage," and with his dainty daughter, Posy, his only child and "the gem of his collection," are portrayed with tenderness and charm. There is a time, indeed, when his adoration of what Susan calls "sticks and stones" appears to have become greater than his love for aught else, when he seems to care more for "things" than for persons; then come the dramatic closing chapters of the book, wherein the lovable little man shows his knowledge of relative values.

Joe Quinney himself, the shrewd, faulty, hot-tempered, ambitious, beauty-loving, plain-spoken little man, is of course the principal character in the book—a distinction he well merits—but there are several others not one whit less real. Susan, the devoted little wife who tried so hard to hide her jealousy of the "things" her husband adored, and succeeded for years, only to have it all come forth in one frantic outburst; Posy, the romantic, willful, beloved daughter, for whom at the last, as at the first, her father paid a high price; the various dealers with whom Quinney comes in contact, and Susan's mother, Mrs. Biddlecombe, whose experience on the night of the fire ferns

(Continued on Page Following)

PERSONALITY PLUS

By EDNA FERBER

Author of "Roast Beef, Medium"

Emma McChesney is already known—here she is again, this time with her son Jock. A story of business and human hearts.

At all bookstores

THE LONE WOLF

(A Melodrama)

BY

LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

Louis Joseph Vance has written many good stories, but "The Lone Wolf" is his masterpiece. —New York World.

$1.30 net

AT YOUR BOOKSELLERS

PUBLISHERS

LITTLE, BROWN & COMPANY

BOSTON

IMMIGRATION

Three Interesting Books On an Important Problem

THE OLD WORLD IN THE NEW: By Edward A. Ross. New York: Century Company. $2.40.

FROM ALIEN TO CITIZEN. By Edward A. Steiner. New York: Fleming H. Revell Company. $1.

WITH POOR IMMIGRANTS TO AMERICA. By Stephen Graham. New York: Macmillan Company. $1.

HOW will the present war affect our immigration census? Writing long before there was even a rumor of war, Prof. Ross has made no allowance for such a tremendous disturbance in the world situation. Viewed in the light of recent events, however, some of his conclusions take on an added significance. For instance, conditions are ripe, according to his estimate formed before the present crisis, for a heavy influx from Western Asia. That this influx will be hastened rather than impeded by the war needs little explanation. With the possible alleviation of the status of the Jew in Russia, the outflow thence will probably diminish, but the stream from Asiatic Turkey, Circassia, Syria, and Arabia will increase.

In Prof. Ross's forecast, which is intensified by the happenings of the last two months, lies a grievous note of warning. "The Old World in the New" is not so much a study of immigration as a study against immigration. What we have assumed into our nation since we opened our gates to the stranger was bad enough; what we are about to receive, the very dregs of Western Asia, immeasurably worse than the dregs of Europe, will dilute to the last degree that pioneer stock on which the American nation should have been builded.

Prof. Ross's prejudice against the open door policy is frank and apparent, a prejudice amounting almost to a bitterness which only a brilliant and readable style can conceal. The influences, economic, social, or political, which this steady inflow of the poorest and neediest of other lands has created are those of unmitigated deterioration. For the high cost of living and in the same breath for the low standard of living, Prof. Ross holds the immigrant responsible. To his fault must be laid our increasing illiteracy, yellow journalism, peonage, caste spirit, the social evil, city congestion, pauperism, and above all, a disheartening confusion of our political ideals. It is the later immigrant who has weakened the splendid pioneer stock of America. On this stock as a base might have been builded another Greece, another Rome, at any rate a unified, strong America, but the possibility of such a future is being rapidly choked by the transfusion of these weaker strains.

Here is no fresh argument and little new evidence. Prof. Ross presents his case with forceful phrase and well-chosen example, but, curiously enough, it is this very brilliance of presentation, this overpersuasiveness, coupled with an undercurrent prejudice deep and bitter, which make the reader more than uneasy about many of the professor's conclusions. Here and there the generalizations are so broad and so glittering that they cannot carry convictions even to the uninformed, who may easily be impressed with lucid and well-chosen statistics. At the root of most of these generalizations is the writer's bias toward labor and labor's "rights."

> Throughout our comfortable classes one finds high-sounding humanitarianism and facile lip-sympathy for immigrants coexisting with heartless indifference to what depressive immigration is doing and will do to American wage-earners and their children. . . . If the stream of immigrants included capitalists with funds, merchants ready to invade all lines of business, lawyers, doctors, engineers, and professors qualified to compete immediately with our professional men, even Judges and officials able to lure votes away from our own candidates for office, the pressure would be felt all along the line, and there might be something heroic in those groups standing for the equal right of all races to American opportunities. But since actually the brunt is borne by labor, it is easy for the shielded to indulge in generous view on the subject of immigration.

With Prof. Ross, the displacement of American labor by that of the unskilled immigrant is not an objection, it is a grudge, and it is in this unfortunate tone that his book is written. His is not merely a slant toward labor interests; he goes the whole forty-five degrees, sweeping with him all the facts that bear out his case, brushing aside or remaking those that don't. For instance to dismiss the "dramatic unionization" of the garment workers of New York and Chicago as no evidence whatsoever against his assertion that organized labor always suffers at the hands of the immigrant, is not only bold but unscrupulous, and above all, not in the least conducive to trust and confidence on the part of any reader in possession of the facts in the case. Prof. Ross overreaches himself in more than one respect; it would be far safer did he stick closely to subjects concerning which no one knows very much anyway.

In curious contrast to this energetic volume is a bit of autobiography from another professor, Edward A. Steiner, who holds the Chair of Applied Christianity at Grinnell College, Iowa. Prof. Steiner is one of these undesirable aliens who so arouse the Wisconsin professor's ire. "If mine were an unusual case," he writes, "this record would not be worth the making." He holds that he is very little different from the Slav people, from whom he came; his story in America, as he relates it, contains all the regulation chapters—sweat shop, mills, mines, the lower courts, jail, drink, the open road with all its dangers. Prof. Steiner cannot well push too far this claim that he is an average immigrant, for to rise from the position of the ordinary vagabond to that of professor in a progressive college is by no means an average record: but his plea for the others is little impaired thereby; it carries far more conviction than Prof. Ross's broadsides. It is purely a sentimental plea; the pictures which he draws are, many of them, too florid and too highly colored with emotion to be very palatable to a people, the reading section of which is still largely Teutonic, but it arrests the attention, if nothing more, and bears the stamp of sincerity.

To this virtue Stephen Graham's book, "With Poor Immigrants to America," dare not lay claim. Here is the same sort as Prof. Steiner's narrative—sketches of the steerage, of the east side, of the mines, of all with which the immigrant comes in touch, but from the view of a not very thoughtful onlooker. Mr. Graham wrote these originally for publication in a Russian magazine, and it is conceivable that to the Russian reader they might seem entertainingly picturesque. The American public, however, must find them rather flimsy and unimportant—a series of photographs, and not a very good lens at that.

An Idler in Spain

J. E. Crawford Fitch went to Spain from his home in England expecting to write a serious book about the life and times of the famous Spanish painter, Goya. He changed his mind somewhat soon after reaching Barcelona, and set off on what he calls a Goya pilgrimage, traveling about the country and studying the painter against the background of present-day Spain. The fruit of the pilgrimage appears in an entertaining book entitled "An Idler in Spain," which is part art criticism and part graphic portrayal of Spanish life and scenery. The book is illustrated with photographic reproductions of Goya pictures. (McBride, Nast & Co. $2.)

PSYCHOLOGY

Prof. Muensterberg Gives Result of Scientific Research

PSYCHOLOGY: GENERAL AND APPLIED. By Hugo Muensterberg. New York: D. Appleton & Co.

IN an earlier day psychology was, literally, a "discourse on the human soul." When it was finally admitted to the sciences the demand for exactitude banished any so vague a will o' the wisp as the soul. Now, curiously enough, the soul has returned and taken up her abode beside color theories and association problems, a natural result following on an accelerated study of the problems of personality and a marked tendency in modern thought away from materialism. Prof. Hugo Münsterberg is notoriously averse from positions in any but the most advanced current in the stream, and his new textbook in psychology, the first formal work from his pen for many years, gives the soul and her functions ample room.

"The soul," says Prof. Münsterberg, "is the self conceived as a system of purposes which remains identical with itself in developing its potential acts as real experiences in response to the acts of others and to the objects of the world." The soul is self-conscious; it is free, it is immortal, it is not substance, it is not object, it is not in time or space. All of this is assuredly familiar matter, but it is unusual to discover it in a textbook on psychology for the simple reason that such a helpful fiction as a soul must be sought outside the confines of our actual experience. But psychology without a soul is only one side of the shield, contends Prof. Münsterberg. The causal psychologist, the man who in the most artificial fashion has picked to bits the great confusion of our consciousness, has, after all, done nothing more than explain. He has brought us information without understanding and has been forced to leave wholly out of account such "over-individual obligations" as truth, beauty, religion, and morality. The understanding of our mental life is the business of the purposive psychologist, and he is as amply justified in calling such a construction as the soul to his aid as the physicist who postulates ether.

Obviously enough, this is letting down the bars in thorough-going fashion. Where philosophy begins and psychology ends was always a sufficiently dubious problem. It begins to seem that the further we retreat this ideal of a well-defined boundary line, the nearer we shall be to the truth, but while the generosity of outline which Prof. Münsterberg has bestowed on his new textbook may be commendable, how much the discourse on "purposive psychology" will make for clarity in the mind of the student of psychology is a matter for conjecture

Not only in the direction of "purposiveness" does Prof. Münsterberg enlarge the domain of psychology. The psychology of the group and psychology in application comprise two important sections of his book. To the first of these, the student and even the lay reader will look forward with considerable interest, for the mental life of the social group has too long been neglected in the interests of the mental life of the individual. Such study as has existed has been concerned mainly with the relation of the individual to other individuals, of one self to a group of selves. The only person who has conceived of the crowd as a psychological entity is Gustave Le Bon, and his overfanciful conclusions have done little more than touch the border of the problem. Prof. Münsterberg's analysis of this question is disappointing. It does little more than sum our present information concerning social relations, and it leaves M. Le Bon practically alone in the field, which he has created.

The section of his book which deals with applied psychology is, however, excellent. It condenses the former volumes which have resulted on Prof. Münsterberg's study of practical psychology in the departments of industry, education, law and medicine. Prof. Münsterberg has been a pioneer in the work of turning what has been a pure laboratory science to the uses of our community life, and it is in this direction that he speaks with the most authority.

Throughout his aim has been to place the study of psychology on as broad a base as possible. The book is primarily a textbook to be supplemented by intensive study of specific problems. It sketches outlines only; it gives no room to exposition of the structure of the brain and the sense organs, and it takes the widest possible sweep. This aim is most praiseworthy; no one would quarrel with Prof. Münsterberg's desire to establish a study of mental states a little different from that awarded minerals and plants. But this ideal of generosity has been extended to vocabulary with the result that as a textbook Prof. Münsterberg's work is inexcusably prolix. We do not ask an "uncritical rush toward mental states," we do not decry the slow and painstaking approach to the subject of inquiry, but in a book which is to be studied rather than read, a knotty conciseness is not only permitted but best. We do not ask Prof. Münsterberg to evolve pruned abstractions in the style of Immanuel Kant, but we do ask for our information in as small compass as possible.

A long list of "popular" works has left its mark on Prof. Münsterberg's style, an unfortunate result in the case of so important a work as this latest. For this textbook is richer by far than many of the somewhat brilliant but empty essays on various aspects of our modern life with which the Harvard professor has surfeited the public in the last ten years; it holds the kernel of his best thought, and the fruit of a continuous and genuine scientific research. That it should be swamped and overclouded by a vast number of unnecessary words is most deplorable.

"The Most Artistic Novel She Has Yet Given Us."—Philadelphia Press.

"A novel that touches and grips . . . Vienna, the rainbow tinted, the dreary, the music-mad, the golden to the very life."—Chicago Herald.

"Undoubtedly Mrs. Rinehart's Best Work."—Saginaw Courier Herald.

The Street of Seven Stars

"The Street of Seven Stars' proves two things; first that Mrs. Rinehart is not contented with farce and melodrama, and second that she deserves a place among the foremost American writers of stories of tenderness, romance and modern knighthood . . . It far surpasses anything she has ever done before."—Syracuse Post-Standard.

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

"The Strongest Thing She Has Done."—Grand Rapids Evening Press.

"Among the many stories from Mrs. Rinehart's pen, none is more worthy of a genuine and enthusiastic reception."—Boston Advertiser.

"Mrs. Rinehart's Finest Work."—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

At all bookstores, $1.25 net.

PERCH OF THE DEVIL

By GERTRUDE ATHERTON

Author of "The Conqueror," etc.

An American copper-made fortune—
A crude American girl grown into a personage—
In this truly American novel Mrs. Atherton's genius gives of its best.
"The book is one of the most readable that Mrs. Atherton has written."—San Francisco Chronicle.
At all booksellers.

Dutton's

These catalogues now ready. Free on request.

VALUABLE BOOKS
Relating chiefly to the 19th Century.
RARE FRENCH BOOKS
Standard Sets and Scarce Volumes.
Rare Books at Moderate Prices
681 FIFTH AVENUE
Opposite St. Thomas's Church.

LATEST WORKS OF FICTION

(Continued from Preceding Page)

hold of the old, stern religion upon the minds of the people, the introduction among them of the doctrines of Christian Science, at first with much secrecy, and finally with open and general acceptance, and the turning of their attention from church affairs to their own pleasures and enjoyments. All this so wears upon the mind and soul of the minister who has watched over his flock for many years that his intellect wavers and breaks under the burden, and when presently he dies the young man says, "And with him went, for me, a generation—a generation of strong and honest men." A gentle, restrained love story, between the narrator of the story and the minister's daughter, runs quietly through the book. But its main concern is with the village people, their several attitudes toward the old religion and toward the new influences that were undermining it. Among them are some very true delineations of character, and the whole story makes an interesting study of a local phase of social development.

SOLDIER OF THE LEGION

A SOLDIER OF THE LEGION. By C. M. and A. M. Williamson. Doubleday, Page & Co. $1.35 net.

Most of us have been on familiar terms since our early youth with that "Soldier of the Legion," who was born at "Bingen on the Rhine"—it seems an odd combination nowadays—but this new member of the famous corps, though French by birth, had been all his life a resident of the United States, and when the story opens is a Second Lieutenant in the —th Cavalry, stationed at Fort Ellsworth, with nothing further from his thoughts than enlistment among those of whom "no questions are asked." However, he was destined to fill the arduous rôle of hero in a novel against which no one can possibly bring the reproach that it is lacking in plot, and from the very first chapter, when he is summoned from a ball to the bedside of a dying woman, from whose lips he hears a confession which changes his entire life, he has adventures in abundance. No less than six remarkably beautiful women play more or less important parts in his career, women of all sorts and kinds, from a popular actress to the lovely daughter of the Agha of Djaserta, whose love-story is strangely interwoven with his own. And the "Soldier of the Legion" proves himself worthy of the name bestowed upon him by one of them—St. George.

Most of the tale is laid in Algeria, at Sidi-bel-Abbès, headquarters of the Legion, in the surrounding desert, and at the Agha's oasis. There is romance in abundance, and though the reader is occasionally conscious of the use of whip and spur on a jaded imagination the narrative moves at a fairly lively pace.

THE MONEY MAKERS

THE MONEY MAKERS. A Story of Today. By Charles Klein and Arthur Hornblow. Illustrations by Paul Stahr. New York: G. W. Dillingham Company. $1.35.

Charles Klein's play of the New York business man who has a late reviving conscience has been turned into a novel by Arthur Horablow. The story follows closely the lines of the play, which tells of the absorption of the money-mad financier in the game of making more and more money, his second marriage to a much younger woman, and the coil of cross purposes and bitter animosities in which he and she and his children become involved when a late awakening sense of justice leads him to endeavor to make restitution of his ill-gotten gains. But while keeping the outlines of the action and much of the dialogue intact, Mr. Hornblow has filled out the gaps between the scenes and introduced much that is new in order to produce the necessary sense of background and make the movement smooth and continuous. In style he has endeavored to keep in sympathy with the fine spirit of the play.

BETTY'S VIRGINIA CHRISTMAS

BETTY'S VIRGINIA CHRISTMAS. By Molly Elliott Seawell. Illustrated. J. B. Lippincott Company. $1.50 net.

A very pretty, very sentimental little love story with a charming, brave-hearted, twenty-year-old coquette for its heroine and a rich and "dashing young officer" of the United States Army to play the part of the hero, is Miss Seawell's contribution to the inevitable flood of Christmas fiction. It is at Christmas time that Betty Beverley, once of stately Rosehill, now of humble Holly Lodge, first meets Lieut. John Hope Fortescue, son of the wealthy Northerner, who bought Rosehill when the mortgage was foreclosed, and Col. Beverley, Betty's grandfather, obliged to sell the beautiful old home which had been his father's and his grandfather's before him. There is a delightful description of Virginia Christmas festivities in the early '80s, the period chosen for the tale; Betty and the gallant young Lieutenant go to the jolliest of dances, where the music is furnished by old Uncle Caesar, Isaac Minken, who "combined the profession of driving a fish cart in the daytime and fiddling in the evening," and a youth who "performed upon the concertina." Then there are wonderful suppers, a hunt breakfast, and altogether one is much inclined to envy these joyous, hospitable Virginia gentlefolk.

Naturally, the course of true love does not run entirely smooth; a quarrel comes and a parting, and more than one Christmas elapses before Betty does the honors at the Rosehill ball, but everything turns out all right in the end, as was to be expected. Meanwhile the reader has time to become acquainted with Kettle, the lovable little negro boy, who came hungry and ragged to Holly Lodge, and there received his first Christmas stocking, with Aunt Tulip, and Uncle Caesar, and the splendid old Colonel, and all the other characters of this charmingly written, gay little romance.

DIANE AND HER FRIENDS

DIANE AND HER FRIENDS. By Arthur Sherburne Hardy. Illustrated. Houghton Mifflin Company. $1.35 net.

France is the scene of all these little tales of Mr. Hardy's, many of which have already seen the light in magazines. Diane de Wimpffen appears in several of them, while some are principally concerned with the Countess Anne, a great lady who should have lived in the days of the ancien régime, and others with Inspector Joly of the Paris police. The first story in the volume tells how Diane replied to an insult in a most unusual way, the second gives an account of the deathbed confession of the Countess Anne, and the third brings Diane and the Countess Anne together, showing how Diane chose what she believed was a sad truth in preference to a tacit falsehood. Then we learn how it came to pass that the Countess Anne employed a murderer as her head gardener, and make the acquaintance of Inspector Joly, who plays a leading rôle in five out of the seven remaining episodes. And the book closes with a great service done Diane by the man who was once her adversary.

Each of the eleven stories is complete in itself, and they are all written in a rather graceful, fastidious, and undramatic style, quite appropriate for many of them, but somewhat out of place in those which might properly be called detective stories. Diane herself is an attractive heroine, with her blue eyes, her dainty look, and her ability to shoot flies—literally! It is easy to understand why her husband adored her, and the Countess Anne addressed her as "my dear child." There are several other agreeable characters in the book, and some pretty descriptions of French life.

BATTLE ROYAL

BATTLE ROYAL. By W. De Vere. John Lane Company. $1.35 net.

Anton van Weghe of the civil service is about to leave the little town of Macassar in the Dutch East Indies, on his way home to Holland, when this novel begins. He had spent ten years in the East, done good work, and earned his right to a year's leave, yet he would hardly have taken it had there not been a woman waiting for him—the woman to whom he was practically engaged, and who is to be expected to bring back with him as his wife. He was at peace with himself, despite the memory of a past intrigue with a certain Mrs. Delmaar—an intrigue which had resulted in his being obliged to depart from Batavia, where she lived. Convinced that Marie Delmaar is but a "light woman," he believes his old passion for her dead, and is astonished to find it awaken again as he draws near the place which is still her home. And there in Batavia they meet, and there new and unexpected complications arise.

Such value as the novel possesses, however, consists neither in its plot nor in its characters, but in its descriptions of a country about which the majority of people know little or nothing. These descriptions are carefully and painstakingly written; there is an abundance of detail, and the author is apparently fully acquainted with the life which he portrays. It is a pity that he has not the ability to make his account seem real and vivid to the reader.

LIFE AND DEATH

THE GAME OF LIFE AND DEATH. By Lincoln Colcord. The Macmillan Company. $1.25 net.

Mr. Colcord's "Stories of the Sea" suggest Joseph Conrad, not that they are in any wise an imitation of that great writer, but that, like Conrad, Mr. Colcord is penetrated by the spirit of the sea and the mystery of the Orient, and, like the author of "Youth" and of "Lord Jim," he makes his readers see and feel with him. Each of the dozen tales making up this volume is dramatic and poignant; told, too, with a subtle art which leaves not a little to be read between the lines. Much as has been written of the character of the Oriental, Mr. Colcord gives, we cannot say a new insight into it, but, certainly, a new insight into its inscrutableness, as something not to be plumbed by any occidental lead and line. The stirring tales command an almost painful interest. Very beautiful and pathetic is the closing story, "Home," and the "Envoy," that reminds one of Stevenson's

"Home is the sailor, home from the sea."

It is a book that will linger in the memory long after its lids are closed.

THE FLAMING SWORD

THE FLAMING SWORD. By George Gibbs. Illustrated. D. Appleton & Co. $1.50 net.

Mr. Gibbs makes a fairly interesting story of a young man who, having wasted his substance and himself in riotous living, tries to take his life by the indirect method of rowing out into a squall, is rescued and nursed back to health by the lighthouse girl, and—we all know the rest of it. Matters are complicated by his relations with "a show-girl" who was the companion of his days of dissipation, and who loved him far beyond his deserts, "not wisely, but too well." As always, it is the woman who pays and we take small pleasure in leaving "Moera" in the arms of her lover, while "Maisie" has no resource but to turn to "the lights of Broadway" her solitary steps. The book holds much dramatic incident, but it refuses to grip the reader or to enlist his sympathetic interest in its characters.

THE SOUND OF WATER

THE SOUND OF WATER. By Margarita Spalding Gerry. Illustrated. Harper & Brothers. $1 net.

"The Sound of Water" is a strange story of a mystery which, it is safe to say, no reader can guess until it is revealed. To keep the secret of the supposed crime the author has fallen into an error almost as fatal as that of permitting it to leak out prematurely. She has made the central situation and all the details too impossible for credibility. We perceive at once that, save for the requirements of the tale, there is no reason why the suspected man should not promptly have told the simple truth, knowing concealment to be the most damning evidence against him. However, any mystery, though clumsily contrived, is certain to lure a number of readers. A medical mystery holds a special fascination for the laity, and this story is sufficiently well told to command the interest of its readers, in spite of the obvious defects of its machinery.

With My Camera

A popular and practical guide for the amateur photographer is provided by Stanley C. Johnson, Fellow of the Nature Photographers' Society of London, in a volume entitled "Saturday with My Camera." The volume contains over a hundred pages of diagrams and plates and a great many useful formulas and tables. (J. B. Lippincott Company. $1.50.)

"Martha" the heroine of those "brightest, cheeriest, happiest stories" by Julie M. Lippmann.

Just Ready. $1.00 Net.

MARTHA AND CUPID

Earlier successes

Martha By-the-Day 15th Printing. $1.00 net.

Making Over Martha 6th Printing. $1.20 net.

HENRY HOLT AND COMPANY

Mr. H. G. Wells's New Novel. Just Published.

The Wife of Sir Isaac Harman

By H. G. WELLS

Author of "Marriage," "Tono Bungay," etc.

The Bookman says:

"Mr. Wells is supremely the 'modern' novelist . . . He is not merely abreast of the time; he has repeatedly shown himself uncannily able to keep in advance of the crest of the wave. His prescience is extraordinary . . . . He is one of those men, and they are rare, who seek the truth with passion . . . . No one else has shown such preoccupation with those questions in which every one of us, if we have a spark of intelligence, must feel a vital concern. We see the old comfortable social order breaking up before our eyes. The disquieting note of feminism is heard, the first symptoms of a revolt that may involve half the race . . . . These are the problems of Mr. Wells's thought. In the series of novels beginning with 'Tono Bungay' he has touched each of them in turn with his incisive intelligence. And if any one imagines that these are topics of merely momentary importance, he is in need of enlightenment from some supra-earthly source."

IN THIS NEW STORY, BRILLIANT WITH THE SPARKLE OF OPPOSING MALE AND FEMALE VIEWPOINTS, MR. WELLS ILLUMINATES THE NARRATIVE WITH KEEN HUMOR AND SUBTLE ANALYSIS AND CLOSES ON A NOTE OF PURE COMEDY WHICH RAISES THE ONE REGRET THAT THE LAST PAGE OF THE BOOK HAS BEEN REACHED.

Cloth. $1.50 net. At all bookstores.

Published by THE MACMILLAN COMPANY 64-66 Fifth Ave. New York

WAR'S AFTERMATH

Prof. Jordan Indicates "Racial Hurt" to be Expected

WAR'S AFTERMATH. By David Starr Jordan, Chancellor of Stanford University, and Harvey Ernest Jordan, Professor of Histology and Embryology in the University of Virginia. Boston and New York: Houghton Mifflin Company. 75 cents.

ONE AMERICAN'S OPINION OF THE EUROPEAN WAR: In Answer to Germany's Appeals. By Frederick W. Whitridge. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co.

THE effect of the civil war on the racial progress of the Southern States is considered in "War's Aftermath," the general conclusion being that "grave racial hurt" has been the result.

In an introduction written since the present European conflict began, the Chancellor finds similarities between the situation of Virginia with reference to the civil war and that of Belgium in the existing struggle, the inference being that the undesirable eugenic effects of war in Virginia will be paralleled in the land of King Albert. It is pointed out that neither Virginia nor Belgium had any leading part in the original causes of conflict, that both lay geographically in the very centre of the devastation, and that "in both the disaster is sadder because it is spread over generations to come."

Chancellor Jordan finds that war always and everywhere means "the reversal of natural selection," the inferior young men of the war generation becoming largely the breeders of the next because of the killing of the strong in battle. Thus in Belgium "the best of the young blood is lost," the men who should have been the fathers of the Belgians to come being the victims of Liége and Namur, Dinant and Charleroi. "After each war comes the paucity of genius, the failure of personal initiative." The economic development of Belgium, it is declared, is checked for half a century, while her social development is "deranged for we know not how long." Schiller's line is quoted as summing up war: "Always war devours the best."

In their study of the South, the authors early found that "no mathematical estimate or rigid calculation of racial loss was possible." Therefore it was necessary to reach conclusions by "less direct methods." Accordingly hundreds of representative men, of whom a large proportion were veterans of the civil war, were interviewed on the general questions involved. From analysis of these conversations the authors constructed thirty propositions dealing with various phases of the racial results of the war, which propositions had been advanced by one or more of those interviewed. The propositions were then put in the form of a questionnaire and sent to the surviving Confederate officers and other men of intelligence for comment. Most of the volume is devoted to an analysis of fifty-five of the answers received, which, it is stated, is a preliminary step to further investigation. Two of the most interesting of the thirty propositions submitted were these:

The flower of the people went into the war at the beginning, and of those a large part died before the end.

Men of the highest character and quality bore the brunt of the war and lost more heavily than men of inferior quality. This produced a change in the balance of society by reducing the percentage of the better types without a corresponding reduction of the less desirable types; a condition which was projected into the next generation because the inferiors lived to have progeny and the others did not.

The first proposition "received unanimous assent." Yet the second received "but a bare majority of 'ayes.'" It is criticised as being "too general" and "a little too strong."

Other propositions submitted were these:

1. The farmers are now of a lower type than before the war.
2. All over the State (Virginia) the class of men attending courts does not measure up in intelligence or in ideals with those attending courts before the war.
3. The public men of the South do not measure up to those of old times.
4. The civil war destroyed the cream and stirred up the dregs.
5. The strong fell first in battle, but the weak fell in camp, so that the balance remained about the same.

Proposition No. 1 was "very emphatically denied by many and objected to by most." No. 2 won "assent from about half." No. 3 is "approved by about half." No. 4 is "not approved," the criticism being that it is "too sweeping." No. 5 is "generally approved."

In their conclusion, following the verdict on the testimony that the war resulted in "grave racial hurt," the authors continue:

Each of the other baneful racial influences associated with the problem, social, cultural, and economic devastation, emigration, pensions, &c., is nevertheless the direct consequence of war and should be debited to it. Moreover, even granting that the South and the country as a whole have, relative to ante-bellum days, no poorer fertility in consequence of the war—an assumption no one can maintain in the face of the enormous waste of one million splendid souls—it is further certain that could we have had the inspiring presence and wise counsel of these martyrs and their potential offspring, the country would now be immeasurably better off in a yet higher average of physical, mental, and moral stamina. * * * We must, therefore, decide that the war has seriously impoverished this country of its best human values.

One American's Opinion.

In Mr. Whitridge's opinion, Germany is in the wrong in this war and is following false gods. "Give us back," he says, "the Germany of Luther, Beethoven, Goethe, Schiller, and Kant." The author some years ago lived in Germany for two years. He has a chapter on "Germans Then and Now," and he finds that the Germany which he revisited not long before the war was quite a different Germany from that in which he had lived. In part he writes:

In every direction there were evidences of a great change in the citizen and the people. * * * The country had grown rich, and enjoyed a great and visible prosperity. * * * The demeanor and talk of the people had changed as much as everything else; the old simplicity and modesty had disappeared; there was a good deal of talk about abominable scandals in high society, and generally the people were exhibiting the worst vices of a raw plutocracy. * * *

During the past decade the Germans have become easily the most objectionable people to be seen in the cities and on the highways of the Continent. Mr. Price Collier called them 'the boors of Europe,' to the intense displeasure of the Berlin press. * * *

I have noticed a curious measure of envy and contempt for England—envy because the English have certain amenities of life which every German copies as fast as he can, and contempt, for which I have never heard any better reason than that, as they look at it, English officers are ashamed of their uniforms, and get out of them and into civil dress as soon as they can. * * * I cannot imagine an Englishman who would not say 'Jealous of the Germans! Why?on earth should we be?'

THE GLORIOUS AGE

ELIZABETHAN LITERATURE. By John Mackinnon Robertson M. P. Home University Library. New York: Henry Holt & Co.

MR. ROBERTSON has written with force and conviction on a large variety of subjects, and until lately has chiefly been known as a radical scholar in politics. His contribution to the interminable Shakespeare-Bacon controversy, however, has been accepted by many competent to judge as the best of all the books on this subject. "The Baconian Heresy," published last year, gave the Secretary of the British Board of Trade a new standing in literary criticism. The subject was approached without bias, though nobody who knows this confirmed iconoclast of traditions and conventions can doubt that he would not be averse to proving that Bacon really did write Shakespeare if he could find evidence enough to justify that argument.

This little book on the contemporaries, precursors and immediate followers of Shakespeare is in some sort a companion to the other, and it admirably serves its purpose as a brief critical history of the writers called Elizabethan, who in this case include men who wrote in and between the reigns of Henry VIII and James I. Mr. Robertson finds two spirits in the literature of these times, the one reflected in the "precise and pedestrian kind of verse," and the other in "a free and beautiful way of writing." The manner of Pope may be traced in Tudor literature, but in Elizabeth's later days the free, inspired verse got the upper hand, while the "fettered and formal" manner held full sway in the eighteenth century.

The survey is comprehensive and neglects no literary outcome of the greatest epoch in English letters, the era of the making of the language. The high lights rest upon Spenser and Shakespeare inevitably, but their contemporaries are not neglected. There is much that is illuminating and not hackneyed for instance about Jonson and Marlowe. Jonson's plays are described as "travails of understanding rather than of art," yet there is no tendency to belittle their worth. Certainly, as Mr. Robertson intimates, one who would understand the London life of that era must read "Every Man in His Humor" and "Bartholomew Fair," the latter in spite of its grossness. There are chapters on the prose before Sidney and the poetry before Spenser, the pre-Shakespearean drama, and the later dramatists. There is a bibliography for the student, while the index is complete.

A Wonderful Day

An odd novelty is worked out by Hamlin Garland in "The Day That Changed the World," a tale of bursting forth one beautiful day of a genuine, practical, effective Christianity, so that at last every professing Christian throughout the world begins to practice in his daily life the principles of his religion. The effort of it all is to establish everywhere peace and good will between man and man, a universal brotherhood, an earthly paradise wherein those who need help get it, nobody living for himself, but every one eager to do good things for others. It is a pleasing dream and Mr. Begbie develops it cleverly. (George H. Doran Company. $1.25.)

UNTIL NOV. 10TH

I offer 2-year subscriptions to any of the following for $2: McClure's, American, Everybody's, Metropolitan, Cosmopolitan, Harper's, Good Housekeeping, Harper's Bazar, Woman's Home Companion, Delineator, World's Work. 3 months, 50c—4 special war numbers worth preserving: Scribner's, World's Work, Outlook, all three, one year, $6. Bargain price-list free. Youth's Companion, 14th mod., $2. E. M. Dunbar, 2 Revere St., Boston, Mass.

A GIFT BOOK FOR CHILDREN
JUST PUBLISHED

A SHOWER OF VERSES
By ALTHEA RANDOLPH.
Contains Hiawatha's Travelling Band, Phaeton, Fairies and Frolics, and Twilight Poems, full of amusement for children and charm for the grown-ups.
Of all Booksellers. Cloth. Price, $1.00.
The H. W. GRAY CO.,
2 West 45th St., New York.
Sole Agents for NOVELLO & CO., LTD.

The Writer's Placing Service
BOOKSTE HANNIS JORDAN, Editor.
We are in constant touch with Editors and Publishers and know all the Literary Markets. Write for terms.
32 UNION SQUARE EAST,
NEW YORK CITY.

PUTNAM'S
NEW BOOKS

My Path Through Life
by Lilli Lehmann
"The Most Important Biography of the Year."
8°. 500 pages. 50 Illustrations. $3.50.

This autobiography will be eagerly received by the world-wide public the great prima-donna has charmed. Nor will interest be confined to the music lover. Her struggles in Berlin, her experiences at the Viennese Court, her collaborations with Wagner are among the many entertaining chapters of this notable work.

A Woman's Career
by Myrtle Reed
Crown 12°. Decorative Cover. $1.25.

This manuscript, but recently discovered among the papers of the late Myrtle Reed, is characteristic of its talented author. Written with her accustomed incisive humor and in charming literary form, the book possesses also real force as a contribution to the study of the relations of woman to the community.

The Private Code and Post-card Cypher
by Constance and Burgess Johnson
A Telegraph and Post-card Code Book for Family Use.
12°. Flo. Boxed. In Press. $1.00.

An essentially practical — and amusing—private code for telegraphic use and for the brief spaces found on picture post cards.

For Sale by G. P. Putnam's Sons Locally

Harold Bell Wright has told with Vigorous Power a thrilling story of love, tense with dramatic action, sweet with sentiment, strong with passions. The author of "The Shepherd of the Hills," "The Winning of Barbara Worth," "The Calling of Dan Matthews," etc., has exceeded his past efforts in this wholesome, refreshing, romantic novel.

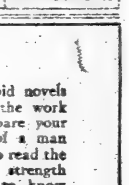
THE EYES OF THE WORLD

The Best of the Six Best Sellers, receiving 352 points, while the Five Next Best Sellers Combined received a total of only 308 points—From The Bookman's latest report of the six best selling books in the U. S.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: It is something to write one of the six best sellers. . . . It is a big thing something to write six best sellers in succession. . . . We like Mr. Wright's novels.

Christian Standard, Akron, O.: [illegible] Chronicle Telegraph: [illegible] panorama of living men [illegible] The most striking [illegible] and punch [illegible] of all Mr. Wright's novels.

Salt Lake Tribune: It would be impossible for anyone to read it without being thrilled.



Illustrations in Colors $1.35 All Bookstores
—The Book Supply Company, Chicago—

IF you are tired of the weak and insipid novels so prevalent—if you want to read the work of a thinker—if you want to compare your ideas and your beliefs with those of a man equipped to talk of life—if you want to read the romance of a man who is abnormal in strength and in achievement—if you want to know the astounding motives which can compel a clash between capital and labor; if you want all these things, as well as a novel absorbing and powerful, ask your bookseller for

The Way of the Strong
A Romance of the Wheat Fields
By Ridgwell Cullum
$1.35 net.
GEORGE W. JACOBS & CO., PUBLISHERS, PHILA.

The New York Times
Review of Books

Literary Section of
The New York Times

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 1, 1914

CONTENTS

	Page
Party Government	473
Latest Works of Fiction—
Reviews of the following books: "The Wife of Sir Isaac Harman," H. G. Wells; "The Witch," Mary Johnston; "The Honorable Percival," Alice Hegan Rice; "Quinneys'," Horace A. Vachell; "A Soldier of the Legion," C. N. and A. M. Williamson; "The Open Door," Richard-son Wright; "A Tale of Red Roses," George R. Chester; "Whitaker's Dukedom," Edgar Jepson; "The Red Mirage," A. A. S. Wyle; "Shelby Ann," Pamela H. Lee; "Gay Jarvis," Arthur B. Reeve; "The Last Christian," George K. Turner; "The Cop-cat," Mary S. W. Freeman; "Betty's Virginia Christmas," Molly E. Seawell; "Diane and Her Friends," Arthur S. Hardy; "Battle Royal," W. de Vere; "The Money-makers," Charles Klein and Arthur Hornblow; "The Flaming Sword," George Gibbs; "The Game of Life and Death," Lincoln Colcord; "The Sound of Water," Margarita S. Gerry.	473-476
Immigration	477
Psychology	477
Topics of the Week	478
In a Few Words	478
War's Aftermath	479
For Young People	480
Russian Music	480
News of Books	481
Books Worth Reading	481
Queries and Answers	482
Latest Publications	483

TOPICS OF THE WEEK

ONE cannot help thinking that in his article on "The Reading of Books Nowadays," appearing in the November number of the Atlantic Monthly, Mr. GEORGE P. BRETT takes rather too gloomy a view of the contemporary public's interest in literature. He recalls that in his earlier days "the young people with whom I most associated were reading such books as DARWIN'S 'Origin of Species,' PROCTOR'S 'Other Worlds Than Ours,' and GREEN'S 'Short History of England,' and many others of a similar character." These books were discussed by himself and his companions, most of whom were encouraged to accumulate works of this kind for their libraries. At a later date he recalls the vogue of the poetry of TENNYSON, LONGFELLOW, WHITTIER, BROWNING, SWINBURNE, together with such works as KIDD'S "Social Evolution," HENRY DRUMMOND'S "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," FISKE'S "Idea of God," MARX'S "Capital," and HENRY GEORGE'S "Progress and Poverty." But today he finds little of this widespread interest in serious literature. The young people with whom he is familiar are so absorbed in various amusements that "there is little time left them for serious pursuits." This "tendency of the times for mere amusement," fostering "the butterfly habit of mind," Mr. BRETT attributes to "the play method" of teaching in school, "strengthened by the habits of a society which votes continued serious conversation a bore." To these observations, derived from his own personal experiences, he adds the testimony of the librarians who are reported as telling us "that there is a very considerable falling off in circulation of all classes of books at present, and they attribute this to the counter-attraction of the movies," a statement that is corroborated, according to Mr. BRETT, by at least one publisher, who adds "cheap magazines, the increasing use of the automobile," &c., to the causes for the supposed decrease of interest in serious literature.

THE idea that the movies and other forms of popular diversion enumerated by Mr. BRETT have had an injurious effect on the circulation of books is not, of course, a new one. Its validity, however, is somewhat impaired by a lack of definite information on the subject. So far as mere argument goes there are those who contend that the appearance, for instance, of "Ivanhoe" in the movies creates new readers for SCOTT'S masterpiece, and that this form of popular amusement is thus in many cases doing good publicity work for books. But statistics are what one really needs before a correct estimate can be formed of the amount of book-reading done today as compared with that of a few decades ago. Allowing for the increase in population we doubt very much whether more books were sold thirty years ago than the average shown for the present decade. There are more publishers now than there were then and it is safe to say, judging by statistics that are obtainable, that the number of books published annually has greatly increased in practically every branch of literature. Why should this be if there is not an increasing demand for books? Social conditions, however, have undoubtedly changed, and it is less easy to gauge the popularity of a book than it used to be. The complexity of modern life, broken up into a multitude of communities each with its distinctive interests, scarcely admits of the same widespread interchange of opinion regarding some vital book of the day that Mr. BRETT notes as having been characteristic of his younger years. Just now tango and maxixe may be the dominant themes in some social circles—but that does not prevent other groups of men and women from pursuing as their avocations, as they undoubtedly do, questions of literature, science and art. Mr. BRETT'S paper on contemporary reading is a valuable contribution to a subject that is near to the heart of all booklovers. If it inclines to a degree of pessimism greater than the facts seem to warrant, it is fruitful in suggestion and still doubtless on of value to those who strive for increased efficiency in the making and handling of books.

IT seems strange that at this late day there still remains unpublished verse by a poet so dearly loved as TENNYSON—stranger still that a poem by him entitled "A Call to Arms," exhorting his countrymen to rise in defense of their native land against a foreign foe, should now make its appearance for the first time. Such a poem, however, was recently published by The London Spectator. It was given to the latter by the present Lord TENNYSON, it was set to music by Lady TENNYSON and Sir FREDERICK BRIDGE, and has already been sung on public occasions in London. The first stanza, striking the keynote for the others, runs as follows:

O! where is he, the simple fool,
Who says that wars are over?
What bloody portent flashes there
Across the Straits of Dover?
Nine hundred thousand slaves in arms
May seek to bring us under;
But England lives, and still will live,
For we'll crush the despot yonder.
Are we ready, Britons all,
To answer foes with thunder?
Arm, arm, arm!

This, and the two stanzas that follow, may not be of a very high order of poetic excellence. The poem as a whole is far from the great Laureate at his best, a fact that may account for its remaining unpublished until now. But the circumstances surrounding its publication, the direct, stirring quality of the lines, easily account for its present popularity in England.

IN a discussion of anti-militarism as a theme in recent fiction, Miss COLESON, writing in this month's number of The Bookman, makes the somewhat startling assertion that "there is little or no anti-military fiction, in the narrower sense, written anywhere except in Germany." In support of her contention, Miss COLESON cites ARTHUR SCHNITZLER, the Viennese dramatist and novelist, whose short stories and plays, notably "Freiwild," have shown a decided anti-military tendency. Then there are OTTO ERICH HARTLEBEN, in "Rosen-Montag"; A. F. BRUNNEN, in "Saptoustreich"; Lieut. BILSE, in "In a Little Garrison"; HERMANN SUDERMANN, in "Fritschen"; WILHELM LAMSON, in "The Human Slaughter House," and Baroness BERTHA VON SUTTNER, in "Die Waffen Nieder." The latter book, it will be remembered, won the Nobel Peace Prize and is usually considered the most effective of recent attempts among fiction writers to portray the evil influence of war upon the individual and national life. An interesting fact pointed out regarding some of these writers of anti-military fiction is that their books were published at considerable risk to themselves. One recalls, for instance, that the last days of Baroness BERTHA VON SUTTNER were not free from the persecution that might easily be expected from so military an environment as hers, and we are further told that Lieut. BILSE resigned from the army on account of his book. Outside of these German writers and their books, the list, as Miss COLESON compiles it, is less ample—ZOLA'S "La Debacle," STEPHEN CRANE'S "The Red Badge of Courage," ALFRED NOYES'S "The Wine Press," KATHRINA TRASK'S "In the Vanguard," H. G. WELLS'S "The World Set Free," and FREDERICK PALMER'S "The Last Shot." The list on either side is necessarily incomplete. Many writers of fiction during the last two or three decades, of whatever nationality, have written incidentally, if not directly, of the horrors of war. That German writers taking this for their theme are in the majority is, after all, entirely natural. The German novelist, if he would depict life in Germany, is bound to give prominence to militarism—and the idealism that goes with imaginative writing rarely views war with favor. But for the American novelist to devote himself to writing anti-military fiction would be an absurd bit of anachronism.

ON the 29th of this month the Holiday Number of THE NEW YORK TIMES REVIEW OF BOOKS will be published. Many circumstances have combined to make the coming holiday season one in which books will have a wider appeal than ever to the gift-buying public. The epoch-making events of the year intensify the desire for varied kinds of information that naturally finds its best fulfillment in literature. Illogical as it may seem at first glance, a war of such magnitude as the one that is being waged in Europe increases the number of book readers in America. And yet it is natural enough. Such a war impinges upon an almost endless number of interests, and to become intelligently conversant with the latter more than the usual amount of study is needed. Indeed, publishers have already found this to be true, as is proved by the increased demand on the part of the public for books of a character that do not usually come under the classification "popular." With this special demand the vogue of books in all departments of literature has increased, and there is every evidence that the ideal holiday gift will be, to a greater extent than in former years—the book. It is to furnish practical assistance in the selection of suitable books for the season that the HOLIDAY NUMBER of THE BOOK REVIEW is being planned. Its principal feature will be a carefully selected list of 200 of this season's leading publications. The list will be classified and a brief description of the contents will be given under the title of each book. Special articles will be prepared describing this season's gift books and other publications of a like timely interest, the whole furnishing an eminently practical guide for the holiday book buyer.

IN A FEW WORDS

THE Faculty of Princeton University announces that Alfred Noyes, although at the beginning of the war it was feared he could not come, will begin his work next semester as Visiting Professor of English Literature.

Cyrus Townsend Brady's story, "The Little Angel of Canyon Creek," has been filmed for moving picture production and will be shown in New York this month.

Marie Sukloff, author of "The Life Story of a Russian Exile," who was sent by the Russian Government to Siberia for life, but escaped to this country, says that, although she has fought the Russian Government all her life and is on principle opposed to war, she would, if she were a man, join the army of the Allies, because "Prussian militarism has been one of the supports of Russian autocracy, not only morally, but materially."

A. S. M. Hutchinson, author of "The Clean Heart" and "The Happy Warrior," was born in India, the son of a distinguished English officer, studied medicine in early manhood, but soon abandoned that profession for editorial work in London, and since the publication of his first novel has devoted himself entirely to the writing of fiction.

Mrs. Corra Harris has gone to Europe to write a series of magazine articles on the women's side of the war.

Pierre de Coulevain's posthumous book, "The Wonderful Romance," was finished just before her death. In France it had gone, up to the opening of the war, through forty-seven editions.

Ralph Connor, who has a new Corporal Cameron story cut this Fall called "The Patrol of the Sun Dance Trail," is in private life the Rev. Dr. Charles W. Gordon, pastor of St. Stephen's Presbyterian Church, Winnipeg.

Hugh Walpole, author of "The Duchess of Rare" and other realistic stories of English life, is a son of the Bishop of Edinburgh and a cousin of the Earl of Orford. He lives half the year in a tiny fishing village in Cornwall, where he does most of his work.

According to F. Lauriston Bullard's "Famous War Correspondents," it was an American, George Wilkins Kendall, who was the first recognized war correspondent. He did enterprising work in the Mexican war several years before William Howard Russell went to the Crimea.

George Van Schaick, author of "Sweetapple Cove," is a practicing physician in New York City who has spent much vacation time in Newfoundland, where the scene of his novel is laid. He is now at work upon another story of life in that region.

Theron G. Strong, author of "Landmarks of a Lawyer's Lifetime," has received a letter from the editor of The Journal of the Japanese Bar Association saying that he had translated part of the book into Japanese and is publishing it in the Journal.

Kate Douglas Wiggin's "A Child's Journey With Dickens" is to be transcribed into Braille.

NEWS OF BOOKS

Prominent Publications In Various Fields of Literature

THE Century Company is preparing for early publication "The New Man of Europe, 1911-1915," by Herbert Adams Gibbon, author of "The Foundation of the Ottoman Empire." Mr. Gibbon takes up the diplomatic negotiations which preceded the Balkan wars, discusses their significance and their blunders, and shows how the constant interference by the European powers made the present war inevitable. The book will have several maps and a bibliography.

The George H. Doran Company is announcing for immediate publication several additions to its list of timely books on the great war. The new books include "The British Army from Within," by E. Charles Vivian, the novelist, author of "Divided Ways," who formerly served in that army; "The French Army from Within," by an ex-soldier of France; "France and the Next War," by Commandant J. Cèlin, which is at once an answer to Bernhardi's "Germany and the Next War," and a frank account of France's long preparations, and "Jena or Sedan?" by Franz Beyerlein, an army story of which over 250,000 copies have been sold in Germany. It gives a realistic picture of German Army life, and puts boldly the question of whether the German Army is decadent. To the Pocket Book Series of Doran war books the following are to be added: "Aircraft in War," "The Triumphant Retreat to Paris," "The Russian Advance," and "Hacking Through Belgium."

The John Lane Company has ready for immediate publication an American edition of "Songs of the War." Among the poets represented are G. K. Chesterton, Justin Huntly McCarthy, Stephen Phillips, Rudyard Kipling, William Watson, and Sir Owen Seaman. The profits of the book, in both England and America, are devoted to the Prince of Wales's Fund for the Red Cross.

A new edition, to be published next week, of Frederick W. Holls's "The Peace Conference at The Hague," is announced by the Macmillan Company. This was one of the first books published on the subject of universal peace, and the renewed interest in it, caused by the European war, has made necessary the new edition.

At the end of this week Little, Brown & Co. will have ready the new edition, the tenth, of "Bartlett's Familiar Quotations," edited by Nathan Haskell Dole. This is the first revision the book has had for nearly a quarter of a century. The new volume will contain quotations from nearly 200 of the more important writers of the last few decades not included in the previous editions.

For early publication the Macmillan Company announces "How to See a Play," by Richard Burton, President of the Drama League of America. The purpose of the work is to give such counsel and advice to the reader as will help him get out of his theatregoing more pleasure and benefit.

The selected "Poems" of Clinton Scollard, chosen from his work for the thirty years during which he has been writing verse, is to be published by Houghton Mifflin Company this week.

The Yale University Press is bringing out this Fall a translation in verse by Leonard Bacon of "The Song of Roland," which endeavors to present an accurate translation and to preserve the spirit of the original.

Maurice Maeterlinck's "The Unknown Guest," a discussion of the subconscious self, is ready for publication by Dodd, Mead & Co.

"Maria of the Lowlands," by Angel Guimera, will be the eighth volume in the Drama League Series of modern plays. The translator is Wallace Fitzpatrick, who also writes a preface, while an introduction is furnished by John Garrett Underhill. Doubleday, Page & Co. are the publishers. The play was first produced in New York by Harrison Grey Fiske in 1908. It is now shown in moving pictures.

Archibald Henderson's "The Changing Drama," which surveys the whole dramatic current during the last half century and points out and explains its significant changes and movements, is announced for publication this week by Henry Holt & Co.

Hiram K. Moderwell's "The Theatre of Today" takes up the presentation of the modern drama, describing and explaining the new forces in theatrical production and their broader use. It is ready for publication by the John Lane Company.

"English Dramatic Poetry," by Prof. Felix E. Schelling, the latest issue in the series entitled "Channels of English Literature," is ready for publication by E. P. Dutton & Co.

"Footnotes to Life" is the title of a volume of short essays by Dr. Frank Crane, ready for issue by the John Lane Company.

Samuel McChord Crothers is the author of "Meditations on Votes for Women," to be published soon by Houghton Mifflin Company.

A new catalogue, No. 2, new series, of "Autograph Letters, Historical Documents and Manuscripts," has just been published by P. F. Madigan, 501 Fifth Avenue, New York. The work contains over a hundred pages, its contents being arranged under three headings: "Presidents of the United States," in the order of their succession; "Civil War," its items referring to both Federal and Confederate Generals, and a miscellaneous division whose items are literary and historical, American and foreign. Mr. Madigan finds this classification warranted by the increasing number of collections in the two branches of Americans, the Presidents and the civil war.

The Macmillans have ready for publication a new novel by E. V. Lucas called "Landmarks." It is said to be quite different in form from Mr. Lucas's former stories, which have all been marked by a leisurely and discursive style. In this he has adopted the swift selective methods of the moving-picture scenario and has presented the story of his central figure in a series of significant episodes. The Macmillans announce also for this week a new fiction volume by Algernon Blackwood entitled "An Incredible Adventure."

A new "Corporal Cameron" story by Ralph Connor, to be called "The Patrol of the Sun Dance Trail," is promised for this week by the George H. Doran Company. It will deal with the uprising, some years ago, in Canada of Indians and half breeds led by Louis Riel, and it will tell, so it is said, for the first time the inside story of that trouble.

A novel by Philip Gibbs, whose graphic letters from the field of war to THE NEW YORK TIMES have attracted much attention, will be published next week by the Devin-Adair Company. It is called "Beauty and Nick" and deals with the efforts of a young man to reunite his parents, after they had been divorced for a dozen years, and the results of his romantic quest.

A Christmas story by Alice Duer Miller, "The Burglar and the Blizzard," will be one of the November publications of the Hearst International Library Company. It is illustrated by Charlotte Harding.

A volume on civic protection for young people will presently be published by the Macmillan Company. It is called "Safeguards for City Youth at Work and at Play," and is by Louise de Koven Bowen, with a preface by Jane Addams. The author has been connected with various organizations for the care of children in Chicago, and in the book she gives a survey of her experience with suggestions for improvement.

BOOKS WORTH READING

HERBERT WILLIAM CONN, Professor of Biology in Wesleyan University, gives what he calls the other side of eugenics in his book entitled "Social Heredity and Social Evolution." The author disavows any desire to discourage "agitation for a better inheritance by the best possible control of marriage," but he thinks the eugenists are overlooking an influence which weighs more heavily in determining human progress than the laws of inheritance on which eugenics is based. He deals with this influence in his book, concerning which he remarks in his preface:

> It is the purpose of this book to show that the laws of the evolution of animals and plants apply to human evolution only up to a certain point, beyond which man has been under distinct laws of his own. It is our purpose to show that while the human animal may doubtless have been developed under the laws which have brought about the evolution of the rest of the living world, the human social unit has been developed under the influence of a new set of forces which have had little or no influence in developing the animal kingdom.

The new set of forces to which Prof. Conn refers he calls "social heredity," and it acts, he says, with practical independence of the laws to which the eugenists are directing attention. (Abingdon Press. $1.50.)

The edition of Chaucer's works in modern but well-written and appropriate prose, by John S. P. Tatlock and Percy Mackaye, which first appeared two years ago, is put forth in a new edition, and deserves a word or two of new comment. "The Complete Works of Geoffrey Chaucer, Now First Put Into Modern English," (Macmillan,) is nearly complete enough to justify its title, except in the view of a very few students of English literature who demand all or none. One or two short poems the authenticity of which is doubted are omitted, as well as the translation of "Le Roman de la Rose," not all of which is Chaucer's, if he did any of it. Prose translations of small consequence to the student of Chaucer as a founder of English literature are omitted also, while "The Tale of Melibeus" and the "Parson's Tale" are abridged for other good reasons. But there is practically all of Chaucer here, and it is presented in a very attractive way, which will suit the general reader if not the philologist. Commendation on that storehouse of romance, "The Canterbury Tales," is not called for. It is all here, and in the best of print, with illustrations that suffice. The minor poems follow, and the "Troilus and Criseyde" has its place in the volume. There is an informing sketch of the poet, together with a glossary and notes. Naturally, the glossary is brief. An attractive title for this book would be "Chaucer Without a Glossary."

An anthology for campers and for all others who tour the world's wildernesses is published in a little volume entitled "The Gypsy Trail." The compilation is the work of Mary D. Hopkins and Pauline Goldmark, and they have taken their selections from the poets of all the ages, from the time of Euripides to the present day. For the most part the chosen verses are in English, but there are some German, French, and Latin quotations. The collection is under sub-titles—"The Call of the Open," "The Joy of the Road," "Inland Waters," "The Sea," "The Hills," "Evening," "Autumn," and so on. (Mitchell Kennerley. $1.25.)

A study of conditions surrounding New York girls of the working class, of ages ranging from 14 to 18 years, prepared for the Association of Neighborhood Workers of New York City by Harriet McDouall Daniels of the Union Settlement, is published in a little book entitled "The Girl and Her Chance." The facts Miss Daniels presents furnish an impressive demonstration that the class to which they relate needs help, and indicate lines along which those who are disposed to respond to the existing needs may profitably direct their activities. (Fleming H. Revell Company.)

In "Hashimura Togo, Domestic Scientist," Wallace Irwin gives us a new series of sketches about our old and amusing friend, the Japanese kitchen boy and maid-of-all-work. Hashimura holds his own as a comical chronicler of funny experiences. (Hearst's International Library Company. 75 cents.)

A volume entitled "How to Cook and Why" has been contributed to Harper's Home Economics Series by Elizabeth Condit and Jessie A. Long, both members of the teaching force of Pratt Institute. It is not a cook book, but a treatise in which the authors set forth in a simple way the scientific principles underlying the provision of good food at the smallest possible cost; it was written, we are told, as a response to the needs of "the girl of high school age and the average housekeeper." (Harper & Brothers. $1.)

An admirable course of instruction for those who wish to write well is provided in "A Guide to Good English," a textbook and a work of reference prepared by Robert Palfrey Utter, Associate Professor of English in Amherst College. The author has had large experience as writer, editor and teacher, and through it he has learned what the aspiring but unpractised writer is apt to need in the way of instruction; he responds to the need with notable directness and lucidity. (Harper & Brothers. $1.20.)

The first installment of a history of the European war which The London Times will print and publish in pamphlet form contains a preface setting forth the plan and purpose of the scheme, a chapter recounting the political antecedents which led up to the war and another dealing with the German Army and German strategy. Both of these latter are written, of course, from the English point of view, but the former gives an excellent résumé and interpretation, from that viewpoint, of German home and international policies from the beginning of the present Kaiser's reign, while the second chapter describes the organization of the German Army, the means by which it had been brought to the state of readiness with which it entered upon the war, and the German plans for the early part of the campaign. The pamphlet is fully illustrated, with portraits and views and has several maps. Subsequent issues to appear weekly will carry on the story of the war as it develops.

A CRITICAL STUDY OF GERMAN TACTICS and a
COMPARISON WITH FRENCH TACTICS
By
Major de Pardieu, a French General Staff Officer.
Authorized English Translation.
By Capt. C. F. Martin, U. S. Cavalry.

THE BOOK YOU NEED NOW!

Written in Easy Conversational Style.

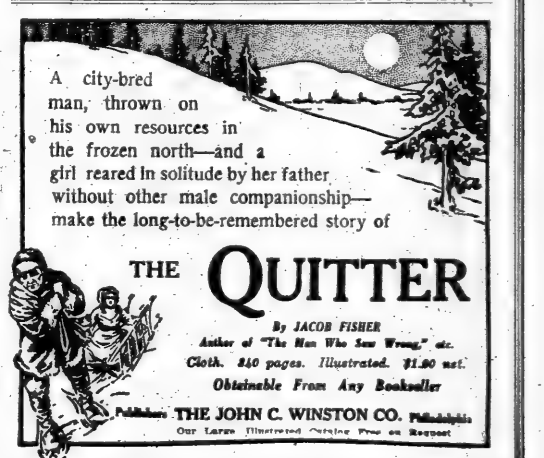
What the two greatest military nations do on the battlefield, and how they do it. Major de Pardieu is a keen student of psychology and constantly compares that of the Germans with that of the French.

"A Russian is different from a Japanese. A Turk from an Italian—as a Frenchman is different from a German, and an American is not like either."

EVERY AMERICAN SHOULD READ THIS BOOK.

It will make you understand the World War.
It will open your eyes. It will fascinate you.
ORDER IT TODAY!

$1.25 postpaid from U. S. Cavalry Assn., Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.



A city-bred man, thrown on his own resources in the frozen north—and a girl reared in solitude by her father without other male companionship—make the long-to-be-remembered story of

THE QUITTER

By JACOB FISHER
Author of "The Man Who Saw Wrong," etc.
Cloth. 350 pages. Illustrated. $1.00 net.
Obtainable From Any Bookseller

Publishers THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO. Philadelphia
Our Large Illustrated Catalog Free on Request

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Many Interesting Volumes Among Current Publications

THERE was never greater variety in any one volume of miscellaneous tales than in "The Diamond Story Book," the contents selected and edited by Penrhyn W. Coussens, (Duffield & Co., $1.50.) The folklore and fairy tales of many countries have been studied, literature has been searched, and the lives of heroes and saints have been put into new form to make 415 pages of interesting reading matter. There are illustrations in color by Ethel Greene. The young people who like wonder tales will be delighted to find all this new material and old matter in a strange dress. "Stories from Northern Myths," which tell of Thor and Odin, Siegfried and Brunhilda, and the mighty heroes of the north peoples commences with a chapter on "How All Things Began" and finishes with "The Twilight of the Gods." It is by Emilie Kip Baker. (Macmillan Company, $1.25, illustrated.)

Very interesting is a thick volume by E. Keble Chatterton, "The Romance of Piracy," (Lippincott, $1.50, illustrated.) It is a history of pirates or sea robbers from the very earliest days. It tells of the Vikings, of English, Turkish, and Chinese pirates, and there is also the true history of Capt. Kidd. Brought out by the same publishers is another exciting book of adventures, also true, "Adventures of Missionary Explorers," by R. A. M. Ibbotson, ($1.50;) a book of science for children, "The Great Ball on Which We Live," by Charles R. Gibson, and by the same writer "Our Good Slave Electricity," ($1 each.) A practical, helpful book, with many illustrations and diagrams in the text, is "Harper's Everyday Electricity," Don Cameron Shafer, (Harper's, $1.)

The name shows that there was something warm about Christopher Beck's "The Crimson Aeroplane," (Lippincott, $1.) It is "hot stuff," as the boys say, and as early as the second chapter the adventures begin and a man clinging to a reef in a raging sea is saved by a clever boy with the aeroplane, who swings a rope to him, carries him off, and drops him in a hay field. That is only a beginning.

"The Boy Emigrants," by Noah Brooks, a new edition of an old book, (Scribner's, $2,) is a real study of life on the plains in the early days, more carefully written and of more real interest than many boys' books. It is a story of two boys from a large family, who find that there are too many of them at home; in other words, as Barnard says, "the pie won't go round," and the book gives the history of travel by emigrant train to the West in search of gold. The really beautiful colored illustrations are by H. T. Dunn. A book which gives a summary of its contents in its title is "Buffalo Bill and the Overland Trail, Being the Story of How Boy and Man Worked Hard and Played Hard to Blaze the White Trail, by Wagon Train, Stage Coach, and Pony Express, Across the Great Plains and the Mountains Beyond that the American Republic Might Expand and Flourish," by Edwin L. Sabin, (Lippincott, $1.25.) There is a chronological table at the beginning of the book giving an outline of the life of William Frederick Cody, Buffalo Bill. Two English stories by the same publishers, thick volumes with colored illustrations, are "Ian Hardy, Naval Cadet," and "Ian Hardy, Midshipman," by Commander E. H. Currey, R. N., ($1.50 each.) Also from the Lippincott's is an exciting Canadian tale, with adventure-telling pictures, "Gildersley's Tenderfoot, a Story of Redskin and Prairie," by Robert Leighton, and "A Hero of the Mutiny," an East Indian story by Escott Lynn, colored illustrations, (each book $1.50.) A couple of typical American books are "Bert Wilson in the Rockies" and "Bert Wilson on the Gridiron," by J. W. Duffield, (Sully & Kleinteich, 60 cents each.)

"Tell-Me-Why Stories About Animals," by C. H. Claudy, (McBride, Nast & Co., $1.25,) are just what the name implies—they are stories in answer to the questions of the small boy, the questions and answers all in, all telling just what one would like to know. The interesting colored pictures are by Thomas Wrenn. "A Book of Fairy-Tale Foxes," a small volume, full of small stories of that wily animal the fox, is made up from favorite folklore tales, edited by Clifton Johnson, with clever pictures by Frank A. Mankivell, (Houghton Mifflin Company, 75 cents.) Two other books of animal stories by Howard R. Garis are "Uncle Wiggily's Automobile" and "Neddie and Beckie Stubtail," (R. F. Fenno & Co., each 40 cents.) Uncle Wiggily is a wise old rabbit and Neddie anad Beckie are little bears, the children of the big bears, Mr. and Mrs. Stubtail. Beckie's dolly is named Isabella Trolleycar Jamkitchen. There are colored pictures. "The Bugaboo Men," by Louise Rand Badcom, are funny creatures, like nothing one has ever seen, growing, all white, on gay-colored pages of the book, with a rhyme opposite each picture. (Sully & Kleinteich, $1.)

Older girls will be delighted with "Little Women Letters from the House of Alcott," a book compiled by Jessie Bonstelle and Marian de Forest, (Little, Brown & Co., $1.25.) While it is said to be for older people who read and loved "Little Women" and all of Louisa M. Alcott's books it will also delight the girls of today. It gives an insight into the home life of the Alcotts and the "little women" through the letters written to the children, facsimiles of some of them given, and gay and improving rhymes to celebrate birthdays and other special occasions. There are pictures, the Alcott homestead at Concord, Mass., and portraits.

"Talks to Freshman Girls," by Helen Dawes Brown, (Houghton Mifflin Company, 75 cents,) is a small book of small essays which will give the girls for whom it is written several new and interesting points of view. "Imagina," by Julia Ellsworth Ford, with delightful illustrations in color and black and white by Arthur Rackham and Lauren Ford, is, as one may guess, an imaginative tale. A lonely boy, artist and poet, with the heart of artist and poet, tells the story, his story. Imagina is a beautiful vision of the boy's dreams, but who comes to him in the flesh later, a gay little maiden with red gold hair. A sweet little story of a small English-German girl who visits her uncle in Germany is "Peep-in-the-World," by F. E. Crichton, (Longmans, Green & Co.) There is a pleasing fairy tale atmosphere that is to be found in many German books.

"The Universe and the Mayonnaise," by T. Brailsford Robertson, (John Lane Company, $1.25,) is a book of short science essays, with black and white marginal sketches and full-page colored pictures. A good girls' book is "Fairmount's Quartette," by Etta Anthony Baker, (Little, Brown & Co., $1.30.) It is the fourth book in the series telling of lively but purposeful girls and their friends. A college story is "Jean Cabot in Cap and Gown," by Gertrude Fisher Scott. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard, $1.)

An unusual and interesting book, with many colored illustrations, is "Legends and Stories of Italy," by Amy Steedman. (Putnam.) There is a religious significance to the legends, as there is to "A Knight of the Cross," by Lawrence B. Saint, (Jacobs, $1.50.) This is a modern "Pilgrim's Progress." There are a number of colored illustrations. There are many colored pictures, too, illustrating "In Fairyland, Tales Told Again," by Louey Chisholm, (Putnam.) These are the old familiar stories, but retold as a mother puts them into familiar language for her own little people.

"Lost in the Fur Country," by D. Lange, is an interesting tale of early Indian days. Twins, a boy and a girl, are stolen and brought up in different Indian camps. The boy finally discovers his sister and together they return to their white parents. In the meantime they have learned to love the Indian parents of their adoption. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard, $1.) "The Treasure Finders" is the history of the discovery of four countries, including Columbus and America, by Oliver Clay, (Duffield & Co., $1.25.) The pictures are old-time illustrations. "Lefty o' the Bush" is a lively baseball story by Burt L. Standish, (Barse & Hopkins, 60 cents.) "Ned Brewster's Caribou Hunt," by Chauncey J. Hawkins, (Little, Brown & Co., $1.20,) is a name which tells the story of the book. The pictures are all from photographs in the caribou country.

American Biographies

Two interesting volumes have been added to the series known as the American Crisis Biographies. One of the volumes contains a narrative and critical survey of the life of Daniel Webster, written by Frederick Austin Ogg, Professor of History in Simmons College, Boston; in the other volume an account is given by Colyer Meriwether of the career of Raphael Semmes, the famous privateersman and commerce destroyer, who commanded the Confederate cruisers Sumter and Alabama. Both these books are well and fairly written. (Philadelphia: George W. Jacobs & Co. $1.25 per volume.)

RUSSIAN MUSIC

Two Histories of a Subject of Increasing Interest

THE RUSSIAN OPERA. By Rosa Newmarch. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co. $1.75.

A HISTORY OF RUSSIAN MUSIC. By M. Montagu-Nathan. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons.

BOTH these books owe their appearance this year no doubt to the extraordinary interest that has been taken in the Russian opera company in London and Paris in the last two seasons. Nothing quite like the excitement that filled the Drury Lane Theatre in London night after night had been witnessed in the recent history of that venerable temple of dramatic art over productions of a sort of music that a few years, or, perhaps, as it seems, a few months ago, would have outraged the ears and horrified the souls of even the most cosmopolitan of London audiences. Part of this was due, no doubt, to the extraordinary power and vividness of the performances given by the Russian singers and pantomimists, but there was something in the disclosure of the unfamiliar music of the newest, as well of a somewhat older school of composers, that seized and possessed the listeners' souls. What it was may be divined by those who heard "Boris Godunoff" in New York.

Mrs. Newmarch's thoroughly competent presentation of the history of this operatic music is, therefore, welcome. She has long been known as one of the musical writers in English most familiar with the subject at first hand, and her previous books have acquired authority. There has been a good deal written about the work of the modern Russian school of music, but the earliest beginnings and the latest developments of that school have received much less consideration. Mrs. Newmarch confines herself to the operatic literature, but her study takes her back to the dawn of music in Russia, to the music of the primitive Slavs, the "gleemen," the Biblical plays, the early ballet, and the first public theatre in Russia in 1703. The first Russian operas were for the most part echoes of contemporary Italian art, and, indeed, were mostly composed by imported Italian musicians. There seems to be some uncertainty as to the first Russian national opera, but before the end of the eighteenth century numerous operas had been produced by native Russians. It is interesting to find one of them, by Fomin, called "The Americans," the Americans being red Indians. In many of these operas native folk songs were used, but they were crowded out by the increasing cosmopolitanism of Russian society till Glinka came to sound the national note more clearly and to establish the real starting point of the Russian school of later times.

There are chapters there on Dargomijsky, Rubinstein, Balakireff, and his circle of the "five" so often spoken of, besides himself, Moussorgsky, Borodin, Cui, and Rimsky Korsakoff—and of these there are many interesting personal details given. There is a chapter, of course, on Tschaikowsky, and the more recent and most recent composers, as well as the leading operatic artists of the present time, receive attention. Mrs. Newmarch's plan includes the analysis and description of the most important operatic works of the Russian school. Her book on the whole affords a valuable addition to our knowledge of a musical development that has been described rather fragmentarily hitherto.

Mr. Montagu Nathan undertook at about the same time to fill the same gap, but his book does not enter into a study of the earlier period. He begins with Glinka and his immediate predecessors and traverses from this period much the same ground as Mrs. Newmarch, but he writes with something less of authority, with a less confidence in the use of original sources, and with apparently the necessity of resorting to translations and other second-hand information that Mrs. Newmarch has no need of. Mr. Montagu Nathan notes as one of the developments since Rimsky Korsakoff a "decline of nationalism" in Russian music. Glazounoff, Liadoff, Liapounoff, Arensky, his pupils and friends, all show a neglect of the native element in their works, and it may also be said that none of them are first-class men. As for Tschaikowsky, the author will not allow his music a trace of nationalism nor the composer a high and lasting place. He did has folk tunes, but in the western tradition his music "reflects hardly anything more than his own very distinct personality—a personality lacking in more than one characteristic attribute of the Russian."

The latest product of the Russian school, Stravinsky, Mr. Montagu Nathan considers to be one who shows "how a national manner may pass from the primitive to the secondary stage" without hampering the composer's development or inspiration. Scriabin and some of the less prominent of the composers, with Stravinsky, bring the book to a close. There is an appendix containing a series of short notices of composers not dealt with in the rest of the book.

PUBLISHED TODAY

A Reply to Bernhardi and Pan-Germanism

What Germany Wants

By EDMUND VON MACH

A comprehensive and clear-cut presentation of Germany's position.

Frontispiece. 157 pages. Cloth.

$1.00 net

LITTLE, BROWN & CO., Publishers, BOSTON

Who Is Responsible?

Armageddon and After

By Cloudesley Brereton

16mo, cloth, 50 cents

This book undertakes to show how Prussian tradition, starting with Frederick the Great, has succeeded in corrupting the Germany of today.

The Real "Truth About Germany"

From the English Point of View

By Douglas Sladen

With an Appendix by A. Maurice Low. Cloth. 12°. $1.00.

An analysis and refutation of a series of unfounded and incorrect statements contained in a monograph recently issued in Germany under the title of "Truth About Germany," with full text of the monograph.

New York 2 W. 45th St. G. P. Putnam's Sons London 24 Bedford St.

LATEST PUBLICATIONS.

History and Biography

JOHN AND SARAH, Duke and Duchess of Marlborough. 1660-1744. By Stuart J. Reid. 8vo. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons.

THE LIFE OF RUTHERFORD BIRCHARD HAYES. By Charles Richard Williams. 2vo. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company. Two volumes. $7.50.

ADDRESSES OF U. M. ROSE. With a memoir by George B. Rose. 8vo. Chicago: George I. Jones, 202 South Clark Street.

BERNADOTTE. The first Phase, 1763-99. By D. Flunket Barton. 8vo. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons.

THE HISTORY OF ENGLAND. From the Accession of James II. By Lord Macaulay. Edited by Charles Harding Firth. 8vo. New York: The Macmillan Company. Six volumes. Vol. IV., $3.50.

THE HISTORY OF BROWN UNIVERSITY, 1764-1914. By Walter C. Bronson. 8vo. Providence: Published by the University.

Literature

Including Essays, Poetry, Drama, and Art

JEAN-JACQUES ROUSSEAU. By Christian Gauss. 12mo. Princeton, N. J.: Princeton University Press. 65 cents.

BIBLICAL LIBRARIES: A Sketch of Library History from 3400 B. C. to A. D. 150. By Ernest Cushing Richardson. 12mo. Princeton, N. J.: Princeton University Press. $1.25.

THE THEATRE OF TODAY. By Hiram Kelly Moderwell. 12mo. New York: John Lane Company. $1.50.

THE SPIRIT OF JAPANESE POETRY. By Yone Noguchi. 12mo. New York: G. P. Dutton & Co. (Wisdom of the East Series.) 70 cents.

THE OPEN DOOR. By Hugh Black. 12mo. New York: Fleming H. Revell Company. $1.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW: A Critical Study. By Joseph McCabe. 12mo. New York: Mitchell Kennerley.

THE MARY CARLETON NARRATIVES: 1663-1673. By Ernest Bernbaum. 8vo. Cambridge: Harvard University Press.

THE GRAND CANTON. By Henry van Dyke. 12mo. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.25.

THE CRY OF YOUTH. By Harry Kemp. 12mo. New York: Mitchell Kennerley. $1.35.

HANS BREITMANN'S BALLADS. By Charles Godfrey Leland. 8vo. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company. $7.50.

RADA: A Drama of War in One Act. By Alfred Noyes. 12mo. New York: Frederick A. Stokes & Co.

MONOLOGUES AND DUOLOGUES. By May Isabel Fiske. 12mo. Boston: Samuel French & Co.

ORTHODOXY. By Nina Wilcox Putnam. 12mo. New York: Mitchell Kennerley. 60 cents.

ADVENTURES WITH A SKETCH BOOK. By Donald Maxwell. 8vo. New York: John Lane Company. $2.

ETCHING. By George T. Plowman. 12mo. New York: John Lane Company. $1.50.

ESSENTIALS IN MUSIC HISTORY. By Thomas Tapper and Percy Goetschius. 8vo. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. $2.

Travel and Description

SWITZERLAND IN WINTER. By Will and Carina Cuddy. 8vo. New York: James Pott & Co.

THE BOOK OF THE BLUE SEA. By Henry Newbolt. 12mo. New York: Longmans, Green & Co. $1.50.

JAPAN TODAY AND TOMORROW. By Hamilton Wright Mabie. 12mo. New York: The Macmillan Company. $2.

APPEARANCES; Notes of Travel, East and West. By G. Lowes Dickinson. 8vo. New York: Doubleday, Page & Co. $1.

THINGS SEEN IN SWITZERLAND. By W. Barnes Steveni. 12mo. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co. 75 cents.

EARLY AMERICAN CHURCHES. By Aymar Embury. 8vo. New York: Doubleday, Page & Co. $2.50.

ROUND THE WONDERFUL WORLD. By G. E. Mitton. 8vo. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

AROUND THE WORLD IN ANY NUMBER OF DAYS. By Maurice Baring. 8vo. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company. $1.50.

THROUGH THE GRAND CANYON FROM WYOMING TO MEXICO. By Ellsworth L. Kolb. 8vo. New York: The Macmillan Company. $2.

THE MODERNIZING OF THE ORIENT. By Clayton Sedgwick Cooper. 8vo. New York: McBride, Nast & Co.

Science, Sociology, and Politics

OPEN-AIR POLITICS. By "Junius Jnr." 12mo. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company. $1.35.

THE CAUSE AND CURE OF CRIME. By C. R. Henderson. 12mo. Chicago: A. C. McClurg & Co. 60 cents.

THE GREAT WAR: From Outbreak to Fall of Antwerp. By Frank H. Simonds. 8vo. New York: Mitchell Kennerley. $1.35.

THE PAN-ANGLES. By Sinclair Kennedy. New York: Longmans, Green & Co. $1.75.

LIBERTY. A Statement of the British Case. By Arnold Bennett. 12mo. New York: George Doran Company. 25 cents.

MONARCHICAL SOCIALISM IN GERMANY. By Ernest Roberts. 12mo. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.25.

THE ABOLITION OF POVERTY. By Jacob H. Hollander. 12mo. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company. 75 cents.

THE JUDICIAL VETO. By Horace A. Davis. 12mo. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company. $1.

A MANUAL OF OCCULTISM. By Sepharial. 12mo. Philadelphia: David McKay. $1.50.

Religion and Philosophy

FOOTNOTES TO LIFE. By Dr. Frank Crane. 12mo. New York: John Lane Company. $1.

THE HOUSE WE LIVE IN. By William Elliot Griffis. 12mo. New York: Funk & Wagnalls Co. 60 cents.

THE MIND OF THE MESSIAH. By Charlotte H. Adams. 12mo. New York: National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association, 600 Lexington Avenue. 50 cents.

GOSPEL AND GOVERNMENT. By Wilson Lloyd Bevan. 8vo. New York: Educational Department Church Missions House.

THE LAW OF FAITH. By Joseph F. Randolph. 8vo. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. $1.50.

THE INNER CIRCLE. By the Rev. Edgar De Witt Jones. 8vo. New York: Fleming H. Revell Company. $1.

STUDENTS AND THE WORLD-WIDE EXPANSION OF CHRISTIANITY. Edited by Fennell P. Turner. 8vo. New York: Student Volunteer Movement. $1.85.

Fiction

THE WIFE OF SIR ISAAC HARMAN. By H. G. Wells. 12mo. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.50.

MARTHA AND CUPID. By Julie M. Lippmann. 12mo. New York: Henry Holt & Co. $1.

HAPPY HAWKINS IN THE PANHANDLE. By Robert Alexander Wason. 8vo. Boston: Small, Maypard Company. $1.35.

A CHRISTMAS TALE. By Mary Stewart Cutting. 8vo. New York: Doubleday, Page & Co.

BRITTON OF THE SEVENTH. By Cyrus Townsend Brady. 8vo. Chicago: A. C. McClurg & Co. $1.50.

THE THREE SISTERS. By May Sinclair. 8vo. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.35.

THE GRAND ASSIZE. By Hugh Carton. 8vo. New York: Doubleday, Page & Co. $1.35.

FATHER RALPH. By Gerald O'Donovan. 12mo. New York: Mitchell Kennerley. $1.40.

THE PASTOR'S WIFE. Anonymous. 12mo. New York: Doubleday, Page & Co.

DRIFT AND MASTERY. By Walter Lippmann. 12mo. New York: Mitchell Kennerley. $1.50.

THE MAN WHO DREAMED RIGHT. By W. Hot White. 12mo. New York: Mitchell Kennerley. $1.

THE ENEMY OF WOMAN. By Winifred Graham. 12mo. New York: Mitchell Kennerley. $1.35.

SELINA. By George Madden Martin. 12mo. New York: D. Appleton & Co.

ANNE FEVERSHAM. By J. C. Snaith. 12mo. New York: D. Appleton & Co.

KENT KNOWLES: "QUAHAUG." By Joseph Lincoln. 12mo. New York: D. Appleton & Co. $1.30.

GERALD-NORTHROP. By Claude C. Washburn. 12mo. New York: Duffield & Co. $1.35.

THE LITTLE GOD EGBU. By Beulah Marie Dix. 12mo. New York: Duffield & Co. $1.35.

Juvenile and Educational

THE YOUNG AND FIELD LITERARY READER. By Ella Phagg Young and Walter Taylor Field. 8vo. New York: Ginn & Co. Books III. and IV.

A PRACTICAL CHEMISTRY FOR HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS. By Charles G. Cook. 12mo. New York: D. Appleton & Co.

FAIRY TALES FROM HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN. Illustrated by Dugald S. Walker. 8vo. New York: Doubleday, Page & Co. $1.35.

THE BOY FUGITIVES IN MEXICO. By Werthing Green. 8vo. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company. $1.25.

THE LITTLE STRAWMAN. By Cora Work Hunter. 12mo. Pictures by Frances Beem. New York: Rand McNally Company. 75 cents.

THE FLOWER BABIES' BOOK. Verses by Anna M. Scott. Pictures by "Penny" Ross. 12mo. Chicago: Rand McNally Company.

THE BUTTERFLY BABIES' BOOK. Verses by Elisabeth Gordon. Pictures by "Penny" Ross. 12mo. New York: Rand McNally Company.

FAIRY FAYS. Four Adventures of the Prairie Dog. By Grace Coolidge. 12mo. New York: Rand McNally Company.

THE DOERS. By William John Hopkins. 12mo. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company.

FABLES. By Robert Louis Stevenson. 8vo. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons.

PRINCE TRIXIE; OR, BABY BROWNIE'S BIRTHDAY. By Eldridge H. Babin. 8vo. New York: Rand McNally Company. $1.

FAIRY TALES OF EASTERN EUROPE. By Jeremiah Curtin. 12mo. New York: McBride, Nast & Co. $1.50.

THE TREASURE FINDERS. By Oliver Clay. 12mo. New York: Duffield & Co.

IMAGINA. By Julia R. Ford. 8vo. New York: Duffield & Co. $1.50.

TELL ME WHY STORIES ABOUT ANIMALS. By C. H. Claudy. 12mo. New York: McBride, Nast & Co. $1.25.

THE DIAMOND STORY BOOK. By Putnam W. Cousens. 12mo. New York: Duffield & Co.

LEFTY O' THE BUSH. By Burt L. Standish. 12mo. New York: Barse & Hopkins. 60 cents.

LEGENDS AND STORIES OF ITALY. By Amy Steedman. 8vo. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

FAIRYLAND. By Louey Chisholm. 8vo. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

NED BREWSTER'S CARIBOU HUNT. By Chauncey J. Hawkins. 12mo. Boston: Little, Brown & Co.

LOST IN THE FUR COUNTRY. By D. J. Lange. 12mo. Boston: Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company.

JEAN CABOT IN CAP AND GOWN. By Gertrude Fisher Scott. 12mo. Boston: Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company.

A KNIGHT OF THE CROSS. By Lawrence B. Saint. 12mo. Philadelphia: George W. Jacobs & Co.

A SUMMER SIEGE. By Lucy T. Foer. 12mo. Boston: Sherman, French & Co.

A CHILD WENT FORTH. By Yei Pawlowska. 12mo. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company.

REMEMBER RHYMES. By A. A. and E. B. Knipe. 8vo. New York: Hearst's International Library Company. $1.35.

PEEP IN THE WORLD. By F. E. Crichton. 12mo. New York: Longmans, Green & Co.

HANDICAPPED. By Homer Greene. 12mo. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company. $1.25.

BLACK TALES FOR WHITE CHILDREN. Anonymous. 12mo. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company. $1.50.

THE BOOK OF FRIENDLY GIANTS. By Eunice Fuller. 8vo. New York: The Century Company. $2.

THE JOLLY BOOK OF BOXCRAFT. By Patten Beard. 8vo. New York: Frederick A. Stokes & Co. $1.25.

HANS ANDERSEN'S FAIRY TALES. Illustrated by Louis Rhead. 8vo. New York: Harper & Brothers.

ROSALY'S NEW SCHOOL. By Elsie Oxenham. 12mo. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Company.

JO MAXWELL, SCHOOLGIRL. By Linda C. Reid. 12mo. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Company.

SONS OF THE SEA. By Christopher Beck. 12mo. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Company.

A BAND OF MIRTH. By L. T. Meade. 12mo. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Company. $1.25.

TEDDY LESTER'S SCHOOLDAYS. By John Finnemore. 12mo. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Company. $1.25.

MOLL MEREDYTH, LANDLADY. By Eby Baldwin. 12mo. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Company. $1.25.

THE THREE ARROWS. By Edward S. Ellis. 12mo. Philadelphia: John Wanamaker Company.

REMEMBER THE ALAMO. By Edward S. Ellis. 12mo. Philadelphia: John Wanamaker Company.

WILD KINDRED OF FUR, FEATHER, AND FIN. By Frank H. Thompson. 12mo. Boston: W. A. Wilde & Co. $1.25.

ELIZABETH, BETSY, AND BESS, SCHOOLMATES. By Amy E. Blanchard. 12mo. Boston: W. A. Wilde Company. $1.

New Editions

GERMANY AND THE GERMANS FROM AN AMERICAN POINT OF VIEW. By Price Collier. 12mo. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. 75 cents.

THE ARABIAN NIGHTS. Illustrated by Milo Winter. 8vo. New York: Rand McNally Company. $1.25.

CASH FOR BOOKS

SPECIALLY WANTED. 11TH EDITION BRITANNICA

Executors, Administrators and others will find it to their advantage to communicate with us before disposing of large or small collections of books, autographs, prints or other literary property. Prompt removal. Cash down.

HENRY MALKAN,

New York's Largest Bookstore,

42 Broadway and 41 New Street, N. Y.

Telephone Bowling Green 2000-2001.

WE BUY BOOKS

Paying more than most dealers. If you wish to sell single volumes, small collections, or entire libraries, write or call.

Putnams' 2 West 45th St. Just West of 5th Ave.

2 NEW EDITIONS

AIR

Its Nature, Growth, and Common Affections, with Rules for Its Preservation. Profusely Illustrated.

By RICHARD W. MULLER, B. S., M. D. Wm. R. Jenkins Co. Cloth. $1.00.

"This book contains much sound information, and will be welcomed by those who would check tuberculosis."—N. Y. Times.

HIS ROYAL HAPPINESS

By MRS. EVERARD COTES

A timely and startling international romance relating the dramatic complications which arise when an English Prince happens to fall in love with a daughter of a President of the United States. An idyllic, breezy and altogether charming romance.

$1.35 net. Postage Extra. At All Booksellers.

D. APPLETON & COMPANY, Publishers, New York

BookExchange

Twenty-five cents a line.

McCALL: HISTORY OF GEORGIA, 2vo; Hannegin, Beachrying van Louisiana, 1858, $115; Lewis and Clark's Travels, 1809, $15; Golden: Five Indian Nations, 1755, $17.50; L. Hunaldus' Travels, 1673; Potente: An Ancient of Carthagena, 1686, $50; Evans: Geographical Essays, 1755, $200; Acrelius: New Sweden, 1759, $40; Bjorck: Conversation, 1759, $50; and many other desirable items, including Lea Camia, Bonnell, Indiana, New Jersey, New England Primers, Rare Pamphlets, etc., in new Catalogue of Rare Americana, sent this week. (Chas. Fred. Heartman, 6 Lexington Ave., New York City. Phone, Gramercy 6264.

TWO SPECIALS.

Cooper's Novels, illustrated by Darley; 32 vols., decorated cloth; N. Y.: W. A. Townsend & Co.; condition very good; $75. Dickens's Works, (Library Edition,) 30 vols., ½ calf; hundreds of illustrations on steel; Chapman & Hall edition, with Richard & Fields imprint, 1867; condition good; $35. THE SHERWOOD CO., 19 John St., N. Y. "Phone" 3912 Cort. Send for our catalogue.

"BUY A SALE OF BOOKS" AND FILL those empty shelves. 100,000 books offered by New York's largest second-hand bookstore at greatly reduced prices: Oscar Wilde's Works, 10 vols., $8; Parkman's Works, 13 vols., $15; Prescott's Works, 13 vols., $16; Balzac's Works, 16 vols., $16; Maupassant's Works, genuine unexpurgated edition; 17 vols., $32. Catalogues free. Schulte's Bookstore, 132 East 23d.

SHAKESPEARE, 15 VOLS., HALF MOrocco, $12; Benconsfield, 2 vols., subscription edition, $15; Morley's Life of Gladstone, $3.50; Ridpath's History of the United States, 5 vols., half morocco, $4; Hawthorne's Works, 24 vols., Wayside Edition, $10; American Statesmen Series, 32 vols., $30. Catalogue ready. Daytar Bookstore, 300 West 23d St.

SCHILLER'S BARGAINS: MOLLET'S HISTORICAL WORKS, 7 vols., $8; Thier's French Revolution, 5 vols., $7; Grote's History Greece, illustrated, 10 vols., $8; Gibbon's Rome, 4 vols., $5; Ridpath's History World, last edition, 9 vols., $20; Appleton's Cyclopedia of American Biography, 6 vols., $10; Hallam's History Middle Ages, 3 vols., $1.75. All above sets in fine condition. Schulte's Bookstore, 132 E. 23d.

BOOKS—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT BOOKS SUPplied, no matter on what subject. Write us. We can get you any book ever published. Please state what you want. When in England call and see our 50,000 rare books. BAKER'S GREAT BOOKSHOP, 14-16 John Bright Street, Birmingham, England.

WILSON J. GILLAM,
Ye Olde Book Shoppe,
88 Lexington Ave.
Buys Libraries, Bric-a-Brac, or will arrange Auctions for your benefit.
Open Evenings.

BOOKS ON THE WEST—INDIANS—OVERland Travel—Pioneer Adventures—Mexico —Mexican War—South America, &c.—Catalogue of over 2,000 items sent on request. Hudson Book Co., 862 Hewitt Place, Bronx, N. Y. City.

RARE PORTRAITS OF WASHINGTON, Lincoln, etc.; book-plates; Americana and by Timothy Cole, Gustav Kruell, Walter Altemus; Old New York views; ex-libris literature. Geo. J. Beyer, 489 5th Av.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS ON RAILroads, Canals, Finance, Banking, Accountancy, Speculation, and Economics. DIXIE BOOK SHOP, 41 Liberty St. Catalogued.

KINGLE BOOKS AND COMPLETE LIbraries bought; good prices paid. Before selling write or telephone Davis' Book store, 206 West 23d St. Tel. Chelsea 8308.

THE FAR WEST. INDIAN FIGHTERS. Mormons, Californiana, etc. New list of books and pamphlets sent free. D. E. Marshall, 154 Nassau, New York.

CHAS. FRED. HEARTMAN, 86 LEXINGTON Av., N. Y. City. Rare and unique Americana, autographs, etc., bought and sold at private and public sales.

WILL PAY CASH FOR USED ELEVENTH edition of "Encyclopædia Britannica." Price be moderate. Louis Rhead, 217 Ocean Av., Brooklyn.

BOOKS, SECOND-HAND, AT HALF PRICES; new, 25% discount; books bought; catalogues free. Foyle, 121 Charing X Rd., London, Eng.

BOOKS, PRINTS, PAINTINGS, ANTIQUES, old and rare china, curios, bought and sold. MacCarthy, 58 Lexington Av. Open evenings.

BACK NUMBERS OF ALL AMERICAN and foreign periodicals supplied by Henri Gerard, 53 Nassau St., New York City.

OUT-OF-PRINT BOOKS FURNISHED.—H. R. Robinson, 410 River St., Troy, N. Y.

BACK NUMBERS OF MAGAZINES TO BE had at Abrahams Book Store, 145 4th Av.

WILL BUY FINE SETS AND RARE Books. Guy Stabestreet, 507 Fifth Av., N.Y.

SITUATIONS WANTED—MALE

WRITER, EDITOR, DEPARTMENT WRITER; forceful, taking style; general services; three days in week. S 49 Times.

EDITOR OR EDITORIAL WRITER; TAKE part or whole charge; or ads. (once printer) part time. S 50 Times.

SITUATION WANTED—FEMALE.

MANUSCRIPTS TYPEWRITTEN. WORK done promptly and accurately. Charges reasonable. L 144 Times.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BOOKSELLERS TO THE WORLD

All Books
All Languages
All Subjects

BRENTANO'S
5th Ave. & 27th St., N. Y.

FOR AUTOGRAPH LETTERS,
Original Drawings, Fine and Rare Books, Bindings and Objects of Art.
VISIT P. F. MADIGAN'S SHOP,
251 Fifth Av., Entrance 46th St., N. Y.

EILSHEMIUS
The Shakespeare of the U. S. of America.
Sixty Sonnets.
29 W. 57th St., N. Y. City.

Plays, musical comedies, sketches, scenarios, novels, short stories wanted. York Play Co., 606 W. 144th St. Suite 3D.

QUERIES AND ANSWERS IN ALL BRANCHES OF LITERATURE

COMMUNICATIONS for these columns should be addressed to the Editor of Queries and Answers, New York Times Review of Books. They should be written on only one side of the paper and must contain the name and address of the writer. If the inquirer prefers, initials only will be printed with the communication.

ANSWERS BY THE EDITOR

R. F. H.—Can you tell me something of the life and position as a poet of Alfred Noyes. If, as reported, he is to occupy a chair in one of our colleges A list of his poems, &c.?

Alfred Noyes was born in Staffordshire, England, Sept. 16, 1880. In 1905 he married Garnett, youngest daughter of the late Col. B. G. Daniels, United States Army. He was educated at Oxford. In 1913 he gave the Lowell Lectures in America on "The Sea in English Poetry." He has contributed poems and criticisms to various periodicals. His publications are: "Loom of Years" (poems) 1902; "The Flower of Old Japan" (a tale in verse) 1903; "Poems," 1904; "The Forest of Wild Thyme," 1905; "Drake," (an English epic) 1908; "Forty Singing Seamen," 1907; "The Magic Casement and Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border" (editor) 1908; "The Enchanted Island and Other Poems," 1909; "Collective Poems," two volumes, 1910; five volumes in America, with additional poems; "William Morris" (English Men of Letters) 1908. "Robin Hood," 1912; "Tales of the Mermaid Tavern," 1912; "The Wine Press" (a tale of war) 1913; "The Sea in English Poetry" (essays) 1913. "A Tale of Old Japan," set to music as a cantata by Coleridge-Taylor and performed by the Royal Choral Society in 1912 and 1913. His recreations are rowing and swimming. He ranks high among British living poets. We have not room for a list of his poems, &c. He was elected a member of Princeton Faculty in April, 1914, and is to deliver lectures at that university each year on modern English letters.

HELEN S. MEYENBERG.—Can you tell me about Margaret C. Hays and any information about where I can find her name pertaining to juvenile life?

Mrs. Hays's books have been published by F. A. Stokes Company, New York; J. B. Lippincott, Philadelphia, and G. W. Jacobs & Co., Philadelphia.

MARY P. COWLER.—Will you kindly tell me what poem of Tennyson's has this line in it:

"Follow the gleam."

The poem is called "Merlin and the Gleam."

THOMAS WELLS.—I am trying to locate a poem by Emily Bronte, "The Linnet in the Rocky Dells." I would appreciate any assistance you might render in finding the same.

The song asked for by our correspondent is printed in Stedman's "Victorian Anthology" and also in Stevenson's "Home Book of Verse."

Mrs. L. C. EDMONDSON.—Please let me know where I can purchase a book called "Our Daily Paths," written by T. S. Arthur and published more than forty years ago, in the sixties. He also edited T. S. Arthur's Magazine. I think he was a Congregational minister.

The book is out of print. A copy might be obtained by advertising for it, or in a second-hand book shop. These out-of-print books turn up from time to time at auction sales.

J. M. WOOD.—Can you tell me where I can find the poem "The Child in the Judgment Seat"? The last verse is all that I can remember. It runs thus:

"Go make thy garden fair as thou canst,
Thou never worked alone;
And perhaps the one that is next to thine
May see it and mend his own."

The author of the poem asked for above is Elizabeth R. Chase. It is printed in Best Selections No. 8, published by the Penn Publishing Company of Philadelphia, and also in Lincoln Literary Collection, published by the American Book Company, New York.

H. C. F.—Can you tell me where to find the words of the Christmas poem, "Annie and Willie's Prayer"?

The poem is printed in "Practical Public Speaking," by Prof. S. H. Clark of the University of Chicago, and F. M. Blanchard, which is published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, and in several other collections of verse.

ANSWERS FROM READERS

JOHN H. BAXTER.—The poem asked for by "E. L. W." in the Aug. 9 number of THE TIMES BOOK REVIEW, is entitled "Cleopatra Dying," and was written by Thomas S. Collier. It is as follows:

Sinks the sun below the desert,
Golden glows the sluggish Nile;
Purple flame crowns Spring and Temple,
Lights up every ancient pile
Where the old gods now are sleeping:
Isis and Osiris great,
Guard me, help me, give me courage
Like a Queen to meet my fate.

"I am dying, Egypt, dying,"
Let the Caesar's army come—
I will cheat him of his glory,
Though beyond the Styx I roam;
Shall he drag the beauty with him—
While the crowd his triumph sings?
No, no, never! I will show him
What lies in the blood of Kings.

Though he hold the golden scepter,
Rule the Pharaoh's sunny land,
Where old Nilus rolls resistless
Through the sweeps of silvery sand—
He shall never say I met him
Fawning abject, like a slave—
I will foil him, though to do it
I must cross the Stygian wave.

Oh, my hero, sleeping, sleeping—
Shall I meet you on the shore
Of Plutonian shadows? Shall we
Yet again meet and love once more?
See I follow in your footsteps—
Scorn the Caesar in his might;
For your love I will leap boldly
Into realms of death and night.

Down below the desert sinking,
Fades Apollo's brilliant car;
And from out the distant azure
Breaks the bright gleam of a star.
Venus, Queen of Love and Beauty,
Welcomes me to death's embrace,
Dying, free, proud, and triumphant,
The last sovereign of my race.

Dying, dying! I am coming,
Oh, my hero, to your arms;
You will welcome me, I know it—
Guard me from all rude alarms.
Hark! I hear the legions coming,
Hear the cries of triumph swell,
But proud Caesar, dead I scorn you,
Egypt, Antony, farewell.

Answers to this appeal were also received from P. C. Brennan, New York, and "Lawrence," Kingston, N. Y.

W. L. C.—The poem asked for by Eileen T. Walker in the Sept. 13 issue is "Dreamers of Dreams," by William Herbert Carruth. It is printed in a small volume of Prof. Carruth's poems, "Each in His Own Tongue, and Other Poems," published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

JOHN R. DRISCOLL.—The first poem inquired about by "L. K. C." in your issue of July 12 is an anonymous one which appeared in Monroe's Fifth Reader, published by Cowperthwait & Co., Philadelphia, Penn., forty years ago. The poem follows:

BRING BACK MY FLOWERS.

A child sat by a limpid stream,
And gazed upon the tide beneath;
Upon her cheek was joy's bright beam,
And on her brow a blooming wreath.
Her lap was filled with fragrant flowers,
And, as the clear brook babbled by,
She scattered down the rosy showers,
With many a wild and joyous cry.
And laughed to see the mingling tide
Upon its onward progress glide.

And time flew on, and flower by flower
Was cast upon the sunny stream;
But when the shades of eve did lower,
She woke up from her blissful dream,
"Bring back my flowers!" she wildly cried;
"Bring back the flowers I flung to thee!"
But Echo's voice alone replied,
As danced the streamlet down the lea.
And still, amid night's gloomy hours,
In vain she cried, "Bring back my flowers!"

O maiden, who on time's swift stream
Dost gayly see the moments flee,
In this poor child's delusive dream
An emblem may be found of thee!
Each moment is a perfumed rose.
Into thy hand by mercy given,
That thou its fragrance might dispose
And let its incense rise to heaven;
Else when death's shadow o'er thee lowers,
Thy heart will wail, "Bring back my flowers!"

A. B.—In reply to F. W. Carruth's query in your issue of Aug. 30 I would say that the lines he quotes are to be found in "Songs From an Italian Garden," by A. Mary F. Robinson. London, reprinted in The Bibelot: August, 1908, published by Mosher at Portland, Me.

I give below the third verse of the poem. "Stornelli and Strambotti":

Love is a bird that breaks its voice with singing,
Love is a rose blown open till it fall,
Love is a bee that dies of its own stinging,
And love the tinsel cross upon a pall.
Love is this siren, toward a quicksand bringing
Enchanted fishermen that hear her call;
Love is a broken heart—farewell—the wringing
Of dying hands. Ah, do not love at all.

A. W. DIXON.—In answer to your correspondent A. D. Douglas, who inquires of J. C. Snaith, the novelist, I may say that he lives in Nottingham, England, and spends most of the Summer playing cricket at Skegness, on the Lincolnshire coast, for various amateur clubs to which he belongs. At one time, I believe, he was on the staff of The Nottingham Daily Guardian. His address up to two years ago was West Bridgeford, Nottingham, England. It may be interesting to know that Sir James Barrie, the novelist and playwright, was back thirty-odd years ago, a reporter on another Nottingham paper, The Daily Express, and that there is a well-known inn, The Iron Kettle, next door to the office, where he used to go for home-brewed beer.

LAWRENCE.—The verses, "To the Vanquished," printed in THE REVIEW of Sept. 6, were written by George H. Broadhurst and published in Munsey's for November, 1898.

ALICE M. CATHCART.—In reply to "M. A. F.," who in your issue of Sept. 27, wishes to know the author of the lines:

It were better to sit and to spin on a stone
The whole year thro' with a babe at the knee,
With its brown hands reaching caressingly,
Than to sit in a girdle of gold and alone.

would say that the author is Joaquin Miller and the lines can be found in his poem, "Tales of the Amazons," Part IV.

ROBERT BARBOUR.—The poem about which Jean Ship inquired in your issue of June 14, in complete as it stands, but, in my copy, the fourth line reads: "The lion stands by his shore alone." The poem appeared in The Spectator, under the title, "Quid Leone Fortius," anonymously, and was reprinted in the Evening Post for June 1, 1895.

APPEALS TO READERS

E. G. SPERRY.—Can any of your readers tell me the name or author of a novel which I read within the past year and which I believe was written comparatively recently? The story deals with a Hudson Bay settlement in the Canadian woods, and the heroine is accused by the factor of stealing the records of the settlement. She is imprisoned by the factor, but subsequently released, and finally, after an attack on the settlement by the Indians and various other adventures, she marries him.

Also, can some reader give me the name of the hymn in which the following lines occur:

And the tears of the sower
And the song of the reaper
Shall mingle together in joy by and by.

SIMON GOLDSTEIN.—I recall a recitation descriptive of gruesome preparations made by a would-be suicide, which ends up humorously in that the self-murderer was only getting ready to shave. I remember having seen it in an old issue of Harper's Monthly, but forget the date. Can any of your readers furnish me with a copy or direct me to its whereabouts?

J. B. BLACKMORE.—Will some reader kindly give the title of the poem from which the following lines are taken, and the name of the author?

There is nothing here on earth deserves
Half of the thought we waste about it,
And thinking but destroys the nerves
When we could do so well without it.
So never sigh when you can sing,
But laugh like me at everything.

WILLIAM C. EDWARDS.—Can any of your readers tell me the author and title of a book which has this unique and prophetic dedication? It was published about thirty years ago, I think.

To R. T. Bush, whose vision keen
Saw through the masquerading,
And read in Europe's checkered scene
The proper tone and shading.
Who in the old world's horoscope
Saw blinding desolation,
And in the new world's brighter hope
The rescue of the nations.
Who, ere this book began,
Was the first to instigate it—
Be his the pleasure or the pain—
To him I dedicate it.

BOOKS WHICH ARE STIRRING PUBLIC OPINION

TREITSCHKE Expounded READ BERNHARDI Explained

Germany and England

By the late Prof. J. A. CRAMB. Cloth, net $1.00. Introduction by the Hon. JOSEPH H. CHOATE

"An eloquent piece of writing, informed with deep feeling."—Evening Post.
"A book which every American should read."—Hon. JOSEPH H. CHOATE.
"Nowhere else are the forces which led to the war so clearly set forth."—Lord ROBERTS.

The German Enigma

By GEORGES BOURDON, Sub-Editor of Figaro.

A record of interviews with the most prominent of German leaders, in 1913. With all these men he discussed the relations between France and Germany and the signs of the future. Cloth, net $1.25

One American's Opinion of the European War

By FREDERICK W. WHITRIDGE. Cloth, net 50 cents.
A sincere, forcible answer to German appeals for American sympathy.

E. P. DUTTON & CO. Publishers, 681 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

JUST PUBLISHED

JOSEPH C. LINCOLN'S GREATEST NOVEL

KENT KNOWLES:

"Quahaug"

By JOSEPH C. LINCOLN

Author of "Cap'n Dan's Daughter," "Mr. Pratt's Patients," etc.

A writer of adventure who leads a secluded bachelor life in Bayport, Cape Cod, is the hero of Mr. Lincoln's new novel. So reserved is he that the natives nickname him "Quahaug," which is Yankee for clam. Going abroad in search of copy with his cousin Hephzibah, a typical New England spinster, he falls in love with an English girl. The charming romance that follows is enlivened with many touches of the author's quaint and delightful humor. Especially amusing are the Cape Codders' views of England and things English.

Illustrated, $1.35 net. Postage extra.

D. APPLETON AND COMPANY
Publishers New York

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH. By Frederic S. Isham. The Bobbs-Merrill Company. 50 cents net.

"A very sublime and grand thing is truth in its way," quoth Mr. Sampson Brass, "though like other sublime and grand things, such as thunderstorms and that, we're not always over and above glad to see it." "Nor to tell it" might have added the hero of Mr. Isham's novel, who rashly contracted upon a wager "To tell the truth—to blurt out nothing but the truth to every one and on every occasion for three whole weeks." Naturally, the story of those three weeks as spent by an erstwhile popular and tactful young man makes amusing reading, though Mr. Isham does not always make as much as he might of the situation. Of course there is the love affair, much complicated by the inflexible veracity. There are financial troubles, too, in which the unexpectedness of "Dad" furnishes the son with a new rôle. Altogether a pleasant and companionable little book to while one's thoughts from the grim realities of today.

CLAVERHOUSE

THE GAY AND FESTIVE CLAVERHOUSE. By Anne Warner. Illustrated by Clarence F. Underwood. Little, Brown & Co.

Young Claverhouse was "a sort of reprehensible but genial cyclone let loose in good society." With more faults than could be named on a Summer's day, he yet "had the genius to be loved." Stricken with illness in full tide of his irresponsible career, he received his death sentence from an eminent specialist, who gave him six months "with the greatest of care." Thereupon the doomed man laid a certain plan, and, with a laudable end in view, launched forth upon a series of preposterous antics, which make the "extravaganza," as the little tale is fitly called, a mirth-provoking companion for an idle hour. In spite of the sentence of death, the author ingeniously, if impossibly, contrives the happy ending, and all goes merrily for the reader as well as for the "gay and festive" hero.

From an Apex-City Belle to Marquise of France--a Road Through Three Divorces.

Undine Spragg's first husband was a traveling salesman. Her second—a New York writer of good family. Her third—a French Marquis. And her fourth—But Edith Wharton can tell you better what Undine did with her life. One by one she grasped the golden apples of wealth, luxury and social position only to have them turn to ashes in her eager grasp.

In "The Custom of the Country" Edith Wharton has written a powerful novel on divorce which every man and woman in this country should read. She lays bare the whole truth about divorce and ruthlessly shows where it will lead us. Do we deserve this indictment?—That we marry lightly with the thought in our minds that an escape is at hand? Is it true that marriage is merely an experiment? In this book you meet many kinds of people in the narrow meanness of Apex-City, the close "old family" society of New York—the even more rigid circle of the French nobility. In the universal truth of this last book—Edith Wharton has once more proved herself the greatest living writer—and has made it important for every one who reads and thinks to own the novels of

EDITH WHARTON

10 Volumes—9 Complete Novels—41 Short Stories
At Just About Half the Regular Price

The time has gone by when only the cultured few dared look under the surface of things with Edith Wharton. The time has come when you—if you are to know literature or life—must watch her keen sword of analysis—as it rips apart false standards and hypocrisy and lays bare truth. Edith Wharton knows that world which we call "society" with an intimacy—an understanding of inner meanings and hidden motives—that has never been equaled by any writer of any time. And she knows the rest of the world, too—consider the heart-rending power of Ethan Frome.

Send the coupon today for these 10 beautiful volumes of Edith Wharton, magnificently bound in crimson silk cloth and beautifully illustrated. Edith Wharton knows life. She pictures things as they are. The rapier point of her wit unerringly touches the foibles and weaknesses, the pride and ambitions, the hopes and fears of the real people in her pages. To introduce her to a new reading public we have reduced the price of this complete set so that now—if you are prompt—you can get all the books that Edith Wharton has written at practically half the regular price, and you can have Over in Paris right now—a woman's wife in a little room stitching, stitching—hour upon hour—day after day.

She is Edith Wharton, American citizen, writer of books, society woman and traveler.

With her in this little room all other women—also stitching, stitching, as the hours slip by. They are the sewing women of the great French dressmakers who have been thrown out of work by the war.

Edith Wharton has organized these women into a Red Cross Auxiliary. She and her friends are paying them to sew for the wounded.

It is characteristic of Edith Wharton that she should thus be found in the very thick of things, actively at work. All her life she has done the unusual. There was no financial need for her to write. But the driving force of genius compelled her to put aside all personal desires and write.

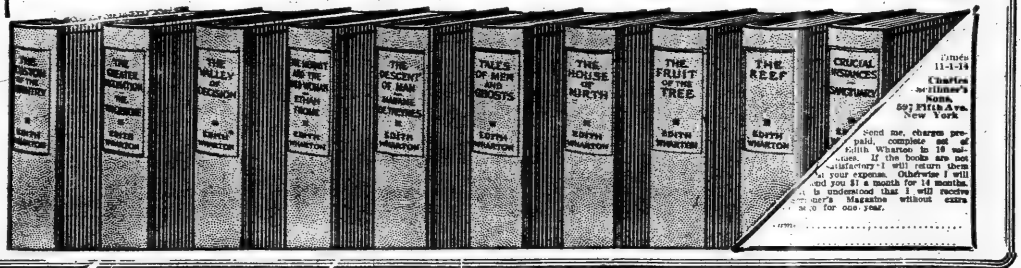
Fortunate it is for us that Edith Wharton preferred an active life to one of ease—else we never would have known the delight of her books.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE FOR A YEAR WITHOUT EXTRA CHARGE

You know the leading place Scribner's holds in the magazine world. Perhaps you have not yet formed the habit of reading it. Now you have an unusual opportunity to do so. Next year—in its pages—Richard Harding Davis (now in the thick of the fighting) will tell about the great war. Colonel Goethals will tell about the building of the Panama Canal. There will be long novels and short stories by the greatest writers you know—illustrated by great artists only. Every issue a thing of distinction and finish.

SEND NO MONEY This coupon brings the whole set, charges prepaid, on approval. Return it at our expense if not satisfactory. Otherwise a few cents a day pays for the books, and you get Scribner's for a year without extra charge.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS
597 Fifth Avenue, New York.



The New York Times.

XX SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1914. XX

DR. VON MACH PRESENTS GERMANY'S CASE BEFORE THE "SUPREME COURT OF CIVILIZATION"

Harvard Professor and Author of "What Germany Wants" Replies to James M. Beck's Article in Last Sunday's Times, Carefully Analyzing the Evidence in the "White" and "Orange" Papers.

By Edmund von Mach.

HON. JAMES M. BECK has eloquently argued the case of the Allies against Germany and Austria-Hungary, and submitted his findings with confident assurance of their acceptance by the Supreme Court of Civilization. Carried away by his zeal he has at times used terms not warranted by the evidence, such as "the irrepressible Kaiser," "stupid falsehood," "duplicity," and the like, but since the court can be trusted to disregard such expressions no further attention will be paid to them.

To a certain extent this article is not a reply but a continuation of Mr. Beck's argument, for wherever our personal sympathies may lie, we are all equally interested in discovering the truth. In the final settlement of peace American public opinion may, nay, will, have a prominent voice. If it is exerted on the strength of a true understanding of European events, it will contribute to the establishment of a lasting peace.

As to the evidence submitted Mr. Beck seems to err in believing that Governments are accustomed to publish in their various white, gray, or orange papers "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." This is nowhere done, for there are many bits of information which come to a Government through its diplomatic connections which it would be indelicate, discourteous, or unwise to give to the public. The official documents on American foreign relations and all white, gray, or orange papers are "edited." They are understood to be so by Congress, Parliament, the Reichstag, the Duma, &c., and no charge of dishonesty can be maintained against the respective Governments on that score.

If the Chancellor says that Germany was using her good offices in Vienna, this is as valuable a bit of evidence as the reprint of a dispatch in the "White Paper" unless we wish to impugn his veracity, and in that case the copy of a dispatch would be valueless, for he might have forged it. The entire argument, therefore, against Germany and Austria, based on what Mr. Beck calls the "suppression of vitally important documents," is void, unless you will apply it equally to Great Britain and the other countries.

In Sir Edward Grey's "White Paper" Mr. Beck has missed no important documents because he looked at England's well-prepared case through sympathetic eyes, and it did not occur to him to ask, "Where are all the documents bearing on Italian neutrality?" Does he believe that England was so little interested in the question whether she would have to fight two or three foes, and whether her way to Egypt and India would be safe or threatened? There are many dispatches to and from Rome included in the "White Paper," but not a mention of Italy's position.

The first paper contains a letter to the British Ambassador in Berlin concerning the Austro-Servian relations. Is it not probable that Sir Edward Grey's attention was called to this question by his Ambassador in Vienna? Where is his letter? Or if Sir Edward thought of it himself, why did he not mention his conversation also to Sir M. de Bunsen in Vienna? Where is this note? Are we to assume that Sir M. de Bunsen made his first report on July 23, although Sir Edward Goschen in Berlin had an interesting report to make a day earlier?

We can thus go through the whole British "White Paper" and discover the omission of many interesting documents.

No. 38 is a letter from Sir Rennell Rodd in Rome, dated on July 23 and received on July 27. He had no doubt sent also a telegram. What did it contain, and why was it not published under the date of its arrival instead of the letter which had been delayed in transit?

Where Is No. 28?

In No. 29 Sir Edward Grey refers in a telegram to Sir R. Rodd to what "I had said to the German Ambassador." Such a reference could have a meaning for Sir R. Rodd only, if he had been informed of this conversation. There is no dispatch printed in the "White Paper" containing this information. Possibly it was so entwined with other instructions, which Sir Edward Grey did not care to have known, that it could not be published. Was it perhaps sent to the printer first as No. 28, and removed at the last moment when it was too late to change the subsequent numbers? Or if this assumption is wrong, what was printed originally as No. 28? There are other omissions, and one especially noteworthy one between Nos. 80 and 106 which will be discussed later.

Viewed in this light the English "White Paper" loses much of the value of a complete record, which it has had in the eyes of many. There is absolutely no reason to doubt the accuracy of those dispatches which have been printed, but it becomes incumbent upon the searcher after the truth to inquire whether the existence of unprinted (in the case of the German "White Paper" Mr. Beck used the term "suppressed") papers may not at times alter the interpretation which should be given to those that are printed.

Since we have no published records anywhere concerning the advice given to Italy by the Allies, and the gradual steps leading up to Italy's decision to remain neutral; nor any hint as to the day when her decision was communicated to England and the other powers, it would be futile to speculate on this subject. Since, however, the Queen of Italy and the wife of the Commander in Chief of the Russian forces are sisters, and since it was in the interest of the Allies to keep Italy neutral, it is not unreasonable to assume that an exchange of opinion took place between Italy and the Allies concerning the conditions under which Italy would remain neutral.

If the actual opening of hostilities could be so managed that Germany could be called the aggressor, then Italy probably declared that she would not enter the war. This is a very important phase of the case, and the omission from Sir Edward Grey's "White Paper" of all dispatches dealing with Italian neutrality is much to be regretted.

Since we are dealing with the Italian dispatches here, it may be advisable to consider at once all the communications which are published as having passed between Sir Edward Grey and the British Ambassador, Sir Rennell Rodd, in Rome. They are numbered 19, (perhaps 28,) 29, 35, 36, 38, 49, 57, 63, 64, 80, 81, 86, 92, 100, and 106, of which the important numbers are 38, 57, 64, 80, and 86.

On July 23 Sir Edward Grey was informed that "the gravity of the situation lay in the conviction of the Austro-Hungarian Government that it was absolutely necessary for their prestige, after the many disillusions which the turn of events in the Balkans has occasioned, to score a definite success." (No. 38.)

Austria, in other words, believed that to let the murder of her heir-apparent pass unpunished would have meant a deathblow to her prestige, and consequently, as any one familiar with her conditions will agree, to her existence. Russia, on the other hand, on July 25 said (see No. 17, report from Sir G. Buchanan) that she could not "allow (note the word) Austria to crush Servia and become the predominant power in the Balkans, and if she feels secure of the support of France, she will face all the risks of war."

Russian Interference.

These two dispatches to Sir Edward Grey tell the whole story in a nutshell. Austria believed, rightly or wrongly, that it was a question of life or death for her, while Russia claimed the right of preventing Austria from becoming the predominate power in the Balkans, and actually threatened war. Russia did not claim to be concerned with the justice of Austria's demands on Servia.

No such definite word of Russia's intention was sent to Germany, for on July 26 Sir M. de Bunsen reported Germany's confident belief that "Russia will keep quiet during the chastisement of Servia." (No. 32.)

On the next day Sir Rennell Rodd reports from Rome (No. 57) that the Minister of Foreign Affairs believes that "if Servia will even now accept it (the Austrian note) Austria will be satisfied" and refrain from a punitive war. He, moreover, believes—and this is very important—that Servia may be induced to accept the note in its entirety on the advice of the four powers invited to the conference, and this would enable her to say that she had yielded to Europe and not to Austria-Hungary alone." Since Italy was to be one of the four powers, the Minister's belief was doubtless based on accurate information. There is then as late as July 27 no claim made by Servia that Austria's demands are unreasonable. She only hates to yield to Austria alone. Austria, in the meanwhile, (No. 57) repeats her assurances that she demands no territorial sacrifices from Servia.

On the next day, July 28, Sir Rennell Rodd reports (No. 64) that "Servia might still accept the whole Austrian note, if some explanation were given regarding mode in which Austrian agents would require to intervene." Austria, on her part, had explained that "the co-operation of the Austrian agents in Servia was to be only in investigation, not in judicial or administrative measures. Servia was said to have willfully misinterpreted this." (No. 64.)

From these reports it appears that the differences between Austria and Servia were on the way to a solution. Austria claimed that her demands were just, and Servia did not deny this. Austria further claimed that her prestige, her very existence, demanded the prompt compliance with her requests by Servia. She explained in a satisfactory way the one point on which Servia had taken exceptions, and Servia was on the point of complying, and would have complied, if the powers had been willing to let her do so. Such a conclusion of the incident would have strengthened Austria's prestige, and assured the punishment of the murderers of Serajevo.

The reason why Servia was not allowed to submit was Russia's remark, quoted above, that she would not "allow" Austria to become the predominant power in the Balkans. It was, therefore, Russia's task to prevent Servia from accepting Austria's note. Since war was her alternative, baldly stated to England from the first, she had to do three things: first to secure as many allies as possible, secondly to weaken her enemies, preferably by detaching from them Italy, and thirdly to get as much of a start in her mobilization as possible.

The treaties between Russia, France, and Great Britain, unlike those between Germany, Austria, and Italy, have never been published. Whatever their wording may be, Russia was at first apparently not absolutely sure of the support of France (No. 17), and France, it would seem, was unwilling to tempt fate without the help of England. That England should be willing to join such a combination for such a cause seemed so preposterous to Germany that she did not believe it. Without England no France, without France no war, for alone Russia could not measure herself against Austria. Austria would not have attacked her of her own free will, but if Russia had attacked Austria, the whole world knew from the published treaties that Germany was bound to come to the assistance of her ally. It would have been two against one, and the two could have waited until Russia had finished her cumbersome mobilization. For even if she had her whole army of many million men on the frontier, Austria and Germany together were strong enough to stem her advance.

Russia's only chance, therefore, when Servia was on the point of yielding, and Austria had almost re-established her prestige, was to secure the help of France, but this meant also the promise of England.

The demands made on England by Russia, some of which are quoted in the "White Paper," are too well known to deserve repetition. This was the chief thing that counted, to get England's promise. The next was to detach Italy from her allies (but of this there are no documents available), and the third to gain time for her mobilization. All the other suggestions and counter-suggestions, which fill the English "White Paper," are insignificant, as soon as the fundamental positions of Austria and Russia are understood.

Germany has claimed that England promised her support to Russia and France on July 30, or in the night of July 29, and, to prove it, has published the letter from the Belgian Minister in St. Petersburg to his Minister of Foreign Affairs, printed in translation in THE NEW YORK TIMES on Oct. 7. This letter, which has not been officially denied by the Allies, states that the promise of England's support gave the Russian war party the upper hand, and resulted in the order of complete mobilization.

Strangely enough, and doubtless by an oversight, the English "White Paper" contains two dispatches (Nos. 80 and 106) which seem to confirm the accuracy of M. de l'Escaille's statement, viz., that England promised the Russian-French combination her support.

On July 29 Sir Rennell Rodd wrote to Sir Edward Grey (No. 80) that the Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs had told him "there seemed to be a difficulty in making Germany believe that Russia was in earnest. As Germany, however, was really anxious for good relations with ourselves, if she believed that Great Britain would act with Russia and France, he thought it would have a great effect."

In a later dispatch of the same day (No. 86) he deprecates Russia's partial mobilization, which he fears has spoiled the chances of Germany's exerting any pressure on Austria.

Germany Renews Efforts.

But on the next day, July 30, these remarkable words occur: "He [the Italian Minister] had reason to believe that Germany was now disposed to give more conciliatory advice to Austria, as she seemed convinced that we should act with France and Russia, and was most anxious to avoid issue with us." (No. 106.)

Readers of the "White Paper" will look in vain for an explanation of such a change of heart on Germany's part. What does "now" mean in the last letter? And why does Germany seem "convinced" that England will act with Russia—if not that she has heard of the promise mentioned by M. de l'Escaille, as given early on July 30 or late the 29th? The dates agree, and unless Sir Edward Grey publishes further papers to explain the change that had taken place between July 29 and July 30, one seems forced to accept this explanation.

What is Germany's attitude? Does she rush into war? Not at all, for she is "most anxious to avoid issue" with England (No. 106). Germany knew that Russia had begun to mobilize. Every day, every hour counted, for that she was seriously treated, what-ever outsiders thought of Austria's demands; and Austria was fully justified by past events in believing that it was with her a question of life and death. Should Germany sacrifice her faithful friend, under such circumstances, and for what? For the arrogance of Russia, who would not "allow" her to re-establish her prestige in a righteous cause? The word "righteous" is used advisedly, because in the early stages of the controversy nobody, not even Russia nor Servia herself, denied the justice of Austria's demands. The writer is informed that even the liberal English press found no fault with the course taken by Austria, although it commented adversely on the language used in the note.

What would have been the result of peace bought by Germany at such a cost? It would have alienated her only faithful friend without laying the foundations for a lasting friendship with her opponents. This at least was Germany's honest belief. She may have been wrong. History more probably will call her right. To desert Austria might have postponed the war, but when it would have come Germany would have stood alone, and, worse, she would have lost her self-respect.

This claim may sound strange in the ears of those who have just witnessed and will never forget the suffering of that beautiful little country, Belgium. They hold that since Germany invaded Belgium, it is Germany who broke a treaty and who is to blame.

Mr. Beck considers this to be so self-evident that he deems it unnecessary to advance any proof. He quotes the Chancellor's speech, and, moving for a quick verdict, declares his motion of guilty carried. The matter, however, is not quite so simple for the man who is seeking for the whole truth. Let us look at the facts.

Belgium was a neutral country, just as any country has the right to declare itself neutral, with this difference: that in 1839 she had promised to five powers, Great Britain, France, Russia, Austria, and Prussia, that she would remain perpetually neutral. These five powers in their turn had promised to guarantee her neutrality. She was, however, a sovereign State, and as such had the undoubted right to cease being neutral whenever she chose by abrogating the treaty of 1839. If the other high contracting parties did not agree with her, it was their right to try to coerce Belgium to keep to her pledges, although this would undoubtedly have been an infringement of her sovereignty.

The Treaty of 1839 contains the word "perpetual," but so does the treaty between France and Germany, in which Alsace and Lorraine are ceded by France to be perpetually an integral part of the German Empire. Does this mean that France, if the Allies should win, could not retake these provinces? Nobody probably will believe this.

The Treaty of 1839 was a treaty just like the Treaty of 1871, with this difference, that the latter treaty was concluded between two powers, and the earlier one between five powers on one side and Belgium and Holland on the other. This gave certain rights to all the signatory powers, any one of whom had the right to feel itself sufficiently aggrieved to go to war if any other power disregarded the treaty.

Kaiser Tried to Keep Peace.

In order to understand this step one should read the book "La France Victorieuse dans la Guerre de Demain," (France Victorious in the Next War,) by Col. Arthur Boucher, published in 1911. Col. Boucher has stated the case baldly and so simply that every one can understand it. In substance his argument is this: "Alone France has no chance, but together with Russia she will win against Germany. Suppose the three countries are beginning mobilization on the same day. Germany finishes first, France second, and Russia last. Germany must leave some of her troops on her Eastern frontier, the rest she throws against France. All France has to do is to hold them for a few days. (Col. Boucher mentions the exact number of days. This book is not at hand, and the writer prefers not to quote from memory.) Then Russia comes into play, more German troops will be needed in the East, the French proceed to an attack on their weakened enemy, and La France sera victorieuse."

Everything hinges on just a couple of days or so. A couple of days! And how much of a start had Russia? She had begun on July 25; on July 27 definite news of the Russian mobilization was reported in Berlin, although the Minister of War denied it "on his honor." On July 30, England was understood to have promised her support to Russia, and the Czar acknowledged that Russia had been mobilizing for the past five days. Five days! And Col. Boucher, expressing the opinion of military experts, had counted on victory on a much smaller margin!

Do the Judges of the Supreme Court of Civilization realize the almost superhuman efforts in the interest of peace made by the German Emperor? Russia has a start of five days, and on July 31 a start of six days. Can we not hear all the military leaders imploring the Emperor not to hesitate any longer? But in the interest of peace the Emperor delays. He has kept the peace for Germany through the almost thirty years of his reign. He prays to his God, in whom he has placed his trust through all his upright life with a fervor which has often brought him ridicule. Also, he still believes in England, and hopes through her efforts to be able to keep the peace. He waits another day. A start of seven days for Russia! The odds against Germany have grown tremendously. At last he orders mobilization. For a longer delay he would not have been able to answer to his country. As it is, there are many people who blame him severely for having waited so long.

But William II. was right, for when the world will begin to realize the agonies through which he must have passed during these days of waiting, and the sacrifices he made in his effort to preserve peace, it will judge Germany rightly, and call the Emperor the great prince of peace that he is.

But, it has been said, why did he not avoid war, either by forcing Austria to yield to Russia, or, if she refused, by withdrawing from her? In common with the whole of Germany, he probably felt that Austria's position was right. Servia herself, as has been seen above, did not claim that she was unjustly treated, what-ever outsiders thought of Austria's demands; and Austria was fully justified by past events in believing that it was with her a question of life and death. Should Germany sacrifice her faithful friend, under such circumstances, and for what? For the arrogance of Russia, who would not "allow" her to re-establish her prestige in a righteous cause? The word "righteous" is used advisedly, because in the early stages of the controversy nobody, not even Russia nor Servia herself, denied the justice of Austria's demands. The writer is informed that even the liberal English press found no fault with the course taken by Austria, although it commented adversely on the language used in the note.

What would have been the result of peace bought by Germany at such a cost? It would have alienated her only faithful friend without laying the foundations for a lasting friendship with her opponents. This at least was Germany's honest belief. She may have been wrong. History more probably will call her right. To desert Austria might have postponed the war, but when it would have come Germany would have stood alone, and, worse, she would have lost her self-respect.

This claim may sound strange in the ears of those who have just witnessed and will never forget the suffering of that beautiful little country, Belgium. They hold that since Germany invaded Belgium, it is Germany who broke a treaty and who is to blame.

Mr. Beck considers this to be so self-evident that he deems it unnecessary to advance any proof. He quotes the Chancellor's speech, and, moving for a quick verdict, declares his motion of guilty carried. The matter, however, is not quite so simple for the man who is seeking for the whole truth. Let us look at the facts.

Belgium was a neutral country, just as any country has the right to declare itself neutral, with this difference: that in 1839 she had promised to five powers, Great Britain, France, Russia, Austria, and Prussia, that she would remain perpetually neutral. These five powers in their turn had promised to guarantee her neutrality. She was, however, a sovereign State, and as such had the undoubted right to cease being neutral whenever she chose by abrogating the treaty of 1839. If the other high contracting parties did not agree with her, it was their right to try to coerce Belgium to keep to her pledges, although this would undoubtedly have been an infringement of her sovereignty.

The Treaty of 1839 contains the word "perpetual," but so does the treaty between France and Germany, in which Alsace and Lorraine are ceded by France to be perpetually an integral part of the German Empire. Does this mean that France, if the Allies should win, could not retake these provinces? Nobody probably will believe this.

The Treaty of 1839 was a treaty just like the Treaty of 1871, with this difference, that the latter treaty was concluded between two powers, and the earlier one between five powers on one side and Belgium and Holland on the other. This gave certain rights to all the signatory powers, any one of whom had the right to feel itself sufficiently aggrieved to go to war if any other power disregarded the treaty.

Rights of Neutrals.

There was once another neutral State, the city and district of Cracow, also established by a treaty to which Great Britain was a signatory. Three of the signers considered the conditions developing in Cracow to be so threatening that they abolished Cracow as an independent State. Great Britain sent a polite note of protest, and dropped the matter.

Since that time, however, two Hague conferences have been held and certain rules agreed upon concerning the rights and duties of neutrals. The Belgian status of inviolability rests on these rules, called conventions, rather than on the Treaty of 1839. During the Franco-Prussian war of 1870 Mr. Gladstone very clearly stated that he did not consider the Treaty of 1839 enforceable. Great Britain, therefore, made two new treaties, one with France and one with Prussia (quoted and discussed in Boston Evening Transcript, Oct. 14, 1914) in which she promised to defend Belgian neutrality, by the side of either France or Prussia, against that one of them who should infringe the neutrality.

These treaties were to terminate one year after peace had been concluded between the contestants. A treaty, like the one of 1839, however, which was considered unenforceable in 1870, can hardly be claimed to have gained new rights in 1914. In calm moments nobody will claim that a greater sanctity attaches to it than to the treaty in which Alsace and Lorraine are ceded forever to Germany.

No, it is The Hague conventions to which we must look. The first convention (1899) contained no rules forbidding belligerents from entering neutral territory. In the second conference it was thought desirable to formulate such rules, because it was felt that in war belligerents are at liberty to do what is not expressly forbidden. At the request of France, therefore, a new set of rules was suggested, to which Great Britain and Belgium offered valuable amendments. The rules were finally accepted, and are today parts of international law. They read: "Article I. The territory of neutral powers is inviolable. Article II. Belligerents are forbidden to move troops or convoys of either munitions of war or supplies across the territory of a neutral power."

These articles, together with the whole convention called "Rights and duties of neutral powers and persons in case of war on land," have been ratified and therefore accepted as law by the United States of America, Austria, Belgium, France, Germany, Japan and Russia, and other minor powers. Great Britain experienced a change of heart, and, although her own delegates had moved these articles, she refused to ratify them, when she ratified most of the other conventions on Nov. 27, 1909. (A table showing the ratifications of conventions has been published by The World Peace Foundation, Boston.)

The Case of Belgium.

Since Great Britain did not accept these articles as law, she was not bound by them, for the principle of The Hague Conferences is that a nation is bound only by those laws which it accepts. The remarkable fact, therefore, appears that the only one of the big nations which had refused to accept these articles, and which, therefore, might have moved her troops across a neutral country and have claimed that she could do so with a clear conscience because she broke no law which was binding on her, was Great Britain. And the world now sees the spectacle of Great Britain claiming to have gone to war because another power did what she herself could have done, according to her own interpretation, with impunity. Japan has broken the international law by infringing the neutrality of China, but Great Britain can claim that she did not break a law by doing exactly what Japan did.

It is not asserted here that the citizens of Great Britain are not absolutely sincere in their belief of the causes which have allied them with the Russians and the Japanese, and the Indians and the Zuaves, and the negroes and the French and the Belgians against Germany. Their Government, however, should have known that the presumption of insincerity exists when one charges against others a crime which one would have felt at liberty to commit one's self. Yet, more, the British Government knew better than anybody else that Germany had not even committed this crime; for according to all laws of justice no person or nation can claim the inviolability of a neutral when he has committed "hostile acts against a belligerent, or acts in favor of a belligerent." (Article XVII. of The Hague Conference of 1907.)

The question, therefore, arises, "Did Belgium commit acts in favor of one of Germany's opponents, if not actually hostile acts against Germany?" In order to understand Germany's charge that Belgium had committed such acts, attention must be directed to one of the most unfortunate stipulations of the Treaty of 1839, which compelled Belgium to maintain several fortresses. This meant that a small neutral people, sandwiched in between two great powers, had to keep itself informed on military affairs. Instead of being able to foster a peaceful state of mind, which is the surest guarantee of neutrality, the Belgians were forced to think military thoughts.

In the eighties and early nineties they suspected France of designs on their integrity. Since then a change in the popular feeling has taken place and in recent years the instruction of the Belgian artillery, for instance, was intrusted to French officers in active service. These officers were constantly at home and very properly concerned with solving military problems such as a future war with Germany might present. What was more natural than that these same officers, when they were detached for a few months or years to Liége or Namur or Huy, taught their Belgian charges to prepare against a German attack, and to look upon the French as their friends and the Germans as their enemies? If conditions had been different, and German officers had been in charge of Belgian fortresses, the Belgian guns in practice would always have been trained on imaginary French invaders.

If this is understood, it will be seen that in the case of war the actual neutrality of the Belgian garrisons would naturally be determined by the position taken by that nation whose officers had been in charge of the Belgian fortresses. And this might be entirely independent of the professed wishes of the Belgian people or their Government. If French officers in active service remained in the several fortresses, or even only in one, after the beginning of hostilities, and if the French campaign plans contemplated an attack through Belgium, then Belgium had committed an "act in favor of France" by not forcing the French officers to leave, and had forfeited the rights and privileges granted by The Hague Convention of 1907 to a neutral State.

Did French officers remain in Liége or in any other Belgian fortress after hostilities had begun, and did France plan to go through Belgium? Germany has officially made both claims. The first can easily be substantiated by the Supreme Court of Civilization by an investigation of the prisoners of war taken in Belgium. Until an impartial investigation becomes possible no further proof than the claim made by the German Government can be produced.

The second charge is contained in No. 157 of the English "White Paper" in these words of instruction from the German Foreign Secretary to the German Ambassador in London: "Please impress upon Sir Edward Grey that German Army could not be exposed to French attack across Belgium, which was planned according to absolutely unimpeachable information."

Sir Edward Grey has attacked Germany for invading Belgium, but has nowhere denied that Germany had the unimpeachable evidence she said she had, and which of course nullified any previous assurance from France.

It is not known whether Sir Edward Grey was shown this evidence or not, but if the preservation of Belgian neutrality was Great Britain's chief concern, why did she not offer to negotiate treaties with Germany and France as she had done in 1870. It will be remembered that then she bound herself to join with either of the contestants in defending Belgian neutrality against the attacks of the other.

As the case stands today, on the evidence of Sir Edward Grey's own "White Paper" and speeches, Great Britain is making war on Germany because:

1. She broke the treaty of 1839, although her own Gladstone had declared this treaty to be without force, and although the status of neutral States had been removed by The Hague Convention from the uncertainty of treaties to the security of international law.

2. Great Britain makes war against Germany because Germany has broken Articles I. and II. of Chapter I of The Hague Convention referring to neutrals, although Great Britain herself has refused to recognize these articles as binding upon her own conduct.

3. She makes war on Germany, although she has never denied the correctness of Germany's assertion that she had unimpeachable proof of France's intentions of going through Belgium, which, together with the sojourn of French officers in Belgium, constitutes the offense which, according to The Hague Convention, deprives a so-called neutral State of the privileges granted in Articles I. and II.

It is impossible to say here exactly what these proofs are which Germany possesses, and which for military reasons she has not yet been able to divulge. She has published some of them, namely the proof of the continued presence of French officers on Belgian soil, and has given the names and numbers of the several army corps which France had planned to push through Belgium.

The case then stands as follows:

1. Was the inviolability of Belgium guaranteed by Articles I. and II. of The Hague Convention? Yes.

2. Had Germany ratified these articles? Yes.

3. Had Great Britain ratified these articles? No.

4. Would Belgium have forfeited the right of having her country held inviolable if she had committed "acts in favor of France," even if these acts were not actually hostile acts? Yes, according to Article XVII. of The Hague Convention.

5. Did Belgium commit "acts in favor of France," and was Germany, therefore, justified in disregarding the inviolability of her territory?

The Main Question.

This is the important question, and the answer must be left to the Supreme Court of Civilization. The weight of the evidence would seem to point to a justification of Germany. Yet no friend of Germany can find fault with those who would wish to defer a verdict until such a time when Germany can present her complete proof to the world, and this may be when the war is over.

Throughout this argument the famous passage of the Chancellor's speech in the Reichstag has been disregarded. It reads:

Our troops have occupied Luxemburg and perhaps are already on Belgian soil. Gentlemen, that is contrary to the dictates of international law. It is true that the French Government has declared at Brussels that France is willing to respect the neutrality of Belgium so long as her opponents respect it. We knew, however, that France stood ready for invasion. The wrong—I speak openly—that we are committing we will endeavor to make good.

This has been understood to mean that the Chancellor acknowledged that Germany was breaking the treaty of 1839, without warrant, and that Germany, therefore, deserved the contempt of the world. May it not bear another interpretation? Thus:

The Chancellor, like Gladstone in 1870, did not consider the 1839 treaty enforceable, but saw the guarantees for Belgium in The Hague Convention. He did not wish to offend Belgium by announcing to the world that she had lost her rights as a neutral because of her acts favorable to France, for when he spoke he was still of the opinion that she would accept the German offer which guaranteed to her both her independence and integrity.

And just as Servia would have accepted Austria's note if Russia had permitted her, so Belgium would not have resisted the German demand if it had not been for England.

This can be proved by the British "White Paper," Nos. 153 and 155. In the former the King of the Belgians appeals "to the diplomatic intervention of your Majesty's Government to safeguard the integrity of Belgium," being apparently of the impression that Germany wished to annex parts, if not the whole, of his country. The London reply advises the Belgians "to resist by any means in their power, and that his Majesty's Government will support them in offering such resistance, and that his Majesty's Government in this event are prepared to join Russia and France, if desired, in offering to the Belgian Government at once common action for the purpose of resisting use of force by Germany against them, and a guarantee to maintain their independence and integrity in future years."

Has Mr. Beck really not noticed in this promise the omission of the word neutrality? By the Treaty of 1839, Belgium enjoyed not only independence and integrity, but also perpetual neutrality. Does Great Britain offer to fight Germany for the enforcement of the Treaty of 1839? No! Because hereafter the word neutrality is dropped from her guarantee, and since she alone of all the great powers has not ratified the articles of The Hague Convention concerning neutrals, she alone will be able to disregard the inviolability of Belgian soil, even though Belgium kept strictly neutral in a future war.

And what finally does she guarantee her? Independence and integrity! That is exactly the same that Germany had promised her. For this Belgium had to be dragged through the horrors of war, and the good name of Germany as that of an honest nation had to be dragged through the mire, and hatred and murder had to be started, that Belgium might get on the battlefield from the insufficient support of Russia and France and England what Germany had freely offered her—independence and integrity.

Casual readers would not miss the word neutrality from Sir Edward Grey's guarantee, because they do not differentiate between the words integrity, independence, and neutrality. Great Britain and her ally Japan, marching through China into Kiao-Chau, may be said to have violated China's neutrality, but not her independence, nor, so long as they refrain from annexing any Chinese territory, her integrity.

Fixing the Blame.

Nobody familiar with the careful work of Sir Edward Grey can for one moment believe that Sir Edward inadvertently dropped the word, just as little as J. Ramsay Macdonald and other British leaders believe that he inadvertently dropped one of the two remaining words, integrity and independence, when he told Parliament of Germany's guarantee, and why Great Britain should not accept it, but go to war.

When the blame for the horrors committed in Belgium are assessed, these facts must be remembered:

1. Belgium was by treaty bound to maintain fortresses.

2. France tempted her to commit "acts friendly" to herself, by which Belgium forfeited her rights to the protection of The Hague articles governing the rights and duties of neutrals.

3. England urged her to take up arms, when she had only asked to have her integrity guaranteed by diplomatic intervention (Nos. 153, 155.)

4. Germany promised her independence and integrity and peace, while England, quietly dropping her guarantee of neutrality "in future years," promised her independence and integrity and war.

5. And Sir Edward Grey was able to sway Parliament, according to one of the leaders of Parliament himself, only because he misrepresented Germany's guarantee and having dropped, in his note to Belgium, the word "neutrality," dropped yet another of the two remaining words, integrity and independence.

This is the case as it appears on the evidence contained in the various "White Papers." Austria was attending properly to her own affairs; Servia was willing to yield; Russia, however, was determined to humiliate Austria, or to go to war. Germany proved a loyal friend to her ally, Austria; she trusted in the British professions of friendship to the last, and sacrificed seven valuable days in the interest of peace. France was willing to do "what might be required by her interests," while Great Britain yielded to Russia and France, promising them their support without which France, and therefore Russia, would not have decided on war.

As to Belgium, Germany told Sir Edward Grey that she had unimpeachable evidence that France was planning to go through Belgium, and she published her evidence concerning the French officers who remained in Belgium. Although Belgium had thus lost any rights attaching to her state of neutrality, Germany promised to respect her integrity and independence, and to pay for any damage done. She preferred, however, to listen to Great Britain, who promised exactly the same except pay for any damage done.

Unlike Mr. Beck, who in the same article pleads his case as the counsel for the Allies and casts his verdict as the Supreme Court of Civilization, the present writer prefers to leave the judgment to his readers as a whole, and further still, to the whole American people—yea, to all the peoples of the world. Nor is he in a hurry, for he is willing to wait and have the judges weigh the evidence and call for more, if they consider insufficient what has already been submitted.

Snap judgments are ever unsatisfactory. They have often to be reversed. The present case, however, is too important to warrant a hasty decision. The final judgment, if it is based on truth, will very strongly influence the nature of the peace, which will either establish good-will and stable conditions in the world, or lead to another and even more complete breakdown of civilization.

ENGLAND'S SHARE OF GUILT IN THE WORLD WAR

A Review of the Official Publications, Especially of the English Documents, Prepared in Germany and Translated for The New York Times Under the Direction of Dr. Bernhard Dernburg.

The following is presented as a complete defense of the German position in the present war and is based upon examination of the German and English "White Papers." It was prepared in Germany and forwarded to Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, who had it translated for THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Dr. Dernburg gives this statement his full approval and accepts complete responsibility for it.

TWO of the five great European powers that are at present engaged in war, Austria-Hungary and Russia, whose differences for years have been constantly increasing in sharpness, and after the tragedy in Serajevo became impossible to be bridged by diplomacy, conjured up the frightful struggle.

With these two, two other powers are so closely united by alliances that their participation in the war also was unavoidable; they are Germany and France.

There are two other great European powers whose relations to the two aforesaid groups before the war were very much alike in the essential points. Just as Italy was politically tied by alliance to the Central Powers, so England was with the Franco-Russian Alliance. Hence it was uncertain how these countries, each geographically removed from the main body of the Continent, would act in a war, and it seemed quite possible that both would decide to remain neutral.

As a matter of fact, the Italian Government came to the view that such a stand would be for the best interests of its country.

This decision might have made it considerably more easy for England to also maintain her neutrality, which from political, economical, and ethical reasons would have been advantageous and natural for the Island Empire. To the surprise and indignation of all those Germans who for years had been working toward an adjustment of the conflicting interests of both countries—among these ought to be mentioned, above all, the Kaiser and the Imperial Chancellor—the Liberal British Ministry immediately declared war on Germany, and did not confine itself to a naval war, but, in keeping with agreements reached years ago between the English and the French General Staffs, as is now admitted, equipped an expeditionary army, thus considerably strengthening the French forces.

The question arises, "What reasons led British politics to this monstrous step?"

Much has been written during the last weeks from the German side, criticising most sharply and with great justification the motive of the London Cabinet. In the following discussion we will confine ourselves to an impartial review of the documents published by the English Government itself in its own defense.

The essential part of this justification is contained in the "Correspondence Concerning the European Crisis" placed before the British Parliament shortly after the start of the war, which is known as the British "White Paper." In amplification are to be considered the "White Book" placed by the German Government before the Reichstag and the "Orange Book" published by Russia.

I.

THE RUSSIAN MOBILIZATION.

IN a public speech, delivered Sept. 19th, the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Lloyd George, according to the report of The Westminster Gazette, which may be considered as his organ, characterised the quarrel between Germany and Russia in the picturesque manner which this statesman prefers, as follows:

> GERMANY—I insist that you stand aside with crossed arms while Austria strangles your little brother, (Servia.)
>
> RUSSIA—Just you touch this little fellow and I will tear your ramshackle empire limb from limb.

We will not waste words in considering the flippant form here used in a discussion of an unspeakably bloody and world-historic conflict. But this expression in very pregnant form makes Russia appear in the light in which the London powers-that-be desire to shew the empire of the Czar to the British people, viz., in the rôle of the noble-hearted protector of persecuted innocence, while Germany, supporting and egging on Austria-Hungary, is shown as morally responsible for the war.

Cites English Documents.

This, also, is the chain of thought in the speech of the British Prime Minister in the House of Commons on Aug. 4. Translations of this speech have been spread by the British Government in neutral countries in hundreds of thousands of copies under the title: "The Power Responsible for War Is Germany."

Now, we claim that the British "White Paper" itself furnishes irrefutable proof that not Germany, which up to the last moment offered the hand of meditation, but Russia is responsible for the war, and that the Foreign Office at London was fully cognizant of this fact.

Furthermore, the "White Paper" shows that England's claim that she entered this war solely as a protector of the small nations is a fable.

The documents reproduced in the "White Paper" do not begin until July 20, and only a few introductory dispatches before the 24th are given. The first of the very important reports of the British Ambassador at St. Petersburg, Sir George Buchanan, to the Secretary of State Grey is dated on that day; on the same day the note addressed by Austria-Hungary to the Servian Government had been brought to the knowledge of the European Cabinets, and the British Ambassador conferred with the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Sasonof, over this matter. The French Minister also took part in this conference. When the latter and M. Sasonof in the most insistent way tried to prove to Buchanan that England together with Russia and France, must assume a threatening attitude toward Austria-Hungary and Germany, the British Ambassador replied:

> I said that I would telegraph a full report to you of what their Excellencies had just said to me. I could not, of course, speak in the name of his Majesty's Government, but personally I saw no reason to expect any declaration of solidarity from his Majesty's Government that would entail an unconditional engagement on their part to support Russia and France by force of arms. Direct British interests in Servia were nil, and a war on behalf of that country would never be sanctioned by British public opinion.—British "White Paper" No. 6.

The British Ambassador thereupon asked the question whether Russia was thinking of eventually declaring war on Austria. The following was the answer:

> M. Sasonof said that he himself thought that Russian mobilization would at any rate have to be carried out; but a council of Ministers was being held this afternoon to consider the whole question. * * *
>
> The dispatch continues:
>
> French Ambassador and M. Sasonof both continue to press me for a declaration of complete solidarity of his Majesty's Government with French and Russian Governments. * * * (British "White Paper" No. 6.)

This shows plainly that the Russian mobilization must have been planned even before July 24, for otherwise M. Sasonof could not have spoken of the necessity of carrying it through.

It is furthermore very remarkable that the Russian Minister on this early day spoke of the mobilization in general, and not of the partial mobilization against Austria-Hungary.

Finally we find that the British Government was fully informed at the very latest on July 24—it may have had before it previous documents, but they are not contained in the "White Paper"—concerning Russian mobilization and thereby the development of Russian and French politics that had to be anticipated.

Russian Aggression.

Had there been any doubts concerning these matters on the part of the British Government, the continual urging of Russian and French diplomatists must have made things plain. Russia's aggressive policy, and not the Austrian declaration of war on Servia, which did not come until five days later, led to the European war. Servia meant so little to England, although England traditionally poses as a protector of small nations, that the British Ambassador in St. Petersburg was able to describe England's interest in the kingdom on the Save as "nil." Only later, after the beginning of the war, England warmed up to Servia, and in the aforementioned speech Mr. Lloyd George found the most hearty tones in speaking of the heroic fight of this "little nation," although he was obliged to admit simultaneously that its history is not untainted.

On the day following that conversation, on July 25, the British Ambassador had another talk with M. Sasonof, during the course of which he felt obliged to express to the Russian Government a serious warning concerning its mobilization.

> On my expressing the earnest hope that Russia would not precipitate war by mobilizing until you had had time to use your influence in favor of peace his Excellency assured me that Russia had no aggressive intentions and she would take no action until it was forced on her. Austria's action was in reality directed against Russia. She aimed at overthrowing the present status quo in the Balkans and establishing her own hegemony there. He did not believe that Germany really wanted war, but her attitude was decided by ours. If we took our stand firmly with France and Russia there would be no war. If we failed them now rivers of blood would flow and we would in the end be dragged into war. * * *
>
> I said all I could to impress prudence on the Minister for Foreign Affairs and warned him that if Russia mobilized Germany would not be content with mere mobilization, or give Russia time to carry out hers, but would probably declare war at once! His Excellency replied that Russia could not allow Austria to crush Servia and become the predominant power in the Balkans, and, if she feels secure of the support of France, she will face all the risks of war. He assured me once more that he did not wish to precipitate a conflict, but that unless Germany could restrain Austria I could regard the situation as desperate—(British "White Paper" No. 17.)

A more convincing contradiction of the claim that Germany fell upon unexpectant Russia can hardly be imagined. Sasonof's conversation with the British Ambassador shows that Russia had decided from the beginning to bring about the war, unless Austria would subject itself to Russia's dictation.

Now, Russia was not alone concerned about Servia, but from its viewpoint Austria-Hungary must not maintain the preponderant position in the Balkans.

Sure of French help, Russia was determined to work against this. The reports of the British representative do not suggest with a word that Germany was responsible for the war; on the contrary, Sir Buchanan again, on his own account, warned the Russian Government to keep aloof from military measures, in his conversation with M. Sasonof on July 27, although the "White Paper" does not show that he had received any instructions by Sir Edward Grey.

> His Excellency must not, if our efforts were to be successful, do anything to precipitate a conflict. In these circumstances I trusted that the Russian Government would defer the mobilization ukase for as long as possible, and that troops would not be allowed to cross the frontier even when it was issued.—(British "White Paper" No. 44.)

Just as its own Ambassador in Petersburg pointed out to the British Government the dangers of Russian mobilization, England did not lack German warnings. On July 28 the British Ambassador in Berlin, Sir E. Goschen, reported as follows by wire concerning a conversation with the Imperial Chancellor:

> * * * but if the news were true which he had just read in the papers, that Russia had mobilized fourteen army corps in the South, he thought the situation was very serious, and he himself would be in a very difficult position, as in these circumstances it would be out of his power to continue to preach moderation at Vienna. He added that Austria, who as yet was only partially mobilizing, would have to take similar measures, and if war were to result Russia would be entirely responsible.—(British "White Paper" No. 71.)

In a telegram of Mr. Goschen's of July 30, reporting a conversation with the Secretary of State, von Jagow, it is stated:

> He begged me to impress on you difficulty of Germany's position in view of Russian mobilization and military measures which he hears are being taken in France. — (British "White Paper" No. 98.)

The British Government has added a few further publications to its "White Paper." Among these is a report of the hitherto British Ambassador in Vienna, Sir Maurice de Bunsen. The document is dated Sept. 1; that is, a full month after the outbreak of the war. The tendency of this publication is not only to unburden Russia and England from all blame and to put it upon German and Austro-Hungarian politics, but it attempts to make Germany responsible for the war to a greater extent than Austria-Hungary in trying to sow dissension between the two allies.

Ambassador de Bunsen represents matters as if Germany, through its ultimatum to Russia on July 31, had roughly interrupted negotiations promising success then going on between Vienna and Petersburg. In this report it is stated:

> (Retranslated) M. Schebeko [the Russian Ambassador at Vienna] on July 28th attempted to induce the Austrian Government to authorize Count Scapary to continue negotiations which he had been carrying on with M. Sasonof and which appeared very promising. Count Berchtold on this day declined, but two days later, July 30th, although Russia then had already started partial mobilization against Austria, he received M. Schebeko again in the most courteous manner and gave his consent to continuation of the pour parleurs. * * * On Aug. 1st M. Schebeko informed me that Austria was ready to submit to mediation those parts of its note to Servia which appeared to be irreconcilable to the independence of Servia. * * * Unfortunately these pour parleurs in St. Petersburg and Vienna were suddenly broken off by the quarrel being removed to the more dangerous territory of a direct conflict between Germany and Russia. Germany on July 31 stepped between the two with its double ultimatum addressed to St. Petersburg and Paris. * * * A delay of a few days in all probability would have spared Europe one of the greatest wars in history.

On the other hand, be it remembered that the fact that any negotiations between Austria and Russia were carried on up to the last hour was solely the result of the uninterrupted German efforts to maintain peace, which fact Sir Maurice de Bunsen very wisely buries in silence. These negotiations, by the way, hardly were as promising of success as is made to appear. The Austrian version of it is found in the Vienna Fremdenblatt of Sept. 25, 1914. There the most important spots of Bunsen's report, that Austria-Hungary had been ready to moderate several points of its note to Servia, are mentioned as follows:

> As we are told by a well-informed source, these assertions do not at all correspond to the facts; furthermore, from the very nature of the steps undertaken by the dual monarchy in Belgrade, this would have been entirely inconceivable.

A glance at the date shows that the Bunsen report is misleading, for he himself tells that Count Berchtold, on July 30, had expressed his consent to a continuation of the exchange of thought in Petersburg; the latter, therefore, could not begin before the 31st, while in the night from July 30 to 31 the mobilization of the entire Russian Army against Germany was ordered in Petersburg, finally making impossible the continuation of the last German attempt at mediation in Vienna.

The truth is, in spite of Russian and English twistings, that without the interval caused by Germany's efforts in Vienna, which interval England allowed to pass unused in Petersburg, the war would have broken out a few days sooner.

Let us consider how the fact of the Russian mobilization, the dimensions and tendency of which was brought to the knowledge of the London Cabinet at the very latest on July 24, must affect Germany.

On July 24 the Russian Government declared, in an official communiqué, it would be impossible for it to remain indifferent in an Austro-Servian conflict.

Germany's Hand Forced.

This declaration was followed immediately by military measures which represented the beginning of Russian mobilization long planned. But even on July 27 the Russian Minister of War, Suchomlinof, assured the German Military Attaché upon word of honor (Annex 11 of the German "White Paper") that no order for mobilization had been given and no reservists had been drawn and no horse had been commandeered.

Although in this conversation there had been left no doubt to the Russian Minister of War concerning the fact that measures of mobilization against Austria must be considered by Germany also as very threatening toward itself, during the next days news of the Russian mobilization arrived in quick succession.

On the 29th mobilization of Southern and Southwestern Russia was ordered, which was extended on the 30th to twenty-three provinces.

On the night of the 30th to the 31st, while the efforts of the Kaiser to maintain peace were continuing and were receiving friendly attention in Vienna, in St. Petersburg the mobilization of the entire Russian Army was ordered. Even as late as 2 P. M. on the 31st, however, (German "White Paper," Page 18, of NEW YORK TIMES reprint,) the Czar telegraphed the Kaiser that the military measures now being taken were meant for defensive purposes against Austria's preparations, and he gave his pledge as far away from desiring war.

In the face of such evident duplicity of Russian politics, a further delay such as was desired by Sir Maurice de Bunsen would have been for every German statesman a crime against the security of his own country.

On the other hand, upon what German measures did the Russian Government base its order for mobilization? The British "White Paper" proves how frivolously steps leading to the most serious results were ordered in St. Petersburg. On July 30 Sir George Buchanan telegraphed:

> M. Sasonof told us that absolute proof was in possession of the Russian Government that Germany was making military and naval preparations against Russia, more particularly in the direction of the Gulf of Finland. —(British "White Paper" No. 97.)

Proofs Lacking.

On the other hand, Buchanan's telegram of July 31 (British "White Paper" No. 113) states:

> Russia has also reason to believe that Germany is making active military preparations, and she cannot afford to let her get a start.—(British "White Paper" No. 113.)

So, from one day to the next the "absolute proof" changed to a reason for the assumption. In reality, both were assertions that lack all proof.

The finishing part of a telegram sent by the British Ambassador in Berlin to Sir Edward Grey on July 31 deserves special mention:

> He [the German Secretary of State] again assured me that both the Emperor William, at the request of the Emperor of Russia and the German Foreign Office, had even up till last night been urging Austria to show willingness to continue discussion—and telephonic communications from Vienna had been of a promising nature—but Russia's mobilization had spoiled everything.—(British "White Paper" No. 121.)

Therefore, the German Chancellor, in his memorandum placed before the Reichstag, stated with full justification:

> The Russian Government has smashed the laborious attempts at mediation on the part of the European State Chancelleries, on the eve of success, by the mobilization, endangering the safety of the empire. The measures for a mobilization, about whose seriousness the Russian Government was fully acquainted from the beginning, in connection with their constant denial, show clearly that Russia wanted war.
>
> To this is to be added that the English Government also was made fully cognizant of the intentions of the Russian mobilization, by a witness that could not be suspected, namely, its own representative in Petersburg, and therefore must bear full responsibility.

II.

GREY'S OMISSIONS AND ERRORS

WE have seen from the "Blue Book" that the Secretary of State in London was informed at the very latest on July 24 by his Ambassador in St. Petersburg of the plan of the Russian mobilization and consequently of the tremendous seriousness of the European situation. Yet eight to nine days had to elapse before the beginning of the war. Let us see whether Sir Edward Grey used this time to preserve peace, according to his own documents.

From this testimony it appears that even at the beginning of the last and decisive part of the European crisis, which began on June 28, 1914, with the assassination of the Austrian heir to the throne, Sir Edward Grey refrained from considering a direct participation of his country in the possible world war. At least, this must be the impression gained from his remarks to the representatives of the two powers with whom England is today at war. Thus, he said to the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador, Count Menadorff, on July 23:

> The possible consequences of the present situation were terrible. If as many as four great powers of Europe—let us say Austria, France, Russia, and Germany—were engaged in war, it seemed to me that it must involve the expenditure of so vast a sum of money and such an interference with trade that a war would be accompanied or followed by a complete collapse of European credit and industry.—(British "White Paper" No. 3.)

Here Grey speaks only of four of the big powers at most that may go to war, without even hinting at the fifth, namely, England. On July 24 he had another conversation with the Austrian Ambassador, the theme of which was the note—meanwhile presented to Servia. It caused apprehensions on his part, but he declared again:

> The merits of the dispute between Austria and Servia were not the concern of his Majesty's Government. * * *
>
> I [Grey] ended by saying that doubtless we should enter into an exchange of views with other powers, and that I must await their views as to what could be done to mitigate the difficulties of the situation.—(British "White Paper" No. 5.)

We are already striking the fateful peculiarity of Grey's policy to hesitate where prompt action, or at least a clear and open conduct would have been his duty. This weakness of his nature has been used with great art by French and Russian diplomacy. This is illustrated by the conversation of July 24 between him and the French Ambassador, Cambon, in London:

> M. Cambon said that, if there was a chance of mediation by the four powers he had no doubt that his Government would be glad to join in it; but he pointed out that we could not say anything in St. Petersburg till Russia had expressed some opinion or taken some action. But, when two days were over, Austria would march into Servia, for the Servians could not possibly accept the Austrian demand. Russia would be compelled by her public opinion to take action as soon as Austria attacked Servia, and, therefore, once the Austrians had attacked Servia it would be too late for any mediation. — (British "White Paper" No. 10.)

Thus: England must not give any advice to Russia before it knows Russia's intent and even its measures. But inasmuch as Austria will have proceeded against Servia by that time Russia must make war, and the conclusion is that even on July 24 the catastrophe is considered unavoidable. Grey shows himself more and more hypnotized by the fatalistic view that it is too late. Hence he reports also on July 24 a conversation of the German Ambassador, Prince Lichnowsky:

> I reminded the German Ambassador that some days ago he had expressed a personal hope that if need arose I would endeavor to exercise moderating influence at St. Petersburg, but now I said that, in view of the extraordinarily stiff character of the Austrian note, the shortness of the time allowed, and the wide scope of the demands upon Servia, I felt quite helpless as far as Russia was concerned, and I did not believe any power could exercise influence alone.—(British "White Paper" No. 11.)

From a conversation of Grey with the Prince Lichnowsky, the German Ambassador, on July 25:

> Alone we could do nothing. The French Government were traveling (this refers to the visit at Petersburg by Messrs. Poincaré and Viviani) at the moment, and I had had no time to consult them, and could not, therefore, be sure of their views.—(British "White Paper" No. 25.)

If Sir Edward Grey sincerely desired the maintenance of peace, he must have had to use his entire influence at St. Petersburg to bring about the stopping of the threatening military measures taken by Russia, whereas he was waiting for the opinion of the French Government. He was bound to do this, so much the more in view of the fact that he demanded from Germany that it should exert its influence with Austria.

That this request of Grey's was complied with by Germany insofar as it was in any way in accord with the alliance with Austria-Hungary, and that in Vienna every effort was made to conciliate matters, is shown by the assurance of the Chancellor; he declares:

> In spite of this [the Austro-Hungarian Government having remained with full appreciation of our action that it had come too late] we continued our mediatory efforts to the utmost and advised Vienna to make any possible compromise consistent with the dignity of the monarchy.—(German "White Paper," Page 17, of NEW YORK TIMES reprint.)

Grey well knew that Germany was doing all it could to mediate in Vienna. He expressed his recognition and his joy over it on July 28, ("Blue Book," Page 67):

> It is very satisfactory to hear from the German Ambassador here that the German Government have taken action at Vienna in the sense of the conversation recorded in my telegram of yesterday to you.—(British "White Paper" No. 67.)*

Neither has Grey been left in the dark by the German side concerning the difficulties, which by the Russian mobilization made every attempt to mediate in Vienna abortive. Even on July 31 the British Ambassador in Berlin telegraphed:

> The Chancellor informs me that his efforts to preach peace and moderation at Vienna have been seriously handicapped by the Russian mobilisation against Austria. He has done everything possible to obtain his object at Vienna, perhaps even rather more than was altogether palatable at the Ballplatz.—(British "White Paper" No. 108.)

England and Russia.

How, on the other hand, about Grey's action with Russia? From the very beginning one should have had a right to expect that, as Germany acted in Vienna, thus France, if it was active in Grey's spirit, would be working in St. Petersburg for peace. Of this no trace whatsoever can be found. The French Government thus far has not published any series of documents concerning its activity during the crisis, and neither in the Russian "Orange Book" nor in the English "Blue Book" is anything mentioned of the mediating activity on the part of France.

On the contrary, the latter power, wherever she puts in an appearance—as for instance in the conversation of the English Ambassador in St. Petersburg with his French colleague and M. Sasonof, as mentioned above—appears as fully identical with Russia.

It is also stated on July 24:

> The French Ambassador gave me to understand that France would fulfill all the obligations entailed by her alliance with Russia if necessity arose, besides supporting Russia strongly in all diplomatic negotiations. * * * It seems to me from the language held by French Ambassador that even if we decline to join them, France and Russia are determined to make a strong stand.—(British "White Paper" No. 6.)

One should think that Grey, who in view of this could not possibly expect an influence for peace being brought to bear by France, but only a strengthening of the Russian desire for aggression, now would have acted in the most energetic manner in St. Petersburg for the maintenance of peace.

In reality, however, during the days that still remained, aside from a weak and in St. Petersburg absolutely ineffective advice to postpone mobilization, he did nothing whatsoever, and later placed himself in a manner constantly more recognizable on the side of Russia.

The claim that the time limit given by the Austrian note to Servia was the cause of the war, that Grey's mediation had only miscarried owing to the haste of Germany, is disproved by the British documents themselves. De Bunsen on July 26 telegraphed to Grey from Vienna:

> Russian Ambassador just returned from Leave, thinks that Austro-Hungarian Government are determined on war and that it is impossible for Russia to remain indifferent. He does not propose to press for more time in the sense of your telegram of the 25th inst.—(British "White Paper" No. 40.)

Therefore Russia has paid little attention to the very shy and timid efforts to maintain peace by the London Secretary of State, even where these were concerned in the attempt to change the position taken by Austria.

Another proof: Sasonof on July 27 sent a telegram to the Russian Ambassador in London which the latter transmitted to Grey, and which concerns itself with the much mentioned proposition of the latter to have the conflict investigated by a conference of the four great powers not immediately concerned.

Russian Sincerity Questioned.

The conference plan was declined without much hesitation and openly by Germany, because it was compelled to see therein an attempt to place Austria before a European court of arbitration, and because it knew the serious determination of its ally in this matter. But did Russia really want the conference? Minister Sasonof declares:

> I replied to the [British] Ambassador that I have begun conversations with the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador under conditions which I hope may be favorable. I have not, however, received as yet any reply to the proposal made by me for revising the note between the two Cabinets.—(British "White Paper" No. 53.)

Here it is shown plainly how little the conference plan was after the heart of the Russians. Had they accepted it it would have had to be done immediately. As soon as the situation had grown very much more serious by the failure of the negotiations with Austria-Hungary there would have been no more time for this.*

A telegram of the English Ambassador in St. Petersburg, dated July 27, (British "White Paper" No. 55) shows how this conference was expected to be conducted in St. Petersburg:

> His Excellency [Sasonof] said he was perfectly ready to stand aside if the Powers accepted the proposal for a conference, but he trusted that you would keep in touch with the Russian Ambassador in the event of its taking place.—(British "White Paper" No. 55.)

Russian shrewdness evidently expected to control the conference by keeping in touch with Grey, who of course would have been the Chairman. The dispatches of his own Ambassadors lying before him should have enabled the Secretary of State to see the perfidy of the Russian policy. Buchanan wrote on the 28th from St. Petersburg:

> * * * and asked him whether he would be satisfied with the assurance which the Austrian Ambassador had, I understood, been instructed to give in respect to Servia's integrity and independence. * * * In reply his Excellency stated that if Servia were attacked Russia would not be satisfied with any engagement which Austria might take on these two points. * * * —(British "White Paper" No. 72.)

Entirely in contrast herewith is one report of the British representative in Vienna, dated Aug. 1 and speaking of a conversation with the Russian Ambassador there:

> Russia would, according to the Russian Ambassador, be satisfied even now with assurance respecting Servian integrity and independence. He said that Russia had no intention to attack Austria.—(British "White Paper" No. 141.)

What, then, may one ask, was the opinion which Sir Edward Grey had formed concerning Russia's real intentions? He learns from Russian sources and notes faithfully that Russia will accept Austrian guarantees for independence of Servia, and also that it will not accept such guarantees. It is the same duplicity which Russia, when its own mobilization was concerned, showed toward Germany. Did Sir Edward not notice this duplicity, or did he not wish to notice it? If the documents of the English Government have not been selected with the purpose to confuse, then in London the decision to take part in the war does not seem to have been a certainty at the beginning. We have seen that Ambassador Buchanan in Petersburg on July 24 gave the Russian Minister to understand that England was not of a mind to go to war on account of Servia. This position, taken by the Ambassador, was approved by Sir Edward Grey on the following day in the following words:

> I entirely approve what you said * * * and I cannot promise more on behalf of the Government.—(British "White Paper" No. 24.)

Based upon these instructions, Sir George Buchanan, even on July 27, stated to M. Sasonof, who continued to urge England to unconditionally join Russia and France:

> I added that you [Grey] could not promise to do anything more, and that his Excellency was mistaken if he believed that the cause of peace could be promoted by our telling the German Government that they would have to deal with us as well as with Russia and France if she supported Austria by force of arms. Their [the German] attitude would merely be stiffened by such a menace.—(British "White Paper" No. 44.)

But on this same 27th day of July, Grey, submitting to the intrigues of Russian and French diplomacy, had committed one very fateful step (Telegram to Buchanan, July 27):

> I have been told by the Russian Ambassador that in German and Austrian circles impression prevails that in any event we would stand aside. His Excellency deplored the effect that such an impression must produce. This impression ought, as I have pointed out, to be dispelled by the orders we have given to the first fleet which is concentrated, as it happens, at Portland not to disperse for manoeuvre leave. But I explained to the Russian Ambassador that my reference to it must not be taken to mean that anything more than diplomatic action was promised.—(British "White Paper" No. 47.)

For Russia this order to the fleet meant very much more than a diplomatic action. Sasonof saw that the wind in London was turning in his favor and he made use of it. Among themselves the Russian diplomatists seem to have for a long time been clear and open in their discussion of their real object. You find among the documents of the Russian "Orange Book" the following telegram of Sasonof of July 25 to the Russian Ambassador in London:

> In case of a new aggravation of the situation, possibly provoking on the part of the great powers' united action, (des actions conformes,) we count that England will not delay placing herself clearly on the side of Russia and France, with the view to maintaining the equilibrium of Europe, in favor of which she has constantly intervened in the past, and which would without doubt be compromised in the case of the triumph of Austria.—(Russian "Orange Paper" No. 17.)

There is no mention of Servia here, but Austria should not triumph. Russia's real intention, of course, was not placed so nakedly before the British Secretary of State, hence to him the appearance was maintained that the little State of the Sawe was the only consideration, although the Russian Army was already being mobilized with all energy.

On the 28th he wires to the Russian Ambassador, Count Benckendorff, to London to inform the British Government:

> It seems to me that England is in a better position than any other power to make another attempt at Berlin to induce the German Government to take the necessary action. There is no doubt that the key of the situation is to be found at Berlin.—(British "White Paper" No. 54.)

The opinion subtly suggested upon him by Paris and Petersburg diplomacy, namely, that he should not use any pressure upon Russia, but upon Germany, now takes hold of Grey more and more. On July 29 he writes to the German Ambassador as follows:

> In fact, mediation was ready to come into operation by any method that Germany thought possible if only Germany would "press the button in the interests of peace."—(British "White Paper" No. 84.)

Petersburg, now assured of the support of Grey, becomes more and more outspoken for war. On the 28th Grey again expressed one of his softhearted propositions for peace. Mr. Sasonof hardly made the effort to hide his contempt. Buchanan telegraphs on the 29th as follows:

> The Minister for Foreign Affairs said that proposal referred to in your telegram of the 28th inst. was one of secondary importance. Under altered circumstances of situation he did not attach weight to it. * * * Minister for Foreign Affairs had given me to understand that Russia would not precipitate war by crossing frontier immediately and a week or more would in any case elapse before mobilisation was completed. In order to find an issue out of a dangerous situation it was necessary that we should in the meanwhile all work together.—(British "White Paper" No. 78.)

Naivete or Cynicism?

Here it really becomes impossible to judge where the naïveté of the British Secretary of State ends and cynicism begins, for Sasonof could not have told to him more plainly than in these lines that all Russia's ostensible readiness for peace served no other purpose than to win time to complete the strategical location of the Russian troops.

This point is emphasized by one document coming from a writer presumably unbiased, but presumably distrustful of Germany, wherein the confirmation is found that England and Russia had come to a full agreement during these days.

On July 30 the Belgian Chargé d'Affaires de l'Escaille in Petersburg reported to the Belgian Government upon the European crisis. Owing to the fast developing events of a warlike nature, this letter did not reach its address by mail, and it was published later on. The Belgian diplomatist writes:

> It is undeniable that Germany tried hard here, [that is, in Petersburg] and in Vienna to find any means whatsoever in order to forestall a general conflict. * * *
>
> And after M. de l'Escaille has told that Russia—what the Czar and his War Minister with their highest assurances toward Germany had denied—was mobilizing its own army, he continues:
>
> Today at Petersburg one is absolutely convinced, yes, they have even received assurances in that direction, that England and France will stay by them. This assistance is of decisive importance and has contributed much to the victory of the [Russian] war party.

This settles Grey's pretended "attempts at mediation." The truth is that British politics, decided to prevent a diplomatic success of Germany and Austria, now worked openly toward the Russian aim. "The exertion of pressure upon Berlin" included already a certain threat, mingled with good advice.

On July 23 Grey had only spoken of four possible powers in war; hence when on the German side some hope of England maintaining neutrality was indulged in, this impression rested upon Grey's own explanations. On July 29, however, after a political conversation with Prince Lichnowsky, German Ambassador in London, he adds an important personal bit of information. He wires concerning it to Berlin, to Goschen:

> After speaking to the German Ambassador this afternoon about the European situation, I said that I wished to say to him, in a quite private and friendly way, something that was on my mind. The situation was very grave. * * * But if we failed in our efforts to keep the peace and if the issue spread so that it involved every European interest, I did not wish to be open to any reproach from him, that the friendly tone of all our conversations had misled him or his Government into supposing that we should not take action. * * * But we knew very well that if the issue did become such that we thought that British interests required us to intervene, we must intervene at once and the decision would have to be very rapid.—(British "White Paper" No. 80.)

But what is especially wrong is that Grey brought this warning, which only could have any effect if it remained an absolute, confidential secret between the English and German Governments, also to the French Ambassador, so that the entire Entente could mischievously look on and see whether Germany really would give in to British pressure. Of course, in his manner of swaying to and fro, he did not wish either that Cambon should not accept this information to the German Ambassador as a decided taking of a position on the part of England:

> I thought it necessary, [speaking to M. Cambon,] to say that because as he knew we were taking all precautions with regard to our fleet and I was about to warn Prince Lichnowsky not to count on our standing aside, but it would not be fair that I should let M. Cambon be misled into supposing that we had decided what to do in a contingency that I still hoped might not arise. * * *—(British "White Paper" No. 87.)

Stirring Up Trouble.

On the German side Grey's open threat, which was presented, however, with smooth and friendly sounding words, was received with quiet politeness. Goschen telegraphed on the 30th concerning a talk with State Secretary von Jagow:

> His Excellency added that (telegram received from Prince Lichnowsky last night contains matter which he had heard with regret, but not exactly with surprise, and, at all events, he thoroughly appreciated the frankness and loyalty with which you had spoken.—(British "White Paper" No. 98.)

Now the work of stirring up trouble is continued unceasingly. On July 30 the British Ambassador in Paris, Sir F. Bertie, concerning a conversation with the President of the Republic, reports:

> He [Poincaré] is convinced that peace between the powers is in the hands of Great Britain. If his Majesty's Government announced that England would come to the aid of France in the event of a conflict between France and Germany * * * there would be no war, for Germany would at once modify her attitude.—(British "White Paper" No. 99.)

Did Grey really think for one moment that the German Empire would change its position immediately, in other words, would suddenly leave its ally in need, or is all this only a mass of diplomatic blandishments?

On the same day Grey steps from the personal warning which he had given to the German Ambassador to the sharpest official threat. In a telegram to the Ambassador in Berlin upon the question placed before him by the Chancellor of the Empire on the day prior (British "White Paper" No. 85,) whether England would remain neutral if Germany would bind itself, after possible war, to claim no French territory in Europe whatever, while in lieu of the French colonies a like guarantee could not be accepted, Grey answers with thundering words:

> His Majesty's Government cannot for a moment entertain the Chancellor's proposal that they should bind themselves to neutrality on such terms. What he asks us in effect is to engage to stand by while French colonies are taken and France is beaten, so long as Germany does not take French territory as distinct from the colonies. From a material point of view such a proposal is unacceptable, for France without further territory in Europe being taken from her could be so crushed as to lose her position as a great Power and become subordinate to German policy. Altogether apart from that, it would be a disgrace for us to make this bargain with Germany at the expense of France, a disgrace from which the good name of this country could never recover.—(British "White Paper" No. 101.)

With this telegram the war on Germany was practically declared, for as a price of British neutrality an open humiliation of Germany was demanded. If France—the question of French colonies is of very minor importance in this connection—must not be defeated by Germany, then England forbade the German Government to make war. It was furthermore stated that Germany was absolutely compelled to accept Russian-French dictates, and would have to leave Austria to its own resources. This would have meant Germany's retirement from the position of a great power, even if she had backed down before such a challenge.

III.

THE AGREEMENT WITH FRANCE

ONLY in the light of the developments concerning England's relation to France, given at the beginning of the war, Grey's policy,

(Continued on Following Page.)

*In the aforementioned book of the Oxford historians there is stated on Page 69 (retranslation):

> This mediation [namely, Grey's mediation proposition] had already been accepted by Russia on July 25th.

We have shown in the foregoing that the Russian Government did in no manner subscribe to the conference plan in binding terms. As an additional proof, a part of Buchanan's dispatch of the 25th may be mentioned:

> He [Sasonof] would like to see the question placed on international footing. * * * If Servia should appeal to the powers Russia would be quite ready to stand aside and leave the question in the hands of England, France, Germany, and Italy. It would be possible in his opinion that Servia might propose to submit the question to arbitration. — (British "White Paper" No. 17.)

Hence, not if England, but only if Servia would propose arbitration by the powers, Mr. Sasonof was willing! The most amusing part of this is that the Russian Minister himself considers such a proposition on the part of Servia merely as "possible"; evidently it would have appeared as a great condescension on the part of the Government at Belgrade if it, standing on the same basis as Austria-Hungary, would appear before a European tribunal! For us there is no additional proof necessary that a mediation conference, which for Austria was not acceptable even when proposed by England, would be unthinkable if the move for such came from Servia. In expressing such an idea, Mr. Sasonof proved that it was his intention to bring war about.

*Recently a book entitled "Why We Make War," in defense of Great Britain, appeared at Oxford, as the authors of which "Members of the Faculty for Modern History in Oxford" are mentioned. This work undertakes, on the ground of the official publications, to whitewash Grey's policy, and of course incidentally the Russian policy. All together this publication, parading in the gown of science, is contradicted by our own presentation of the facts; it may be mentioned also that this work contains in part positive untruths. Thus it states on Page 70 (retranslation):

> No diplomatic pressure whatever was exerted [by Germany] on Vienna, which, under the protection of Berlin, was permitted to do with Servia as she liked.

Grey's own words contradict this assertion.

A PRO-GERMAN REVIEW OF THE OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS

Careful Analysis of the "White Papers" of England and Germany, and of the "Orange Paper" of Russia, Especially England's "White Paper," Showing Germany's Side of the Case as to the Responsibility for Precipitating the Great War.

(Continued from Preceding Page.)

swaying between indecision and precipitate action, becomes apparent.

In all the explanations which the British Government in the course of eight years had presented to the British Parliament concerning the relations to other large powers, the assurance had been repeated that no binding agreements with the two partners of the Franco-Russian alliance had been made, above all, that no agreement with France existed. Only in his speech in the House of Commons on Aug. 3, 1914, which meant the war with Germany, Grey gave to the representatives of the people news of certain agreements which made it a duty for Great Britain to work together with France in any European crisis.

The fateful document, which in the form of an apparently private letter to the French Ambassador, dealt with one of the most important compacts of modern history, was written toward the end of the year 1912, and is published in the British "White Paper" No. 105, Annex 1:

London, Foreign Office, Nov. 22,1912.
My Dear Ambassador:

From time to time in recent years the French and British naval and military experts have consulted together. It has always been understood that such consultation does not restrict the freedom of either Government to decide at any future time whether or not to assist the other by armed force. We have agreed that consultation between experts is not, and ought not to be regarded as, an engagement that commits either Government to action in a contingency that has not arisen and may never arise. The disposition, for instance, of the French and British fleets respectively at the present moment is not based upon an engagement to co-operate in war.

You have, however, pointed out that, if either Government had grave reason to expect an unprovoked attack by a third power, or something that threatened the general peace, it should immediately discuss with the other whether both Governments should act together to prevent aggression and to preserve peace, and, if so, what measures they would be prepared to take in common. If these measures involved action, the plans of the General Staffs would at once be taken into consideration, and the Governments would then decide what effect should be given to them.

Yours, &c., E. GREY.

Was Parliament Deceived?

A few members of the English Parliament who on Aug. 3 dared to gingerly protest against the war, may have had reason to complain about the hiding of facts from the House of Commons. When such understandings can be made without any one having an idea of their existence, then—so far as England is concerned—the supervision of the Government, theoretically being exercised by a Parliament, becomes a fiction.

Veiled Defensive Alliance.

As a matter of fact, Grey does not desire to have accepted as political obligations the conversations of the French and English Army and Navy General Staffs concerning the future plans of campaign which took place from time to time in times of peace. However, the true tendency of this agreement, for such it is, gives itself away in the promise to immediately enter with France into a political and military exchange of opinions in every critical situation; it means in reality nothing less than a veiled defensive alliance which by clever diplomatic manipulations can be changed without any difficulty to an offensive one, for inasmuch as the English Government promises to consult and work together with France, and consequently also with its ally, Russia, in every crisis, before a serious investigation of the moments of danger, it waives all right of taking an independent position.

How would England ever have been able to enter a war against France without throwing upon itself the accusation of faithlessness against one with whose plans for war it had become acquainted through negotiations lasting through years?

Here a deviation may be permissible, which leaves for a moment the basis of documentary proof.

If one considers how this agreement of such immeasurable consequences was not only hidden from the British Parliament by the Cabinet, but how to the very edge of conscious deceit its existence was denied—in the year 1913 Premier Asquith answered a query of a member of the House of Commons that there were no unpublished agreements in existence, which in a case of war between European powers would interfere with or limitlowing European war. In the light free decision on the part of the British Government or Parliament as to whether or not Britain should take part at a war—then certain reports making their appearance with great persistency in June, 1914, concerning an Anglo-Russian naval agreement are seen in a different light.

Persons who were acquainted with the happenings in diplomacy then stated that the Russian Ambassador in Paris, M. Iswolski, during the visit which the King of England and Sir Edward Grey were paying to Paris, had succeeded in winning the English statesmen for the plan of such an agreement. A formal alliance, it was said, was not being demanded by Russia immediately, for good reasons. M. Iswolski was attempting to go nearer to his goal, carefully, step by step.

It had been preliminarily agreed that negotiations should be started between the British Admiralty and the Russian Naval Attaché in London, Capt. Wolkow. As a matter of fact Wolkow during June went to St. Petersburg for a few days to, as was assumed, obtain instructions and then return to London.

Grey's "Twisty" Answer.

These happenings aroused so much attention in England that questions were raised in Parliament concerning them. It was noted how twisty Grey's answer was. He referred to the answer of the Premier, already mentioned, stated that the situation is unchanged, and said then that no negotiations were under way concerning a naval agreement with any foreign nation. "As far as he was able to judge the matter," no such negotiations would be entered into later on.

The big Liberal newspaper, The Manchester Guardian, was not at all satisfied with this explanation; it assumed that certain conditional preliminary agreements might not be excluded.

This Russian plan, which was later worked out in St. Petersburg, went into oblivion on account of the rapidly following European war. In the light of the following revelation of Grey's agreement with France, the news of the naval agreement desired by Iswolski assumed another aspect.

Let us return to the Anglo-French agreement. The following remarks by the French Ambassador in London, reported by Grey, proves that, on the ground of this agreement, France, with very little trouble, would be able to make out of a diplomatic entanglement a case for Allies' interest as far as England is concerned.

A German "Attack."

He [Cambon] anticipated that the [German] aggression would take the form of either a demand to cease her preparations or a demand that she should engage to remain neutral if there was war between Germany and Russia. Neither of these things would France admit.—(British "White Paper" No. 105.)

Therefore, even the demand addressed to France not to, jointly with Russia, attack Germany, became a German "attack," which obliged England to come to the aid!

In spite of this, even on July 27 in a conversation with Cambon, Grey gave himself the appearance as if his hands were free. He told the Frenchman:

If Germany became involved and France became involved we had not made up our minds what we should do; it was a case that we should have to consider. * * * We were free from engagements and we should have to decide what British interests required us to do.—(British "White Paper" No. 87.)

M. Cambon remarked in reply that the Secretary of State had clearly pictured the situation, but on the very following day the French Ambassador took the liberty to remind Grey of the letter written in 1912, (British "White Paper" No. 105.)

Grey did not deny the claim implied in this reminder, but even as late as July 31 he reports as follows concerning the conversation with Cambon:

Up to the present moment we did not feel and public opinion did not feel that any treaties or obligations of this country were involved. * * * M. Cambon repeated his question whether we would help France if Germany made an attack on her. I said I could only adhere to the answer that, as far as things had gone at present, we could not take any engagement. * * * I said that the Cabinet would certainly be summoned as soon as there was some new development; that at the present moment the only answer I could give was that we could not undertake any definite engagement.—(British "White Paper" No. 119.)

Now, if we remember that even on the day before Grey had informed the German Imperial Chancellor that it would be a shame for England to remain neutral and allow France to be crushed, we here find a new proof of the unreliability of his conduct. If he has been gullible, the declaration of 1912, the dangerous character of which is increased by its apparently undefined tenor, has enmeshed him more and more. Also the military and naval circles, whose consultations with the representatives of the French Army and Navy certainly have been continued diligently since the beginning of the Servian crisis, were forcing toward a decision.

At all events it became more impossible with every hour for Germany to keep England out of the war by any offers whatsoever. This is proved by Grey's conversation of Aug. 1 with the German Ambassador:

He asked me whether if Germany gave a promise not to violate Belgian neutrality we would engage to remain neutral. I replied that I could not say that; our hands were still free, and we were considering what our attitude should be. * * * The Ambassador pressed me as to whether I could not formulate conditions on which we would remain neutral. I said that I felt obliged to refuse definitely any promise. * * * (British "White Paper" No. 123.)

Belgium Not the Cause.

Hence, only if Germany would permit herself to be humiliated, war with England could be avoided. The violation of Belgium's neutrality was in no way the cause of England joining Germany's enemies, for while German troops did not enter Belgium until the night from Aug. 3 to 4, Grey gave on Aug. 2 the following memorandum to the French Ambassador after a session of the Cabinet in London:

I am authorized to give an assurance that if the German fleet comes into the Channel or through the North Sea to undertake hostile operations against French coasts or shipping, the British fleet will give all the protection in its power.—(British "White Paper" No. 148.)

As the aim of this decision, of which M. Cambon was informed verbally, was to give France an assurance that it would be placed in a position "to settle the disposition of its own Mediterranean fleet," Grey would not accept the version of Cambon that England would take part in a war with Germany. This is a case of splitting hairs in order to put the blame of starting the war on Germany, for while England promised to protect the French coast and to make it possible for the French fleet to stay in the Mediterranean, she almost immediately proceeded to a warlike action against Germany, especially as the English Minister simultaneously refused to bind himself to maintain even this peculiar neutrality.

IV.
BELGIAN NEUTRALITY.

THE highest representatives of the German Empire with emphatic seriousness declared that it was with a heavy heart and only following the law of self-preservation that they decided to violate the neutrality of the Kingdom of Belgium, guaranteed by the great powers in the treaties of 1831 and 1839.

The German Secretary of State on Aug. 4 informed the English Government through the embassy in London that Germany intended to retain no Belgian territory, and added:

Please impress upon Sir E. Grey that German Army could not be exposed to French attack across Belgium, which was planned, according to absolutely unimpeachable information. Germany had consequently to disregard Belgian neutrality, it being with her a question of life or death to prevent French advance.—(British "White Paper" No. 137.)

In answer Grey caused the English Ambassador in Berlin to demand his passports and to tell the German Government that England would take all steps for defense of Belgian neutrality.

This, therefore, represents, in the view which very cleverly has been spread broadcast by British publicity, the real reason for the war. But in spite of the moral indignation that is apparent against Germany, the consideration for Belgium, up until very late, does not seem in any way to have been in the foreground. We find on July 31 Grey stated to Cambon:

The preservation of the neutrality of Belgium might be, I would not say a decisive, but an important, factor in determining our attitude.—(British "White Paper" No. 119.)

Here, therefore, there was no talk about England grasping the sword on account of Belgium. Now no one will claim that the assumption that the German troops could march through Belgium would be new or unheard of. For years this possibility had been discussed in military literature.*

A Sudden Decision.

It must also be assumed that the Belgian Government knew toward the end of July at the latest that the war between Germany and France was probable and the march of Germans through Belgium very possible.

If England had not taken part in the war against Germany, it may be assumed that it would have given Belgium the advice to permit the marching through of the German Army, somewhat in the same manner as the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg did, with a protest. In doing so the Belgian people would have been spared a great deal of misery and loss of blood. On Aug. 3 the Belgian Government replied to an offer of military help by France as follows:

We are sincerely grateful to the French Government for offering eventual support. In the actual circumstances, however, we do not propose to appeal to the guarantee of the powers. Belgian Government will decide later on the action which they may think necessary to take.—(British "White Paper" No. 151.)

One day later London decided to make Belgian neutrality the cause of the war against Germany before the eyes of the world. The Ambassador in Brussels received the following orders:

You should inform Belgian Government that if pressure is applied to them by Germany to induce them to depart from neutrality, his Majesty's Government expects that they will resist by any means in their power and that his Majesty's Government will support them in offering such resistance, and that his Majesty's Government in this event are prepared to join Russia and France.—(British "White Paper" No. 155.)

Not until England thus stirred Belgium up, holding out the deceptive hope of effective French and English help, did Belgian fanaticism break loose against Germany. Without the intervention of England in Brussels the events in Belgium, one may safely assert, would have taken an entirely different course, which would have been far more favorable to Belgium.

But, of course, England had thus found a very useful reason for war against Germany. Even on the 31st of July Grey had spoken of the violation of Belgian neutrality as not a decisive factor. On Aug. 1 he declined to promise Prince Lichnowsky England's neutrality, even if Germany would not violate Belgium's neutrality. On Aug. 4, however, the Belgian question was the cause that suddenly drove England to maintain the moral fabric of the world and to draw the sword.

This suddenly became the new development, which was still lacking for Grey in order to justify this war before public opinion in England.

Another English Advantage.

And something else was secured by the drawing of Belgium into the war by the British Government, which had decided to make war on Germany for entirely different reasons: the thankful part of the protector of the weak and the oppressed.

As an English diplomat, when Russia was mobilizing, openly stated, the interests of his country in Servia were nil, so for Grey even Belgium, immediately before the break with Germany, was not decisive. However, when England had irrevocably decided to enter the war, it stepped out before the limelight of the world as the champion of—the small nations.

*The book, which appeared at Oxford, "Why We Are at War," mentioned previously, states on Page 27, (retranslation):

That such a plan [the marching through Luxemburg and Belgium] had been taken into consideration by the Germans, has been known in England generally for several years; and it has also been generally accepted that the attempt to carry out this plan would bring about the active resistance of the British armed forces; one assumed that these would be given the task of assisting the left wing of the French, which would have to resist German advance from Belgian territory.

This expression on the part of the historical Faculty is very interesting. It shows that a plan of campaign between the English and French had long been considered, and that the Belgian entry into the alliance against Germany was a matter agreed upon.

TIMES READERS CHALLENGE MR. BECK'S ANTI-GERMAN CONCLUSIONS

Former Assistant U. S. Attorney General's Analysis of White and Orange Papers, Printed in Last Sunday's Times, Brings Forward Some Outspoken Opponents.

Nobody Right in This War.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is regrettable that President Wilson's admirable policy of strict neutrality is not more sincerely and carefully observed by the press and public of this country.

We are a cosmopolitan nation. Citizens of the five great warring countries and their descendants, to a very great extent, constitute our population. Partiality of any kind tends to destroy the elemental ties which bind us together, to disrupt our Union, and to make us a house divided against itself. James M. Beck's article in last Sunday's TIMES is of the kind which, serving no good purpose, helps to loosen, if not sever, our most vital domestic ties. While not for an instant doubting Mr. Beck's sincerity, we must take issue with his inadvertently ill-timed expression of opinion.

The article in question is based on the following statement: "Any discussion of the ethical merits of this great controversy must start with the assumption that there is such a thing as international morality." How does Mr. Beck define "international morality"? How can he assume that to exist, which each of the contending nations by their diverse actions prove to be non-extant? How can he claim that there is an "international morality" of accepted form when each nation claims that its interpretation must be accepted by the others?

Mr. Beck's allegation that the question "Was England justified in declaring war against Germany?" is more easily disposed of than the questions "Was Austria justified in declaring war against Servia?" and "Was Germany justified in declaring war against Russia and France?" proves two things—first, that his interest lies primarily in the vindication of England; second, that he disregards the fundamental causes and recognizes only the precipitating causes of the war.

The precipitating cause of the war between England and Germany is verbosely if inadequately covered by his article. We must admit that a treaty was broken by Germany, yet we contend that this broken agreement was a pretext for a war fomented and impelled by basic economic causes. At the outset, let us distinguish between a contract and a treaty. A contract is an agreement between individuals contemplating enforcement by a court of law; punishment by money damages in the great majority of cases, by a specific performance in a very few. A treaty is an agreement between nations contemplating enforcement by a court of international public opinion; punishment by money indemnity in the great majority of cases, by specific performance (i. e., force of arms) in a very few.

Germany contends that her breach of treaty obligation is punishable by the payment of money indemnity to the aggrieved party. This she has offered to do in the case of Belgium, as she has already done in the case of Luxemburg. Germany's existence was so seriously threatened that her action seems justifiable, and there remains a sole moral obligation to compensate any neutral country injured by her.

The mere fact that Belgium had made an unfortunate alliance with England is deplorable in that Belgium has suffered terribly; but this suffering is not attributable to Germany. When Japan violated Chinese neutrality, China protested. Though she was entitled to a money indemnity, there is no valid reason under the sun why the United States as a guarantor of the integrity of China should declare war against Japan. England's justification, in so far as there can be any justification for adding to the toll of death, is the same as that of Germany, the preservation of national sovereignty.

Further: "It seems unnecessary to discuss the wanton disregard of these solemn obligations." There can be nothing wanton in a struggle for existence, and that this European war is such a struggle is the only possible explanation of its magnitude, ferocity, and vast possible consequences. Then, too, though deplorable, treaty obligations are not solemn, as Italy has proved to the complete satisfaction of so many. Italy's contention that this is an aggressive war on the part of Germany and Austria is as untenable as the German contention that it is an aggressive war on the part of England. For this war was not an aggressive war on the part of any nation, but an unavoidable war caused by the simultaneous bursting of the long-gathering economic storm clouds.

Again: "The ethical aspects of this great conflict must largely depend upon the record that has been made up by the official communications." This is similar to a contention that the ethical rights in a case in court must depend upon the astuteness of counsel in summing up to the jury. "A court would be deeply impressed * * * by the significant omissions of documents known to be in existence." A court of law, as our former Assistant Attorney General of the United States surely knows, compels no one to give testimony that tends to incriminate, and, furthermore, does not construe failure to testify on the grounds that it will tend to incriminate against the defendant. In the law the defendant is entitled to every reasonable doubt. It is also conceivable that a reasonable time for the defense to present its case would be granted before passing judgment.

Passing on: "To discuss the justice of Austria's grievances against Servia would take us * * * into the realm of disputed facts." This seems a delectable bit of humor. We respectfully submit that Mr. Beck's other assertions might also be considered as "in the realm of disputed facts." Mr. Beck admits that Austria had a just grievance against Servia, though he questions her method of redress. Though we conceive that in the unfortunate European tangle Austria relied on German support in the event of international conflict, we submit that reliance on Russian support was a bigger factor in encouraging little Servia to defy her big neighbor than the remoter help that Germany would furnish Austria in the event of the conflict spreading.

Austria, in the exercise of her right to engage in a punitive expedition against Servia, guaranteed that she would do nothing to generalize the conflict by her assurances to Russia and to the world that there would be no annexation of Servian territory or annihilation of the Servian Kingdom. Whether these assurances were genuine or not is impossible of determination. We have no right to constitute ourselves arbiters of their sincerity.

Mr. Beck speaks of "the solidarity of European civilization and the fact that by policy and diplomatic intercourse * * * a United European State exists, even though its organization be as yet inchoate." This solidarity is conspicuous only by its utter non-existence. Whatever may have been achieved by policy and diplomatic intercourse has been marred and rendered useless by the lines of demarkation of the spheres of influence of the great powers of Europe and by the racial and temperamental incongruities of Europe's population.

We read: "Servia had forty-eight hours to answer; * * * the other European nations had barely a day to consider what could be done to preserve the peace of Europe." Why should an Austro-Servian war compromise the peace of Europe? Was is not because of the tangled web of international diplomacy, the Triple Entente as well as the Triple Alliance?

Referring to a German warning in regard to Austria's demands on Servia, "the German Foreign Office anticipates that Servia 'will refuse to comply with these demands'—why, if they were justified?" We grieve at the shattered ideal of Mr. Beck, who, in the face of the international calamity which has befallen the world, still can believe that all justifiable demands are complied with.

Again, quoting German "White Paper" Annex IB, Germany desired "that the dispute be localized, since any intervention of another power, on account of the various alliance obligations, would bring consequences impossible to measure." The explanation of this statement is not—an aggressor threatens his adversary, but, rather, a prudent man begs opposing factions to keep cool.

Great space is devoted in the article in question to Germany's unwillingness to place the Austro-Servian controversy in the hands of France, England, Germany, and Italy. As Germany disavows all interest in the controversy, if she speaks truly, it was not within her power to dictate to her ally in a matter which she could in no wise control except by force of arms. Furthermore, had she had the power, how could she be expected to exert pressure on her ally to leave a vital controversy to a court of four, two of whom were bound by alliances with Russia, Austria's real antagonist, and a third (Italy), as subsequent events have shown, Austria's natural, geographical, and hereditary enemy? At best, had each power held to its treaty obligations, there would have been a deadlock.

Further: "The Russian Minister * * * called at the German Foreign Office and asked it to urge upon Vienna * * * to take up this line of conciliation. Jagow replied that he could not advise Austria to yield.'" Elsewhere in the article a statement is made that the Austro-Servian and Austro-Russian questions "for all practical purposes * * * were indistinguishable." This inconsistency of having Servia in the light of a principal and then again in the light of an agent is the greatest stumbling block to a clear analysis of the precipitating cause of the war. The logical explanation of Servia's position is that of Russia's agent. Hence Germany could not be expected to exert the same pressure on an allied principal that Russia could exert on her agent.

It is true that Germany engaged in many blundering diplomatic quibbles in the final stages of preparation for the war; but it is also true that England quibbled, though with greater diplomatic finesse; for instance, "Sir Edward Grey went so far as to tell the German Ambassador that * * * if Germany would make any reasonable proposals to preserve peace, and Russia and France rejected it, that 'His Majesty's Government would have nothing to do with the consequences.'" Here it is apparent to every one that the word "reasonable" begs the questions.

The German people were encouraged to relish the idea of a war against Russia once that war became likely, for sooner or later it seemed inevitable that Slav and Teuton would clash, and Germany felt confident that at the present time she outmatched her enemy. The Russians, too, were encouraged to desire the Slav provinces of Austria, which racially are a part of the Russian domain. The English people were made to relish this opportunity to strike their great commercial competitor, especially when they could do so with little likelihood of unfavorable criticisms. Finally, the impressionable French people were stirred to thoughts of revenge and recovery of their lost provinces.

Sympathy with any country in this most disgraceful yet most inevitable of war brands the sympathizer as a party to the material and lustful purposes of at least one of the combatants. There is no ethical justification of this war from any standpoint. There is no justification of this war from any standpoint. There is only an explanation of the war from an economic standpoint. All these specious arguments on the precipitating causes of the war can be but for the display of brilliant forensic oratory and matchless diction. Let us thrust aside in these dark moments of peril and horror all subterfuge.

England, overburdened with taxation, was on the verge of civil war. Russia, whose masses were overridden roughshod by a bureaucracy weighting down the peasants with onerous national burdens, expected sooner or later the cataclysmic upheaval with which the Nihilistic societies have long been threatening its tyrannical government. France, seriously financially embarrassed because of crop impoverishment and bad foreign investments in Brazil, Russia, and the Balkans, was subject to continued internal political upheavals, with everchanging Ministries and a growing Socialist Party.

Austria, "the ramshackle empire," was in danger of disintegrating from a variety of causes, not the least of which was the infusibility of its racially different elements. Germany, in a blind race for commercial supremacy, suffered from industrial overproduction, thus creating an unhealthy financial condition which fortified the Socialist Party to an extent which threatened her imperialistic form of government itself.

So these monarchies whose days were numbered, because of dissatisfaction at the waste and extravagance of a world gone mad with national excesses committed in the name of civilization, in reality the price of our modernization, in a final desperate effort to rally their waning fortunes stampeded their awakening masses into a ruinous interracial war in order to stave off the torch and the guillotine.

GEORGE E. BERNHEIMER.
New York, Oct. 30, 1914.

Russia to Blame.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Allow me to submit the following in answer to the article of James M. Beck, entitled "Case of the Double Alliance vs. the Triple Entente," published in THE NEW YORK TIMES of Oct. 25, 1914:

The case of "Russian Mobilization vs. German Mediation." Q.—Upon whom was the duty to yield?

Mr. Beck has spent considerable time and effort to prove, at least by inference, that Germany must have been informed beforehand of the Austrian ultimatum to Servia. Personally, I am convinced that the ultimatum in question was sent with the full knowledge and consent of Germany, and, whether this is true or not, I maintain that it was Austria's duty to inform her ally before taking a step which was likely to endanger the peace of Europe.

The concession of this point takes me immediately to the ultimatum itself and to the question, "Was the tenor of the ultimatum justified?" Mr. Beck, in his judgment, says: "The ultimatum is grossly unreasonable and disappropriate to any grievance that Austria had." Perhaps Mr. Beck is right, but I have good reasons to think that the tenor of the ultimatum was fully justified, in view of Servia's former conduct.

Austria was dealing here with a Government the real spirits of which had come into power by the commission of one of the most dastardly crimes of modern times. A crime which, at the time of its commission, sent a shock of horror through the entire civilized world, to wit, "the outrageous murder of the former King and Queen of Servia," outrageous because it was perpetrated by the so-called aristocracy of Servia. The long-continued agitation carried on by Servia against Austria, at the instigation of Russia, which finally culminated in another no less outrageous assassination, that of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his consort, to my idea fully justified Austria in making demands which under ordinary circumstances might have been termed "unreasonable."

The question whether Austria was justified in going to war against Servia is a debatable one, but I respectfully refer to the fact that our own country, the United States, was only very recently on the verge of precipitating war with a "much weaker" nation than ours, on account of the latter's refusal to salute the American flag. Neither did we stop on that occasion with the ultimatum, but we followed it up with dispatching a fleet of warships, the landing of troops, and the seizure of Vera Cruz.

From the time Austria's ultimatum was sent, all the great powers seemed to have professed a great eagerness for the preservation of peace. Mr. Beck asserts that Germany was not sincere in its desire for peace and could have avoided the war if it had seriously tried to exert its influence over Austria. This finding is based on the inference drawn from the fact that Germany failed to achieve any results.

To determine whether Mr. Beck is justified in finding as he does, it is necessary, first of all, to examine the exact status of the powers at the time the ultimatum was sent. We find that Austria had a just grievance against Servia, for which it was seeking redress. An issue was therefore raised between Austria and Servia. Germany, although Austria's ally, immediately defined its attitude by declaring emphatically that "the question at issue was one for settlement between Servia and Austria alone."

I beg to ask Mr. Beck to answer the following question: By what right—moral, legal, or equitable—did Russia make Servia's cause its own? Did Russia have any alliance with Servia? I further ask, What privity existed between Austria, Servia, and Russia?

Suppose Mr. Beck can justify the action of Russia, although a "rank outsider," in taking Servia's part, how can he possibly justify the positively unreasonable and, under the circumstances, most dangerous step of "actual mobilization" on the part of Russia?

Mr. Beck has tried to justify the mobilization by quoting the Russian excuse "that Russia's mobilization was only for a defense against Austria." On close examination what does this amount to? It resolves itself into a situation somewhat like this: A sends an ultimatum to B seeking redress for a wrong committed by B upon A, whereupon C mobilizes "for defense against A." I leave it to the average American of ordinary intelligence to find a reason for C's mobilization "for defense against A." Mr. Beck might as well try to justify a mobilization on the part of Japan if the United States was preparing to invade Mexico for the purpose of redressing an insult to the American flag. Does Mr. Beck realize the seriousness of actual mobilization by Russia at that critical moment? Not one of the other powers dared to take this one step which among nations is regarded as tantamount to a declaration of war.

And what did the Kaiser do at this moment? He did the only thing he could do, and I dare say, the only thing our American Nation could have done under the same circumstances. He wired the Czar and stated: "I am willing to bring my influences to bear upon Austria, provided you agree to cease mobilization." Was this demand unreasonable? What else could Germany have done, I ask, with the Russian bear standing on the border with the sword already drawn? This moment was the crucial and decisive one in the prologue to this awful world drama.

The only question therefore and the all-important one to be submitted to the Court of Civilization, is, Whose duty was it to yield? Was it Russia's, with the sword already drawn against a country which had not attacked it, not even threatened it, or was it Germany's, with the sword in the sheath?

In his "conclusion," Mr. Beck speaks of Germany as "beset on every hand by powerful antagonists." Does he really mean to deprive the German Emperor of the right to demand as a condition precedent to mediation on his part the discontinuance of mobilization by Russia?

Mr. Beck in his "judgment" under Paragraph 4 says "that Austria having mobilized its army, Russia was reasonably justified in mobilizing its forces." The use of the qualifying word "reasonably" seems to indicate that even Mr. Beck is not quite certain that Russia was in fact justified in mobilizing its forces.

Is it reasonable, just, and fair of Mr. Beck to expect Germany, "beset on every hand by powerful antagonists," to permit Russia to continue mobilizing its 18,000,000 soldiers and have Germany believe that Russia was sincere in its "peaceful intentions" in the face of actual mobilization? At this moment the German Kaiser made a very reasonable demand upon Russia to cease mobilization, and I ask every fair-minded American, whether lawyer or layman, "whose duty it was to yield" at this moment? The answer to this question will settle the much-disputed point as to the actual cause of the war.

In conclusion, I beg to ask Mr. Beck: Why expect so much of Germany and nothing of Russia, when Germany had not merely professed her peaceful intentions, but actually maintained peace for over forty years, during which period not a foot of territory had been acquired by her through conquest? This is a fact.

Coming into a court of law supported by such a reputation, does Mr. Beck really believe that the decision of the court would have been in favor of Russia? Does Mr. Beck really believe that the decision would have been against Germany, whose War Lord was begging the Czar almost on his knees to avoid the awful calamity by the discontinuance of mobilization?

Picture the United States about to invade Mexico to redress an insult to the American flag. Picture England as the ally of the United States, and Japan supporting Mexico, without any alliance existing between the two latter countries. To make this example conform to the actual facts under discussion, we must, of course, assume that both Japan and England are situated in the North American Continent, and across the border from the United States and England. Japan, with an army of 18,000,000 soldiers, (assumed for the purpose of argument,) mobilizes her army, professedly for defense against the United States. Could any fair-minded American possibly expect England to intercede with her ally, the United States, without first demanding the demobilization of Japan? Whose duty was it to yield?

The actual fact is that Germany even then did not declare war against Russia until Russian soldiers had actually crossed not the Austrian but the German border.

I may add that in writing the above I am prompted only by the very natural desire, viz., to impress upon the jury composed of the American people the one fact which should be given the most careful consideration in order to enable it to arrive at a just verdict in the case submitted, and this fact is "the mobilization of Russia."

FRANK SEGGEBRUCH.
New York, Oct. 29, 1914.

In Defense of Austria.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to your editorial, "The Evidence Examined," in your Sunday edition, I wish to protest emphatically against your assertion that a "Court of Civilization" must inevitably come to the conclusion that Germany precipitated the war. There are still millions of civilized people who see these things quite differently.

Mr. Beck makes out a case from the viewpoint of the accusing party—of course, nobody will doubt the legal abilities of Mr. Beck—but before the Supreme Court of Civilization there is also a law: audiatur et altera pars. Mr. Beck, as he presents the case to the court, has not mentioned very important points which, for the decision of the Supreme Court, would be most vital ones.

At first, the breach of Belgian neutrality, admitted and regretted by the German Government, has nothing to do with the question—who precipitated the war? It constituted only an action of the war itself. On the other hand, you call in your editorial the Austrian ultimatum a savage one and take it for granted that this ultimatum started the stone rolling and brought finally the general clash in Europe about. This presumption, when presented to the court, will have to be thoroughly proved, because there are many people, fair and just, as you consider yourself, who are convinced of the ample justification of this ultimatum.

It is hardly describable how many criminal acts have been committed by Servians against the very existence of the Dual Monarchy for the last six years, under the eyes of the Servian Government and approved by it, by intriguing against Austria's right to cultivate her own territory, Bosnia, spreading secret societies all over the empire, &c.

The awful crime, the assassination of the heir to the throne, was only the finish of a long chain of like acts. These facts, which immediately lead up to the ultimatum, ought to be considered in the first place by judging Austria's justification for sending this ultimatum to Servia. A just Judge in the court of civilization will, I am convinced, carefully study the ante-history and in all probability arrive at the conclusion that the ultimatum was amply justified and Servia fully deserved the severest punishment possible.

Mr. Beck presents to the court the Russian interference with this intended punishment and forgets to tell the Judge that Russia had not the least right to this interference. No foreign power had. Therefore, Austria was entirely within her right to decline any negotiations with Russia about this punishment before its completion. Nevertheless, the German Government brought these negotiations about, and, while these negotiations proceeded satisfactorily, Russia mobilized, mobilized all along her western frontier against Austria and Germany, notwithstanding the fact that she had promised not to do so, and officials in Petrograd had pledged their words to the contrary.

Russia knew there could be no such thing as a war with Austria alone, as well as Germany knew that a war with Russia meant a war with France. If the laws of morality rule in the court of civilization, they should above all be applied to the conduct of Servia and Russia. Austria was in a state of self-defense, when she decided not to bear any longer Servia's treacherous and murderous attacks against her existence; this is entirely within the boundaries of the laws of morality. Russia, however, without the slightest right, moral or legal, attacked Austria from the back by interfering with Austria's own affairs.

Therefore I wish to point out that a careful student of the papers, by considering the ante-history of the war, which, as you will admit, is very essential, may come to a quite different conclusion and Mr. Beck as State's attorney will have a hard stand against the counsel of the defendant.

EDWARD PICK.
New York, Oct. 27, 1914.

LATEST DEALINGS IN THE REALTY FIELD

Mira-Mar Apartments on Riverside Drive Sold to an Investor.

ASSESSED AT $325,000

Operators Trade Bronx Flat House for a Midtown Loft—Many Suburban Deals.

Several good deals closed the week's realty market yesterday, with a better degree of activity than had existed for the preceding two days. In the Morningside Heights section on the west side an important sale was announced in the purchase by an investor from Mrs. Lillie B. Hyde of the nine-story apartment house at 452 Riverside Drive, known as the Mira-Mar. It covers a plot 78.1 by 100.

Its assessed value is $325,000. It was acquired by Mrs. Hyde in February, 1911, from the builders, B. Crystal & Son. The Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company were the brokers in the transaction.

A Manhattan-Bronx Trade.

The seven-story store and loft building at 136 and 138 West Twenty-second Street has been sold by the International Distributors Corporation to the Brown-Weiss Realties.

The structure is of recent construction, and occupies a plot 41.8 by 98.9 on the south side of the street, between Sixth and Seventh Avenues.

In part payment the Brown-Weiss Company gave the northeast corner of Washington Avenue and 167th Street, a six-story flat, on plot 29 by 127. The latter house, together with a number of other properties, was acquired by the selling company last month in a trade.

Bronx Borough.

The two five-story new-law flats at 2,148 and 2,152 Webster Avenue, each on a plot 37.6 by 105, have been sold to an investor by Charles A. Weber for Mathilde Bosselman. He has also sold for Anna Young 1,316 and 1,318 Fulton Avenue, a three-story dwelling on a plot 44 by 208, and for a client to Ernest Scholz 344 Tinton Avenue, a two-family dwelling on a lot 20 by 92.

Brooklyn.

Frank A. Seaver & Co. have sold the plot, 80 by 100, on the north side of Seventh-sixth Stret, about 120 feet west of Seventh Avenue, to the Johann Construction Company, which will immediately begin the erection of two-family dwellings.

Friday & Lehmann have sold to an investor for Jacob Schauf the three-story apartment house at 328 Eldert Street; also a four-story flat at 288 Sumpter Street for George Weixner, the two-story two-family house at 1,195 Madison Street for Herman Huber, and a three-story flat at 1,075 Decatur Street for the estate of Elisabeth Hayes.

New Jersey.

Harman Warshaw has sold the three-story flat house and his private residence on Grove Street and Howe Avenue, Passaic, N. J., to H. T. Scott-Huntington. In exchange the buyer gave 1,040-acre plantation at Beebe, Ark. The trade, which was negotiated by the H. & H. Company, involved about $200,000.

Big Sale on Staten Island.

John May has purchased through Cornelius G. Kolff the Ansco G. Bruins' house on Howard Avenue near Louis Street, Grymes Hill. The property contains about three acres, with a large residence, gardener's lodge and garage, and will be improved by the new owner for use as a bachelor's apartment house, ready for occupancy in the Spring.

Sell 1,100 Sea Shore Lots.

A parcel of 1,100 lots of Manhattan Beach property has been sold by the Manhattan Beach Estates to the Manhattan Beach Realty Company. The property sold consists of all the improved lots west of Jaffrey Street.

Commercial Leases.

The Duross Company has leased the three-story building 128 West Eighteenth Street for Linda S. Rau to the A. and B. Express for a term of years.

Rice & Hill have leased to Louis Weigin the store at 156 West Forty-fifth Street, and the store at 636 Lexington Avenue to Anthan & Cadezas.

Dwellings Leased.

The four-story dwelling at 32 East Eighty-first Street has been leased by John J. Kavanagh to Archibald C. Barrow.

Charles Field Griffen & Co. have rented for the Quaker Ridge Estates the residence property known as "Wayside," at Scarsdale, N. Y.

H. S. Walstrum-Gordon & Forman have leased for J. Theo. De Mund his house on Doremus Avenue, Glen Rock, N. J., to Mrs. Henry Kehr of Manhattan.

Hughes & Whitby have leased, in conjunction with Pease & Elliman, the estate of Charles W. Edwards, situated at 66 Highland Avenue, Glen Ridge, N. J., consisting of eleven rooms, three baths, and double garage, to E. L. Herrington, Manager of the Travelers' Insurance Company.

$120,000 Newark, N. J., Lease.

Pilot & Feist, Inc., of Newark, N. J., have leased for a term of years for John C. Gregory of Far Hills, N. J., the new metal, brick and Indiana limestone, mill-construction, semi-fireproof factory building at 700 to 710 Frelinghuysen Avenue, Newark, N. J. The lessors are J. W. Beardsley's Sons of Greenwich Street, New York city, manufacturers of pure food specialties. The lease calls for an aggregate rental of $163,000, and includes an option to purchase the property within one year.

Taxes Overdue.

Yesterday the last half of the real estate tax became a lien. The Tax Corporation Report should be filed with the Controller on or before Nov. 15.

CANAL STREET DESTINED TO BE GREAT WHOLESALE CENTRE WITH NEW TRANSIT FACILITIES AND BRIDGE COMPLETION

New Buildings Around Unfinished Manhattan Bridge Plaza Indicate Growing Commercial Development East of the Bowery—Wide Thoroughfare from River to River a Benefit to Wholesale Trade—Bound to Hold Big Business in Its Natural Location, Says Frank Lord.

MORE than any other of the lower Manhattan crosstown thoroughfares, Canal Street is attracting the attention of realty men and investors. That its future as a growing commercial section is based on very bright prospects is readily seen by the increased transit facilities, which will be available within a few years. On the west will be the new Seventh Avenue Subway running up the Seventh Avenue extension to Times Square, and at Broadway will be a station of the new Broadway subway. These stations will furnish access to new service lines of inestimable value to the developing wholesale trade in the large district west of Broadway.

On the east, too, improvements are under way, at the Manhattan Bridge approach at Canal Street and the Bowery. Business interests in that locality have complained for some time that the long delay in completing the plaza approach has seriously interfered with the proper increase of realty and commercial development in the blocks east of the Bowery. When finished this approach will be one of the most imposing and artistic centres on Manhattan Island, and some idea of its future elegance may be obtained today, but even this is marred by the unfinished nature of the work in the section south of Canal Street. The architectural work is in charge of Thomas Hastings. Each side of the lofty arch over the bridge will be flanked by a row of columns, and those on the north, adjoining Canal Street, are now virtually finished.

Several new lofts have been erected on the Canal Street side, east of the Bowery. The tallest is the nine-story Marcus Building, on the northeast corner of Canal and Chrystie Streets, completed last Spring. On the plaza block front from Chrystie and the Bowery new five-story buildings have taken the place of those which were torn down for the bridge approach. Some of the plots left are of narrow depth, but quite sufficient for serviceable buildings. On the northeast corner of the Bowery, at 151 Canal Street, is a new five-story building just completed, having two basements. Adjoining it is a similar one, and then comes a two-story structure on a plot of narrow depth, and on the corner, where Canal Street straightens out, is a four-story structure.

Looking toward the east, one sees the towering Jarmulowsky Building on the southwest corner of Orchard Street, while near the junction of Canal Street with East Broadway is the eleven-story building of the Forward newspaper at 173 and 175 East Broadway. These modern improvements in the eastern section indicate a steady commercial improvement of a substantial character and which is likely to be considerably enhanced when the bridge work is completed.

Manhattan Bridge approach as it is to-day, Bowery and Canal Street.

Junction of Canal and Walker Streets, looking west 60 years ago.

New Loft on Manhattan Bridge Plaza, northeast corner of Canal Street and Bowery.

It is further indicative of the confidence in the future business progress of Canal Street toward the west that property in the Broadway section has not been diminished in assessed valuation for 1915, although practically without exception all of the Broadway property immediately north of Grand Street to Twenty-third Street has been materially reduced. The recent purchase by William McKinney of the six-story lofts at 24 and 26 White Street, with the abutting structure at 25 Walker Street, sold through the Charles F. Noyes Company, shows a favorable investment interest in the vicinity of the Seventh Avenue subway.

"Canal Street is about to take its real place on the map and serve its manifest destiny in holding the wholesale trade of New York in its natural location," said Frank Lord, Vice President of Daniel Birdsall & Co., yesterday.

"The first natural downtown centre is at City Hall, where the Hudson Terminal, the Brooklyn Bridge, the Subway express station, Chambers Street Ferry, and crosstown cars pour a great tide of population into the great civic centre and make it for all time one of the most important centres of New York," added Mr. Lord. "Chambers Street does not furnish, however, a free thoroughfare across the city for east and west traffic and it is not until Canal Street is reached that a great cross thoroughfare is found. Here we have a street where the tide from east to west can flow freely and the name 'Canal' in a 'Panama' sense is not inappropriate. There is no point below it where the ebb and flow of the tides of a great city can have free play. Canal Street is free from river to river and is wide enough for commerce to throw out its piers and float its cargoes.

"The vital necessities of the wholesale trade of any city is easy accessibility, free shipping, with good salesrooms and warehouses at moderate rents.

"The 'moving' cause of the uptown movement was primarily lack of easy transit. Downtown owners had opposed a Broadway subway, pushing it over to Centre Street, where it does not serve as a free and quick means of travel between the hotels and terminals and the wholesale district. This is being remedied at the cost of many millions by the building of a great business subway that will tie the banking, hotel, and business sections together and make it possible to reach any of them in five to ten minutes' subway travel, where it now requires fifteen to twenty-five minutes by a circuitous way. Canal Street will be the centre of it all by reason of its new crosstown subway reaching the east side and the west side with a minimum of effort and expense.

"Next to the lack of quick and easy transit, the reluctance of downtown owners to furnish modern warehouses is responsible for the uptown movement, but this was of little influence compared with the failure to secure quick transit on Broadway on the west side of the city. Downtown owners scoffed at the idea of their fine five-story buildings, 'built in 1868,' with excellent rope 'hoists' in the 'main' entrance, and with fine 'drum' stoves (owned by the tenant) and approved farm plumbing, not being all that the most enterprising merchants of the new world could ask.

"As a result, many firms moved uptown to an expensive location and where their expense accounts have grown faster than their 'new business.'

"The location of the Studebaker Company at Broadway and Canal is a shrewd move of an enterprising concern to be at the crossways, and, with the coming of real rapid transit, suitable buildings will be provided. Land values are low, and the landlord has lost much of his old-time loftiness.

"This does not mean that the great development of the uptown district will be halted. There is a natural demand for fine salesrooms uptown, and the great commerce of New York will continue to furnish the right kind of tenants for every new building built uptown—but the unnatural movement of businesses that deal in large volumes of low or medium-priced goods, the great dealers in staples, boots, shoes, dry goods, glassware, crockery ironware, paper and paper goods, &c., will stay where they belong, and not burden their wares with overhead charges that would make the German and English competitor grin with satisfaction if they had any 'grin' left on their shelves."

WANT TELEPHONE CHARGES REDUCED

Apartment House Owners and Realty Agents Organize to Secure Legislation.

LETTERS TO CANDIDATES

Member of Committee Says All Apartment House Switchboards Are Operated at a Loss.

A determined effort is being made by owners of apartment houses and real estate agents to have the next Legislature force a reduction of the rates charged for telephone service and equipment in Greater New York.

An organization has been formed, known as the Owners and Agents of Apartment Houses, of which Charles A. Du Bois is Chairman, which has drawn up a letter, signed by many of the civic and taxpayers' associations in Manhattan and the Bronx, and which is being sent to the candidates for the Senate and Assembly, asking their attitude toward the procuring of such legislation.

Eugene S. L. Mosse, Secretary of the J. Romaine Brown Company, a member of the new organization, discussing the situation yesterday, said: "This question has been before the Public Service Commission for nearly a year, but so far the only result has been a 10 per cent. cut, thrown out as a sort of 'sop' to public opinion by the telephone company.

"The commission holds semi-occasional hearings, at which there is a good deal of loose talk indulged in by both sides, it is true, but in the long run the property owner doesn't seem to make any headway toward stopping a loss of from $200 to $400 a year in every house that uses a switchboard and extensions in the several apartments.

"Look the figures square in the face for a moment, and you will see why we feel forced to call on some one to help us. Take as an example an average six-story building, 100 by 100, with six apartments on a floor, or thirty-six apartments in the building. Its phone equipment would be:

A switchboard, (annual cost)..	$36
Three trunk lines at $24 each..	72
Thirty-six extensions at $6 each	216
So we start with an annual fixed charge of	324
We would have to contract for 20,000 messages, at least, for which the company charges us 3c. each (and for which we collect 5c. each.) Now, assuming that we use 20,000 messages, our charges for messages would be	600
To this we must add the services of an operator at $30 per month, or, per year	360
Making an annual cost of (to run the phone)	1,284
Now, if we collect 5c. for every one of our messages, our gross revenue would be	1,000
And we would be out.....	284
The fact is, however, that for many reasons we don't collect for all the calls the company charges us with by any means; and I am quite sure that any other agent will bear me out; if we make a deduction of 25 per cent. in the collection item, amounting to....	250
It would run our losses up to..	534

"The more apartments in a building, of course, the greater the loss. It is clear at a glance that the principal reason why we run behind so heavily is because of the high fixed charges—$36 for switchboard, $24 for each trunk line, and, worst of all, $6 for each extension. Help us to cut down and get rid of these charges and we can run our telephone without losing so much money—and that is all we ask.

"We don't want to make a profit; we want 'phones for the convenience of our tenants. We don't ask the telephone company to pay us for developing their business; but we are getting very tired of acting as their salesmen and paying for the privilege.

"In a recent talk with one of the telephone company's able representatives I was told that the extensions cost the company about $17 each. Admitting this was so, I asked whether it would be fair to assume that after a charge of $6 a year had been made for four years, the extension would not be written off the company's books.

"Even a hardened 'phone man could hardly deny that. Then allowing some proper charge a year for the upkeep of the extension, what becomes of the balance of $6?

"Following along this line, I made a proposition to the company to buy the extensions and maintain them at the property owners' cost. The telephone company laughed my offer aside, and the Public Service Commission said that that was one of the matters to come up at a future hearing. Perhaps it will—let us be optimists and hope so."

FOURTH AVENUE SUBURB.

Country Residence on 40th St. in 1831, with Rich Fruit Garden.

About eighty years ago the Forty-second Street district, now known as the Grand Central zone, was a pleasant suburb of the real City of New York, a few miles below. The following interesting notice from a daily paper of September, 1831, presents a sharp contrast between conditions in that year and those that now prevail in one of the busy centres of Manhattan:

"For Sale—The residence of the subscriber at Kip's Bay, three miles from the City Hall, at the corner of Fourth Avenue and Fortieth Street, accessible from the old Boston Road. Thirty varieties of grapes with extensive arbors and in full bearing, and a choice collection of other fruit trees have been planted and cultivated with great care and are in a thriving condition. The house is large and commodious, being fifty feet front and fifty-five feet deep. The outhouses all in good condition and capacious. For a family desiring a country residence few surpass this for convenience of locality and beauty of prospect. If the Harlem Railroad, as is contemplated passes on the Fourth Avenue, there is no place on the whole route so desirable for an extensive boarding establishment as the above described premises."

This Fortieth Street country residence belonged to Charles Starr.

MONEY FOR HARBOR WORK.

Staten Island Secures a $400,000 Appropriation.

Allotments have been made for harbor improvement by the Secretary of War upon the recommendation of the Chief of Engineers out of the lump sum of $20,000,000 appropriated by Congress for carrying on work already begun.

The allotments made for improvements in this city are as follows:

Gowanus Bay, Bay Ridge, and Red Hook Channels.....	$150,000
Hudson River Channel, New York Harbor.....	125,000
Harlem River.....	50,000
Hudson River.....	750,000
Staten Island Sound.....	400,000

The resolution authorizing the removal of Counties Reef to a depth of thirty-five feet has been amended in the House so as to authorize dredging at the expense of the city for another five feet.

Belle Harbor Plots.

An auction sale of Belle Harbor plots will be held in the Brooklyn Exchange Salesroom, 189 Montague Street, by the Jere Johnson Jr. Co., auctioneers, on Wednesday, November 11.

RISING VALUES IN FIFTH AVENUE RETAIL ZONE

Assessments Show Increases from Thirty-fifth to Forty-second Streets of 20 to 42 Per Cent.

Mention was made a short time ago, in connection with the sale of the long vacant Lewis plot on the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street, for a price reported as $1,800,000, that the Tax Commissioners had added considerably over $500,000 to its assessed value for the coming year. In other words, what was assessed in 1914 at $1,360,000, will pay taxes in 1915, unless the new owners obtain a reduction, on $1,930,000. This is the largest increase on an individual piece of property in Manhattan's most expensive uptown realty centre and it naturally attracted comment among brokers and others interested in property along the avenue from Thirty-fourth to Forty-second Street.

A value of $1,930,000 for a vacant corner averages $208.66 a square foot, a rate which only a few years ago would have been considered an insane price even for Fifth Avenue. Figuring on the $1,800,000 valuation, which may be a trifle more than was paid, the square foot average comes to about $195.

An interesting comparison might be made with the Knox building on the southwest corner of Fortieth Street. This plot is smaller, being 33 by 110, while the Lewis corner is 74.1 by 125. In 1901 Edward M. Knox bought the land from the Hip estate for $450,000. It created a sensation in realty circles at the time and averaged $121 a square foot. For the 1915 assessment the land stands at $750,000, giving a square foot tax value of $207. With the building the entire property is assessed at $980,000, an increase of $60,000 over last year.

A study of the assessed values for these gilt-edged blocks of retail business between Thirty-fourth and Forty-second Streets reveals the fact that a larger percentage of increases has been made in this section than anywhere else in the city. While the increase on the Lewis corner was 42 per cent. over 1914, it was evidently due to the necessity of bringing it up to the valuations in the immediate vicinity, but it is also interesting to note, and it may surprise some of the Fifth Avenue business people to learn, that increases on many other parcels range all the way from 20 to 37 per cent., a raise in tax values within twelve months that may be termed remarkable in view of general realty conditions.

Perhaps the best way to appreciate these new Fifth Avenue valuations will be from the following table, in which the 1915 assessments are contrasted with those for 1914 on several parcels from Thirty-fifth to Forty-second Street. Except where especially mentioned, the values represent land and improvements, but it is needless to say except where the buildings are new the increases have been placed solely upon the land:

Plot.	1914.	1915.
FIFTH AVENUE, WEST SIDE.
Best & Co., n. w. corner 35th St.....	$1,382,000	$2,282,000
384 Fifth Avenue.....	390,000	488,000
Gorham Building, s. w. corner 36th St.....	1,670,000	1,918,000
Northwest corner 36th St.....	840,000	1,009,000
Goelet Estate, s. w. corner 37th St. (land only).....	1,170,000	1,620,000
Lord & Taylor Store (land only).....	3,625,000	5,280,000
Vantine's, s. w. corner 39th St.....	890,000	1,400,000
Wendell Corner, s. w. corner 39th St.....	1,485,000	1,902,000
Knox Building, s. w. corner 40th St.....	860,000	900,000
FIFTH AVENUE, EAST SIDE.
373 Fifth Avenue, n. e. corner 36th St.....	$518,000	$618,000
377 Fifth Avenue.....	300,000	361,000
379 Fifth Avenue.....	300,000	363,000
383 Fifth Avenue.....	348,000	435,000
385 Fifth Avenue.....	340,000	450,000
387 Fifth Avenue, s. e. corner 36th St.....	500,000	650,000
Tiffany's, s. e. corner 37th St.....	2,900,000	3,190,000
Lewis Corner, n. e. corner 37th St. (land only).....	1,360,000	1,930,000
Bonwit Teller Building, s. e. corner 38th St.....	2,275,000	2,617,000
425-7 Fifth Avenue, n. e. corner 38th St.....	1,140,000	1,481,000
Knabe Building, s. e. corner 39th St.....	1,100,000	1,425,000
Union League Club.....	1,785,000	1,785,000
F. W. Vanderbilt corner.....	1,890,000	2,025,000
461 Fifth Avenue, n. e. corner 40th St.....	845,000	965,000
477 Fifth Avenue, s. e. corner 41st St.....	435,000	465,000
Southeast corner 42d St.....	1,475,000	1,665,000
Northeast corner 42d St., 608 Fifth Avenue.....	1,050,000	1,170,000

The big Wendell plot, northwest corner of Thirty-ninth Street, which has resisted in the past and will continue as long as the owner lives, many flattering inducements for commercial use, has been increased nearly 30 per cent. The avenue frontage is 98.8 feet, of which the 48-foot immediate corner contains the old residence which, it is interesting to note, is valued by the assessors at but $5,000, while the land on which it stands is assessed at $1,085,000. The entire parcel is valued by the city assessors at $1,902,000, which includes the $5,000 house-valuation. For the 10,800 square feet in the parcel this averages $173 a square foot.

As one approaches Forty-second Street there is a tendency toward higher averages. The small plot on the northeast corner of Fortieth Street, 461 Fifth Avenue, 20.7 by 95, figures out on its land value of $555,000 at $217 a square foot. This has long been one of the high-priced corners on the avenue. It was bought in February, 1913, by George L. Stowsen and F. G. Hobbs at a reputed price of $700,000, which gives a $277 square foot average, exceeding by a few dollars the former record price of about $265, said to have been paid by the Burtons for the immediate northwest corner of Thirty-eighth Street. In 1906 this Fortieth Street plot was purchased by Ronald P. Kneedler for about $500,000.

The small 19.6 by 95 corner owned by the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company on the southeast corner of Forty-first Street figures on its land value assessment of $415,000, at $212 a square foot. With the building the total value is $450,000.

The highest individual plot value is 503 Fifth Avenue, the northeast corner of Forty-second Street, which, by the 1915 tax figures averages $224 a square foot, on a land valuation of $1,100,000. The parcel is irregular, containing about 4,900 square feet.

Its smaller size than the two other Forty-second Street plots gives it the higher square foot average, but the most valuable is undoubtedly the Bristol Building plot on the northwest corner, 74.6 by 125, assessed on land for $1,890,000, averaging $203 a square foot. Being almost identical in size with the Lewis corner where the new assessment fixes an average value of $208, the suggestion made by several realty brokers, that the Thirty-seventh Street corner is a trifle over-assessed, seems to be well taken.

The former Isman property on the southeast corner, purchased a year ago by the Oceanic Investing Company, shows an average of $207 on its land valuation of $1,510,000. It is a little smaller than the Bristol corner, being 73.3 by 100.

An increase of 29½ per cent. has been made in the Knabe building corner, southeast Thirty-ninth Street, its total assessment for 1915 being $1,425,000, as against $1,100,000 a year ago. The Best Company's store corner, northwest Thirty-fifth Street, has gone up 24½ per cent. to $2,282,000, as against $1,832,000. The inside parcel adjoining, 384 Fifth Avenue, 28 by 125, has been advanced to $488,000 from $390,000, or 25 per cent., and the Bonwit-Teller building corner, southeast Thirty-eighth, not including the new addition, has been advanced over 22 per cent.

The new books reveal a marked increase in the land value of the Lord & Taylor plot, $5,280,000, as against $3,625,500, while on the new building the taxable value is $7,730,000. The improvement to the adjoining building, occupied by Vantine & Co., Thirty-ninth Street corner, has raised its assessment from $890,000 to $1,400,000.

These high values are of course due to the tremendous trade demand for Fifth Avenue sites and the high rentals obtained for store space. The average rate now runs at about $1,000 on the east side to $1,200 on the west side per front foot. For the entire store in the building projected for the Lewis corner, it is said that $105,000 is being asked, but no prospective tenants have yet been announced.

PLANS FOR CITY'S GROWTH.

Distribution of Population and Business a Serious Problem.

President George McAneny of the Board of Aldermen asks the co-operation of all citizens in the work of the City Planning Committee of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

President McAneny cites the routes of the dual subway system, which will tend to distribute rather than concentrate the city's population, as an instance of beneficial city planning.

"Within the present boundaries of Greater New York there are large undeveloped areas. When the population has doubled, the built-up portion of the city will cover twice the area included within the present built-up sections.

"For every dollar at present invested in buildings and public improvements there will need to be an additional dollar invested in order to provide for the increased population, industries, and commerce. This means that the city and private individuals together will spend several billions of dollars in city building.

"That this vast expenditure may result in a maximum of advantage to the commercial and industrial interests of the city, and may promote the health, safety, and general welfare of its inhabitants, is the chief aim of city planning.

"The public has already had an intimation of what is intended in the report of the Heights of Buildings Commission. That there will be a general limitation on heights is practically certain.

"The Aldermen probably will impose that in the new building code. But New York needs a system of districting along the lines of both height and occupation."

The right to "district" the city, Mr. McAneny explained, was conferred upon the Board of Estimate by the last Legislature, provided that it first appointed a commission to investigate and report after public hearings.

The Merchants' Association of New York recently appointed a committee to co-operate with the City Planning Committee.

Realty Notes.

The Woodstock Taxpayers' Association at its last meeting adopted a resolution requesting the Union Railway Company to provide a waiting room at Third Avenue and 161st Street.

The members of the brokers' staff of M. & L. Hess, recently organized, held their first annual dinner at Reisenweber's last Thursday night. Lewis W. Flaunlacher is President and Adolph F. Koehler, Secretary.

REVISING ORDINANCES.

Committee at Work on Many Provisions That Conflict.

The city's Code of Ordinances, comprising several thousand separate sections and ordinances, is in many respects most unsatisfactory.

Some of its provisions are obsolete. Others are so badly expressed that their construction and enforcement are difficult. In other cases, ordinances and regulations of the various city departments, which have the force of ordinances are in conflict, so that a proper observance is impossible.

Owing to this complexity and confusion, it is a matter of great difficulty to ascertain exactly what the local law is upon some subjects, and as a result many of the provisions are necessarily disregarded.

The present Board of Aldermen has appointed a committee on Codification, which is completely re-arranging the existing ordinances upon an admirable plan of classification, and is re-writing those obscure in expression so that the intent of the law shall be clearly stated.

CUTTING DOWN THE 1915 TAX BUDGET

Final Recommendations by the Real Estate Board of New York.

THE PROBABLE TAX RATE

A $204,000,000 Budget Means a Tax Rate of 1.92 in Manhattan and 1.91 in the Bronx.

While a city budget, estimated now at $204,000,000, is not a pleasant prospect, it is such an improvement over the original departmental estimates of $210,000,000 that taxpayers feel considerably relieved.

Both the Sub-committee on Tax Budget, to whom specific, written recommendations were made by the Real Estate Board, and the Board of Estimate itself have given the closest scrutiny to the budget. The public hearings before the Board of Estimate on Monday and Tuesday last provided further opportunities for suggestions and recommendations.

In the main these recommendations made by the Real Estate Board and other taxpayer organizations received the serious attention of the Mayor and his colleagues, and while serious difference of opinion developed on some points, the Mayor more than once took occasion to commend the representatives of taxpayer organizations for the work done by them on the budget. But even with the reductions already in sight, a $204,000,000 budget means a tax rate of 1.92 in Manhattan, 1.91 in the Bronx, 1.98 in Brooklyn, 1.94 in Queens, and 2.04 in Richmond, and in the latter borough assessments will add 30 points to this.

In view of these facts the Real Estate Board suggests respectfully to the Board of Estimate the following plan for further reducing the tentative budget to an amount not greatly in excess of the $193,000,000 appropriated for 1914:

First—Inasmuch as the Controller is about to fund $18,000,000 of deficiencies in taxes by the issuance of corporate stock, would it not be advisable to place in the budget the average amount placed annually therein for deficiencies—about $2,500,000—and in this way reduce the budget by $5,700,000?

Second—In regard to the Borough assessments, amounting to nearly $1,000,000, would it not be advisable to divide them into five installments under the Gerhardt bill, thereby effecting a reduction in the budget of $700,000?

Third—There would be no impropriety in withholding the appropriation of $26,000 from the Board of Inebriety; $8,225 from the Municipal Art Commission, and $19,000 from the Public Recreation Commission. The work of the latter commission can be done by the Recreation Bureau of the Park Department and the Recreation Bureau of the Board of Education.

Fourth—The elimination of laboratory service could effect a large saving. As the Real Estate Board has pointed out, this work is being done by the Rockefeller Laboratory, and there could be a very large saving in the special work of the Department of Health.

Fifth—It is highly probable that all supervision of buildings will very soon be placed under a proposed Department of Buildings, with enlarged powers. This plan has public and official support. No appropriation, therefore, need be made for more than six months for the Tenement House Department, Bureau of Fire Prevention, and the inspection force in the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity and the Board of Health. The additional expense of the new Building Department when ascertained can be made by an issue of special revenue bonds, and the same procedure for the second six months could be followed if the plan for a new Building Department were not carried through.

If these changes are made, the budget will not greatly exceed that of last year, and the difference could be partially made up by the taxes on the increased valuations.

The Real Estate Board, looking further into the future, and recognizing that in many important matters the hands of the Board of Estimate are tied by mandatory legislation and charter provisions which encourage waste and inefficiency, makes the following specific recommendations for the consideration of the Board of Estimate:

First—That absolute home rule for the City of New York be secured from the coming Legislature and the Constitutional Convention.

Second—That an investigation be had to determine whether it would not be possible and practicable to make the following changes in the City Government:

1. To transfer the duties of the Commissioners of Accounts to the newly-created bureaus of the Board of Estimate and the Controller's office.

2. To make the Controller City Treasurer and abolish the office of the City Chamberlain.

3. To have one central purchasing plant, preferably by enlarging the powers of the Commissioners of the City Record and a Central Auditing Bureau under the control of the Board of Estimate, possibly as part of the Bureau of Contract Supervision.

4. To create a bureau in the Controller's office, or directly under the Sinking Fund Commissioners, to be known as the Bureau of City Income. This bureau to have jurisdiction over licenses, markets, weights and measures and other related sources of city income.

5. To transfer the collection of water rates to the Controller's office, so that the property owner can pay his water taxes where he pays his other taxes. The reason for this suggestion is that the Controller's office, as far as the collection of taxes is concerned, has comparatively little to do except around the period when taxes fall due.

6. That one Commissioner be substituted for the present number in the Park Department and that there be one administrative department for all the parks.

7. That one Commissioner be substituted for the present number in the Municipal Civil Service Commission.

8. That the Department of Health be charged only with the making of and enforcing of sanitary regulations.

9. That all social activities of the city be transferred to the Department of Charities, and that most of the social work be done through the local district settlement and church organizations.

10. That there be but one administrative department for all public libraries.

11. That the Auditing Bureau and Supply Department of the Board of Education be transferred to the City Record and the new Auditing Bureau.

12. That the head of the Correction Department be made merely Superintendent of City Prisons.

DELINQUENT TAXPAYERS.

Plan to Collect Arrears Amounting to Thousands of Dollars.

In response to a forcible presentation to the Finance Department of the city by real estate owners and civic organizations in Queens of conditions created by the methods employed by the former towns and villages in the county prior to consolidation Controller Prendergast, with the advice of the Corporation Counsel, this past week announced a plan for the settlement of arrearages of taxes and assessments due prior to 1898 that promises to return to the city thousands of dollars and clear the title to some of the most valuable real estate in the borough. With the title cleared this property will be brought into the market, thus assisting in the development of the borough, and the owners will regularly pay their taxes, thus increasing the revenue of the city.

The scheme announced by Controller Prendergast was his answer to requests from property owners that sales of property for these arrearages be postponed for one year on account of the present financial conditions. It has been received with much more satisfaction than would have been the granting of the original request.

The Controller has directed the Collector of Assessments and Arrears to accept payment of the principal of these arrearages with interest at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum in liquidation of all taxes and assessments levied prior to Jan. 1, 1898, provided they are paid before Jan. 15, 1915.

It has been found that there are unpaid claims levied by the former municipalities running back as far as 1872. In most cases these drew penalties at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, resulting in a total charge at present in many instances of more than the actual value of the property.

As a result many owners have abandoned their property and refused to pay anything whatever. It has been impossible under these conditions for anybody to clear up the title to the property, and hence it has lain idle and unimproved. Even if offered for sale under the favorable conditions of the new tax sale law there would be no bidders, because no one would agree to pay a sum greater than the value of the property at the present time.

Another important provision in the order made by the Controller is that where payment is offered the Collector of Assessments and Arrears is directed to cancel all previous sales of the property to the former municipalities.

It was the custom before consolidation when the yearly tax sales were held to sell to the municipalities holding the sale the property that was not bid in. The claim thus established in the municipalities created a cloud on the title which it has been very difficult for the owner to clear off, but which is wiped out by this action of Mr. Prendergast.

On Tuesday a sale of property in the College Point section was held for arrearages which have arisen since consolidation. One hundred and nineteen parcels were offered, and every one was taken, the buyer of the lien taking it at the flat amount due the city. In only one instance did a bidder demand interest, and then only at the rate of one-fourth of 1 per cent. This was considered a most remarkable result by the Finance Department officials.

Supreme Court Sales.

During the month of November, Joseph P. Day will offer by Supreme Court order, many important parcels at public auction. Among the most prominent are: Nos. 70, 72, 74 and 76 Trinity Place, known as Trinity Court; a six-story office building between Thames and Rector Streets, and directly opposite the Trinity Church property.

On November 11, by instructions from Franklin Brooks, referee, Mr. Day will offer at Supreme Court foreclosure sale, Nos. 88 University Place and 24 and 26 East 12th Street, an eleven-story fireproof loft building, with two salesroom stores, on a plot 31.9x110.10x46.4x irregular.

At Supreme Court foreclosure sale on November 17, by instructions from Charles E. Carruth, the southeast corner Greenwich Street and Liberty Streets, a six-story brick building, with stores, on a plot 54.8 by 44.4 adjoining the eleven-story Beard building.

The Continental Hotel, for many years known as the Albany, at the southeast corner of Broadway and Forty-first Street is to go on the auction block on November 19. It is to be offered by Joseph P. Day under foreclosure proceedings in an action brought by Florence L. Mabee, against the Forty-first Street Realty Company. The structure was erected twenty-five years ago, and was originally known as the Vendome, and together with the Normandie, St. Cloud and the Rossmore, forms an important group in this section.

DEVELOPMENT ALONG NEW TRANSIT LINE

Many Houses Erected Adjacent to New York, Westchester & Boston Railway.

EXPECT BOOM NEXT YEAR

Traffic Shows an Increase of from 8 to 15 Per Cent. Over Last Year—Increased Service.

At this time, when the railroads of the country are generally reporting heavy losses in revenue, it is interesting to note that the New York, Westchester & Boston Railway, which was opened for traffic May 29, 1912, is showing what may be fairly termed a remarkable increase in number of passengers carried.

This suburban line, at present operating only twenty-three miles from the Harlem River to Mount Vernon, New Rochelle, and White Plains, continues to show monthly an increase over the previous year of from 8 to 15 per cent. in passengers carried. For instance, the Westchester carried between New Rochelle and New York alone, in August, 1913, a total of 59,947 single ticket passengers, and in the same month, 1914, 69,104, an increase of 9,157, or over 15 per cent.

The new line with its frequent train service and low rates of fare, has already had a marked effect on real estate development through the heart of Westchester County, and when the connections now under construction with the West Farms subway at 180th Street and the Lexington Avenue subway at Hunts Point are completed no suburban section in the vicinity of New York will be better served so far as transportation facilities are concerned.

One of the most active developments along the line is at Lincoln Manor, near the East Lincoln Avenue station, Mount Vernon, where some fourteen houses are now under way, or have been completed during the present year. The interests who are developing Lincoln Manor and Chester Heights are well satisfied with the results, and are anticipating a very considerable building boom in this section during the Spring of 1915.

To the south of Lincoln Manor, in the Oakwood Heights property, Mount Vernon, which has the advantage of the Westchester service to and from Harlem River and the New Haven service to and from Grand Central terminal, there are six fine houses now under construction.

These houses are on large plots, will contain ten or more rooms, and are built to sell at from $11,000 to $13,000. They will be ready in the early Spring. At Clifford Station, New Rochelle, in the Pelhamwood development, several houses have been built during the past season. In northern New Rochelle near the Quaker Ridge Station, at Heathcote, in Scarsdale, and at the Gedney Farm property, White Plains, other houses are under way. The Gedney Farm Hotel has a large number of permanent guests booked for the season and on Saturday and Sunday entertains many automobile parties.

The tremendous increase in real estate development throughout the Bronx during the first decade of Subway operation shows conclusively the possibilities of further development in the eastern Bronx and Westchester County along the Westchester's line.

An idea of the present rate of increase may be obtained by comparing the 148,000 passengers carried over the Westchester during August, 1912, with the number carried in August, 1914, when the business had increased to 271,000, or 83 per cent. in two years.

This passenger business has been developed under existing conditions whereby passengers transfer at 180th Street to and from the West Farms branch of the Subway, which necessitates a walk of about four blocks, and the shuttle train service at Harlem River between the Willis Avenue station and the 129th Street station of the Third Avenue elevated line.

When the Lexington Avenue subway is in operation and passengers from the Eastern Bronx, Mount Vernon, New Rochelle, and White Plains can transfer at Hunts Point to a Lexington Avenue subway express train making only two stops between Hunts Point and Forty-second Street, it may be readily understood that a large percentage of the commuters traveling to and from Grand Central terminal on the older trunk lines will take advantage of the much lower fares and frequent service operated by the Westchester, and real estate development along the new line must show a tremendous increase.

Extension of Time.

The Public Service Commission has granted an extension of time for three months for the completion of Section No. 1 of Route No. 11-B, that part of the Fourth Avenue Subway extension in Brooklyn lying between Forty-third and Sixty-first Streets; and for nine months on Section No. 2 of the same route, lying between Sixty-first and Eighty-sixth Streets. The extension for Section No. 1 is to Jan. 4, 1915, and for Section No. 2 to July 4, 1915. The Degnon Contracting Company is the contractor for both sections. This does not mean that there will be any delay in the operation of the Fourth Avenue Subway early next year, as planned. That subway is already completed to Forty-third Street, and the extension of time on the first section, namely, between Forty-third and Sixty-first Streets, is only to Jan. 4, 1915. The Sea Beach Line, now being reconstructed, joins the Fourth Avenue Subway at about Sixty-fifth Street, and the contractors intend to push the work on the upper part of Section No. 2 so as to complete that portion by the same time.

THE TAX BURDEN.

Advisory Council Seeking New Sources of Revenue to Relieve It.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests Hon. Morgan J. O'Brien was elected as Chairman of the Board of Counsel, and Henry W. Hodge was elected as Chairman of the Advisory Staff of Experts.

The Council thoroughly considered the question of reducing the expenses of the city budget. After a close examination it was discovered that a large number of the items which might be reduced were imposed upon the city government by mandatory legislation passed at Albany.

A member of the council discussing the situation yesterday said: "Since every reasonable objection was raised to extravagant expenses of the city by real estate associations at the recent hearings on the budget, it is absolutely necessary that, during the coming year, every effort be made either to pass a home rule bill, by which these expenditures will be absolutely under the supervision of the city, or that these mandatory requirements in the city budget be amended by corrective legislation.

"The Council feels that no more important work could be undertaken by property owners than the passage of such amelioratory laws. The criticism of a city budget is a difficult matter, and every objection must be absolutely grounded upon substantial fact.

"Too often real estate bodies have overlooked the importance of a thorough investigation of a question which they hoped to raise. It is the plan of the Council within the next year to amalgamate and fuse these associations which are now interested in the reducing of the city's expenditures, so that a permanent committee will be formed to take up the city budget and devote many months to analytical examination of the figures and facts presented by each city department.

"By such a method a strong case in behalf of the property owner might be presented at the next hearing on the budget in 1915. In the mean time every effort will be made to relieve the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of the mandatory restrictions now imposed upon it.

"The Council has decided to appoint a sub-committee to co-operate with the Mayor's Committee on Taxation in ascertaining new sources of revenue for the city. There is no doubt that real estate is now overweighted with taxation and it is required to bear more than its fair share of supplying the necessary funds to finance the city.

"This committee will make its report direct to the Mayor's Committee on Taxation. The Advisory Staff of Experts of the Council will assist this committee in its investigation, and it is hoped that some definite and constructive suggestions for proper taxation from new sources will thereby be recommended.

"The Council deems it advisable to request the Mayor to take some action with reference to the consolidation of building inspection departments in the city. The State Factory Investigating Commission has already proposed a tentative plan, but inasmuch as all but one of the departments involved are directly under the jurisdiction of the city, it is essential that the local administration arrive at some plan by which these various departments may be united under one head.

"It has been recommended that a commission be appointed on the part of the city to take some definite action in this respect, for unless city and State officials work consistently towards a common goal, nothing will be accomplished. To merely have the State investigate this question of the inspection evil and recommend remedies will not be nearly as beneficial as with both city and State working out their respective plans, and then ultimately endeavoring to amalgamate them."

Apartment Rental Conditions Good.

"Renting conditions have been exceptionally good," said W. H. Dolson, of the F. R. Wood, W. H. Dolson Company, in discussing real estate conditions yesterday. "The limited production of new houses has resulted in an adjustment of the demand for apartments to the supply. While there are some vacancies in the high-class properties under our management, we expect to dispose of these by the rental concessions customary at the close of the renting season; and the houses containing apartments at more moderate rentals are almost entirely filled."

Hempstead to Have New Town Hall.

The Town Board of Hempstead, Long Island, Hiram R. Smith, President, is receiving competitive sketches for a new town hall to cost about $75,000. It is expected that the project will be voted on next month.

Will Not Close Queensboro Bridge.

A letter from Bridge Commissioner Kracke was received yesterday by the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens stating that the Queensboro Bridge would not be closed to traffic during the reconstruction work necessary to adapt it for the dual subway system trains.

Sale at Stamford.

Pease & Elliman have sold to Mrs. Hazel Bell a house for the Shippan Point Land Company at Shippan Point, Stamford, Conn.

Buys Near Sixth Avenue.

S. May is the buyer of the property at 63 West Thirty-seventh Street, adjoining the northeast corner of Sixth Avenue, which is occupied by Mr. May. The property was recently sold by J. Arthur Fischer for M. Frank.

BUILDING MATERIAL.

EDWARD CORNING CO. BUILDERS 100 W. 21 ST. NEW YORK

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS

SATURDAY, OCT. 31.

With name and address of purchaser and attorney. When attorney's name is omitted address party of the second part.

Manhattan.

AMSTERDAM AV, s e corner of 177th St, 100.11x455; Katharine D. Penrose and others to the Trustees of Columbia University in the City of New York, 63 Wall St, Oct. 9; attorney, Title guarantee Co., 176 Broadway $1

BROADWAY, n w corner of 207th St, 125x150; Hannah Freedman to William F. Allen, at Rye, N. Y., (mtg $80,000,) all liens, rerecorded from May 15, 1914; address, 10 Wall St $100

SAME PROPERTY; William F. Allen to J. A. Townsend, Irvington, N. Y., D. and m., (mtg $30,000,) all liens, May 15; address 10 Wall St $100

BROADWAY, e s, 81.1 ft s of Spring St, 50x39.10; George C. Edwards and another to Walter C. Shoup, 15 Gramercy Park, Oct. 30, (mtg $225,000;) attorneys, Chrystie W. & B., 115 Broadway $100

STANTON ST, s w corner of Attorney St, 16.2x—; Ike Buss to Regal Mortgage and Security Co., 45 West 25th St, Oct. 30, (mtg $86,000;) attorney, Lawyers Title Insurance Co., 160 Broadway $1

VERMILYEA AV, n e corner of Isham St, 148.2x—; Max Marx to Hickory Realty Corporation, 128 Broadway, Oct. 29, (mtg $14,000;) attorneys, Stoddard & M., 128 Broadway $100

WOOSTER ST, 67, w s, 75 ft s of Spring St, 25x75, (foreclosure, Oct. 29;) Edward N. Goodwin, referee, to Rector, &c., of St. Bartholomew's Church in New York, Inc., Oct. 28; attorney, H. L. Morris, 32 Liberty St $30,000

8TH AV, w s, 99.11 ft s of 138d St, 30x100; Raywood Co. to Marie La Montagne, 122 Madison Av, Oct. 30; attorney, Lawyers Title Insurance Co., 160 Broadway $200

17TH ST, s s, 220 ft w of 9th Av, 20x92; Brody, Adler & Koch Co. to Michael Wielandt, Jr., and others, Port Jefferson, L. I., Oct. 28, (mtg $175,000;) attorneys, M. S. & I. S. Isaacs, 32 William St. $1

44TH ST, 317 East, n s, 248.5 ft e of 2d Av, 26.4x100.5; Giuseppe Volpe and another to Grazia Volpe, 317 East 44th St, 1-3 of ½ part, Oct. 30; attorney, J. J. Scallon, 141 Manhattan Av $1,500

53D ST, n s, 223 ft e of 10th Av, 20x100.5; Michael Maier and others to Barbara Feiss, 472 West 141st St, Oct. 30, (mtg $17,000;) attorneys, Whaley W. & P., 27 William St. $100

71ST ST, s s, 115 ft w of Amsterdam Av, 20x100.5; Marietta Newcomb to Carolyn Holding Co., 44 Cedar St, Oct. 29, (mtg $17,000;) attorney, A. H. Mittlemann, 44 Cedar St. $100

71ST ST, 249 East, n s, 136.6 ft w of 2d Av, 18.6x102.2; The Church of St. John the Martyr to Rose Rankovich, 309 East 69th St, (mtg $10,000,) Oct. 30; attorney, Wilson M. Powell, 7 Wall St. $12,250

102D ST, 131 East, n w corner of Lexington Av, 40x100.11; Taxpayers Realty Co. to John Wattenberg, 1,199 Forest Av, (mtg $50,000,) Oct. 30; attorney, Jacob Freeman, 99 Nassau St. $100

106TH ST, s s, 160.6 ft e of 3d Av, runs s 23.5 x w 0.6 x s 40.2 x e 16 x s 24 x w 0.6 x s 54 x w 100.11; Louis Herskovitz to Ike Buss, 154 Roan St, Brooklyn, Oct. 30, (mtg $44,000;) attorney, Title Guarantee Co., 176 Broadway $100

107TH ST, s s, 175 ft w of 2d Av, 25x100.11; Giuseppe Natale to Frank A. Sinisgalli, 617 Morris Park Av, (mtg $10,000,) Oct. 26; attorney, Lawrence Cioffi, 2,140 2d Av. $100

114TH ST, s s, 125 ft w of Broadway, 16x100.11; Charles Edde to Delfield Estate, Inc., 27 Cedar St, (mtg $10,000,) Oct. 28; attorney, Title Guarantee & Trust Co., 176 Broadway $1

121ST ST, 72 East, s s, 100 ft w of Park Av, 25x100.11; Jules and H. Bachrach, executors, &c., Abram Bachrach, to Ella S. Chase, 465 West End Av, quitclaim, all title, all liens, Oct. 30; attorney, J. F. Stier, 11 Broadway $1

127TH ST, s s, 200 ft e of 7th Av, 16x99.11; Katherine K. W. Henszey to Grace E. Ganl, 7 Philipse Place, Yonkers, N. Y., (mtg $8,000,) all liens, Aug. 27; attorneys, Clarke & C., 51 Chambers St. $1

133D ST, n s, 225 ft w of Amsterdam Av, 37.6x99.11; Brody, Adler & Koch Co. to Michael Wielandt, Jr., and others, Port Jefferson, L. I., Oct. 28, (mtg $36,000;) attorneys, M. S. & I. S. Isaacs, 32 William St. $1

177TH ST, n s, 150 ft w of Amsterdam Av, 85x—; 177th St, n s, 185 ft w of Amsterdam Av, 42.6x98.9; 177th St, n s, 227.6 ft w of Amsterdam Av, 42.6x101.6; Leonard & Simons to Meton Realty Corporation, 35 John St, Oct. 30; attorney, Joseph E. Cosgrove, 378 Grand St. $1

Bronx.

BRIGGS AV, 2,592, e s, 19.8x77.9; Emma P. Denniston to Patrick M. Burke, 326 East 21st St, Oct. 30; attorney, Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway $100

BROADWAY, w s, 153.8 ft n of Church St, Lane, Box Irregular; also Broadway, w s, 7.5 ft s of road from Church St to Broadway, 28.6x120; Max Marx to Hickory Realty Corporation, 128 Broadway, Oct. 29; attorneys, Stoddard & M., 128 Broadway $100

BROADWAY, e s, 273.9 ft n of 236th St, 150.6x300.11; Max Marx to 177th Street and Pinehurst Avenue Realty Corporation, 47 Cedar St, Oct. 29; same attorneys $100

CRESCENT AV, 616-18, s s, 55.8x82; Earnest R. Eckley, referee, to William H. Caldwell, Jr., 111 West 123d St, Oct. 29; attorney, A. Knox, 198 Broadway $500

DALY AV, 1,914, e s, 82.1x150.11; William Cuniel to Valhalla Corporation, 637 East 163d St, (mtg $19,000,) Oct. 30; attorney, Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway $100

FORDHAM ROAD, s s, 61.11 ft e of Webster Av, 67x36.2x33.11x27.4; George Donnelly to Edward O. Binsen, 1,817 Morris Av, (mtg $2,000,) Oct. 28; attorney, Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway $100

JEROME AV, e s, 150 ft n of 200th St, 75x100; William Gully to Mary Kirwan, 433 7th St, Brooklyn, (mtg $9,000,) Aug. 20; attorney, E. F. Maran, 51 Chambers St. $1

LAFONTAINE AV, e s, 68.8 ft s of 180th St, 18.4x100; Simon Kiernan to Salomon Weiss and another, 540 Bergen Av, (mtg $2,800,) Oct. 28; attorney, Fred Oppenheimer, 510 Bergen Av $100

LOT 152, amended map of Bronwood Park; Valhalla Corporation to Antoinette Rieger, 2,344 Crotona Av, (mtg $3,500,) Oct. 30; attorney, Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway $100

MANIDA ST, 539, w s, 25x100; J. F. M. Co. to Patrick J. Chambers, 110 St. Nicholas Av, (mtg $7,500,) Oct. 30; attorney, Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway $1

SAMUEL ST, s s, 0 e s of Lot 37, map of Samuel Ryer, 25x90; Annie E. McGraan and others to Aaron Levy, 688 2d St, Brooklyn, Oct. 25; attorney, Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway $500

WALDO AV, w s, 183.11 ft n of 245th St, 70.4x164; Delafield Estates to Charles Otis, on e of Waldo Av, near 245th St, (mtg $12,000,) Oct. 30; attorney, Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway $1

166TH ST, s s, 22 ft w of Jackson Av, 25x100; John Kingston to Sarah Ennis, 574 East 168th St, May 4, 1908; attorney, Sarah Ennis, 574 East 168th St. $1

174TH ST, n s, 110.5 ft e of Webster Av, 47x100.8; James R. Gray to E. Louis Jacobs, 43 Sheridan Boulevard, Far Rockaway, L. I., Oct. 30; attorney, E. Louis Jacobs, 35 Nassau St. $1

204TH ST, 225 and 227 East, n s, 50x82.6; Rachel Defina to Samuel S. Singerman, 29 West 104th St, (mtg $8,400,) Oct. 25; attorney, S. A. Singerman, 35 Nassau St. ..$100

RECORDED MORTGAGES.

With name and address of lender and lender's attorney. Interest is at 5 per cent. unless otherwise specified.

Manhattan.

BRADHURST AV, e s, 119.9 ft s of 153d St, 39.11x100; Steinmetz Construction Co. to Herman Forman, 158 Bowery, Oct. 30, 1 year, 6 p. c.; attorneys, Fischer & R., 115 Broadway $3,500

LEXINGTON AV, e s, 20.5 ft n of 55th St, 20x80; Richard P. Eaton to Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway, Oct. 28, due as per bond $2,000

17TH ST, s s, 220 ft w of 5th Av, 20x92; Brody, Adler & Koch Co. to Joseph M. Brody and others, 128 West 72d St, June 6, due as per bond; attorneys, M. S. & I. S. Isaacs, 32 William St. $60,000

71ST ST, n s, 156.6 ft w of 2d Av, 18.6x102.2; Rose Rankovich to Franklin Savings Bank, 656 8th Av, Oct. 30, 3 years; attorney, W. M. Powell, Jr., 7 Wall St. $5,000

SAME PROPERTY; same to the Church of St. John the Martyr Corporation, 250 East 72d St, Oct. 30, prior mtg $5,000, 3 years; attorney, Peter Klein, 253 East 72d St. $2,000

134TH ST, n s, 325 ft w of Lenox Av, 26x99.11; Michael Maier to Barbara Feiss, 472 West 141st St, Oct. 26, prior mtg $11,500, due Nov. 1, 1917, 6 p. c.; attorneys, Whaley, W. & P., 27 William St. $2,000

Bronx.

BRIGGS AV, 2,592, e s, 19.8x77.9; Patrick M. Burke to Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway, Oct. 30, due as per bond; attorney, Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway $5,000

DECATUR AV, n w corner of 194th St, 61.2x27.6; Louise Nasi to New York Edison Savings and Loan Association, 130 East 16th St, Oct. 30, installments, 6 p. c.; attorney, Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway $100

FORDHAM ROAD, s s, 61.11 ft e of Webster Av, 67x36.2x33.11x27.4; George Donnelly to Edward O. Binsen, 1,817 Morris Av, (mtg $2,000,) Oct. 28; attorney, Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway $100

JEROME AV, e s, 150 ft n of 200th St, 75x100; William Gully to Mary Kirwan, 433 7th St, Brooklyn, (mtg $9,000,) Aug. 20; attorney, E. F. Maran, 51 Chambers St. $1

LAFONTAINE AV, e s, 68.8 ft s of 180th St, 18.4x100; Simon Kiernan to Salomon Weiss and another, 540 Bergen Av, (mtg $2,800,) Oct. 28; attorney, Fred Oppenheimer, 510 Bergen Av $100

LOT 152, amended map of Bronwood Park; Valhalla Corporation to Antoinette Rieger, 2,344 Crotona Av, (mtg $3,500,) Oct. 30; attorney, Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway $100

MANIDA ST, 539, w s, 25x100; J. F. M. Co. to Patrick J. Chambers, 110 St. Nicholas Av, (mtg $7,500,) Oct. 30; attorney, Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway $1

SAMUEL ST, s s, 0 e s of Lot 37, map of Samuel Ryer, 25x90; Annie E. McGraan and others to Aaron Levy, 688 2d St, Brooklyn, Oct. 25; attorney, Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway $500

WALDO AV, w s, 183.11 ft n of 245th St, 70.4x164; Delafield Estates to Charles Otis, on e of Waldo Av, near 245th St, (mtg $12,000,) Oct. 30; attorney, Title Guarantee and Trust Co., 176 Broadway $1

166TH ST, s s, 22 ft w of Jackson Av, 25x100; John Kingston to Sarah Ennis, 574 East 168th St, May 4, 1908; attorney, Sarah Ennis, 574 East 168th St. $1

174TH ST, n s, 110.5 ft e of Webster Av, 47x100.8; James R. Gray to E. Louis Jacobs, 43 Sheridan Boulevard, Far Rockaway, L. I., Oct. 30; attorney, E. Louis Jacobs, 35 Nassau St. $1

204TH ST, 225 and 227 East, n s, 50x82.6; Rachel Defina to Samuel S. Singerman, 29 West 104th St, (mtg $8,400,) Oct. 25; attorney, S. A. Singerman, 35 Nassau St. ..$100

RECORDED LEASES.

Manhattan.

With name and address of lessee.

AVENUE A, 44, store; Horwitz Contracting Co. to N. S. Low & Co., Inc., 8 8-12 years, from Sept. 1, 1914; attorney, Charles Frankel, 277 Broadway $1,140

LEXINGTON AV, 1,199, s e corner of, second floor; Mary Lee Company to Jacob Second 100

West 116th St, 11 years, from May 1, 1916; attorney, H. Amster, 51 Chambers St. $2,860

6TH ST, 506 and 508 East, all; Elias Senft to Sam Adler, 530 East 19th St, 3 years, from Aug. 1, 1914 ..... $4,612

6TH ST, 510 and 512 East, all; Elias Senft to Sam Adler, 530 East 19th St, 3 years, from Aug. 1, 1914 ..... $4,612

8TH AV, 917, restaurant in rear of cafe; John F. Madine to Edward Cunningham, 917 8th Av, 2 years, from Nov. 1, 1914; attorney, F. Wells, 200 5th Av. $900

Bronx.

BOSTON ROAD, 2,012, n e corner of 177th St, two stands inside building; Edward McShane to Z. Telegadas, 1,963 Daly Av, and another, 5 years, from July 1, 1914; attorney, Harry Rittenberg, 309 Broadway ..... $1,200 to $1,800

MECHANICS' LIENS.

Manhattan.

CENTRAL PARK WEST, 236; Thomas Costello against Hannah Elias, owner and contractor $222

110TH ST, 207 East; Joseph Warm against Charles T. Leonard, owner; Abraham Radeck, Philip Elterman, John Sherwin and others, lessees and contractors $2,5

BROADWAY, 1,680 to 1,684, and 7th Av, 810; Ornamental Sheet Metal Works against Amos F. Eno, owner; Delta Theatre Corp. and George F. Kerr, contractors $264

Bronx.

LAYTON AV, n e corner of Dean Av, 25x 15); Thomas Altieri against Frank Santamarone and others, owners; Max Kreindel, contractor $225

211TH ST, n s, 153.1 ft e of Barnes Av, 26.7x137.6; Anthony J. De Pesce against Maria Colonna, owner and contractor $20

148TH ST, 250 and 252 East; Salvatore Pilenti against Henry Strauss, owner; Bartholomew Zoccano, contractor $50

SATISFIED MECHANICS' LIENS.

BROADWAY, 1,575; Adolph Grant & Co. against Vogel Cabinet Co. and others, Aug. 2, 1914 ..... $154

190TH ST, 607 West; Henry Busch Co. against Weber Turek Building Co. and others, Aug. 31, 1914 ..... $105

LIS PENDENS.

Manhattan.

1ST AV, 1,634; Susanne Weinberger against Philipp Lesser and others, (action to set aside conveyance;) attorneys, Neuman & Levy-Gans.

28TH ST, 345 West, and 121st St, 362 East; David Mainzer against L. J. Kreshover, Inc., and others, (partition;) attorneys, Myers, Kutner & Schumann.

93RD ST, 551 and 553 West, and 27th St, 324 West; John B. Clark against David Shannen Co. and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, H. C. Rikahy.

60TH ST, 310 East; James Trowbridge against Rose Abrahams and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, T. H. Baskerville.

17TH ST, 12 West; Wilbur A. Bloodgood against F. James Reilly and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, T. H. Baskerville.

88TH ST, 302 East; Harry Weil and others against Caroline Cahn and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, H. B. Goodstein.

106TH ST, n s, 100 ft e of 5th Av, 80x100.24, two actions; Mutual Life Insurance Co. against Annie T. Renn and others, (foreclosure of two mortgages;) attorney, F. L. Allen.

106TH ST, n s, 180 ft e of 5th Av, 100x100.11; Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York and others against Annie T. Renn and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, F. L. Allen.

107TH ST, n s, 113 ft e of 1st Av, 100x100.11; Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York against Annie T. Renn and others, (foreclosure of two mortgages;) attorney, F. L. Allen.

112TH ST, 250 and 252 West; Esther Schilt and others against Ray S. Abrams and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, M. Sulsberger.

118TH ST, 14 and 16 West; Golconda Realty Co. against Annie Hoffman and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, S. N. Freedman.

127TH ST, s s, 290 ft e of 7th Av, 16x99.11; Herman H. Ripp against Florence Magonigle and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Clarke & Clarke.

138TH ST, 101 West; Bernard Landau against Trustees for the Congregation of the African Methodist Episcopal Church in the City of New York and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Davis & Davis.

138TH ST, n s, 187.6 ft w of Amsterdam Av, 37.6x99.11; Everitt Macy and others against Levy & Weinstein Realty and Construction Co. and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Davison & Underhill.

138TH ST, 103 West; Bernard Landau against Trustees for the Congregation of the African Methodist Episcopal Church in the City of New York and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Davis & Davis.

Bronx.

ADAMS PLACE, 2,226; August Eitzen against Weiher Construction Co. and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Salter & Steinkamp.

JACKSON AV, 726; Adeline C. Van Iderstein against Daniel Reynolds and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Van Iderstein, Duncan & Baker.

LOT 352, map of Westerfield; Louis Pines against Mary A. Ward and others, (action to foreclosure of tax lien;) attorney, T. I. Schwartzman.

187TH ST, n s, 437.6 ft w of Home St, 37.6x100; Anna D. Waite against Rose T. Clements and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Goldsmith, Rosenberg & Mork.

178TH ST, n s, 21 ft w of Cedar Av, 21.6x 98; Lelia Thedale Chapman against Frances Maliner and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, S. B. Cittenden.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

Offerings Scheduled at the Vesey Street and Bronx Salesrooms.

Monday, Nov. 2.

AT 14 VESEY STREET.

By Samuel Marx.

Clinton St, 93, w s, 175 ft s of Rivington St, 25x100, five-story tenement and stores; F M Tehenot and others, administrators, against Lena Koransky and others; Appell & T., attorneys; F. R. Rich, referee; due, $19,953.56; taxes, &c., $5,078.33.

AT 3,208 THIRD AVENUE.

By Herbert A. Sherman.

Coster St, 644, e s, 320 ft s of Spofford Av, 20x100, two-story brick dwelling; K. L. Bower against Hunts Point Estates and others; F. R. Rich, referee; due, $5,981.29; taxes, &c, $171.97.

Wednesday, Nov. 4.

AT 14 VESEY STREET.

By Samuel Goldsticker.

Madison Av, 1,976, n w corner 126th St, 19.11 x85, four-story dwelling; S. J. Morton against A. M. Keenan and others; C. A. Moran, attorney; Powell Crichton, referee; due, $3,555.58; taxes, &c, $759.89; subject to prior mortgage of $20,000.

By Samuel Marx.

127th St, 127 West, n s, 355 ft w of Lenox Av, 16x99.11, three-story building; W. F. Brown, Jr., and Harriet A. A. Stilwell, individually and as executor, and others; P. J. Dobson, attorney

BROOKLYN—FOR SALE OR TO LET. | BROOKLYN—FOR SALE OR TO LET.

Realty Associates

Easy Housekeeping Homes
Eastern Parkway Heights

Highest Elevation in Brooklyn.

Union Street, Between Rogers and Nostrand Avenues.

The most successful type of dwelling ever built in Brooklyn. Take either St. John's Place, Rogers Avenue, Ocean Avenue, Nostrand Avenue, or Lorimer Street trolley. Station of Eastern Parkway Subway now building is only half block from property.

Two stories and cellar, handsome stone front—porches front and rear—9 rooms and bath, hot water heat, instantaneous gas water heater—electric lights, tiled mantel and hearth—hardwood floors and hardwood trim throughout—kitchen and bathroom floors and walls tiled.

Terms $1,000 Cash

Balance $60 monthly to cover interest on Bank Mortgage of $5,500—5% and interest and principal on remainder; thereby paying off $2,500 of principal in 6 years and 10 months. Savings bank accounts taken in payment.

Realty Associates, 162 Remsen Street,
Builders of Easy Housekeeping Homes.
Capital and Surplus, $5,000,000. Phone Main 6480, Brooklyn, N. Y.

$45 MONTHLY Pays Principal and Interest

And You Are Your Own Landlord

EASY HOUSEKEEPING HOMES

Sterling Street
Between Flatbush & Bedford Aves.

These are our very newest houses. Two-story and cellar, limestone, bay window front, 20x43x100; 8 rooms and bath. Large entrance and foyer hall, butler's pantry, hardwood trim, tiled mantels with gas logs, electric lights, steam heat, gas range. Decorated to suit. Three blocks from Prospect Park Station. Subway now building. Take either Brighton Beach "L," Flatbush, Ocean, Rogers Avenue or Lorimer Street trolley.

Price $6,750. $500 Cash

Savings Bank Accounts, $100 and up, taken in payment.

See Representative on Property or the

REALTY ASSOCIATES,
Builders of Easy Housekeeping Homes.
162 Remsen Sereet Telephone Main 6480 Brooklyn

BISHOP'S NEW YORK TYPE OF ONE-FAMILY HOUSES—4 SOLD.

Parkside Ave., between Flatbush and Bedford Aves., Brooklyn

One block from Ocean Avenue entrance to Prospect Park and Brighton Beach line and new Subway station.

The last word in up-to-date house planning, including a living room 19x27 feet, with a beamed ceiling and 6 ft. 6 in. open fireplace. A beautiful billiard room, instantaneous hot water heater, etc.

SEE THEM NOW! DON'T BUY SOME OTHER HOUSE FIRST and then spend the rest of your days regretting the fact that you did not get a BISHOP HOUSE. Send for Booklet.

E. H. Bishop & Son, Builders, on Premises, or 20 Halsey St., Bklyn.

$6400 2-story; basement, 2-family brick house, 12 rooms, 2 baths; fine location; 2 minutes' walk to 4th Av. subway station; large dining room and parlor; all modern improvements; worth $7,500, easy terms. Closed Sunday. Pierce Keefe, 2d floor, 5,304 4th Av., Brooklyn.

MANHATTAN—FOR SALE OR TO LET.

ANOTHER SACRIFICE

$15,000 CASH REQUIRED

We have sold the 21% investment advertised last Sunday—making three within a week. We have one bargain left paying 25%. Quick action necessary.

MORGENTHAU JR & CO. 95 LIBERTY ST. N.Y. TEL. 1684 CORT

West Side.

AN UNUSUAL BARGAIN.
218 West 78th St.

For Sale—Modern 4-story and basement brownstone dwelling; attractive interior arrangement; convenient to Subway and street cars; price $22,000; mortgage to suit; carefully kept on premises. PEASE & ELLIMAN, 240 West 72d St. Tel. 8300—Col.

BRONX—FOR SALE OR TO LET.

WAR TIMES

create many a rare bargain.
Some one's misfortune—your luck.

LOOK AT THIS 2-FAMILY HOUSE

644 Coster St., Bronx, Simpson Street Subway Station,
AT AUCTION, By order of Supreme Court.
Monday, Nov. 2, at 12 o'Clock, at Bronx Real Estate Salesrooms, 2308 3d Ave. Mortgage can be arranged.

Full particulars from
HERBERT A. SHERMAN, Auctioneer,
Tel. Recine 1353. 41 E. 41st St.

CROWLEY-O'BRIEN CO
REAL ESTATE AND INSURANCE
Essex Building, Clinton Street
NEWARK, N. J.

TUXEDO PARK TRACT TRACT OFFICE Cor. South Orange Avenue and Reading Road

October 29th, 1914.

The New York Times,

We thought you would be interested to hear that our advertising in the Times has been particularly satisfactory to us this year. We have not only received a splendid quantity and class of inquiries with the Times' "key", but we have closed a great number of sales to plot buyers who were attracted by our copy in the Times.

Tuxedo Park Tract has had a splendidly successful season and a large amount of the out of town business has been brought by your paper.

Thanking you for your courtesies of the past, we beg to remain

Very truly yours,
CROWLEY-O'BRIEN COMPANY.
JOB/CTS

LONG ISLAND—FOR SALE OR TO LET. | LONG ISLAND—FOR SALE OR TO LET.

JAMAICA

18 Minutes from the Heart of New York or Brooklyn

$7,250 Brick House COLONIAL ARCHITECTURE

5 or 6 bedrooms; wall safes; living room with open fireplace; dining room, French doors; pantry, kitchen, laundry; store room; steam heat; separate hot water heater; tiled bathroom; gas and electric light; lawn, shrubs, front and rear; 20-foot-wide roadway in rear for autos and tradesmen; 18 minutes from Manhattan and Brooklyn; 700 trains daily; traveling in comfort winter and summer.

$500 cash, mortgage $4,000; balance in monthly payments less than rent

Or You Can Rent for a Year With Privilege to Purchase

SEE REPRESENTATIVE ON PREMISES, day or evening.
Middletown Street, Between Shelton Avenue and Willett Street.
Two Blocks North of the New Big Long Island R. R. Station, Jamaica
TAKE TRAIN FROM L. I. R. R., ATLANTIC AVENUE STATION, BROOKLYN, OR PENNSYLVANIA STATION, MANHATTAN, TO

JAMAICA

Samuel Knopf, Treasurer, Everett Realty & Construction Co., Flatiron Building, Manhattan.

QUEENS—FOR SALE OR TO LET.

AT ELMHURST
2 LOTS, 50x100.

New detached one-family house, 8 large rooms and bath, storeroom, laundry, steam heat, electric and gas lighting; all of the interior beautifully finished in the natural hardwood; bay windows, window seats, leaded glass, etc.; parquet floors; house connected with city sewer; spacious porch; perfect southern exposure; both sides of street lined with trees; parklike surroundings; restricted property, beautifully located, convenient to station, trolley lines, school, churches, and stores; price $8,500, $1,000 cash. Call Sunday and all week, owner and builder, George C. Johnston, 75 Kingsland Av., near Elmhurst Bridge, Elmhurst.

CHOICE HOME FOR SALE.

Semi-Bungalow, 7 rooms and bath, large porches, hot water heat, gas, electricity, fully decorated; bargain, $5,500; easy terms; restricted property, 28 minutes from Manhattan, 3 minutes from express station; 300 trains daily; select neighborhood in Queens Borough, L. I.; also 8-room house, all improvements; barn and garage; large plot; for rent, $45; references required.
J. Mead. Briggs,
200 Broadway, N. Y.

Jamaica and Vicinity
REAL ESTATE
For Sale, Rent and Exchange
H. B. PEARSALL, JR., CO., Inc.
376 Fulton St. Jamaica, N. Y.

$7,000 COTTAGE FOR $5,800

Hollis. Owing to foreclosure, modern 8-room house; steam, gas, electricity; 4 rooms first floor; four chambers, large piazza; perfect condition inside and out; good location; high ground; near station; very attractive, convenient home; $500 down, balance like rent; photo on request.
F. W. SCUTT & CO.,
336 FULTON ST., JAMAICA.

HILL TOP OVERLOOKING THE SOUND.

House, 8 rooms and bath; large plot; hot water heat; sewer, water, gas, electric light; 80 minutes from city; 44 trains daily; privileges of beautiful bathing beach, dock, etc.; $500 cash, balance monthly; title guaranteed. C STEPHENSON, 243 West 34th St., N. Y. Phone 1760 Greeley.

MODERN COTTAGE.

7 rooms, large, light and airy; all improvements; ground enough for vegetables, fruit, and berries; quiet, restricted neighborhood; 80 minutes' ride; $100 cash, balance $16 per month; one month free to responsible party. Address C STORE, 171 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn.

CONNECTICUT—FOR SALE OR TO LET.

DARIEN GENTLEMAN'S FARM.
WILL SELL AT A SACRIFICE.

27 acres, near station; two-acre lake; residence, 20 rooms; all improvements; garage, with quarters; barns, chicken houses, greenhouses, boathouse. Beautiful trees, vegetable and flower gardens, all kinds of fruit. Exceptional neighborhood. Will divide.

Fish & Marvin 527 Fifth Avenue. 6526—Murray Hill

CONSULT ME NOW.

I can quote with definiteness the best purchase price or rental figure on property in GREENWICH, CT., AND VICINITY FARMS, ACREAGE, SHORE ESTATES, COUNTRY ESTATES, COTTAGES, VILLAS. Call, phone, or write for my special list.
LAURENCE TIMMONS,
Opp. R. R. Station, Greenwich, Ct. Tel. 456.

NOROTON Owner Must Sell WILL SACRIFICE

Colonial House, all improvements; 15 rooms, 3 baths; seven acres; views of Sound. Large garage with quarters, chicken houses, vegetable and flower gardens, fine old trees. Near station.

Fish & Marvin 527 Fifth Avenue. 6526—Murray Hill.

NEW ENGLAND—FOR SALE OR LET.

Massachusetts Country Estate.

235 acres; ¾ mile from centre beautiful manufacturing village on main line B. & A. R. R., between Springfield & Worcester; 10-room residence, 8-room cottage; large horse and hay barns; new sanitary stock barn for 48 head; carriage, ice, and poultry houses; running spring water to all buildings; fruit, wood, and timber; 35 head stock, 3 horses, and all tools, machinery, and crops; owner in ill-health; will sacrifice, 1-3 cash, balance secured. This is a rare opportunity. Address Hampshire Realty & Construction Co., 124 Union Street, Easthampton, Mass.

COUNTRY HOUSES TO LET—Furnished.

RESIDENCE:

Beacon Hill Manor, Mohegan Heights, Bronxville.—14 rooms, fully and handsomely furnished, 7 bedrooms, 2 servants' rooms, large library, (2,000 volumes,) grand piano, electric light, steam heat, 7 open fireplaces; 6 minutes' walk from Tuckahoe station, N. Y. Central Ry.; 16 miles, (30 minutes,) from Grand Central Station; ideal situation, convenient, beautiful surroundings, good schools; rent moderate, $75 per month during the Winter months; immediate possession if desired. Address D. C. Catlin, Mohegan Heights, Bronxville, or 15 Broad St., New York City. Telephone Hanover 6050.

ENGLAND—FOR SALE.

Ready for Occupation.

ENGINEERING WORKS (with an iron foundry) in England, in an excellent skilled labor centre; complete, with well selected, high-class machine, tools, and electric cranes; on perpetual leasehold land of 20,000 square yards, of which ¼ is covered by buildings, all of ground floor level only; a railway siding affords excellent rail and water facilities. PRICE £100,000. E. J. K., L 847 Times Downtown.

CITY HOUSES TO LET—UNFURNISHED

276 WEST 94TH STREET,

convenient to 96th St. express Subway station; 4½-story American basement; 12 rooms, 2 baths; parquet floors, open plumbing, hardwood trim;
private house block;
will rent to right party reasonably.
HOUGHTON COMPANY,
200 West 72d St. Tel. Columbus—280.

CITY HOUSES TO LET—FURNISHED.

256 W. 74 St.

Near West End Ave.
Small, handsomely furnished House, $250 a month.
Seen between 10 and 5 P. M.

FURNISHED HOUSES.
PRICES ON MANY CUT IN HALF.
Unusually attractive list.
William B. May & Co.,
Tel. Fifth Av., near 34th St.

LONG ISLAND—FOR SALE OR TO LET.

MUST BE SOLD AT ONCE BY EXECUTOR'S ORDER

Splendid Water Front Estate

ON LONG ISLAND SOUND.

TREMENDOUS SACRIFICE. EASY TERMS. Estate consists of most desirable all-year residence, only 10 minutes to station and 25 minutes to Pennsylvania Terminal, with three acres of fine ground, lawn, garden, fruit and shade trees; garage, greenhouses, stable and outbuildings; also 150 feet water front, bath houses and bathing beach, private dock and landing; deep anchorage; protected harbor. Address
ESTATE, Box 100 Times Downtown.

NOVEMBER SPECIAL

$3,200, Restricted Section.

Bungalow Sites 50x100 Easy Terms.

Station on property, within one hour from 33d St., N. Y. City. Stores, churches, schools, good roads, concrete walks, surveyed, graded, water, gas, trees, bathing, boating, fishing.

Write Murray, Box 138 Times Downtown.

ELMHURST

Will rent luxuriously furnished stucco house, nine rooms, two baths, fireproof, open fireplaces; splendid location; fifteen minutes from Herald Square; ideal home for newly married couple; or will sell. This is an opportunity of a lifetime as the property will be sold at a great sacrifice. Part of purchase price can remain on bond and mortgage. Telephone owner, 697 Newtown.

BEAUTIFUL BUNGALOW

8 large rooms, bath, extra toilet, oak trim, open fireplaces, oak floors, large porches; plot 65x115; exceptional bargain; $8,500; easy terms; all improvements; near depot; 35 minutes Flatbush or Pennsylvania Stations. Bonner, 246 South Village Av., Rockville Centre, L. I.

DOUGLAS MANOR.

The ideal North Shore suburban home; 22 minutes by electric train from Pennsylvania Station; boating, bathing, fishing; nine-room stucco house and two baths; two large plots overlooking Bay and Sound, and one on the shore at real bargain prices. Write or call for photos and full particulars. J. HART WELCH, Douglaston.

POULTRY FARM.

33 weekly will buy A1 poultry farm; 6-room house, barn, etc.; near large town; good markets, factories, etc.; few minutes from station and trolley to harbor; one hour from city. Address C BARGAIN, 243 West 34th St., N. Y.

For Rent—At Great Neck, L. I.

New "Old English" stucco house and garage; 10 rooms; 3 baths; all latest improvements; decorated to suit; on acre of ground carefully planted, with right of way to the water. Rent reasonable.
W. J. Vreeland, 129 Front St., New York.

EASY HOUSEKEEPING

home, six rooms, bath, large porch, decorated; plot 40x123; all improvements; near depot; 35 minutes Flatbush or Pennsylvania Stations; bargain; $4,500; easy terms. Bonner, 246 South Village Av., Rockville Centre, L. I.

A BEAUTIFUL COUNTRY HOME

only 30 miles out, near State college, consisting of 8 rooms, with all improvements, including gas, electric lights, hot-water heat, parquet floors, quartered oak finish; terms.
L. B. Gildersleeve, East Northport, L. I.

WESTCHESTER—SALE OR TO LET.

Desirable Houses
FOR SALE OR RENT.

Near Bronxville Station, Hotel Gramatan and Country Club. Also unimproved property suitable for country residences.

THE RESIDENCE COMPANY OF LAWRENCE PARK
542 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK.
AND BRONXVILLE.

GENTLEMAN'S ESTATE
BARGAIN.

Commuting distance; 20 acres; on lake. Modern house of 6 large master's bedrooms, 4 baths; 4 servants' rooms and bath; electric lights, hot-water heat; large garage and stable; fine gardens, all kinds of fruits; price, $45,000. Further particulars and photographs.
SEAMAN LOWERRE & CO.,
15 East 40th St., N. Y. C.

PROPERTY

IN THE HILLS OF WESTCHESTER COUNTY | ALONG THE SOUND AND HUDSON

PARTICULARLY BRONXVILLE, SCARSDALE, BRIARCLIFF, RYE, etc.

Fish & Marvin 527 Fifth Ave., New York. Phone: 6526 Murray Hill

OLD-FASHIONED HOUSE ON A HIGH RIDGE

At Scarborough-on-Hudson. Ten acres in lawn, garden, orchard, wood. River view, finest surroundings. Frame, brick-lined house of 12 rooms, 2 baths, electricity, &c. Stable, cottage. Near golf and country clubs. 1 hour from New York by rail; 1¼ hours by motor.
NICHOLS & HOBBIE, 7 East 42d St.

PELHAM.

Modern stucco house, 10 rooms, 2 baths, hot-water heat; garage; plot 75x100; high elevation; 5 minutes to railroad station. Price $10,500.
Connolly and Penny,
115 Wolf's Lane. Phone 1655 W. Pelham.

NEARLY new hollow tile, stucco and tile roof Dwelling, garage; 1 acre land, beautiful gardens, fruit, shade and shrubery; very high ground; in finest residential section; property valued at $35,000; will sell at GREAT SACRIFICE.
O'Connor & McCann 221 Huguenot St. Tel. 394 New Rochelle, N.Y.

ALONG THE HUDSON, ALONG THE SOUND, AMONG THE HILLS.

KENNETH IVES & CO.,
7 East 42d St., New York. Murray Hill—6057.

COLONIAL HEIGHTS.

Beautiful new Colonial cottage, 8 rooms, 2 baths; all modern conveniences; large lots commanding extensive views; high altitude; for rental, bargain price, $75, or for sale on easy terms. Tasker, Tribune Building.

AT WHITE PLAINS.

Attractive new dwelling, 10 rooms, baths, all modern improvements; stable, chicken houses; 3 acres; very high elevation; extensive views. Also 2 other houses. Fox Realty Company, 25 E. 26th St.

NEW JERSEY—FOR SALE. | NEW JERSEY—FOR SALE.

Beautiful All-Year Home--On the Water

With Plot 100 by 280 feet. Has 100 feet Water Frontage and Private Dock.
READY TO LIVE IN NOW. PRICE $8,250. EASY TERMS.
$5,000 May Remain on Mortgage. Balance, $3,250, on Terms Arranged to Suit.
VERY CONVENIENT TO EXPRESS STATION. 44 MINUTES ON LACKAWANNA R. R.

9 Rooms, 2 Baths.

Larve veranda, upper balcony and sleeping porch. Spacious reception hall, large living room, with huge open fireplace; dining room, butler's pantry and kitchen. Six large bedrooms, two baths, and storage room. An unusually well built house, with Craftsman interior and modern conveniences; front and back stairway, laundry, extra toilet; electric light, steam heat, parquet floors, beamed ceilings; paneled in hardwoods. Established social centre; every convenience; schools, churches; select social organizations and country club; tennis, fishing, bathing, boating, water sports in Summer; skating, tobogganing, ice boating, hockey in Winter; delightful walks and drives around the lakes; best of outdoor recreations. Highest, healthiest altitude within commuting distance of New York. For further particulars, address

WALTER S. RAIT Telephone 1521—Cortlandt. 170 Broadway, N. Y. C.

NEW JERSEY—FOR SALE OR TO LET.

HERE IS OPPORTUNITY.

Delightful 45-acre farm; 50 miles New York, on main line railroad; ¾ miles (short walk) good town; on macadamized State road 500 feet elevation, with grand views and air; beautiful house, sets back 150 feet; very large trees; 10-room house alone worth more than entire price; bathroom; large barns; silo; poultry plant; 1,200 young fruit trees, all in bearing; alfalfa, asparagus; artesian water; only $8,000; a matchless bargain.
ALLABOUGH & SON, 150 Nassau St. New York.

Near Summit & Morristown

Lackawanna Railroad express station; excellent commuting; modernized homestead; beautiful trees, view; 40 acres rich land; 200 bearing apple trees; house, 10 spacious rooms, wide centre hall, Colonial stairway, extra fine bathroom fixtures, all improvements, costly decorations; fine outbuildings; gardener's house; water from valuable spring piped to buildings; everything in pink of condition; owner leaving State; $18,000; offer invited. Photos here.
ALLABOUGH & SON 150 Nassau Street, New York.

N. J. REAL ESTATE TITLES

Examined and Insured. We make a specialty of Bergen Co. Property. Send for our Booklet, Series A.
North Jersey Title Ins. Co.,
HACKENSACK, N. J.

Rent THEN Buy!

New, artistic 9-room, all-year residence, remarkably situated, right on golf course, 400 feet from Country Club; 2 baths, big living room, architecturally perfect. Prefer sell outright, but willing to rent to proper party with purchase privilege, rent to apply. Easy terms. For permit to inspect address Bargain, P. O. Box 416, New York.

OWNER CANNOT OCCUPY NEW SIX ROOM STUCCO

All-year home, and will sell for $4,200; has sleeping porch, open fireplace, steam heat, tiled bathroom, &c.; is 700 feet above sea level.
Write for details.
Cragmere, 40 West 22d St., New York City. Telephone, 9860 Madison Square.

STUCCO HOUSE of 7 rooms and tiled bath, large living room, with tapestry brick fireplace; artistic craftsman finish; modern plumbing and steam heat; asbestos shingle roofs; parquet floors; fine shade trees; near station and trolley; price only $5,550; liberal terms. LAMBERT, Owner, 233 Broadway, N. Y.; telephone Barclay 6934.

WESTCHESTER—SALE OR TO LET.

Take Advantage of Low Prices and buy Lots now in SOUTH YONKERS
LAWRENCE PROPERTY
At Riverdale Ave. and Valentine Lane

Great bargain in one of the most desirable suburban districts. Part of property restricted to private houses, part available for two-family houses and apartments. Remarkable building activity there now. Visit the property today yourself. Easy terms of payment.

Reached by Broadway Subway Express to Van Cortlandt Park, then trolley to Valentine Lane or by New York Central main line trains to Ludlow Station. For maps, photos, etc., address

American Real Estate Company
527 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

TOTAL COST OF HOUSE WITH PLOT FINE
$5,000 TO $6,000
AT LARCHMONT, N. Y.

On a high, rolling, wooded, picturesque property; actual walk only five minutes from station.
ALL HIGH-CLASS IMPROVEMENTS.
Some sites commanding view of the Sound.
Others overlooking a beautiful State.
ARTISTIC homes that we can sell on the rental plan or your own ideas, financed or built by this company, for a small initial payment.
We have the recommendation of all of our purchasers who are living in artistic and moderate cost homes.
An inspection will convince you that we have an ideal home proposition.
Write for booklet, giving details, showing Photos.
CHATSWORTH HEIGHTS,
Murray Av., Larchmont, N. Y., or
56 Lawton St. Tel., 1689—New Rochelle, N. Y.

At Lawrence Park West
Bronxville, N. Y.

For Sale: Large stone country house, 17 rooms, 4 baths, all improvements; one acre of land adjoining country club and fronting on Sunnybrook. The dwelling was constructed by the artist Violet Oakley for a residence from plans by the late John M. Carrere.

Fish & Marvin 527 Fifth Av., N. Y. Phone 6526 Mur. Hill

UNPRECEDENTED VALUES PELHAM MANOR
LOTS FROM $500 UP

Located in the most highly restricted residential section, midway between 3 R. R. Stations & Travers Island (N. Y. Athletic Club) and adjacent to all salt water activities.
SOLD IN PLOTS
and offer the unusual opportunity to those intending the building of a Country Home of a modest, artistic character, or on a more sumptuous plan; near; only 15-20 minutes from New York. Beautiful winding driveways, sidewalks, sewer, water, gas, telephones, electricity, magnificent trees, &c.
YOU WOULD DO WELL to Obtain Further Particulars, also Details of Our Building Plans.
JOHN H. SCOFIELD,
56 Lawton St. Tel. 1689—New Rochelle, N. Y.

BARGAIN.

Frame house, 8 large rooms, hot-water heat, garage; convenient to [illegible]
WILL SACRIFICE FOR CASH
MRS. EDMUND W. BOR[illegible]
192 Main St.

NEW JERSEY—FOR SALE OR TO LET.

MONTCLAIR
The Mountain Park Town.
FOR RENTAL

FURNISHED—Handsome house of 11 rooms, 4 bathrooms. Richly furnished throughout. To desirable family, per month..... $300
UNFURNISHED—New house, 10 rooms, 2 bathrooms; steam heat. Per annum $1,000
We are offering desirable residences, both unfurnished and furnished, for the Winter.

TO STRANGERS We advise to RENT FIRST and become acquainted with Montclair. THEN PURCHASE. This will prevent you making mistakes.

F. M. CRAWLEY & BROS.
Real Estate Brokers.
Opp. Lackawanna Term. Montclair, N. J.
Save this name for future reference.

High Grade, Well Located
Income Producing Farm

Magnificent fruit and truck farm, midway between Montclair and Passaic; two main road frontages; excellent house, suitable for gentleman's place, with barns, granaries, and outbuildings. In high state of cultivation, producing income for present owner of over $5,000 a year. Excellent reasons for sale. Seventy acres, $45,000. Terms reasonable.
The ROWLAND-JOHNSON COMPANY,
Passaic, N. J.

APARTMENTS TO LET—Furnished.

The Wilsonia

225-227-229 West 69th St.,
NEAR BROADWAY.

1 Room and bath,	$30
2 Rooms, Bath, Kitchenette,	$45	up.
3 Rooms, Bath, Kitchenette,	$55	up.

Exceptionally Clean Apartments for Particular People; No Objectionable Tenants.
Modern Elevator Apartment House. Two blocks from Central Park; close to shopping and theatre districts.
Maid service if desired.
Convenient to Subway, "L," and Surface Cars.
References Absolutely Essential.
Supt. on Premises. 'Phone, 9920 Col.

FURNISHED APARTMENT
FOR THE WINTER MONTHS.
An 8-room Apartment, with 3 master bedrooms, 2 baths and extra servants' rooms.
THE OSBORNE
205 WEST 57TH ST.
TELEPHONE COLUMBUS 6510.

TASTEFULLY FURNISHED APARTMENT TO LET

Eight rooms and two baths, $225 monthly. Also one of six rooms and bath, $150 monthly. Apply to SUPERINTENDENT, 307 W. 79th St., or telephone 1936 Murray Hill.

HOTEL GREGORIAN,
35TH ST., BET. BROADWAY AND 5TH AV.
A few handsome Apartments, each with private bath, exceptional closets; all outside exposure. Single Apartments, $50 per month. Parlor, bedroom, bath, $100 up per month. Homelike, absolutely refined and very central.

APARTMENTS TO LET—Unfurnished.

MANHATTAN—East Side.

MURRAY HILL CHAMBERS
167 Madison Ave., S. E. Cor. 33d St.
3 Rooms, Bath & Kitchenette, including service. } REDUCED RENTALS
New Building Ready for Occupancy.

177 MADISON AVE., Near 34th St.
2 Rooms, Bath & Kitchenette, $50 per month, including service
Only apartment left.

178 MADISON AVE., Near 34th St.
3 Rooms and Bath. $45 per month, including service

These apartments are between the Vanderbilt Hotel, 33d Street Subway Station, Waldorf, McAlpin, and Hudson Tubes.

William J. Roome & Co., Inc.,
177 Madison Av. at 34th St.

987 Madison Av.

S. E. Cor. 77th St.

ONE SEVEN AND ONE EIGHT ROOM APARTMENT, TWO BATHS; FIREPROOF BUILDING; LATEST IMPROVEMENTS.

PALERMO
125-127-129 East 57th St.
Elevator Apartments,
Large, Light, Airy Rooms.
8 and 9 Rooms
Moderate Rental.
SUPT. ON PREMISES.

ATTENTION!!!
DENTISTS AND DOCTORS

Beautiful large 7-room apartment with all modern improvements, at 29 EAST 124TH ST., Corner Madison Avenue. Reasonable rental. Agent on premises.
GOODWIN & GOODWIN
200 Lenox Ave., cor. 123d St. Phone 4566 Harlem.

APARTMENTS TO LET—Unfurnished.

755 Park Avenue
Corner 72d Street.
New Fireproof Apartment House, situated in most exclusive neighborhood.
One 7 and One 3 Room
Ground floor apartment. Suitable for Physician or living apartment.
9 & 11 Rooms, 3 Baths.
Rental $3,500 to $5,500.
DOUGLAS L. ELLIMAN & CO., 421 Madison Av. Tel. Murray Hill 850.

150 East 72d Street
Southeast Corner Lexington Av.
New Fireproof Apartment House. All Outside Rooms
6, 7 & 8 Rooms, 2 & 3 Baths.
Rental $1,800 to $2,650.
PEASE & ELLIMAN, 240 Madison Av. Tel. Murray Hill 6200.

150 West 79th St.
One DUPLEX and One SIMPLEX APARTMENT of 9 Rooms, 3 Baths, $2,600 per annum.
Bedrooms Have Unobstructed Southern Exposure.

1,211 Madison Avenue N. E. Cor. 87th Street.
9 Rooms & 2 Baths, Rent $1,500 to $1,800.

The Langdon
5th Ave. & 56th St.
Apartments of Any Size, Unfurnished, on Yearly Basis Only.
One Apartment, 8 Rooms, on 6th Floor, to Sublet on Favorable Terms.
Designed especially for those desiring the quiet atmosphere of a well-ordered home, with all the comforts and advantages of a modern hotel. Inspection invited or full particulars sent on request.

Hotel Le Marquis
12-16 East 31st St.
Comfortable and Exclusive.
Suites of Any Size, Furnished or Unfurnished.
This well-established Fireproof Hotel offers superior accommodations, combined with faultless service and an excellent cuisine, at attractive prices.
Inquiries Solicited.
Under Personal Direction of E. H. Chatillon.

410 PARK AVENUE
Corner 55th Street
New 12-Story Apartment House
12 ROOMS & 3 BATHS
14 ROOMS & 4 BATHS
19 ROOMS & 8 BATHS
RENTS $4,000 to $11,000
Booklet on Request.
Living Room, 21x32.6 — Dining Room, 21x32.6

Estate of Ogden Goelet, Owner.
9 West 17th St., Dept. 2.
Telephone 3460 Chelsea.

Moore & Wyckoff, Agents
546 Fifth Ave., Dept. 2.
Cor. 45th St. Tel. 1263 Bryant.

THE MADISON SQUARE
37 MADISON AVENUE

To those seeking a quiet and comfortable home, amid dignified and refined surroundings, at moderate cost, the Madison Square, corner of Madison Avenue and 26th Street, offers many unusual inducements.
Pleasant outlook over the Park; homelike surroundings; sunny rooms.
Housekeeping and Hotel Apartments.
Furnished and unfurnished; lease and transient.
Well-trained, cheerful service. No tips allowed or expected.
OPEN FOR INSPECTION DAY AND EVENING.
F. R. GOING, Resident Manager.
PHELPS STOKES ESTATES, Owners, 100 William Street, N. Y. C.

969 Park Ave.
NORTHEAST CORNER 82D ST.
MODERN 12-STORY FIREPROOF BUILDING. DUPLEX APARTMENTS.
SPECIAL RATES ON A FEW REMAINING SUITES FOR LATE SEASON RENTING.
9 to 12 ROOMS, 3 and 4 BATHS
DOUGLAS L. ELLIMAN & CO.
421 Madison Av. (48th St.) Telephone 850 Murray Hill.

In the Exclusive Park Avenue Section

115 EAST 53rd STREET
NEW APARTMENTS

One of three buildings under the same ownership, with court 32 feet wide, extending out to 53rd Street, making this apartment house practically a corner building and guaranteeing permanent light and air.

7 ROOMS, Extra Servants' Rooms $1750 to $2400 2 & 3 BATHS Booklet Upon Request

PHYSICIANS' APARTMENTS of two and three rooms and bath.
MOORE & WYCKOFF, 546 5th Ave., Corner 45th Street. Phone 1263 Bryant.

MANHATTAN—East Side. | MANHATTAN—East Side.

Non-Housekeeping Apartments

A few apartments available for renting: 3 large, airy outside rooms with bath; modern in detail. Day and night attendance. Vacuum cleaning system, maid service, mail chute, open fireplaces, ample closet room. Meals served in apartments. Agent on premises.
'Phone Plaza 6070.
RENT, $1,500.
507 Madison Ave. at 53rd St.

"In aristocratic Old New York."
15 East 10th St.
Near 5th Av.
THE MAYFIELD.
Exceptionally Desirable MODERN, HIGH-CLASS Elevator Apartments.
5 Rooms $1,100 8 Rooms $1,600
Inquire Superintendent, or Goodale, Perry & Dwight, Inc. Tel. Farragut 9494. 1,133 BROADWAY.

To Sublet at a Big Reduction
32 East 64th St.
S. E. Cor. Mad. Av.
Apartment of 15 rooms and 6 baths, 9th Floor Corner, all outside rooms. In the "Versons," one of New York's finest apartment buildings. To sublet at an unusually attractive figure. Might also be leased partly furnished.
Apply Douglas L. Elliman & Co.
421 Madison Av. Telephone 850 Murray Hill.

AT 125 & 127 E. 24TH ST.
HANDSOME APARTMENTS. EIGHT ROOMS AND BATHS; ALL MODERN IMPROVEMENTS; RENT $75.00 A MONTH; NEAR SUBWAY AND ELEVATED STATIONS. APPLY ON PREMISES.

THE KING
56 to 60 East 87th St.
Finest type elevator apartment. Liberal Concessions.
7 large, light, beautiful rooms, $1000
7 large, light, beautiful rooms $1200
All improvements, elevator, all-night service.

MALVERN HALL
Gramercy Park.
STUDIO APARTMENTS.
Very desirable apartments; two rooms and bath, with maid service; facing the park.
INNES & CENTER, 30-32 EAST 20TH ST.

APARTMENTS TO LET—Unfurnished.

MANHATTAN—East Side.

121 Mad. Av.
CORNER 30TH ST.

Large and Perfectly Arranged Duplex Housekeeping Apartments in above Fireproof Building.

Spacious rooms, parquet floors, electric light and baths. Extra rooms for maids.

Duplex Non-Housekeeping Apartments, Furnished and Unfurnished, 3 Large Rooms and Bath, Including Room Service.

A Very Desirable Ground Floor Apartment for High Class Physician.

Also Suite of Large Living Room, Bed Chamber and Bath, with Room Service if Desired.

Good Restaurant maintained for tenants only.

116 E. 63d St
New Fireproof Building.

8 and 9 Rooms and 3 Baths

Additional maids' rooms. Exceptional light.

Rents Very Moderate.

Exceptional Bargain to Sublet
565 PARK AVENUE,
Between 62d and 63d Streets.
Ninth floor west apartment,
8 Rooms, 3 Baths
Apply DOUGLAS L. ELLIMAN & CO., 421 Madison Av. Tel. 850 Murray Hill.

GRAMERCY COURT,
152 EAST 22D ST.

3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 room elevator apartments; all latest improvements; central location; rents, $35 to $75. Apply on premises.

61 EAST 86TH STREET.

One block from Central Park; crosstown cars. A few choice apartments, 5 to 7 rooms. All night service.
Rents $50 to $70.
Superintendent on premises.

Near Park Avenue.

6 and 7 rooms, 2 baths; $1,000 to $1,900. New building, every modern convenience; liberal concession will be made owing to late season.
WILLIAM B. MAY & CO., 749 Fifth Av., near 57th St.

MANHATTAN—West Side.

Attractive Apartments
Low Rents.

206 West 92d St.,
NEAR BROADWAY.
5, 6, 7 rooms, 1 and 2 baths, all improvements. Rents $950 to $1,400 per annum.

411 West 115th St.,
NEAR AMSTERDAM AV.
5 and 6 rooms. Rents $540 to $800 per annum.

201 West 112th St.,
COR. 7TH AV.
6 and 7 rooms. Rents $510 to $900 per annum.

400 West 150th St.,
COR. EDGECOMBE AV.
6, 7, 8 rooms. Rents $720 to $960 per annum.

All the above buildings are strictly up to date in every respect.
RENTS ALL REDUCED.
E. W. NESTELL,
516 Fifth Av. Phone Bryant 7142

NON-HOUSEKEEPING APARTMENTS
B'WAY AT 69TH ST.
Southeast Corner.
SPENCER ARMS
2, 3 & 4 ROOMS
or larger combinations.
Maid service included and all meals served in apartments.
Every Room with permanent outside light and large closet space. Most convenient location in city.
RENTAL $900 to $1,500
Chas. F. de Casanova, Agt. on premises, or your own broker. Tel. Columbus 3966.

IVY COURTS
210-220-230 West 107th St.,
Adjoining Broadway and West End Av.

5, 6 AND 7 ROOMS

Continuous, efficient, and polite service, including hall, elevator and telephone. ELECTRICITY INCLUDED IN RENT. NO INTERIOR ROOMS; all LARGE and EXCEPTIONALLY BRIGHT. CLOSETS are a particular feature; a home for refined people who demand the BEST SERVICE.
Rents $660 to $960 Per Year.
Superintendent on premises.

APARTMENT
EIGHT LARGE ROOMS
First Floor; All Light.
Southerly Exposed.
Inquire of Mr. Lane,
425 West End Ave.,
N. W. Corner 80th St.

The Hyperion
320 West 84th St.
Bet. West End Av. and Riverside Drive.
ONLY ONE LEFT
8 Rooms and 2 Baths, $1,200
7 Rooms and 2 Baths
Ground Floor, $1,000
Excellent Location. All Improvements.
VALUE CANNOT BE DUPLICATED.
LOUIS KEMPNER & SON,
2,443 Broadway. Tel., 3120—Riverside.

159 W. 45th St.
CONVENIENT TO EVERYTHING.
Elevator Apartments
6 AND 7 ROOMS WITH BATH.
Only $65 to $75 Monthly
SUPERINTENDENT ON
LEONARD MORGAN, Agent,
104 WEST 42D ST.

OWNER leaving city will sublet six rooms and foyer with three baths; corner Apartment in new building. Apply
F. R. Wood, W. H. Dolson Co.,
B'way & 80th St. Tel. Schuyler 3800.

322-328 West 57th Street.
All Transit Facilities.
MODERN ELEVATOR APARTMENTS.
Eight large, light rooms, bath,
Rent $1,000, $1,150.

APARTMENTS TO LET—Unfurnished | APARTMENTS TO LET—Unfurnished.

VAUXHALL
780 RIVERSIDE DRIVE, North Cor. 155th St.

4 Rooms, from $700 | 6 Rooms, from $1200
5 " " 950 | 7 " " 1350
1, 2 and 3 Baths.

All rooms large, light and airy, with mostly southerly exposure; large closets, spacious foyers and vestibules. Smoke-proof fire tower.

Secure the Benefits of the exceptional rental opportunities offered by the New Eleven-story Absolutely Fireproof Building, representing the most advanced ideas in apartment house construction. Location is the best and most convenient on Washington Heights, commanding a view of the Hudson, accessible to subway express stations, Broadway surface line and elevated. Overlooking grounds of Hispania Society of America.

Telephone, Audubon 870
Bert G. Faulhaber & Co.
BROADWAY AND 156TH ST.
Rental Representative on Premises

ATTRACTIVE TERMS ARE OFFERED
on the remaining vacancies in the following desirable Houses
All Attractively Located and Convenient to Subway

ELEVATOR APARTMENTS

546 West 124th St.	(Corner Broadway.)	5 Rooms	$45
601 West 136th St.	(Corner Broadway.)	6 Rooms	$55
520 West 139th St.	(Bet. Amst. & B'way.)	6 Rooms	$58

NON-ELEVATOR APARTMENTS

153 West 66th St.		5 Rooms	$28
122 West 91st St.		7 Rooms	$55
460 Manhattan Av.	(Near 120th St.)	6 Rooms	$29
316 West 120th St.	(Cor. Man. Av.)	6 Rooms	$30
282 St. Nicholas Av.	(Cor. 124th St.)	5 & 6 Rooms	$28-$30
621 West 135th St.	(Bet. B'way & Riverside,)	6 Rooms	$45

Hall Service and Electric Lights.
Telephone, Audubon—3100. Apply on premises.

THE ABOVE AND OTHER HOUSES UNDER THE MANAGEMENT
J. S. MAXWELL.
3422 BROADWAY AND 139TH ST.

THE RIVIERA
Riverside Drive & 156th to 157th St.
12 Story Modern Fireproof Apartment.
Close to Subway, and 155th St. "L" only a few blocks away

5 Rooms, $660 to $750 Per Annum.
7 Rooms, $1,000 to $1,200 Per Annum.
8 Rooms, $1,200 to $1,500 Per Annum.
9 Rooms, $1,800 to $2,000 Per Annum.

A. J. Odell, Resident Manager.
Telephone Audubon—5400.
Service and management under direct supervision of owner.
Manhattan Leasing Co.
149 Church St. Tel. 6390—Barclay.

MANHATTAN—West Side.

4 & 5 Rooms
Also One Very Desirable
6 Room Apartment
Marc Antony
and
Prince Humbert
214 to 220 Cathedral Parkway
(110th St., near Broadway)
Rents $810 to $1,300
ALL FRONT ROOMS
Absolutely Fireproof Buildings.
Convenient to Subway and Elevated Stations.
Apply on premises, or
Thos. J. O'Reilly
Broadway and 109th St.

MANHATTAN—West Side.

High Class Apartments
MODERATE RENTS
Excellent Service

5 ROOMS	260	WEST 72D	$1,200
	315	WEST 97TH	$780
	515	WEST 110TH	$900
	616	WEST 116TH	$900
	620	WEST 116TH	$780
7 ROOMS	509	WEST 110TH	$1,300
	515	WEST 110TH	$1,200
	606	WEST 116TH	$1,150
	620	WEST 116TH	$1,100
	616	WEST 116TH	$1,100
	445	RIVERSIDE DRIVE	$1,400
8 ROOMS	174	WEST 79TH	$1,600
	445	RIVERSIDE DRIVE	$1,550

NOTE:—315 West 97th St. and 174 West 79th St. are Corner Apartments.
—Booklet on Application—
Apply to Superintendents, or
EARLE & CALHOUN
Broadway & 72nd St.
Tel. 5116-7-8 Col.

A Few Choice Housekeeping Corner Apartments of 4-5 & 6 Rooms, & bath; also extra maids' rooms.
Most convenient residential location in the city, close to the best shopping and amusement sections.
Very Reasonable Rents.
THE OREGON
162 W. 54th St., Cor. 7th Av.
New 12-story fireproof building. Renting agent on premises, or Slawson & Hobbs,
162 West 72d St.

New Fireproof Building
Just Completed
302 West 87th St
Bet. West End Av. & Riverside Drive. Subway Station at 86th St.
8 ROOMS & 3 BATHS.
RENTS
$1,900 Upward.
Unusually large rooms with ample closets. Two apartments on each floor. Separate service elevator Coast Construction Co.
(S. G. Hess.)
Agent on Premises.
Tel. 6040 Schuyler.

The Ponchartrain
312 West 109th St. Bet. B'way and Riverside Drive.
Special Concessions on Account of Lateness of Season.
2 APARTMENTS LEFT OF 6 ROOMS, $840 & $900
With bath and extra lavatory and maids' toilet. The large size rooms, high standard of excellence of the building, (which has all modern improvements,) and the superb location make these apartments an offering of exceptional value.
LOUIS KEMPNER & SON
2,443 Broadway. Tel. 3120 River.

636 Fifth Ave.
Southwest Corner 51st St.
APARTMENTS
Big Concessions.
High Class Elevator Apartments. All Improvements.
94th Street, near Riverside Drive.
314 Front Apartment, 7 large, light rooms, bath, and extra maid's lavatory; per year, $1,050.
315 Front Apartment, 5 rooms & Bath, $50.00.
321 Front Apartment, 4 & 5 Rooms & Bath, $53.50 to $65.00.

175 West 85th Street
7 LARGE ROOMS. Corner Apartments; Electricity and all Improvements. $720 $780
One block from Subway and "L" Stations.
SNOWDEN & SMITH, 2,190 B'way, 78th St.

120 West 86th Street
New Fireproof Apartment Building.
ONE APARTMENT LEFT
Eleventh floor, seven rooms and three baths; attractive rent.
GEO. A. BOWMAN, 122 West 42d St.

MONTICELLO
35-37 WEST 64TH ST.
Between Broadway and Central Park.
STATIONS OF "L" and Subway at 66th St.
A QUIET FAMILY HOTEL.

Double Room & Private Bath	$2.00 Day	$50.00 Month	$60.00 "
2 Rooms and Bath, for 1 or 2	$2.50 & $3 Day	$65.00 "	$85.00 "

Also 3 Room Suites, with Bath.
Bachelor Rooms and Bath, $8, $9 weekly.
Restaurant { Club Breakfast, a la Carte and Table d'Hote.
Phone 1890—Columbus. J. A. JEPSON, Mgr.

Stop! Look! Listen!
THE MILLARD
High Class Elevator Apartments,
18-20 West 107th St.
4 to 8 Rooms,
EXTRA LARGE AND LIGHT.
Rents $35 to $65.
Liberal Concessions.

THE PLAZA,
Corner 156th St. and Riverside Drive.
Elegant suite room corner apartment; modern improvements, all marble floors; all night elevator service; rent $720 per Sept.

APARTMENTS TO LET—Unfurnished. | APARTMENTS TO LET—Unfurnished. | APARTMENTS TO LET—Unfurnished.

SLAWSON & HOBBS
162 West 72d St., Near Broadway

LOCATION		ROOMS	Baths	RENTALS
Oregon, 162 West 54th St., corner 7th Ave.	A	3, 4, 5, 6	1	$900 to $1,700
Georgean Court, 58 Central Park West, corner 66th St.	A	8 & 12	2 & 3	2,000 & 3,600
Catherine, 1 West 69th St., corner Central Park West	A	6 & 7	1	1,000 to 1,200
Vernon, 350 West 71st St., near Riverside	B	3	1	1,100
105 West 72d St., between Col. Av. and Broadway	A	4 & 5	1 & 2	1,400 to 1,900
La Rochelle, 57 West 75th St.	A	7	1	1,200 to 1,800
57 West 84th St., northeast corner Columbus Ave.	C	6	1	31 & 45
349 West 85th St., near West End Ave.	B	3	1	1,400
4 and 14 West 92d St., near Central Park West	B	7	1	900 to 1,000
Augusta, 255 West 92d St., near Broadway	B	7	1	720 & 900
Stuart, 250 West 94th St., corner Broadway	B	9	1	1,400
Mathilda Court, 310 West 95th St., near West End Ave.	B	8	1	900 to 1,020
375 Central Park West, near 97th St.	B	8	2	1,000 to 1,200
Rosary, 306 West 99th St., near West End Ave.	B	9	2	1,500
Wendolyn, 322 West 100th St., corner Riverside Drive	A	9, 10, 11	3	2,500 to 3,600
Putnam Court, 150 West 104th St., near Amsterdam Ave.	B	4 & 5	1	540 to 660
Salome, 149 West 105th, near Amsterdam Ave.	B	6	1	648
3 West 108th St., near Central Park West	B	6	1	660
Cortlandt, 210 West 110th St., near Broadway	A	7 & 8	3	1,600 to 1,900
Yorkshire, 562 West 113th St., corner Broadway	A	7, 8, 10	2 & 3	1,100, 1,500, 2,100
Cliff Haven, 417 Riverside Drive, corner 114th St.	A	9	3	2,400
Barieford, 49 Claremont Ave., corner 119th St.	B	7	1	1,200
Fair View Court, 175 Claremont Ave., 125th St.	B	4	1	480
Stockbridge, 603 West 138th St., near Broadway	B	6	1	600 & 660
Woodmere, 561 West 141st St., corner Broadway	A	4, 5, 6	1	630 to 1,000
St. Charles, 565 West 148th St., corner Broadway	C	6	1	540 & 600
Haven Court, 4,241 Broadway, corner 180th St.	B	4 & 5	1	456 to 630

N. B.—A—Fireproof Elevator Apartments. B—Elevator Apartments. C—Non-Elevator Apartments.

MANHATTAN—West Side.

The Curlew
Broadway, S. W. Cor. 78th St.
Attractive apartments possessing every up-to-date convenience, excepting elevator service.
2 Rooms.....$47.50
3 Rooms.....$45 to $50
4 Rooms.....$50 to $60
With Bath, Kitchen, and Kitchenettes.

400 Riverside Drive
Corner 112th St.
A Modern, High Class Building Situated at the most picturesque part of the Drive.
5 Rooms & Bath, $780-$900
7 Rooms, 2 Baths, $1,400-$1,500
Apply on premises, or
Calder, Nassoit & Lanning
Phone 3380 River. B'way, cor. 105th St.

MANCHESTER
B'way & 108th Street,
Northeast corner.
Exceptional Apartment of
1 Apartment—6 Rooms, 2 Baths
Superintendent on premises.
498 West End Av.
Southeast Cor. 84th St.
2 Apartments.
One.....6 Rooms, 2 Baths
One.....7 Rooms, 3 Baths
Lowest Rents in Vicinity.
Apply Superintendent.

TO SUBLET
A Choice Apartment in
The BRENTMORE
88 Central Park West,
Corner 69th Street.
Overlooking the Park.
9 Rooms and 3 Baths
All outside rooms and exceptionally large. All main rooms have Eastern exposure; all bedrooms have Southern exposure.
Apply to Superintendent, or Apartment, 12th Floor South.

Lasanna Court
307 WEST 79TH STREET
(79th St. Subway Station)
Desirable apartments in modern, well-appointed, fireproof building.
8 Rooms, 2 baths, $1800
6 Rooms, 1 bath, $1200
Rooms for servants may be had at very reasonable rates.
GEORGE ROSENFELD CO. Inc.
51 E. 42D ST.
'Phone 1936 Murray Hill

2, 3, 4 ROOMS
Kitchens and Kitchenettes.
Unfurnished $50 to $75. | LARGE LIGHT ROOMS. | Furnished $60 to $90.
THE DEARBORN
350 West 55th St.
One Block West of Broadway.
Superintendent on Premises, or
BING & BING,
119 West 40th St. Tel. 6410 Bryant.

302-306 W. 79th St.
Bet. West End Av. & Riverside Drive.
6 ROOMS
Modern FIREPROOF building, located on the West Side's most FASHIONABLE street. Rooms large and bright; hardwood floors. Most desirable home for refined families who demand the best of service.
Rent $840 per Year.
Superintendent on premises.

MUST SUBLET
4 room apt in exceptionally high-class non-elevator house. Very large rooms. Well planned; well finished. Exceptional low price if rented at once. See Superintendent.
542 W. 179th St. Near St. Nicholas Avenue.

The few apartments remaining for rent in our numerous buildings are offered at attractive prices to responsible parties on term leases dating from November first. Representative will call with plans and particulars upon request.

F. R. Wood, W. H. Dolson Co.,
Broadway, Cor. 80th St. Telephone 3800 Schuyler.
Branch Offices: Broadway at 144th St. and 163d St.

MANHATTAN—West Side.

3 EXTRA LARGE ROOMS. NEW BUILDING.
Furnished and Unfurnished.
Unfurnished, $840 to $1,100.
Furnished, $1,100 to $1,370.
Now Ready for Occupancy.
New Idea Small Apartments.
Completely equipped kitchens.
Extra Maids' Rooms if Desired.
135 West 79th St.
Bet. Columbus and Amsterdam Avs.
APPLY SUPT. ON PREMISES, OR BING & BING, 119 West 40th St.

The OAKDALE
non-Housekeeping Apartments
36-38 W. 35th St.
NEAR FIFTH AVE.
Suites of 2 and 3 Rooms, with bath, furnished or unfurnished. Special suites for Doctors. Hotel service, day and night.
RENTS $500 TO $1,000.
Superintendent on premises.
Phone 6380 Greeley.

RIVERSIDE DRIVE
NO. 227, CORNER 95TH ST.
"The HUDSON"
NEW BATHS FOR MAIDS.
Attractive fireproof, modern elevator apartments; also service elevator; rents $840 to $1,200; cheapest rents on Riverside Drive; five to seven rooms. HARRY E. HAYES, 30 East 42d St. Tel. 342 Murray Hill, or Supt.

THE ENDYMION
352 WEST 117TH ST.
close to transit lines and park; refined home apartment; very moderate rent; seven rooms; modern appointments; only $45 and $55; diagrams, &c., of Superintendent on premises, or Wilcox & Shelton, Mgrs.,
2,107 7th Av., at 125th St.

HIGH CLASS Elevator Apartments | 6 7 8 ROOMS AND BATH, $50 to $60
Spacious, light rooms, with every modern improvement; convenient to all transit lines. Inquire on premises, SMITHSONIAN, 60 West 129th St., or ROBERT LEVERS, 376 Lenox Av., cor. 129th.

Harperley Hall
Central Park West at 64th St.
Apartments 6, 7, 9, 10 Rooms,
May be had on very favorable terms.
UNDER OWNERSHIP MANAGEMENT.

3 Rooms, $50 to $75.
Suitable for Doctor.
New Building; Every Modern Equipment
329 WEST 57th ST.
JOHN J. CLANCY & CO., Agents,
980 7th Ave., cor. 57th St.

TO SUBLET.
One apartment of
5 Rooms—2 Baths.
119 West 71st St.
$1,250 per year.
LOWELL REALTY CO.,
505 5th Av. Phone 6960 Murray Hill.

2 WEST 83D STREET,
CORNER, OVERLOOKING CENTRAL PARK
High Grade Elevator House;
ALL NIGHT SERVICE.
Seven large rooms and bath.
Rents $900 to $1,200.
GEO. A. BOWMAN, 121 West 42d St.

Fort Tryon Apartments
561 W. 180TH ST., Corner St. Nicholas Av.
One Apartment, 4 Rooms and Bath, $50.
Elevator, electric light. Apply on premises, or
J. E. Whitaker, 2105 Broadway, at 74th St.

133-135 W. 104th St.
Modern elevator apartment, seven outside rooms, near Subway and "L" station; maids' toilet; all night service; rent $900; possession.

INSPECT THESE two six-room and two four-room apartments; most refined elevator block west of Fifth; 104th St., 105th St., 106th St., 107th St.

MANHATTAN—West Side.

3 & 4 ROOMS
Furnished and Unfurnished.
Unfurnished, $60.50 to $85.
Furnished, $75 to $102.50.
Absolutely Fireproof.
Living rooms about 19 ft. square.
Exceptional closet space.
Completely Equipped Kitchens.
THE STANWOOD,
321 West 55th.
One block West of B'way.
Superintendent on premises, or
BING & BING, 119 West 40th St.

WELLESLEY
N. E. Cor. 81st and West End Av.
Fine, large seven and eight room apartments. Electric lights, refrigeration, and laundry fuel included in rent.
APPLY SUPT., ON PREMISES.

"ST. CLOUD"
252 W. 91st Street
7-8 Room Apartments
$950-$1200
Highest Class Elevator House
Best Value in the City.
APARTMENTS TO LET—Furnished.

THE DALHOUSIE
40-48 West 59th Street
BETWEEN FIFTH AND SIXTH AVS.,
Facing Central Park; also Southern Exposure.
ONE APARTMENT OF 10 ROOMS AND 2 BATHS, RENTAL $2,500 TO $3,000. APPLY SUPT.

West Side, Above 110th Street.

NEW UNIVERSITY COURT
70 Morningside Drive, Cor. 117th St.
Near Columbia University.
Every convenience known provided; the entrance, with the splash of its fountains, unsurpassed; undesirable tenants excluded; no dogs allowed.
4 Rooms..... $38.00

HAGUE COURT
Near Columbia University,
7 Large Rooms, 2 Toilets, $1,000
Beautifully decorated. Special concessions. Location and view unexcelled. Apply Superintendent, or
W. ALANSON ALEXANDER
503 5th Av. Telephone 2718 Murray Hill.

—WESTBOURNE COURT—
S. E. Cor. 140th St. and Broadway.
Suites of 6, 7 rooms and bath.
RENT $720 to $1,100.
—KENSINGTON COURT—
N. E. Cor. 151st St. and Broadway.
Suites of 6, 7 rooms and bath.
RENT $900 to $1,000.
—AMBASSADOR—
S. E. Cor. 97th St. and Madison Av.
Apartments of 8 and 9 rooms, 2 baths.
RENT $1,000 to $1,500.
—RENAULT COURT—
207 West 110th St., Cathedral Parkway.
7 and 8 rooms and bath.
RENT $1,000 to $1,200.
C. M. SILVERMAN & SON, Owners.
3,432 Broadway.

IMMEDIATE CONCESSIONS
TO THOSE RENTING NOW.
HISPANIA HALL
Delightfully Situated Opposite HISPANIC MUSEUM GROUNDS,
601 West 156th St., N. W. Corner Broadway, at Subway Station.
6 Rooms and Bath, $55.
7 Rooms, 2 Baths, $70 and $75.
(Corner,) 8 Rooms, 2 Baths, $100.
Southerly exposure.
Immediate occupancy on some of above.
Continuous elevator, hall, and telephone service.
Bert G. Faulhaber & Co., Agents
On premises, or Broadway and 156th St.

ANOTHER SACRIFICE
515-527 W. 187th St., Near Broadway.
One of the healthiest spots in New York—175 feet above sea level.
6, 7 and 8 room apartments with bath, telephone, electricity, showers, elevator service, etc.
GOODWIN & GOODWIN
240 Lenox Ave., cor. 133d St.
Phone 6404 Harlem.

APARTMENTS TO LET—Unfurnished. | APARTMENTS TO LET—Unfurnished.

MARK RAFALSKY & COMPANY
527 FIFTH AVENUE, at 44th Street
Telephone 5220 Murray Hill

"The Turrets"
116 Riverside Drive
Southeast Corner 84th St
9 and 10 Rooms and 3 Baths
Moderate Rentals

252 West 85th St
Bet. West End Av. & Broadway
New Building, 5 Rooms and 1 Bath
Rents $1,200—$1,250

525 West End Av
Northwest Corner 85th St
3 Rooms and Bath, with Kitchenette
Rent $900
7 Rooms and 3 Baths
Rent $2,700
10 Rooms and 3 Baths
Rent $4,800

"The Netherlands"
340 West 86th St
8 Rooms and 3 Baths
Rent $2,200

315 West 89th St
Between West End Av. & Riverside Drive
New Building. Immediate Occupancy
3 Rooms, Kitchenette, with Bath
Rent $780
Apartments of 8 Rooms and 3 Baths
Rent $2,500

777 West End Av
"The Strafford," S. W. Cor. 98th St
10 Rooms and 3 Baths
Rent $2,750
8 Rooms and 3 Baths
Rents $2,050 and $2,500

"The Britannia"
527 West 110th St
Between Broadway and Amsterdam Ave
6, 7 and 8 Rooms, 2 Baths
Rents $1,200 to $1,500

Representative on Premises or Apartments Shown by Appointment Can be seen Evenings

43 Fifth Avenue
Northeast Corner 11th St
Apartments of 10 Rooms and 3 Baths
Immediate Possession
Rents $2,000 to $3,500

SUBLET UNFURNISHED
at Greatly Reduced Rental.
AN APARTMENT OF
14 ROOMS—5 BATHROOMS.
BIG, SPACIOUS LIVING ROOMS. DECORATIONS AND APPOINTMENTS OF THE MOST EXCLUSIVE DESIGNS. EVERY ROOM AN OUTSIDE ROOM.
ALWYN COURT
182 WEST 58TH ST.
ONE FURNISHED SUITE TO SUBLET.

West Side, Above 110th Street.

HAMILTON
One of the New and Finest Fireproof Apartments on Riverside Drive.

North Corner 114th St.
8 Rooms, Large Foyer, 3 Baths.
Corner. All Southern and Western Exposure.
6 Rooms, Large Foyer, 2 Baths.
Southern Exposure.
Immediate Occupancy.
SLAWSON & HOBBS, Agents
162 West Seventy-Second St.,
Or Representative on Premises.

Edmund Francis Court
423-431 W. 120th St.
Height of Perfection in High Class Apartment Construction.
NOW READY FOR OCCUPANCY.
Convenient to all lines of transit; adjoining Morningside Park and facing Columbia University Park.
3, 4, 5 and 6 Rooms, with Foyer.
Rents, $50 upward.
Several Furnished Apartments.
Elevator, Telephone, Hall Service.
AGENT ON PREMISES.

WILL SACRIFICE
371 AND 373 WEST 116TH ST.
Near Morningside Park.
Select 7 and 8 room elevator apartments with electric light, telephone, hardwood trim, tiled bathroom, showers, etc. See them before you make a lease.
GOODWIN & GOODWIN
240 Lenox Ave., cor. 123d St.
Phone 6500 Harlem.

4—SUBLET—4 ROOM ELEVATOR
ONLY VACANT APT. IN BUILDING. Large, light rooms, all front, sleeping chambers 12x15. Hardwood throughout. Plenty closets. Near Subway.
ASK SUPT. OF 661 W. 180 St.
Corner Building

GRAMPION
MODERN FAMILY HOTEL,
142 ST. NICHOLAS AV.
One, two and three rooms, private baths, furnished or unfurnished; full service; rents $35 to $65. Superintendent on premises, or
WILCOX & SHELTON,
2,107 7th Av., at 125th St.

West Side, Above 110th Street.

MANHATTAN
LEASING CO.
149 CHURCH ST.
TEL., 6390—BARCLAY.
HIGH CLASS Elevator Apartments
Under the Direct Management AND SUPERVISION OF THE OWNER.
SUPERINTENDENT ON PREMISES AT ALL TIMES.

Buckingham Court
310-320 West 99th St.
Adjoining Riverside Drive
A 5-Room Apartment, very large rooms, $65 per month.

Haven Hall
954 W. 180th St., Cor. Northern Av.
5, 7, 8 rooms and 3 baths and extra shower. Rents $60 to $80.

Convent Garden
APARTMENTS
6 High-Class Houses.
One whole square block.
Convent Av. to St. Nicholas Terrace, 129th to 130th St.
4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 Rooms and 2 Baths
RENTS $36 TO $80.
Highest situation on Washington Heights.

Birch Hall
520-522 West 183d St.,
corner Audubon Av.,
Two blocks north of 181st Subway station.
4, 5, 7 and 8 rooms.
RENTS $32.50 to $75.

2, 3 & 4 Rooms
Kitchens & Kitchenettes
Unfurnished, $42.50 to $72.50.
Furnished, $52.50 to $87.50.
Overlooking Columbia Campus.
Large, Light Rooms.
The Poinciana
434 West 120th St.,
Cor. Amsterdam Av.
Supt. on premises, or
BING & BING, 119 West 40th St.
Tel., 6410—Bryant.

WASHINGTON ARMS
Ft. Washington Ave. S. E. Cor. 173th St.
JUST COMPLETED.
Charming Elevator Apts. All Front Rooms.
Most Beautiful and Exclusive Section IN WASHINGTON HEIGHTS.
4 Rooms & Bath, $40-$45 | 5 Rooms & Bath, $52-$55
6 Corner Rooms $65
KNAP & WASSON CO., Agts., 4349 Broadway.

VALLAMONT
CORNER ST. NICHOLAS AVE. & 119TH.
Exceptional Sunny Apartment.
Large closets, home house, full service; rents $65; one other for $60. Janitor or
WILCOX & SHELTON,
2,107 7th Ave., at 125th St.

APARTMENTS TO LET—Unfurnished.

APARTMENT HOTEL
33 West 51st Street

The most exclusive Location in town.

Suites range from One or More Rooms, each with Bath, to Five Rooms and Four Baths. Each Room has Exceptional Light, Distinctive Finish and Modern Equipment.

Superior service is maintained night and day. Rentals are moderate, and include electric light.

Restaurant a la carte.

Write, call or 'phone 8264 Plaza.

West Side, Above 110th Street.

The Sophomore
21 Claremont Ave.,
Just Above 116th St.

A Very Attractive Suite of 8 Large Outside Rooms, Reception Foyer and Two Baths.

Rent only.....$1,400

Eastern exposure, abundant sunlight; overlooking the campus of Barnard College and Columbia University.

Liberal Concession to a reliable tenant.

Apply to Resident Manager, or PATERNO BROS., Owners, 501 W. 115th St.

Bellaire Apt's.
584 Academy St.

JUST COMPLETED
ONLY A FEW
Choice Apartments left in these
Twelve Houses

6 Rooms and Bath.....$26-$30
6 Rooms and Bath.....$33-$36

Extraordinarily large rooms and most modern and sanitary finish; spacious closets, private telephone, &c.

Take Broadway Subway to Dyckman St. Station and walk one block west and one block north.

RENTING AGENT ON PREMISES, OR Tel. 8000 Audubon.

552 North of 127th St.

RIVERSIDE DRIVE
THE MADRID
4 & 6 Rooms, 2 Baths, $45-$55-$65.
High-Class Elevator Apartment House. Abundance of air and light; close to Subway and surface cars.

Bachelor Apartments.
Harlem Library Apartments, 32 W. 123d St. Delightfully located in Harlem's choicest residential section; one or two rooms; only $15 to $20. Wilcox & Shelton, 2,107 7th Av. (125th St.)

THE BERMUDA 608-10 WEST 150TH ST., near Riverside Drive.
Elevator; every modern improvement; 6, 7 rooms and bath; $50 to $60.
Apply on premises or SHAW & CO., 1 West 125th St.

MELRAH HALL
608-610 West 139th Street.
Select modern elevator apartment, FOUR TO SIX ROOMS. $37.50 to $65.

West Side, Above 110th Street.

Rockfall
APARTMENTS,
Broadway, cor. 111th St.

7—8—9 Rooms

2 to 3 Baths

CHARLES E. HAMES, Resident Manager.

ELMSFORD
NEW ELEVATOR APARTMENTS
The Whole Square Block,
Broadway to Wadsworth Av., 181st to 182d St.

Short Block from 181st Subway Station
Lowest Rentals for Choicest Apartments on Washington Heights.

4 Rooms and Bath, $32-$36.
5 Rooms and Bath, $40-$45.
6 Rooms and Bath, $45-$55.

See Resident Agent, at Renting Office, 1,280 B'way, cor. 181st St. Tel. 4040 Audubon.

600 W. 113th St.
Southwest Corner of Broadway.

THE ALLERTON—A twelve-story fireproof building of the highest type, combining features of unusual attractiveness with service that appeals to the discriminating tenant.

Only Two Suites for Lease:—
6 Rooms and 2 Baths.....$1,300
7 Rooms and 2 Baths.....1,600

Inquire of Supt., or the Agents, GOODALE, PERRY & DWIGHT, INC., Tel. River. 975. 2,705 Broadway, (103d.)

BRONX.

3-4 Room Elevator Apartments — NEW BUILDINGS at walk-up prices, residential section, 1 block to 180th Crosstown and Jerome Av. cars. 179th St. & Morris Av.

BROOKLYN.

10 MINUTES TO WALL STREET
New Eight-Story Fireproof Buildings

THE GRAYDON, 68 to 74 Montague St. — THE WOODHULL, 62 to 66 Pierrepont St.

4, 5, 6 rooms and bath, with ample closet space; every known modern improvement; liberal house attendance. In the centre of the choice Columbia Heights section, overlooking New York Harbor, three blocks to subway entrance. Rents $40 to $100 per month. Can be seen by applying on premises or to REALTY ASSOCIATES, 162 Remsen Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

New Buildings on Brooklyn Heights
2 Blocks from Borough Hall Sub. Sta.

9 Rooms and 3 Baths
The Montana
11 Schermerhorn St., Brooklyn.
Two Apartments on a floor. All rooms exceptionally large.
Rental $1800

The Colonial
39 Livingston St., Brooklyn.
Exceptionally large living rooms and completely equipped kitchens.
4 Rooms $90.00
Apply to Superintendent on Premises.
BING & BING, 119 West 40th St. Tel. 6,410—Bryant.

Stop! Look! Read!
Brand New Apartments

45-47 McDonough St., nr. Tompkins; Fulton St. "L" sta.; also 5 minutes from L. I. R. R. sta.; 4 and 5 room suites, with the most up-to-date improvements. They are renting quickly. Better select yours now. Rents only $32.50 upward. Renting agent premises all times.

BULKLEY & HORTON CO.
585 Nostrand Av., nr. Dean St.

Paterno Bros.
BUILDERS AND GENERAL CONTRACTORS
New York

The New York Times:

After the season's campaign of advertising in your estimable paper, we wish to express our great satisfaction over the results received from same and will further state that the results were far in excess of our expectations and we extend to "The Times" our hearty congratulations as a successful advertising medium and cheerfully recommend your columns to the advertising public.

Respectfully yours,

PATERNO BROS.

RPW/EOP

OFFICE, 601 WEST 115th STREET

FOR SALE.

SUITS, OVERCOATS, ETC., $12.
"1 DOWN" "1 WEEKLY
HELP'S CLOTHES ON CREDIT
READY MADE. MADE TO ORDER.
HAMILTON-MARTIN CO., Tailors
1265 BROADWAY, Enter 5 Cortlandt St.

Rare jewels of value have been received from a few hours by an advertisement in the Lost Column of The New York Times. Telephone your request.—adv.t.

FOR SALE.

VICTORS VICTROLAS
On Easiest Terms.
$1 Down; $1 Weekly
Complete Stock of Records.
Open Evenings.
Write, call, or phone
632 Columbus.
A. M. MAYER,
1,953 Broadway, near 67th

MOTOR CYCLES USED IN MODERN WARFARE

Daring Riders as Scouts, Dispatch Bearers, and in Hospital Service.

IRISHMEN ARMED WITH GUNS

Germany Mounts Its Aides de Camp and Messengers on These Fast-Moving Machines.

American Army officers here and at headquarters in Washington are studying the use of the motor cycle in modern warfare. Many of them are ardent advocates of the extension of that service in our army work, confident that the operations of the thoroughly drilled motor cyclists of European armies will show that it is destined to be one of the most important of the auxiliaries of the army. Already the motor cycle, both in its original form as a means of rapid locomotion for a single dispatch rider and in the later development, with the side seat or side car attachment as a mobile way of carrying observation officers about a field of operations more quickly than on horseback, have been tested here incidentally.

Experimental use has been made of the machines in the regular service as well as in the National Guard of several of the States. A serious study of the possibilities of the service has not yet been made as it has been abroad. Such men in the service as are a little ahead of the sometimes dilatory movements of our military authorities have speculated already on the possibilities of the service, and are waiting with interest detailed statements of the conduct of the campaign in Europe in order to see what part the machines have played and how far expectations as to their utility have been realized.

Private letters from Europe tell particularly of the raising of a volunteer force of motor cyclists in Great Britain, and the alacrity with which young men who are adepts with the machine came forward offering their services to the military officers. Within forty-eight hours of the call for volunteers an excess of 2,200 riders above the number required offered their services and enlisted "for one year, or until the end of the war." This in spite of the fact that the remuneration offered for the service was but 35 shillings ($7) a week with a gratuity of £10 paid immediately on acceptance of the volunteer for his machine and a promise of £5 additional "on discharge for any other reason than misconduct," and a further allowance of 15 shillings "for overalls, if in serviceable condition." The number of men and machines sent over with the first expeditionary force is not made public, details being suppressed at the request of the War Office, as are those of all other branches of the service.

It is known, however, that there was sent out with the first expeditionary army a company of Irish motor cycle riders, as one of these has written to friends here that he was to leave at once on such service. This letter of farewell was dated Aug. 9. A peculiar fact in connection with the corps of riders to which he was attached is that the company was organized for service in the civil war that seemed to threaten Ireland, and for service against the Ulster men. Yet every one of its members volunteered for service against Germany.

"We are all armed with repeating rifles of the carbine type," writes this young man, "and all are efficient as sharpshooters. Our specialty will be the potting of officers at fairly long range, and from cover, as well as scouting work. We have this nothing business down pretty fine, as we have been practicing at dummies from unknown ranges for some time, and know the efficiency of our guns to a dot."

A Broadway merchant who has two nephews in the German motor cycle corps with the army of Duke Albrecht of Württemburg saw the corps at work at the army manoeuvres last Spring. His brother, a Captain of cavalry detailed to the motor cycle corps, told him the Germans expected to find these rapidly moving men a most efficient aid in case of war, which at that time was not seriously contemplated.

According to the plans worked out in Germany, the motor cyclists were to be used as messengers between an advancing or scouting party and the officers at the army base, much of which has been done in the past by the use of homing pigeons, when communication by telegraph or telephones was not possible, or other means of signaling between the front and the base available. The speed and certainty with which men mounted on capable machines move over mountain trails and the good military roads make them more dependable than the birds ever have been.

Important messages are transmitted in triplicate by three members of the corps, on the theory that at least one of the riders will be able to get from the front to the base uninjured. The plan was tried out in the manoeuvres and worked out satisfactorily even in districts where traps had been laid to catch the cyclists; one of the trio always managed to get through to headquarters without capture.

Staff aids de camp have been taught the use of the motor cycle in all the armies of Europe, so that they may be utilized as rapid message carriers from brigade, division, or corps headquarters to the officers in the field directing the movements of the men. It has been found that this means of communication is both speedier and safer than sending the aids mounted on horses, as the officers carrying the orders are less conspicuous on a motor cycle; they ride closer to the earth, and are therefore less in danger of being potted than when trusting to horses as carriers. The officers of the Italian Army in particular worked out by practical tests this "element of safety" idea in circumstances where other methods of communication were assumed not to be available.

In the advance of the German Army through Belgium both Germans and Belgians used the motor cyclist largely in scouting work. Aeroplanes, used as the eyes of both the invaders and defenders, have located scouting parties and the advance armies, and then through the services of motor cyclists have been able to communicate swiftly and certainly with the bodies of cavalry whose duty it has been to hew the way for the safer movement of the infantry masses and the supporting artillery. The French and English have used their motor cycle corps for the same purpose. Whether Austria and Russia are now using these scouts is not definitely known among military men in this country, no details of army operations being at hand as yet.

With the side cars attached to these rapidly moving machines they were used in the transfer of surgeons from reserve corps to the front, where the services of the doctors were needed to attend the wounded. These side-car machines are also being used to move wounded from the field to the hospitals in the rear, doing the work more humanely and rapidly than it could be done by stretcher bearers or ambulances, thus adding materially to the effectiveness of the hospital train and relieving fighting men of that duty. Nurses have been rushed in the side-seat cycles from one point to another when motor cars intended for their transportation were in use elsewhere. Supplies were also carried in the carriers attached to these high-powered machines.

As the motor cyclist follows the airship fleet and precedes the cavalry column while an army is in motion his work is dangerous in the extreme. Only men who are absolutely devoid of fear, reckless and yet cool-headed, able to think and act quickly in emergencies are used in the dispatch-bearing and scouting end of the service. A soldier looking for excitement is pretty certain to get all he wants in this arm of a service that has been developed almost entirely in the last two years.

British Army officers have used the motor cycle corps with the best of results in the stringing of field telegraph and telephone wires and rapid installation of this means of communication on the field in army manoeuvres. They took to France men trained especially in this branch of the service, to be used in place of the older methods where bulky wagons were used to transport telegraph and telephone equipment.

American manufacturers have comparatively little interest in the use of the machine in war, but one of them having extensive works abroad, that one in England. But they have shipped many machines for Government use to Japan, where it is believed there is an efficient motor cycle corps attached to the army, as the machines have been of the 7-9 horse power type, the most powerful made. It is hardly probable that these are intended for rural mail delivery service.

BRITISH FACTORIES BUSY.

Orders for Manufactures Which Formerly Went to Germany Now Placed at Home.

The war was quick to stimulate the internal trade of England at the expense of Germany, according to a report of the Department of Commerce from United States Consul Albert Halstead, writing from Birmingham, England.

It had been customary prior to the war with Germany, Mr. Halstead says, for large quantities of electrical apparatus and appliances for use in Great Britain to be purchased not only in the completed form, but in parts from Germany. This has been a cause for much complaint by manufacturers of such apparatus in the United Kingdom. Shortly before the war several large contracts were made, so Mr. Halstead is informed, with German factories for installation in Great Britain. As these appliances are required without delay, Mr. Halstead says that it is expected that these contracts will now be given to British manufacturers.

"It is interesting to remember," observes Mr. Halstead, "that two of the largest factories for making electric generating plants, &c., in the United Kingdom are branches of American companies. It is calculated that the war will lead to the placing, even after it is ended, of a very large proportion of such contracts as previously went to Germany and Austria with manufacturers in Great Britain, thus resulting in a permanent business for the British makers.

"Consideration is being given to the effect of the war upon the iron and steel trades. In the last week of July the iron and steel prices at the Birmingham Exchange were in a state of collapse. A complete change has occurred with all prices advanced and trade buoyant. Customers who had refused to buy at the lowest prices found an advance of 5s. ($1.21), 10s. ($2.43), and 20s. ($4.86) per ton made in various kinds of iron and steel, and for galvanized iron the prices have advanced £2 ($9.73) per ton, because of the rapid advance in the price of spelter, which, on Aug. 6, had reached 30s. ($7.30) per ton, and on Aug. 14 had advanced to 35s. ($8.52) and going even higher later. Through deliveries of spelter at any price have been found most difficult to obtain. Those who had been accustomed to use only foreign steel and iron products can get no supplies and naturally have to pay heavily for the British product.

"The opinion seems to prevail," continues Mr. Halstead, "that these prices may go higher, certainly at least until shipments from the United States can be received.

"The restriction of the supply of spelter is at present serious, but it is thought possible that that which would ordinarily go to Germany will be diverted to the United Kingdom and thus lessen the stringency of the market. At the same time it should be remembered that spelter enters into the composition of several alloys, of which brass is chief—the latter is required largely for war purposes. Stocks are extremely meager, and the production of spelter by British refiners is insufficient to meet the demand. This has caused famine prices for spelter, which reached at one time £50 ($243) per long ton, and little was obtainable at that price. Sellers frequently required an assurance that the metal was required for urgent Government work, feeling bound themselves to hold all they can for use in connection with cartridge-metal production. The Government has already commandeered some of the supplies in Birmingham.

"Lead is largely in demand, and with a short supply the prices are put up. It is expected that this will result in an increased output, but the absence of Mexico from the market is an important feature.

"Wire nails, the imports of which are said to have been about 4,000 long tons per month from Germany, are quite scarce, and English makers are reported to be unable to obtain further orders at present."

FLOWER MARKET IN WAR.

We Import from All Europe, but Substitutes Can Be Found, Max Schling Says.

Though great numbers of flowers and plants are imported to this country from the parts of Europe now at war, Max Schling, the florist, says that the United States will not suffer from the deprivation, but will eventually be greatly benefited by being forced to do more growing at home.

Bulbs from Holland are practically the only things we could not raise satisfactorily here, says Mr. Schling, and Holland, losing other customers, will make good bargains with us. The price of the bridal bouquet may go up, for the lily of the valley pip comes from Germany.

"The war, notwithstanding the effect it will have upon different lines of business depending upon importation and its cost to Europe in human lives, will be a wholesome experience for this country," says Mr. Schling. "We are now sending to Europe large amounts of money for herbaceous plants, bubs, azaleas, roses, bay trees, palms, new hollanders, aroids, and other tropical plants which might be kept in this country.

"The people of the United States, with their increasing refinement of taste and constantly increasing demand for variety, can be perfectly well satisfied with the products of our own growers. The things that we have been getting from Europe can be grown at home. The flower growers of America, coming from other countries to become citizens here, have not made the attempt to grow the things which they could import on account of the high cost of labor on this side of the water. Another reason was the difficulty in getting trained help, but all this will change. When we cannot buy what the public demands we will produce it. Our brother florists in the Southern countries will grow anything that we cannot.

"The things we import from Europe are pretty well divided between the different countries. We get from England rhododendron and many palms. Bay trees, aucuba, boxwood, bulbous stock, and hardy roots we get chiefly from Holland, with a few from other countries. Belgium, France, and Germany supply roses, young conifers, and palms. The bulk of the palms come from Germany, with the greater number of rhododendrons and azaleas. Germany supplies most of our high-grade seeds, the immortelles, and all other kinds of prepared and artificial flowers on which the small florist depends. Germany and Austria supply the bulk of our flower baskets, jardinieres, and fancy flower vases.

"There is not much chance that Holland will become entangled in the war, and we shall have the benefit of tremendously low prices, Holland's other customers in France, Germany, England, Russia, and different European countries not being able to take any of her goods. The only bulbous plant that will be really very high in price this season will be the lily of the valley. The bulk of the lily of the valley pips we get from Germany. There may be a shortage for the first year on azaleas, camellias, and dormant roses, as well as on bay trees and boxwood, or the latter may be expensive this year.

"Growing decorative plants, such as are used in window boxes and the big tubs at the entrances to hotels and public buildings, the lauras serassus and aecuba, will be short this year, but all of those things we can grow and produce ourselves. The scientific man who knows his business will be able to supply substitutes, and if the demand continues for the other plants we can grow them and have a supply for our own market before Europe is ready to go to work again.

Mr. Schling introduced in New York the use of many of the simple flowers, pansies, bovardia, primroses, lia, daisies, and other small blossoms for the decorative work, table decorations, and corsage bouquets, &c., for which he has taken many prizes. He is himself a Viennese, who took up work with flowers and plants in place of painting, for which he originally studied.

AUTO SCOUT SCOURS ROADS AT DAWN

M. Cloquet, Transformed, Is Simply the Man Behind the Mitrailleuse.

HE REVELS IN DANGER

A Run for It at 60 Miles an Hour When Germans Blocked Retreat.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—The London Daily Chronicle's correspondent at Boulogne sends this description of auto scouting work:

"In private life he is M. Cloquet, and he is well known in London business circles—he is also well liked; in war times, however, he is simply Cloquet the Belgian—the man behind the mitrailleuse—the man with the beautiful, speedy, submarine-like motor car—the car that is gray like the morning mist—which is appropriate, for Cloquet's work is the work of the early bird—that of catching the worm.

"Cloquet is as fond of catching worms as the most inveterate angler. As soon as the dawn arrives he starts out with three French soldiers—in his silent, speedy car; he starts out from—well, shall I say Censorville? He scours the roads for miles around.

"Some mornings he is only out for about an hour before he returns with his bag—yesterday it was ten, six were dead, four were sullenly satisfied, ravenously hungry, and minus ammunition.

"You see these two trainloads of ammunition did not arrive—but there is a big hole in the railway track where the French shells hit them.

"Cloquet speaks perfect English, which is a veritable godsend to me with my very imperfect French, and he tells me with his good-humored smile, that it is 'good sport'; yet, with a modest shrug of his shoulders: 'I have been very, very lucky.'

"He has had three drivers killed in the car with him on these early morning exploits, yet he has every faith in his own good luck. 'Look, Monsieur,' and he points to a couple of silvery streaks showing on his mitrailleuse, 'this good gun has saved me once or twice—it is just luck!'

"These Belgians are all alike—a healthy, happy looking lot, and as they seem to revel in the most dangerous work, they are—at least, with the French division I have lately been in touch with—given the job of motor car scouting, the most dangerous job of all in the particular district of which I write, for the woods are full of Germans.

"One day last week our hero ventured a little further than usual along a road with clumps of trees dotted here and there on either side some two hundred yards or so away from the highway, and then he saw that he was trapped.

"About a hundred Germans issued from the trees a few seconds after the car passed. Nothing daunted, he went along a little further into the enemy's country, and, turning the car, told his driver to let her 'all out' back again.

"'It was our only chance,' said he, with his smile. So, with the mitrailleuse working for all it was worth, they tore through the astonished Germans at about sixty miles an hour back into the safety zone.

"No one was hurt on the car, but several figures in khaki green uniforms lay prone on the road behind them. Cloquet does not know whether they were knocked out by the mitrailleuse or the motor car. 'Perhaps both,' he said.

"Cloquet found the other day hidden in a hole in the ground many hundreds of German shells. Several finds of a like nature have been made in the district, all evidence of the hurried retreat of the Fatherland soldiers.

"A man in an aeroplane had seen the Germans digging a big hole, so he came back and told headquarters, and headquarters told Cloquet to go out and find what was in the hole, and he did so, incidentally bagging three stragglers in a wood close by.

"Cloquet does not believe in the straggler theory. He insists that these so-called stragglers are in reality scouts who are deliberately left behind by the German army in all evacuated districts, and that they are all in touch with each other and with the main army.

"If such is the case, then their lot is not a very happy one, for in the majority of cases, when captured, these men are nearly dead from want of food, and seldom have more than a few rounds of ammunition among them.

"Cloquet came out of the castle—there is a castle in Censorville—laughing heartily. 'Msieu,' said he, 'here is a large joke. Come with me.'

"We went back into the castle and found one of the prisoners contentedly munching away at a long French roll.

"'Here,' said Cloquet to the German, 'here is a man who has been in London last week. He has no German, but you have the English—tell him.'

"'Do you speak English?' I asked. He nodded—still munching.

"'Yes, I was a waiter in London, at the Gambrinus. It is all broken now, isn't it? And your Reichstag—your Houses of Parliament—they are burnt—no?'

"'Look here, my good chap, don't you believe it! London is just the same as when you left it. All the shops are open, the House of Parliament is still standing, and I had lunch at the Gambrinus a week ago.'

"All these German prisoners are under the impression that England is in the hands of the Fatherland, and that the Kaiser is conducting operations from London—that is, of course, when he is not personally superintending at the front, with Paris as a base."

RESORTS. RESORTS.

Can One of Moderate Means Take a Winter Southern Trip? YES.

Six trains daily to Southern cities and resorts.

THE attractiveness of the Southern Winter resorts does not necessarily mean extravagance. The enjoyment of the various winter colonies is within the reach of those who want their Winter vacation to represent a modest outlay. Comfortable, modern accommodations at cottage and inn may be had at rates in keeping with the economical purse, while the out-of-door sports and recreations are available at comparatively low charges.

Write or 'phone for information and for our illustrated literature.

We will be glad to help you figure on approximate cost of a Winter trip to such resorts as Asheville in the Land of the Sky, Augusta, Aiken, Columbia, Charleston, Summerville and the Gulf resorts New Orleans, Mobile, Pass Christian, Biloxi and Gulf Port, or, if you prefer, points on the Florida Peninsula. Round trip tourist tickets honored via Asheville without additional charge.

Alex. S. Thweatt, Eastern Passenger Agent, 264 Fifth Avenue (cor. 29th Street) New York City. Telephone 2214 Madison Square.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY
Premier Carrier of the South

THE AMERICAN NAUHEIM
The Pioneer American "Cure" for the Treatment of Heart Disease

Twenty-five years' experience in giving the Nauheim Baths with a Natural Iodo-Bromo Brine

The Glen Springs
A Mineral Springs Health Resort and Hotel
(OPEN ALL THE YEAR.)
The Appointments, Service and Cuisine are the Best.

Complete Hydrotherapeutic and Electrical Equipment. For the treatment of heart disease, rheumatism, gout, diabetes, obesity, neuralgia, digestive disorders, anemia, neurasthenia, diseases of the nervous system, liver and kidneys, we offer advantages unsurpassed in this country or Europe. For descriptive booklet address

WM. E. LEFFINGWELL, President, Watkins, N. Y., on Seneca Lake.

NEW YORK—Long Island.

15 Minutes from Herald Square.

FOREST HILLS INN
New Fireproof Hotel
Attractive, convenient; Tennis Courts; Squash Court, Pool and Billiard Room.
Moderate Rates.
Take Long Island (Electric) R. R. at Pennsylvania Station; 15 minutes to Forest Hills, L. I.
FOREST HILLS INN, Forest Hills, L. I.
For further information or booklet, inquire on property or at New York Office, 47 West 34th St., Room 716.

Most Attractive Country Hotel Adjacent to New York. Open All Year

Garden City Hotel
GARDEN CITY, L. I.
Special Winter Rates
One of the Most Exclusive Country Hotels in America. A combination of country life and metropolitan hotel luxury seldom found. Every outdoor and indoor amusement. Excellent schools. 18 miles from New York. Frequent electric train service, 35 minutes. Write for illustrated Booklet and rates.
J. J. LANNIN CO., Props.

PROMPT DELIVERY FREE.
Want advertisements for The New York Times received at Altman's District Messenger offices in New York City & office rates.—Adv.

SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY
The Progressive Railway of the South. Solid steel trains via shortest route to famous FLORIDA RESORTS
thru Washington, Richmond and the noted
CAROLINA RESORTS
Southern Pines, Pinehurst, Camden, Columbia, and via Tampa to St. Petersburg, Belleair, Clearwater, Tarpon Springs, Bradentown, Sarasota and Manatee, and via Jacksonville to all Florida East Coast Resorts.
Florida Coach Excursions
Each Monday and Friday $37.50 New York to Jacksonville and return.
Direct through service to Atlanta, Birmingham & Memphis
Resort Booklets and schedules at 1,184 Broadway, New York.
W. E. Conklin, Gen. Eastern Passenger Agt.

NEW YORK—Westchester County.

Amid the Hills and Woods of Beautiful Westchester.

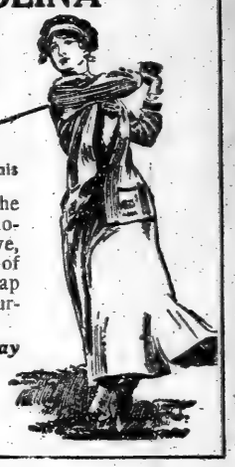
HOTEL GRAMATAN
Lawrence Park, Bronxville, N. Y.

OPEN ALL THE YEAR.
The Fall in Westchester is the most delightful season of the year. The Gramatan is within easy commuting distance for the New York business man; 28 minutes from Grand Central. Golf, Tennis, and all outdoor sports. Send for new illustrated booklet and rates. HOTEL GRAMATAN, Inc.

THE MOUNTAIN HOUSE
VALHALLA, WESTCHESTER CO., N. Y.
9th season; 45 min. to 42d St., on Harlem R. R.; 70 acres; park and lawns; 500 ft. elevation; 10 min. from station; own dairy and vegetable garden; rates $5 and up. Booklet.

RESORTS. RESORTS.

Pinehurst
NORTH CAROLINA
The Center of Winter Out of Door Life in the Middle South



THE CAROLINA
Opens Nov. 20th

But guests are accommodated previous to this date.

The finest GOLF COURSES in the South, 1,200 miles of connecting automobile roads; 40,000 acre Shooting Preserve, with good guides and dogs, fine livery of Saddle Horses, Fox Hunting, Tennis, Trap Shooting, Model Dairy. Frequent Tournaments in All Sports.

Pullman Service Daily and Sunday from New York.

No Consumptives Received at Pinehurst.
FULL INFORMATION ON REQUEST
GENERAL OFFICE, Pinehurst, N. C.
LEONARD TUFTS, Boston, Mass.

SPEND ELECTION DAY AT THE Gedney Farm Hotel
WHITE PLAINS, NEW YORK
SPECIAL ELECTION DAY LUNCHEON AND DINNER
SERVED IN THE SHIP GRILL.

LUNCHEON $1.50 DINNER $2.00

COMPLETE ELECTION RETURNS will be received, beginning at 6 o'clock, over a direct wire from New York. Dancing at 9 P. M.

For table reservations, Telephone White Plains 2300.

Hotel's Motor bus will meet New York Central, Harlem division, express trains at White Plains Station.

Under the personal direction of
J. A. Sherrard, Proprietor.

NEW YORK.

The Jackson Health Resort
Dansville, New York

The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad

If you are in ill health and wish to get well, or tired out and must rest,

Get Ready to Go in October and November to this world-renowned institution, which, for over fifty years, has led the van. Superb location.

Fireproof Building

Doctors Jackson and Gregory will welcome old friends and new comers.

Don't Fail to Write for Literature

NEW JERSEY.

OPEN ALL YEAR
VAN COURT INN
For Transient & Permanent Guests. ACCOMMODATIONS FOR MOTORISTS. New fireproof Addition—Private Baths—Steam Heat—Electricity—Garage—Tennis Courts—House Entertainments. All Supplies from Own Farm.
ROSELLE, N. J., on C. R. R. of N. J. (100 trains daily.) 40 min. from Broadway—Commutation $6.25. L. D. Phone.

HOTEL ALVORD
EAST ORANGE, N. J.
Four minutes' walk from Brick Church Station. The most popular and desirable commuters' home out of New York.
A modern, homelike hotel, with enviable reputation for its cleanliness and exceptionally good table. All eastside, sunny rooms, with private baths. Telephone in every room. Afternoon teas. Dancing. Reasonable terms.
F. B. ALVORD, Owner & Prop't. WM. M. GRIGSON, Manager.

Hotel Montclair
Montclair, N. J.
Open Throughout Year. Exclusive Clientele. Golf. Splendid Orchestra. Dancing. English Grill.
Frederick C. Hall, Lessee.

NEW HOTEL CLINTON
EAST ORANGE, N. J.
A COMPLETE home hotel; charming location; rooms, single and en suite; private baths; telephones; near Brick Church Station. 30 minutes to Broadway; illustrated booklet.
EDWARD M. SAMMIS—

Beechwood Villa Open Oct. 1; first-class, large sun porch. Booklet. M. L. BIOREN, Manager, Est. of Mrs. M. A. Paul. 'Phone connection.

PENNSYLVANIA.

NEW SPRUCE CABIN INN.—Greatly enlarged. Finest location in Pocono Mts. Rooms en suite with bath. Electric light, steam heat, telephone in rooms, sun parlor, music, dancing; saddle horses, golf, tennis, bowling, garage. Illustrated booklet. Lackawanna R. R. to Cresco Station.
W. J. & M. D. PRICE, Canadensis, Pa.

MOUNT PLEASANT HOUSE
Mount Pocono, Penna.
Open all year. Steam heat; private baths. Table and service excellent.
W. A. & H. M. LEECH.

CALIFORNIA

HOTEL GREEN
FIREPROOF. ELEVATION, 1,800 FEET.
The de luxe Hotel of Southern California.
D. B. PLUMER, GENERAL MANAGER.
B. F. CUSHING, Asst. Manager.
Pasadena—California
"Pass into Eden"—Paradise Regained.
"The Land of Sunshine and Flowers."
Finest Winter Climate in the World.
Winter rendezvous for America's most representative families. 300 miles of boulevards for motoring. Four splendid golf courses. SOCIAL DIVERSIONS. NOTED ORCHESTRA. POLO. TENNIS. ALL SPORTS. WATER.
Frank P. Keating, N. Y. Representative. 389 5th Av., (34th St.) Phone Murray Hill 3954

NEW JERSEY—Lakewood.

Enjoy Autumn in the Pines
Laurel House
LAKEWOOD
NOW OPEN.
Providing the acme of comfort with most attractive surroundings. Thorough appointments and service. Annual Fall Golf Tournament, November 5, 6, 7. Golf, Tennis, Riding, Driving, etc. Detailed information and terms for the Autumn Season may be obtained by addressing
A. J. MURPHY, Manager.
C. V. MURPHY, Asst. Manager.

Laurel-in-the-Pines
Lakewood, N. J.
A highly attractive and healthful resort for Fall and Winter sojourn.
An abundance of lake-side walks and drives.
Private tennis courts and putting greens. 18-hole golf course.
Daily orchestral concerts.
NOW OPEN.
FRANK F. SHUTE, Mgr.

BARTLETT INN
HIGH CLASS AMERICAN PLAN HOTEL, MODERATE PRICES.
WRITE FOR BOOKLET. LAKEWOOD, N. J.

MANHATTAN HOTEL
Up to date in every particular. Booklet. Phone 135. Chas. Hecht, Prop.

FLORENCE-IN-THE-PINES,
Lakewood, N. J. Private baths. Hot and cold running water in every room. I. WOEBER, Prop.

NEW JERSEY—Atlantic City.

ROYAL PALACE HOTEL-COTTAGES
on the Beach Atlantic City.
OPEN ALL THE YEAR. CAPACITY 600.
NEW ARBOR DAN SANT.
A Delightful Place to spend the Fall and Winter Months.

ALAMAC HOTEL
Ocean front, in the heart of Atlantic City. Absolutely fireproof. American and European Plans. Hot and cold sea water baths. Capacity 400. "Latz-keller"; grill, orchestra; dancing; garage. MACK, LATZ & CO.
The only hotel having its own ocean pier for free use of guests.

HOTEL RUDOLF
On the ocean front. Sea and fresh water baths; running water in rooms. Orchestra.

THE WILTSHIRE Virginia Av. and Beach. OCEAN VIEW. Greatly improved. Cap. 350. Private baths, running water in rooms, elevator, &c. Special $12.50 up weekly; $2.50 up daily. Open all year. Booklet. SAMUEL ELLIS.

CLARENDON HOTEL Virginia Av., Near Beach. Special Fall and Winter Rates. Private baths. Rooms en suite with running water. Booklet. Careful management. Monroe Hotchkiss.

Marlborough-Blenheim
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
JOSIAH WHITE & SONS COMPANY.

WESTMONT HOTEL Rhode Island Ave. & Beach. Most attractive all-year hotel. Elevator; private baths. Adjoining swimming pool and gymnasium. $2.50 up daily; $12.50 up weekly. Booklet. Frederick Klein, Jr.

VIRGINIA.

"The Delights of Getting Well"
You can combine the enjoyments of a magnificent resort hotel with ALL the TREATMENTS given at Aix, Vichy, Karlsbad, Nauheim, or Harrogate at HOTEL CHAMBERLIN

Interesting booklets, describing cases "cured" by Chamberlin Methods, sent on request.
Address GEO. F. ADAMS, Mgr., Fortress Monroe, Va.

FOREIGN HOTELS AND RESORTS.

PARIS,
Hotel Plaza-Athenee.
E. Armbruster, Managing Director.

CURRENT NEWS AND NOTES OF THE AUTOMOBILE WORLD

BEST ROUTES TO HARVARD STADIUM

Automobile Club Outlines Run to Princeton and Brown Games with Crimson.

SEVERAL GOOD ALTERNATES

Boston Post Road Way Best, but One Can Go by Connecticut Shore or Hartford.

The Harvard University football team plays all of its games at Cambridge, excepting that with Yale, which is played in New Haven on Nov. 21. The contests that excite the greatest interest are with Princeton on Nov. 7 and with Brown on Nov. 14. The Automobile Club of America's Pathfinder Car No. 1 has lately investigated the routes from New York to Cambridge and found road conditions excellent.

There are several good routes, but that over the Boston Post Road through New Haven, Hartford, Springfield, and Worcester, taking into consideration all things that affect the motorist, is the one to be preferred; the distance from New York to Cambridge on this route is a little over 230 miles, and the detailed directions are given below.

As an alternate to this route to Cambridge there is the very satisfactory Connecticut Shore route from New Haven by way of Guilford, Old Saybrook, Lyme, New London, Groton, Mystic, Westerly, Charlestown, Narragansett Pier, Wickford, Providence, Wrentham, Walpole, Dedham, and Boston to Cambridge. The distance from New York, following this route, is 252 miles.

There is also another route which may be followed from New York, which runs through a beautiful section of Connecticut. This goes by way of Briarcliff, Brewster, Danbury, and Newtown to Waterbury, then over Southington Mountain and through Plainville and Farmington to Hartford. Directions to Cambridge follow:

From the clubhouse on Fifty-fourth Street go north on Broadway and bear right around Columbus Circle, then follow straight on Central Park West to 110th Street, and one block turn right and take the first turn left into Seventh Avenue 3.0. Turn right into 145th Street 4.7, then cross the bridge over Harlem River into East 149th Street. Go up hill and turn left into Mott Avenue 5.3, bear left 5.6; at a monument go straight on the Grand Concourse 6.0, then turn right into Fordham Road 8.8. Go over the railroad and under the "L" at Fordham Station 9.1.

Now follow Pelham Avenue, pass the New York Zoological Park, and straight on Pelham Parkway. Go over the railroad 12.2 and turn left 13.0, cross Bartow Bridge 13.5 and take a right fork 14.3. Bear left 17.5, turn left into Echo Avenue 17.6, then turn right into Main Street in New Rochelle 18.0.

Now follow the Boston Post Road through Larchmont 19.6 and Mamaroneck 21.4. Then cross a bridge and right fork 21.9; again right fork 23.9. Also at the flagpole take a right fork in Rye 25.0. Go over a railroad 25.9 and under a railroad 26.6. At the end of the road turn left into Main Street 26.7, then bear right pass the square in Port Chester 26.9. Still following Main Street go under the railroad 27.2, then bear right and cross Byram Bridge into Connecticut 27.8. Follow the main road, pass the water trough in Greenwich 29.9, and, at a monument right fork with trolley 30.1. Go down hill and cross a bridge at Mianus 32.1. Left fork 34.2, turn right into Main Street 34.7, at once cross a bridge and continue straight on pass the City Hall in Stamford 34.9.

At a park left fork 35.4, then bear right leaving trolley 35.6 and go under the railroad 35.9. Cross a bridge 36.9, change through Noroton 38.1. Straight on, under the railroad at Darien 39.5. Bear right 42.9 and at a water trough bear left 43.0, then, at the church bear right into Wall Street 43.5 through Norwalk 43.7.

Go up hill, at the green take the left fork with trolley 44.0, then at a church turn right with the trolley 44.2. Go over a hill, cross a bridge over the Saugatuck River 47.0, go through Westport 47.1. Cross a railroad 50.7, then use caution and bear right under the railroad. At Fairfield turn left in Southport 51.3, bear right 51.6, cross a bridge 51.9, bear right 52.5, and at a library bear right with the trolley in Fairfield 52.9. Bear left into Fairfield Avenue 53.0, cross a bridge 54.4, and go under the railroad 55.8; then right fork into State Street and at a bank turn left into Main Street into Bridgeport 57.7. Go two blocks, turn right into Wall Street and at once go under the railroad; cross drawbridges 58.0 and 58.4.

Take the next left fork into Connecticut Avenue 58.5, follow the trolley on Stratford Avenue 59.7, turn left with trolley into Main Street 61.1, and at a water trough turn right with the trolley tracks in Stratford 61.4. Go across a bridge 62.6, and at Baird's Corners go straight on and leave the trolley tracks 63.2. Pass the green in Milford 65.6, and at the Public Library turn left with the trolley 65.9. Go under the railroad and at the Town Hall take the right fork into River Street 66.1, cross a bridge and go up a hill, then take the left fork 66.5, again take the left fork go down hill, and cross a bridge 73.8.

At a cemetery take the extreme left road, Davenport Avenue, 74.0. Bear right 74.8, turn right into Oak Street 74.9, and at once turn left into Broad Street. Turn right into George Street 75.0, and at once turn left into College Street, which follow to Chapel Street in New Haven 75.1.

Turn right into Chapel Street and take the next turn left into Temple Street. Turn right into Trumbull Street 75.6, turn left into State Street 75.9, follow trolley and turn right with trolley over railroad 77.2. At once turn left with trolley into Middletown Avenue, cross a bridge 77.6, go under a railroad and the trolley in Monowese 79.7. Take the left fork 84.4, bear right in Northford 85.2.

Go straight on and bear right 92.7, bear left 93.5, run through Durham Centre and Durham 94.4. Bear right 94.9, at a church bear right 98.4, cross a bridge and at a water trough bear right 100. Take the right fork with trolley into Pleasant Street 100.3, at the end of park turn left into Main Street in Middletown, 100.4.

Straight on across Washington Street, go over a railroad 101.1, cross a railroad and a bridge, then cross the railroad at Cromwell 103.2. Cross the trolley, at a church, take the right fork in Rocky Hill 107.4. Cross a railroad, at a monument left fork 111.2, bear left with trolley 111.4, at the end of the road turn right with trolley 111.6, straight on through Wethersfield 111.9. Bear left with trolley into State Street 112.3, cross a railroad and go straight on Wethersfield Avenue; at a park bear right into Main Street 115.5, turn right in State Street in Hartford 116.1.

Now follow the trolley, bear left 116.6, turn right 116.8, cross a bridge and at a school turn left 117.9, follow trolley through East Hartford 118.4. Bear left under the railroad 118.5, through Windsor 122.2, and East Windsor Hill 124.6. Cross a bridge and go through Warehouse Point 129.6. Turn left 131.1, bear left 132.8, through Enfield 134.1. Cross a bridge into Thompsonville, Conn., 135.1, and go through Longmeadow, Mass., 139.5. Follow the river and take the left fork 141.0, take the right fork into Main Street 141.7, then turn right into State Street in Springfield 142.8.

Here follow the trolley and at a park take the left fork 144.1, cross a railroad and at a cemetery take a right fork leaving the trolley 145.8, bear left through crossroads 148.5, follow the trolley 150.4, then pass North Wilbraham Station 152.0. Now use caution and bear left under the railroad, at once turn right, cross and leave the trolley 154.4, cross a bridge 156.8, go under the railroad 156.9, bear right into Main Street 157.0, and turn sharply left into Thorndyke Avenue in Palmer 157.8.

At the school turn right into Park Street 158.0. Caution should be used when going under the railroad 159.7, also when bearing left under the railroad 160.0, through West Warren 167.1, and Warren 169.4. Go over the railroad 169.6, and at once take the left fork, bear left over the railroad 171.5, bear left 172.2, take the right fork 172.9, then bear right in West Brookfield 173.3 and bear right 175.0 to Brookfield 175.6.

Bear right up hill, go one block, and, at a church turn left into Main Street, bear right 176.1, bear left 176.8, cross a railroad 178.6, take the left fork 179.0 and go through East Brookfield 179.4. Bear left 181.0, then at a water trough take the left fork 181.8 and follow the trolley through Spencer 182.2 and through Leicester 187.3. Go straight on and leave the trolley 187.5, follow the trolley 187.9, and run through Cherry Valley 189.3. Go straight on into Main Street, pass the Post Office, and, at the City Hall, turn right into Worcester 193.6.

Go under the railroad, and, at the station, bear left 194.1. Take the left fork into Shrewsbury Street 194.2, cross a causeway between lakes, then take the left fork into Maple Avenue and go straight on through Shrewsbury 199.2. Take the left fork 201.9 at a water trough take the right fork 203.7, go through Northboro 203.8. Cross the railroad, then bear right 204.8, cross and leave the trolley 207.0 and at once take the right fork up hill bear left 208.7, bear right in Marlboro 209.3.

From here follow the trolley, at a water trough take the left fork 209.8 and at a second water trough take the left fork, leaving the trolley 210.1 take the right fork 210.7, bear right 214.8, cross the railroad 216.7 through South Sudbury 217.1. Cross the railroad and a bridge 219.5, cross another railroad and go straight on, crossing the trolley at Wayland 220.1. At a church go straight on through Weston 223.5.

Avoid a road on the right 223.7, cross the railroad at Stony Brook 223.9. Follow the trolley through Waltham 226.8, cross the railroad at Beaver Brook Station 227.5. Go straight over the railroad 229.2, at the square turn left into Mt. Auburn Street in Watertown 229.8. Bear right over the railroad at Mt. Auburn Station 231.8. At a cemetery take the right fork into Brattle Street, take the right fork 232.8 and the left fork into Mason Street 233.1, take the second turn right at Washington Elms into Garden Street to the Common in Cambridge 233.5.

ONE OF THE DECORATED CARS IN LAST WEEK'S PARADE

"Some Pumpkin," shown above, was a prize winner in the automobile parade in the Tercentenary Pageant on Wednesday. It was a Waverly electric runabout entered by W. C. Poertner.

NEED MOTOR AMBULANCES.

Are More Wanted in War Than Nurses, Says London Paper.

The British Red Cross Society has now been authorized by the War Office to send out to Paris 30 surgeons, 150 nurses, and a proportionate number of orderlies. The society is making arrangements for their dispatch at once. Authority has also been given at the same time to the British Red Cross Society to dispatch 100 motor ambulances. The society is arranging this in conjunction with the Royal Automobile Club, and it is expected that they will be delivered in Paris in less than fourteen days.

A correspondent in France of one of the London papers who has seen something during the last few days of the conditions under which wounded soldiers have to be removed from the front, writes to emphasize the imperative need of motor ambulances. He says:

"On Thursday there arrived at Railhead the first six English motor ambulances, and they were hailed with a chorus of delight and a cry of 'Give us more.' Up to that time all the wounded had to be removed to Railhead—a distance of twenty miles—in motor lorries, and even with good roads it is by no means difficult to realize what suffering must have been borne by those poor men. At present about fifty motor ambulances have arrived in this country, but quite a number of them are needed at each station to carry wounded from the train to the hospital, and less than thirty will be able to do duty at the front. They need there at least 100, and even more if possible.

"I am sure that if the people at home saw sights I have seen during a few days at the front they would not be slow in seeing that at least 70 ambulances were got ready and sent with the least possible delay to this country."

TELLS OF ELECTRIC FIRE APPARATUS

Philadelphia's Experience with Tractor-Hauled Engine Has Been Good.

WORKED AT LOW COST

Electric Vehicle Association Convention Told of Operating Details in Service.

Before the recent convention of the Electric Vehicle Association of America, a paper on electric fire apparatus was presented by George S. Walker, showing the experience of Philadelphia. It said in part:

"The very many obstacles that present themselves in the changing of horse-drawn to the motorized apparatus of a large fire department are such that we were compelled to use our utmost endeavors to secure that method of propulsion for our apparatus that would give us speed, reliability, and efficiency, together with ease of operation.

"One of the first, and no doubt greatest, problems that confronts us, is the proper training of men to successfully operate the apparatus so that they may become efficient. We are, of necessity, compelled to teach and prepare a driver who, as a fireman, is animated with the enthusiasm of his calling, and his all-important idea is to get there.

"This enthusiasm can, and does, produce recklessness, which invariably results not only in damage to the apparatus, but at times loss of life and limb to the members of the department and the public. I also wish to state the same conditions have frequently occurred and that they were not caused by enthusiasm. That problem, in itself, would warrant extra care in the selection of apparatus that would possess to the greatest degree the qualities of manageable, restricted speed, with ease of operation. Also, the latitude of Philadelphia subjects it to some severe Winter weather, at times deep snows, frozen fire hydrants, impeded traffic, &c.

"The possession of twenty-three steam fire engines that could and should be changed from horse-drawn to tractor-drawn—all of these were important factors to be reckoned with in the consideration of the merits and advantages of the various makes of tractors for steam fire engines, gasoline, gasoline electric, and battery.

"Having all the above facts well in mind, it was decided that we would equip Engine No. 20, a first-class steam fire engine, weighing 10,500 pounds, horse-drawn, with an attached two-wheel storage battery tractor; total weight of tractor and engine, 17,000 pounds. The specifications call for a speed of 15 miles per hour, with a radius of 35 miles on one charge of battery and running at full speed 20 miles per hour a radius of 25 miles. The battery consists of 80 cells of the ironclad type. There are 11 plates to each cell, having an ampere hour capacity of 35 at 4½ hours rate. Tires 36 by 4 inches, dual solid rubber front and 60 by 5 inches single solid rubber on rear.

"The drive consists of an electric motor in each wheel, the armature lying across the wheel. The motor frame is an extension of the axle and carries the inside and outside disk which forms the wheel. The two motors are 160 volts, 50 ampere, or 80 volts each, normal rating, and 5 horsepower. Momentary overload capacity 200 per cent. The armature shaft carries on each end a bevel pinion, which in turn engages in a gear ring on the inside face of the wheel, that is, there is a gear ring for each pinion and the gear ratio is 18½ to 1. The motors are 2-pole, parallel wound, and are controlled with a 5-point controller of the street railway type, that is, having five speeds forward and reverse. Lamp equipment: One large horn, 12-inch electric searchlight, two combination electric and oil side lights, one combination electric and oil tail light. This apparatus was delivered and tested in June, 1913, and, owing to various delays, was not put into service until Oct. 24, 1913.

"The battery of this tractor, 80 cells, has now been in service over a year, and upon recent examination showed very little deterioration, the only repairs made to same have been about six terminals and about ten jars, six of which were broken by an accident, and vibration.

"The only mechanical repairs that have been made on the tractor was replacing a steering quadrant which was broken from striking a curb while trying to avoid a collision with another truck, and on another occasion the skidding of the engine on a wet pavement caused repairs to be made to the dash, fender, and mudguards.

"During the Winter, and at times when the snow was unusually heavy, and particularly during the time when traffic between the cities of New York and Philadelphia on all the railroads was held up, this apparatus performed its duty without fail, and in one instance it was taken to a fire hydrant where it was impossible to get with a lighter steamer with horses. During most of the Winter service there were no skid chains used on the wheels, which shows the enormous tractive effect of the tractor.

"The drivers look after the charging and filling of the batteries with distilled water, and such little attentions as the apparatus requires, filling grease cups, oiling the motors, wiping the brushes and commutators. The drivers in charge of this apparatus never had any previous experience with electricity or operating automobiles of any kind. They were instructed by the demonstrator who came with the tractor, and since that time have practically handled the apparatus on their own responsibility.

"Our experience has been that the cost of operation of this apparatus for current has been on an average of about $4.50 per month. This takes care of the flushing of the batteries and maintaining a full charge at all times. The charging is made periodically at the respective stations, depending on the amount of mileage made. Cost of repairs has not been in excess of the cost of current. Battery deterioration has not been taken into consideration. The actions of No. 20 are all being corroborated by the good performances of our other four-battery apparatus."

To Hold Big Road Show Soon.

The sixth annual show, which will be held in connection with the Fifth American Good Roads Congress in Chicago the week of Dec. 14, is designed to bring together under one roof all the different varieties of material and machinery used in building modern roads and streets. The practical knowledge gained by the inspection of these facilities will be supplemented by the discussions in the convention hall.

NOTES OF THE AUTOMOBILE TRADE

If you are desirous of purchasing a Studebaker car hereafter it will be necessary for you to visit the new salesrooms of the Studebaker Corporation at Broadway and Fifty-sixth Street. At present the wholesale and service ends are situated at 149 West Fifty-second Street. Workmen are busy making alterations at the new salesrooms, however, and within a fortnight the entire establishment, retail, wholesale, and service ends, will all be comfortably lodged on Broadway.

In the past the Maxwell Company has divided the United States into four districts with one supervisor and several salesmen in each district. This plan of division has now been changed, and instead of four districts as before, there are now six zones, each having its own supervisor and one publicity supervisor. The zone supervisors are the direct medium between factory and dealer, while under the supervisor are the district salesmen acting as his lieutenants.

The persons who bought 1915 Detroiter cars during the past two months got a pleasant little surprise recently in the shape of a check for $65, which represented a rebate on the original purchase price of $1,060, following an announcement of reduction in the price of the 1915 model to $995.

The American Locomotive Company has discontinued the operation of its automobile service station on Jackson Avenue, Long Island City. Owners of Alco vehicles in New York City and vicinity requiring parts should obtain them at the service station of the International Motor Company, West End Avenue and Sixty-fourth Street, New York City.

A salesmen's conference was held by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company at Akron, Ohio, last week. Four hundred and fifty branch managers and salesmen from North, East, South, and West were in attendance.

C. H. Larson of the Oldsmobile Company of New York had several novel decorated entries in the Tercentenary automobile parade Wednesday night. The decorative design of a "big six" was the "Santa Claus Ship," thirty feet in length and nine feet wide. Another "big six" was evolved into a locomotive with columns of smoke and fire pouring from the smokestack, whistle tooting, bell clanging, and a fireman on the running board "oiling up" and the engineer in the "lookout" cab.

In answer to a demand for lists of garages and charging stations, the United Electric Light and Power Company of New York City is distributing such a list of garages and charging stations in the metropolitan district to the owners of electric vehicles. This company announces coincidentally with the distribution of this list a reduction in the minimum monthly charge on the storage battery rate from $20 to $10 per month after Nov. 1.

The Tunnel Garage Corporation has opened a large new garage at 528 to 540 West 162d Street, with a capacity of 165 cars, so arranged that none has to be removed to let another out of the building.

Harry S. Houpt, Mitchell distributor here, has moved to new quarters at Broadway and Fifty-ninth Street. The Mitchell and Lozier service stations are at Forty-seventh Street and Eleventh Avenue.

The Minerva Motors Company will hereafter handle the Moline-Knight cars, product of the Moline Automobile Company, East Moline, Ill. The Minerva Company was organized some years ago by Fred W. Sewell, to represent the Minerva-Knight in America. Associated with him is Howard S. Hamilton, who is in charge of the sales work. The company has moved to the large salesroom at 1,896 Broadway, southeast corner of Sixty-third Street.

The Auto Robe Company has located at 1 West Thirty-fourth Street, and has to offer automobile lap robes and steamer rugs.

Gaston Plaintiff, New York manager for the Ford Motor Company, has arranged with "Senator" W. L. Morgan to become connected with the Newark branch as a sort of general "booster."

C. S. Henshaw has been appointed by Dodge Brothers, Detroit, as Boston representative. His new firm name will be the Henshaw Motor Company.

6-Passenger Sedan, $3750

Beauty and Mechanical Excellence

in the Chandler closed cars for 1915 combine to make them really exceptional cars.

The flexible, forceful power of the Chandler makes it especially popular for city driving while the new bodies offer style, comfort and luxury to satisfy the most critical purchasers.

Many who have seen the Sedan, illustrated above, declare it is the most beautiful car ever built. The grace of its lines, the luxurious comfort of its roomy body trimmed in gray cloth and lace with satin curtains, the completeness of its appointments, the ease with which it can be ventilated—leave nothing to be desired.

Its light weight makes it possible to drive this car anywhere a touring car will go. Throughout aluminum has replaced steel in body construction.

CHANDLER The Six With the Marvelous MOTOR

Models for 1915: 7-passenger Limousine, $3750; 7-passenger Sedan, $3750; 7-passenger Coupe, $3500; 7-passenger Cabriolet, $3500; 7-passenger touring car, $3250; roadster, $3250. All models completely equipped.

Immediate Delivery on All Models

Brady-Murray Motors Corporation

55th St., West of Broadway

CHANDLER MOTOR CAR COMPANY, CLEVELAND, OHIO

Smart, New Cars For Winter Use

THEY are Mitchells; they possess a hundred points of convenience and charm. Interiors in rare good taste. New York is limited to sixty. They comprise Limousines, Sedans, Coupes and Coupelletes. Moderate Prices.

HARRY S. HOUPT, Inc.

1751 Broadway, New York

GIVES COLD WEATHER TIP.

Chairman S. A. E. Says Alcohol is Best Anti-Freeze Liquid.

Referring to Winter motoring, Joseph A. Anglada, Chairman of the Metropolitan Section of the Society of Automobile Engineers and President of the Cyclecar Club of New York, said last week:

"Every motorist operating a water-cooled car should realise that cylinders and radiators are liable to freeze when the temperature falls below 32 degrees Fahrenheit. This necessitates the addititon to the cooling water of a safe and economical medium which will lower its freezing temperature. Salt, calcium chloride, and glycerine have been tried, but are objectionable because of eventual injury to parts, due to corrosion, electrolytic action, and decomposition. Proprietary substances should be avoided unless their constituents are disclosed.

"My experiments prove that denatured alcohol (tax-free ethyl alcohol) is the best for the purpose, because it is manufactured and sold under the supervision of the United States Government. It is uniformly pure, besides being harmless, efficient, and cheap. A quart to each gallon of water in the cooling system is sufficient to prevent freezing when the temperature reaches zero. By increasing the proportion of denatured alcohol the freezing temperature of the mixture is lowered and it is possible, by using equal parts of denatured alcohol and water, to prevent freezing at as low as 35 degrees below zero.

"Another advantage in the use of denatured alcohol is its value as a carbon remover and engine cleanser. The cylinders of the engine can be kept free from carbon and the valves and piston rings maintained in first-class condition by pouring a wineglassful of denatured alcohol at frequent intervals into each cylinder while the engine is hot, or the engine may be run on alcohol, to accomplish the same result, by injecting it into the air intake of the carbureter while the motor is running fast. A squirt oil can is a convenient means of introducing the alcohol into the carbureter."

Mr. Anglada also spoke encouragingly of the possible early use of denatured alcohol as a motor fuel, and called attention to a recent communication from Lieut. R. W. Brewer of the British Army Motor Transport Service, which states that a number of the automobiles engaged by the warring armies are run on denatured alcohol.

The New SAXON $395

Just Plain Old-Fashioned Goodness

What you want in anything you buy is just plain old-fashioned goodness.—the kind that doesn't end with the paint. You want honesty in construction and reliability in performance.

The Qualities You Admire in a Man Are in a Saxon

Clean cut lines; rugged strength; power; endurance; simplicity; reliability and honesty—these traits of character that mark the leaders of men are embodied in the Saxon car.

The Saxon is sound and good throughout because the materials, the workmanship and the design are sound and good. 7,500 owners are daily proving that the Saxon is built right and stays right.

You Can Afford a Saxon

For the price of your daily street car fares Saxon owners are enjoying motoring pleasures which you, too, can enjoy. Phone and let us help you.

Saxon cars may now be provided with electric starting and lighting system. Price, $70, when ordered as extra equipment on a new car.

Saxon Motor Co. of New York

251 West 57th Street,

New York, N. Y.

HANSEN & PEACOCK,

1880 Bedford Av., Brooklyn, N. Y.

ESSEX AUTO COMPANY,

Newark, N. J.

Distributors for Northern New Jersey.

PREPARING FOR WINTER

Now is the time to solve the annual problem of the automobile owner.

If you plan to buy a new model next Spring, or if you wish to avoid the expenses of Winter storage, remember that high-grade used cars are always in demand.

An advertisement in the Automobile Exchange column of The New York Times reaches the automobile-buying public.

Rates upon request.

Telephone Bryant 1000.

AWARDS ANNOUNCED FOR AUTO PAGEANT

Prizes Valued at More Than $5,000 Distributed to Parade Entrants.

JUDGES HAD HARD TASK

Car of Vintage of 1898 Wins Veteran Award—Trophies for All Divisions.

Following the Tercentenary Automobile Pageant on Wednesday night the Judges' Committee worked nearly all night in endeavoring to allot the prizes, valued at more than $5,000, to the winners of the various divisions of the pageant. The list of awards is complete, with the exception of several of the special prizes. The Judging Committee, of which William H. Page is Chairman, was composed of George W. Brock, W. A. Boring, Alan R. Hawley, W. W. Knowles, Harry H. Good, and E. A. McCoy. The associate judges of the Automobile Division were Alfred Reeves and Coker F. Clarkson. The associate judges of the Motor Cycle Division were F. V. Clark and J. L. Sauer, and the Advertising Division judges were O. J. Gude, William H. Johns, Russell Field, A. M. Van Buren, and George B. Van Cleve. The awards were as follows:

Early models, for the oldest car completing the line of march under its own power. First prize, value $100, Joseph Devantry, Brooklyn, N. Y., 1898 Panhard. Second prize, value $50, Oldsmobile Company of New York, 1899 Oldsmobile. For best-appearing car operating under its own power built during the period of Jan. 1, 1902, to Dec. 31, 1906, third prize, value $25, Harrolds Motor Company's 1902 Pierce-Arrow.

Grotesque—First prize, value $200, Oldsmobile steam engine; second prize, value $100, the Fleischmann Company's "John Dough"; fourth prize, Douglas Fairbanks's "He Comes Up Smiling" bath tub float.

Pleasure Car—For best-decorated car. First prize, value $500, C. B. McCoy, Jr., Philadelphia, "Peace" float; second prize, value $200, Oldsmobile Company of New York, "Christmas Ship"; third prize, value $100, Allen Auto Specialty Company, "Autumn."

For best-decorated runabout—First prize, value $250, John W. Cleary, Brooklyn, N. Y., "Oriental Pagoda"; second prize, value $100, Poertner Motor Car Company.

For the regularly established club with the highest rating of points—First prize, value $200, Long Island Automobile Club; second prize, $100, Automobile Club of America; third prize, value $75, "Bee" Club of Harlem.

Dealer having the greatest number of cars of one make represented by him in a division—First prize, value $200, Ford Motor Company; second prize, value $100, Chevrolet Motor Company; third prize, value $75, Brady-Murray Motors Corporation. (Chandler.)

Commercial—For the best-decorated commercial car. First prize, value $500, New York Sporting Goods Company, Indian motor cycle float; second prize, value $200, Edward Callan; third prize, value $100, Max Schling.

To merchant entering largest fleet of commercial trucks as owned and operated by him—First prize, value $200, Loose-Wiles Biscuit Company; second prize, $100, New York Edison Company; third prize, value $50, Ward Bread Company.

To the dealer having the greatest number of commercial cars in one division—First prize, value $200, Autocar Company.

Advertising, for the best appearing vehicle carrying advertising other than merely the name and address of the owner as regularly used in service. First prize, trophy valued at $150, Omar cigarettes. Second price, value $100, Bull Durham tobacco. Third prize, value $75, Atlas Cement Company.

Motor Cycles.—For the best decorated machine in the entire division: First prize, value $100, the Hendee Trophy, to J. Bucknell. Second prize, the Hendee Trophy, $50, J. J. Smith, "An Indian Papoose and Indian Tepee." Third prize, value $25, Victor Feliciari. For the best decorated machine with a single rider: First prize, value $25, "Horn of Plenty." Second prize, value $25, F. Larsen. For the best decorated machine with side car attached: First prize, value $50, with souvenir prize to woman passenger in side car, value $10, J. J. Smith. Second prize, value $40, with woman's prize, value $7.50, G. Barnes of Greenwich, farm outfit. Third prize, value $25, with woman's prize $5, Alfred Cochi. For the club with the highest rating of points: First prize, value $30, Harlem Motor Cycle Club. Second prize, value $20, Concourse Motor Cycle Club.

For the machine decorated in the most novel or grotesque manner: First prize, value $25, George Buesing, (chickens farm.) Second prize: D. Malash. For the woman most appropriately dressed for motor cycle riding and riding her own machine: First prize, value $25, Miss Frances Loeb. Second prize, value $15, Mrs. Cantell. For the best decorated tandem: First prize, value $30, with souvenir prize to woman of $10, J. J. Cox. Second prize, value $25, with prize to woman of $7.50, A. T. Bastidy. Third prize, value $15, with prize to woman of $5, William J. Webber.

Special mention.—Grotesque class, "Tipperary" float and "Baby Olds." Dealers' window display prize, value $100, Firestone Tire Company.

Auto Factory Imitates Dairy.

It has remained for the motor car industry to take a lesson from the cow and her rural owner. As nearly every person knows, the farmer has a separator to take the cream from the milk. Here is the way the automobile industry has taken a lesson from the farmer and his cream separator. In every big factory hundreds of gallons of oil are used while various parts of the motor car are being drilled. The oil streams over the tool as it bores through the metal, aiding in the work and keeping the metal cool. Consequently much oil sticks to the metal shavings and dust. At some motor car plants the shavings metal and used again, effecting a big saving during a year.

CAR OWNERS SHOULD KNOW

The working principle of every part of their car—how to make necessary adjustments—how to locate and remedy engine trouble quickly—how to time and set valves—how to control the carburetor—how to wire magnetos and coils—the practical side of lubrication—the care of tires and the correct use of speeds and brakes.

All these things, and other practical knowledge, are included in our Special Automobile Course for Owners. Taught by experts on the best equipment obtainable. Total cost only $55. Day and Evening Classes, or private instruction at hours to suit convenience. SPECIAL CLASSES FOR LADIES. Call, write or telephone for interesting booklet.

THE STEWART AUTO SCHOOL

CHARTERED BY N. Y. STATE BOARD OF REGENTS.

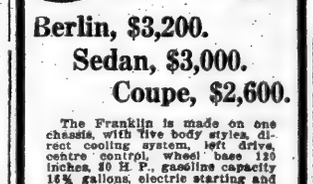
225 West 57th St. (At Broadway)

"FOUNDED ON HONESTY" "PROSPERS ON MERIT."

FRANKLIN

"Six-Thirty"

ENCLOSED CARS



Berlin, $3,200.

Sedan, $3,000.

Coupe, $2,600.

The Franklin is made on one chassis, with five body styles, direct cooling system, left drive, centre control, wheel base 120 inches, 40 H. P., gasoline capacity 16¾ gallons, electric starting and lighting system, power tire pump and tires 34x4½.

Phone or call for further details and demonstration.

Franklin Motor Car Co.

Glenn A. Tisdale, President.

73d St. and Amsterdam Av., N. Y.

Telephone, 7566—Columbus.

Locomobile

Exchange Car Department

BARGAINS

1912 LOCOMOBILE LANDAULET—Very fine condition. Repainted a beautiful Locomobile blue.

LOCOMOBILE—1912, 48 H. P. Touring—Thoroughly overhauled; lighting and starting systems. We are making a special price on this car this week. See it before buying.

LOCOMOBILE—1913, 38 H. P. Coupe—Four passenger; lighting and starting systems. Looks like new; overhauled; price right.

LOCOMOBILE—1914, 38 H. P.—Run 1,700 miles; lighting and starting systems; very reasonable.

An overhauled Locomobile carries our new car guarantee.

1907 PACKARD, seven passenger, for renting.

1910 FIAT (foreign); renting or truck.

1912 METALLURGIQUE, limousine and touring bodies.

1912 ABBOTT, touring-renting car.

1912 SELDEN; fine car; very little money.

1914 OLDSMOBILE Limousine. Excellent condition. Must sell at once. Make offer.

We have several fine Limousine bodies at reasonable prices.

Attractive terms can be arranged. Open Tuesday, Nov. 3, Election Day.

THE LOCOMOBILE CO. OF AMERICA

61st St. next to Broadway.

J. A. Mellish, Mgr., Exchange Car Dept.

SPECIAL SALE

PIERCE ARROWS AT $1,000.

Rebuilt and repainted 49 H. P. 7-passenger Touring Car. 1909 model. Great value.

Small Six Landaulet, in very good condition. Cloth upholstering. Demountable rims. Fine small town car.

1910 66 Six 7-passenger Touring, with fore doors. Cost $6,500. An opportunity to buy a "Big Six" right.

1910 48 Six 7-passenger Touring. Very nice looking, smooth running car in very good condition. Real value is well above price in this sale.

All these cars have four speed selective transmissions with side lever shift, as on present Pierce-Arrow cars, and they are completely equipped.

Limousine bodies could be supplied for them if wanted.

ELLIS MOTOR CAR CO.,

416 Central Av., Newark. Tel. 6671 Market.

New Jersey Agents for Pierce-Arrow Cars.

1764—1770 B'way—4th Floor.

ROSKAM SCOTT CO

'14 S. G. V., inside drive
'14 Cadillac, convertible
'14 38 Packard, Limo.
'14 Cadillac, Tour.
'14 S. G. V., Landaulet.
'14 Mercer Raceabout.
'13 Stutz Roadster.
'13 38 Packard, Victoria.
'13, Loco., Landaulet.
'13 38 Simplex, 6-pass.
'13 S. G. V., Touring.
'13 38 Pierce, Tour.
'13 Hala, 38, Limo.
'13 Hupp Roadster, $850.
'12 Stevens AA, R'ster
'12 38 Simplex, Tour.
'12 35 Isotta, Land't.
'13 18 Daimler, Limo.
Delaunay Belley, Limo.
Mercer, R'ster, $550
'14 Simplex, 50, Limo.
'14 Cadillac, Sedan.
'14 Simplex, 50, new.
'14 Cadillac, Brougham.
'14 S. G. V., Limo.
'14 S. G. V., Touring
Lancia, 30, Limo.
'13 Simplex, 50, R'ster.
'12 Stearns-Knight, Limo.
'12 38 Packard, Sedan
'13 Haines, Limo.
'12 Lancia, Tour.
'12 Mercer, Raceabout
'13 38 Simplex, Limo.
'12 Mercer, R'ster
'12 Reo, Tour., $475
'11 40, Loco., Tour.
'10 Renault, Limo.
Pierce, 48, Tour.
Aries, Roadster, $500

1764-1770 B'way—57th St., 907 Col.

Maxwell, 1914, 6 cylinder, seven passenger; perfect condition	$700
Hupmobile touring car; perfect condition; sacrifice	$575
Hupmobile roadster, fully equipped; A1 condition	$550
Simplex, 1911, five passenger touring car; full equipment; sacrifice	$1200
P. I. A. T. toy tonneau; excellent condition	$450

CHAS. E. RIESS & CO. Inc.

1690 Broadway.

FORD WINTER BODIES.

Coupe, Sedan, Limousine & Landaulets. $50 to $300. Advisable to order NOW!

FORD OWNERS SERVICE CORP.,

229 West 54th St.

FORD SEDANETTE

Winter body attached to your Ford touring, $165! Runabout "Coupette," $85 attached. Also Sedans, Limousines from $20 to $500.

FORD OWNERS SERVICE CORP.,

229 West 54th St.

Limousine Bodies—Selling Out.

We must dispose of all our 250 Limousine, Landaulette, Sedan, Coupe and other Bodies.

Our Low Price Must Sell Them.

Whole Job Mounted and Painted to Suit.

For Cash or On Easy Payments,

New, Used, Refinished and Retrimmed.

JANDORF AUTOMOBILE CO.,

BODY DEPARTMENT.

303 West 59th St., near Broadway. Entire Building.

NOTICE OUR NEW ADDRESSES:

1768 Broadway..1764 Broadway..303 W. 59th Autos. Tires, &c. Bodies.

IF YOU WANT BIG VALUE

IN A NEW OR USED

Automobile or Motor Truck,

Come to Automobile Headquarters,

TIMES SQ. AUTO CO.,

S. W. Cor. 58th St., Broadway, N. Y.

Send for Our Price Wrecker and save 50 to 75% on your auto supplies.

REPAIRS

Now is the time to have limousines overhauled and painted. Good work takes time. Send for us now to make an estimate, lest you forget. We have a well-equipped machine shop for overhauling motors.

J. M. QUINBY & CO.,

NEWARK, N. J.

WAR MAY PROMOTE TIN INDUSTRY HERE

Smelters Now Idle in England and Germany Can Be Transplanted to United States.

OPPORTUNITY HAS ARRIVED

Former Minister to Bolivia Points Out Commercial Outlook in South America.

If capital in this country comes to the immediate rescue, the tin smelting works of England and Germany, which are dependent upon the output of South American mines, and which are now idle as the result of the European war, can be transplanted to the United States. This is the belief of Horace G. Knowles of Wilmington, Del., ex-Minister to Bolivia for this country.

The popular conception about the United States' laxity in building up trade with South America, Mr. Knowles pointed out, was due to the absence of a merchant marine. That premise, he said, was radically wrong. The first reason for the poor trading relations with the South American republics, he said, was that American capitalists had not invested their capital in these republics and had therefore not transformed the resources of these republics into purchasing power.

"How can you expect the resources of South American countries to have a purchasing power for our goods unless they are developed? The English and French realised that years ago and they spent their money. Why, today there is not an American manufacturer who is entitled to a dollar of South American trade in competition with a German. But this war has shut off the inflow of capital from Europe and surely there is no man so dense as to believe that the purchasing power of the South American products still exists. It does not. Everything is at a standstill and what we have to do to revive the industries is to pour in capital and blow the bellows. If we do this the United States, at the end of the European war, will be wearing the shoes heretofore worn by England and Germany. Public sentiment seems to be all in favor of increasing our trade with South America. But who will loosen the purse strings of capital? I believe that public sentiment will do that too. We must remember that if we want the trade which the Germans and English built up we must get after it and do just what the Germans and English did. The Panama Canal will lend impetus to the movement."

Mr. Knowles is personally interested in gold and tin mining properties in Bolivia, and he spoke in particular about the opportunities awaiting tin smelters here.

"We will not deflect much of England's crude rubber business in Brazil, Peru, and Bolivia, or Germany's trade in foodstuffs and nitrates," said Mr. Knowles. "Our opportunities lie mainly in the undeveloped resources of the South American States, I think, but in return for the minerals we can export everything that the South Americans need. Take Bolivia's tin mines as examples. There is no monopoly there and competition is desired. Bolivia exported 27,000 tons of tin last year, and she sold only 8,000 tons to the United States. Think of that, only 8,000 tons to a country which uses 65 per cent. of all the tin mined in the world! Most of the tin goes to England in English ships. Some goes to Germany. The English and German smelting mills make it up in pigs, and then they ship these pigs back to the United States. Isn't this a ridiculous trade situation? There isn't a tin smelting mill in this country. But there will be a number of them soon, I believe.

"We need ships, of course, and need them badly. If we can take Bolivia's tin in American ships we can return the ships filled with our products. The average housewife who is now canning tomatoes, I suppose, doesn't realize that the United States never has more than a sixty days' supply of tin on hand at any one time. Without tin we cannot export our food products or help feed the great cities. We are helpless without tin and yet we have no control over the supply. Talk about high prices of foodstuffs! What would happen if the supply of canned goods was depleted? The total world's output is about 130,000 tons annually, the tin coming from Bolivia, the Straits Settlement, Australia, China, and Cornwall, but London controls the market and sets the price. Bolivia holds the key to the tin market, and England controls Bolivia. Now is the time to get the trade for the United States. If we make the proper move we ought to get 50 per cent. of the trade now going to England and the Continent."

Mr. Knowles is intimately acquainted with Simon S. Patino of Oruro, Bolivia, known as the "tin king" and regarded as the richest man in South America. Señor Patino earned $17 a month before he became interested in mining. Now he has an income approximating $375,000 a month and exceeding the income of Bolivia herself. Mr. Knowles recalled that Emperor Wilhelm had decorated Señor Patino and that the Germans had taken every advantage to increase their trade with Bolivia because of the pleasant relations with the tin king.

INSTRUCTION.

17 Weeks Course
FUNDAMENTALS OF ACCOUNTANCY

An available, basic but brief course — 17 weeks in the Fundamentals of Accounting, Law and Organization—under the guidance of practicing Certified Public Accountants and Lawyers.

Complete training in Elementary and Advanced Bookkeeping from the viewpoint of the Certified Public Accountant. Credits apply on the complete course preparing for C. P. A. examination.

Various Courses Offered
1. Fundamentals of Accountancy;
2. Shorter Course in Accountancy;
3. Business Administration;
4. Professional C. P. A. Course;
5. Cost Accounting;
6. Law for Business Men.

An Attractive Field
A 36 pp. Bulletin, giving details of accountancy practice, opportunities, rates of pay, requirements, accountancy laws of various States, outline of courses, etc., will be gladly mailed upon request.
For catalogs, information, and invitations to lectures, address
Frank L. Bailey
215 West 23d St., New York.
Melsom S. Tuttle
11 Boerum St., Brooklyn.
Pace & Pace
30 Church St., New York.

The European war has created thousands of positions at fine salaries for all in the U. S. who know commercial Spanish.
The WAR means MONEY to YOU Learn SPANISH
This language may be learned by joining day or night classes under native teachers or by night study at home by the famous Cortina Phonographic Study System—correct pronunciation guaranteed; easy payment plan. Also classes in French, German, Italian. Write or call for particulars. THE CORTINA ACADEMY OF LANGUAGES, Room 806, 1,600 Broadway, corner 48th St., N. Y. City. Established 1882.

Many Boys Fail to Pass
REGENTS' AND COLLEGE ENTRANCE examinations, not because they are stupid, but because the grade system of nearly all schools prevents individual instruction. A bright boy can easily make sixty counts between October and June, and a backward pupil will find that he can do two years' work in one.
THE GROFF SCHOOL
Boarding and Day School. Unexcelled Facilities. 259 West 75th St., N. Y. Phone 744 Columbus.

ITALIAN
FRENCH, SPANISH, GERMAN, ETC.
Low rates and most efficient instruction in classes and privately. Native teachers only.
THE BERLITZ SCHOOL OF LANGUAGES
Madison Square (1,122 Broadway.)
Harlem Branch 343 Lenox Av., nr. 127th St.
Brooklyn " 218-220 Livingston St.
NEW CLASSES CONSTANTLY FORMING.
Free Conversation Circles.

ENGINEERING Mechanical, Civil Engineering in day and Evening Classes.
Mechanical Drafting, Blue Print Reading, Mathematics, Geometry, Trigonometry, Chemistry.
COLLEGE
Class just starts. Monthly payments allowed. Call or mail for catalogue.
KOVACHS ENGINEERING COLLEGE,
343 Lenox Ave., near 127th St.

The Brown School of Tutoring.
Boys' School & Office, 241 W. 75th St. Tel. Col 8894. Girls' School, 239 W. 75th St.
Founded 1906. No classes. 2 years' work in one. All day study supervision. An A-1 school in preparing pupils rapidly and thoroughly for examinations, and in teaching them how to study. A School with an Atmosphere of Work.

ALL LANGUAGES
STRICTLY NATIVE GRADUATED TEACHERS.
Class and private lessons at school or residence.
THE MOST RAPID AND THOROUGH OF CONVERSATIONAL METHODS.
New Classes Continually Forming.
BERLITZ SCHOOL OF LANGUAGES
ITS YEAR AT 315 5TH AVE., COR. 32D ST

ST. MARTHA'S
Bronxville, N. Y.
Episcopal.
Class Course. Specialty of Sewing, Dressmaking and Gardening.
FOUNDED 1879. STERN'S SCHOOL OF LANGUAGES
961 Madison Av. 200 W. 72d St.
Languages taught in classes or privately.

Business Education For Men and Boys
Day and Evening. 23rd St. Y. M. C. A.

PARKWAY School, 2,853 B'way, (111th St.)—Shorthand training for CIVIL SERVICE examinations and law reporting. High and low speed classes.

Designing DRESS CUTTING, DRESSMAKING, ALSO MILLINERY, thoroughly taught. Write for circular or call. S. T. Taylor Co., 15 West 34th St.

THE TAYSON HOME AND DAY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.
Reopens Oct. 6th. 164-166-168 West 75th St.
Clara L. Colburne, A. B., Martha K. Humphrey, A. M., Principals.

KYLE SCHOOL FOR BOYS
Irvington on Hudson; 22 miles from N. Y.
Modern; 26 years present Principal.

KYLE SCHOOL FOR BOYS
Irvington on Hudson; 22 miles from N. Y.
Moderate; 25 years present Principal.

Bryant School for Stammering
Dependable treatment for speech impediments. Booklet free. Est. 1863. 26 West 40th St.

Miss Baccial School of Languages.
Superior native teachers. Class, private instruction. Teachers sent. Mme. rencontre, 237 West 106th.

THE SHORTAGE IN DRUGS.

Chemists Urged to Manufacture Products Formerly Imported from Germany.

The London correspondent of The Medical Record tells of Red Cross activities there, describes the drug shortchemists might profitably manufacture such medical accessories as were imported formerly from Germany.

from Germany.

In common with those engaged in every form of industrial and professional activity, English physicians and surgeons feel that "everything seems to be overshadowed by the war, and though we carry on our usual avocations, even doctors are so absorbed in day-to-day and hour-to-hour telegrams that they will talk of nothing else."

The British Red Cross Society has received since the declaration of war donations from the Australian branch of $25,000, a like sum from Sir E. Cassell, and other contributions which make nearly $250,000, and Queen Alexandra, as President, is daily receiving letters from persons who can spare only small sums. Other assistance is being rendered in most various ways. The Empress Eugenie, who sent $1,000 to the fund, has fitted a wing of her house for the reception of wounded officers, of whom fully trained nurses have volunteered to take charge.

Lord Dunraven has chartered and fitted out a steam yacht as a hospital ship, which he will himself command. Gen. Sir Ivor Herbert, Lord Lieutenant of Monmouthshire, has brought together a committee for co-ordinating the work of the St. John Ambulance, the Red Cross, and other organizations desirous of establishing supplementary hospitals and convalescent homes not to supersede in any way local branches or committees of existing societies, but to assist in obtaining concentrated effort on definite objects and avoiding overlapping, so as to secure the most efficient results.

The Crystal Palace and Park have been offered to the War Office for a temporary hospital for sick and wounded.

So many offers of houses for the use of the sick and wounded or for conversion into hospitals are being made that the War Office has been obliged to issue a notice that for the present no more are wanted, but should necessity arise for further accommodation an appeal will be made for it. The Admiralty has closed the temporary naval hospital at Grimsby, because the number of hospitals fitted out by private enterprise has rendered it unnecessary.

A shortage of the drugs usually manufactured in Germany has caused an excessive rise in prices and the Government has appointed a committee of medical men to "consider questions arising in connection with the supply of drugs for curative purposes in the United Kingdom, with special reference to the ways in which the medical profession can assist in effecting economies in the use of these drugs of which the supplies are at present small."

"No doubt there are many cases in which a plentiful or inexpensive drug may take the place of one that is scarce or costly," the correspondent remarks. "But would it not seem more reasonable to seek for sources of supply for the temporary deficiency, and for the trade to rely more on ourselves? There are many able chemists among us who might well seize the opportunity of establishing manufactories of the fine chemicals which they have been content to get from Germany. What is wanted is capital to lay down the plant is generally assigned as the reason if you put the case before accomplished chemists.

"To such I respond, associate yourself with capitalists. This is done in other industries such as the electrical and scientific instrument production, and similar co-operation would be equally successful. I am told that the duty on alcohol is another impediment, as so much is consumed in the refining of fine chemicals. But now is the time to press the Government, which is asking doctors to economize in their drugs, to do their share by remitting this heavy duty on one of the necessities for manufacturing them. If the committee of medical men for considering the questions arising in connection with the supply do not secure this remission, (already granted them for research work,) they can have little influence on the Government which appointed them.

"The select committee on patent medicines and appliances and advertisements relating to them issued a report on Wednesday evening. The committee held thirty-two public sittings, examined forty-two witnesses, and asked 14,000 questions. One of the recommendations agreed upon is that the administration of the law on advertisement and sale should be under the authority of the Ministry of Public Health when such a department of state is created.

"The issue of a new edition of the Pharmacopoeia has been postponed sine die—it is said in consequence of the war. To many the reason assigned does not seem very obvious."

BORDEAUX ENJOYS ITS IMPORTANCE

Activity There Takes the Minds of the People Off Their Hardships and Sorrows.

TALK NOW OF LEAVING

French Successes Lead Visitors to Say: "Soon We Shall Be Packing Our Bags."

BORDEAUX, Oct. 20.—"Soon we shall be packing our bags." Thus the ever-sanguine Parisian now in semi-exile, on hearing of the French successes, and the polite Bordelais replies, with his charming smile, "We shall welcome the cause but deplore the effect."

For many reasons Bordeaux will be sorry to be severed again from Paris. Some days ago a well-known French General lost his wife, and to one of his brother officers, who offered condolences, he replied: "I do not know how I should have supported it in normal times, but fortunately there is the war." What the war is doing for this General the presence here of the Government is doing for the people of the Gironde and the Midi. It is taking their minds from a great misfortune, from the thousands who have suffered death or injury for France, and from the unhappy plight of the towns and villages through which the invader has passed.

There is great interest in the doings of the celebrities—in M. le President de la République, who drives through the streets smiling and obviously confident of his country's final triumph; in M. Viviani, the ex-Socialist, now at the head of France's Cabinet of all parties and all talents; in M. Delcassé, who incurred Germany's hatred by the part he played in forming and cementing the entente cordiale; in M. Millerand, who, from the Ministry of War, is in constant communication with the Generals and knows the plan of campaign on which every one else is speculating; in M. Clemenceau, the maker of Ministries and newspapers, who can blast a public man's career with one of his mordant mots; in Prince Roland Bonaparte, the scientist, whose relative lost his imperial throne as a result of France's last war with Germany.

Never since its former experience as a war capital has Bordeaux been so crowded. Most of the rooms in every hotel have been requisitioned as administrative offices or for Ministers, officials, officers, and foreign attachés. The private person must content himself with a room at an exorbitant price in somebody's house, and be thankful that he is not sharing the fate of the refugees lodged at the Town Hall, in the police stations, or wherever place can be made for them.

Some of the Government departments have found strange quarters. The Prime Minister's bureau is in the Town Hall; that of the Minister of Public Works in a college, and that of the Minister of Finance in the Faculty of Medicine. The President of the republic himself is installed, with his suite, at the Prefecture.

The department on which the eyes of all Frenchmen are now turned—the Ministry of War—is housed at the Faculty of Science and Letters. At the foot of the large staircase up which Ministers, Generals, and diplomats pass every day is still the notice, "Wipe your feet and do not crowd," while facing the War Minister's room is a placard with the inscription, "Do not make a noise, as those undergoing examinations must not be disturbed."

Though in a sense a capital of mourning, Bordeaux presents a gay and animated appearance—but it is the forced gayety of a people doing its duty with a smile in spite of misfortune. The joyous factor of youth is almost entirely absent, nearly all the young men being either in the fighting line or held on the leash in some military town further north. Those who remain in the depots of the 1914 conscript class are protesting that they are now efficient enough to fight, and a number of the younger ones who have been detailed off to remain with the 1915 class about to be summoned to the depots are complaining bitterly in the press against this "unfair treatment."

Every day the Chamber and the Senate hold informal meetings in two music halls, the lower house in the Apollo and the upper house in the Alhambra. Though the box offices are doing no business and there are no audiences, I learn from a Deputy that after discussing such matters as Gen. Joffre's strategy, the refugee problem, and the German false war campaign, the debates always drift to one's friends who are serving with the colors, dying wounded in hospital, or interred in a solder's grave.

Sometimes there is one of those beau gestes so dear to the heart of the Parisian. Thus in a large café the other evening a white-bearded private soldier with the cross of officer of the Legion of Honor, the military medal, and the medal of 1870 pinned on his tunic walked through the crowd of officers and civilians and sat down at a corner table. All present at once rose to their feet and applauded, while the veteran stood up and saluted gravely.

Inquiries brought to light that this old man was once the Colonel of an infantry regiment, but having retired before the war began, and being unable to obtain a commission, he had enlisted in the ranks of his old corps.

CARPET SALE CLOSES.

About $4,000,000 Worth Disposed Of During the Week.

The Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Company's auction sale of Fall lines of carpets and rugs ended last night with receipts for the six days closing approximating $4,000,000. Altogether 120,000 bales and rolls were disposed of at prices in most instances considerably below the stated prices at the opening early in the Summer.

The smaller dealers, so much in evidence the first part of the week, seemed toward the close of the sale to give way to purchasers for the large dry goods houses of the country. This was especially the case yesterday when the buying appeared to be very largely in the hands of representatives of the big stores. Chicago and New York firms predominated and quickly bid in on lots of goods they had been waiting for. Practically all of the large local department stores were liberal buyers yesterday, as were Marshall Field, the Boston Store, Carson, Pirie, Scott Co., the Commercial Trading Company, and others of Chicago, and the Ely-Walker Dry Goods Company, St. Louis. Other mid-West cities were well represented in the purchases, as was New England, particularly Boston.

Both the rug and carpet offerings were in brisk demand, although it was remarked that many of the prices obtained were about on a parity with the lower prices prevailing three years ago. Brussels carpets yesterday went in some instances as low as 60 cents per yard, against 60½ cents, the season's opening price, while velvets, catalogued at 88 cents in the early Summer, dropped on the average 15 cents a yard. There were 112 lots of these goods, and no trouble was experienced by the auctioneer in disposing of them. The Smith Axminster rugs averaged about the same as on other days of the auction. Palisade seamless velvet rugs, 9 by 12 feet, ranged from $9.85 to $9.95, against $13.65, the regular price. The same rug, 10 feet 6 inches by 12 feet, went at from $10.35 to $11, a considerable slump from $16.90, the price placed on the goods at the season's opening. Katonah seamless velvet rugs, size 9 by 12, had a selling range of from $7.60 to $8.10, compared with $11.15, the regular rate. Katonah velvet rugs, size 27 by 54 inches, ranged from 57½ to 62½ cents, the regular price on this line being 85 cents.

Other sales at somewhat lower prices than earlier in the auction included Kirman, Axminster, Carlton, Axminster, Saxony Axminster, and Colonial velvet rugs. The Smith Company will open its Spring, 1915, lines tomorrow and also issue its price list for these goods.

FIX VALUE OF 23D ST. STOCK.

New York Railways May Acquire It at $350 Per Share.

The New York Railways Company has been authorized by the Public Service Commission to purchase the outstanding stock of the old Twenty-third Street Railway Company on the basis of an exchange of $350 face value of its thirty-year 4 per cent. gold bonds for a $100 share. As the Twenty-third Street Company has outstanding 6,000 shares, the New York Railways Company will issue $2,100,000 additional bonds.

The street railway company was organized in 1872 and in 1893 was merged in the old Metropolitan Street Railway system. The New York Railway Company, as the assignees of the rights of the old Metropolitan, is bound to pay the Twenty-third Street stockholders, as long as the lease lasts, 18 per cent. This arrangement gave the Twenty-third Street stock, which is very inactive, at the last sale of 100 shares a value of 257. Consequently, in passing upon the proposed exchange, Commissioner Maltbie assumed its value at from $250 to $280 a share.

Then he took note of the fact that in the last quotations before the Stock Exchange closed New York Railways bonds ranged between 76 and 77. Then, however, the Commissioner raised the question of amortization. He recommended to his colleague that the company should not be permitted to issue $2,100,000 of bonds, since they could only be sold at a considerable discount unless they made arrangements for the amortization of this discount in the thirty years before they were payable.

So the exchange on the basis of one share of Twenty-third Street stock for $350 face value of New York Railways bonds was authorized, on condition that the New York Railways Company provide for the amortization of 22 per cent. of the face value of its new bonds and that the offer to the Twenty-third Street stockholders be kept open until Dec. 31.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

In Town.

LOUIS AMDUR, manufacturer of clothing at 883 Broadway, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $66,940 and assets of $22,105. Among the creditors are the O. J. Lewis Mercantile Company of St. Louis, $6,200, secured; L. Bachman & Co., $5,281, and S. Brinn & Brother, $4,862. The assets were turned over to a committee of creditors on Sept. 14. The petition was filed to put through a composition, it is said, of 25 cents on the dollar.

SAMUEL SHEINDELMAN COMPANY, manufacturer of knit goods of 15 East Fourth Street, has made an assignment to Morris B. Arnold. A petition in bankruptcy was also filed against it by these creditors: Beswick & Clay, Inc., $619; John F. Stern, $54, and W. R. Golden, $12.

J. GLASGOW & CO. (a corporation,) manufacturer of ostrich feathers at 10 Washington Place, has made an assignment to Benjamin Klinger. A petition in bankruptcy has also been filed against it by these creditors: Hayes Feather Company, $150; Serman's Company, $250, and Oueitahoorn Raw Ostrich Feather Company, $250.

WOLF, ROTHBERG & BLOOM.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Wolf, Rothberg & Bloom, manufacturers of cloaks and suits at 37 West Twenty-eighth Street, by these creditors: Samuel Fischer, $350; A. Lampel, $200, and J. F. Rothschild, $50. These assigned on Friday. Liabilities are $8,000 and assets $3,000.

NAFTALI OESTERREICHER.—A petition has been filed against Naftali Oesterreicher, dealer in women's and men's furnishing goods at 2,104 Amsterdam Avenue, by these creditors: Reis, $73; S. Heilman & Co., $59; Charles Falkenberg, $102; Alfred A. Word, $212, and Burt Shirt Company, $93. Liabilities are $5,000 and assets $1,800.

ROBINSON & GELMAN.—A petition has been filed against Samuel Robinson and Minnie Gelman, who compose the firm of Robinson & Gelman, grocers at 917 Jennings Street, by these creditors: S. Benowitz, $105; Pinsky & Sitomer, $100; Louis Raport, $224, and Edgar L. Baker, $93.

LOUIS SHENTES of 1,750 Fulton Av. has filed a petition with liabilities $965 and assets $313 in uncollectible accounts.

JULES BONY & CO., INC.—Judge Hough has appointed Oliver M. Goldsmith receiver for Jules Bony & Co., Inc., importers of furniture and tapestries from Belgium and France.

JACOB LEIBEL.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Jacob Leibel, dealer in men's furnishing goods at 804 Fourth Avenue, show liabilities $7,253 and assets $845.

EDWARD H. MILLER, grocer at 102 East End Avenue, has made an assignment to Sidney R. Fleischer.

JUDGMENTS.

These judgments were filed yesterday in New York County, the first being that of the debtor:

Aetna Film Co.—J. Arthur, $118.
Bloway, Harry and Mary L.—E. H. O'Hara, $1,214.
Butler, J. Holmes—A. Ofner, $418.
Boehm, Jannie—J. B. Martindale et al., $121.
Betz, John, and Charles W. Jones—M. Rosen, $663.
City of New York—P. Ryan, $4,866.
Claflin, Aron—G. Rosenfeld, $477.
Cohen, Philip, and Wallace Scotcher, and Ralph M. Stalker—Hackensack National Bank, $1,055.
Canfield, Edwin A.—National Nassau Bank, $381.
Conway, Joseph, and Alfred Bartels—People, &c., $2,000.
Colonelli, Gustavo—Broadway Trust Co., $1,704.
Craig, Edward W.—F. Fernandez, $679.
Dahlgren, Eric B.—Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, $23,097.
Esdohr, William H.—W. H. Pratt, $1,883.
Famous Co.—J. H. Greenhaus, $759.
Elfin, Selig, and Matthew M. Black—C. L. Appel, $356.
Frohlich, Louis D.—P. P. Cappell, $149.
Ftumkes, Irving, and Irving Levine—Berkowitz & Prauhart, $178.
Hartwell, Stafford Publisher, Inc.—G. Hartzschuch, $194.
Gross, Otto—W. Grossman, $602.
Gardner, Harold D.—Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co., $176.
Gutzmann, Otto—F. Tamm, $1,124.
Gordon, Harris—Simon Strauss, Inc., $507.
Gourley, Mary A.—F. Risser, $112.
Havnor, Henry J.—C. Iffer, $389.
Hummel, Max, and David Baral—L. Rovere, $524.
Irving, James D.—C. A. Wilson, $126.
Jones, Joseph N.—A. Farbes, $731.
Knickerbocker Garage—Mr. and Mrs. Edison, $879.
Koenig, Morris—J. First, $190.
Koenig, Gustave—Piel Bros., $138.
London Construction Co., Louis London, Albert London, and Louis E. Guinest—Pierce, Butler & Pierce Mfg. Co., $519.
L. A. Morey Co.—Postal Telegraph Cable Co., $155.
La Magnita Segar Co. and Harry Rothschild—Cosmopolitan Bank, $1,442.
Moldower, Nathan—J. B. Martindale et al., $235.
Mayne, Ernest—A. De Winter, $197.
Mincer, Jacob L.—J. B. Martindale et al., $151.
Meyer, Robert—M. S. Roth, $164.
Mariotti, Carlo—Broadway Trust Co., $460.
Novak, Soffie—J. Farber, $1,765.
Novak, Soffie, Ethel Togan, and Bronx Security and Brokerage Co.—J. Farber, $450.
Newstate Co.—A. Goldstein, $219.
Parkerson, John T.—Clark Bros., $159.
Palumbo, Vincenzo—L'Araldo Italian Publishing Co., $112.
Meyer, Frederick—M. Friedlander et al., $252.
R. J. Bucholz Coal Co., Inc.—Peale, Peacock & Kerr Co. of N. Y., $876.
Samuels, Harry, Jacob W., and Elias W.—A. Boskowitz, $1,463.
Singer, Otto—Star Co., $168.
Smith, Wesley M.—Peck Bros. & Co., $341.
Shore, Julian E., Alice P. Haldane, executrix, and Harriett Rogers and Kenneth Frasier, executors—Lawyers Title Insurance and Trust Co., $583.
Shaud, Maurice T.—Fairbanks Co., $475.
Schor, William—P. Livingston, $257.
Starita, Charles, and Frank and Rachel De Grauw—Aymar & Co., $324.
Vigorito, Maria—A. Krumenaker, $152.
Spier, Alexander, and Jefferson Bank—W. W. Farley, $1,820.
Fursno, Frank—J. B. Martindale et al., $189.
Weiss, Jacon J.—J. B. Martindale et al., $236.
Willard E. Augustus—Plaza Motor Renting Co., $107.
Wiener, Rebecca—J. Seaman et al., $280.
Weygandt, Arthur, and Joseph Sanford Santella—People, &c., $2,000.

In Bronx County.

Alferi, Luige—City of N. Y., $262.
Attansio, Michele, Monaco Construction Co., and Joseph Monacco—Harlem River Lumber and Wood Working Co., $680.
Arnstein, Robert, and Isaac Coban—M. Miller, $667.
Buellesbach Construction Co., Inc.—Murray & Hill Co., $2,575.
Buongioro, Luigi—Olin J. Stephens, Inc., $188.
Brothwell, George—N. Y. Steam Auto Tire Works, Inc., $107.
Crystal, Israel—S. Miller, $195.
Ettar Realty Co., Abraham Iscar and Meyer Iscar—Brand & Silverstein Iron Works, $299.
Empire State Woodworking Co., Inc.—City of N. Y., $262.
Engel, Frida—J. Kelly, $121.
Green, David—Manhattan Leasing Co., $582.
Goldman, Jacob—Mohawk Bros., $426.
Gagin, Mary—A. Enting et al., $170.
Maurice, Joseph, and Filipi Passeriname—North Sand Co., $140.
Streicher, Ida—J. M. Dunproff et al., $2,055.
Wendelkin, Diedrich—M. Hasbrouck, $105.

SATISFIED JUDGMENTS.

The first name is that of the debtor, the second that of the creditor, and date when judgment was filed:

Delores Mines Co. of America—E. D. Lachman, Oct. 20, 1914, $3,662.
Fejer, Joseph—A. Weld, July 24, 1914, $190.
John W. Merriam & Co.—Atlantic Box & Lumber Co., Oct. 1, 1914, $120.
Rubins, Samuel—S. Vaccara, Dec. 6, 1913, $105.
Wayfourth Construction Co., Vincent Robino, and Antonio Bonassi—G. S. Germani, Sept. 28, 1914, $305.
Whitcombe, Herman S.—M. M. Shipley, Nov. 14, 1908, $138.

THIS WEEK'S FREE LECTURES

Sunday.

THE CITY AND ITS EMPLOYES, by President Marcus M. Marks of the Borough of Manhattan, Sunday morning lecture, Mount Morris Baptist Church, Fifth Avenue, between 126th and 127th Streets, 10 A. M.

ORGAN RECITAL, by Prof. Samuel A. Baldwin, Great Hall, College of the City of New York, 4 P. M.

A LEADER WITHOUT FOLLOWERS, by the Rev. Dr. Jonathan C. Day, 4 P. M.; "How He Finds Things Out," by Prof. S. C. Schmucker, 5 P. M.; "The Responsibilities of Citizenship," by Dr. Day, S. P. M., Labor Temple, Fourteenth Street and Second Avenue.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND LABOR, by John C. Walsh, Public School 101, 111th Street, west of Lexington Avenue, 8:15 P. M.

CONCERT, Herbert Stavely Sammond, organist; Rowley McElvery, baritone, Manual Training High School, Seventh Avenue and Fourth Street, Brooklyn, 3 P. M.

CONCERT, by Kaltenborn String Quartet, Commercial High School, Albany Avenue and Dean Street, 8 P. M.

Monday.

RADIANT HEAT, by Dr. Ernest R. Von Nardroff, Principal of Stuyvesant High School, Washington Irving High School, 40 Irving Place, 8:15 P. M.

LIFE WITH THE UNITED STATES FISHERIES, by Dr. Francis Rolt-Wheeler, Public School 59, 228 East Fifty-seventh Street, 8:15 P. M.

THE YELLOW PERIL, by Sydney Nevills Ussher, Public School 119, 133d Street, near Eighth Avenue, 8:15 P. M.

ADVANCE OF DEMOCRACY IN ENGLAND, by Dr. Jacob Salwyn Schapiro of the College of the City of New York, Public School 166, 106th Street, near Amsterdam Avenue, 8:15 P. M.

THE HUDSON IN NATURE AND HISTORY, by Dr. Isaac C. Sturges, Public Library, 112 East Ninety-sixth Street, 8:15 P. M.

HOW GERMANY IS GOVERNED, by Dr. Nelson P. Mead, St. Luke's Hall, Hudson Street, south of Christopher, 8:15 P. M.

THE COURTS AND THE INTERPRETATION OF LAW, by Dr. Edgar Dawson of Hunter College, St. Peter's Hall, Twentieth Street, west of Eighth Avenue, 8:15 P. M.

Tuesday.

INSECTS TAKEN AT LAKEHURST IN OCTOBER, by William T. Davis and Ernest Shoemaker, New York Entomological Society, American Museum of Natural History, 8:15 P. M.

MODERN AGRICULTURE, by William Noyes of Teachers College, Public School 4, Rivington and Ridge Streets, 8:15 P. M.

THE PANAMA CANAL AND THE EXPOSITION, by Dr. William Rader, Public School 63, Fourth Street, east of First Avenue, 8:15 P. M.

GEORGE ELIOT, by Dr. J. Duncan Spaeth of Princeton, Public School 66, Eighty-eighth Street, east of First Avenue, 8:15 P. M.

THE NORTHWEST, by C. J. Blanchard, Public School 90, 147th Street west of Ington Place, 8:15 P. M.

MILLET AND THE BARBIZON PAINTERS, by Alexander T. Van Laer, Museum of Natural History, Seventy-seventh Street and Central Park West, 8:15 P. M.

EXPENDITURE OF LEISURE TIME IN NEW YORK, by J. C. Boyers, Executive Secretary Recreation Alliance, Metropolitan Temple, Seventh Avenue and Fourteenth Street, 8:15 P. M.

Wednesday.

WHAT BOSTON DID AND WHAT NEW YORK CAN DO FOR THE UNEMPLOYED, by Walter Lincoln Sears, Secretary New York Public Employment Bureau, Labor Temple, Fourteenth Street and Second Avenue, 8 P. M.

ORGAN RECITAL, by Prof. Samuel A. Baldwin, Great Hall, College of the City of New York, 4 P. M.

WONDERS OF COLOR, by Prof. William Clark Peckham of Adelphi College, Public Library, 505 West 145th Street, 8:15 P. M.

THE UNIFICATION OF ITALY, by Edward F. Humphrey of Columbia, Young Men's Christian Association Hall, 5 West 125th Street, 8:15 P. M.

Thursday.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION, by Dr. William B. Guthrie of College of the City of New York, Washington Irving High School, 40 Irving Place, 8:15 P. M.

BYRON: The Eternal Spirit of the Chainless Mind, by Prof. Christian Gauss of Princeton, Public School 46, 156th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue, 8:15 P. M.

BROWNING, by Dr. J. Duncan Spaeth of Princeton, Public School 165, 106th Street, west of Amsterdam Avenue, 8:15 P. M.

THE MANUFACTURE OF FLOUR, by William Noyes of Teachers College, Institute Hall, 218 East Eighth Street, 8:15 P. M.

OUR NATION'S COMMERCE, by Morris A. Lunn, illustrated, Labor Temple, Fourteenth Street and Second Avenue, 8 P. M.

Friday.

EMERSON, THE INDIVIDUALIST, by Prof. Stockton Axson of Rice University, Texas, Wadleigh High School, 114th Street and Seventh Avenue, 8:15 P. M.

WORK OF THE STREET CLEANING DEPARTMENT, by Frederick L. Stearns, Superintendent of Final Disposition, Street Cleaning Department, Public School 17, Forty-seventh Street, west of Eighth Avenue, 8:15 P. M.

HARVESTING THE FOREST CROP, by Prof. Frank H. Moon of the New York College of Forestry, Public School 66, Eighty-eighth Street, east of First Avenue, 8:15 P. M.

LAND AND ITS RENT, by Prof. James Walter Crook of Amherst College, Public School 132, 182d Street and Wadsworth Avenue, 8:15 P. M.

Saturday.

A BOTANIST IN INDIA AND JAVA, by Dr. C. F. Millspaugh, Lecture Hall, Museum Building, New York Botanical Garden, 4 P. M.

GLACIERS, by Prof. William Libbey of Princeton, Public School 184, 119th Street, west of Fifth Avenue, 8:15 P. M.

THE PANAMA CANAL AND THE EXPOSITION, by Dr. William Rader, Cooper Union, Eighth Street and Fourth Avenue, 8:15 P. M.

MAN AND HIS NEAR KIN, by Prof. Samuel C. Schmucker of the State Normal School, West Chester, Penn., at Museum of Natural History, Seventy-seventh Street and Central Park West, 8:15 P. M.

ASIA AND THE NATIONS OF THE FAR EAST, by Dr. William E. Griffis, Public Library, 505 West 145th Street, 8:15 P. M.

EDUCATION NOTES.

The next meeting of the Board of Education will be held on Nov. 11.

All Presidents of associations who have not signed the resolutions of protest against the carrying into effect of the proposed plan to have regular day school teachers teach in vacation schools without pay, and who wish to sign such resolutions, should send their authority to President Alexander L. Pugh of the High School Teachers' Association, 055 West Sixty-fifth Street.

The semi-annual report of the local School Board of District 46 has been received by the Board of Education. It will be analyzed and referred to the appropriate committees and officials.

The Board of Aldermen has provided for the issue of $1,000 corporate stock for the construction of an open-air classroom for anaemic children in P. S. 135, Manhattan.

A school site has been selected on Rhinelander, Bogart, and Radcliff Avenues, the Bronx.

The Board of Education has accepted, with thanks, the offer of the Alfred Corning Clark Neighborhood House to provide without cost to the board a room during the regular school hours for pupils of P. S. 188, (boys,) Manhattan.

New P. S. 51, Jackson and Trinity Avenues and 158th Street, the Bronx, will be organized for boys and girls from the kindergarten to the 3B grade.

New P. S. 84, Old House Landing Road, Little Neck, Queens, will be organized for all grades from kindergarten to 7B, inclusive. When this new building is opened P. S. 82, Lakeville Road, Little Neck, will be made its annex. The present annex of P. S. 82, at Douglaston, will then be discontinued as such, and will be made an annex of P. S. 94.

WILLS FOR PROBATE.

BATES, MARY H., (Oct. 22;) personalty, over $10,000; 1 diamond ring each to Mrs. Alfred Gautier, Sallie Carleton, Mrs. Charles C. Hyde, and Mrs. C. Austin Bettsby; all household furniture, wearing apparel, &c., not specifically bequeathed, to Mrs. Charles L. Pearson and Mrs. Wm. P. Tilton; Metropolitan Museum of Art, portrait of "my sister and myself and silver candlesticks"; Ethel H. Smith, "Madonna," and statuette of Shakespeare's St. Ann's P. E. Church, $500; $10,000 in trust for life for mother, Charlotte M. Carleton; Samuel Oscar Howe, $1,000; Harry K. Carleton, $500; residue to Rodney P. Bates.

CORCORAN, FRANCIS, (April 19;) realty, over $10,000; personalty, over $10,000; to Mary Egan, $300; residue into 19 parts; 5 parts each to Bernard H. Smith, Margaret Chip and Mary L. Ackerman; 5 parts each to George H. Smith and Frances White.

GARTLAND, THOMAS M., (Oct. 18;) personalty, about $2,500; all to widow.

MERRITT, FLORENCE, (Nov. 14, 1913;) realty, over $10,000; personalty, over $10,000; all to sister, Georgina Agnes Merritt.

POWELL, JOHN M., (Oct. 8;) realty, $100; personalty, $1,000; widow gets lot at Davenport Heights, N. J.; household furniture and benefit fund from Odd Fellows; interest in business jointly conducted by testator and son-in-law, Peter Dennis; ⅓ to latter, ⅓ to widow, ⅓ to Katie P. Dennis, and ⅓ to residue, all of which goes to Katie P. Dennis.

STRAUS, MAX H.; realty, less than $2,000; personalty, over $5,000; to Jessie Schayeck, $5,000; residue in trust for life for Josie E. Straus.

THE UNITED SERVIC

FINANCIAL SITUATION AND COMMODITIES MARKETS

VALUATION BASED ON JUNE 30 PRICES

Insurance Companies' Plan for Appraisal of Securities They Hold Announced.

NORMAL FIGURES SOUGHT

Similar Question to be Decided by Supt. Richards in Regard to Savings Banks.

The valuation of securities held by insurance companies will be based this year on June 30 prices, as it is not expected that Dec. 31 prices will be available, and it is deemed best to ignore any prices made on the Stock Exchanges just before the war started and irregular transactions since the Exchanges closed.

This decision was announced yesterday by Frank Hasbrouck, Superintendent of Insurance, as the result of a poll of the members of the Committee on Valuation of Securities of the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, by which the valuations are published. Supt. Hasbrouck is Chairman of the committee, seven of whom favored June 30 prices, one those of July 30, and one proposed deferring the question till Dec. 1.

The valuations made by the committee each year are used in auditing the statements of insurance companies in their reports to the insurance departments and if the prices of July 30, the last day the Stock Exchange was open, were used, these statements would be affected materially by the drop in prices at that time. This would apply especially to fire insurance and casualty companies, as life insurance companies are not required to value their securities according to market prices, but may use the amortized value, which is not affected by fluctuations in the market.

The last occasion on which a similar condition arose was in 1907, when market values went off badly in the panic. The insurance companies then were permitted to use the average price of their securities for the same date in each of the twelve months and the last day of the preceding year.

"Conditions prevailing on June 30," said Supt. Hasbrouck yesterday, "were such that the prices then obtainable represented normal conditions. Immediately thereafter rumors of war and the declaration of war caused a marked decline in the value of securities. It would be unfair to penalize our insurance companies for a condition that is only temporary. There is no doubt in my mind that the intrinsic value of securities held by insurance companies has remained unchanged and that the decline in prices will be only temporary."

The Superintendent of Banks in this State is required also to put valuations on securities held by savings banks on June 1 and Dec. 1. The same question has come up as between the prices in the market on June 30 and on July 30, which would affect savings bank surpluses. Supt. Richards is expected to decide the matter within a week or so.

A Machine for Banding China.

A new device has been put on the market to assist decorators of china and glassware in the banding of regular and irregular pieces of pottery. It is said for the bander that it can be used successfully on round, square, oval, or festoon china, glass, agate, and other ware. There is nothing about the device to get out of order, and it is said that it can be used capably after very little practice. A gauge rod, which rests against the edge of the object being banded and which guides the brush, is one of the principal parts of the device. The movements of the brush in the device are governed by an adjusting screw which is operated by the forefinger of the hand which holds it. To band the edge of a piece of ware it is only necessary to insert a U-shaped point provided for that purpose and proceed as before.

EXPORTS MAKE A RECORD.

Great Volume and Variety of Shipments from This Port.

The export movement out of this port for the week ended yesterday surpassed the previous week's high records of $21,397,327, by approximately $1,000,000. The official Custom House figures for the first five business days of last week exceeded the full week before by $588,878. The estimated total exports for last week are set down at $22,481,205. During the week, buying in this country for the accounts of Great Britain, France, and Russia continued unabated, and, as in previous weeks since the war began, consisted of foodstuffs, clothing, underwear, shoes, hosiery, automobiles, ammunition, and other munitions of war, as well as a great variety of other articles of all kinds.

For the first time since hostilities began, Germany appeared in the American markets for supplies, chiefly of a military character, that is to say, rifles, cartridges, and motor cycles. The Knox Motors Company, Springfield, Mass., has received an order from the German Government for heavy motor trucks. Speculation exists in local exporting circles regarding the plan to be followed by Germany in getting her American purchases safely across the Atlantic into her home territory. While these purchases could be shipped in vessels flying the Italian flag to an Italian port, and sent overland into Germany, through Switzerland, or Austria, exporters here believe such cargoes would certainly be seized by the British or French warships. Equally hazardous would be shipments to the neutral Scandinavian countries or Holland.

The increasing disasters to merchant vessels of neutral nations from mines the past week caused a heavy advance in marine insurance. The insurance factors are plainly worried over the outlook, and some express the fear that further losses of this kind may send insurance written by private companies to an almost prohibitive figure. During the week the Dutch Government has been reported as laying mines, while German mines have wrought havoc to shipping a few miles off the Irish coast. In addition, the week's military movements beyond Ostend on the English Channel have brought additional dangers to navigation.

Robert T. Rose, Foreign Trade Advisor to Secretary Bryan, is in this city conferring with owners of vessels flying the American flag, as well as owners of ships under other flags, with a view to the transfer of a sufficient number of vessels to American registry to carry cotton. Shipments of cotton last week from all ports to foreign countries aggregated 167,289 bales, but Mr. Rose expects that within a short time heavy exports will be recorded, since England, France, and Germany are badly in need of the product.

STOCK EXCHANGE NEWS.

Membership Posted for Transfer.—Charles Hitchcock, Jr., to Eugene Hale, Jr.; sponsors, Robert D. Wrenn, Walter C. Taylor.

Change in Firm.—A. W. Kilborne & Co., Clarkson Runyon, deceased, interest ceased.

Branch Offices.—L. F. Rothschild & Co., 500 Fifth Avenue, New York, discontinued; Thomas & McKinnon, Terre Haute, Ind., discontinued; Dick Brothers & Co., New London, Conn., discontinued; Redmond & Co., Washington, D. C., discontinued; J. F. Pierson, Jr., & Co., 624 Madison Avenue, New York, discontinued; Hirsch, Lilienthal & Co., Fifth Avenue Building, New York, discontinued.

New Way to Lace Shoes.

A new way to lace shoes, which is expected to aid the future sale of the new military shoe by improving its fit, has been devised by the Boot and Shoe Recorder. In the approved type of military shoe the top is of cloth, with two leather strips, or lace stays, sewed up the front. The holes are of the invisible eyelet type, and the lace itself is a narrow cord. The proper way to lace this shoe is straight over, and here is where the trade journal comes in. It has devised a system of straight-over lacing, in which the under lace is not visible over the tongue, as in the common way of doing this lacing. It is urged in favor of the new lacing that, while it takes longer to do than the old way of the criss-cross style it produces a much neater effect than either.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Cash Inflow Continues—Banks Again Increase Surplus Reserve.

In its weekly statement the Clearing House reported yesterday a gain of over $6,400,000 in cash, the full amount of which was added to surplus reserve. The excess of cash holdings above requirements now approximates $15,000,000, which emphasizes the contrast with the conditions which prevailed throughout August and September. October has proved a month of recovery, and the rapidity with which the position of the banks at this centre has improved reflects very clearly the character of the forces now at work.

The return of the Clearing House, so far as the national banks are concerned, takes no account of the inflow of national bank notes, and it is known that the New York banks' holdings of these in addition to the money which they are free to count as reserve, are very large. This fact and the noteworthy gain which has been made in the reserve position of the banks foreshadow the early retirement of a substantial amount of the banknote circulation which was put out to meet the abnormal demand which made its appearance at the outset of the war. If the weekly bank statement included a report of the amount of natinal bank notes held by the national banks it would emphasize still more clearly the present redundancy of the currency. Under the present practice the national bank notes held by other national banks are deducted from their gross deposits in figuring their net deposits and so have the effect of reducing reserve requirements.

Further reductions have been made in the amount of Clearing House certificates outstanding, and if cash continues to come in on the present scale very little incentive will be left to any of the banks to keep loan certificates out. Similarly as the tax on the Aldrich-Vreeland currency increases from month to month the banks will find an added reason in this fact for retiring their circulation. But there are other factors which can be brought to bear on the situation if this tax does not prove sufficient to bring in the additional bank notes, or such of them for which there is no longer real need. The Secretary of the Treasury has it in his power to call for the deposit of more gold against the outstanding circulation of the national banks, and this could be made an effective stimulus to redemption if it becomes necessary.

ADMITS GROUND FOR SUIT.

Wallace Committee Says Only Rock Island Stockholders May Act.

Replying to a circular letter to holders of Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific collateral bonds, counsel for N. L. Amster said yesterday:

"The Wallace Committee does not deny there is ground for suits for restitution against the old management, but states that neither the committee nor a bondholder may bring such suit. They do state, however, that a stockholder of the railway company may bring such suit. Do bondholders not realise that the legal owner of over $71,000,000 of the stock of the railway company is the Central Trust Company of New York, trustee for the bondholders, and that it has always been, and is now, within the power of the trust company, acting for all bondholders, and as owner of such stock, to bring such suits? Bondholders may well ask why their trustee has failed to bring such action.

"The argument of the committee that the stock cannot be sold in lots is specious. It would seem to be a simple matter to accept in payment a bond of $1,000 par value for stock of that par value."

The Raw Silk Summary.

The Japanese raw silk market continues quiet, but prices are firm and an upward turn is looked for. In Canton the market shows no change, according to cables received by A. P. Villa & Bros., but it is reported that there are quite a number of inquiries coming in for fifth crop silks, which are now appearing in that market. There is very little business reported from Shanghai. Steam filatures and tussahs are not in much demand, but there is some call for tsatlees. At Milan the tone of the market is easier and, while stocks there are very low, it is thought that the dealers would offer concessions if it would induce buying. At this city the situation shows little change.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE RATES.

	London.		Paris.		Berlin.
	Dmd.	Cab.	Dmd.	Cab.	Dmd.	Cab.
Oct. 26	$4.90	$4.90⅛	$5.14⅞	$5.14	.85⅝	.85⅞
Oct. 27	4.90	4.90⅛	5.15	5.14	.86⅛	.85⅞
Oct. 28	4.89⅞	4.90⅛	5.14⅝	5.14	.86⅛	.86⅜
Oct. 29	4.90	4.90⅛	5.15	5.14⅛	.86⅝	.86⅜
Oct. 30	4.90¼	4.90⅜	5.14¾	5.13⅞	.86⅝	.86⅜

	Switzerland.		Holland.
	Dmd.	Cab.	Dmd.	Cab.
Oct. 26	5.14⅛	5.14	.40⅜	.40⅛
Oct. 27	5.16	5.15	.40⅜	.41
Oct. 28	5.17	5.15	.40⅝	.41 3-16
Oct. 29	5.18	5.17	.41	.41 3-16
Oct. 30	5.18⅛	5.18	.41	.41⅛

NEW HAVEN NOTE OPTION.

Bankers Get an Extension on $10,000,000 Issue to April 29.

A syndicate of New York and Boston bankers, headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., which had an option on an issue of $10,000,000 of New Haven one-year 6 per cent. notes, has secured an extension of the option to April 29. The original option expired Oct. 29.

The same syndicate underwrote $30,000,000 of one-year 5 per cent. notes of the New Haven and the Harlem River & Port Chester, and $20,000,000 three-year 6 per cent. notes of the New England Navigation Company, which were dated May 1.

When the war began there were left undistributed in the underwriters' hands more than $2,500,000 of the Harlem River issue and about $13,000,000 of the Navigation notes. In view of the closing of the investment markets there was no disposition to exercise the option for the other $10,000,000 of New Haven notes. It was said yesterday that the delay in obtaining the funds would not embarrass any plans of the railroad.

GOOD SHOWING BY C., B. & Q.

Earns 15.4% Despite Decrease of $2,316,000 from Last Year.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, which is owned jointly by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, earned a surplus of $17,114,000 last year, a decrease of $2,316,000 from the year ended June 30, 1913. Nevertheless, the balance was equivalent to 15.4 per cent. on the $110,839,000 of capital stock.

Gross operating revenues were $92,750,000, a decrease of $1,024,000, while expenses showed only a small decrease. Taxes were $4,028,000, an increase of $465,000. The company expended $5,715,000 out of earnings for additions and betterments, as against $7,647,000 in the previous year. Expenditures for new lines, extensions, and equipment and additions and betterments totaled $20,421,000.

NEW INCORPORATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 31.—Incorporated today: John Nicholas Co., tobacco and by-products, $25,000; P. G. Stewart, W. B. Gardner, J. Nicholas, 349 Clinton St., B'klyn.

Cort Hotel Co., $10,000; J. Bauer, J. A. Sweeney, J. A. Garvey, 344 W. 51 St.

New York & West Indies Trading Corp'n, selling agents, $10,000; E. V. Ryan, E. J. Lee, G. H. Bowter, 286 Park Av.

Self Propelled Car Co., capital no par value; E. De Tranalies, E. Clauss, M. E. Harby, Huntington.

Independent Plumbers Specialty Co., $5,000; J. Hirschfeld, H. Fox, M. Goldfard, 1,640 Anthony Av.

Marcell Dress Co., $5,000; V. De Vizio, L. Bertucci, P. A. Pizzani, 448 E. 147 St.

Sigeria Realty Co., $10,000; H. F. Mela, I. Niner, W. J. Magee, 608 10 St., B'klyn.

Spooner Campbell Co., Gouverneur, farm implements, autos, vehicles, hardware, seeds, $40,000; E. W. and V. B. Campbell, A. Spooner, Richville.

Tarrytown Garage, $5,000; C. R. and M. J. Keith, C. Fritz Offenhauser, Tarrytown.

Salamanca Garage, Salamanca, $6,000; C. E. Congdon, M. J. Eaton, N. J. Fornes.

Winona Realty Co., Rochester, $20,000; E. L. Haines, G. A. and Bessie J. Gillette.

South Coast & Northern Lumber Co., Saranac Lake, $50,000; C. S. Thurston, W. D. McNeil, Laurance Jones.

Capital increase: Okomo Soap Co., N. Y., $500 to $50,000.

Capital decrease: Baltimore Realty Co., N. Y., $750,000 to $140,000.

FALL RIVER QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Oct. 31.—Cotton mill stocks:

	Bid.	Asked.	Sale.
American Linen Co.	50	65	..
Arkwright Mills	..	93	..
Barnard Mfg. Co.	..	80	..
Border City Mfg. Co.	..	95	..
Chace Mills	..	2½	..
Cornell Mills	..	147½	..
Conanicut Mills	..	96	..
Davol Mills	86	..	..
Flint Mills	95	99	99
Granite Mills	..	100	..
Hargreves Mills	42½	..	..
King Philip Mills	102	..	..
Laurel Lake Mills	..	105	..
Lincoln Mfg. Co.	..	76	..
Merchant Mfg. Co.	..	80	..
Mechanics Mills	70	..	..
Narragansett Mills	..	102	..
Osborne Mills	..	98½	..
Pocasett Mfg. Co.	..	105	..
Richard Borden Mfg. Co.	..	120	118½
Sagamore Mfg. Co.	168	..	..
Seaconnet Mills	..	65	..
Shove Mills	..	75	..
Stafford Mills	..	90	..
Tecumseh Mills	100	105	..
Union Cotton Mfg. Co.	..	170	..
Wampanoag Mills	..	80	..
Westamoe Mills	..	80	..

RAILWAY EQUIPMENT BONDS.

The following are quoted on a percentage basis:

Name.	Maturity.	Rate.	Bid.	Asked.
Atlantic Coast L.	1914-'21	4, 4½	5.50	4.95
Baltimore & Ohio.	1914-'23	4½	5.85	5.00
Buf., R. & P.	1914-'23	4½, 5	5.80	5.00
Chesapeake & O.	1914-'17	4½	5.75	5.25
Chicago & N. W.	1914-'23	4½	5.60	4.95
Chic., Ind. & L.	1914-'23	4½	6.25	5.35
Erie Railroad.	1914-'23	4½, 5	6.00	5.25
Hocking Valley.	1914-'23	5	5.90	5.00
Illinois Central.	1914-'23	4½, 5	5.65	5.00
Louisville & Nash.	1914-'23	5	5.50	4.90
Mo., Kan. & T.	1914-'23	5	6.40	5.70
Missouri Pacific.	1914-'23	5	6.70	5.75
Penn. G. Freight.	1914-'23	4, 4½	5.15	4.75
St. L. I. M. & S.	1914-'24	5	6.70	5.50
Seaboard A. L.	1914-'23	5	5.90	5.20
Southern Railway.	1914-'24	4½, 5	6.30	5.20
Southern Pacific.	1914-'23	4½	5.70	5.00
Virginian Ry.	1914-'19	5	6.65	5.65

CLEARING HOUSE STATEMENT.

Exchanges	$215,035,644
Balances	13,272,951
Sub-Treasury debit balance	219,570

BAR SILVER.

In London, 22 3-16d per ounce, off 3-16d.

In New York, 48¾c, off ⅝c.

STEEL TRADE PICKING UP.

Structural Buying and Activity in Other Lines Strengthen Market.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 31.—Mills rolling heavy materials are rapidly exhausting their rolling schedules. Toward the end of the week there was a gradual slackening of the pace in the Pittsburgh district, especially in the production of plates, shapes, and bars. The encouraging factor, however, has been the revival of structural buying, and evidences of dormant activity in other lines of heavy steel. Much is made in some circles of the Government award on armor plate, and the sub-contracts for steel plates for naval vessels, but it is understood specifications on these will not be ready until after the opening of the new year.

In steel circles here the impression gained at the end of the week is that the termination of the election activities would tend to help domestic business conditions.

The larger producers have not receded from the minimum of 1.15c., mill, on plates, shapes, and bars. On desirable inquiries for shapes and bars some producers are believed to be quoting 1.10c., Pittsburgh mill, but the quotation is not general enough to make the market. The two heaviest producers in this district announce that they are quoting nothing under 1.15c. on plates and shapes. Two producers in this district continue to ask 1.20c. on bars for first-quarter shipment.

Softness is manifest in the crude steel market, with Eastern Ohio producers of billets and crude bars leading the shading, their minimum quotations having dropped to $19, Youngstown mill, a recession of 50 cents from the low point of ten days ago. Actual shading of sheet bars is reported at a little less than $20, Youngstown mill, as against the Pittsburgh minimum of $20.50, mill. An effort is being made locally to place the basic iron market on the basis of $12.50 at Valley furnace. The last quotation on a known sale of basic was $12.75 Valley furnace, and in the absence of inquiry or acknowledged sales there is a hesitancy about changing market quotations. Cleveland and Chicago markets are equally bare of any inquiry for basic iron.

The quotation of $12.75 accurately represents the market on foundry iron, although a number of Pittsburgh district producers refuse to go below $13 at furnace on standard grades. There has been little or no market locally the past week, and the melt in Pittsburgh and Valleys continues to diminish steadily. Stocks of pig iron in the manufacturer's hands have been growing for upward of sixty days in this section.

BOSTON CURB MARKET.

Following were the sales and range of prices on the Boston Curb yesterday:

Sales.	Open.	High.	Low.	Last.
50..Bohemia	1.00	1.00	1.00	1.00
300..Calaveras	.96	.96	.96	.96
200..Chief Cons.	.89	.89	.89	.89
50..Crown Res.	.93	.93	.93	.93
300..Eagle & B.	.82	.82	.82	.82
200..First Nat.	.73	.73	.73	.73
300..Goldfield Cons.	1.00	1.00	1.00	1.00
1,000..Goldfield Ore	.07	.07	.07	.07
400..Jumbo Ext.	.48	.48	.48	.48
150..La Rose	.72	.72	.72	.72
500..Majestic	.10	.10	.10	.10
200..New Dougg.	.53	.53	.53	.53
200..Ohio Cop.	.05	.05	.05	.05
100..Peterson L.	.23	.23	.23	.23
200..Un. Pr. Sh.	8	8	8	8
1,000..Un. Verde Ex.	.80	1.00	.99	1.00
50..Yukon	1⅛	1⅛	1⅛	1⅛

Following were the closing bid and asked prices:

	Bid.	Asked.		Bid.	Asked.
Alvarado	.70	.90	Goldf. Mer.	.16	.18
Atlanta	.18	.19	La Rose	.70	.72
Bay St. Gas	.08	.12	McK.-Dar.	.41	.43
Bohemia	1	1¼	Majestic	.07	.09
Bost. Ely.	.20	.30	Mex. Met.	.14	.15
Butte & L.	.10	.20	Mines of A.	2½	2¾
Calaveras	.93	.97	N. Bait. M.	.50	.65
Chief Con.	.85	.93	Ohio Cop.	.05	.10
Con. Cop.	⅞	1	Nev.-Doug.	.54	.58
Crown Res.	.93	.96	So. Lake	1½	3
Dav.-Daly.	.56	.60	Stewart	1	1 1-16
Eagle & B.	.75	.85	Tonop. Min.	6¾	6⅞
First Nat.	.73	.74	Tonop. Mer.	.24	.25
Goldf. Con.	15-16	1	Tonop. Bel.	4½	4⅝
Houghton.	1	1⅛	Ton. W. E.	.55	.56
Iron Blos.	1 1-16	1⅛	U. Prof. S.	8⅜	8¾
Jim Butler	.64	.67	Yukon Gold	.95	1.00
Jumbo Ext.	.47	.50	Yukon Gold	1⅝	2

COLLEGE FOR WALL ST.

New York University to Give Lectures on Financial Topics.

New York University is to carry its teaching into Wall Street by the establishment of what will be known as American Institute courses, which are intended especially for employes in that district. Lectures will be given in rooms in the Stock Exchange, the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants' Association and elsewhere, and will be scheduled for the most part between 4 and 7 P. M.

Courses will be given in business English, money and credit, theory and history of banking, foreign exchange, Stock Exchange methods, foreign trade, secretarial duties and office management. The work is in charge of Dr. S. C. McLeod.

NEW MORGAN HOME READY.

Bank Expected to Occupy New Building This Week.

The new home of J. P. Morgan & Co., in a building erected on the site of the old Drexel structure at Wall and Broad Streets, will be opened this week, and it is expected that the firm will occupy the new quarters on Thursday. The interior work has been completed and the installation of new furniture has been going on for several days.

The firm has occupied temporary rooms in the Mills Building, at 15 Broad Street, during the construction of the new building, which will be used exclusively by the firm.

DIVIDENDS DECLARED.

The following companies announced dividends during the last week:

STEAM RAILROADS.

Company.	Rate.	Pe-riod.	Pay-able.	Books Close.
Cin., S. & C. pf.	2	Q	Nov. 2	Oct. 1
Cleve. & Pitts.	1¾	Q	Dec. 1	*Nov. 10
Do spc. stk.	1	Q	Dec. 1	*Nov. 10
Pennsylvania	75c	Q	Nov. 30	*Nov. 2
R., F. & P. gtd.	4½	—	Nov. 1	Oct. 24

STREET RAILWAYS.

Boston Elev.	1½	Q	Nov. 16	Nov. 7
Conn. Ry. & L. com. & pf.	1	Q	Nov. 14	Oct. 31
Detroit United.	1½	Q	Dec. 1	*Nov. 14
Ill. Traction.	¾	Q	Nov. 15	Nov. 1
L. V. Tran. pf.	1	—	Nov. 10	*Oct. 31
Rl'de Jan. Tr.
L. & P.	1¾	Q	Nov. 2	Oct. 20
Sao Paulo Tr.
L. & P.	2½	—	Nov. 2	Oct. 20
Tampa Elec.	2½	Q	Nov. 16	*Nov. 4
Wash.-Virginia.	1	—	Nov. 1	Oct. 19
Do pf.	2½	—	Nov. 1	Oct. 19

TRUST COMPANY.

Astor	2	Q	Nov. 1	*Oct. 28

INDUSTRIAL AND MISCELLANEOUS

A. D. T. of N.Y.	1	Q	Nov. 14	*Nov. 2
Am. Glue	3	—	Nov. 2	Oct. 26
Am. Graph. pf.	1½	Q	Nov. 16	Nov. 1
Am. Util. pf.	1¾	—	Nov. 10	*Oct. 31
B. & E. Br. pf.	4	—	Nov. 2	Oct. 24
Br. Col. F. & P.	1½	—	Nov. 30	.....
Br. Col. Packers com. & pf.	3½	—	Nov. 21	Nov. 9
Cent. St. Elec.	1	—	Nov. 19	Nov. 11
Cons. Gas.	1½	Q	Dec. 15	Nov. 12
Dom. Bridge.	1½	Q	Nov. 16	Oct. 31
Elk Horn F. pf.	1¼	Cs	Nov. 15	Nov. 1
Gair (W.R.). pf.	1¾	Q	Nov. 1	.....
Goodrich (B.F.) Co. pf.	1¾	Q	Jan. 1	Dec. 21
Inland Steel.	1	—	Dec. 1	Nov. 10
Lehigh C. & N.	1	—	Nov. 30	Oct. 31
Lig. & M. Tob.	3	—	Dec. 1	*Nov. 16
Mill. & Chem. Tr.	2½	Q	Nov. 16	Oct. 31
Mobile Elec. pf.	1½	Q	Nov. 16	Oct. 31
Nat. Refining.	1½	Q	Nov. 15	Nov. 1
Newton (G. B.) Coal Co. 1st pf.	3½	—	Nov. 2	Oct. 26
Pitts. Term. W. & Trans.	2½c	M	Nov. 14	Nov. 7
Pr. Steel Car.	1½	Q	Nov. 16	Nov. 25
Do pf.	1¾	Q	Nov. 25	Nov. 4
St. Oil (Ind.).	3	Q	Nov. 30	Nov. 9
Do.	3	Ex	Nov. 30	Nov. 9
St. Sanitar.	1½	—	.....	Oct. 22
Do pf.	1½	—	.....	Oct. 22
St.-War. Speed.	1¼	Q	Nov. 1	Oct. 24
Do pf.	1¾	Q	Nov. 1	Oct. 24
Un.-Am. Cig. pf.	1½	Q	Nov. 15	Oct. 31
U. S. Steel	1	Q	Dec. 30	Dec. 1
Do pf.	1¼	Q	Nov. 28	Nov. 2
White (J. G.) Eng. pf.	1¾	Q	Dec. 1	Nov. 16
Do Man. pf.	1¾	Q	Dec. 1	Nov. 18

*Holders of record; books do not close.

RAILROAD EARNINGS

ATLANTIC COAST LINE for September—

	1914.	1913.	1912.
Gross	$2,180,558	$2,180,706	2,445,540
Net after taxes	92,351	477,819	425,587
3 mos. gross	6,938,463	7,431,274	7,361,392
Net after taxes	512,270	990,668	1,250,647

BUFFALO & SUSQUEHANNA for September—

	1914.	1913.	Decrease.
Gross	122,142	147,346	25,204
Net after taxes	11,111	34,208	23,097
3 mos. gross	381,663	455,142	73,479
Net after taxes	48,114	117,886	69,772

CHICAGO, BURLINGTON & QUINCY for the year ended June 30—

	1914.	1913.	1912.
Operating rev.	92,750,934	94,374,486	86,723,068
Operating exp.	63,148,398	62,842,891	60,646,949
Net op. rev.	30,602,536	31,531,594	26,076,119
Dues, op., debit	140,248	127,091	123,701
Total net rev.	30,462,288	31,403,903	29,953,418
Taxes accrued	4,028,900	3,563,359	3,301,053
Operating inc.	26,433,388	27,840,545	22,650,360
Other inc.	1,501,077	1,989,930	2,101,044
Total inc.	27,934,465	29,800,475	24,751,404
Int., rent, and sinking funds.	10,820,058	10,369,729	10,684,951
Net income	17,114,407	19,430,746	14,066,754
Dividends	7,000,000	8,867,123	8,867,123
Surplus	8,247,279	10,563,618	5,239,626
Betterments	5,715,875	7,647,743	3,944,219
Sur. for year	2,531,404	2,915,875	1,295,410

COLORADO & SOUTHERN for the year ended June 30—

	1914.	1913.	1912.
Operat. rev.	18,222,737	15,077,677	13,959,976
Exp. & taxes.	10,401,409	11,168,318	10,152,447
Operat. inc.	2,821,328	3,909,364	3,807,529
Other inc.	880,402	844,277	780,274
Total income	3,711,731	4,753,642	4,397,803
Charges	3,305,585	3,087,829	3,097,838
Surplus	406,151	1,665,812	1,499,967
Dividends	340,266	680,000	680,000
Net surplus	65,885	675,076	199,967

*Includes net deficit from outside operations.

DETROIT & MACKINAC for September—

	1914.	1913.	Increase
Gross	99,953	101,797	105,408
Net aft. taxes	21,274	18,356	39,132

DULUTH & IRON RANGE for September—

	1914.	1913.	1912.
Mileage	292	272	274
Gross	588,632	1,013,548	966,256
Net aft. taxes	280,062	573,155	575,106
3 mos. gross	2,061,385	3,418,104	3,097,649
Net aft. taxes	1,034,641	2,000,139	1,901,387

LOUISVILLE, HENDERSON & ST. LOUIS for the year ended June 30—

	1914.	1913.	1912.
Gross	1,377,794	1,221,482	1,270,469
Net after taxes	311,332	161,887	261,067
Other income	2,389	2,812	2,861
Total income	313,721	164,660	263,928
Surp. aft. chgs.	81,775	*74,435	33,806

*Deficit.

INTERNATIONAL & GREAT NORTHERN for September—

	1914.	1913.	Decrease.
Mileage	1,160	1,160	.....
Gross	761,256	1,065,410	304,153
Net aft. taxes	105,048	894,803	289,755
3 mos. gross	2,227,540	2,724,833	497,293
Net aft. taxes	82,993	720,968	637,975

NEW YORK CENTRAD and its controlled and affiliated lines for September—New York Central & Hudson River, (excluding Boston & Albany):

	1914.	1913.	Decrease.
Gross	8,765,247	9,625,456	860,209
Net aft. taxes	2,386,283	2,578,299	*19,985
9 mos. gross	71,451,987	77,587,388	6,135,401
Net aft. taxes	18,511,805	14,691,103	*3,179,299

Boston & Albany:

Gross	1,488,917	1,630,787	138,870
Net aft. taxes	456,395	590,035	133,640
9 mos. gross	12,499,554	13,247,276	747,724
Net aft. taxes	2,500,358	2,845,161	335,804

*Increase.

Michigan Central:

	1914.	1913.	1912.
Gross	3,140,684	3,250,323	3,901,686
Net aft. taxes	691,641	624,511	839,809
9 mos. gross	25,262,671	27,330,269	31,757,498
Net aft. taxes	5,143,579	5,773,583	7,936,907

Lake Shore & Michigan Southern:

Gross	4,694,581	5,247,461	4,866,207
Net aft. taxes	1,182,676	1,893,014	1,754,522
9 mos. gross	39,067,438	45,209,810	39,368,772
Net aft. taxes	8,613,381	12,176,355	12,016,874

Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis, (Peoria & Eastern included in 1914 and 1913:)

	1914.	1913.	1912.
Gross	3,969,280	3,485,331	3,019,334
Net aft. taxes	804,165	501,478	372,653
9 mos. gross	36,467,273	28,151,839	24,491,864
Net aft. taxes	7,882,894	3,804,480	4,840,486

New York, Chicago & St. Louis:

Gross	938,828	1,068,715	1,087,527
Net aft. taxes	158,108	344,151	306,407
9 mos. gross	8,379,502	9,177,274	8,709,962
Net aft. taxes	914,309	1,632,387	1,913,943

Pittsburgh & Lake Erie:

Gross	1,339,222	1,709,702	1,618,761
Net after taxes	399,274	718,525	706,713
9 mos. gross	12,576,562	15,194,949	13,239,156
Net after taxes	3,871,906	6,504,664	6,067,123

Chicago, Indiana & Southern:

Sept. gross	387,596	533,582	526,601
Net after taxes	120,012	25,961	68,358
9 mos. gross	3,143,228	3,248,777	3,037,629
Net after taxes	338,945	404,350	412,549

Lake Erie & Western:

Sept. gross	537,532	559,516	566,201
Net after taxes	142,371	104,222	170,187
9 mos. gross	4,327,864	4,475,366	4,241,229
Net after taxes	1,041,711	848,441	1,139,142

Cincinnati Northern:

Sept. gross	151,582	148,437	180,869
Net after taxes	31,998	29,998	36,618
9 mos. gross	1,076,804	1,009,946	992,065
Net after taxes	80,634	*52,642	43,487

*Deficit.

Toledo & Ohio Central:

Sept. gross	617,362	603,226	498,276
Net after taxes	244,141	171,613	146,498
9 mos. gross	5,535,181	4,503,559	3,902,627
Net after taxes	381,606	910,876	791,199

Total all lines:

Sept. gross	25,486,462	27,563,664	25,355,612
Net after taxes	7,126,351	6,560,526	7,535,175
9 mos. gr.	207,557,812	229,575,424	203,010,399
Net aft. taxes	39,072,611	47,836,039	49,037,329

Above statements are prepared for years 1914 and 1

VARIED PHASES OF THE COUNTRY'S BUSINESS LIFE

THE MERCHANT'S POINT OF VIEW

Factors That Denote Healthy Activity and Point to Greater Prosperity.

From the very beginning of the past week a better tone and one of more confidence was shown in business circles. This was due to a combination of circumstances, among them being the more favorable prospects for cotton and the setting of a day, only three weeks distant for the opening of the Federal Reserve banks. Another and very notable one, whose importance can hardly be overestimated in its effects on all kinds of wearing apparel, was the touch of colder weather. The last named happening showed its beneficial effects on business almost immediately. The others produced a cheerfulness and confidence that are of good omen. Within a fortnight or so, it is expected that many lines of trade which have been somewhat dormant will show pronounced activity.

Promise of Good Business.

Doubtless, some of the marked improvement which is expected will be the result of a change of mental view. The disturbed conditions arising from the war led to a decided unsettlement in methods of doing business no less than in changing sources and kinds of supplies, as well as customers for domestic products. Then, too, the apprehended scarcity of certain needed articles which have been obtained from abroad added to the uneasiness, while financial conditions were not satisfactory and credit lines were sharply drawn. Uncertainty as to these different matters is being gradually resolved and merchants are now able to take a calmer view. Basic conditions, which are sound, are asserting themselves, and, while in certain lines and in a few localities there is some stringency, the country as a whole and most of its productive concerns are in good shape. The large amount of orders for foreign account, with their accompaniment of cash, has helped a little not only in stimulating activity, but in disclosing opportunities.

German Cotton Shipments.

Of itself, the announcement by the British Government that it would not regard cotton as contraband of war does not seem very important. No one ever seriously looked on the fibre in that light. Yet the uncertainty that was felt in the matter before the official announcement was made was sufficient to prevent any attempt at supplying either Germany or Austria-Hungary with raw cotton. Within a few hours, however, after the declaration referred to, arrangements were in progess to send the stuff to the countries mentioned. Under normal conditions Germany has taken about 2,750,000 bales of American cotton, or about one-third of all the exports of it from this country. It means a great deal for business if this traffic is not to be interfered with. While it seems hardly possible that anything like the usual amount will find a market in Germany under existing conditions, it is certain that a large quantity will be needed. The Germans are fully alive to the value and necessity of keeping up their manufacturing establishments even in a time of stress like this, and will do their best to distribute the products from them. It may be that the amount of American cotton they will be able to handle will be somewhat of a revelation as well as quite a boon to the cotton growers.

Bottom Prices Reached.

This outlet for cotton was announced at a peculiarly opportune time. With it came reports of successful progress in the plan for loans to the cotton growers from a syndicate of bankers and a reasonable assurance that a great quantity of the fibre would be taken by Great Britain. While these things did not cause any rise in the prices of spot cotton in the South, they served as notice that too great a slump, amounting to a sacrifice, cannot be expected. Not all the cotton grown is of the "distressed" variety, and much of it is doubtless in the hands of persons who can afford to hold it until they can realize at least the cost of raising and marketing it. Some of the mill men are beginning to think so, apparently, as they have been unable to secure spinnable cotton at anything like the quoted prices. There seems to be a general impression among manufacturers and converters that the bottom has been reached, and the result was strikingly shown during the past week in the large sales of gray goods, or printcloths, and in the efforts to get future deliveries on the basis of existing prices.

It is freely predicted that, even should the $135,000,000 fund be subscribed by the bankers to aid in cotton loans, not all of it will ever be called for, and some are even willing to wager that not half of it will be utilised in the manner intended. Once the Cotton Exchanges are opened and definite prices are established for the time, it is believed that the buying will be sufficient in volume to prevent prices going below the cost of production. Meanwhile, the real serious efforts to handle the cotton situation have put a stop to the "buy a bale" absurdity, which is now even being denounced by Southern merchants and by a number of banks as especially harmful to the cotton grower and a check on business.

Adjustment to Textiles.

Adjustment to new conditions is the order of the day. This is shown not only in the prices of staple cotton goods, but in those of the other textiles. The silk men just now are having an experience similar to that which cotton goods manufacturers have had. There is a superabundance of the raw material due to the fact that certain large markets for it in Europe are either closed or are able to take only a comparatively small supply. Efforts are being made in Japan to hold the raw silk until the crisis is past, but the price of the fibre is very much lower than it has been. Buyers of silks here are trying to get prices of the manufactured stuff on the basis of the present cost of the raw material, and thus force the mills to bear the loss caused by the depreciation. The cotton mills under similar circumstances have sold their output at a loss. The silk manufacturers have thus far held their own except as to a few price concessions. With the woolen men the situation is somewhat different. There is a great demand for the lower grades of the raw material, such as crossbreds, for military uses. There is also no lack of the material in different countries, but an embargo on the article prevents exports. In the Australasian British colonies, whence under ordinary conditions this country could draw supplies, the embargo is in full effect. The mother country has the first call on the supplies which it needs in every one of its colonies. The intimation was given out that manufacturers here might obtain wool, provided guarantees were given that it, or things made from it, would not be exported to countries with which Great Britain is at war. This being impossible, nothing was done, but the attitude will hardly be maintained. After the English manufacturers have all they can use, there will still be considerable left for others, and this will have to find a market. Latterly, however, much wool has been exported to Great Britain and also to Canada, where a great deal of woolen fabrics are being made for military purposes.

In Woolens and Worsteds.

There is no lack of activity in the woolen and worsted factories in this country. These mills are called upon not only to supply the usual needs, but to take care as well of the requirements of cutters-up who relied upon getting their goods from Great Britain and who have been disappointed. A premium, in some cases, is being paid on high-grade domestic serges, and a good demand has set in for staple cloths for overcoatings. On repeat orders and orders for next Spring the prices have been advanced. For the last mentioned the increases in some instances are as much as 15 cents per yard. In lines for women's wear the outlook continues good. Thus far the sales exceed last year's by a substantial amount, and a number of mills are sold ahead about as far as they care to go. On any new business advances will be made because of the higher prices for wool. In the heavier weights, for cloakings, &c., the demand is not yet so great, because of the mild weather. As a whole, the industry is in better shape than it has been for a long time.

Influences That Told.

Three matters seemingly unrelated, had in their way some influence in enhancing the feeling of confidence during the past week. One of these was the greater demand for commercial paper and the consequent lowering of the rate of interest. At the close of the week the quotations for the best kind of paper ranged from 6 to 6½ per cent. There is no letting down the bars or relaxing of caution in this matter and notes must have real substance back of them. But there is no longer a lack of available funds for legitimate business at fair rates.

The second of the matters was the vigorous trading at the big auction sale of carpets and rugs by the largest factor in the trade. Buyers were present from all over the country, and quite fair prices were obtained for the several millions of dollars' worth of goods put on sale. The transaction demonstrated the belief of many hundred keen buyers that there is a large purchasing power among the customers of their stores and that the business outlook in their respective localities is good.

Added to these two things of good omen was the cheering nature of the reports showing that a settlement of the Claflin troubles was in sight. This great failure has been a source of uneasiness ever since the embarrassment was first brought to light. It might easily have resulted in incalculable harm to many localities and to many lines of trade. The settlement of the huge indebtedness of about $40,000,000 will remove a great threat from general business.

A Tendency to Economy.

Evidences multiply that all lines of business will have hereafter to take into account a new factor and that is the growing tendency toward thrift. It is getting emphasized somewhat in these times of stress, but, from all indications, it will be pronounced and active long after present and temporary causes have passed. People are not only curtailing their expenses temporarily, but their methods of retrenchment indicate a purpose of doing so permanently. Economy is shown not alone in the diversions and amusements of the general public, but in the so-called necessities of food, clothing, and shelter. The well-to-do, as well as those less favored by fortune, are becoming addicted to keeping more careful guard over their outlay.

The practice is reflected in the purchases that are made, and promises to have a very far-reaching effect. In the long run it will be a very beneficial thing for the nation in general. At the outset it will show itself in a restriction of the volume of trade, which will be somewhat embarrassing until business adjusts itself to it. There are many who can testify that the economic tendency is already showing results.

No Radical Style Changes.

Without the leadership of Paris in style creation, it is doubtful whether the domestic women's wear manufacturers will introduce much in the way of style changes during this or the coming Spring season. The retail buyers have become more conservative than ever in their tastes, and the general impression seems to exist in manufacturing circles that it is good policy, until the general business situation becomes clearer, to avoid radical changes in the styles. In materials, there is noticeable a growing tendency toward the use of the more staple fabrics generally in sober colors.

TARIFF DECISIONS CAUSE DISQUIET

Recent Rulings by the General Appraisers Said to be Revision Downward.

Recent decisions by the Board of General Appraisers affecting the cotton cloth schedule of the Tariff act of 1913, as well as rulings dealing with the classification of imported merchandise under other schedules of the law, emphasize the part played by this judicial tribunal in construing the intent of Congress in framing the national import law. Although the present law has been in effect more than a year important questions of tariff construction are only beginning to come up for decision.

The delay is due mainly to the time required in filing protests, preparing the new issues for trial, the trial itself, the time necessary to write up the testimony, and the period needed for members of the board to study the law and weigh the evidence submitted. The recent decisions construing the new act, particularly those dealing with the cotton and glove leather schedules, have aroused a diversity of sentiment in those business circles directly affected by the constructions given the new law. Importers and their attorneys without exception are gratified at the duty reductions made by the board, while domestic interests take a contrary view and accuse the tribunal of "re-writing" the tariff downward.

A selling agent of large New England cotton mills declared yesterday that at last year's revision, the protection heretofore afforded manufacturers had been reduced by the new rates to such a point that a reduction of only 5 per cent. from the maximum rate is a serious matter for cotton cloth manufacturers, as such action has the effect of still further favoring foreign-made fabrics at the expense of the domestic producers. From the viewpoint of the cotton manufacturers, the most disturbing decision yet made by the Board of General Appraisers is that standing in the name of M. Gardner & Co. This issue involved the construction to be given the Jacquard section of the law, and was decided in favor of the importer's claim for lower duty.

Judge Cooper held that towels made of cotton and woven on Jacquard looms, being more specifically provided for as "towels not otherwise provided for," than as "all other Jacquard figured manufactures of cotton," are dutiable under Paragraph 264 of the Tariff act of 1913, and not under Paragraph 258, at 30 per cent. as assessed by the customs authorities. The rate, under the provision claimed by the importers, is 25 per cent. on the value of the goods. This reduction of 5 per cent. in the entry rate of these goods under the present law, is the more reason by the manufacturing interests since, under the old act, the duty on Jacquard weaves of the kind figuring in the Gardner case was 45 per cent. ad valorem, while the tax on cotton towels under it was 35 per cent.

Another customs controversy just settled, unless upset by the Court of Customs Appeals, relates to the interpretation to be given the term "plain-woven fabrics" as used in the new law. The issue came up for decision on protests by James F. White & Co. and Douglas & Berry, whose importations consisted of crash or toweling composed of flax and cotton, flax being the component material of chief value in the goods. These fabrics were woven by the ordinary over-one and under-one thread weave in the body of the fabric, but in the border smaller colored threads are used in the warp and new threads are inserted in the space taken up by one in the body of the fabric, so that in the border the weft threads pass over two and under two instead of over one and under one.

The Collector took duty on the crash in question at the rate of 35 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 284 of the present tariff, providing for "all-woven articles, finished or unfinished, and all manufactures of flax, or other vegetable fibre not specially provided for in this section." The protestants before the board claimed the goods properly dutiable at 30 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 283, specifying "plain-woven articles." Judge Cooper, in an opinion concurred in by Judges Fischer and Howell, sustained the protests, holding that the goods are plain-woven fabrics and that the term is a commercial term understood in the trade as including a variety of fabrics dealt in under specific names.

Still another case decided the past week was that of the Sherman & Sons Company. This time the merchandise consisted of quilts of cotton woven on Jacquard looms. Here the Collector exacted duty at 30 per cent. ad valorem, under Paragraph 258 of the present law, as "other Jacquard figured manufactures of cotton," whereas the importers, ignoring the fact that the goods were made on Jacquards, asked a rate of 25 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 264, as "quilts made of cotton." Judge Cooper, who was also the writer of the decision in this case, decided it in favor of the protesting importers.

Controversies between the Government and importers are multiplying over the rates of duty to accrue on cotton cloth dutiable according to the average number of the yarns constituting the fabrics. Goods of this classification are provided for under Paragraph 252 of the cotton schedule of the present law. Under the previous act, the cloth was assessed according to count of threads per square inch. Rates under the Act of 1913, based on the average number of yarn in a fabric, range from 7½ per cent. to 30 per cent., the maximum rate. Importations under this provision of the law stand in the names of F. B. Vandegrift & Co. and O. G. Hempstead & Son. In both cases the importers' contentions were upheld for the lower rate of duty.

Another revision of the present law downward just disposed of by the board related to the classification under the Act of 1913 of doeskins or chamois skins used in the manufacture of gloves. Mills & Gibb and William H. Stiner & Son appeared as protestants against the Collector's action in returning the merchandise for duty at 15 per cent. as "chamois skins," whereas the protestants claimed a tax of 10 per cent. as "glove leather." This issue was added to the list of decisions in favor of the importers.

It was said yesterday that the domestic cotton cloth men intend to make a fight to have the effect given the Jacquard provision of the existing tariff. If the Court of Customs Appeals should affirm the board's decision, it is possible that a new case may be made up, in which event the manufacturers claim to be in a position to put in a mass of testimony showing that any kind of a fabric woven on a Jacquard loom was intended by Congress to pay the maximum rate provided in the law and that any other construction is a nullification of the statute.

Soon after the present law was enacted, a special committee was formed to represent the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers and the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, for the purpose of watching tariff constructions made by the Board of General Appraisers and the Customs Court. At the time the committee was appointed, it was stated that the tariff on cotton cloths was so low under the new act that manufacturers would be obliged to scrutinize all adverse judicial decisions affecting the cotton cloth schedule in order to protect the American industry against competition from abroad.

Importers and their legal representatives are convinced that the decisions promulgated by the board will hold in the Customs Court, thereby rendering it incumbent on all customs officials to return these Jacquard fabrics at the lower rates found by the board. Customs lawyers, encouraged by the outcome of the Jacquard litigation, are now said to be preparing test cases in other lines of cotton goods with the hope of securing lower duties than those now being taken by the Treasury Department.

Frederick W. Brooks, Jr., who tried the Jacquard cases for the importers, had this to say yesterday:

"If those who criticise the findings of the board would but read the decisions in question it would be seen that they are supported by decisions of the highest courts in construing analogous provisions of prior tariff acts, and, in fact, by the wording of the statue itself. The cotton cloth case rests chiefly upon a decision of the United States Supreme Court rendered in 1895. Moreover, Congress has recognized that Jacquard goods are to be dutiable as cotton cloth by providing for the ascertainment of count of threads of clipped thread goods which are practically all Jacquard woven.

"In the towels case, the board has held that a specific provision by name for 'towel' controls over the more general provision 'Jacquard figured manufactures of cotton.' This principle of construction is elementary in customs law, and is supported by decisions of the highest courts. If the construction placed upon this provision by the Government is the proper one with regard to Jacquard figured cotton cloth or towels, it would seem that many of the Jacquard woven laces, nets, and nettings, which are now classified for duty at 60 per cent., should also be included in this paragraph. The Government does not take this position, however, in respect to merchandise paying higher rates of duty than 30 per cent."

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Among Others, One That Pot Blue Glass Is Not Optical.

It was decided yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers that so-called pot blue glass, largely used to protect the eyes of workmen from the glare of furnaces, is not "optical" glass within the meaning of the tariff laws. While the case, which stands in the names of the F. W. King Optical Company and A. W. Fenton, Jr., arose under the Act of 1909, the board's ruling will apply to shipments entered under the present law.

The glass is colored dark blue, and is ordinarily imported in sizes about three by four feet, and about one-eighth of an inch thick. It was polished in order to show its color. The Collector classified the goods as cylinder glass, colored, and took duty at the rates provided in Paragraphs 99 and 104. The importers' claim was for free entry under Paragraph 577, as rough or unwrought cylinder glass. It was brought out that the glass is set up before furnaces, and not used in the form of spectacles. The glass is also sometimes used in making moving picture slides. In overruling the protest, Judge Sullivan says that the setting of the glass in a frame before a furnace similar to a window does not make the glass an optical instrument.

Alpers & Stolz were sustained in protests relating to the classification of glycerine under the old law. The controversy with the Government turned on the point whether the product is refined or crude. The customs men put a duty of 3 cents a pound on the product, claiming it to be "refined." It was claimed to be crude or unrefined glycerine and, therefore, dutiable at only 1 cent a pound. One of the importers testified that the price at which the commodity was invoiced proved it to be crude, and that if it had been refined it would have cost more at the time of purchase. Dr. R. E. Ozias, the Government Chemist, testified that he had analyzed the sample and by a negative process of reasoning reached the conclusion that the product was refined. As the chemist was unable to swear that the glycerine is refined, Judge Brown found for the importers.

C. Bischoff & Co. were given lower duty on coal tar bases, described on the invoices as violet, victoria, nigrosine, and other bases. Duty was taken at 30 per cent. ad valorem under the Act of 1909, as coal tar colors. The contention was for a lower rate, duty as products or preparations of coal tar, not colors or dyes, and not medicinal.

The board sustained protests by the Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld Company, relative to merchandise imported under the old tariff, and taxed at the rate of 30 per cent. as valorem as coal tar colors. The importer asserted that the product is indigo paste properly dutiable at three-fourths of 1 per cent. a pound under the specific provision in the law for that commodity. Judge Brown agreed.

FABRICS AND DYES.

Chicago Clothing House to Have Laboratory to Test Them.

The announcement that a prominent clothing house of Chicago has decided to operate a chemical laboratory for the testing of fabrics and dyes used in manufacturing its products, has aroused considerable interest in both the piece goods and clothing trades. It is understood the concern in question has engaged the services of a textile school graduate and has practically completed gathering the apparatus necessary for installing the laboratory.

The advantages to be obtained by such investigation into the nature, wearing quality, and value of the fabrics bought by the manufacturers are not hard to name. There is certain to be a marked decrease in the number of garments returned because they did not give sufficiently long service or showed some defets in the cloth after the customer had worn them only a short time. Chemical analysis of the fabrics will enable the firm to substitute certain knowledge for what up to this time has been merely the opinion of an experienced man.

With quite some possibility of American dyes being substituted for the German colors as a result of the difficulty in importing the latter, the tests conducted in the laboratory should prove the means of preventing many a costly mistake made through ignorance of the actual nature of the dyestuffs used by the mills. Before this time certain mills, no doubt, have been forced to use inferior dyes because the usual materials were unobtainable. There is no reason to believe, however, that they would in all cases inform their customers of this change. Some of them would doubtless wait until a complaint was made before notifying their trade of the substitution. This is a matter in which the clothing manufacturer, it is pointed out, would do well to exercise a good deal of care while the dye situation remains as it is at present. Chemical investigation of the colors will soon determine whether they will hold or run under certain conditions.

MAKING A DISTINCTION.

The Difference Between Umbrella Sticks and Handles.

The Treasury Department has instructed Assistant Attorney General Hanson to carry the question of the classification of umbrella sticks to the United States Court of Customs Appeals for final settlement. Recently, the Board of General Appraisers, in sustaining protests by Edward Bennecke & Brother, held such goods to be covered by the free list of the Tariff act of 1909, as "sticks for umbrellas."

It appears that until about a year ago it was the practice of the customs officers to return merchandise of this class as exempt from duty, but at that time orders were issued by the Treasury administration to tax the articles 20 per cent. on the value as wood unmanufactured. Duty was assessed on the theory that these sticks are umbrella handles, and not umbrella sticks, since they run approximately fourteen inches in length, and were apparently cut from the root end of a boxwood stem in the rough, or natural, state.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Peters, in his letter to Mr. Hanson, says that the articles are not of sufficient length to be used as sticks for umbrellas. The controversy is due to the fact that, whereas formerly the stocks used were much longer, they are now used in conjunction with metal sticks or rods in the making of umbrellas, and, in the estimation of the Government, are no longer the "sticks" referred to in the tariff law.

MARKING PRICES IN CODE FIGURES

What Is Said For and Against the Practice, and How It Sometimes Works Out.

A good deal of adverse comment has been made in the past week concerning the practice of marking wholesale selling prices in code instead of plain figures. While this method of marking is doubtless used by more houses than use figures, there is a growing sentiment on the part of the buyers that it is a holdover from the Dark Ages of commerce and that it often means these prices are not the same for all buyers.

This is particularly the complaint of the smaller buyers who, though they are always more or less prone to charge that larger merchants are favored unduly in the matter of price are justified to a certain degree in their contention. That this is so was admitted yesterday by a wholesaler of textiles. This merchant said that, while code marking was used by him primarily to prevent representatives of his competitors from coming in in the guise of buyers and getting trade secrets, it often serves the purpose of covering up unwarranted advances.

"There is one case in particular," he continued, "where code marking made a good bit of money for me. A certain buyer came in here and refused to pay what I asked for some goods because he had heard somewhere that the manufacturer had named a lower price on them for the following season. His information was correct enough, and it enabled him to calculate the profit I was getting on the goods in question. This he naturally thought was too large and, as a result, he wanted a better price than I had quoted. The fact that I had bought the goods at the price made at the opening of the season made no difference to him.

"He being a good customer of the house, however, and the season being well advanced, I met his demands by dropping the price of the goods about 2½ cents a yard. He took fifty pieces, and the loss of profit to me on the sale was about $65. But I got it back later and more with it.

"The second time the buyer took 125 pieces of another fabric, which was growing in demand and beginning to get scarce. With my other deal with him in mind, I made the price five cents a yard higher than the ticket called for and, though he demurred a little, he wanted the goods and finally took them at my price. Thus I got about $300 more for the goods than I could have had the price been marked in figures, and in the end I came out about $235 ahead. Some persons may think that this transaction was not strictly on the level, but it is often necessary to fight fire with fire. In the second case I simply retaliated for the buyer's unfairness in the first."

In another instance it was related that the selling policy of a certain well-known old house in this city used to be never to let a buyer get away without selling him something, no matter how small the profit might be. This is changed now but, to carry out the old scheme, the price tickets on the concern in question always bore three prices in code. One was the figure at which the shipping room recorded the goods, the second was the regular selling price and the third was the cost price.

The cost price on the ticket was the thing that did most toward permitting observance of the rule of the house for, knowing what the goods had cost, the salesman was in a position to make any selling price above that figure that he could get without causing dissatisfaction on the part of the buyer. On the whole, however, the prices were supposed to average the standard selling price on the ticket and, so long as the salesman did this, there was no question raised as to the why and wherefore. He was generally in a position to make a good price to anyone he chose, and to this can be ascribed a good deal of the popularity of some of the salesmen of the concern with certain buyers. There was nothing to prevent these salesmen from getting a profit of fifteen per cent. from one buyer and five per cent. from another, thus keeping the average profit at ten per cent., all of these figures being illustrative instead of actual.

In a third case, two sets of prices are on the tickets in code, one in green ink and the other in black. The price in green is the one given to prospective customers in the hope of getting their accounts, while the price in black is what the regular customer pays. The extent of the difference between the two is a carefully guarded secret, and it is not known just when the black code supplants the green if the account is got, but it is known by those close to this firm that there is a difference

ARRIVAL OF BUYERS

Arriving Buyers may register in this column by telephoning 1000 Bryant.

BALTIMORE.—Baltimore Bargain House; J. Postley, house furn. goods; 354 4th Av.
CHICAGO.—Montgomery, Ward & Co.; J. Decker, carpets, rugs; 38 W. 28th.
CHICAGO.—J. V. Farwell Co.; G. B. Fawley, carpets, rugs; 72 Leonard.
KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—S. H. George & Sons; E. George, ladies' ready-to-wear; 353 4th Av.
LOS ANGELES.—A. Hamburger & Sons; E. V. Stewart, shoes; 215 4th Av.
MANCHESTER, N. H.—L. M. Folsom D. G. Co.; Miss E. Lebbes, laces, hdkfs., embroideries; Murray Hill.
MINNEAPOLIS.—Dayton Co.; H. Mitchell, ladies' neckwear, hdkfs., gloves, ribbons, laces, embroideries; 1,170 B'way.
PITTSBURGH.—Pittsburgh D. G. Co.; A. W. Boreland, carpets, rugs; 43 Leonard.
SAN DIEGO.—The Marston Co.; G. W. Marston, dry goods, notions, millinery, gen. mdse.; 220 5th Av.

Buyers' Wants

45 Cents per agate line each insertion. Count six words agate to a line.

FURNITURE BOUGHT.
WISE, Auctioneer, 428 Columbus Av., 7175 Schuyler, pays highest cash prices, furniture, &c.

DRESSES TO CLOSE OUT; very reasonable. Colonial Dress House, 18 W. 21st St.

Aprons

Special value, lace-trimmed ribbon bows, 6 styles assorted. Assortment No. 1, 80c per dozen. Assortment No. 2, $1.75 per doz. Terms, 2/10, net 30 days, express prepaid. Order today; if not the best ever return our expense. Arco Mfg. Co., 244 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Special Sales Salvage Merchandise Only. LEOPOLD GANS CO., 46-50 Wooster St.

AUCTION SALES.
MERCHANDISE.

$15,000 Stock of FURS
750 FUR SETS
in blue and white fox, mink, skunk, leopard, civet cat, Persian lamb, jap mink.
250 FUR COATS
in Persian lamb, jap mink, pony skin, Hudson seal, marmot, trimmed with ermine, fitch skunk, and other furs.
MEN'S FUR-LINED COATS.
SKINS, TAILS, FUR TRIMMINGS.
I. SINGER, Auctioneer,
Sells Tomorrow, Monday, Nov. 2,
at 10:30 A. M., at salesrooms,
582 Broadway and 21 Throop Av., Brooklyn,
Large, staple stock of above.
Auctioneer's Tel., 4241 Williamsburg.

Valuation $35,000. Bankrupt Stock, Famous Department Store of Perth Amboy, N. J.
DRY GOODS
Ladies' & Gents' Furnishings
FRANK JACOBOVITZ
Sells Wednesday, Nov. 4, 1914,
TELEPHONE 2930 FRANKLIN.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BUY A CASE OF COTTON
and help the South. Men's fleece-lined underwear, 12-pound goods, standard make, Jager color, in case lots only, 56 dozen to the case, $3 per dozen. 300 cases on sale. A. Schiag & Sons, Auctioneers, 69 Broadway.

AT FALL RIVER MILLS.

Larger Demand for Printcloths with an Advance in Prices.

FALL RIVER, Oct. 31.—The printcloth market showed more activity this week than for several months, and not only did the volume of sales increase, but prices for wide goods showed an advance of about a sixteenth of a cent per yard in most cases. In a few instances the advance amounted to an eighth of a cent over last week's prices. The buyers were looking to do business early in the week, realizing that now is the time to do business, while prices are comparatively low and most favorable for purchasers.

The factors were in the market largely for spot and near-by shipments, but when these could not be had they considered business during the remainder of the current year. This advance business accounts in part for the large sales of cloth. Some printers were in the market, and their purchases helped to swell the total business. A good demand was shown in all styles and for several widths of goods; while the wider counts were most in demand, there was some call for narrow goods, although the volume of business put through in narrow widths was small. It seems that buyers have not reached that stage where they deem buying in narrow goods, even at such very low levels as are now prevailing, would eventually be profitable.

The total week's sales will exceed 260,000 pieces. With buyers insisting upon immediate delivery in many cases, the withdrawal from stocks on hand will very materially help the situation should a good demand develop. The curtailment among mills will also keep the accumulation down. The quotations:

	1913.	1914.
	Sept. 5.	Jan. 17.	Oct. 31.
28-inch, 64-64	5¼	6¼	6
28-inch, 64-60	3¾	*3⅝	3½
27-inch, 64-60	3⅜	3½	2½
27-inch, 56-56	2⅞	3⅛	2¼
27-inch, 64-62	3	3⅜	2⅝
38½-inch, 64-64	5¾	6¾	5½
39-inch, 68-72	6	6¼	5

*Nominal.

JEWELRY FRAUD PUNISHED.

Conviction of Garin Regarded as Important by the Trade.

The National Jewelers' Board of Trade has just brought to a successful finish the prosecution of Paul Garin of San Francisco for embezzlement. His trial was held last week in the Superior Court of California. This case is of vital importance to the jewelry trade, as it deals solely with the embezzlement of memo goods. Its course has been followed with interest by jobbers of jewelry throughout the country.

It appears that on March 24 of this year, the Paul Garin Company, a corporation controlled by Paul Garin, who had previously made several bad jewelry failures, made an assignment to Garin's attorney. Investigation by representatives of the board developed the fact that during a period of fifteen days prior to the assignment the concern had secured large quantities of diamonds on memorandum. This merchandise disappeared, and as the creditors were unable to obtain any satisfactory information from Garin as to its whereabouts, application was made to the board for an appropriation of $1,000 from its prosecution fund, and a warrant was issued for Garin's arrest on a criminal charge.

On March 28 an involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against the company. Paul Garin was arrested on the charge of embezzlement and fraud, and held to answer the charge in the Superior Court. Special counsel was engaged by the board in behalf of the creditors, with the result noted above.

Spanish Mills Curtailing.

E. Calvet, the Spanish representative on the International Cotton Committee, writing to the International Federation at Manchester, England, recently said: "Since the declaration of war, the spinning mills have been reducing their output, and the manufacturers took the same step shortly afterward. At the present time both the spinning and weaving mills are working three days a week, and hardly any sales take place. It is anticipated that this curtailment of output will last at least three months."

ACCOUNTS
Collected in every State. Small charge. Fidelity Collection Co., 62 Park Row. Bl'man 3412.

ADDRESSING.
Foldng, Mailing, Multigraphing. Phone Gram 1353. BURNHAM ADDRESSING CO., 10-12 E. 23d.

AEROPLANE TOYS.
FLYING TOYS that FLY, 10c to $20. Ideal Aeroplane & Supply Co., 84 W. B'way.

APRONS.
1,000 Styles. Send for Catalog. Dean's Lockstitched, 45 E. 17th St.

FUR HATS.
Milton S. Sommerich, Room 1,300, 23 W. 32d. Selling Agt., rep. best makers in all lines of millinery.

AUCTIONEERS
DAVID W. HIOW & CO.,
18-15 Lispenard St.

D. HARTMANN, Auctioneer of high-class merchandise, 8 Greene St. Tel. Spring 4289.

BELTS.
NEWEST NOVELTIES in GIRDLES & SASHES. SLOTZ & SCHAFFER, 49-53 E. 21ST ST.

BLOCK PRINTING ON ALL TEXTILES. JACOB FEIBEL, 117 Spring St. Telephone Spring 1291.

BUYERS.
FELLOWS, 31 UNION SQUARE, WANTS LARGE JOBS JEWELRY.

DRESS SUIT CASES and Traveling Bags. Output for 1913 over 500,000. Ask for Catalogue. Samuel Sherman, 9 Desbrosses St.

EMBROIDERY MATERIALS.
Fancy Linens, Pillow Tops, Worsted Yarns. HENRY E. FRANKENBERG CO., 213 4th Av.

FLOWERS & FEATHERS.
ZUCKER & JOSEPHY,
715-719 BROADWAY, N. Y.

Full Dress and Frock Suits
CHAS. N. MELTSNER & BRO.,
21-23 Waverley Place.

FURNITURE.
Furniture sales, exhibit and display of foreign novelties, wholesale, Grand Central Palace.

FURNITURE BOUGHT.
WISE, Auct'r, 428 Columbus Av., 7175 Schuyler, pays highest cash prices, furniture, &c.

LACES H'DK'CHIEFS, Shadow Laces, Camisoles & Flounces
Nottingham Lace Works, 17 W. 17th St., N. Y.

LADIES' CRAVENETTE GABARDINES. Oxford, brown, and mixtures; regular model, cut full, $3.75-$4.00. Andrews, 4 W. 22d.

LETTER AND MAILING SERVICE.
Multigraphing, Typewriting, Addressing. Reliable Service. Bryant 6282. The Kenson Co., 220 W. 42d.

MULTIGRAPH LETTERS.
30c. hundred, plus 3c.; addressing, typewriting; translations, 40c. Rose Horrigan, 206 B'way.

NOVELTIES.
10,000 Seasonable Favors and Novelties. B. Shackman & Co., 906 Broadway, N. Y.

PLANTS.
Chas. Shongood, Auctioneer, 539 Broadway, will buy large plants. Nothing under $1,000.

RAINCOATS.
Capes and Collar Coats. Manufacturer closing out. See me first. D. Boonins, 265 Greene.

ALL THAT'S NEW.
Ribbons 632 Broadway. 214 " 2240 "
FRANKENTHALER & FRANKENTHALER.

5, 10c., AND 25c. GOODS.
The Five and Ten Cent Exchange, 10-16 West 20th St.

PROTOCOL FOR GARMENT WORKERS

Agreement Proposed That May Mean Much to the Clothing Industry of the City.

If the new faction which claims to control the membership of the United Garment Workers of America in this and other cities is able to accomplish what its recently elected President, Sidney Hillman, expects, the clothing manufacturers should welcome the change in the administration of the union's affairs. A protocol similar to the one now in operation in the Hart, Schaffner & Marx factory in Chicago is promised, and the hope is expressed that an organization responsible enough to guarantee the carrying out of any agreements entered into with the manufacturers will be built up. In an interview with a TIMES reporter yesterday Mr. Hillman commented on the general situation in the clothing trade and outlined the policy which the recently indorsed executives of the union will follow.

"We have had several conferences with the manufacturers," said Mr. Hillman, "and the result of these meetings may be summed up shortly by the statement that we have agreed to work out an agreement. These employers are representatives of the American Clothing Manufacturers' Association and control the large majority of this market's output. In the past, there has been constant disturbance in the trade, for the reason that the old organization was not powerful enough to force collective bargaining, which is the only solution of the issue at stake between capital and labor. If there had been a responsible body of men with whom the manufacturers might have done business, there would not have been this continued trouble. We have been indorsed by practically every local in this city, and those we have yet to hear from have taken no action in the matter, but are expected to do so shortly, with the assurance that our stand will be approved. Action has been taken to have the old officers, who are officers in name only, turn over to us as the accredited representatives of the United Garment Workers of America the books, money, and offices belonging to the union. There can be little doubt about the outcome."

Mr. Hillman was asked if he thought a protocol in the clothing trade had as much chance of success as in the cloak and suit industry where it is now operating to the benefit of both the employer and the employe.

"A protocol in the clothing trade," he replied, "will work out a good deal more smoothly than has been the case in the coat and suit industry. There is not 90 per cent. of the difficulty to be encountered in this industry that the coat and suit trade offers for the installation of such a system of settling labor disputes. The style element in the women's wear lines greatly adds to the confusion and intricacies of the dealings that must take place between the manufacturer and his operatives. The clothing trade is of a more stable character and the controversies could not possibly arise that occur in other lines where the manufacturing is of a more changeable and complicated nature. I think the clothiers who now frown on the idea of a protocol agreement will heap blessings on the head of this instrument after they have once experienced the advantage in confers. Everything of course, depends in a matter of this kind on the responsibility of the contracting parties. If we are not strong enough to control our organization the protocol is merely a scrap of paper. Rather than put obstacles in our path towards the thorough organization of the workers the employers should help the movement, as he has everything to gain by doing so."

Touching on the question of the elimination of the contracting system that has been urged as the best step to be taken towards putting the industry on a higher level, Mr. Hillman said this was a matter that would have to be left to the manufacturers themselves. He expressed the opinion, not as a union leader but as a man acquainted with conditions in the trade, that it would be very desirable from an efficiency standpoint to have all the workers directly employed in the shop of the manufacturer. Taking up the question of efficiency under collective bargaining, Mr. Hillman pointed out that it was the prevailing notion among employers who have not tried dealing with responsible unions, that the workers take every means to discourage improved methods in order that there may be no cutting down of the force in the factory.

"This belief is utterly opposed to the true facts," he said. "The factory of Hart, Schaffner & Marx is perhaps the most efficiently run of its kind in this country, and yet the company has an agreement with its employes. In fact, I may say that the operatives there are more than willing to see every device calculated to increase production tried out in the fullest measure. For four years I was chief clerk for the union under this protocol, and I know of no case that was brought up on this score by the men after the true nature of the innovation became known. So far as I am concerned, in conclusion, that within six months' time an agreement should be established in the clothing trade here that will do away with the necessity of strikes. No change in hours will be asked for by the union to the detriment of this market, he said, since the aim of the organization is to standardize rather than create artificial hours or wages in the various markets.

Mr. Hillman entered his present position as President of the U. G. W. of A. from that of chief clerk for the union under the protocol agreement in the coat and suit industry of this city. His work while in that office has been highly commended by the executives of the Manufacturers' Association, with whom he was thrown in contact, and he is looked upon as a leader in the movement that has as its object the peaceful settlement of disputes arising between employers and the union. If the present plans of the new administration of the clothing workers' union go through, it is very probable that an amalgamation of the unions in the garment trades in and out of this city will take place. The membership of such an organization would total 250,000. The American Federation of Labor has been considering such a combination for some time.

Printcloths Were Active.

A good bit of trading in printcloths was crowded into yesterday's business hours. Quite a fair demand was in evidence for 39-inch 68-72s at 4½ cents, and the market was very strong at that figure. Some good sales of 38½-inch 64-60s were put through at 3⅝ cents for quick delivery, while for delivery during the balance of the year there was some talk of 3 13-16 cents. On 38½-inch 60-48s, 3½ cents was pretty generally asked for deliveries during November and December, while that figure was refused by the mills for next year's delivery. There were

SOCIETY SETS DANCING PACE; CHARITY SPECTACLES BEGIN

Many Dances Announced for Winter—Society is Reveling in Country Attractions.

Miss Mary Rutgers Sage
(Photo by Marceau)

The engagement of Miss Sage, daughter of Mrs. W. H. Sage of 512 Fifth Avenue, was recently announced. Miss Dodd, daughter of Mrs. Edward Menocal, is to wed Leonard Sullivan, nephew of Bishop Leonard of Ohio.

Miss Marjorie Dodd.

SOCIETY is wondering what innovations will mark the dance meetings of the coming season. It is rather early to predict just what dances will lead in popularity. Many dances, like plays, are made famous in a night. Of course there are some that will survive from last Winter, principally the one-step and hesitation waltz, which everybody can dance and still keep within their bases of gravity, which is a necessary and fundamental condition of all modern dancing.

The tea dance is bound to survive, and will enter largely into the afternoon entertainments planned for the debutantes. Announcements have already been made of dancing teas, which can be made as formal or as informal as it pleases the hostess. The exhibition dance was on the decline at the wane of last season in the private ballrooms, and it remains to be seen whether this form of amusement, wherein harmony is enriched by motion, will continue in favor. If it drops out, there will surely be something just as perfectly distinctive to take its place, for New York hostesses never lack for originality, and it is to their initiative that the majority of exhibition dancers and the remunerative craze for tango teas and supper dances are indebted. In dancing society alone sets the pace. And a close relation will be found always to exist between society and stage. The dances of smart society of each season find their way to the stage before the Winter is half over. By the end of the season they are nation-wide. Thus New York society, regarded as an outlet for new social ideas, ever enjoys the agreeable sense of having originated something. With all the novel dancing demonstrations of last season, the period of their recurrence is at hand, and the question is now, Will the tense moments of the day and the horrors of war stay the flow of social originality?

***

THE dates for the subscription dances have all been fixed. Dances for young and old will dot the calendar from now until the formal season is a matter of history. The dances for girls not yet out and young men home from college are to enliven the holiday periods.

First in importance will be the newly inaugurated series of dances to be known as the Junior Assemblies, the reconstructed Junior Cotillions, the first dance to be held on Tuesday evening, Dec. 1, at Sherry's, and the other two of the series on the first Tuesday in January and February. As stated a year or so ago, these dances are to be managed much the same way as the Junior Cotillions, and they will be early dances, principally for the debutantes. The simpler forms of the modern dances are to be used. As supper is to be served promptly at midnight, only half an hour will remain for the debutantes in which to enjoy their last dance and then home early to get their beauty sleep.

The list of subscribers this year includes Mrs. John E. Alexandre, Mrs. William H. Astor, Mrs. Philip G. Bartlett, Mrs. Herbert Tod Brueck Jacquelin, Mrs. Charles M. Chapin, Mrs. Bradish Johnson, Mrs. James C. Colgate, Mrs. Charles H. Keep, Mrs. Richard C. Colt, Mrs. W. Bealls Kendall, Mrs. Paul D. Cravath, Mrs. George Gordon King, Mrs. Carl A. de Gersdorff, Mrs. Alvin W. Krech, Mrs. Edward K. Dunham, Mrs. C. Grant La Farge, Mrs. Frederick Edey, Mrs. Daniel S. Lamont, Mrs. Arthur B. Emmons, Mrs. Harry J. Luce, Mrs. H. Ward Ford, Mrs. George H. Macy, Mrs. James O. Green, Mrs. Pierre Mali, Mrs. John P. Gilford, Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, Mrs. W. Pierson Hamilton, Mrs. Lancaster Morgan, Mrs. Walter G. Oakman, Mrs. Henry Holt, Mrs. Stephen Peabody, Mrs. W. M. V. Hoffman, Mrs. William H. Woodin, Mrs. H. Hobart Porter, Mrs. Waldron Williams, Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, Jr., Mrs. Charles H. Tweed, Mrs. N. Thayer Robb, Mrs. Thomas Hunt Talmage, Mrs. William C. Sanger, Mrs. James R. Strong, and Mrs. Henry C. Sturges.

A series of dances, in aid of the American Hospital in Paris, will be given at the Cosmopolitan Club this season, beginning on Thursday evening, Dec. 24, and on every other Tuesday until Feb. 9. The dances are by invitation only. Among the patronesses are Mrs. Stowe Phelps, Mrs. Tracy Hoppin, Mrs. Lindsley Tappin, Mrs. Arthur Scribner, Mrs. George Greene, Mrs. Frederick De Witt Wells, Miss Elizabeth Perkins, and Miss Elizabeth Curtis. The Metropolitan Dances, for girls not yet out in society, are to be resumed, and the first meeting on Saturday night, Dec. 26, at Sherry's, will attract a jolly assembly of young people. Mrs. F. McNeil Bacon, Mrs. Thomas H. Howard, Mrs. Ernesto G. Fabbri, Mrs. J. Archibald Murray, Mrs. James W. Markoe, Mrs. Le Roy King, and Mrs. Robert P. Huntington are the patronesses. Of course, these dances will be early and informal. Another interesting series of dances for girls not yet introduced to society are the Colony Dances, and the first is to be given on Monday evening, Dec. 28, at the Colony Club, under the patronage of Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, Mrs. Winthrop Burr, Mrs. H. Casimir De Rham, Mrs. Henry H. Landon, Mrs. R. L. Huntington, Mrs. Russell H. Hoadley, Mrs. Edward T. H. Talmage, and Mrs. William Church Osborn.

***

THE cold snap brought many people to town last week. The houses in the social song are opening up rather rapidly now, and within a fortnight there will be light and cheer shining through the windows of the big gloomy looking houses like one sees pictured in the chromos of the late Victorian period. Many are keeping their country houses open this year until after Thanksgiving, which falls on Nov. 26. Mrs. Frank Gray Griswold, Mrs. Stanley Mortimer, Mrs. Robert Bacon, and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney plan to keep their houses out Westbury, L. I., way open until the middle of the month. Mrs. John E. Alexandre will take possession of the town house of Mr. and Mrs. B. Ogden Chisolm, 16 East Fifty-third Street, which she has leased for the Winter, early in November. Mr. and Mrs. Chisolm and family are to remain at Wickopee Farm, their estate at Ridgefield, Conn.

***

WITH the many charitable entertainments now in sight, it seems as if the society women are working in every direction in aid of the misery and poverty in the war-ridden countries. Everybody is putting a shoulder to the wheel, and knitting needles are flashing in every home, with many knitting "bees" to knit socks for the soldiers announced for the weeks to come. The unhappy and destitute people at home are not being forgotten either. Altogether this is a season of extraordinary responsibility.

Society is interesting itself keenly in the Fashion Fête, which opens for the benefit of the Committee of Mercy at the Ritz-Carlton at 9 o'clock next Wednesday evening for a two days' session, afternoon and evening. Twenty dinners are already announced to precede the opening display of home-made models. Among the dinner hostesses will be Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, whose guest of honor will be Mayor Mitchel. Fifty society girls are to sell programmes. The entertainment promises to be an attractive one, and after the evening exhibitions the ballroom is to be cleared for dancing. A large committee of men is in charge of this part of the programme. Mrs. Ernest Iselin, Mrs. Robert Brewster, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. French Vanderbilt, Mrs. Philip M. Lydig, Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Mrs. R. Suffern Tailer, Mrs. J. Insley Blair, and Mrs. Oliver Iselin are among the other dinner hostesses. Mrs. Ernest Iselin and Mrs. H. P. Whitney are among the seven members of the jury of admission.

Rehearsals are now in progress for the soirée artistique, to be given by the Society of Beaux Arts Architects, in aid of the destitute families of artists in France, on Nov. 9 and 10, afternoon and evening, at the Ritz-Carlton. The leading feature is to be a mythological pantomime, "The Judgment of Paris." Society is also to entertain at luncheon and dinner preceding this event. Lloyd Warren heads the Entertainment Committee.

Over forty society girls have volunteered to act as ushers at the benefit production of "The Romany Maid," to be held at the Biltmore on the evening of Nov. 6. Dancing is to follow the operetta, which was produced with much success early in October at Rye, N. Y., the proceeds to go to the International Red Cross. Some of the girls who are working for this benefit are the Misses Marie Thayer, Mildred Holmes, Helen B. Rich, Vera Onativia, Harriet McAlpin, and Gladys Robbins. Mrs. Franklin I. Mallory, Mrs. Richard C. Hunt, Mrs. Warner L. Churchill, J. H. Livingston, Jr., Duncan Bulkley, and Francis Humphreys are among those in the cast.

Mrs. Ogden Mills, Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mrs. M. Orme Wilson, Mrs. Henry A. Alexandre, Mrs. French Vanderbilt, Mrs. James A. Burden, Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, and Mrs. Pembroke Jones are among the boxholders at the entertainment at the Metropolitan Opera House on next Tuesday in aid of the fund for the work of the District Nurses and the Social Service Committee of the babies' wards of the Post-Graduate Hospital. Pavlowa and her dancers are to appear in new dances.

Some of the newest society dances are to be shown by young society women at the charity ball at Sherry's on Tuesday evening, Nov. 24, to be given for the benefit of the Children's Club of St. Ambrose Mission in East 111th Street. Mrs. Stephen C. Clark, Mrs. George Whitney, Jr., and the Misses Ina Kissel, Carol Harriman and Mary W. Martin compose the committee arranging the dance programme. Miss Hope Malcolm of 116 East Sixty-third Street has charge of the sale of tickets. Mrs. Robert Bacon, Mrs. Walter Damrosch, Mrs. Charles D. Dickey, Mrs. Bradish Johnson, Mrs. N. Thayer Robb, Mrs. Thomas H. Talmage, Mrs. W. P. Hamilton, Mrs. William S. Sloan and Mrs. Anson McC. Beard are among the patronesses.

In aid of the Russian war sufferers, Miss Barbara Rutherfurd, daughter of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, who is now engaged in Red Cross work in Paris, is arranging a Russian Festival, to be held in the ballroom of the Biltmore on Tuesday evening, Dec. 1. The entertainment is to include scenes of Russian peasant life and folk dances, to be followed by general dancing. The Russian Symphony Orchestra is to play. Tickets may be had by addressing Miss Rutherfurd at the Biltmore.

***

THE season for débutantes opens this week with the ball at Tuxedo on Friday night and the several entertainments arranged for the buds in town. Miss Helen Morgan Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Pierson Hamilton, was among the first of the season's buds to be fêted, the dance on Friday night at the country estate of her parents, near Tuxedo, being a jolly one. Mrs. Thomas E. Satterwaite is giving a luncheon on Tuesday at Sherry's for her débutante niece, Miss Isabella Banks Taylor.

That society's interest is largely centred in the débutantes is evinced by the many formal announcements being made for affairs in their honor. The afternoon reception for the formal presentation of the buds seems to hold in favor.

***

SOCIETY is really in the state now of coming and going, for everybody wants a change of scene and air between the Summer and Winter social campaigns. Among the travelers from Europe last week were Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor, who brought Mr. Astor's sister, Miss Alice Astor, back with them.

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould are entertaining week-end guests at Georgian Court, Lakewood, N. J. Sir Arthur and Lady Herbert, who have been spending the Summer in Newport, will be in town for the early season. Mrs. Henry Tarleton Wills is at 8 East Eighty-fifth Street for the Winter. The hounds are in full cry these days down Meadow Brook way, the frost being an aid on the early morning gallop. Looking forward, it is noted that Miss Fanny L. Johnson has rented Edward J. Berwind's cottage at Newport for next season. The first of Mr. Bagby's Musical Mornings at the Waldorf-Astoria will be on Monday, Dec. 7.

Delightful Music in Restaurant, 12:00 to 3:00

HEARN

Fourteenth Street — West of Fifth Avenue

Why Shop Uptown When You Can Do Better Downtown?

UPTOWN EXPENSES Do Not Permit of DOWNTOWN PRICES

EXPENSIVE LOCATION DOES NOT MAKE STYLE—

IT DOES ADD TO SELLING PRICE.

Hearn's Big Stocks Are Famous; So Are Their Low Prices.

Why Be Content with Limited Assortments Elsewhere When Here You Obtain

FINE, LARGE STOCKS OF NEW GOODS AND STYLISH APPAREL?

EXTRAORDINARY SPECIAL OFFERINGS

—IN—

OUR FAMOUS UPHOLSTERY DEPARTMENT

This itemized list will demonstrate to what extent our cash purchasing power has helped to obtain extraordinary concessions.

In some instances (for trade reasons alone) we were requested not to use names—You will be delighted with these

ASSORTMENTS | VALUES | PRICES

SPECIAL PURCHASE

FINE CURTAIN NETS

From a High-Class Manufacturer.

About 70 up-to-the minute styles—Colonial, Egyptian, Mexican, Brussels, Madras, Irish Point, and other figure and geometrical effects—White, Ivory, Ecru, Beige—36 to 48 inches wide—double borders—finished edge.

19 cts. for .29 to .35 values
29 cts. for .39 to .49 values
Just look over Our Cretonne Stock. It Is a Genuine Treat—

Unfadable and Sunfast Draperies.

Every imaginable color and design—Aurora, Kapock, Iridescent, Venetian, Alhambra are some of the grades in various golds and wood tones, various blues, various reds, rose tints, etc., in solid or combination madras weaves....Bring a sample of your wall paper or color scheme and see how we will match it.

TWO REPRESENTATIVE SPECIALS:
49 cts.—Values .69 to .89
73 cts.—Values $1.19 to $1.39
Finer to 1.39

ANOTHER GREAT OFFERING

Furniture & Drapery Velours

Jaspe, Fig'd, Striped or Plain Weaves—all 50 inches wide—reds, greens, blues, rose tints and wood tones—about 40 colorings in all.

$2.25 to $2.50 Values.....1.48
$3.00 to $4.50 Values.....1.95

SPECIAL SALE OF

Portieres

Rich Velour Portieres—duplex colorings—one side plain, reverse brocade—for parlors, library and reception rooms—would cost $20.00 to make.....11.75

Reversible Silk Frou Frou Portieres—two tone colorings—brocade designs—value $10.50.....7.98

SPECIAL PURCHASE

Marie Antoinette Curtains

An importer, wishing to realise quickly, sold his entire importation to us at a liberal discount....New, fresh goods, beautifully hand wrought designs on finest French cable net—White and Arabian—3 yds. long—Artistic and novel effects—as we buy, we sell, therefore:—

4.98 for Curtains worth $6.98
5.98 for Curtains worth $7.98
6.98 for Curtains worth $9.98
7.98 for Curtains worth $10.98
9.98 for Curtains worth $12.98 and $14.98

SPECIAL PURCHASE

French Renaissance Curtains

Mounted on finest Scrim and Marquisette—wide real Renaissance insertings—Arabian tint—46 distinct styles—3 yds. long—beautifully made—deep hemstitched finish:—

2.98 for Curtains worth $3.98 and $4.98

3.98 for Curtains worth $5.98 to $7.98

SPECIAL PURCHASE

Panel Curtains

Fine Scrim and Marquisette.

Filet designs—about 15 styles in all—
Those made to sell at $4.98 each 2.98
Those made to sell at $6.98 each 3.98

IMPORTER'S CLEAN-UP

400 French Net Bed Sets

Marie Antoinette and Renaissance designs—large centre panel and corner Motifs—Side Valances—Bolster Sham—White and Arabian—extra values as follows:

3.49 . . 4.98 . . 5.98

WORTH ONE-THIRD MORE!

GREAT SALE OF RUGS

From the Auction Sale of Alexander T. Smith's Sons & Co.

We were one of the largest buyers!

Nearly $5,000,000 worth of Rugs were offered....All grades of Axminsters, Wiltons, Velvets and Tapestry Brussels—Sizes 12x15 feet down to 18x36 inches.

Sale starts tomorrow at 9 A. M.

These Fine Rugs were all made for this Autumn's trade.

Designs and colorings are the choicest and weaves are everything that fashion and utility demand.

See Herald and World for Prices and Sizes.

DWIGHT ANCHOR AND WILL WASH HEAVIER.

Sheets and Pillow Cases

Brands so well known by housewives that it is quite unnecessary to laud them in any way—they are here in exceptional assortment, at exceptionally low prices to-morrow. This is the way you can buy:

PILLOW CASES.

Dwight Anchors, Uticas.	Sale.	Will-Wash-Heavier.	Sale.
42x36..val. .20	.15	val. .16	.11
45x36..val. .22	.16	val. .18	.12
50x36..val. .24	.18	val. .20	.14
54x36..val. .26	.20	val. .23	.16

SHEETS.

	Sale.		Sale.
54x90..val. .64	.51	val. .56	.33
63x90..val. .69	.57	val. .59	.37
72x90..val. .79	.62	val. .64	.47
81x90..val. .87	.67	val. .69	.52
90x90..val. .94	.71	val. .74	.57

Measurements Are Before Hemming.

No Mail or Telephone Orders for the Above.

Diamond Mills Sheetings

A well-known brand, free from Starch or Dressing—tomorrow:

BLEACHED.

42 inch	reg. .15	Sale .10
4-4	reg. .16	Sale .11
50 inch	reg. .17	Sale .12
4-4	reg. .19	Sale .14
7-4	reg. .23	Sale .18
8-4	reg. .25	Sale .19
9-4	reg. .27	Sale .22
10-4	reg. .29	Sale .24

UNBLEACHED.

4-4	reg. .15	Sale .10
7-4	reg. .17	Sale .13
7-4	reg. .19	Sale .15
8-4	reg. .22	Sale .18
9-4	reg. .25	Sale .19
9-4	reg. .27	Sale .22
10-4	reg. .29	Sale .24

Sale Cont'd of

BABIES' and LITTLE CHILDREN'S

SAMPLE COATS—

33⅓ OFF!

From one of the highest class manufacturers, who closes out his entire sample line to us once a year....Coats from which advance orders are taken, only one of a style, so you may imagine the extent of selection.

Moires, Silk Crepes, Crepe Meteors, Crepe de Chines, Silk Poplins, Bengalines, French Faille, Ottomans, All-Wool Broadcloths, Cashmeres, Serges, Poplins, Crepes, Bedford Cords, Chinchillas and Corduroys, in sizes to 4 yrs.

	Worth.	Sale.
Long and Short Coats..	$4.98	2.98
Long and Short Coats..	$6.98	3.98
Long and Short Coats..	$7.98	4.98
Long and Short Coats..	$9.98	5.98
Long and Short Coats..	$10.98	6.98
Long and Short Coats..	$13.98	8.98
Long and Short Coats..	$16.98	9.98
Long and Short Coats..	$19.98	12.98
Long and Short Coats..	$22.98	14.98
Long and Short Coats..	$31.98	19.98

Finer to 35.98—worth $49.98.

Men's Black Jersey Coats—

all wool—double breasted—tailor made—all sizes—
Sizes 34 to 46.....4.98....5.98
Sizes 48 to 54.....5.98....6.98

Men's Pure Worsted Cardigan Jackets—selected stock—two pockets—fine custom workmanship—hand finished—size 36.....4.00
Rise 50 cents each size.

Men's Gray Cardigan Jackets—worsted—size 36.....2.75
Rise on each size to 50 50 cents.
Rise on each size to 44 25 cents.

Special Reductions on

OSTRICH PLUMES

For MONDAY and TUESDAY

Fashion's favorites for hat trimmings — full assortments of all lengths, also bands. Black is the richest and most used—not skimpy, but full lustrous flues—full heads—also clear white Plumes. The values are much greater than this list would imply. The reductions are actual:

2.45 for.....$3.49 Plumes
2.95 for.....$3.98 Plumes
3.45 for.....$4.49 Plumes
4.45 for.....$5.49 Plumes
5.98 for..$7.48 and $8.48 Plumes
6.98 for.....$9.98 Plumes
Others to 10.98—were to $14.98.

Women's Extra Size Underwear

We make a specialty of extra size Underwear for women, so that you will always find large assortments of well-selected garments — special values of interest:—

Nainsook Corset Covers—deep yoke back and front of rows of lace and ribbon..... .59
Others, shirred front or tight fitting .....29..49..69..98
Ex. Size Night Dresses—Nainsook and Muslin—round, square, V or high neck—Short or long sleeves—effective trim of emb'y, laces and ribbon..... .98
Others—.59..79..1.29..1.69..1.98
Extra Size Petticoats—Nainsook and Cambric—fancy effects in fine laces, emb'y and ribbon..1.98
Others—.79..98..1.49..2.69..2.98
Extra Size Chemises—Nainsook—fine emb'd edge ribbon run or emb'y and 3 rows lace..... .79
Others, including Corded Bands, .49..59..98
Extra Size Drawers—Cambric—circular or straight—ruffle or wide emb'y..... .59
Others with hemstitching, emb'y, laces and ribbon—.39..49..69..98 to 1.98

Sample Lots of MEN'S SHIRTS

Values $1.50 to $2.50.....1.15

All sizes to 18 neck—samples from a high-class maker; also odd lots of slightly handled shirts out of our own stock....Some silk shirts included.

Fine Attractions in

NEW SILKS

Blacks, Colors, Fancies

40-inch Crepe de Chines.....1.50
40-inch Crepe Meteors—1.49..1.69..1.95
40-inch Charmeuse—$2.00 quality.....1.69
40-inch Charmeuse—worth $1.79.....1.47
40-inch Charmeuse Brocades....1.25
40-inch French Chiffon Taffetas.1.95
40-inch Liberty Satins—worth $1.50.....1.25
40-inch Chiffon Crepes.....1.75
35-inch Black Chiffon Taffetas—Satin Duchess—value $1.25... .98
40-inch Black Crepe de Chines—three special values—1.25..1.50..1.75
40-inch Black Crepe Meteors—soft draping qualities—1.49..1.69 to 2.45
40-inch Black Satin Charmeuse—rich lustre—1.47..1.69..2.25 to 2.69
54-inch Black Double-faced Satin Charmeuse—extra weight for Cloaks and Capes—value $4.95 3.95
Yard-wide Silk Poplins—soft finish—lustrous—rich, deep black..... .69..89

Women's Suits, Coats, Furs

A REALLY WONDERFUL STOCK!

The short but severe cold snap was enough to make one feel the need of warm apparel....OUR STOCKS are in the pink of condition, with Fashion's LATEST and BEST, and, please remember, our prices are, as always, very moderate....To buy of us is to purchase the latest and best at considerably less cost than elsewhere.

Specially fine Values tomorrow and Tuesday (Election Day).

Women's Tailored Suits— Tomorrow and Election Day—Special.....13.98
Broadcloth, Poplin and Cheviot—black, navy, brown, green—short military coats—Redingote Blouse and Straight line Models—trim'd in fine effect, with braid or velvet collars and cuffs—newest Skirts.

Women's Fine Tailored Suits— For Tomorrow and Election Day—value $35.00. 17.45
Broadcloths, Gabardines and Poplins—Black, Navy, Green, Brown—45-inch length Coats, plain tailored, with flare bottom, also Redingote and Blouse Models or Short Jaunty Coats—with opossum collars—others effectively trim'd with caracul cloth, velvet and braids—very smart suits.

Handsome Velveteen Suits— Values $40.00. Tomorrow & Election Day. 29.75
Excellent quality — Black, Navy, Brown, Green and Plum—long coats, bolero jacket effect—skunk opossum collar and flare cuff edged with fur—plain skirt, yoke top, pleats at bottom to give ample foot room; also jaunty short coats with collar, cuffs and bottom with wide caracul cloth bands—skirt to match—handsome suits.
Fine Velvet Suits—in unmatched variety to $110.98.

Women's Tailored Skirts— Tomorrow and Election Day—Special.....4.75
Corduroy Velvets—Black, Navy, Brown, White—also Serges and Broadcloths—straight line models with or without yokes and pleats—also Russian tunics in great variety.

Women's Silk Dresses Regularly $15.98 Tomorrow & Election Day. 10.75
Satin combined with velvet—especially good Fall colors—sleeveless blouse and wide belt with sash ends of velvet—also tunic models in crepe de chine—wide crushed girdle—hemstitching on tunic—sleeves set in new arm hole.

Women's Coats— Tomorrow & Election Day. 11.75
Zibelines, Black, Navy and rich Plaids—wool mixtures, broadcloths, cheviots—splendid new models—lined and unlined.

Women's Seal Plush Coats Tomorrow & Election Day. 17.98
Handsome Seal Plush and Pomoire—48 inch or full length—shawl or collar buttoned to neck forming revers—plain or flare bottom, with belt back—yarn dyed satin lined throughout.

Women's Coats— Tomorrow & Election Day.. 21.98
Black, Navy, Brown, Green Zibeline—also Montagnac finish cloth—Stylish models—of various lengths—cheviot, broadcloth, fashionable wool plush checks and seal plush—Redingotes, blouse effects and various new models—convertible collars.

Women's Fine Fur Sets— For tomorrow & Election Day—Special..... 25.96
Black Fox, Black Opossum and Jap Mink—shawl, animal and novelty scarfs—new black muffs.

Handsome Fur Sets— For Tomorrow and Election Day—Special..... 37.96
Hudson Seal, (Dyed Muskrat,) Skunk, Raccoon, Black Fox and Jap Mink—double and single animal and novelty scarfs—large block muffs.

Beautiful Near Seal Coats— (Dyed Coney) Special..... 65.96
Also Caracul—45-inch back—slightly sloped in front—high collar, open to form revers—brocade satin lining.

Children's and Misses' Fur Sets—1.24 to 21.98

Women's Serge Dresses Reg. $10.98 to $14.98 Tomorrow & Election Day. 9.75
Braid-bound Redingotes—circular tunic—black, navy, green and brown—black satin sleeves and drop skirts—smartly designed—beautifully made—all sizes.

$1.29 CHIFFON BROADCLOTHS

All wool—48-inch—water spot proof—sponged and shrunk—lustrous..88

Belgian Blue, Raisin, Myrtle, Navy, Porcelain Blue, Pansy, Forest Green, Men's Wear Blue, Cadet, Seal Brown, Taupe, Black

54-inch French Serges Regularly $1.29..... .92
Pure Australian wool—fine twill—one of the season's leading fabrics—navy and black; also a limited quantity of other Fall shades.

50-inch Imported Po-Moire Broadtail Cloth Special..... 5.98
Jet black—very soft and supple.

Coating Chinchillas 54 inch—Elsewhere $2.00.. 1.49
Close curl—light and dark Oxford, brown, navy and black.

Granite Cloths 50 & 54 in. All Wool—98 ct. values... .69
Cheviots and Serges—fine range of favorite colors, also navy and black.

40-inch Poplins $1.25 qualities..... .89
Silk and wool—fine lustre—soft finish—large assortment of light and dark colors; also navy and black.

54-inch Black Broadcloths Extra fine value..... 3.49
Pure Australian wool—rich jet black—fine and soft draping—highly lustrous—sponged and shrunk.

Fine Bleached Muslins Also extra heavy unbleached—36-inch—value 7½—special... 5½

Babies' Sweater Coats $1.49 and $1.79 values—new syles, including ruff neck that may be worn high or open—white and best colors—sizes to 4 years..... .95

Fine All Wool Shirts—made of soft Saxony yarn—silk finish—sizes to 3 yrs—value .79 to .98.....69

HAND-MADE AFGHANS — Two-toned—cozy for cold days—Reg. $2.98 and $3.98..... 2.44

Also:—

These matchless values from this great section—Remember,

We are Headquarters for Every Baby Requirement.

SHIRTS—
Cotton .....25 | Silk mixed .....29 to 1.49
Part wool .....39 to .59 | All wool .....49 to .98
All silk .....98 to 1.49

BANDS—
Flannel .....12½ to .25 | All wool 49
Knit cotton .....12½ | Part wool .....25 to .39
Silk and wool 49

BARROWS—
Domet .....25 and .35 | Flannel .....39 to 1.29

SKIRTS—to 3 years.
Domet .....25 and .49 | Flannel .....39 to 2.98

NIGHTGOWNS—sizes to 3 years.
Flannelette ..29 and .39 | Daisy cloth..39 and .49

WRAPPERS—
Outing Flannel .....29 | Daisy cloth....39 to .69
Cashmere .....1.98 to 7.98

BATHROBES—sizes to 5 years.
Blanket robes .....98 to 1.98

SACQUES—
Flannelette ....15 to .39 | Cashmere ....39 to 4.98
Worsteds .....25 to 2.98

LEGGIN DRAWERS—to 3 years.....39 to 1.98
Bootees .....12½ to 1.98 | Moccasins .....49 to 1.19

MITTENS—
Wool .....12½ to .49 | Silk & wool....39 to .49
All silk 69

TOQUES .....25 to .98

CROCHETED CAPS—
Worsted .....49 to .98 | Silk .....69 to 2.98
Angora .....1.19 to 2.98

CARRIAGE ROBES—.....49 to 3.98

MORNING SPECIALS—Tomorrow, Monday, Until 1 P. M.

To prevent dealers buying, quantities restricted. No Mail or Telephone Orders.

49 ct. Yard Wide Serges.....28
Worsted warp—brown, garnet, navy and black.
DRESS GOODS—MAIN FLOOR.

$1.79 H. S. Linen Cloths.....1.20
New patterns, including fleur de lis—handsome borders—large enough to seat six.
For showers, Wedding Gifts, etc.
LINENS—MAIN FLOOR.

95 ct. Goose Feathers—lb.....55
Sanitary cured—dustless.
PILLOWS—BASEMENT.

39 ct. Brass Extension Rods.....19
Extend 30 to 54 inch—for lace curtains—complete.
POLE DEPT.—THIRD FLOOR.

98 ct. Women's Nightdresses.....69
Nainsook — elaborately trim'd with lace and wide emb'y—ribbon run.
MUSLIN UNDERWEAR—SECOND FLOOR.

15 and 19 ct. Imported Cretonnes....9½
Also satin finish—floral, chintz and wall paper designs—desirable colorings for boudoirs, hangings, etc.
UPHOLSTERY—BASEMENT.

$2.25 Union Taffeta Umbrellas....1.47
Black—36 and 28 inch—plain silver or gold trim'd handles.
UMBRELLAS—MAIN FLOOR.

$1.19 White Linens—90 inch.....66
Note width — every thread pure linen—for sheets, pillow cases and art work.
LINENS—MAIN FLOOR.

29 ct. Silk Mixed Novelties.....17
Lustrous, soft fabrics—pretty brocade effects—afternoon and evening shades.
WASH DRESS FABRICS—BASEMENT.

$16.98 Women's Suits.....12.00
Poplins and broadcloth—black, navy, brown and green—Redingote model—pleated back—new model skirts—finely lined—all sizes.
WOMEN'S SUITS—SECOND FLOOR.

$1.98 Women's D'ble Fleece Robes..1.44
Desirable patterns and colors—self borders—satin trim'g—all sizes.
HOUSE DRESSES—SECOND FLOOR.

98 ct. Crepe de Chines.....77
Double width—afternoon and evening shades, also white, ivory, cream and black.
SILKS—MAIN FLOOR.

12½ ct. Outing Flannels..... 8
Heavy nap—pink, blue and gray stripes, also plain colors.
WASH DRESS FABRICS—BASEMENT.

12½ & 15 ct. Lonsdale Cambrics..10¾
Nainsook or cambric finish—name is sufficient guarantee of quality.
WHITE GOODS—MAIN FLOOR.

$7.50 Boys' Suits—8 to 16 yrs.....4.75
Many with extra trousers—serges, worsteds and cheviots—plain navy, gray and brown—also new fancies—new Norfolk models.
BOYS' CLOTHING—THIRD FLOOR.

10 ct. Renaissance Doylies..... 7
Round or square—drawnwork centres.
ART LINENS—MAIN FLOOR.

35 ct. Infants' Slips.....20
Cambric or Nainsook — emb'y trim'd yoke or bishop style.
INFANTS' DEPT.—SECOND FLOOR.

$2.98 Black Silk Blouses.....2.27
Crepe de Chine and Pean de Soie—tailored models—long sleeves.
BLOUSES—SECOND FLOOR.

Clock Signs Denote Morning Specials. Look for the Clocks!

Look for the Clocks!

LACK OF NEW FABRICS BEING FELT IN WORLD OF FASHION

Wonderful Weave-Like Beaver Fur Is Only Attractive Material Offered—Attempt Being Made to Introduce Cotton Velvets As a Feature of Coming Winter's Styles—Revival of Old Fashioned Silks.

IT is either good or bad for business that the great French masters of the loom and the dye pot put out few new materials this season, and contented themselves with furbishing up well-known weaves that had not proved definitely successful when invented.

Even Rodier, the master of them all, did this, and his stamp of approval on velours de laine, ratine, velvet, and brocades gave the impetus in America to the usage of fabrics that had been on the counters for three years. To these well-known dress materials were added satins with silver or gold threads pasted on by a rolling process, varnished satin such as the milliners used last Spring, and brocaded gauzes in the Arabian style that some of the chicfest dressmakers put into evening gowns last March.

Even the substitutes for serge, called gaberdine and vigogne, are not strictly new, although the American public has not made much use of the latter since its invention two years ago. Now that the high-priced dressmakers show it favoritism, it has come into some prominence.

The velours de laine of this season looks very much like the weave of several years ago with which we found fault because of its tendency to show every crease and rub itself into "bald" spots. True, its successor, called duvetyne, was infinitely worse, showing the mark of every chair so strongly that even sandpaper was of no avail, as it often is with fabrics that achieve spots by reason of the pile being flattened.

The present quality of velours de laine is very much better, so its advocates declare, and the present weave of ratine is far and away superior to anything we have had under this name. Probably, the majority of shops have not an adequate supply of these materials on the counters, but they will not have serious trouble in imitating the French weaves very closely or selling all the materials left from last Winter.

Beaver Plush Is Added.

Along with the two soft, silky fabrics that have been revived, comes a wonderful weave like beaver fur. It is usually called by the old-fashioned name of plush and is probably the most sumptuous of all the materials for street use. It wears well, they say, although no one can assert that with authority until women have put the fabric to actual hard use.

Every one remembers how duvetyne failed us after hundreds of dollars had been spent on it by hundreds of women. It was such a hopeless failure. There was no remedy for it. Every one who was not defiant of public opinion was compelled to discard even the handsomest gowns of it, or go about looking thoroughly shabby.

Will the new plush behave better? The next month will tell. In the meantime, women are fighting a bit shy of it for this reason, as well as for a more serious one, which is its scarcity in the American market and the consequent high price asked for it.

Never has there been a more plaintive argument for higher prices for gowns this Winter than the one advanced concerning the scarcity of French materials. It is surely time the American-made goods became a necessity and the buyer became sufficiently proficient in the judging of fabric to detect when it was really American carried under a French label.

There is no form of women's apparel, or few, at least, that is not advanced in price in certain quarters under the plaint of the war. When it is not the war, it was the tariff, or the slow movement in Wall Street. One has a strong curiosity to know what the next excuse of high prices will be!

If one is asked two or three hundred dollars for an afternoon gown which was imported from Paris, the price is explained on the steepness of the original cost plus the duty. If one asks for an explanation of the still higher price asked for a copy of that gown, one is given to understand that it is based on the exorbitant salary demanded by the "hands" in America. If $25 is added to the price, it is because you have chosen the material of which there is only a bolt in the States and therefore—!

If you have been through this mill time after time, haven't you intense curiosity as to the explanation when Paris does not offer any clothes, when there are no French fabrics to be had, when through the inevitable settling down of the entire scale of prices for everything not a necessity, the "hands" will be glad to earn a moderate, if steady, salary? How much easier it would be to put the explanation always up to one's own workmanship as the great French designers, and as all persons do who through unusual talents or power feel superior to the ordinary workman.

Cotton Velvet for Gowns.

There is a strong attempt to make cotton velvet a feature of the Winter's fashion, because France took it up with quite a show of vigor, and because the patriotic American woman knows that the more cotton fabrics she buys, that much sooner will the present supply be exhausted and the new cotton in the bale be demanded to go into the mills, giving work where work and money are frightfully needed; for, mind you, not all the suffering in this war will be in Europe. This is the second time in the half century that the South will be hit hard by battle.

The campaign for cotton gowns is a good one, and, if successful, will serve the country in several ways. There is little need to tell any woman of the loveliness of a cotton frock, or how she shall make it, especially if that woman has spent any time below the imaginary boundary line, in a land where the trick is turned in a graceful manner.

Organdie and cotton chiffon and batiste, point d'esprit, and "footing" have been the staples of the Southerners' wardrobe for more than a century, and any woman, especially a débutante, looks well in them. If they will not serve for the formal occasions among women who are turned out smartly in society, they will serve for the informal life of the house during the Winter.

A débutante who wishes to do something individual should take organdie and colored muslin for her social uniform, make each gown according to the best style, vary them as much as her ingenuity suggests, proclaim her programme, and the result would be that she would be written down as one of intelligence and originality, and she would have all the followers that every débutante craves. Added to this, she would be inexpensively dressed, which is an item of more importance this Winter than it has been in ten years.

Are brocades to be reckoned among the new silks? If so, they would take a chapter to describe and enthuse over. Surely the weavers and dyers went back far in the world's output of marvelous fabrics to learn the secret of the richness, the suppleness, the coloring, the use of bullion that the present hour brocades show. They are a credit to the workers of the epoch.

There is a brocade that reminds one of the exotic east, of the temple dancers, of the girls in the Algerian cafés, of the bazaars in the camel's pathway. It is transparent, with flowers shining on the surface done in satin, in crystals, in bullion.

There are others on supple foundation with a flatly pressed thread of silver or gold forming a vague design like a flecked sky. There are brocades that might serve for a museum chair of Louis XII.'s time, and which are sparingly used to bring out the richness of a thin gown; and there are heavy, bold brocades that might have been used by Slavic priest, and which the modern woman may wear as a loose, flowing garment banded with deep Russian fur and girdled with deep-toned crystals.

One naturally associates the idea of brocade with a flowered design on a satin surface, but this season we have the brocaded velvet, the kind that costs, and of which the human frame can stand only a moderate amount. These, as well as some of the satin ones, are made in two-yard lengths showing a single pattern; but lovely as they are, they are a snare and a delusion in the hands of the amateur or one who has not a proper valuation of their worth and the way to use them.

As for taffeta, one still sees it, even though the cold weather is advancing when the just and the unjust flee from this stiff, cold silk. A few of the important gowns have a commingling of gaberdine and taffeta, such as a long tunic of one over a skirt of the other, and sleeves of one in a blouse or jacket of the other.

But such fashions smack of the early Autumn and hold good only in the moderate climes for the Winter months. The style may be a good one for women who cannot wear woolen fabrics through the period that stretches from October to April, because the climate does not offer enough cold days to warrant it.

Cross-Barred Silks.

But what is much smarter than taffeta is faille, the silk of our grandmothers. It has not only been revived, but has been accepted without a demur. It serves for all kinds of gowns except those intended for the street—and one often sees it there under a long top coat. It comes in colors and black, and makes durable and attractive evening frocks. Time was when the belle of the day did not feel herself properly fitted out unless she had an amethyst or pink faille evening frock trimmed with expensive lace in a weave we never see now.

One of the dressmakers started a fashion for making blocks on the black faille with strips of black velvet, and many dressmakers are now doing this. The shops also sell the fabrics already arranged in squares. It is not attractive as an entire gown; it must be part of a frock.

For instance, there is a model with a gathered skirt of the blacked silk and velvet that just escapes the floor, and above it is a short chemise of black velvet, the softest weave that the milliners use. There are long sleeves fitting the arms like gloves, and a mediaeval décolletage that shows more of the shoulders than the chest. Trying, but ultra fashionable.

Among the other old-fashioned silks which are revived this season are those striped ones in contrasting colors, such as pale yellow and bright blue, crimson and buff, black and white, which we jumble together in our minds with the fashions of the Directoire and the Revolution. Débutantes are wearing these to afternoon teas as well as to dances.

They are often made in a pictorial style, and if a young girl lends herself well to this style of dress, there is a novelty at her hand. The original frock of this kind made this season had a gathered short skirt of buff and blue—Continental coloring—caught up at one side, and above it a half-fitting bodice of bright-blue velvet with a wide décolletage that stretched across the shoulders and ended in a peplum below the waist with a flaring tail at the back.

At the left of the waist there was a bouquet of lilies of the valley and pink roses, with a small white bird holding in its beak a shower of colored ribbons. There are widely striped silks in black and white that are made into full skirts with bodices, fitted, or loose like a chemise, of black velvet that reach up to the neck and end in a boned white lace collar, or are cut away to show a slice of the shoulders in imitation of the gowns worn by the ladies when the "Doges were the Kings," if it is permissible to quote the august Mr. Browning in anything so frivolous as evening gowns, although, if I am not mistaken, he indulged in a bit of a description of a coiffure himself in the same poem.

SMART VERSION OF NEW FASHION.

A Jenny model of biscuit-colored cloth with sealskin trimming.

OSTRICH TRIMMING ON BLOUSE LATEST STYLE NOTE.

This blouse of sheer batiste, made more substantial with stitching and tucks, is made still daintier with ostrich fringe effectively put on. With it is worn a huge purple velvet hat, trimmed with a pink rose and a bunch of grapes at the side.

NEW LINGERIE

NEVER did the shops show more tempting lingerie than they do this Autumn. Probably that is a statement made every season. For each season lingerie does appear to be lovelier than ever before.

In the last few years, however, since chiffon and crêpe de chine have been so largely used for negligées and lingerie, there is a note of beauty about underwear that it has never before had. The fastidious woman always demands lingerie that can be easily washed, and some of the new lingerie, fur trimmed, flower trimmed, and made of silk and satin, must be sent to the dry cleaner. But crêpe de chine, wash taffeta, and other wash silks can all be laundered as satifactorily as muslin.

As for the little silk flowers that are used for trimming, they can be removed whenever the garment they trim is laundered, and when they are soiled they can be dipped in gasoline and so cleaned thoroughly. Some of them can even be treated to a bath in soapsuds, then rinsed, and shaken until most of the water is out of them. They should be pinned to a towel and hung in the air, but not in the sun, to dry. They should be shaken two or three times in the drying.

Crêpe de chine underwear is generally lace trimmed, but some of it is scalloped and embroidered in self-toned silks, and this is especially durable, as it washes well and is easily ironed.

When all is said and done, nothing is quite so lovely, in the way of lingerie, as that of muslin. The sheerest batiste and lawn are used for combinations, chemises and petticoats that vie with the crêpe de chine and chiffon garments in beauty. Some of them are lace trimmed, some are hand embroidered, and run with tiny hand-sewn tucks.

SOME OF THE SEASON'S NOVELTIES

WIDE BRAID BELTS.

WIDE silk braid is much used in the French models. Sometimes it forms pockets, sometimes it is used to band a long tunic, sometimes it is used as a belt, run through straps of the fabric of the frock it adorns. Needless to say, the braid belt is loose and placed low at the hips.

BRAID AND FUR.

BRAID and fur are interestingly combined in ornaments for cloth coats. There are frogs of black braid edged with a narrow fringe of soft black fur, and, with a fur collar or braid banding on the coat, the effect of these frocks would be very good.

THE LONG SLEEVE.

THE very long sleeve, which is the accepted one this Autumn, is made to fit with glovelike tightness from the waist almost to the floor. That is, if the sleeve is tight at all, it is really tight. Some bishop sleeves are used, and these, of course, are full above a narrow waistband.

SILVER AND GREEN.

SILVER lace and emerald green velvet have been combined in several of the models of the Autumn that have attracted wide attention. One evening gown is made with much silver lace on an emerald green foundation, and further trimming of rhinestones to add to the silvery, light effect.

SHIRRING OVER CORD.

SHIRRING is one of the best methods of trimming used this Autumn. Heavy velvet is held in place by shirring over cords, and this method of arranging the fullness answers the twofold purpose of trimming and of making the fabric more wieldy.

FUR FABRICS.

THERE are on the market several fabrics which simulate fur—velour fabrics, most of them. They are used to trim coats where fur would otherwise be used. But they do not resemble fur closely enough to be mistaken for it; evidently there is no effort to do that. They are frankly cloth, with a furlike finish.

COLORED ORGANDIE.

MUCH of the new organdie neckwear is not all white. There are Roman striped corners on some of the collars and cuffs, of bright, printed colors—stripes half an inch wide. Then there is much striping of black on collars and vests of organdie. Some of the newest things, too, are embroidered in Oriental designs with red and green and other colors.

PLEATED HANDBAGS.

A BLUE silk handbag is made with pleats running across, not up and down, as they often run. It is a novelty, and therefore will probably be the object of a good deal of attention. It is finished with a strap handle of the silk.

STRAPS.

STRAPS are used to restrain the fullness in many of the new Winter coats and skirts. Sometimes there are two straps across the back of a coat where the full skirt flares from the waist section. Sometimes there are straps across the front of the skirt to hold in the fullness below the waist, and sometimes they are used for the same purpose on the hips. They are stitched usually, and give a very smart finish.

GABERDINE.

GABERDINE is still one of the fashionable fabrics. It has proved almost as durable, perhaps quite as durable, as serge. It has an attractive finish and it is soft and supple. So it has shown itself suitable for the most exacting wear. It is a pleasant change from serge, too, for although serge is always welcome when it is in fashion, it sometimes grows a bit tiresome.

APRONS.

SOME of the new evening models have apron drapery in the front, and an odd thing about it is that the apron section falls longer than the foundation. The apron is of metallic lace.

SERGE AND SATIN TOGETHER.

SERGE and satin are now combined, and many a serge frock, with a long serge tunic, has a black satin foundation skirt and other touches of black satin. Sometimes there is a moyen age slip of blue serge with black satin foundation skirt and black satin sleeves that reach to the knuckles.

CHIFFON WITH VELVET.

IN a velvet coat suit, which is made for afternoon wear, for velvet is not suitable for morning suits, there is a full skirt gathered on a shirred chiffon yoke. There is a long, flaring coat lined with chiffon. The whole suit is decidedly likable, with its interesting combination of velvet and chiffon.

POINTS EVERYWHERE.

THE fashion for points is in full swing. The new note in some of the Autumn skirts is a point, back and front. The trains of evening frocks are long and pointed. Many evening frocks have drapery on the skirt or bodice which falls in long points. There are pointed scallops, too, on some afternoon frock tunics.

ADVERTISEMENT.

IF YOU KEEP HOUSE

—you know that dishwashing and working around the house plays havoc with your hands.

But it is possible to do your own housework and still have beautiful hands.

VELOGEN is the housewife's best friend. Rub it into your hands after washing dishes and when going out of doors and in a week note the improvement—the fine smoothness of your skin.

When hanging clothes out of doors, you know that sun and wind make your complexion burn and roughen. Apply VELOGEN to the skin before going to bed and it will make the irritated flesh soft and smooth.

At all druggists, 25 cents a tube.

A good move—Coffee to POSTUM "There's a Reason"

THE LITTLE FRENCH NOVELTY SHOP, 928 Sixth Ave., 52d-53d. French dressmaker returned from Paris making exclusive gowns of character, distinction. We make Autumn suits; we select the style for you. Furs, Hats, Gowns, artistically remodeled.

You Can Be SURE Of The Purity Of GRADE A HOMER MILK Pasteurized

because of its conspicuous life saving record. It is the milk upon which the New York City Health Department depends to save the babies in 56 Infant Feeding Stations.

HOMER MILK comes from healthy, clean, well-fed cows. It is cleanly handled and is Laboratory tested and bottled BEFORE it starts for the city. It is safe-guarded all the way and will reach your table untainted, sweet, creamy, and wholesome.

10cts. PER QUART
Twice a Day Deliveries
Phone Bryant 1547
HOMER MILK—RAW—11c per Quart

A mill a man is the cost of presenting an advertisement of this size to the more than 275,000 readers of The New York Times every day for a week.

Where else could you secure a list of names of such a character, and how else could you reach them at so small an expense?

The New York Times will deliver your message to 275,000 families in an advertisement exactly this size for $40.50. This is at the rate of about 15c per 1,000 families.

Send for an advertising representative or telephone 1000 Bryant.

A. Jaeckel & Co Furriers

As the cold weather approaches the demand for Furs is stimulated.

We are exhibiting a wide variety of the Furs illustrating the latest styles of authority in Coats, Capes and Wraps for all occasions, matched sets, Scarfs and Muffs.

Our recent models, exemplifying the correct fashions of the moment, are particularly pleasing this season. Perhaps the extreme styles are slightly more stunning than heretofore, the tendency being to revert to the charmingly picturesque period of our great-grandmothers as witnessed by the melon muff, the flaring cape, and the coat with its voluminous folds.

We suggest that the earlier the selection the greater the variety from which to choose. Positive satisfaction, both as to quality and price, is always assured at this establishment.

Particular attention given to remodelling of Furs to conform to the present day styles.

Automobile Coats for Women and Men a Specialty.

384 Fifth Avenue

Telephone Greeley—2044 Between 35th and 36th Sts.

BERGDORF AND GOODMAN 616 FIFTH AVENUE

Present simple models in evening gowns and wraps afternoon gowns and suits.

COSTUMES WRAPS FURS

WHAT EVERY WOMAN WANTS TO KNOW

Sandwiches First Aid to the Hostess, Must Above All Else, Have Good Bread in Them.

IT was the fourth Earl of Sandwich who, some 150 years ago, ate the first sandwich, and though that gaming Earl has long since shuffled his last deck of cards and taken his last trick, the ingenious article of diet which he invented has been in favor—increasingly so, in fact—ever since. John Montagu, that was the Earl's baptismal name, was an indefatigable card player. He played in the morning and he played in the afternoon and he played in the evening, and then half through the night, and, though he had a very good appetite, he used to become so attached to his game that he actually refused to stop to eat. So he ordered his servants to bring his meals to him, and, in order not to have to stop long enough to cut his meat and break his bread, he had slices of bread with ham placed between them made for him, which could be easily consumed between plays.

So sponsored by an Earl, the sandwich came into favor in England and was speedily adopted as a convenient and tempting form in which to serve bread and meat at any time when the guests were not to be seated at table. For refreshments at the card table, for receptions, for buffet breakfasts, for garden parties, and for evening collations the sandwich came at once into prominence.

But what an evolution from the Earl's coarse slices of bread and ham to the dainty layers of bread that we have nowadays, cut and rolled and tied into clever shape and put together with filling that taxes the ingenuity of the cleverest chefs!

For the ham sandwich of the Earl's invention no longer passes muster among the fastidious. It is reminiscent of hasty lunches snatched between trains at remote railroad stations, schoolday lunches eaten eagerly at recess with a pickle and a cookie. But somehow it is not at all suggestive of either Earls or card tables.

A Question of Bread.

Although a sandwich is known by its filling, still the first thing to do in making a good sandwich is to make sure of satisfactory bread. Sandwich bread can be bought at almost all caterers or bakers, although in some places it has to be ordered the day before. By the payment of a very little additional price the caterer will cut the bread before delivering it. As it is no easy task to shave bread off thin enough to make a dainty sandwich without breaking it, this is a good plan. However, the task of cutting it at home can be easier accomplished if the bread knife, made very sharp, is heated before using. In cutting bread at home it is also a good idea to butter each slice of bread on the loaf before cutting it. The butter should be melted, but under no circumstances allowed to become really hot.

As the slices are taken from the loaf care should be taken to keep adjoining slices in pairs so that after the filling is added the slices can be fitted exactly together again. Usually the butter is spread on one slice and the filling on the other.

Savory Fillings.

Among the most appetizing sandwich fillings are the imported fish pastes which can be bought at any of the large grocers. These pastes spread sparingly on the bread with a little shredded lettuce produce a delightful result.

Among other fillings that are always acceptable, though exceedingly usual, are those made from combinations of cream cheese—cream cheese and green peppers, cream cheese and pimentos, cream cheese and olives, cream cheese and celery, and a dozen other tasteful combinations of cream cheese.

Among newer sandwich combinations are the following:

Minced celery and mayonnaise dressing with one slice of white bread and one slice of brown bread.

Apple sauce with lemon juice and grated lemon peel and whipped cream.

These ingredients should be mixed thoroughly and spread on thin slices of whole wheat bread.

Dry broiled bacon and cooked chicken liver put through the meat chopper and mixed with mayonnaise dressing.

Minced celery, canned salmon, and mayonnaise with shredded lettuce.

Raisins chopped and mixed with mayonnaise dressing with or without the addition of chopped nuts.

For a heartier sandwich, chopped chicken livers with bacon and mayonnaise dressing and sliced tomatoes.

A Question of Shape.

In making all dainty sandwiches the bread crust should be cut off after the slices of bread have been placed together. Then the sandwiches should be cut into dainty shapes. Triangles made by cutting a slice of bread diagonally into four pieces are easy to make. Narrow oblongs can be made by cutting the slice into lengthwise strips. With the use of fancy-shaped tin cutters more interesting effects can be gained. These cutters can be bought in the shapes of the various pips on a deck of cards—hearts, diamonds, clubs, and spades—and in various other dainty shapes.

Exceedingly effective are sandwiches served in rolls tied with ribbon. These rolls should not be attempted unless the filling of the sandwich is very thin and is spread sparingly. Plain bread and butter sandwiches would be the easiest to handle. Then the sandwich should be exposed to the steam escaping from a tea kettle and turned very expertly into a narrow roll and tied with a ribbon and fastened with a small, neat bow.

At a reception or on any occasion where refreshments are taken standing, sandwiches are eaten without the aid of a fork, and often with the gloves on. And the fact that they are to be thus eaten should be borne in mind in making them. The filling should never be put on so lavishly that it soaks through the bread or comes out at the edges, and the bread, although it should be cut very thin, should never break or crumble.

A SUIT warm and smart for the very little girl. This French model is well worth copying. It is made of green cloth, edged with green and white checks, and there is a white flannel vest.

Recipe for Making That Ever-Welcome Delicacy, Old-Fashioned Gingerbread.

BABAS and eclaires may come and go, but gingerbread stays on.

There was probably one original method of making this delectable, sweet, dark bread, or plain cake—whichever you may call it. But there have been devised so many variations on the one original method that it is almost lost in obscurity.

The Old-Fashioned Kind.

Here is an old family recipe for gingerbread that has been tried and not found wanting by several generations:

One-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful New Orleans molasses, one-half cupful of sweet milk, one-half teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one tablespoonful of water, one tablespoonful of butter or lard, melted slightly, one teaspoonful of ground ginger, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful of baking powder, one and a half cupfuls of flour, one beaten egg.

Sift the dry ingredients together into a bowl. Add molasses, milk and shortening. Beat well. Then add the egg. Bake slowly in a loaf, in a flat pan or in small patty-cake pans.

With More Eggs.

Here is a recipe for a sponge gingerbread that uses more eggs in comparison to the other ingredients:

One cupful of sugar, one cupful of molasses, one cupful of milk, three cupfuls of flour, two tablespoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, three well beaten eggs.

Called Molasses Cake.

This is another family recipe, that goes under the name of molasses cake. It is richer than either of the other recipes given:

One-half cupful of butter, one-half cupful of sugar, two beaten eggs, two cupfuls of flour, one-half teaspoonful each of cinnamon, allspice, and cloves, one-half cupful of milk, one cupful of molasses, one teaspoonful of soda, one-half cupful of boiling water.

Cream the butter and sugar and add the eggs and molasses. Sift the spices and flour together and add alternately with the milk. Then dissolve the soda in the boiling water and add last.

Without Eggs.

There are some very good recipes for gingerbread without eggs, and here is one:

One cupful of New Orleans molasses, one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of butter or lard, one cupful of boiling water, one full teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of ginger, one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, four cupfuls of flour.

Dissolve the soda in a tablespoonful of the boiling water and add to the molasses. Then add the shortening melted, the rest of the boiling water and the flour, mixed with the spices. Beat until smooth and bake.

Black, Silver and Pink.

A bonnet so light and small that it is almost negligible, but so charming that it is decidedly noticeable, is this little one of black lace, trimmed with silver braid and pink roses.

17 Minutes Grand Central to A. & S. Subway Station Hoyt St.

ABRAHAM AND STRAUS BROOKLYN

Store Opens at 9 A. M. Closes at 6. P. M. Daily.

Sale of Dressy Coats, $19.95

In the Handsomest Fabrics of the Season

FULL LENGTH, HANDSOME GARMENTS that are not only cozy and comfortable, but bewitchingly becoming with their great shawl collars and soft, lustrous fabrics resembling the cherished furs of the season. There are plushes, Ural lamb, broadcloth and boucle. The plush coats are of silky lustre, full satin lined, with "Salt's" guarantee label. Easy, semi-fitting lines, beautifully finished. Large arm size with set-in sleeves, deep rolling shawl collar fastened with stylish ornaments—very dressy coat for various occasions.

The Ural lamb fabric is well known now for its practically endless wearing qualities and attractive effect—a model most becoming in its graceful lines and easy fit in this beautiful cloth.

The boucle Coats and others of zibeline and broadcloths are in various models, ¾ and full lengths, elaborated with trimmings of plush and caracul cloth. Sizes 34 to 48.

Unmatchable Value in Coats at $9.95, $11.95 and $16.95.

Best collection in the city at these prices; great variety of materials and styles, including splendid loose slipovers and smart Topcoats.

None C. O. D. or on approval.

Second floor, centre, Central Building. Coat at $19.95

Women's $55 Broadcloth Suits at $34.75

An Extraordinary Offering

Suit, $34.75

FOR THE WOMAN WHO LOVES THE ELEGANT in Suits this sale will appeal from the very beauty of material and the Suits themselves, let alone the amazingly low price. The very finest quality of broadcloth has been fashioned into three of the very newest models—the very smart and becoming fur trimmed effects that are making this season one of the most fascinating of years in suit designing.

Short coats, collars and cuffs trimmed with fur, wide satin girdle in front, standing collar of velvet; tailoring and soft satin linings of the highest grade.

Colors are black, brown, plum and green shades. Sizes from 32 to 44 bust measure.

Unusual Values Also in Suits at $16.50, $19.75, $24.75 and $29.75.

Nothing to match the styles and materials at these most popular prices. Short coats with belted effects, medium length and redingote styles. Many trimmed with furs, others with braid, caracul, velvet and buttons. The skirts include the very latest ideas and the fabrics embrace broadcloths, poplins, gabardines, men's wear diagonals, rough and wide wale cheviots, men's wear serge and Montagnac cloth, in black, navy, brown, plum and green. Sizes 32 to 44.

Second floor, Livingston Street side, Central Building.

$1.00 Sappho Satin at 59c. a Yard

8,000 Yards of This Famous Silk

MADE IN ZURICH, SWITZERLAND. Wonderful range of dark and light colors, with a plentiful supply of black, ivory, white and cream, 20 inches wide.

A FEW WEEKS AGO we had a sale of this beautiful Satin, and since that time we have had scores and scores of requests for a repetition. A great crowd greeted the announcement last time. Be wise and come early to get your share this Monday and Tuesday. Known everywhere as a standard $1.00 quality, 20 inches wide. None C. O. D. and store orders only. For the making of holiday gifts, lingerie, outer wear, neckwear, millinery trimming, fancy work, etc., it is simply splendid. Sold by the piece to dressmakers.

$1.69 All Silk Satin Charmeuse, $1.19.

This season's fashionable silk, splendid quality, soft and lustrous; all the new and desirable colors, also black. Just off the looms and 40 inches wide.

$1.00 Black All Silk Messaline, 69c.

Beautiful quality, soft and lustrous; splendid for dresses, blouses, etc.; perfect black and 35 inches wide.

Imported Chiffon Cloth, 98c. Yard.

The greatest color assortment hereabouts; more than 180 shades, staples; also the new leading colors; 40 inches wide.

White Bridal Satin, $1.00 and Upward.

Excellent qualities, beautiful, soft and lustrous Satin; domestic and imported, 35 to 44 inches wide; prices from $1.00 to $3.98.

Street floor, West Building.

Bargain Budget In Brief.

$35 Reversible Silk Velour Portieres, $21.98 pair.
$6.00 Imported French Marie Antoinette Lace Curtains, $3.89 pair.
A remarkably Complete Stock of Rugs at prices much below regular.
10,000 pieces of German China at 5c to 15c each.
$1.98 American Cut Glass 8-inch Fruit or Salad Bowl, $1.39.
$14.98 and $15.75 American Crystal Regulators, $9.98.
15c to 59c Embroidery Galloons, 10c to 29c a yard.
$1.39 Long Cloth, 98c a piece of 12 yards.
Women's $3.00 Silk Umbrellas, $1.79.
Women's Imported Fine Plain Black Lisle Stockings, 17c. Store orders only.
$5.00 and $7.00 Trimmed Hats, $3.00.
Xmas Stationery, 9c to 98c a box.
Annual Sale of Monogram Dies with Christmas Cabinets.
$4.75 and $5.50 Full Size White Blankets, $3.49 and $3.98 a pair. Subject to slight mill imperfections.
$5.00 to $8.98 Waists, $3.98. Store orders only. None C.O.D.
Men's $32.00 to $35.00 Fall and Winter Suits-to-Measure, $26.50. Above 42 breast measure, additional charge for extra material necessary.
Men's $20.00 Winter Suits and Overcoats, $14.75.
$1.98 to $2.98 Wool Dress Goods, 89c a yard.
1,600 Silk Jersey Petticoats, $3.00 values, here Monday at $1.59 each.
Women's $1.50 to $3.00 Flannelette Pajamas, 98c. No duplicates. Store orders only.
Drugs and Toilet Needs Far Underpriced.
Boys' $4.00 "Dickens" Suits, $2.95.
Sash and Hair Ribbons to match, 29c and 39c a yard.
Fine and heavy Bleached Irish Satin Damask Table Cloths, 2x2 yards, $2.08 each.
25,000 High Grade Porto Rico Cigars about 40 per cent. under regular prices.
$5.00 Fine Lyon's Velvet Sailors, $1.95.
A Sale of Sewing Needs at Very Small Prices.
Women's Caracul Coats, 40 inches long, $49.75.
$16.00 to $90.00 Golden Oak China Closets, at $12.80 to $72.00.
Standard "Pride of Brooklyn" Sheets, 1¾x2¾ yards, 85c each.
Women's Underwear, 17c. Seconds of 25c quality. Store orders only.
Anchor Brand Clothes Wringers at a saving of a full third $3.33 to $8.07 values at $2.48 to $5.44. Store orders only. None C.O.D.
3,600 Men's Fancy Shirts, 59c. 89c New Finish Platinoid Photo Frames, 39c.
Beautiful St. Gall Neckwear at a fraction of the value.
Wonderful Art Embroidery Offers. Entire stock of a manufacturer.
Infants' $4 to $15 Coats, $2.50 to $9.98. Maker's Samples.
19c to 59c Shadow Laces for Camisoles, 12c a yard.
25c Soft Finish Madras, 16c a yard.
Women's 2-clasp Lambskin Gloves, 69c.
Men's Derby Ribbed Underwear, 29c. Slight mill imperfections.
Men's $3.50 and $5.00 Derby Hats, $1.95.
25c Wide Windsor Scarfs, 15c. None C.O.D.
25c Mercerized Lining Sateen, 16c a yard.
Moire Silk and Leather Hand Bags, 97c each.

Shoes at Reduced Prices

For Men, Women and Children.

BUYING SHOES LIKE THESE for less than their regular prices means making a most profitable investment for yourself. Every Shoe in this sale measures right up to the high standard set by this Shoe Store, and when you pay less than the regular prices you are making a saving on Footwear that will be extremely stylish, that will look and wear well and give you perfect satisfaction. These Shoes at the underpricing we quote are simply marvelous values. COME AND SHARE.

Women's $3.50 to $5.50 Shoes at $1.98.
Not all sizes, but splendid bargains for those who find their size.

Women's $4.00 Shoes, $2.95.
Gun metal button model with gray cloth gaiter effect tops, flexible welted and stitched soles, leather Louis heels.

Women's $5.00 Colored Top Lace Shoes, $3.95
Gun metal forepart with gray cloth tops, lace style, welted and stitched soles, leather Louis heels.

Girls' Shoes at $1.98.
Gun metal calf, button, of sterling quality, welted and stitched soles, with low heels; warm, handsome and durable for school wear; sizes 11½ to 2. Smaller sizes, $1.60 and $1.85.

Women's $5.00 Evening Slippers, $3.35.
Pink and blue strap, beaded styles, with hand turn soles, Louis heel.

Small Boys' Shoes With Heels, $1.49.
Satin calf, blucher lace style, welted and stitched soles, broad toe last, with tips; sizes 9 to 13½.

Boys' Heavy Shoes at $1.98.
Gun metal lace with heels, solid leather soles, firmly stitched uppers; sizes 1 to 5½.

Men's $6.00 Tan Shoes, $4.50.
Tan Russia lace model with invisible eyelets, soles welted and stitched, broad shank, low flat heels.

Second Floor, West Building.

Sash and Hair Ribbons to Match

At 29c. and 39c. a Yard.

4¾ AND 6½ INCHES WIDE. Extra quality brocaded Sash and Hair Ribbons, in several dainty woven designs, made especially for this Ribbon Store. An ideal Ribbon for all kinds of fancy work. All good colors.

29c. Roman Striped Ribbons, 19c. a yard. Full 5 inches wide. Fine quality Roman striped Ribbons. Excellent for millinery, girdles, etc. All good colorings.

30c. Moire Ribbons, 19c. a yard. 5¾ inches wide. Extra quality colored moire taffeta Ribbons, popular for hair and hat bows, children's sashes, etc. In the best colors.

59c. Dresden Ribbons, 39c. a yard. 6¾ inches wide. Warp printed Dresden Ribbons. Excellent quality, in light and dark grounds, with large rose patterns and wide satin edges. Popular for millinery, girdles, etc.

Street floor, East Building.

Sale of Household Linens

Fine and heavy bleached Shamrock Brand Irish satin damask Table Cloths and Napkins to match. Sold here exclusively in this borough.

Cloths 2x2 yards, $2.98 each; 2x2¼ yards, $3.75 each; 2x3 yards, $4.50 each.

Napkins, 22 inches, $3.49 a dozen.

Two special values in Napkins, made by John S. Brown & Sons; 22-inch, $3.59; 26-inch .....$5.98 a dozen

Heavy quality all linen large size Irish Huck Towels, hemmed ends; exceptional value at .....29c. each

$5.00 Table Cloths, $3.49 and $3.75 each. Fine and heavy Irish satin damask Table Cloths, 2⅝x2⅝ and 2x3 yards. Some have Napkins to match.

$5.00 Napkins, $3.59 a dozen. Fine and heavy Irish satin damask Dinner Napkins, 25 inches square, in a variety of pretty designs.

$1.49 to $4.50 fine all linen hemstitched damask Tea Cloths, while they last, 98c., $1.19, $1.49 and $2.98 each

Street floor, East Building.

Great November Sale of Oriental Rugs

"STORY WEAVER" is an appellation for those who made these beautiful Rugs, for each design, each color, and each combination of design and color represents some part of an Eastern legend or story. The Oriental people have woven stories into Rugs; leaving to future generations not only folk lore that is part of their religion, but in addition giving play to a wonderful artistic genius evidenced in the charming designs and imperishable colors which enhance in beauty and value as the years go by. There is more than a merchandising spirit behind the sale of an Oriental Rug—there is the love of the artist for the beautiful.

We have assembled a great collection of Rugs, each chosen for some individual merit and beauty. The result is that we are showing—

Splendid Colorings, Wonderful Designs, Excellent Texture, Matchless Weaves, At the Lowest Prices Known for Such Rugs.

We can only print a very small portion of the details—the same opportunities for saving are evidenced all through the stock—large, medium and small size Rugs.

150 Bergamo and Beloochistan Mats. Special at $3.50, $5.00 and $7.50.

100 Beloochistan Rugs at $13.50 to $21.50. Value $20.00 to $30.00. Average size 5 ft. x 3 ft.

50 Shirvan Rugs at $10.00 to $17.50. Value $15.00 to $25.00. Average size 5 ft. x 3½ ft.

100 Deep Pile Bergamo Rugs at $15.00 to $21.50. Value $20.00 to $29.50. Average size 5 ft. x 3½ ft.

300 Mossoul and Kurdistan Rugs at $15.00 to $21.50. Worth $20.00 to $35.00.
Sizes vary from 3 to 4 ft. wide by 6 to 8 ft. long.

The Large or Room Size Rugs.

25 Lustrous Afghan Carpets at $65.00 to $85.00. Worth $90.00 to $125.00. Sizes vary from 9 x 6 ft. to 10 x 8 ft.

50 Finely Woven Persian Carpets at $75.00 to $125. Were $100.00 to $165.00. Sizes vary from 10 ft. x 7 ft. to 13 ft. x 9 ft.

Third floor, East Building.

Frederick Loeser & Co. Inc.
BROOKLYN—NEW YORK
Autumn's Greatest Sale of Women's Apparel

IN PREPARATION for the most important shopping day of the season we have arranged a sale which eclipses all our efforts of former years.

The values presented are almost unheard of.
The garments are all in the height of favor.
The range of prices will please the woman who wants both smartness and economy.

This is your chance. We state with the utmost frankness that to approach the advantages of this sale will so far as we can now tell be impossible.

Dressy Redingote Suits, $15

One of the handsomest Redingote models we have seen. Of poplin, braid trimmed, and with velvet collar and cuffs. Beautifully tailored and capable of giving unusual service. In black, blue, tete-de-negre and Russian green.

Plush and Zibeline Coats, $15

Ripple skirt models, full satin lined and made with deep cuffs and plush collars. They are comparable with most $22.50 Coats, being made of exceptionally good plush and zibeline, in black, navy and good shades of brown.

Redingote and Moyenage Dresses, $15

Serge and satin composee Dresses, largely in navy serge, with black satin sleeves and underdrop. Some have surplice fronts, others show the new tiered and plaited skirts. Also some of all serge and a few of all satin.

$25 Suits, Coats and Dresses Fit for Any Woman's Wardrobe

Fur-Trimmed Broadcloth Suits at $25

Copies of several very fine Suits which we regularly sold at $40. Three models, all up-to-the-minute in smartness; one with short coat, one medium, one Redingote.

Short coat style: Fabric is bayadere or broadcloth, in black, navy or brown. Collar and cuffs fur trimmed; lined throughout with peau de cygne.

Medium long coat Suit is in broadcloth. Coat has ripple skirt with low-dropping belt and is trimmed with fur in button-over style collar. Flare-plaited skirt. Black, navy and tete-de-negre.

Redingote style in broadcloth with wide belt and cluster plaited skirt. Back of coat in attractive gathered effect. Black, navy or brown.

Velvet and Velour Coats at $25

Smart, new models which show the flaring skirt, the deep cuffs and the wide revers characteristic of the best of the season's Coats. Fabrics are excellent velvets and velours, fully lined with heavy brocades or with satin. Some styles are trimmed with excellent real furs; others have self collars.

Every one a value which, we think, is impossible of duplication.

$35 Suits, Coats and Dresses Copies of Expensive Imported Models

Fur-Trimmed Broadcloth Suits at $35

Reproducing some of the best styles of the French masters and fully equal to many Suits which we have sold at $45.

Handsome Suit of fine Chiffon broadcloth in blue, brown or black. It is heavily trimmed with skunk coon, with braid and with jet buttons. One of the newest of the short coat models.

Others in the same colors, as well as green and taupe, show the postilion paneled backs to the short jackets; some are distinctly military in their general character; and most are richly trimmed with good furs, jet buttons and wide braids.

Satin-Lined Fur Effect Coats at $35

Plushes, velours, wonderful broadtail cloth and other handsome fabrics richly lined with satin and made in the new flaring styles. The materials are the finest to be had, and in every case the tailoring is beyond criticism. Practically all are in black.

McEnery's
Brooklyn's Most Reliable Furniture and Carpet House
86-90 Myrtle Ave.
Corner Lawrence St.
Store Open Saturdays Until 7 P. M.

Talk It Over Between Yourselves!

Then come and see us and we will quickly tell you how you can have all the Housefurnishings you want and when you want them.

WHERE THE GOODS ARE ALWAYS THE BEST — Your credit is good here. Let us help you. — WHERE THE PRICES ARE ALWAYS LOWEST

L. R. Stoddard, M. D.

Practice limited to diseases of the SKIN and the removal of

FACIAL BLEMISHES.

HOURS: 11 to 4 and by appointment.

Telephone 7649 Bryant.

33 West 42d Street, N. Y.

TEA ROOMS.

Chiro's

will open this month—a place of unusual charm where one may dance at luncheon or afternoon tea

Six East Forty-sixth Street

TEA ROOMS.

Open Sundays from 11 A. M. to 8:30 P. M.

Club Breakfast, Lunch, Tea, Dinner. Also a la Carte. 9 A. M. to 8 P. M.

The Ferncry
36 West 33d Street.

"THE OLDEST TEA ROOM in NEW YORK." Est. 5th Ave. and Mad. Ave. Miss Tucker—Exclusively HOME COOKING.

SMOKING PERMITTED IN THE CONSERVATORY.

TWO REMARKABLE CHANGES EFFECTED IN NEW YORK SCHOOLS

Dr. William Ettinger Explains Pre-Vocational Training and Two-Unit System, Tried Out This Year in Nine Schools for the First Time, Which Represent an Important Step Forward in City's Educational History.

IT has been vaguely realized that this year has brought some changes in New York City's public school system. But because that change has been gathering force for several years, and because it is being put in operation quietly in but nine schools for a tryout, the general public is unaware that anything very radical has been effected in our educational machinery.

Nevertheless, the change which has been inaugurated this year in a selected number of the elementary schools is one of the most significant in the city's educational history, and the experiments which are now well under way mark a most important step forward. They are all in the direction of industrial training and include two remarkable innovations. One, a system of pre-vocational training, the first of its kind ever attempted on a large scale, and the other the two-unit system which has proved successful in the well-known industrial school at Gary, Ind.

The present educational administration has fairly added this word "pre-vocational" to our vocabulary. In a few years it will be as familiar as the earlier "vocational," though as yet it is a new term.

Up to the present time the pre-vocational work in this city has been known rather under the vague classification of "vocational guidance." In the elementary schools the demand for some of the manual training, of the domestic science, inaugurated in the high schools, has made itself felt, and these had become a part of the elementary school curriculum.

But they played no very important part. They were incidental. Whether a child on graduation from the eighth grade should go to a trade school, to high school, or to work depended largely on the advice of his parents, and not upon any guidance offered him by the work he had done in the elementary grades.

The fact that about 40,000 of the 800,000 school children in New York City are leaving school before they complete the eighth grade has been troubling educational authorities for some time. To increase the industrial training offered by the technical high schools, to build more trade schools would obviously not reach these children. Even the institution of the evening school would not solve the difficulty.

In 1912-1913 there were in our public elementary schools 661,000 students. In the second year there were 86,000. But in the graduating year, the eighth, there were but 48,000. Forty-one thousand of those who graduated that year qualified for entrance into the high schools. Of that number 23,000, less than half, entered. And of the number that entered high school, there remained in the fourth year a little less than a sixth—something over 4,000 pupils.

This means not only that 40,000 of the children of the city who most need the benefits of industrial training are not getting it, but that many thousands more are wandering into the wrong places in the educational system, growing tired because they are not adapted to the work they have wandered into, and so falling by the wayside.

It is to remedy this situation that a pre-vocational system is now being introduced in nine of the elementary schools of Greater New York, in Manhattan at Nos. 64, 95, and 62; in Brooklyn at Nos. 5, 158, and 162; in Queens at No. 85; in the Bronx at No. 45, and in Richmond at No. 1.

In the seventh and eighth year classes of these nine schools, boys and girls of 12, 13, and 14 are conducting their own psychological experiments. They are discovering their own aptitudes for work under conditions as nearly similar to those existing in the industrial world about them as it is possible to secure.

This is accomplished by a scheme of rotation which has never been put into effect on any large scale anywhere in this country or in Europe. In all of these schools shops have been installed to take the place of some of the classrooms. Here the basic industries are taught. For the boys there are classes in woodwork, in sheet metal, in printing, plumbing, machine work, electric wiring and installation, and trade drawing. For the girls there are classes in machine sewing, millinery, novelty work, and housekeeping.

A boy who enters the first half of his seventh year is guided into one of these industrial classes, unless he shows a marked desire for purely academic work. He spends ten weeks in that class, doing practical trade work. At the end of ten weeks he is shifted to the next class, from woodworking perhaps to printing.

Should the boy show any marked aptitude for any division of the work, he is not urged to go on through the other departments of the industrial work, but advances along that line. For the most part, however, the plan is that each student should gain a general idea of the requirements and the conditions in each of the industries among which he will have to choose when he leaves school to go to work.

"The idea in all this," explains Dr. William Ettinger, who has charge of this pre-vocational experiment, "is to allow these children to gain a general idea of what the industrial world into which they are very shortly going is like, to become acquainted with the principal processes that lie at the bottom of this complex industrial world. That, in itself, is a broadening thing. The boy who knows nothing but his own trade isn't as good a workman, however skillful he may be, as the fellow who understands the trade that is allied to his, the trades that are remote to his, and who has a general but intimate knowledge of all the divisions of the industrial life of which he is a part.

"That, in itself, is a broadening influence. But, of course, one of the chief aims of this pre-vocational work is vocational guidance. No amount of psychological analysis or speed tests or anything like that can ascertain with any degree of accuracy the child's aptitude for certain kinds of work. He must actually do the work to find out if he likes it, and if he likes it that means he can do it.

"The idea of these rotating industrial classes is to give each boy a taste of the different trades. Emphatically, the idea is not to give the boy a trade training. That must be accomplished in the technical school or the shop to which the boy of fourteen will go when he leaves us.

"What we want to insure is only that he goes into the right place. We want to save the boy a year or two of casting around to find himself, of getting run into blind alleys, of wasting his time in the wrong department of the high school. That is why so many pupils fall by the wayside on their way to the fourth year of high school. They find the education they are getting is doing them no good and they drop out to go into a shop."

The twelve or thirteen year old boy who enters any one of these pre-vocational classes is observed very carefully during the ten weeks of his stay. He has no definite thing to accomplish save the finding of himself. The instructor's aim is not to turn out so many tin funnels, or so many milliners' hat stands, or so many paper boxes. The product is immaterial, and the trade knowledge which the child acquires is incidental. The chief thing is the discovery of the child's aptitude or inaptitude.

"A boy comes to me," says the director of the industrial work at Public School 62, "and says he doesn't like the woodworking class, and he's been wasting his time there. I tell him he hasn't been wasting his time, he might better take ten weeks now to learn, and learn thoroughly, that there was one trade he positively didn't want and couldn't work at, than to take two or three years of his life when he had to be earning his wages trying to get out of it."

This pre-vocational experiment was quietly put into effect in School 62 last Spring for a term of about ten weeks. This Fall it is well under way with over 600 pupils working at the various trades.

In this school it is possible to observe the effect of the experiment on academic work, a reflex which is not yet felt in the eight other schools where the plan is just starting. Such an institution of industrial work has, of course, meant a cutting down of the time devoted to geography, arithmetic, history, spelling, penmanship, and English composition.

Moreover, the old academic ideal in all these subjects has been obliged to go by the board. The academic work is all firmly linked up with the industrial work, and has no existence per se. For instance, geography is not taught country by country, history year by year, regardless of whether a boy is binding books or wiring a house. Everything is correlated. Geography is a side issue of industrial history, history is the succession of economic movements, arithmetic is a matter of accounts which have to do with the shop in which the boy is spending his ten weeks.

In Public School 62, for instance, the commercial department is the bookkeeping office for all the industrial divisions. Each shop has its own bookkeeper, supplies are ordered, received, sent out through this office, exactly as though it were the business division of a large shop or factory.

"In a word," says Dr. Ettinger, "this plan must vitalize academic work. Far from making it a side issue, from gradually putting it on the shelf, it is making it a live thing. Learning, book learning, is made purposive, something that the child will use in his everyday life.

"If the reflex on the child's academic work is not one of the fourfold benefit, then this whole plan of pre-vocational training will be a complete fizzle."

It is as yet too early to show results in percentages from this experiment. In Public School 62, however, where the plan has had but ten weeks' trial, the average number in the classes under the pre-vocational system which were not advanced at the end of the year was two as against five to seven in the year before. In one of the west side schools, where the problem of overage children constantly leaving school was very great, attendance for the year was increased 225 days for both boys and girls after the institution of vocational training.

This pre-vocational idea, as it has been worked out under Dr. Ettinger's supervision, is a new feature in education. In Gary, Ind., there is a pre-vocational system, but it is not managed on the rotating plan which has been adopted here. In the Gary school the system extends from the children in the kindergarten to the high school graduate, and actual shop training begins as early as the fourth grade.

Mayor Mitchel, accompanied by President Churchill and other members of the Board of Education, visited the Gary school last Spring, and the general adoption of the pre-vocational work and the two-unit system in this city has resulted. To put so radical a system in operation in Gary and to make it go in New York are, it must be remembered, two different propositions. There are about 4,500 children in all of Gary, while in one public school in New York City there are 3,400. To put into execution a plan which calls for a complete reconstruction of plant and administrative system for the entire City of New York is a colossal undertaking, yet it has thus far been attended with success.

The plan has necessitated much smaller classes. A class in arithmetic could, unfortunately, mount up to a membership of fifty or sixty. A class in electric wiring does not dare get much above a round dozen. Moreover, to carry on extensive industrial work, requiring the installation of power machines and benches, many of the classrooms have been converted into shops.

"Ordinarily," says Dr. Ettinger, "this would reduce the seating capacity. But by adopting the two-unit plan, which is in force in the Gary school, we are actually increasing the school capacity 50 per cent.

"For instance, in splitting up a forty-eight-room building into thirty-six classrooms and twelve shops, we have made accommodations, not for forty-eight classes, but for twice thirty-six classes. This we accomplish by having two distinct schools in one building, and these schools have alternating programmes."

Under this plan the student may choose either the morning or the afternoon for his regular subjects. Half of the day he may attend school, the other half he may work in the school shop or outside the school if he so desires.

The following schedule taken from the report submitted by Supt. Wirt shows how two schools may operate in the same plant:

Entire School in Regular Classroom Activities.	Entire school in community activities or following special school activities. One-third in Auditorium.	One-third School in Shops.	One-third School in Play.
8:30- 9:30 X— Language, 30'.....	Y	Y	Y
Writing and spelling, 30'.
9:30-10:30 X— Music and ex., 30'.	Y	Y	Y
Reading, 30'.
10:30-11:30 Y— Arithmetic, 40'....	X	X	X
History, 20'.
11:30-12:30 Y— Science, M. T.....	X school at lunch.
Drawing, 60'.
12:30- 1:30 X— Science, M. T.....	Y school at lunch.
Drawing, 60'.
1:30- 2:30 X— Arithmetic, 40'....	Y	Y	Y
History, 20'.
2:30- 3:30 Y— Language, 30'.....	X	X	X
Writing and spelling, 30'.
3:30- 4:30 Y— Music and ex., 30'	Y	Y	Y
Reading, 30'.
4:30- 5:30— Miscellaneous voluntary exercises for both schools.

One of the greatest advantages of this duplicate system is that the school hours may be arranged to suit the convenience of the parents. Should a mother, for instance, desire to have one child at home to help her throughout the entire day, that may be accomplished by having one of the children attend the X and the other the Y school.

It is planned to make the school day an eight-hour day. Formerly recreation after school hours was a hit-or-miss affair. The schools have been kept open and continuously used for recreation, but the supervision has been voluntary, and it has been an incidental part of the general scheme.

Now, according to Dr. Ettinger, the child will have the opportunity to spend eight hours of his time under the influence of the school.

"We want to make the school, and not the street, the clearing house for children's activities. We are making it definitely understood to the parents and to the children that the school will care for them from 8:30 in the morning to 5:30 in the afternoon.

"We cannot require eight hours' attendance of the children. Many of them must sell papers in the afternoon or run errands or help at home. The school has no right to require attendance from these children. They do not need the help of the school, either. If they are working, they are learning.

"It is the child who wastes his time on the street, subject to all manner of influences, who must be reached. We are keeping a careful record of the children who are required to work after school hours; the rest come to us for organized recreation."

The relation of the school to the community is being more distinctly recognized in this new plan. For instance, the use of libraries, churches, and playgrounds will be made much more effective by the adoption of the two-unit system. At present there is an overwhelming rush of children to the libraries and playgrounds after 3 o'clock, while they are practically unused during the morning hours.

Under the two-unit system, which makes use of all the hours of the day, the demand made on libraries and playgrounds will eventually be evenly distributed.

This turning of classrooms into shops has done away with the poor rooms which have aroused the comment of many visitors to the New York schools. By vacating the unfit rooms and setting aside the poorer ones for workshops, laboratories, and studios, the remaining rooms, about two-thirds of the original number, are pretty good classrooms.

This is possible by the doubling of the school's capacity, which obviously relieves the overcrowding of pupils into inadequate classrooms.

Even the children in the elementary grades are to be brought into as close touch as possible, not only with the libraries and churches of their community, but with the industrial institutions, which they will encounter when they leave school. Field work, especially at School 62, already is a feature. The boys of the printing shop are taken to study the printing business at first hand in several of the large printing establishments of the city; the girls spend several hours in one of the large white goods factories, watching the actual operation of the trade which they are studying. Every effort is being made to bring the manufacturer in closer touch with the boys and girls who are perhaps going to be his future employes.

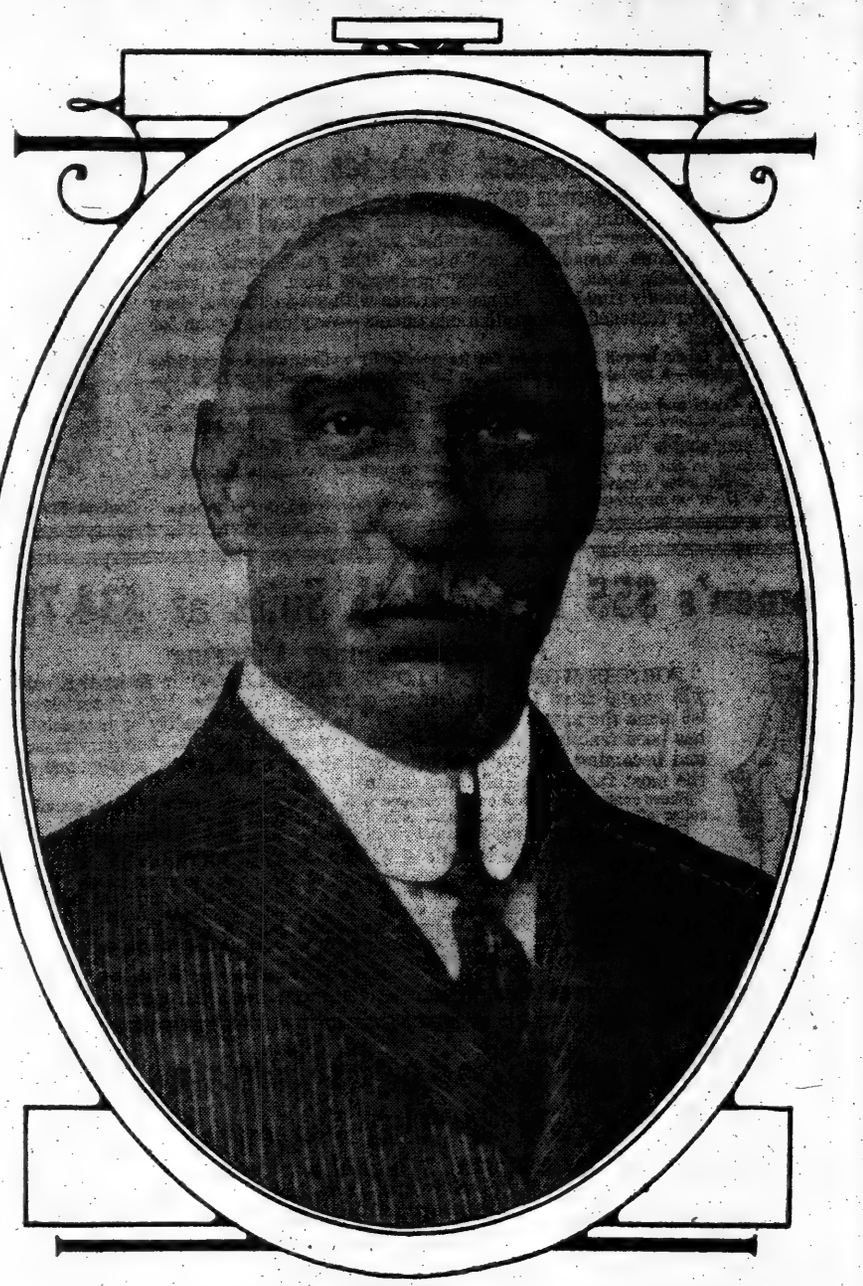
The demand for this pre-vocational training has been instantaneous. Most of the schools where the experiment is being tried are situated in working-class districts. They are the schools in which a very large proportion of the children go direct from the seventh or eighth grade to the shop or factory. In School 64, where there are 3,400 pupils, and where for the last few years supplementary vocational work has been a large feature, there was not one child who elected to take a purely academic course.

In School 62 but 600 children can at present be accommodated in the pre-vocational work.

"All the children in a school like this on the east side," explains the industrial training director, "want just this sort of training. There is no doubt in any one's mind about that. And they are not too young for vocational guidance, either. The average east side boy is precocious; at the age of 13 he is ready to choose his life work; he has matured early."

The general plan of the Board of Education is to extend this pre-vocational system, coupled with the two-unit plan, by which the last degree of use is extracted from the school building, throughout Greater New York wherever it is needed. The institution of this system does not mean that the privilege of a straight academic education is denied in any school. Entrance on vocational work is optional.

"In a word," said Dr. Ettinger in summing up the advantages of the whole scheme, "we shall, I hope, be able to remove the criticism which has so often been made of the public school child, that when he gets out of school he doesn't know anything. At least, he will know one thing when he comes from a class in pre-vocational work; he will know where to go to learn what he wants to know, and he'll be pretty definite about what he wants to know."



Dr. William Ettinger.

QUERIES AND ANSWERS

Readers of The Times are particularly requested to read the following before sending queries to the Query Department:

This department does not pretend to be infallible. It will endeavor to answer questions sent to it by THE TIMES readers to the best of its ability.

No answers can be given regarding legal or medical matters, card problems, propriety in dress, correctness of English sentences, and values of stamps and coins, nor to questions of a trivial character, or of concern only to the questioner.

To receive attention every question must bear the name and address of the person sending it. This does not necessarily mean that the name will be published when the question is answered; only the initials will be used if the questioner so desires. No attention will be paid to queries to which the name and address of the sender are not appended.

Hundreds of letters are received by this department, so that it is obviously impossible to answer all of them immediately. In many cases there must be a certain amount of unavoidable delay.

The Guillotine.

The following statement has been received from C. B. in regard to the guillotine in Belgium. The guillotine is, however, still listed as the "instrument of capital punishment" in that country.

Will you allow me, for the benefit of one of your readers, Mr. E. M. Deacon, to correct a statement in THE TIMES, regarding the guillotine. It is not used in Belgium, that is its practical use has been abolished for the last 40 years or so, following an express wish of the then Queen of Belgium (consort of Leopold II.) that capital punishment be abolished. A criminal can still be sentenced to "death," but automatically the sentence is commuted into lifelong imprisonment. The last man who was beheaded for murder was a certain Lachaert of Ghent, some forty odd years ago.

European Powers.

MEAD HODGMAN.—Will you kindly give me information as to which had the largest number of fighting vessels, France or Germany, at the beginning of the war? Which was the greater naval power?

This question has been answered under the heading "The Great Navies."

Proof of American Birth.

W. E. M.—I was much surprised to learn from your answer to "J. H. F." that a person born in this country of foreign parents was not considered an American citizen unless he declared his desire to be one and proved his birth before a notary. I am quite sure that this is not generally known and that many persons do not comply with it. Could the vote of such a person be challenged? What is his status in regard to the rights and duties of citizenship?

In traveling through the country I have often noted the waste land and wondered who paid taxes on it. I should also like to know something about the fundamental law in regard to wild game. If you cannot answer these questions in your column, will you kindly refer me to a source of information?

A man who has been born in this country of foreign parents is an American citizen by virtue of his American birth, whether or not he declares publicly his intention so to be. But since he may also be regarded as a citizen of his parents' country, and since he may be challenged at the polls for proof of his birth in this country, it is wise for him to go before a notary on coming of age and declare his intention of being a citizen of this country instead of his parents', as well as to attest his American birth. The mere fact of his being born in the United States, however, assures him the rights and duties of American citizenship.

THE TIMES cannot answer questions with regard to the United States laws, such as game laws and tax provisions, in its query column. You may obtain the information you desire from the Taxpayers' Service Bureau and from the Forest, Fish, and Game Commission, the addresses of which will be found in the city telephone directory.

Children's Hospitals.

ALICE CAMPBELL.—Can you advise me of the addresses of any of the hospitals for children, or do you know of any that might care for picture post-cards?

Among the children's hospitals in the city and vicinity are the Children's Hospital on Randall's Island; the Laura Franklin Free Hospital for Children, 17 East 111th Street; the New York Orthopedic Hospital, 126 East Fifty-ninth Street; the New York State Hospital for Crippled and Deformed Children, West Haverstraw; St. Agnes's Hospital for Crippled and Atypical Children, White Plains, and St. Mary's Free Hospital for Children, 405 West Thirty-fourth Street. Questions as to the need for pictures and playthings will have to be asked separately of the hospitals themselves, and may be addressed to the Superintendent of each institution.

Government in South Africa.

MONTCLAIR.—Will you kindly explain how the Boer Republic is governed? Are the Boers represented in the English Parliament or not? Just how much voice have they in forming their own laws?

The Union of South Africa is a self-governing federation of States. It is not represented in the British Parliament, and it does not pay taxes to Great Britain. Its legislative power is vested in its own Parliament. The Union was formed in 1909 by the federation of the four British colonies of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange Free State, and was definitely established May 31, 1910. The executive government is vested in the King of England and a Governor General, advised by an Executive Council and Ministers of State, but legislative power belongs to the Parliament, composed of a Senate of forty members, a House of Assembly, and the King. The Governor General has power to summon, prorogue, and dismiss Parliament, and that body meets annually. Pretoria is the seat of government for the Union, but Parliament meets in Cape Town. Both the English and Dutch languages are official. The Parliament in England neither represents nor taxes the British colonies.

Art Exhibits at San Francisco.

C. W.—Can you give me the date when art exhibits should be delivered by those wishing to show them at the Panama Exposition? Will a committee pass on them here in New York?

New York is one of the nine cities in which a Jury of Selection will meet to choose art exhibits for the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Works should be sent to W. S. Budworth & Son, 424 West Fifty-second Street, New York City, so as to reach that office not later than Nov. 23, 1914. Works should be accompanied by filled-out blanks and labels, which can be obtained from the New York agents at the address above.

The Richest Language.

N. S. S.—Will you kindly tell me what nation has the richest language and how America and Germany compare in this respect? Also kindly advise how the marksmanship of the American Navy compares with that of other powers.

There is no accurate or complete estimate available of the number of words in the vocabularies of the various nations. The English language, however, is generally conceded to have the largest number of words. The following figures are taken from reliable dictionaries of the various languages and are fairly complete: English, 450,000 words; German, 300,000 words; French, 140,000 words; Italian, 140,000 words; Spanish 120,000 words.

The Query Department cannot supply such a comparison as you request in your second question.

Public School Salaries.

CONSTANT READER.—Kindly answer the following questions in the Query Column: What is the present initial salary of school teachers, and what is the increase per annum until the maximum is reached? When did these rates go into effect?

What was the previous initial salary and what was the increase per annum? What year did this rate go into effect?

Was the rate some fifteen or twenty years ago but $600, and what was the increase per year?

Is there equal pay in any of the branches?

Which part of the service benefited most by the new rate?

The present initial and minimum salaries, with annual increases, are as follows: Elementary schools—Classes 1-A to 6-B, minimum, $720; maximum, $1,500; annual increase after the first three years, $60. Classes 7-A to 8-B, minimum, $860, maximum, $1,820, annual increase after the first three years, $80. High Schools—Assistants, minimum, $900; maximum, $2,650; annual increase for two years after the first year, $100; for one year, the fourth year, $200; thereafter, $150. First assistants, minimum, $1,080; maximum, $3,150; annual increase after the first year, $210. These rates went into effect Jan. 1, 1912, under the equal pay law.

The previous initial and maximum salaries and rates of increases, under the Davis law, were as follows: Elementary schools—women teachers, through class 6-B, minimum, $600; maximum, $1,240; annual increase, $40. In 7-A to 8-A, inclusive, and in the 8-B, when that grade was taught in the same class with the lower grade, minimum, $600; maximum, $1,320; annual increase, $48. In 8-B, minimum, $936; maximum, $1,440; annual increase, $84. Men teachers, in any grade below the highest, and in the highest when that grade was taught in the same class with a lower grade, minimum, $900; maximum, $2,160; annual increase, $105. In 8-B, minimum, $1,500; maximum, $2,400; annual increase, $150. High Schools: Assistants—women, minimum, $1,100; maximum, $1,900; annual increase, $80. Men, minimum, $1,300; maximum, $2,400; annual increase, $110. First assistants—women, minimum, $2,000; maximum, $2,500; annual increase, $100. Men, minimum, $2,500; maximum, $3,000; annual increase, $100. In the elementary schools a female teacher of a boy's class or a mixed class received $80 per year extra. The high school schedule at that time also provided for junior teachers, as follows: Women, minimum, $700; maximum, $1,000; annual increase, $50. Men, minimum, $900; maximum, $1,200; annual increase, $50. These schedules went into effect May 3, 1900.

Under the Ahearn law, adopted May 17, 1899, the minimum salary for women in the elementary schools was $600; for men, $900. At that time women were paid, in the first year and the last two and a half years of the course, $500 a year for three years, then $720 for three years, $828 for three years, $1,056 for two years, $1,188 for two years, $1,320 for two years, and after that $1,380. In the other classes women teachers were paid $836 for the tenth and eleventh years, $1,056 for the twelfth and thirteenth, $1,188 for the fourteenth and fifteenth, and $1,320 as a maximum. Men teachers received, after three years at $900 each, $1,080 for three years, $1,200 for two years, $1,500 for two years, $1,800 for two years, and after that $2,160.

The present schedules provide equal pay for men and women with the exception of certain classes of persons who are covered by special legislation, in the Silverstein law, Chapter 534.

From a comparison of the schedules it would appear that the women high school teachers received the largest proportionate advance under the equal pay law.

ESTABLISHED FOR 50 YEARS

H. Jaeckel & Sons

32nd Street 16-18-20 West

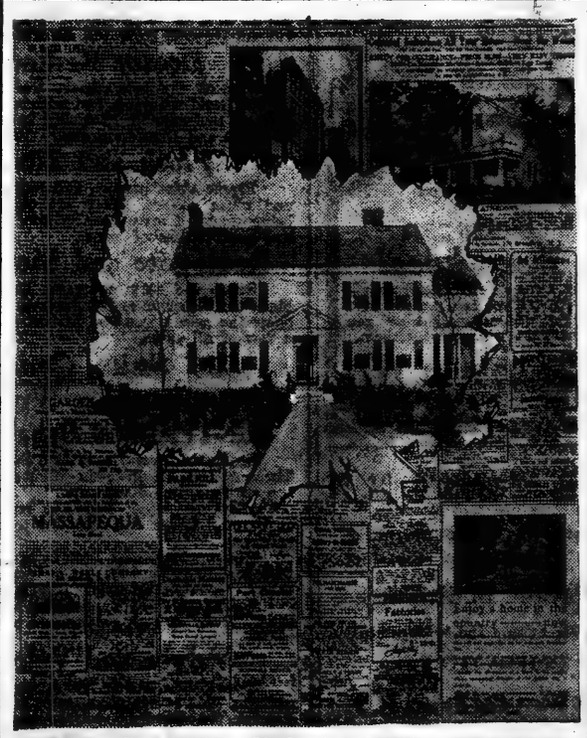
(Our Only Address)

AFTER A DELAY OF OVER 3 MONTHS WE AT LAST RECEIVED OUR CONSIGNMENT OF

RUSSIAN SABLES CONTAINING THE FINEST, DARKEST AND RICHEST SPECIMENS FROM BARGUSIN & KAMCHATKA.

HUDSON BAY SABLES A MOST WONDERFUL COLLECTION, SOME AS DARK AS RUSSIAN SABLES.

SILVER FOX AND REAL BLUE FOX IN VERY BEAUTIFUL FRESH BLUE COLORS.



THE PATH TO YOUR HOME

leads through the real estate pages of The New York Times

Haven't you at some time longed to own a country home?

Wouldn't you like to enjoy that sense of proprietorship that comes with the title to a piece of land?

Why not achieve that ambition?

The real estate advertisements in The Times will offer you scores of attractive opportunities.

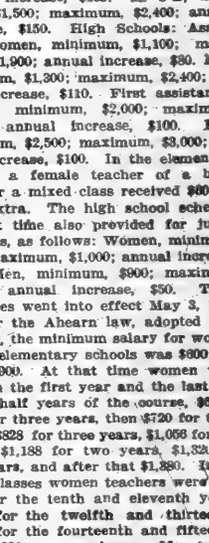
A real estate advertisement in The New York Times, daily or Sunday, reaches over 275,000 men and women of intelligence, refinement and means at the rate of 30c. a line—about one cent and a half an inch for each thousand of circulation.

Mme Irene

FRENCH MODEL GOWNS

500 FIFTH AVENUE

At 42d Street



An Exclusive Suit

"CECILE"

Very Special

$19.75

A Reproduction of a Suit Selling Regularly at $45.00. Fashioned from exceedingly fine French Serge. Notice the chic short front jacket with postillion back, charmingly trimmed with broadtail. Richly satin lined. Very stylish skirt, with yoke. Broadtail bandeau.

Colors: Black, Navy, Brown, Green.

14 years to size 44.

Special Attention to Mail Orders

New Jersey's Greatest Store

How to Get to Hahne's

—Take any Hudson Tunnel train on Sixth Avenue, or any train from the downtown Hudson Terminal. Ride direct to Newark—the store is directly across the park.

Come Monday!—Come to Newark for Some of the Greatest Savings of the Year!

HAHNE & CO.
NEWARK

30 Extra Surety Coupons FREE!

With every purchase amounting to one dollar or more on Monday. These extra coupons are given in addition to those given with each 10c. purchase.

The Greatest Sale Ever Recorded by Any Store!---Greatest in Volume! ---Greatest in Scope! ---Greatest in Savings! ---Here's the Reason:

HAHNE & COMPANY, OF NEWARK, BOUGHT THE IMMENSE STOCKS OF THE O'NEILL-ADAMS COMPANY, NEW YORK

Every Stock from the O'Neill-Adams Co.'s Two Great Blocks of Stores in this Sale

With Only One Department Excepted

Come to Newark for the Real Sale!

The Great Sale of O'Neill-Adams Stocks at Hahne's is going along at a record-breaking pace—seemingly sweeping everything before it! It's a tremendous task—disposing of the stocks of two big blocks of stores—stocks which were immense—even beyond comprehension! Previous sales records were swept away on the first day—there were more people here—they bought more—they were better satisfied than ever before in the history of the great Hahne Store. No sale of the past can show such an enviable record!

Monday marks the re-opening of the sale with new stocks—new assortments—new savings. The scope of this sale is tremendous—stocks are constantly changing—the selling is fast and furious—the store is a whirl of activity. To list the hundreds of items here would be an endless task—it is impossible. The sale involves the whole store—every department—every nook and corner! And Monday new stocks come out fresh from the boxes—marked at figures averaging

One-Half O'Neill-Adams Company's Prices

Filled Surety Coupon Books Redeemed at Hahne's During This Great Sale

Especially should patrons of the O'Neill-Adams Stores take advantage of these stirring offerings.

Come to Newark for the Real Sale!

O'Neill-Adams Co.'s Grocery Dept.

O'Neill-Adams Grocery Stocks—together with our own—at very special low prices. An example,—

5 lbs. Sugar for 25c.

5 pounds of Standard Granulated Sugar—Sold only with other Groceries. We reserve the right to limit quantities on grocery orders.

Tuesday---Election Day

The store will be open all day. Come and spend the day with us. It will pay you!

Remember Every Stock of These Two Great Stores Was Bought by HAHNE & CO., With Only One Exception

The Stocks of These Two Immense Blocks of Stores on Sixth Avenue, New York, Are Now Being Sold in The Great Hahne Store

O'Neill-Adams Co.'s Piano Stocks

Will be sold at Hahne's at greatly reduced prices. Both pianos and player instruments in this tremendous clearance. Former prices have been disregarded—quick clearance is the order of things. Special low terms may be arranged, as low as $5 down and $1.25 a week. Write or call for particulars.

The Great Sale of Fine Furniture

Continues on Monday, with no let-up of items or assortments. You may buy any of the pieces on the Club Plan at the special sale prices.

O'NEILL-ADAMS PRICES CUT IN TWO ON ALL OF THESE STOCKS!

MEN'S WEARING APPAREL
O'Neill-Adams Men's Suits About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Men's Overcoats About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Men's Trousers About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Men's Shoes About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Men's Shirts About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Men's Silk Ties About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Men's Underwear Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Men's Hosiery Half Price

BOYS' WEARING APPAREL
O'Neill-Adams Boys' School Suits Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Boys' Knickerbockers Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Boys' Raincoats Nearly Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Boys' Sweaters Nearly Half Price

WOMEN'S WEARING APPAREL
O'Neill-Adams Women's Fall Suits About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Women's Dresses Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Women's Coats Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Fur Coats Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Fur Muffs Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Women's Fur Neckwear Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Misses' Suits About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Misses' Coats Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Girls' Rain Capes About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Girls' Dresses About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Girls' Coats About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Waists About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Women's House Dresses About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Women's Kimonos About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Women's Blanket Robes About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Women's Dressing Sacques About Half Price

CHILDREN'S APPAREL
O'Neill-Adams Children's Dresses About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Children's Rompers About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Children's Chinchilla Coats About Half
O'Neill-Adams Children's Sweaters About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Children's Rompers About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Children's Muslinwear About Half Price

INFANTS' APPAREL
O'Neill-Adams Infants' Long & Short Dresses About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Infants' Coats About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Infants' Undergarments About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Infants' Caps Half Price

MILLINERY
O'Neill-Adams Trimmed Millinery Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Silk Plush and Velvet Hats About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Hat Trimmings Great Reductions
O'Neill-Adams Ostrich Plumes Half Price

GLOVES
O'Neill-Adams Fur-Lined Gloves Less Than Half
O'Neill-Adams Men's & Women's Cape Gloves About Half
O'Neill-Adams Men's & Women's Kid Gauntlets Less Than Half
O'Neill-Adams Men's Dress Gloves Less Than Half
O'Neill-Adams Men's Working Gloves Half Price

WOMEN'S UNDERWEAR
O'Neill-Adams Women's Muslin Underwear About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Misses' Muslin Underwear About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Children's Muslin Underwear About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Women's Knit Underwear About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Misses' Knit Underwear About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Children's Knit Underwear About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Corsets Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Silk Petticoats Less Than Half Price

WOMEN'S HOSIERY
O'Neill-Adams Women's Silk Stockings About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Women's Lisle Stockings About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Women's Cotton Stockings About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Misses' Hosiery About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Children's Stockings About Half Price

NECKWEAR AND HANDKERCHIEFS
O'Neill-Adams Women's High-Grade Neckwear Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Women's Sleeveless Guimpes Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Women's Handkerchiefs About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Men's Linen Handkerchiefs About Half Price

LINENS
O'Neill-Adams Damask Tablecloths About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Table Napkins About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Linen Damask About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Linen Towels About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Turkish Towels About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Decorative Linens Near Half Price

DOMESTICS
O'Neill-Adams Muslin Sheets Near Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Muslin Pillow Cases Near Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Embroidered Pillow Cases Near Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Bleached Muslin About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Unbleached Muslin About Half Price

BLANKETS AND COMFORTABLES
O'Neill-Adams Fine Wool Blankets Near Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Wool Nap Blankets Near Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Silkoline Comforts Near Half Price
O'Neill-Adams White Bedspreads Near Half Price

YARD GOODS
O'Neill-Adams Colored Silks About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Black Dress Silks Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Colored Dress Fabrics Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Black Dress Fabrics Reductions
O'Neill-Adams Wash Dress Fabrics Nearly Half Price
O'Neill-Adams White Dress Fabrics Nearly Half Price

LACES AND EMBROIDERIES
O'Neill-Adams Fine Laces Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Fine Embroideries Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Flouncings Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Veilings Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Dress Trimmings Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Belts and Buckles Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Girdles Half Price

WOMEN'S SHOES
O'Neill-Adams Women's Lace Shoes Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Women's Button Shoes Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Misses' Shoes Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Children's Shoes Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Boys' Shoes Near Half Price

UPHOLSTERIES AND LACE CURTAINS
O'Neill-Adams Fine Lace Curtains Great Reductions
O'Neill-Adams Portieres Great Reductions
O'Neill-Adams Draperies Great Reductions
O'Neill-Adams Couch Covers Great Reductions
O'Neill-Adams Cedar Chests Great Reductions
O'Neill-Adams Window Shades Great Reductions
O'Neill-Adams Draping Materials Great Reductions

UMBRELLAS
O'Neill-Adams Men's Umbrellas About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Women's Umbrellas About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Children's Umbrellas About Half Price

RUGS AND CARPETS
O'Neill-Adams Fine Wilton Rugs Nearly Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Wool Rugs Nearly Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Velvet Carpets Nearly Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Tapestry Brussels Carpets Nearly Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Printed Linoleums Nearly Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Inlaid Linoleums Nearly Half Price

TRUNKS AND BAGS
O'Neill-Adams Wardrobe Trunks Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Steamer Trunks Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Hat Boxes Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Suit Cases Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Club Bags Half Price
O'Neill-Adams English Kit Bags Half Price

HOUSEFURNISHINGS
O'Neill Adams Fine Dinner Sets Great Sacrifice
O'Neill-Adams Refrigerators Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Housewares Great Reductions
O'Neill-Adams China Less Than Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Bath Room Fixtures About Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Lamps and Sundries Half and Less

MISCELLANEOUS
O'Neill-Adams Leather Hand Bags Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Party Boxes Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Ribbons Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Wanted Notions Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Pianos Great Reductions
O'Neill-Adams Player Pianos Great Reductions
O'Neill-Adams Drugs and Toilet Goods Reduced
O'Neill-Adams Sewing Machines Sacrifice Prices
O'Neill-Adams Sets of Books Nearly Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Books of Fiction, Travel, Nearly Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Stationery Half and Less Than Half
O'Neill-Adams Religious Goods Great Price Reductions
O'Neill-Adams Baby Carriages Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Watches and Jewelry Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Silverware Half Price
O'Neill-Adams Pictures Half Price

HEAD OF OUR FIRST MORAL SUASION SCHOOL TALKS OF OLD TIMES

Nathan P. Beers, Who Would Not Flog His Pupils, Had Among the Boys in His Classes Col. Goethals, Rabbi Wise, Ogden Mills and Others Who Have Since Become Famous Men.

EVERY schoolboy in New York owes the fact that he escapes many well deserved lickings in the course of his years of seeking after knowledge to the stand taken by the young Principal of Public School 15 away back in 1850 Nathan P. Beers was the teacher. He never was fond of flogging and decided to abolish it and to that end he called his assistant teachers together one day and instructed them not to send any more boys to him to be punished.

"I told them," said Mr. Beers in the course of a recent interview, "that I intended to carry on the school without the rod and I thought it would be a success; if not I'd go into some other business, for I had no intention of having every pupil whose instructor found him difficult to control sent to me for chastisement. Mine was the first moral suasion school and many were the head shakings over the outcome of my, at that time, doubtful looking experiment. But it worked and worked well, and my boys were as good as the average."

Mr. Beers was Principal of the boys' department of the old school down in Fifth Street, between Avenues C and D, from 1850 until 1904. He gave it up at that time because he was over 80 years old and his department was to be given over to the girls, who needed more room, while the boys were to be moved to another building. He lives now in a quaint old brick house at 124 West Eleventh Street, one of a row set back from the street, in a sort of dignified withdrawal from the rush and roar of modern life, surging like a vast, restless sea past the door. A flag walk leads to the old little veranda, and inside, the stained glass lights of the door, the marble topped hat rack and black walnut balustrade leading up to the "second floor front" all prepare one to meet the quiet, gentle old man of 91, who smiles and holds out a hospitable hand to welcome his caller.

He belongs to another generation—a more polite one, or possibly one in which more time was taken in which to be polite and observe the refinements. In his younger days Mr. Beers stood six feet one inch, and even now he is a commanding figure of full six feet. His eyes are soft and blue behind the queer little tortoise rimmed eye-glasses; his hair, eyebrows and mustache, pure white. Slender, patrician, reposeful, the learned gentleman sits day after day surrounded by his treasures and his memories, waiting to "cross the long-feared bar," as he has himself expressed it in one of his poems. That is his amusement—writing poems and trying his hand at acrostics. "Time hangs rather heavily," he explained apologetically, "and so I just write little verses for my own amusement." Poems at ninety-one! One he has called "The Lord is at the Helm."

When waves of trouble 'round me roll
Threatening to overwhelm,
A voice speaks comfort to my soul
The Lord is at the helm.

When pain and sickness rack my frame
I seek relief and oft in vain,
That soothing voice is still the same,
The Lord is at the helm.

And when I cross the long feared bar,
With breakers sounding near,
I'll hear again from near and far
The Lord is at the helm.

When, safely landed, I shall be
Within my wished for home,
With joy and wonder I shall see
My Pilot on the Throne.

Mr. Beers's taste seems inclined to the acrostic form, and he has over a hundred of these, arranged in alphabetical order, which he has written on female names, beginning with Abigail and ending with Vera. Of Katie he says:

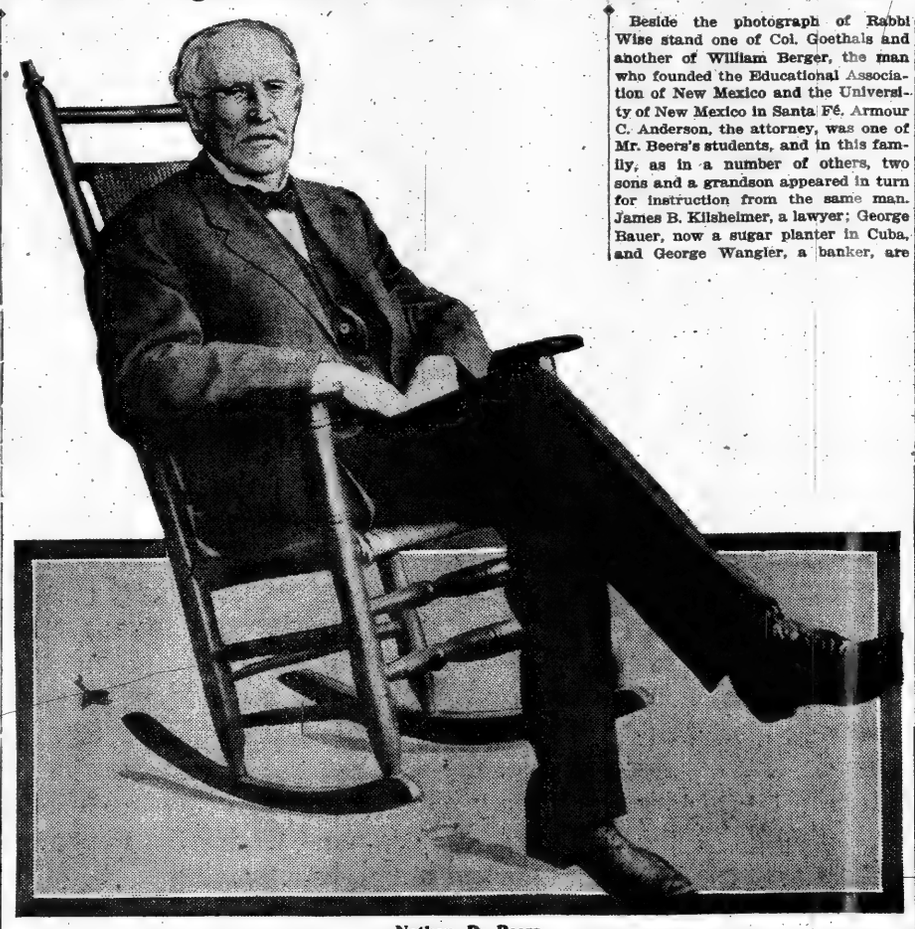
Katie-did, I hear some say,
And some say that she didn't,
That Katie did some naughty thing
I fear, and that she hid it.
Each night I hear the same old song,
but can't tell which is right or wrong.

A two-verse hymn he wrote for his Masonic lodge runs like this:

Now Craftsmen tried and true
Here honest work to do, we all have come.
Straight as the plummet line
Square with the law divine
Our precepts, grand, sublime, shall bless the world.
May friendship, truth and love,
Drawn from the light above, our actions rule.
So when from labor free
We shall accepted be,
And through eternity pass nobly on.

He is the oldest Mason in Polar Star Lodge, No. 245, and is one of the chaplains. He has been a member since 1856.

When asked to tell something of the boys graduated from his school who afterward grew to be prominent men he said: "Well, Col. Goethals was one of my boys—a good boy he was, too; bright, studious and attentive. Was he ever sent to me for punishment? Oh, no. He was a little man. He was above boyish tricks. There is very little one can say about boys as boys, excepting that they are good or bad, and those who grow up to be successful men, who do worth-while things, are usually those who were well disposed as youths.



Nathan P. Beers.

Beside the photograph of Rabbi Wise stand one of Col. Goethals and another of William Berger, the man who founded the Educational Association of New Mexico and the University of New Mexico in Santa Fé. Armour C. Anderson, the attorney, was one of Mr. Beers's students, and in this family, as in a number of others, two sons and a grandson appeared in turn for instruction from the same man. James B. Kilsheimer, a lawyer; George Bauer, now a sugar planter in Cuba, and George Wangler, a banker, are

"Yes, I helped young Goethals get his appointment to West Point and he proved his worth by graduating second in his class. Judge Giegerich of the Supreme Court was one of my boys, too. So were Judge Newburger, also of the Supreme Court; Justice Hoffman, Abraham Gruber, Morris Blumenthal, ex-assistant District Attorney, and Father Clifford. Rabbi Wise also came to me for instruction; that's his photograph at the end of the mantel; he has the silver tongue, hasn't he? Bright boys, all bright youngsters they were. I received a letter from Ogden Mills the other day; he was one of my scholars; also the Bloomingdale Brothers—not the present firm, but the older generation. Yes, one of those Bloomingdale boys was the last youngster I ever thrashed and I didn't give him enough to do him much harm, or good."

among those to whom the master points pridefully as examples of his system of discipline. That system was exceedingly simple, consisting merely in keeping the boys in the classroom after hours when they misbehaved.

"In the early fifties," said Mr. Beers, "most of the boys in No. 15 were native born Americans, sons of shipbuilders and carpenters. There were some Germans and a few Irish, but no Slavs; those came later. The first class graduated in 1845. Ah, those were the days of solid educational foundations. Fewer subjects were taught then than now, but they were taught more thoroughly. The doctrine of work was inculcated in children's minds and they looked on the school tasks as duties.

"When a boy graduated from No. 15 he was well grounded in reading, writing, arithmetic, spelling, history, Brown's grammar, drawing, and singing. The music included arias from the operas. Besides this I used to recite poetry to the boys every morning before lessons, and they in turn were required to recite for me, and as a result, my boys were not afraid to speak in public in after years. I remember among those who read poetry well, how Clarence Clifford, a son of the janitor of the school, was the envy and the despair of the whole class on account of his ability to declaim "Roderick Dhu" with much energy and dramatic effect. He afterward became Father Clifford, a Jesuit teacher over in New Jersey and an orator of real worth.

"No, the curriculum of the public school today doesn't fit boys for their life work as it did fifty years ago, but," with a little sigh, "one mustn't say that publicly or one will be set down as an old fogy who doesn't keep up with the procession."

It is plain to even the most casual observer that Mr. Beers has forgotten more in his ninety years of observation than the average person can ever hope to learn. And yet he remembers some most interesting things, as, for instance, the days when the table refuse was thrown in the streets and hogs—the public scavengers—speedily removed all traces of this unsightly and insanitary practice. He speaks familiarly of the first use of anthracite coal and of the forebodings of many that it would not prove a practical fuel; and of the introduction of matches in a small box having two compartments, one for the little stick with one end treated so that when it was stuck into the bottle of aqua fortis in the other compartment it could be lighted.

Mr. Beers lived in Fifth Avenue, near Eighth Street, and every morning when he left his home he followed a certain route to school. His boys all knew when and where to look for him and would wait for him, falling in alongside or back of him, so that by the time he reached his destination he was at the head of a procession of a hundred or more. They all looked up to him and he controlled not only their learning and conduct, but their thought.

Until 1901 the graduates of No. 15 used to give a banquet for their Principal every Spring, and at the last one in April, 1900, he received a loving cup. Col. Goethals, his star pupil, sat on the master's right on that occasion and it was a merry time.

That Mr. Beers keeps in touch with his boys is shown by an incident told by Abraham Gruber, who says: "I hadn't heard from Mr. Beers in fifteen years, and one day I received a letter from him asking me to call. So I went to see him, and he had sent for me to give me a big oil painting of William H. Seward, who was Secretary of State under President Lincoln and a former Governor of New York. It was done by Frank G. Carpenter, and Mr. Beers had been offered a big price for it, but he wanted me to have it. It is in the Republican Club rooms now."

This remarkable man is a product of New York soil. Born of Connecticut stock on the east side of New York in 1823, he was educated by his parents, in private schools, and finally received a year in the Chrystie Street School, No. 7. "And there," says he, "I learned more in a year than I had in all the rest of my schooling put together." Under the Lancastrian system, in which the older, more capable boys were selected to instruct the younger ones, he became a junior monitor at a salary of $50 per annum. After passing some examinations he became a senior monitor, and in course of time a past monitor. He received his certificate entitling him to teach in any free school in the State from Christopher Morgan in 1849.

In all his years in School 15 he can remember being absent from his post only three days. He thinks that he came naturally by his staying qualities, for his father held one position for fifty years. His grandfather was a minute man in the Revolutionary War, and among Mr. Beers's treasures is a musket, with powder horn. Another thing which he prizes highly is a fine old mahogany rocker covered with horsehair, which belonged to Henry Clay. Mr. Beers is the only living officer of the Henry Clay Association, having been its last President, and when he went to Ashland, Ky., to attend Clay's funeral Mrs. Clay gave him the chair, which he intends to hand over, in time, to the Historical Society.

But the greatest treasure of all is a black and white cat. "She has been my pet for seven years and is my constant companion," he explains as she crawls up around his neck purring her content and affection for him. "She's just a plain, ordinary Molly cat, but Rockefeller hasn't money enough to buy her."

GLEAMS AND FLASHES

Many a rich man has everything his own way, until his will is probated.

Strange as it may seem, high living has put many a man on his uppers.

It's a good plan to use your head if you would get there with both feet.

It is quite possible for a man to simply spread himself without really having any broadening influence.

Many a man who believes nothing will expect his wife to believe everything he tells her.

It isn't every man who can fall into a fortune without sustaining a compound fracture of the morals.

One thing about ice is that it never sells like hot cakes.

A man may be slow but sure, but his watch can't be.

Some yachts have centreboards; nearly all have sideboards.

There are times when it takes a mighty strong-minded woman to hold her tongue.

It is easier for some fellows to pass counterfeit money in a saloon than to pass the saloon.

There's plenty of gossip in a boarding house, but the landlady never cares to entertain an idle roomer.

The fellow who tells a girl her voice has the flexibility of a violin may be hinting to be her beau.

Even the aviator who holds the high altitude record may not be above criticism.

An egotist is a man who is so wrapped up in himself that he pays no attention to us.

Lots of people attract attention who are not in other ways attractive.

Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's feet with which to do thy kicking.

WHAT IS DOING IN THE WORLD OF MUSIC

AT the Century Opera House Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffmann" will be presented as the new work for the week on Tuesday night. Florence Macbeth, an American coloratura soprano, who was a member of the Chicago Opera Company last season, will make her first appearance with the company on this occasion, singing the rôle of the mechanical doll. Lois Ewell will sing Antonia, and Bettina Freeman, Giulietta. Orville Harrold will sing Hoffmann Tuesday night and at the Saturday matinée, and Gustaf Bergman will have the rôle Friday and Saturday nights. Kathleen Howard will again sing Nicklaus, and Louis Kreidler the three "evil genius" rôles of Coppelius, Dapertutto, and Dr. Miracle. Augusta Senska will be the Voice of Antonia's mother. The remainder of the cast includes Messrs. Kaufman, Phillips, Williamson, d'Angelo, Clement, Zwibach, Dorfman, and Caplan. Josiah Zuro will conduct.

"La Bohème" will alternate during the week with the new work. The cast remains the same as on the opening night, with the exception that Mr. Gaudenzi sings Rudolph tomorrow evening. "La Bohème" will be sung Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights and Saturday afternoon.

Havrah Hubbard will give his "opera talk" this afternoon on "The Tales of Hoffmann."

***

A special Wagner concert under the direction of Ernst Knoch will be given at the Century Opera House tonight. Following is the programme: Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"; "Dich Theure Halle," from "Tannhäuser," Bettina Freeman; aria of Adriano, from "Rienzi," Maude Santley; "Engel" and "Traume," Lois Ewell; Wotan's "Farewell and Fire Spell," Louis Kreidler; prelude to Act. III. of "Lohengrin"; Prayer from "Rienzi," Gustaf Bergman; Good Friday music, from "Parsifal"; Erda's song from "Rheingold," Augusta Senska; "To the Evening Star," from "Tannhäuser," Graham Marr, and the Overture to "Tannhäuser."

MUSIC FOR THE PEOPLE.

Following are the lecture-recitals in music arranged for the week by the Board of Education:

Monday—"Siegfried," fifth in a course on "The Ring Cycle," by Miss Pearl Cleveland Wilson, illustrated with selections, at Public School 40, 156th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue.

Tuesday—"Folk Songs of England," illustrated by selections, by Mrs. Honora Blakeley Bouton, at Public School 18, Park Avenue, Williamsbridge. "Songs of the British Isles," illustrated by vocal and instrumental selections, by Randall Hargreaves, at St. Anselm's Hall, Tinton Avenue and 156th Street.

Thursday—"Chopin: The Devotee of the Piano," illustrated by selections, by Miss Margaret Anderson, at Public School 46, 196th Street and Briggs Avenue. "Folk Songs of France," by Albert G. Crawford, illustrated by songs by Mrs. Lois Hackett, at Public School 27, Forty-second Street, east of Third Avenue.

Friday—"Edvard Grieg: The Great Master in Small Forms," illustrated by vocal and instrumental selections, by Dr. John S. Van Cleve, at Public School 90, 147th Street, west of Seventh Avenue. "Folk Song and Art Song," by Miss Marie F. MacConnell, illustrated by songs by Miss Mabel MacConnell, at Public School 61, Twelfth Street, east of Avenue B. "The Romantic Era of Music," by Mrs. Eleanor Hooper Coryell, illustrated by violin and voice, Miss Anna Gonyon, soprano, at Public School 34, Amethyst Avenue, Van Nest.

The Board of Education series of free public organ recitals on Sunday afternoons will be resumed this afternoon, when Gottfried H. Federlein gives his first recital at the Ethical Culture School, Central Park West and Sixty-fourth Street, at 4 o'clock. Later in the season a number of the high schools which are equipped with organs will be used for such recitals.

***

These are the programmes for Samuel A. Baldwin's free organ recitals at the City College: This afternoon—Suite Gothique, Boellmann; Andante con Moto from Fifth Symphony, Beethoven; Fugue in E flat, Bach; Funeral March, Grieg; "Traumlied," Diggle; Dialogue, Quef; Berceuse, Shelley, and overture to "William Tell," Rossini. Wednesday—Pastoral Sonata, Rheinberger; Evensong, Johnston; Fantasie and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Menuet in D, Mozart; Toccata in A, Frysinger; Intermezzo, Hollins, and overture to "Oberon," Weber.

***

The Music Festivals Committee of the New York Tercentenary Commission will give another free concert at City College tomorrow evening. The City Orchestra will play under direction of Arthur Bergh, and the soloists will be Inez Barbour, James Stanley, and Maurice Kaufman.

BROOKLYN MUSIC.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give its first concert of the season in Brooklyn on Friday evening in the Academy of Music. Pasquale Amato of the Metropolitan Opera House will be the soloist. The programme comprises Brahms's Symphony No. 2, Sibelius's "The Swan of Tuonela," and "Finlandia," and the Overture to Weber's "Euryanthe." Mr. Amato will sing airs from Saint-Säens's "Henry VIII." and Handel's "Xerxes."

***

Yvonne de Treville, soprano, will give a costume recital at the Academy of Music Thursday evening, illustrating "Three Centuries of Prime Donne." Eleanor Shaw will assist at the piano.

***

Free concerts in the course of the People's Institute of Brooklyn will be given this afternoon at Manual Training High School, Seventh Avenue and Fourth Street, and this evening at the Commercial High School, Albany Avenue and Dean Street. For the afternoon concert the programme will be given by T. Morgan Phillips, tenor; Alois Trnka, violin; Mary Adele Hays, soprano, and Bernardine Kieckwefer, accompanist. At the evening concert in Commercial High School the Kaltenborn String Quartet will play.

PAVLOWA IN NEW DANCES.

Anna Pavlowa, the Russian dancer, will make her first appearance this season in a performance with her company at the Metropolitan Opera House Tuesday evening. Her programme comprises a new ballet, "Flora's Awakening," eight divertissements, of which five will be new, and a feature called "The Dance of Today," which will consist of modern society dances. Among her company will be Ivan Clustine, Alexander Volinine, Mlle. Stephanie Plaskowiesska, Mlle. Stasia Kuhn, and Mlle. Tamara Svirskaia. Theodore Stier of London will be the musical director.

Safety in Travel.

Dwight Elmendorf, well-known raconteur of travel experiences, will return to Carnegie Hall next Sunday evening. Under the general title of "Five Ideal Circular Tours," Mr. Elmendorf has prepared a series of illustrated travel talks, the first of which, "Around the World Through the Panama Canal," will cover a journey of 22,700 miles and will embrace new scenes in the Azores, Madeira, Gibraltar, Port Said, Aden, India, Burma, the Straits Settlements, Singapore, Hongkong, China, Japan, Hawaii, and views of the completed Panama Canal.

ON VIEW TOMORROW and TUESDAY
At the galleries of the Fifth Ave. Auction Rooms,
353-361 Fourth Avenue at 25th St.
Home Appointments
from several estates and individuals, including property belonging to the Estate of the late George I. Landon,
James A. Lynch, Esq., and The Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., Exrs. Comprising in part modern Furniture, solid Silver in great variety, made by Tiffany, Theo. B. Starr and others; Books, European Porcelains, Bronzes and many other objects of household adornment and utility. Also the entire stock of Antiques removed from the store
20 East 29th St., to be sold at UNRESTRICTED PUBLIC SALE in the course of settlement of the Estate of the late Hermann Friend,
and consisting in part of genuine Colonial and Early English Furniture, Old China, Brass, Copper, Sheffield Plate, and other objects.
Days of sale Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons, November 4, 5, 6, 7, at 1:30 each day.
HENRY A. HARTMAN, Auct'r.

Hickson
GOWNS TAILORED FROCKS
HATS
FURS
With the passing of the tremendous early season strain upon our capacity, patrons now have the opportunity of securing our best service, which assures incomparable clothes, with positively no unnecessary delay.
Fifth Avenue at 52d Street

Gunther Furs
Superior in Quality and Workmanship

SILVER FOXES
A rare collection of beautiful skins ranging from the medium shades to the finest and darkest skins obtainable. Prices accordingly.
MUFFS AND NECKPIECES
A large variety of styles in all the desirable Furs.
Women's Fur and Fur-trimmed Hats in a collection of attractive styles.
C. G. GUNTHER'S SONS
391 FIFTH AVENUE, N. Y.

The New York Times
MID-WEEK
PICTORIAL WAR EXTRA
ISSUED EVERY THURSDAY
24 PAGES - - - 50 PHOTOGRAPHS
THE greatest pictures of the week, many of them exclusive and to be seen only in The Times's Pictorial War Extra, faithfully rendered with all the beauty and detail of the original prints by The Times's new process of printing—Rotogravure.
A feature of the next issue will be a set of portraits of
THE GERMAN GENERALS
By Berthold Clauss
the famous German artist. These fine prints are exclusively reproduced for the first time in America and are arranged on a sheet 16x22—suitable for framing. As the editions are always sold out early, you had better order it of your dealer in advance.
PRICE TEN CENTS.
$1.25 for 3 months. $5.00 a year, postpaid.
For those who wish to preserve their copies of the Pictorial War Extra, The New York Times has prepared suitable binders, specially made for the purpose.
Price of binder, postpaid, to any address in the United States:
Full cloth $1.00
(with one year's subscription to the Mid-week Pictorial War Extra, $6.00.)
Half leather, gold trimmed 1.50
(with one year's subscription to the Mid-week Pictorial War Extra, $6.50.)
Size of binder, 12x17 inches; holds complete file for one year (52 copies.) Send stamps or money order, and state style of binding preferred.
The New York Times
MID-WEEK PICTORIAL WAR EXTRA
TIMES SQUARE NEW YORK

FINE POINTS FOR THE WOULD-BE EXPERT IN AUCTION BRIDGE

Count Your Losers When You Want to Bid and Your Takers When You Want to Defeat or Double. Some Advice About How to Play "Nullo" Hands.

By Florence Irwin.

IN the positive suits the would-be declarant, on reckoning his hand, should count his losing cards, not his taking ones. And the adversaries should count their takers, not their losers. In other words, count your losers when you want to bid, and your takers when you want to defeat, or double. The man who holds this hand

♡AKQJ74
♣1098
♢Q74
♠J

should not begin by saying to himself, "Just see all the heart tricks I can take." He should rather reason thus: "With hearts as trumps I shall never lose a trump round; I shall, however, lose three clubs, two diamonds (the queen will be high on the third round), and one spade. That is six losers; my hand, therefore, is worth but one-odd, unassisted. My 64 honors will make it profitable to lose one trick, provided I am not doubled. If my partner never raises me, I cannot count on more than one trick from him. If he raises me once, he has two tricks; if he raises me twice, he has three tricks; and so on."

The declarant thus counts his losers. The adversaries, on the other hand, count their takers. The adversary who holds this hand

♡432
♣AK3
♢AKQ
♠KQ104

and hears "three hearts" bid against him, should reason thus: "I cannot bid no-trumps, because I do not stop the hearts; nor do I care to bid royals high, with but four in my hand. But I can double 'three hearts' because I have in my hand six taking cards, (two clubs, three diamonds, and at least one spade.) My suits are so short that my high cards are not likely to be ruffed. Also, I cut off all means of escape if my enemy tries to get out of his hearts. I can defeat any bid he makes."

The "three hearts" may have been bid on this combination:

♡AKQJ10
♣Q64
♢J76
♠A3

Nevertheless, it can be defeated by the adverse hand given above. Therefore:

In the positive suits, let the declarant count his losers and the adversaries their takers. But let this rule be reversed in nullos. In nullos let the declarant count his takers and the adversary his losers. The man who has four takers in his hand can make but three nullos even if he doesn't allow a single trick to his partner's hand. And it is more than probable that an unknown dummy that must eventually be exposed will take a trick or two.

I have seen players bid nullos to any point on such hands as this:

♡J107
♣9865432
♢Q108
♠—

They look only at those wonderful clubs and at the blank spades. Those six other cards, so dangerous to carry, seem to melt into insignificance.

Of course, all six of those cards needn't take. There is a chance for discard. But after one discard on spades the adversary will stop leading them. And if the declarant wants to lead them himself he will have to take tricks in dummy to do it. Then, the fact that the hand holds all the low clubs, makes it just possible that dummy would block. Suppose dummy held the ace-jack of clubs and no others; and suppose the ten were led. If dummy played jack, third hand might duck with the seven, leaving the ace still high. And if dummy played ace, third-hand might throw the king, and dummy's jack might still take.

That is a very dangerous nullo-hand, because it holds two unguarded suits, and six menacing cards. Yet nine players out of ten would bid it high because they would count their losers and not their takers.

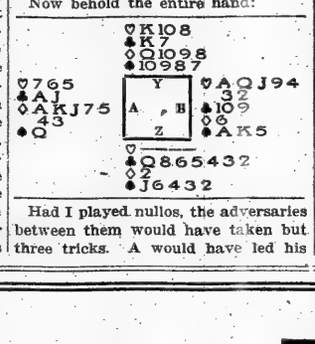
On the other hand nullo-adversaries should always count their losers. It takes but four ducks to kill a four-nullo bid, ("Have I four duckers?") it takes five ducks to defeat three nullos, ("are there five probable losers in my hand?") and so on. Even when the hand answers "yes" to the test, I do not advise a nullo-double, generally because there is the partner's hand to consider. He may be forced to take your losers. But be satisfied to play against nullos, with the requisite amount of losers in your hand rather than make foolish bids against the nullos. Double occasionally, I suppose, (I shouldn't myself) when the bid is very high and when the adversaries are obviously trying to save rubber, with their nullo bids. I don't mean I have never doubled a nullo-bid, but I do it so rarely it isn't worth counting, and greatly hesitate to advise the course.

The other day I, as dealer, was overjoyed to find myself holding these cards:

♡—
♣Q865432
♢2
♠J6432

Of course, I opened with "a nullo"; second-hand said "two diamonds," and, to my disappointment, my partner passed. No raise from him! I was going on to "two nullos" alone, however, (but never to three,) when my scheme was frustrated by fourth-hand's overcalling his partner's bid with "two hearts." That killed my bid, and I gave up the prettiest nullo-hand in the world.

Now behold the entire hand:



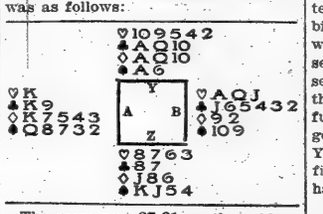
Had I played nullos, the adversaries between them would have taken but three tricks. A would have led his singleton which B would have overtaken, and led the ace of spades, to give his partner the desired discard. A would have discarded the ace of clubs. B's next lead would probably have been his singleton diamond, which dummy would take. One club trick would be all A-B would take in addition, three tricks in all. I could not have made "one nullo," (I should have lost 200 undoubled,) and at "three nullos" my losses would have been 300 or 600, according to whether the hand was or was not doubled. This despite the fact that my hand was a wonder, that it held but one red card and that a deuce, that I could not be forced to take a single trick, and that my partner hadn't even the stuff for a warning bid. His "pass" was warning enough.

Of course, B made a clean-up in hearts, but that was less expensive for us than trying to keep him out of it. That hand was marked as A-B's, and our best course was to give it to them.

One correspondent writes to know why the hands are not to be exchanged in nullos "as everything is reversed in nullos." Everything is not reversed; the adversaries don't exchange hands, the play doesn't go around in the opposite direction, you don't cut to the left and deal to the right, the value of the cards is not reversed. None of the ordinary routine is reversed, nor should it be. To strive to lose tricks is not "to reverse everything."

I have already been forced to explain too frequently my objections to this exchange of hands, objections which are shared by all authorities. It is bad because it is unnecessary; very high nullo-bids are constantly and successfully played without it; a high hand kills nullos whether held up or exposed; if exposed its holder will be more careful about warning; by making the dummy's rules more stringent than the declarant's, and by forbidding the latter to go to three nullos unassisted, all necessity for exchange ceases to exist.

To my regret, the diagrams in my article of Oct. 11 were transposed. What was intended to be the test hand came from Louisiana, Mo., and was as follows:



The score was 27-21 on the rubber-game in favor of Z—Y, and the actual bidding struck me as extremely odd. Here it is:

Z, "one spade"; A, "two spades"; Y, "by"; B, "a heart," (awful!); Z, "no"; A, "no"; Y, "double," (equally awful!); B, "two clubs"; Z and A, "no"; Y, "double"; B and Z, "no"; A, "two diamonds"; Y, "double"; B and Z, "by"; A, "two nullos," (with two unguarded suits); Y, "two hearts," and made three-odd.

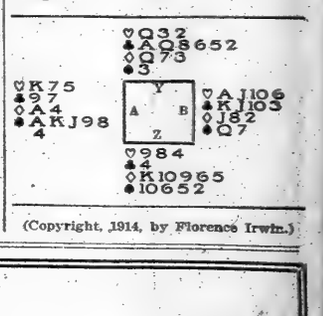
Of Z's bidding alone do I approve, and he did nothing but pass after his first correct opening of "a spade."

Why should A bid "two spades," after Z's opening? He should have passed, not having either a no-trump bid or a suit-bid; it would take two-odd spades to put Z—Y out, A's hand looked as if he could prevent their making two-odd; still it contained no bid that would put him rubber, and his partner might have something better to say.

Y should pass; his hand looks like two-odd in spades; he can't bid his low hearts on the first round; he could say no-trump, I suppose, to start up the bidding.

If Y passes I don't see what B could do but pass, unless he bid clubs on his jack-suit, breaking a rule just to save rubber. His three-card bid was terrible; so was Y's double of that bid. If Y expected to win at hearts why didn't he bid "two hearts," himself, (he could bid his ten-suit on the second round,) and take rubber? All those would-be rescue bids were fearful; squirming out of one suit just to get caught again in another. And Y's doubles never got played, he finally let his quarry out, played the hand himself, and took rubber.

The hand of Oct. 18 was exceedingly interesting, but lack of space will make it necessary to defer its discussion for another week. Meanwhile here is another. First deal on the rubber-game:



(Copyright, 1914, by Florence Irwin.)

CONCERTS OF THE WEEK

THE New York Symphony Society, Walter Damrosch, conductor, will give a Bach-Handel-Wagner programme this afternoon at Aeolian Hall, with Mme. Olive Fremstad as soloist, making her first appearance of the season. The numbers comprise a concerto for two solo violins and cello, with strings, by Handel; Bach's "Brandenburg" Concerto No. 1, an air from Handel's "Xerxes" ("Largo") arranged for orchestra by Dr. Leopold Damrosch; the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," and for Mme. Fremstad, Elizabeth's air from "Tannhäuser," Kundry's air from "Parsifal," and the Prelude and Finale from "Tristan und Isolde."

***

Manuel Quiroga, violinist, will give a recital at the Shubert Theatre this afternoon, assisted by Idalia Ide, soprano, and E. Romayne Simmons, pianist. The violinist's principal number is Beethoven's Sonata No. 5, and he will also play Saint-Saëns's Rondo Capriccioso and a group of three smaller pieces.

***

John Philip Sousa and his band will be heard in their only New York appearance this season in a concert at the Hippodrome tonight.

***

Carl Friedberg, a German pianist, will give his first New York recital tomorrow afternoon in Carnegie Hall. His programme includes Liszt's arrangement of Bach's Fantasie and Fugue in G minor, Beethoven's sonata, Opus 109, and Schumann's Symphonic Etudes, besides two groups of Brahms's and Chopin's compositions.

***

Florence Hinkle will give a song recital at Aeolian Hall tomorrow afternoon. Her programme includes songs in Italian, French, and German, with a concluding group in English.

***

Tina Lerner, pianist, has arranged a programme representing eight composers for her recital in Aeolian Hall on Tuesday afternoon, her first appearance for two years. Her largest number is Liszt's sonata in B minor, and there is a group of six Chopin compositions.

***

Blanche Goode, pianist, will make her first New York recital appearance at Aeolian Hall on Wednesday afternoon. Her programme includes Schumann's Sonata, Op. 143; Brahms's Three Intermezzi, Rhapsodie, Op. 119, and six studies by Chopin from Op. 10 and Op. 25.

***

Mme. Schnabel-Tollefsen, pianist, and Horatio Connell, baritone, will give a joint recital at Aeolian Hall on Wednesday evening. Mme. Schnabel-Tollefsen will play Grieg's Ballad in G minor, with two groups of smaller pieces, while Mr. Connell will be heard in three groups of songs.

***

Leonard Borwick, the English pianist, will give a recital on Thursday afternoon at Carnegie Hall. His programme comprises Bach's Organ Fugue in G minor, three pieces by Scarlatti, Brahms's Sonata in F minor, Beethoven's Rondo in G, Op. 51, No. 2, and smaller compositions by Paderewski, Rachmaninoff, and Liszt.

***

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Karl Muck, conductor, will give its first concerts in New York on Thursday evening and Saturday afternoon. Thursday evening's programme comprises Beethoven's Third Symphony, Brahms's Variations on a Theme by Haydn, Strauss's "Don Juan," and the Overture to Weber's "Euryanthe." On Saturday afternoon the orchestra will play Brahms's Symphony No. 2, Chadwick's "Symphonic Sketches," and Sibelius's "Finlandia."

***

Hamish MacKay, a Scottish baritone, will give a song recital at Aeolian Hall Thursday evening, assisted by Fay Foster, pianist. His programme includes songs in English, songs by Scottish composers, Irish folk-songs, Highland dances, and traditional Scottish airs.

***

Yvonne de Treville, soprano, will give a costume song recital in Aeolian Hall Friday afternoon. Her programme is divided into three parts, representing respectively composers of the eighteenth, nineteenth, and twentieth centuries.

***

Percy Hemus, baritone, who gave a recital of songs by American composers last season, will give a second programme of the same kind on Friday evening in Aeolian Hall. Some of his songs will be accompanied by string quartet.

***

Harold Bauer will give his first recital this season at Aeolian Hall Saturday afternoon. His programme comprises Bach's Toccata and Fugue in C minor; Beethoven's Sonata Op. 78 in F sharp minor; Brahms's Variations and Fugue on a Theme of Handel; two Two-part and five Three-part Inventions of Bach; and Beethoven's Sonata Op. 110 in A flat.

***

There will be no concert of the Philharmonic Society in New York this week, the organization being engaged in a tour of New York State and New England, beginning with Boston. Among the cities to be visited are Springfield, Troy, Holyoke, Watertown, and North Adams. The next New York concerts will take place in Carnegie Hall on Nov. 12 and 13, with Mme. Julia Culp as soloist.

A CALENDAR OF CONCERTS
November

1—N. Y. Symphony Society, afternoon, Aeolian Hall.
1—Manuel Quiroga, violin recital, afternoon, Shubert Theatre.
1—John Philip Sousa and his band, evening, Hippodrome.
2—Carl Friedberg, piano recital, afternoon, Carnegie Hall.
2—Florence Hinkle, song recital, afternoon, Aeolian Hall.
3—Tina Lerner, piano recital, afternoon, Aeolian Hall.
4—Blanche Goode, piano recital, afternoon, Aeolian Hall.
4—Mme. Schnabel-Tollefsen, pianist, and Horatio Connell, baritone, joint recital, evening, Aeolian Hall.
5—Leonard Borwick, piano recital, afternoon, Carnegie Hall.
5—Boston Symphony Orchestra, evening, Carnegie Hall.
5—Hamish MacKay, song recital, evening, Aeolian Hall.
6—Yvonne de Treville, song recital, afternoon, Aeolian Hall.
6—Percy Hemus, recital of American songs, evening, Aeolian Hall.
7—Boston Symphony Orchestra, afternoon, Carnegie Hall.
7—Harold Bauer, piano recital, afternoon, Aeolian Hall.
8—N. Y. Symphony Society, afternoon, Aeolian Hall.
8—People's Symphony Concert, afternoon, Carnegie Hall.
9—Marta Milinowski, piano recital, afternoon, Aeolian Hall.
9—Marie Morrisey, song recital, evening, Aeolian Hall.
10—Andrea de Segurola, song recital, afternoon, Aeolian Hall.
10—Kneisel Quartet, evening, Aeolian Hall.
11—Mme. Johanna Gadski, song recital, afternoon, Aeolian Hall.
11—Arthur Herschmann, song recital, evening, Aeolian Hall.
12—Francis Rogers, song recital, afternoon, Little Theatre.
12—Clara Jaeger, song recital, afternoon, Aeolian Hall.
12—Philharmonic Society, evening, Carnegie Hall.
13—Philharmonic Society, afternoon, Carnegie Hall.
13—N. Y. Symphony Society, afternoon, Aeolian Hall.
13—Alice Sovereign, song recital, evening, Aeolian Hall.
14—Efrem Zimbalist, violin recital, afternoon, Carnegie Hall.
14—Vida Llewellyn, piano recital, afternoon, Aeolian Hall.
14—Adele Katz, piano recital, evening, Aeolian Hall.

The Death of Sorrow.

HUSH! Sorrow's dead!
Soft close the room and steal away
Into the brightness of the day;
Nor to the peering stranger say
That Sorrow's dead.

At last she sleeps:
Let Peace unlock her chamber door,
And o'er the heart, deep bruised and sore,
Lay poppies: So, forevermore,
May Sorrow sleep!

Wake not her ghost!
Beneath the children's feet at play,
Beyond the reach of night and day,
Alone, go cover her away.
Hush! Sorrow's ghost!

EVA DEAN.

CENTURY OPERA HOUSE
Central Park West at 62d St.
MILTON AND SARGENT ABORN, General Managers.
Phone 8800 Col. Nights at 8. Mats. Thurs. & Sat. at 2. Box Office Open 9 A. M. to 11 P. M. (Sundays 10 A. M. to 10 P. M.)
TONIGHT
POPULAR CONCERT
At 8:15. 1,000 Seats at 25c. 1,000 at 50c. Balance 75c. to $1.
Selections from Compositions of Richard Wagner
"FLYING DUTCHMAN," "TANNHAEUSER," "RIENZI," "WALKURE," "TRISTAN AND ISOLDE," "LOHENGRIN," "PARSIFAL."
Soloists: FREEMAN, SANTLEY, EWELL, KREIDLER, BERGMAN, LENSKA, MARR.
Conductor—KNOCH. (Knabe Piano Used.)
ALL PERFORMANCES IN ENGLISH.
Mon., Wed., Thurs. Nights & Sat. Mat., Nov. 2, 4, 5, 7.
"LA BOHEME."
Tues. Night, Thurs. Mat., Fri. & Sat. Nights, Nov. 3, 5, 6 and 7.
"The Tales of Hoffmann"
Wed. & Sat. Mats. 25c. to $2. Thurs. Mats. & Sunday Nights, 25c. to $1.
LAST TWO WEEKS
"Tales of Hoffmann," "Aida," "Lucia Di Lammermoor." Farewell Performance SAT. NIGHT, NOV. 21. Acts from "TROVATORE," "LUCIA" and "PAGLIACCI," with ALL FAVORITE CASTS.

METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE.
Tuesday Evening, November 3.
PAVLOWA
and Her DISTINGUISHED COMPANY
Orchestra of 50.
New Ballets, Divertisements, and MODERN BALL ROOM DANCES
Tickets $5, $3, $2, $1.50, $1. Boxes $50, $100.
Carnegie Hall, Tomorrow (Mon.) Aft. at 3.
FIRST PIANO RECITAL.
CARL FRIEDBERG
Tickets 50c. to $2. Baldwin Piano used.
AEOLIAN HALL, Fri. Aft., Nov. 6, at 3.
Costume Song Recital Yvonne De Treville
Three Centuries of Prime-Donne.
Tickets $2 to 50 cents, now at Box Office.
AEOLIAN HALL, Tomorrow Afternoon, 3.
SONG RECITAL
FLORENCE HINKLE
Seats at Box Office. Mgt. Wolfsohn Bureau.

A PASSPORT THAT IS GOOD
"Travel in safety with"
ELMENDORF
5 SUNDAY NIGHTS AT 8:30
5 MONDAY MATINEES, 2:45
CARNEGIE HALL—57th St. & 7th Ave.
Nov. 8 & 9.....Around the World Through the Panama Canal
Nov. 15 & 16.....Around the Mediterranean Egypt, Holy Land, Adriatic
Nov. 22 & 23.....Around Northern Europe London, Berlin, Vienna, Budapest
Nov. 29 & 30.....Around Southern Europe France, Switzerland, Italy
Dec. 6 & 7.....Around the United States The American Wonderlands
ILLUSTRATED WITH ELMENDORF'S MARVELOUS STILL and MOTION PICTURES.
COURSE TICKETS NOW
PRICES For either course of 5 lectures, $2.50, $3, $4, $5
CARNEGIE HALL, Wed. Eve., Nov. 4.
A SPY ON WAR
AMGAARD KARL GRAVES
DR. GRAVES' LECTURE will be the greatest bid for peace yet made.
Author of "Secrets of the German War Office." Seats on sale Carnegie Hall, Tyson Co., Times Sq. Ticket and Leading Hotels.
PHILHARMONIC
Society of New York.
JOSEF STRANSKY CONDUCTOR
SUPPLEMENTARY SUBSCRIPTION
Box Office now open at Carnegie Hall.
Nov. 12 & 13. All Tschaikowsky Program.
Nov. 15, Soloist Arrigo Serato, Violin.
AEOLIAN HALL, Nov. 5, 8:30 P. M.
Song Recital by the Scottish Baritone,
Hamish MacKay
Assisted by Miss Fay Foster, Pianist.
Reserved seats, $1.50, $1, 75c. 50c. Boxes, $15.
Management: Music League of America.
Carnegie Hall, Next Thurs. Aft., at 3.
LEONARD BORWICK
PIANO RECITAL (STEINWAY PIANO).
Seats at Box Office. Mgt. Wolfsohn Bureau.
AEOLIAN HALL Three Concerts.
Tues. Evgs., Nov. 17, Jan. 19, Feb. 23 at 8:15.
ADELE MARGULIES TRIO
Subscriptions $4, $2.50 at Box Office.
Adele Margulies..Piano
Leopold Lichtenberg..Violin
Leo Schulz.....Cello
AEOLIAN HALL, Sat. Aft., Nov. 7, at 3.
Recital by BAUER MASTER PIANIST
HAROLD
50c. to $2. Mason and Hamlin Piano.
AEOLIAN HALL, Tues. Aft., Nov. 3, at 3.
Piano Recital by the brilliant Russian TINA LERNER
50c. to $2. Mason & Hamlin Piano.

SYMPHONY
Society of New York.
WALTER DAMROSCH, Conductor.
THIS AFTERNOON AT 3.
Soloist
MME. OLIVE FREMSTAD
HANDEL, Concerto for Strings; BACH, Brandenburg Concerto No. 1; HANDEL Largo; Selections from WAGNER'S "Tannhauser," "Die Meistersinger" and "Tristan and Isolde."
Seats at Box Office, AEOLIAN HALL.
MUSICAL ART SOCIETY
Frank Damrosch.....Director
22d SEASON
2 Concerts—Tues., Dec. 15; Thurs., Mch. 11
SYMPHONY CONCERTS
FOR YOUNG PEOPLE
N. Y. Symphony Orchestra
Walter Damrosch.....Conductor
SIX SATURDAY AFTERNOONS
Boxes, tickets and programs now at office.
MUSICAL ART SOCIETY, 1 W. 34th St.
Only Recital in N. Y. This Season—MME.
SCHUMANN-HEINK
CARNEGIE HALL TUESDAY AFT., NOV. 17th, at 3.
